Albert Boardman Earle, son of John and Rebecca E. (Nichols) Earle, was born March 11, 1855, in Philadelphia, where he attended the public schools, and graduated from the Boys' Central High School. He then began to learn engraving under the instruction of his father, but followed this occupation only for a few years, and then engaged in the insurance business. Within a short time he was offered the secretaryship of the Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania, which he accepted and remained with them in this capacity for fourteen years. In July, 1901, he resigned his office to establish himself as an insurance agent on his individual account, representing only first class old line companies. He has at the present time a flourishing business, and is agent for several of the leading American companies.

Mr. Earle married, June 24, 1885, Clara, daughter of William Wesley and Eliza (Pennock) Nickle. They preserve the original orthography of the family name, which has been almost wholly superseded by that of Nichol, though at what period the change took place does not appear. Mr. and Mrs. Earle are the parents of four children: Adelaide L., who died December 28, 1892; Clara, who died in infancy; Ralph Pennock, born September 26, 1887; and Helen Rebecca, born October 17, 1891. The two latter named are living at the present time (1903).

WILLIAM LAFFERTY REMENTER is one of the native sons of Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred in the city of Philadelphia, September 19, 1866. His parents were Isaac and Elmira (Lafferty) Rementer; his paternal grandparents were Joseph and Mary (Lewis) Rementer; and his maternal grandparents were George and Matilda (Kessler) Lafferty. Mary (Lewis) Rementer was born and reared at Paoli, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Her father was a commissioned officer in the Continental army and served during the Revolution. Back of this the ancestral history of the family cannot be traced save that it is known that the founder of this line in this country came to the United States from the south of France. The subject of this review is one of a family of four children, the eldest being Joseph, a resident of Philadelphia, who wedded Mary Thompson, and has one child, Pansy. Isaac and Hamilton, the other brothers of the family, are still single. William L. Rementer was united in marriage to Caroline Wilson, a native of Ireland, of Scotch-Irish ancestry; her parents were William and Anna Jane Wilson, who were the parents of Annie, whose husband is an officer in the English army; Sarah (Mrs. John Smith); Jesse; John; Edmund; and Caroline (Mrs. William L. Rementer), and they have three children: Lilian May, born August 13, 1889; Irene, born January 22, 1891; and George, born May 2, 1892.

Mr. Rementer acquired his early education in the schools of Delaware and in his youth assisted his father who had charge of the State College of Agriculture under Professor Porter at Newark, Delaware. When his education was completed, his time and energies were devoted to aiding his father in the work incident to carrying on the farm belonging to the college. He began learning the florist's trade and since that time has followed the business continuously. At the age of sixteen he went to Chestnut Hill, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, with his uncle, with whom he remained for about five years and then removed to Angora, a suburb of Philadelphia, where he embarked in business on his own account and continued his residence at that place for three years. On the expiration of that period Mr. Rementer came to Lansdowne and purchased his present property, beginning business here as a florist. His attention was given to the cultivation of carnations and potted plants, and soon he gained an excellent reputation which has been the means of bringing to him gratifying success in his business career. He is a successful landscape gardener, possessing considerable artistic skill which enables him to readily determine the effect that will be produced by carrying on certain designs and plans in this particular line of work. He receives at the present time a very large patronage from among the best families and his work at landscape gardening has received the commendation and approval of a great majority of the citizens of this locality. He is also extensively engaged in the production of plants and flowers, having about ten thousand square feet under glass, and the production of his greenhouse finds a ready sale upon the retail market.

Mr. Rementer is not only well known in this section of the state on account of his business interests but also because of his official service. He served as constable of his town until 1901, when he was made chief of police, and while an incumbent in the former office he made some noted captures, including that of two burglars who were attempting to effect an entrance into the house of William M. Mitchell. He succeeded in disarming both of them single handed and in lodging them in jail, and at the trial they were sentenced to ten years in the state's prison. In recognition of this service the town of Lansdowne presented him with a gold badge, inscribed "For bravery in service." Mr. Rementer has also been a highway commissioner and in the discharge of his official duties has ever been found reliable, prompt and trustworthy, proving an officer over whose public career there falls no shadow of wrong or suspicion of evil. In his political views he is an earnest Republican.

CHARLES TREGO, a prominent farmer of West Caln township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a man who for years has been closely identified with William Cody, popularly known as Buffalo Bill, was born April 20, 1856, and he is as son of William and Sarah (Hoopes) Trego.

The founder of the family in America is supposed to have been Joseph Trego, a native of France. The first of whom there is any definite information is Joseph Trego, grandf. th. of our subject. Joseph had seven children as follows: 1. William, who is the father of our subject; 2. Isaac, born in 1819, died in 1901; he married Emeline Clemens, who died in 1889, and they had six children, viz.—Abner, Winfield, Ann Norton, Howard, Emma, and a child who died in infancy; 3. Daniel, died at the age of ten years; 4. Abner, born about 1821, died unmarried about 1853; 5. Betsie, who married Joseph Van Buren Ash, and had a son Joseph, who died unmarried; 6. Ann, died February 22, 1860, unmarried; 7. Daniel (2), who married Annie Hetherly, died in 1898, and had four children, viz.—Clark, Emma, Morris and Joseph.

The father, William Trego, was born July 6, 1817, and married twice, his first wife having been Mrs. Sarah Hoopes, nee Watson, whom he married in 1851, and she died ten years later, having had four children by her second marriage; Rebecca Catherine, Frances Ann, Charles and Sarah Margaret. On November 20, 1879, William Trego was united to Nancy R. Lewis, no issue. Mr. Trego and his wife are now living, and make their home with their son Charles at Wagontown, Caln township.

Charles Trego

Charles Trego was born and reared upon his father's farm, and while still a young man he went west and took charge of the stock of William Cody at North Platte, Nebraska. After ten years, during which time he had charge of the stock there, Mr. Trego assumed the same position on the road. At the expiration of three years, he returned east for three months, and then went to Cody, Wyoming, the town being named in honor of William Cody, where he became associated with the Cody show. He was at once appointed to the position of foreman, had charge of the Cody mines and one thousand head of horses, and during his thirteen years' connection with the show, eight of which were spent in the capacity of general manager, he displayed great ability and was considered a valuable aid to Colonel Cody, who frequently visits him in his home in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Later Mr. Trego again returned east and purchased a livery business at Coatesville, Chester county, which he successfully conducted for a number of years. About 1901 he disposed of these interests and purchased his present home in West Caln township, where he resides. Mr. Trego was the means of the stock of Colonel Cody being brought to this section of the east for the winter.

Mr. Trego was united in marriage with Mrs. Carrie Hayes, at North Platte, Nebraska. Mrs. Trego is a daughter of Captain William R. and Annie R. Esch, and widow of Jacob M. Hayes, by whom she had one child, William M. Hayes, born June 11, 1884, now a resident of Coatesville. William R. Esch is the first son of Phineas L. and Caroline Esch, the former named being in turn the third son of William Esch. William Esch is a son of Joseph Esch. Joseph Esch is a son of Wilhelm Hendrick Esch, who settled in Pennsylvania in 1741, a native of Germany. No children have been born to the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Trego. Mr. Trego is one of the leading and enterprising farmers of his township, and enjoys in a marked degree the confidence of a large circle of acquaintances and friends.

THE LEVIS FAMILY. The Levis family derives its name from the Duke DeLevy, who fled from Normandy to England in order to escape the massacre of St. Bartholomew, one of the most sanguinary events that ever occurred in the history of the world. Thousands of followers of the Protestant faith were massacred at that time in Paris. He managed to escape from Paris to Normandy by changing his name to Levis, and his tomb is yet to be seen in the old churchyard in England, where he was laid to rest. The family was founded in America by three brothers who came from England to the new world at an early day. One of these settled in New Jersey, and the other two, Thomas and Samuel Levis, took up their abode on Darby creek. Samuel Levis, a direct descendant of the Duke of DeLevy and the ancestor of the branch of the family to which Garrett H. Levis, of Lansdowne belongs, was married in this country to Hannah Stretch, and they had a son Samuel, who wedded Mary Thompson. Their son John was the father of Thomas Levis, who in turn had a son Thomas, and a son of the last named was also given the name of Thomas and married Ann Levis. They had a son Garrett, who married Catherine Harrison, and among their children was Joshua Harrison Levis, who was united in marriage to Sarah Anna Crozer Longstreth, a daughter of David and Martha (Ogden) Longstreth. David was a son of Isaac and Martha (Thomas) Longstreth, and Martha Ogden was a daughter of John and Sarah (Crozer) Ogden.

To Joshua and Sarah A. C. (Longstreth) Levis were born three children, of whom the eldest, Frank Longstreth, is now deceased. The son, Garrett Harrison Levis, was united in marriage to Miss Mary Phipps, a daughter of John and Sara (Clark) Phipps, who were residents of Doc Run, Chester county, Pennsylvania. They have two children, Esther Clark and Helen Harrison Levis. Hannah Levis, the third child of Joshua and Sarah Levis, married Caspar Pennock.

Garrett and Catherine Levis had a family of five children, of whom Joshua was the eldest and the second was Ann, who became the wife of Gilpin Williamson, by whom she had two children: Kate, who is the wife of Britton Jacobs, and has a daughter, Laura, who is now married; and James Lindley Williamson. Morris Shallock Levis, the third of the family, married Hannah Newton, and their four children are: Catherine Levis, Thomas Nash, Harrison and Annie. Hannah Levis is the wife of Owen Branson, but they have no children. Catherine Levis, the fifth member of the family, became the wife of Maurice Gilmore, and they have three children: Ida, the wife of James Ousey; their children are Dora, Claude and Catherine.

Joshua Harrison Levis acquired his early education in the Friends' Select School of Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and in his youth remained at home, assisting in the work of the family until he was married in 1853. He then left the parental roof, and renting a farm of one hundred and thirty acres he began agricultural pursuits on his own account, continuing the operation of leased land until about 1864, when he purchased a tract of land and cultivated it for about ten years. He then retired from active work and came to Lansdowne, where he lived in the enjoyment of a well earned rest until his death, which occurred November 17, 1893. In politics he was always an earnest Republican and at one time served as a school director in the borough of Clifton. He was a member of the Friends' Meeting, and his life was ever honorable, upright and consistent with his professions.

Garrett Harrison Levis, the second son, received his early education in private schools and afterward entered Swarthmore College. When he had put aside his text books he determined to devote his energies to mercantile pursuits and came to Lansdowne. He began business here in the coal, grain and feed trade, in which he has continued to the present time, enjoying a constantly increasing patronage until he is to-day one of the successful merchants of his borough. He, too, is a Republican, keeping well informed on the questions and issues of the day, but he has never had time to devote to political life or to office holding. Like his father, he is also identified with the Friends' Meeting.

EVAN L. SHINGLE, an energetic and enterprising citizen of Wyebrooke, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who is a representative of an early settled and prominent family of this section of the state, several members of which have occupied important positions, was born March 2, 1879, a son of William and Sarah (Lewis) Shingle.

William Shingle (father) was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in the common schools of this vicinity he received a practical education. He chose the quiet but useful calling of agriculture for his life work, and this line of industry proved a profitable means of livelihood throughout all his active years. In his political affiliations Mr. Shingle was a Democrat, adhering strongly to the principles of that party. In his religious sentiments he was an Episcopalian, that being the faith of his forefathers. Mr. Shingle was united in marriage to Sarah Lewis, who was born on the farm in Wyebrooke, Chester county, upon which her son, Evan L. Shingle, now resides. Three children were the issue of this union—Evan L., mentioned at length hereinafter; George, who died at the age of eight years; and Annie, who married, in 1892, Robert McFadden, employed in the capacity of clerk in the Bureau of Survey; five children were born of this union, three of whom are now deceased. Mr. Shingle died at his residence in Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 16, 1901.

Evan L. Shingle, only surviving son of William and Sarah Shingle, grew to manhood on his father's farm and his education was acquired at the common schools of West Nantmeal township. Upon attaining his majority he began his business career by farming on the old homestead, which consisted of eighty-two acres of well improved and productive land, and he has successfully followed this occupation up to the present time (1903). In addition to the cultivation and improvement of his broad acres, Mr. Shingle operates a dairy having on an average ten head of cows, and the products of this industry find a ready sale in the nearby markets. Mr. Shingle is practical and progressive in his ideas, and although young in years is looked upon as one of the leading agriculturists of the community. He follows in the footsteps of his father both in religion and politics, being a member of the Episcopal church and a staunch and loyal Democrat.

CHARLES W. SHINGLE, a highly respected citizen of West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has turned his attention chiefly and successfully to agricultural pursuits, was born on the farm which he now owns and operates, January 7, 1869, only living child of George W. and Lydia Ann (Kurtz) Shingle, who were also the parents of a son and daughter who died in infancy. George W. Shingle enlisted in the Civil war, but was not engaged in any active service barring duty at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He was one of a family of four children, three boys and one girl, all of whom are now deceased.

Charles W. Shingle was reared in West Nantmeal township, and completed his education in the common schools of the neighborhood at the age of twenty years. He was then employed on the old homestead, working the farm on equal shares with his father and this connection continued until the death of the latter, when Charles W. inherited the property. The farm consists of one hundred and twenty-three acres of rich and arable land, which he has devoted to the production of a general line of garden truck. Mr. Shingle feeds a portion of the general products of his farm to cattle, which when fattened are marketed in New York. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Elverson, taking an active interest in all the work connected with that organization, and his political affiliations are with the Democratic party.

On December 24, 1901, occurred the marriage of Charles W. Shingle and Bertha M. Knauer, daughter of Davis Knauer, a retired agriculturist of Warwick township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Knauer also dealt extensively in stone and woodland property, from which he derived a goodly profit. In religion he adhered to the doctrines of the German Reformed church, and in politics he is a loyal supporter of the principles of the Republican party. Nine children were born to Davis Knauer and his wife, Sarah (Roberts) Knauer, one of whom is now deceased—Ida, wife of Jacob Brown, a farmer of East Nantmeal township, Chester county; Mary, wife of Horace Latshaw, who is engaged in farming and trucking in Spring City, Chester county; Annie, wife of Horace Millard, an agriculturist of West Nantmeal township, Chester county; Bertha M., wife of Charles W. Shingle; Bessie, wife of Jacob Finkbinder, a prosperous butcher of Spring City, Chester county; Ella, unmarried, and resides at home with her parents at Knauertown; David, married Essie Huldeman, daughter of Samuel Huldeman; Morris, married Jennie Rex, daughter of Howard Rex; he is a miller by trade and is employed in Warwick township; George Knauer, who died at the age of fifteen years; and one daughter who died in infancy.

JOSEPH KEELEY, a public-spirited and influential citizen of Glen Mawr, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who offered his services in behalf of his country's honor and served with credit and distinction from 1862 until the close of the terrible struggle between the north and the south, is a native of Wallace township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, the date of his birth being April 5, 1837. Joseph Keeley is one of a family of ten children born to Matthews and Ann (Bohlin) Keeley—John, deceased; William, deceased, who was a soldier in the Civil war and came to his death from starvation while confined in Andersonville Prison; Mary A., wife of John Evans, of Iowa, and mother of three children; Eliza, wife of Robert Channell, who was engaged in the occupations of farmer and shoemaker, and they are the parents of three children; Maria, wife of Mordica Eachus, a miller by trade, and their family consists of six children; Joseph, mentioned at length hereinafter; Emma, widow of Joseph Hartman, who was engaged in the operation of a saw mill in Chester Springs; they were the parents of three children; John, unmarried, resides in Chester Springs and is engaged as a laborer; Sarah J., wife of Albert March, of Chester county, a carpenter by trade, now employed in the Bank at Pottstown; they have a family of six children; George W., now deceased, married Mrs. Thompson, and they were the parents of one child, both wife and child are also deceased.

Joseph Keeley acquired a practical education at the Indian Town school, which still retains its Indian name, in Wallace township, which was formerly a portion of East and West Nantmeal townships, and completed his duties at the age of nineteen years. On November 10, 1862, Mr. Keeley enlisted as a member of the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Pennsylvania Regiment, which was under the command of Captain George Werntz. The term of enlistment was for nine months; they were mustered in at West Chester and at once proceeded to Fortress Monroe, from thence to Suffolk, Virginia, later to New Berne, North Carolina, where they constructed earth works and participated in the relief at Little Washington, North Carolina, also at Blount's Creek in April, 1863. The regiment then returned to Fortress Monroe, was transferred to Harpers Ferry and subsequently was stationed on Maryland Heights. They constructed the pontoons across the Potomac river, and when their term of enlistment expired on August 7, 1863, they were honorably discharged from the service of the United States government in the city of Philadelphia. On February 21, 1864, Mr. Keeley enlisted as a private to serve one year in Company G, Two Hundred and Thirteenth Pennsylvania Regiment, which was under the efficient command of Captain Babe and Colonel Gorgus. They were first ordered to Annapolis, later to Frederick City, Maryland, and also to Washington, D. C., their object being to guard the national capital from invasion by General Lee's troops. They remained in the latter city until the close of hostilities, November 18, 1865, and were then mustered out of service. During this long and trying period, Mr. Keeley displayed the utmost heroism and patriotism and faithfully performed all his allotted tasks.

After his return from the war Mr. Keeley engaged in agricultural pursuits in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, and after a residence of seven years in that locality he removed to Berks county and farmed for a period of ten years. He then returned to Wallace township, Chester county, and for two years resided on the farm adjoining his present property, which consists of one acre and thirteen perch. During this time he erected a substantial and commodious residence which is considered one of the finest farm houses in the county, and is certainly the most modern and beautiful in Wallace township. Mr. Keeley takes an active interest in the political affairs of the township, and served in the capacity of school tax collector for seven years. He holds membership in the Fairview Presbyterian church, and is also an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic, being actively connected with that organization for a number of years.

In 1867 Mr. Keeley married Catherine Fry, daughter of George and Sarah Fry, and the issue of this union was three children: 1. John Witman, born December 29, 1869, married Frances Steyr, daughter of Adam Steyr, a prosperous farmer of Morgantown, Berks county. Two children were born to them, one of whom is now deceased; he is a blacksmith by trade and is an employe of the construction department of the Pennsylvania Railroad in the city of Philadelphia. 2. George Fry, born September 16, 1871, unmarried, resides in New Jersey, where he is conducting a grist mill. 3. Mary Emma, born July 5, 1873, became the wife of Harry Benner, of Chester county, a prosperous farmer and land owner; their family consists of four children: George P., Mary F., Naomi E. and Hazel Catherine Benner. Mrs. Keeley is one of a family of twelve children, seven of whom are now deceased—Isaac, deceased; Mary E., who married James Turnbull; Catherine F., wife of Joseph Keeley; Lydia, unmarried; Clara L., who married Jefferson Epler; Susan L. Lockhart; Emma, unmarried; Charles, who died in infancy; Daniel, who married Sarah Strunk; George Washington, who is a bachelor; and Martha Emily, who married Benjamin Netauck, of Robertson township, Berks county, a farmer.

REV. PETER F. DAGGET, the present popular and efficient Father in charge of the West Grove Catholic church, was born in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, in 1853, a son of Richard and Mary (Crosby) Dagget, both natives of Ireland, from whence they came to the United States and settled in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, where Mrs. Dagget now resides. Richard Dagget (father) served in the Mexican war and was preparing to enter the service of the United States government during the Civil war, when he met with an accident from the effects of which he died on February 11, 1861.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by the Rev. Peter F. Dagget were obtained in the public schools of Schuylkill county, and later he entered St. Charles Seminary at Overbrook, near the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated as a priest on May 23, 1885. His first active work after graduation was as a missionary at Easton, Minersville and Norristown, Pennsylvania, and during the period of time he became well known and greatly beloved for the faithful and conscientious work he performed among the mining element of those cities. While serving as pastor in Minersville, with a membership of only five hundred miners, he undertook the erection of a church at a cost of $4,000, and when completed in six months' time the money was all subscribed to pay for it. In 1890 he received his first charge at Lost Creek, in the vicinity of Shenandoah, Pennsylvania, where he remained ten years and faithfully expounded the truths of the gospel. He then received the appointment to the West Grove

Catholic church, the foremost of the Catholic churches in southern Chester county, and has remained its pastor ever since. They have a congregation of over four hundred members, and the church is in a prosperous condition, both spiritually and financially. It is a fine serpentine building located on Evergreen street at the head of Prospect street, and was erected by the followers of the church in 1873 at a cost of $11,000. In 1897 a tower was erected at a cost of $750, and a bell was placed in this tower in July, 1898, and consecrated by Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, on Sunday, July 3, 1898. Since Father Dagget has had charge of this parish he has erected a fine parsonage at a cost of $7,000. He also has charge of a mission at Oxford, which was established in 1878. He is a man of pleasant address, an earnest student and fluent speaker, and is admired and respected by all classes of religious belief. Politically his affiliations are with the Republican party.

HARRY A. MENOUGH, a leading merchant of Oxford, Pennsylvania, is thoroughly in touch with modern business methods, and through carefully kept family records, he is more in line than most men with the spirit of the past. His own ancestral history dates from the appearance of his forefathers in this country at the beginning of the eighteenth century, while his wife traces her descent through nine hundred years from documents in possession of her family.

John Menough was born in the north of Ireland in 1706. He came to America as a young man and settled in Pennsylvania in the township of London Grove, near the present borough of West Grove. In 1760 he bought a farm, adjoining the New London Presbyterian church, a part of which tract is now the old cemetery. He lived on this farm until his death at a great age in 1803, being ninety-seven years old. He was buried near the gate at the front entrance of the old cemetery of the New London Presbyterian church, in the soil that he once had tilled. His wife, Mary Smith, was buried on the same day at the age of eighty-six. They were staunch Presbyterians, and attended church at New London. They had a family of three sons and one daughter, as follows: 1. Rachel, who married the first Allen Cunningham, of New London, and became the mother of General John W. Cunningham; 2. Samuel, who married Jane Waugh of New London, settled near Cleveland, Ohio, in the early part of the nineteenth century, and it is thought that families bearing the name in Cleveland, Wellsville and Pittsburg, are his descendants; 3. Isaac, who never married, went to Delaware where he owned a farm of three hundred acres at Ogletown, Newcastle county, and his remains lie interred in the old church yard near Cooches bridge, Newcastle county, Delaware; 4. John, who is in the direct line here traced.

Rev. P. F. Haggert

John, youngest child and third son of John and Mary (Smith) Menough, was born in 1758. To him was given his father's name, and to him fell the homestead; he was proud to uphold the honor of the one, and desirous to improve and enhance the value of the other. He was for forty years an elder of the Presbyterian church, and a man greatly respected for his keen judgment and practical sense. He married Margaret Kelton, whose father, James Kelton, born in Scotland in 1695, came to America from the north of Ireland sometime prior to 1735. He lived for a time in New London, and afterwards bought five hundred acres of land in London Grove, near what is now West Grove. On this farm he spent the remainder of his life, and the house which he built here is still standing. His first wife, Margaretta, born in Scotland, had no children, and died at the age of sixty-five. At the age of seventy-five, James Kelton married Mary Hackett, of New Garden, a girl of eighteen. Two children, James and Margaret, were born, Margaret already having been mentioned as the wife of John Menough, who died in 1833, at the age of seventy-five. The children of John and Margaret (Kelton) Menough, were as follows: 1. James K., born January 27, 1793, who married Ann Neal of Lancaster county, and died in 1858; 2. Rachel, born May 4, 1795, who died in early life at the homestead; 3. Isaac, born July 25, 1797, died in 1821; 4. Samuel, born October 31, 1803, mentioned hereinafter; 5. John, born February 14, 1805, died in 1866, married Eliza Haddon of Wilmington, Delaware, where, with his wife, he is buried.

Samuel Menough, fourth child and third son of John and Margaret (Kelton) Menough, was born October 31, 1803, and died July 1, 1872. By his father's will he inherited the homestead, and as master of the old place he well sustained the family traditions. In 1860 he gave up the farm, and passed the last twelve years of his life in retirement at Wilmington, Delaware. His wife, Margaret (Moore) Menough, a daughter of Joshua and Jane (Bane) Moore, was born September 23, 1808, and died January 7, 1892, aged eighty-four years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Menough were members of the Presbyterian church. Their children were: 1. Joshua, born February 5, 1829, father of Harry A. Menough; 2. Mary Jane, born April 17, 1831, who was married twice, and died February 18, 1868; 3. John W., born August 11, 1833, survived his wife and five children, and died in Philadelphia on April 28, 1895; 4. Marion C., born October 2, 1838, married Mitchell Bower, who was killed by accident in his brother's laboratory in Philadelphia; 5. Anna L., born November 5, 1840, now living at Wilmington, Delaware, who married George W. Lackey, and has two children, a daughter, and son, George W. Lackey, a sea captain; 6. Rachel, born January 3, 1843, who married Charles Ernest, was early widowed, and survived her husband but a few years; she died on February 15, 1883; 7. Martha C., born December 4, 1848, died January 3, 1850.

Joshua Menough, oldest child of Samuel and Margaret (Moore) Menough, was born February 5, 1829, in the house where his father had been born in New London township. His early life was spent on the farm, and his education gained in the local public schools. In 1850 he opened a meat market in New London, which he conducted for ten years. In 1860 he removed with his family to Kimbleville, where for five years he engaged in live stock dealing. At the end of this time he went to Oxford, where he conducted a hotel business until his retirement in 1887. In his earlier years he was widely known as an auctioneer, and his services were much in demand. Besides his farm he owns real estate in town. He is connected with the Presbyterian church, as his family has been for generations before him, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being affiliated with Oxford Lodge, No. 353.

His wife was Louisa Hanna, born April 2, 1829, a daughter of Davis, who died October 18, 1884, and Mary Ann (Mackay) Hanna, of Kimbleville, Chester county, whom he married on August 16, 1848. Their children are: Harry A., born October 18, 1849, mentioned hereinafter; Davis H., born February 24, 1852, married Mamie McCammant, who died October 12, 1889, leaving one child, Violette Menough; 3. John S., born April 8, 1855; Emma Louisa, born May 4, 1860, who became the wife of Walker B. Wales, and they are the parents of one child, Francis Louise Wales.

Harry A., oldest child of Joshua and Louisa (Hanna) Menough, was born October 18, 1849, at Kimbleville, Chester county. His elementary instruction in the district schools was supplemented by study at the academy at Oxford. His first business experience was in the employ of his uncle, Amos K. Hanna, a wholesale dealer in notions. At the end of two years he bought out his uncle's interest, and for five years carried on the business on his own account. In 1872 he engaged in the dry goods business, and his present large establishment has grown out of this beginning. He has an extensive custom, which warrants a large stock, and he is enabled to command the store building in its entirety. Mr. Menough also owns a fine farm adjoining the city limits on the southeast, which comprises one hundred and sixty acres. He is prominent in social and public life, and a member of the Masonic fraternity, Oxford Lodge, No. 353.

He married Mamie Thompson, of East Nottingham township, January 10, 1874. Her father, Dr. Thomas Huston Thompson, was postmaster at Oxford for many years. Her mother, who was Margaret (Thomas) Thompson, traces her lineage through almost a thousand years, the documents attesting it being now in possession of her daughter, Mrs. Menough. The children of Harry A. and Mamie (Thompson) Menough, are as follows: 1. J. Fred, born December 22, 1874, who married Lizzie Wilson, a daughter of Samuel Wilson, is a carriage manufacturer of Oxford; 2. Norman Thompson, born January 10, 1876, engaged in stenographic work in New York; 3. Clyde Hanna, born December 14, 1880, employed in his father's store; 4. Harry Alexis, born July 12, 1885, is of school age; 5. Gertrude, born July 27, 1887, is attending Tome Institute.

R. BRUCE RAMSAY, a well known and highly respected citizen of East Fallowfield township, Chester county, is descended from a family, which though emigrating to this country from Ireland is undoubtedly, as the name denotes, of Scottish origin, and which has been for more than a century resident in Chester county.

James Ramsay, a native of Letterkenney, county Donegal, Ireland, emigrated to America in 1798, landing at New Castle, Delaware. He at once went to Chester county, and settled at Doe Run village, where he engaged in business for a number of years as a shoemaker. He then removed to the township which is now West Fallowfield, but was then Highland, where he purchased of Thomas Wallace sixty acres of land. It was about the year 1810 that he established himself in his new abode, and during the war of 1812 served with the Pennsylvania militia for some four months. He erected good buildings on his farm, where he lived until the death of his wife, after which he made his home with one of his sons. He married, in Ireland, Elizabeth Baxter, a native of the same town as himself. Their children were: 1. William, who married a Miss Logan, and removed to Ohio, thence to Illinois, and later to Iowa, where he died, leaving four sons and one daughter. 2. John, who removed to Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, where he practiced medicine for many years. He was the father of four sons and two daughters, as follows: James, Charles, William, Robert, Deborah, Anna. 3. Hannah, who married Samuel Cowan, and had two sons, John and Baxter. 4. James, the father of our subject. 5. Daniel, who was a farmer and wheelwright, married Margaret Wallace, by whom he had one son and one daughter. After the death of his wife he married Sarah, daughter of Joseph Pyle, by whom he was the father of a son and a daughter. 6. Robert. 7. Charles, who was a farmer and butcher, married Sarah A. Day, and had two sons and one daughter. Mrs. Ramsay, the mother of this family, died about 1852, and her husband passed away in 1858, at his home in Valley township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay are buried at Upper Octoraro.

James Ramsay, son of James and Elizabeth (Baxter) Ramsay, was born about 1805, in what is now West Fallowfield township, and learned the shoemaker's trade which he followed at Coatesville, and subsequently went to Ohio. Travelling according to the primitive fashion of the period, he crossed the Allegheny mountains in a wagon drawn by two horses. On arriving at Pittsburg, he went down the Ohio river to Cincinnati, and settled northwest of that city, in the town of Springborough, where he worked at his trade. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Noah Brady, of Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay were the parents of the following children: Delilah, who married D. Everison, and had one son and two daughters; Franklin, who died at the age of one year; R. Bruce, mentioned at length hereinafter; Elizabeth, who died at the age of fourteen; James, who died at eighteen years of age; and Josephene, who was one year old at the time of her death. The death of Mr. Ramsay took place in 1840, at Springborough, and his widow afterward returned to Chester county with her family and died, in 1884, in East Fallowfield township. She is buried in Octoraro, where so many of the other members of the family have been interred.

R. Bruce Ramsay, son of James and Elizabeth (Brady) Ramsay, was born January 18, 1834, at Springborough, Ohio, and after the death of his father, returned with his mother to Chester county and became a member of the family of his uncle Daniel, by whom he was brought up. He was educated in the common schools, and learned the trade of a wheelwright, which he followed in connection with contracting for some years. In 1867 he settled on the farm where he now lives, where for twenty-five years he combined with his agricultural pursuits the business of a butcher, and afterward operated a saw mill in connection with his lumber and agricultural business. He takes an active interest in local affairs, and for some years was a member of the school board. Politically he is a Democrat. The church affiliations of the family are Presbyterian.

Mr. Ramsay married, in 1866, Rebecca, daughter of Arthur Wallace, of Highland township, and their children are: Margaret E., who is the wife of Charles Kendig, and has three sons; R. Bruce, Jr., who is a farmer; William Chester, who is a carpenter, resides in the same township as his father, but works in Coatesville, married Kate McGuire, and has one son; and Arthur P., who is in the lumber business, and married Ritta White.

JAMES MARION ALLISON, of East Nantmeal township, Chester county, respected alike as a farmer and citizen, and frequently called upon by his townsmen to serve them in positions of trust, is a grandson of Levi Allison, who was a native of Upper Uwchlan, where he engaged in farming. He was also for many years the proprietor of a hotel at Guthrieville, but previous to his death retired from business. He took an active part in local affairs, and such were his character and abilities that he was elected at different times to the various offices of the township. In politics he was a devoted Whig, and later became a Republican.

John G. Allison, son of Levi Allison, was a native of Chester county, and for fifteen years was a merchant in East Brandywine. He owned and operated a steel and saw mill at Cambridge, Maryland, where he owned a tract of timberland. The trees on this land he caused to be cut down, and had the wood transported on his own boats to Baltimore and Philadelphia. Like his father, Mr. Allison was assiduous in the duties of a citizen, and was often made the incumbent of township offices. Politically he was a staunch Republican. Mr. Allison was a man of much benevolence, and frequently acted as guardian to orphan children. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph White, a native of East Whiteland, where he was a farmer and office holder. Mr. and Mrs. Allison were the parents of the following children: 1. Levi F., who for ten years held a position on the police force of Philadelphia. He married Jennie, daughter of Joseph P. Wilson, a farmer of East Brandywine, and they have one daughter, Eva May, who is engaged in the millinery business in Philadelphia, and one son. 2. Frank, who is a carpet-printer in Philadelphia. 3. James Marion, mentioned at length hereinafter. 4. J. Frank, who is engaged in the grocery business at Cambridge, Maryland. 5. William D., who learned the trade of a machinist, but is now in business in Newark, New Jersey. He married Estella Jackson of that city, and they have one child, Leslie. 6. Lizzie M., who is a milliner at Downingtown, Pennsylvania. The necessity of caring for the interests involved in the possession of his extensive tract of timberland—consisting of about seven hundred acres—induced Mr. Allison, during the latter years of his life, to make his home at Cambridge, Maryland. It was there that his death took place, and also that of his wife. Both were members of the Baptist church, and died possessed of the sincere regard of all who knew them.

James Marion Allison, son of John G. and Elizabeth (White) Allison, was born April 11, 1855, in East Brandywine, and received his early education in the public schools, afterward attending the Unionville Academy, where he pursued his studies under the preceptorship of Mr. Jacob Harvey. On finishing his education he decided to become a farmer, and entered at once upon his agricultural labors. In 1880 he moved to East Nantmeal, and settled on the farm known as the "Joseph Dugan place." This estate, of which he is now the owner, consists of one hundred and thirteen acres, which are cultivated with scientific skill in accordance with the purposes of general farming. He also has two wood lots, one of which joins his farm and the other one is located in the same township. The two lots contain about thirty-four acres. Mr. Allison also conducts, in connection with his farm, a flourishing dairy of twelve head of cows, disposing of his products on advantageous terms at the Glen Moore Creamery. He is ready, on all occasions, to act the part of a good citizen, and has responded to the call of his neighbors to serve them in the minor offices of the township, among them that of school director. While holding this position he served also as treasurer of the board. In the sphere of politics Mr. Allison treads in the footsteps of his father and his two grandfathers, adhering faithfully to the Republican party. He is a member of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Allison married Lizzie, daughter of Taylor and Priscilla Dilworth, the former a blacksmith and farmer of East Nantmeal. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Allison: Bertha E., who married Walter Hartenstine, a farmer of East Nantmeal, and has one son, Charles Carl; Clara V.; Jesse M., who is serving an apprenticeship to the painter's and paperhanger's trade with Mr. H. Yocum of East Nantmeal; Reita L.; Lizzie E.; and J. Russell. All the unmarried daughters, and also the youngest son, are at home with their parents.

MRS. SUSANNA WOOD, an esteemed and respected resident of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the widow of the late William N. Wood, who was born July 10, 1842, and died April 6, 1898.

William N. Wood, a benevolent, public-spirited man, and greatly esteemed by his fellow-citizens for many excellent traits of character which he displayed throughout his active career, was reared and educated in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He took up his residence in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, in April, 1869, and he engaged in the quiet but useful calling of agriculture. During the period of the terrific struggle between the north and the south, Mr. Wood answered an emergency call for troops and was stationed at Hagerstown, Maryland, during the battle of Antietam. He served his township in the capacity of justice of the peace for one term, and during his incumbency of this office he discharged the duties in a highly creditable manner. His religious views were in accord with those advocated by the Society of Friends.

William N. Wood, son of Joshua and Eliza (Hill) Wood, was united in marriage to Susanna Coates, who was born in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 13, 1843, daughter of Warrick and Ruth Anna (Cook) Coates. Their children are: 1. Annetta, born November 1, 1863, died October 16, 1865. 2. Annie C., born August 14, 1866, became the wife of Samuel P. Martin, October 27, 1886, who was the son of Thomas and Elizabeth (McConnell) Martin, of West Fallowfield. The children of Samuel P. and Annie C. (Wood) Martin are as follows: Charles W., born July 4, 1887, and died July 10, 1887; Harold T., born September 27, 1888; Eleana S., born November 13, 1891; Ernest W., born in June, 1895; Miriam E., born January 26, 1897; and Anna Mary, born December 12, 1899.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Susanna (Coates) Wood were Warrick and Eleanor (Pusey) Coates, and they were the parents of eight children, as follows: 1. Ellis, who married Abigail Coates, and their children were: Sarah, Margaret, Samuel C., Mary, deceased, Joseph, deceased, and Lewis Coates. 2. Hart, who married Eliza Darlington, and reared a family of the following named children: George, Granville, Lydia, Stephen, Howard and Edith Coates. 3. Samuel, who did not marry. 4. Warrick, father of Mrs. Susanna Wood. 5. Susan, wife of George Darlington, of Pocopson, and their children are: Eleanor A., Lydia, Sarah M., Hannah, Susan and George Darlington. 6. Sarah, wife of Thomas Wood, and the issue of this marriage was six children, Lydia, Eleanor, Ellis, Philena and Morris and Laura. 7. Abigail, wife of Pratt Hoopes and their children are: Morton, Eleanor, Mary, Henry, Warrick and Sarah Hoopes. 8. Philena, wife of James Lynch, and mother of four children, as follows: Anna Mary, Ella, Susan and Laura Lynch.

Warrick Coates, father of Mrs. Susanna (Coates) Wood, married Ruth Anna (Cook) Coates, who was a daughter of William and Susanna (Cutler) Cook. The children of Warrick and Ruth (Cook) Coates are as follows: 1. Susanna (Mrs. William N. Wood). 2. Pusey, who married Adaline Brosius, and has children:

Evaline (Mrs. Howard Broomell), William B., Alice R. and Anna L. 3. Truman, who is a graduate of Wooster College, Ohio, and is now practicing his profession (medicine) at Oxford, Pennsylvania: He married Sarah Thomas; no issue. 4. Harvey, who died in early childhood. The father of this family, Warrick Coates, died March 15, 1897, and the mother, Ruth Anna (Cook) Coates, died May 15, 1899. They were both consistent members of the Society of Friends.

ADAM ANDERSON GOLDER, an esteemed and public-spirited citizen of Tredyffrin township, Chester county, is descended from a family of Welsh origin. His father, Wayne Golder, was a native of Tredyffrin township and a blacksmith by trade. He excelled in his chosen calling, but took no active part in politics, never holding any office. He lived at Bulls Corner, where he sustained the character of a faithful worker and an honest citizen. He married Susan, daughter of Adam Snyder, a farmer of Tredyffrin township, and they were the parents of three children: Adam Anderson, mentioned at length hereinafter; Benjamin Franklin, who is an engineer on the Long Island Railroad; and John Henry, who lives in Brooklyn, New York, and is a blacksmith in the service of the Long Island Railroad Company.

Adam Anderson Golder, son of Wayne and Susan (Snyder) Golder, was born May 22, 1847, in East Whiteland township, Chester county, and was instructed by his father in the trade of a blacksmith, which he has followed with ability and success. He has taken a prominent part in local affairs, and his neighbors have testified to their appreciation of his sterling qualities of character by frequently calling upon him to serve them in positions of honor and trust. He was for eight years tax collector, and also held for the same length of time the offices of assessor and treasurer of the school board. He is the oldest active member of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, and has been noted in his section for his patriotic exertions, having been the organizer of many camps. He was the first to propose the organization of Tredyffrin camp, No. 34, and was also the principal organizer of Camp No. 135, of Howellville. He assisted in the reorganization of Camps No. 8 and No. 243 of Philadelphia. He is a member of Polia Lodge, Independent Order Odd Fellows. His political principles are those advocated and upheld by the Republican party.

Mr. Golder married Elizabeth, daughter of Nathan and Catharine Walters. The former, who is descended from one of the oldest families in the township and county, has followed all his life the occupation of a farmer, and is now living at the advanced age of eighty years. Mr. and Mrs. Golder are the parents of three daughters: Bertha, who is the wife of Joseph Kirkner, a farmer of Montgomery county, and has two sons, Wayne and Atley, both of whom reside at home; Irene, who is unmarried, and resides at home; and Annie, who lives in Philadelphia, and is employed as a milliner by H. C. Woolf & Company, of that city.

JOSEPH FISHER HALLMAN, a successful farmer and highly esteemed citizen of Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a son of Anthony Hallman, who was born in Montgomery county, where he followed the occupation of a farmer, afterward removing to Chester county. He married Susana Fisher, widow of the Rev. Jacob Wempole Fisher. The Fisher family are remarkable for longevity, the grandmother of Mrs. Fisher having been over ninety years of age at the time of her death, and Miss Laura Fisher, now living in Philadelphia, having reached her eighty-sixth year. Mrs. Fisher had two half brothers, Jacob and John, of whom the former is a minister of the gospel. The latter enlisted in the army at the time of the Civil war, and has never since been heard from. After her marriage to Mr. Hallman, Mrs. Fisher became the mother of the following children: Joseph Fisher, mentioned at length hereinafter; Matilda, who resides in Pottstown; and Frank, who also lives in Pottstown, married Miss Deischer, after her death, Miss Anna Turner, and has two children, both of whom are living.

Joseph Fisher Hallman, son of Anthony and Susana (Fisher) Hallman, was born February 20, 1847, in Chester county, where he obtained his early education in the public school. He spent two years in Philadelphia, as a clerk in the service of Mr. George D. Moses, and after that was employed in a lumber yard. Feeling that farming was his true vocation, he returned to his native county of Chester, where he has devoted himself with gratifying results to agricultural pursuits. While preferring not to participate actively in public affairs, he fulfills all the political obligations of a good citizen, affiliating with the Democratic party. Mr. Hallman attends the Presbyterian church, his wife is a member of the Society of Friends, and his daughters belong to the Reformed church.

Mr. Hallman married Elizabeth Townsend, and the following children were born to them: Margaret, who was born September 30, 1867, and resides at home; John, who was born August 2, 1869, is a farmer, married Florence Hughes, and has two children, both of whom are living; Lavinia, who was born September 27, 1871, and is the wife of Maurice Stiteler, a farmer; Frank, who was born December 14, 1873, and is a schoolmaster at Honeybrook, Bucks county, his present occupation being that of bookkeeper at the Normal School; and Annie, who was born October 8, 1875, and is the wife of Walter Gotzier, a farmer.

Mrs. Hallman is a daughter of John Townsend, a farmer of Chester county, who married Margaret Emmeman, and they were the parents of the following children: Mary Anna, who married James Kurtz, formerly a miller, and now a farmer; Debbie, who is the wife of John Jones, who was formerly a butcher, but is now engaged in farming; John, who is now deceased; and Elizabeth, who was born July 14, 1848, in Chester county, and became the wife of Joseph Fisher Hallman, as mentioned above.

HENRY SHEELER FOX. Among the prominent and successful business men of Elverson, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who have gained an enviable reputation for ability, integrity and high public spirit, may be mentioned the name of Henry S. Fox, a son of Silas and Mary (Sheeler) Fox, whose birth occurred in the village of West Nantmeal, Chester county, July 28, 1845. Mary (Sheeler) Fox was the daughter of Henry Sheeler, of West Nantmeal township, Chester county.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Henry S. Fox were obtained in the public schools of the village which he attended until he attained the age of seventeen years, after which he located in St. Clair, Schuylkill county, where he was employed for a short period of time at the Anthracite Furnace. He then removed to Pottsville, Pennsylvania; and secured employment in a stove store, where he served in the capacity of driver of the store wagons for six months. He then decided to learn the trade of tinsmith, and by perseverance and close application during his required apprenticeship he gained a thorough knowledge of the business and became an expert mechanic. In the spring of 1868 he finally settled in Elverson, at that time Springfield, Chester county, where he established a tinsmith business which he has successfully conducted ever since. Mr. Fox is an enterprising, energetic and thoroughly honest business man, and as such is highly respected by the residents of the community and has gained a high position in commercial circles. In politics Mr. Fox has always been a staunch Republican, taking an active and intelligent interest in all questions of public concern. He takes a keen interest in the Elverson Improvement Society, and was a charter member of the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Fox was united in marriage, February 22, 1871, to Anna M. McCreary, daughter of Andrew and Isabella (McKim) McCreary, of West Caln township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: 1. Augustus Clifton, born November 24, 1872, and at the present time (1903) is employed at his trade of tinsmith in Coatesville, Pennsylvania; on January 8, 1892, he married Sarah Wamsher, and they are the parents of five children, one of whom is deceased. 2. Olive Frances, born February 4, 1873, now deceased. 3. Ralph Jason, born July 1, 1875, now deceased. 4. Lura Belle, born April 24, 1878, now deceased. 5. Hervy Bernard, born May 26, 1880, attended Stones Business College at Reading, Pennsylvania, and graduated in the commercial course. He is a tinsmith by trade and is employed in his father's establishment at Elverson, where he contributes in a large degree to the success and prosperity of the business. In the spring of 1891 he was appointed by Governor Stone to serve in the capacity of justice of the peace; he served out the term and in the spring of 1903 was elected on the Republican ticket to fill the same position. At the time of his appointment by Governor Stone he was known as the youngest justice of the peace in the state and probably in the United States. He served two terms as school director in his township, was treasurer of the school board for four years, and is now serving his third term as director. He is a member of the Blue Rock Council, No. 904, and serves as secretary of the lodge; he is also a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and a member of the Elverson Improvement Society. He was awarded the contract for the lighting of the streets in the town of Elverson. Hervy B. Fox married Angeline Houck, daughter of William and Sarah Houck, of Robinson township, Berks county, Pennsylvania; three children were the issue of this union, one of whom is now deceased. 6. A son born February 22, 1882, who died in infancy. 7. Mary Freda, born October 10, 1883, resides at home with her parents. 8. Washington Sands, born January 20, 1886, resides at home with his parents; he obtained his preliminary education in the common schools, later was a graduate of the Coatesville Business College, which is under the principalship of Chauncy Clark, and subsequently returned to the same school where he has pursued a course of stenography and typewriting, and graduated in November, 1903. 9. Blanche, born November 24, 1890, now deceased.

Mr. Fox and his wife are active and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Elverson. Mr. Fox has held the office of trustee and secretary of the board of trustees for twenty-one consecutive years, was treasurer of the Sunday school for twenty-five years, and at the present time (1903) is serving in the capacity of assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. He has been a teacher of boys' classes for thirty-six years.

STEPHEN WALLEIGH HANDWORK. One of the highly cultivated and productive farms in Chester county, Pennsylvania, located near the town of Elverson, is the property of Stephen W. Handwork, who was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, September 7, 1852, a representative of a family who have been residents of Pennsylvania since the early colonial days.

Solomon Handwork, father of Stephen W. Handwork, was a native of West Nantmeal township, Chester county, this being also the birthplace of his father, who was a successful and prosperous farmer. Solomon Handwork was reared on his father's farm and thus became thoroughly familiar with the duties and details of a farm, and after completing his common school education he chose that occupation as best suited to his tastes and inclinations. He continued to devote his time to agricultural pursuits throughout the many years of his active and useful life, and by careful management and industry succeeded in accumulating a handsome competency. Mr. Handwork and his three brothers were drafted in the cause of the Union during the Civil war, but they all procured substitutes and returned to their homes. He was united in marriage to Margaret Walleigh.

For a period of two years Stephen W. Handwork was a student at a school in the vicinity of St. Mary's in Warwick township known as "The Grove," but when he attained the age of eight years his parents removed to a farm near Bulltown and for twelve years he pursued his studies at a school in East Nantmeal township which was conducted by Professor Hause, and completed his education at the State Normal School in Millersville, which he attended for two terms. The following seven years he was engaged in the capacity of public school teacher, first for one term at Swineheart's school in Warwick township, then for two terms in the Central school house in West Nantmeal township, then one term at the Grove school house in Warwick township, then one term at Nantmeal village, East Nantmeal township, and completed his educational work by a one term course at Gouglersville, Berks county, Pennsylvania. He then removed to his present farm which consists of seventy-eight acres of productive land located in the vicinity of Elverson, and ever since has conducted general farming and dairying having an average dairy of eight cows. Politically Mr. Handwork is a strict Prohibitionist.

Mr. Handwork was united in marriage, November 30, 1876, to Mary E. Sigman, daughter of John and Margaret Sigman. Their children are— 1. Warren S., born August 14, 1877, attended the common schools of the neighborhood and then pursued a one year course at the H. Y. Stoner State Commercial College; he is a painter by trade and at the present time (1903) is employed in Reading, Pennsylvania. On December 25, 1901, he married Emily M. Wolfe, daughter of William and Elizabeth Wolfe of Reading. 2. George Newton, born April 29, 1882, resides with his parents on the farm. 3. Harry S., born September 23, 1884, was a student in the common schools and completed his studies at the H. Y. Stoner State Commercial College of Reading, Pennsylvania, which he attended for two terms, graduating in book-keeping, shorthand and type-writing. In 1902 he went to Philadelphia and is now employed in the capacity of stenographer with the United Traction Company. 4. Margaret E., born October 17, 1888, resides with her parents on the farm, and is attending the common school in Elverson village. Mr. Handwork is a member of the East Nantmeal Baptist church, and wife is a member of the first Elverson U. B. church.

ABNER E. JAMES, of the West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of a family numerous in its branches and various in its business relations, but everywhere characterized by vigor and substantial citizenship.

Jesse James, father of Abner E. James, was born in West Nantmeal township, December 5, 1794. Born to a farmer's life, he was a man of unusual force and had a strong sense of the worth and dignity of his calling. His interest in public affairs was always keen and clear-sighted. He was one of the organizers of the Republican party, and an earnest advocate of the anti-slavery cause, but this allegiance did not blind him to new and more pressing issues, and later in life he gave his support to the temperance reform movement. He was twice elected to the legislature, once in 1830, and again in 1850, but his temperance principles cut him off from re-election. In his own township he served long as justice of the peace. His wife was Margaret, daughter of Captain Ephraim and Sally (Erwin) Allen, born in November, 1798. Captain Allen was a cabinet-maker by trade, who came from Carlisle, Cumberland county, to West Nantmeal and settled on the farm now in possession of his grandson, C. Allen James. The children of the marriage of Jesse and Margaret (Allen) James were as follows: 1. Hannah, who married James S. Phipps of West Chester, a school teacher and farmer, and became the mother of two children— Margaret, who married Joseph Armstrong, an oil broker of Petrolia, Canada, and Jesse, deceased. 2. Ephraim, who began life as a farmer, but started speculations in oil and lumber in 1864, and later operated a line of boats on the Allegheny river. His first wife was Susanna Russell, who left one child; the second wife was Florence Bump of Syracuse, New York, whose one child, Annie, married Charles Henderson of Glen Moore, a book-keeper in the Honeybrook First National Bank, and has two children, Sarah Jane and Benjamin Reed. 3. Abner E., a sketch of whom follows. 4. Sarah Elizabeth, who married William Templeton, a farmer. 5. Rachel, who became the wife of James Butler of Upper Uwchlan township. (For children of this marriage, see sketch of James Butler, elsewhere in this volume.) 6. Jesse Allen, now a farmer and cattle dealer of West Nantmeal township, married Martha, daughter of Joseph and Jane (Wilson) Williams, and has one son, Jesse Evans James. 7. Isaac, who died at the age of seventeen. 8. Ruth Anna, who married Dr. Richard Mattick of Brooklyn, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and was left a widow with three children— Bessie, Francis and Richard.

Abner E., third child and second son of Jesse and Margaret (Allen) James, was born September 8, 1833, in West Nantmeal township. His earliest instruction was in the old Allen school house, and afterward he attended the Fremont Academy for two terms while it was conducted by Jesse E. Philips. For several years he spent his summers working on the home farm, and his winters in teaching school. He was a teacher in the old Allen district where he went to school as a boy, and he also taught in Berks county near Tuckertown station, about five miles north of Reading. Thereafter, until 1869, he worked on his father's farm, when he opened a coal, lumber and grain business in Springfield (now Elverson), in company with William Sheeler. For seven years he conducted this business, though still living on the farm. In 1876 he sold out his interest to Mr. Sheeler, and it was not until a year later that he took up the same line of trade with Samuel P. Handwork of Conestoga, with whom he carried on business for fifteen years. He then bought his present property from John L. Smedley, and handled a general line of merchandise in connection with a coal and grain business for three years. He then moved to a farm at Loag's Corners, where he built a house and remained for five years, leaving it at the end of that time for the place he now occupies. He is the owner of three farms, one comprising one hundred and ten acres, another ninety-one acres, the third seventeen acres, with a tract of woodland on Welch mountain. Mr. James is now living in retirement, the store property having been purchased by his son C. Allen James and I. T. McFarland, his son-in-law. Mr. James attends the Presbyterian church at Fairview, Wallace township. He is a thoroughgoing Republican, and has been actively interested in party affairs.

In 1860, he married Margaretta Lincoln, a daughter of Samuel Lincoln of Lancaster county. Three children have been born of the marriage, only two of whom are living. These are C. Allen, who married Elizabeth Millard, daughter of Jonathan Millard, and has two children, Helen and Edward; and Bessie Lincoln, wife of I. T. McFarland, who is associated with C. A. James in the general merchandise store. Mr. McFarland is a son of John McFarland of Brandywine township, and has been won by his wife to the Republican ranks.

JONATHAN MILLARD. About the middle of the last century three brothers of the Millard family came from England together, one settled in Connecticut, one in New York, and the third in Berks county, Pennsylvania. The resident of Berks county had a son Joseph, born nearly opposite Douglassville, and who moved in the spring of 1784 to West Nantmeal township. He was a miller and wheelwright by trade; successfully conducted a mill at Pottstown, and afterwards in West Nantmeal; was a justice of the peace from 1797 to about the year 1816, and his old magistrate's docket is still in the possession of the family.

Jonathan Millard, son of Joseph Millard, was born at Pottstown, Pennsylvania, February 19, 1783, and resided there until he was four years old when his parents removed to West Nantmeal, and the remainder of his life was spent in that vicinity. He married Sarah Harvout, and two children were born to them—Joseph and Thomas Millard. Jonathan Millard died in June, 1868; his wife, Sarah Millard, died January 29, 1851, aged seventy-two years.

Thomas Millard, youngest son of Jonathan and Sarah Millard, was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 14, 1816. He was reared on the farm where he was born and attended the public schools of the neighborhood. He chose farming for his vocation in life, and being an industrious and energetic man was enabled to retire from active business pursuits in 1869, but he still owns and resides on his well cultivated farm of one hundred and fifty acres, adjoining the farm owned by his son, Jonathan Millard. For twenty years Mr. Millard followed the occupation of surveyor and conveyancer in connection with farming; he surveyed many of the farms in the neighborhood and also settled the estates of his neighbors. Mr. Millard was a director in the National Bank of Honeybrook, being appointed at the time of its organization in 1868, was also a director of the East Brandywine and Waynesburg Railroad, and one of the managers of the Penn Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Chester county. He is a Republican in politics, and served nineteen years as school director, was three times elected justice of the peace, but refused to qualify, has repeatedly served as auditor, and for nine years was one of the county directors of the poor.

On January 24, 1839, Mr. Millard married Jane Cutler, born December 2, 1812, daughter of James and Margaret (Coke) Cutler. The Cutlers were of Scotch-Irish and the Cokes of German descent. Their children were: Jonathan; James, who died in his nineteenth year; Howard, educated in the schools of Pughtown, Eliesburger, Northumberland county, and at West Chester. For the past twenty-five years he has been engaged in mercantile pursuits, and is a prominent resident of Loag's Corner. He was in the three months' state service when General Lee made his raid into the state of Pennsylvania in 1863. Howard Millard married a young lady who resided in Pana, Illinois, he having been engaged in the general merchandise business in that city for three years. He has held the various township offices from school director to auditor. Thomas Millard, father of these children, is living at the present time (1903), having attained the age of eighty-seven years.

Jonathan Millard, eldest son of Thomas and Jane Millard, was born on the farm adjoining that where he now resides in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 8, 1839. He was educated in the public school of West Nantmeal, the private school conducted by Jesse Phillipps at East Nantmeal, the private school conducted by David Phillipps at Pughtown, South Coventry, and Kelso's School at Danville, Montour county. He then engaged in farming and is now the owner of a farm of one hundred and fifty acres, situated about one mile from Loag's Corner, where they make a specialty of feeding steers for beef cattle. He has also a first-class dairy on the farm near Barnestown which is being operated at the present time (1903) by his son, Horace Millard. Mr. Millard is serving in the capacity of justice of the peace, having been elected to fill that position about twenty years ago, and he has also filled several other township offices of trust and importance. His political views are in sympathy with those advocated by the Republican party.

Mr. Millard married Margaret Kurtz, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Graham) Kurtz, both of whom are descendants of old and prominent families of Chester county, their history dating back to the Revolutionary days. Their children are: Thomas K., was educated in the public schools, and is now engaged in farming on the old homestead in West Nantmeal township; he married Cassie Jones, daughter of Samuel L. Jones, and their children are: Thomas K., Jr., and Mark Millard. Elizabeth, wife of C. Allen James, a farmer of West Nantmeal township, and their children are: Helen, and Edward James Millard. Horace K., a farmer in West Nantmeal township, married Annie Kanauer, daughter of Davis Kanauer, and they are the parents of three children—Davis, Jonathan, and Edgar Millard. Anna May, resides at home with her parents. The farm owned by Jonathan Millard has been in the possession of the Millard family since 1787, and no deeds have been made for it since 1793, excepting to Jonathan, it having passed to him by descent.

Jonathan Millard

MILTON KULP HIGH, a successful farmer and greatly esteemed citizen of North Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of an old and respected county family. His paternal great-grandfather, Jacob High, was a native of Chester county, having been born on a farm in North Coventry township, which is now the property of Samuel Stauffer. Jacob High tilled the soil as a means of livelihood, conducting his operations on a tract of land in Cumberland county, consisting of three hundred and forty-nine acres, whereon he resided up to the time of his death, in the seventy-first year of his age. In religion he adhered to the tenets of the Mennonite church, and in politics was a supporter of the principles of the old line Whig party. He was twice married, and the issue of his first marriage was two sons and a daughter.

Henry High, grandfather of Milton K. High, was born in the vicinity of Phoenixville, Chester county, in 1796, and removed with his parents to Cumberland county at the age of ten years. Subsequently he returned to North Coventry, Chester county, and resided for a few years with his uncle, the Rev. Christian Beary, who followed the occupations of farmer and preacher in the Mennonite church. Henry High engaged in farming pursuits in Berks county, Pennsylvania, for several years after his marriage, but in 1829 he returned to Chester county and purchased the farm of eighty-one acres in North Coventry township, which subsequently became the property of Edwin E. Johns. Here he resided until his death in the year 1858, aged sixty-two years. Like his father, his religious affiliations were with the Mennonite church, in which he filled the office of trustee for many years, and his political allegiance was given to the candidates and measures advocated by the Whig party. By his marriage to Anna East, daughter of Samuel East, a farmer of Colebrook, Dale township, Berks county, he became the father of the following named children: Samuel, Jacob, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth, Henry, Leah, Catherine and Anna High.

Samuel High, father of Milton K. High, was born November 28, 1826, in Colebrook, Berks county, Pennsylvania. He was reared in North Coventry township, Chester county, and obtained his education in the public schools adjacent to his home. He learned the trade of wheelwright at Pottstown Landing, and followed this occupation until he attained the age of twenty-eight years, when he abandoned it in order to engage in farming. He became the owner of two fine farms, and the splendid results which he obtained from his labors fully justified him in his change of occupation. During the Civil war he was twice drafted for military service, but feeling that duty required him to remain at home, he sent substitutes on both occasions. He voted the Republican ticket ever since the organization of that party in Pennsylvania, and for many years was a consistent member of the Mennonite church. On March 16, 1854, Mr. High married Sarah Kulp, who was born January 5, 1827, in Chester county, a daughter of Samuel Kulp, who was also the father of the following named children: Daniel, Samuel, deceased, David, Jonathan, deceased, Catherine, Anna, Elizabeth and Mary, the latter named being the only one of the daughters now living, and is the wife of Abraham Detwiler. Mr. and Mrs. High were the parents of six children, three of whom died in infancy, the surviving members of the family were: Milton K., mentioned hereinafter; Allen K., who is engaged in farming in Chester county; he married Martha Tyson; and Emma K., who became the wife of Milton Phizer, a member of an old and well known family of Chester county. Samuel High, father of these children, died November 14, 1901; his wife passed away October 1, 1898.

Milton K. High, son of Samuel and Sarah (Kulp) High, was born October 16, 1856, in North Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He received a practical education in the public schools of the neighborhood, and from an early age he has followed agricultural pursuit with a marked degree of success. He has resided for more than twenty-one years on his present farm, its high state of cultivation and generally flourishing condition testifying to his energy and ability. He is a loyal and active member of the Brethren church, and in politics is identified with the Republican party, giving an earnest support to the men and measures upheld by that powerful organization.

Mr. High married, in 1882, Catherine Tyson, born November 28, 1858, daughter of Abram and Elizabeth (Keyser) Tyson, the former named having been born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, August 23, 1823, and died in 1892, and the latter was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in January, 1828, and died March 12, 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Tyson were the parents of the following named children: 1. Emma, born May 16, 1851, unmarried, who has been employed as a teacher in Chester county for thirty-one continuous years; 2. Henry, born June 12, 1855, married Lydia Kinney, and they are the parents of one child; 3. Hannah, born September 9, 1857, became the wife of Joseph Johnson; 4. Catherine, born November 28, 1858, mentioned above as the wife of Milton K. High; 5. Leah, born November 28, 1860, became the wife of Rudolph Harley; 6. Naomi, born March 9, 1862, became the wife of Aaron Kulp, and their family consists of five children; 7. Frank born October 30, 1864, married Laura Hoffecker, and four children have been born to them; 8. Martha, born July 5, 1866, became the wife of Allen K. High, a brother of Milton K. High, and the issue of this union was five children; two other children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Tyson, but they died in childhood. Mr. and Mrs. High are the parents of eleven children, as follows: Blanche, who died in infancy; Ethel L., born October 8, 1882, educated in the public schools of Chester county, is unmarried and resides at home; Sadie E., born December 18, 1884, and after her graduation from the public school she learned dressmaking and at the present time is at home with her parents; Clara T., born September 5, 1886, a graduate of the public school and now attending high school; Arthur H., born January 31, 1889, also a graduate of the public school and now attending high school; Mabel M., born July 28, 1890, a graduate of the public school and now attending high school; Earl F., born June 8, 1892, a student in the public school; Ada G., born April 13, 1894, a student in the public school; William M., born September 13, 1896, a student in the public school; Anna C., born August 13, 1898; Verna, born May 7, 1901.

WILLIAM P. FREEBORN was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, June 25, 1856, the son of James and Ellen (Good) Freeborn. James Freeborn (father) was the son of James and Christiana Freeborn, and after acquiring a good common school education he engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He continued in this line of industry for many years, meeting with a large degree of success, and his name in the business world was synonymous with integrity, upright dealings and faithfulness in the performance of every obligation laid upon him. He became one of the prominent men of the city and was a great personal friend of Simon Cameron, and acting upon his advice he disposed of his business and entered the field of politics. He was a member of the legislature for three years, served as deputy sheriff for three years, filled the office of collector of taxes for Philadelphia for three years, and in 1866 was appointed superintendent of lock-boxes in the postoffice, being the incumbent of that office ever since. He married Ellen Good, daughter of John and Martha Good. Their children are: Mary E., unmarried; William P., Henry C., deceased; and Edwin P., who married Jennie McLaren, and they have one child, Harry Freeborn. Mr. Freeborn has been a member of the Union League Club of Philadelphia since 1865.

William P. Freeborn obtained his early education in the public schools of Philadelphia and graduated from the Boys' Central High School, in the sixtieth class, being one of the honor men, and selected to deliver one of the orations at the commencement exercises at the Academy of Music. At the age of sixteen years he entered the mechanical draughting department of the firm of William Cramp & Cons, and after gaining a thorough knowledge of the art, he was promoted to the position of assistant head draughtsman. He continued to serve in this capacity until 1886 when he was invited by Chief Engineer George Melville, head of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, to assist the department in the preparation of plans of engines for the newly constructed naval vessels then under construction. After these were finished, he was tendered the offer to take charge of the draughting department at Washington, the idea at that time being to introduce new methods and advance the engineering ideas then in vogue by the induction of young men raised in successful private shipyards.

After mature reflection on the honor thus conferred upon him, Mr. Freeborn politely declined, as at this particular time, he had under consideration an offer from Cornell University to organize and direct the newly established department of mechanical engineering, just made possible by a private donation of one million dollars to the university. The spirit of restlessness and desire to embark in an entirely new enterprise having developed, Mr. Freeborn decided to establish an insurance brokerage business on his own account. This he successfully accomplished and later on added to his increasing business the agency for the following companies: Royal, Hartford, Spring Garden, Continental, Pennsylvania, North America, State of Pennsylvania and Hamburg Bremen, the four former of which he still represents at his present office address, No. 138 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.

He is a resident of Lansdowne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, always taking part in any movement for the advancement of social or educational ideas. Being an ardent exponent of out of door sports, he has connected himself with and contributed towards the successful operation of athletic associations, country clubs, etc., of which this particular section seems to be prolific. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Public Library and has been a director on the school board ever since the borough of Lansdowne has been created, and for the past eight years has acted as its secretary. He has conscientiously endeavored in every way possible to advance the interests of the school, to introduce new ideas and place its educational facilities on as high a plane as is possible for free education. In his political affiliations Mr. Freeborn is a Republican, firmly believing, however, that none but honest, intelligent men should fill offices of public trust.

Mr. Freeborn married Amelia Thornton, daughter of Edwin B. and Amelia Thornton, of Philadelphia. They had two children, both daughters, one of whom was Florence A. Freeborn, who after graduating from the Lansdowne High School at the head of her class and acting as its valedictorian, in the very prime of her life and in the midst of her virtues and popularity, succumbed to sickness and passed away. This is the one great sorrow of this otherwise happy union. Their surviving daughter, Bertha T. Freeborn, was born November 26, 1882, and like her father is a great lover of athletic sports. Both Mr. Freeborn and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church of Lansdowne, Pennsylvania.

FRANK T. DAVIS. Jonathan Davis is the first of the family of whom we have record and he was the father of John D. Davis in whose family were three children, namely: Frank Thomas, who married E. Bertha Sanders, a daughter of James A. and Elizabeth L. Sanders, and they have two children, Frank T. and R. Bonzanno; Annie Johnson, who is the wife of Henry L. Sanders, and has two children, Louise and Beatrice; and Leonard Dewees, who is married, but without children.

Frank T. Davis, whose name introduces this record, acquired his early education in the public schools and afterward pursued his studies in the Shortlidge Academy, and subsequently in the State Normal School. At the age of fourteen he left home to make his own way in the world, and whatever success he has since achieved has been due entirely to his own efforts. He entered the First National Bank of Wilmington, Delaware, where he remained for a year, and at the age of sixteen he went to the west, making his way finally to Chicago, where he spent four years. When that period had elapsed he took up his residence in West Chester, Pennsylvania, and was one of those appointed to re-index the old records that were made when Chester and Delaware counties were one, extending from 1680 down to 1880. This was an arduous, important and onerous task, but his service was capably performed. Upon its completion he became connected with the Phoenix Bridge Company as its treasurer, and has held the position continuously since 1884, in which regard he is associated with an important industrial concern controlling business of a considerable magnitude. In his political views Mr. Davis is a Republican, and has been more or less active in local political affairs. He served as a member of the council for one term, and in 1899 was elected Burgess of Lansdowne for a term of three years, and is the present incumbent of the latter office.

GEORGE DILLWYN KING. Energy, determination and industry have been the salient features of the success which has attended the business career of George Dillwyn King, one of the prominent and respected citizens of Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Vincent King, grandfather of George D. King, was a prominent and active resident of Little Britain township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, where he pursued the occupations of farmer and miller. On February 23, 1806, Mr. King was united in marriage to Hannah Brinton, and the following named children were born to them: Ann, wife of Jefferson Brinton; Evelina; Mary B.; Brinton (the father of George D. King), and William King.

Brinton King, father of George D. King, was born in Little Britain township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and after completing his education at the public schools, he engaged in farming pursuits, which he followed during the active years of his life. He married Lydia Ann Ring, a daughter of Caleb and Lydia (Brinton) Ring, the latter named being a daughter of Caleb and Letitia (Dillworth) Brinton.

George D. King, son of Brinton and Lydia Ann King, was born October 29, 1849, on the old family homestead. He acquired a liberal education at the West Chester Military Academy, after which he left the parental roof and began his business career as a clerk in the Chelsea Store, where he remained two years. In 1870, he became proprietor of a coal, feed and grain business at Chadds Ford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania; the business at that time was not in a very flourishing condition but under the skillful management of Mr. King, the trade gradually increased to large proportions and was one of the most extensive in that section of the state. In 1888, Mr. King disposed of it, after which he purchased a farm, where he is now conducting extensive operations, which yield him a good interest on his investment. The property is a portion of the Brinton tract, which has been in the family since the arrival of William Penn, and a notable fact is that a pear tree planted by the great-grandfather of Mr. King, in 1746, is still in good condition and bears fruit every year. In political affiliations Mr. King is a Republican, and served his township in the capacity of school director for three years, and member of county committee one year.

On November 30, 1882, occurred the marriage of George D. King and Elizabeth P. Webb, daughter of Isaac Bennett and Hannah (Baily) Webb. They are the parents of one child, Helen Webb King, born September 18, 1883.

ELMER B. DUNWOODY. The Dunwoody family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, of which one of the representatives in the present generation is Elmer B. Dunwoody, a prosperous business man and estimable citizen of Barston, in West Nantmeal township, is descended from John Dunwoody, whose blood also flows in the veins of President Theodore Roosevelt.

About 1730 quite a colony of Scotch-Irish settled in Londonderry township, which received its name from the far-away city whence many of the immigrants came. The spot of their settlement in the new land seems to have been devoted in large degree to an embodiment of their religious belief, for here, in the year mentioned, was built a Presbyterian church at Fagg's Manor. The little chapel became widely known, and from it went out an influence which is discernible in Pennsylvania and adjacent states to the present day. To Fagg's Manor came the emigrant John Dunwoody, who was a school master, whose name appears upon the records of Chester county in 1737. With his name is connected a romantic chapter of history. While teaching at Fagg's Manor, he fell in love with Susanna Creswell, a girl of sixteen, but whether or not his pupil we are not informed. She was a daughter of William Creswell, whose people came to America with the Dunwoody's, and were of the same religious faith. John Dunwoody was entirely without property, and tradition relates that the maiden refused to become his wife until he was owner of a farm. Land in Chester county was cheap enough then, so that the young woman's requirement was in no wise prohibitory, and young Dunwoody soon purchased a farming tract in West Nantmeal township, upon which he made a modest home, and to which he took his young wife, after the performance of the marriage ceremony in Brandywine Manor church, when, so the story goes, it was declared that she was the handsomest woman who had ever entered its doors.

John Dunwoody and Susanna Creswell became the parents of eight children. One of their sons, James, studied medicine and removed to Georgia for the practice of his profession, and one of his daughters became the wife of Hon. John Elliott, who became United States senator from that state, and a granddaughter of this pair, Bulloch by name, married Theodore Roosevelt, and of that marriage was born that Theodore Roosevelt who is now President of the United States. The fact is attested by the Rev. James B. Dunwoody, of Walterboro, Colleton county, South Carolina, who wrote:

"My grandfather's name was James. He was a physician, skillful, had an extensive practice and high reputation. He settled in Liberty county, Georgia, where he married an admirable woman, a widow with a good estate, who brought him two sons, John and James, and one daughter, who married the Hon. John Elliott, senator of the United States from Georgia. The one, Captain James Dunwoody Bulloch, had two sisters, one of whom married the late Theodore Roosevelt, father of the President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt."

So it appears that the Scotch-Irish immigrants, John Dunwoody and Susanna Creswell, were the great-great-great-grandparents of President Roosevelt, and that Elmer B. Dunwoody enjoyed the same relationship to them. A number of the Dunwoody and Creswell families of the Londonderry (Chester county) settlement performed gallant service during the Revolutionary war, and some of their number were with Washington at the battle of the Brandywine and Trenton, and with him crossed the Delaware. Their descendants are not only to be yet found in the county in which the original stock was planted, but they are widely dispersed throughout the middle, western and southern states, and many of them exhibit much of the same traits of independence and aggressiveness which mark President Roosevelt, and afford him such a splendidly American personality.

Descended from the ancestry hereinbefore written of, was George Washington Dunwoody, born in West Nantmeal township, May 14, 1821, and died September 14, 1890. He was a farmer by occupation, industrious and frugal, of unblemished character and averse to public life. He married Dorothy Benner, and to them were born children as follows: 1. Elmer Benner Dunwoody, to be referred to further below; 2. Emma F., who became the wife of Joseph Talbot; 3. John H. Dunwoody, who is a painter by trade; 4. Philip Lessig Dunwoody, who is a farmer in West Nantmeal township; 5. Annie M., who became the wife of James Essick, and who died in less than a year after her marriage.

Elmer Benner Dunwoody

Elmer Benner Dunwoody, eldest son of George W. and Dorothy (Benner) Dunwoody, was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 29, 1855. After completing his education in the public schools near his home, he engaged in farming, which he prosecuted with industry and success until 1897. In that year, desirous of leading a more active life, he took up mercantile pursuits, and carried on a general store at Isabella for a period of five years. At the expiration of that time he removed to Barneston, where he has since conducted a general store with entire success, and has, besides, borne a full share of the labors and responsibilities which devolve upon an intelligent public-spirited citizen. He has served for some time as a director on the school board, and is the present secretary of that body. With his family, he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Dunwoody was married, February 19, 1885, to Miss Susan Uxley, a daughter of Elisha and Catherine Uxley, of Wallace township. Of this union was born a daughter, Emma Florence, in 1888, in Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

JOSEPH P. JACKSON, an enterprising and progressive agriculturist of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred June 25, 1871, is a representative of that sturdy English element which has always been prominent in the material development and growth of the state of Pennsylvania.

The earliest ancestor of the Jackson family of whom there is any authentic record was Anthony Jackson, a native of England, whose birth occurred in the year 1665. His son, Isaac Jackson, was united in marriage at Old Castle, February 29, 1696, to Ann Evans, a daughter of Roland Evans, of Wicklow county, England. After his marriage, Isaac Jackson removed to the vicinity of Ballyton, and in 1725 they emigrated to the United States. Their children were: Rebecca, born January 25, 1697; Thomas, born November 9, 1698; Isaac, born July 1, 1701, died December 15, 1701; Alice, born August 29, 1703; William and Mary, twins, born February 24, 1705; James, born February 10, 1708; Isaac, born May 13, 1710, died August 13, 1710; John, born October 16, 1712, and Isaac, born January 13, 1715.

William Jackson, third son of Isaac and Ann Jackson, was born February 24, 1705, was united in marriage to Catherine _____ and their son, James Jackson, born November 3, 1736, married Mary Jackson, and they were the parents of several children.

James Jackson, son of James and Mary

(Jackson) Jackson, was born June 18, 1771, married Ann Cooper, and the following named children were born to them: Rebecca, born May 20, 1796, died 1836; John, born July 25, 1797, died November 24, 1850; Lydia P., born October 30, 1798; William, born April 24, 1801, died June 12, 1803; Mary Ann, born August 22, 1803; Jeremiah, born December 24, 1804; James N., born September 28, 1807, and Alice, born September 25, 1814.

John Jackson, eldest son of James and Ann Jackson, was born July 25, 1797, and upon attaining man's estate was joined in marriage to Rebecca Preston, and the issue of this union was seven children, namely: William, born June 8, 1822, died July 19, 1824; Elizabeth A., born June 23, 1824; John, born July 3, 1826, died the same day; Edwin P., born September 4, 1828, served four years in the Northern forces during the war of secession, and his death occurred in Brooklyn, New York, July 24, 1866; Isaac, born March 19, 1831; Philena, born October 17, 1833, and Deborah, born October 19, 1835, died October 22, 1835.

Isaac Jackson, fourth son of John and Rebecca Jackson, was born March 19, 1831, in Cecil county, Maryland, and the greater part of his life was spent in this vicinity. He responded to an emergency call during the progress of the Civil war, and, for one month, performed garrison duty at Hagerstown, Maryland. He was united in marriage to Phebe Ann Paxson, and their children are: Anna R., born June 23, 1868; William, born October 14, 1869, died August 3, 1870; Joseph, born June 25, 1871, and Martha P., born August 23, 1875, became the wife of George Lukens, June 19, 1902.

Joseph P. Jackson, second son of Isaac and Phebe Ann Jackson, was born on his father's estate in Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 25, 1871. He pursued his studies in the public schools of Penn township, the Friends' School at Oxford, Martin's Academy, and at West Chester State Normal School, where he completed an excellent education. He then turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and being a young man of great energy, wonderful industry, and an ability far above the average, he has met with a large degree of success in this undertaking. For a number of years he served in the capacity of State Inspector of Fertilizers for the Department of Agriculture, performing the duties of said office with promptness and fidelity. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a member of the Society of Friends, being superintendent of the First Day School. He is a prominent member of the Roosevelt Club.

Mr. Jackson married Rebecca Niblock, a daughter of James and Josephine (Pierson) Niblock. Mrs. Jackson was born in Cecil county, Maryland, reared in Oxford borough, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and her education was acquired at the schools of West Chester, Chester county.

DAVID PHILLIPS CALEY, a prominent citizen of Newtown Square, Pennsylvania, is a direct descendant of an old family by that name whose founder in this country was Samuel Caley, who came here from England with his wife. They settled in Newtown, Pennsylvania, on a farm consisting of one hundred and fifty-four acres, which property remained in the Caley family until 1888, when it was purchased by the Penn Hospital. Samuel Caley had a son, also called Samuel and known as Samuel (second). Samuel (second) married Hannah Reece, and their son Samuel (third), (father of David Phillips Caley), married Ann Phillips, a daughter of David and Margaret Phillips, by whom he had a family of eleven children as follows:

1. Samuel (fourth), who died in manhood, leaving a family of six children, namely: Cyrus Caley, married and has three sons and three daughters; Samuel (fifth) married and has one child; Elizabeth, unmarried; Hannah, wife of Empson Garwood; William, married and has one child; Margaretta, unmarried.

2. Margaretta, wife of Jonathan Richards, died leaving no issue.

3. Hannah, wife of Walter W. Green and has a family as follows: Annie C., Sarah, wife of Edward Knight, has one child; Rena, wife of Daniel White, no family; Margaretta, wife of Aruna Vail, no children; Ella, unmarried.

4. Mary, whose first husband was Amos Lukens, is now the wife of Thomas Baynes; they have no family.

5. David Phillips.

6. Sarah, who married Harvey Gillan, and had one child.

7. George P., who married Hannah Lewis, and they have a family of three children, namely: Wilfred, who died leaving four children; Lizzie, married, and has one child; Howard, unmarried.

8. William R., who married Sabina Bishop, by whom he had the following children: Sarah, deceased; William, married, and has four children; Harvey, unmarried; Anna, unmarried; Eva, wife of Charles Pugh—they have one child.

9. Annie, wife of Edward Doylan, no family.

10. Ann, deceased, and 11. Lizzie, also deceased.

David Phillips Caley was born in Newtown, February 27, 1824. His early life was passed on his father's farm and in attendance at a private Friends' school, where he gained his preliminary education. This was later supplemented by a course at the West Chester boarding school. After completing his studies he returned to his old home, where he remained until 1850, at which time he took aggressive steps to launch out on his own account by renting a farm of Joseph Sharp at Easttown, which property he cultivated for three years. He then returned to Newtown and took charge of the Dr. Preston farm consisting of two hundred and thirty-five acres, which was bequeathed to his father, Samuel Caley, to have and to hold as his own by paying two hundred dollars per annum for the education of two poor children yearly; this obligation was met by Samuel Caley up to the time of his death, and was then carried out by his son David until the proviso was released in due form at a meeting of the trustees.

In both state and local affairs Mr. Caley has been a staunch adherent of the Republican party. His interest has always been most keen along educational lines. For twenty-nine years he has earnestly worked in this field as a member of the school board, twenty-seven years of this period having been spent as its president. Many radical improvements in educational methods are directly traceable to Mr. Caley's far-sighted judgment and concentrated interest. In religious matters Mr. Caley has always attended the Friends' meetings.

His marriage to Margaretta B. Matlack occurred on March 6, 1850. Mrs. Caley is the daughter of Enoch and Elizabeth (Brooke) Matlack, of Radnor, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Matlack died January 29, 1901, at the age of seventy-one years and seven months. Their children are as follows: 1. Elizabeth M., who died in her eleventh year; 2. Ann, who died in childhood; 3. Emma, born November 27, 1856, wife of W. R. Calvert, and they have a family of three children, namely: Marguerite H., T. Elwood and Marie K. Calvert; 4. Joseph M., born November 2, 1859, married Mary Allen; they have no family; he is a physician in Philadelphia; 5. Mary M., born September 25, 1862, unmarried.

MATTHEW KERSHAW, for many years a highly respected citizen of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in 1809, in Yorkshire, England, where he learned the trade of a wool comber. After reaching manhood he came to the United States and settled in Delaware county. Here he pursued his calling, in which he may be said to have attained local celebrity, his work being of such superior order that it was preferred by the manufacturers to that of machinery. Mr. Kershaw was for a time the proprietor of a grocery store in Darby, but abandoned this business in order to engage in farming, in which he was very successful, and he accumulated a handsome property. One of its principal adornments is a shady lane which he laid out when he bought the place, and which is one of the most attractive features of a beautiful landscape. During the latter part of his life Mr. Kershaw was afflicted with blindness. While laboring under this infirmity, however, his mental powers seemed to retain their strength, and even to be in some degree quickened, as was manifested by the composition of some very creditable verses of which he was the author after attaining the age of seventy-two. Self-educated and the architect of his own fortune, he was known for his strength and ability of character, tender sympathy and generous benevolences, and when he died (June 18, 1883) he left behind him the tender memories which attach to a life which was a benediction upon all who came within the sphere of his influence. He was an exemplary and devoted member of the Baptist church. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party until the candidacy of James A. Garfield, whom he supported out of regard for his Christian character.

Mr. Kershaw's wife was Sarah Southwell, who was a native of the same English village with himself, and was born in 1813. She survived him something more than eight years, dying December 26, 1890. They were the parents of twelve children, of whom only the five hereafter named came to manhood and womanhood.

Matilda, eldest daughter of Mr. Kershaw, became the wife of Frederick Turner, who died August 14, 1860. Mrs. Turner passed much of her time in England after the death of her husband. She now resides on the old paternal homestead, a large portion of which has been platted into residence lots.

Of the other children of Mr. Kershaw, Annis Priestly Sykes died December 16, 1902; Amanda T. Kershaw became the wife of W. G. Vernon, of Wallingford, Pennsylvania; Ada M. Kershaw is unmarried and resides in Philadelphia.

Sir Louis A. Kershaw died in India, February 17, 1899. He was knighted by Queen Victoria, and was made chief justice of Bombay under the British government.

GEORGE COOK, for many years a leading manufacturer and highly esteemed citizen of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Westmoreland, England, and at the age of ten was apprenticed to a bobbin manufacturer. At twenty years of age he was the best bobbin-maker in England, and in 1857, before the completion of his term of service, he ran away from his master, and sought in the United States a field for the independent exercise of his abilities. He settled in Springfield, Delaware county, where he established himself in business as a manufacturer of bobbins. Such was the superiority of his workmanship that he secured the patronage of all the cotton spinners in that part of the country. After conducting a large business with great success, he retired in 1884, after transferring the establishment to the hands of his adopted son. He was a member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Cook married, in 1854, in England, Anna, daughter of John Bradley. They had no children of their own, but adopted and reared two, one of whom succeeded Mr. Cook in the management of his business. The death of Mr. Cook, which took place February 6, 1893, was felt to be a great loss, not only to his family and near friends, but to all with whom he had been associated in business, social or church relations. He had been greatly prospered financially, and left much property to his widow.

JESSE L. GRIM, a prominent resident of Newtown township, Pennsylvania, traces his ancestry back to John Grim, who was born in Pennsylvania, May 29, 1773. He was married three times; his first wife bore him two children, Jesse L., born September 5, 1799, died May 31, 1843, and Rachael, born February 26, 1801, died March 19, 1887. His second wife was the mother of one daughter, Ann, born October 23, 1804, and his third wife bore him John Van Culin, the date of his birth being August 29, 1810, and Alice C., born November 18, 1812, who became the wife of Simpson Kirk and the following named children were born to them: Rose, Susan, John, Marion, and William; Mrs. Kirk died January 6, 1852.

John Van Culin Grim, father of Jesse L. Grim, was the son of John and Susan Culin Grim, born in Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, learning the blacksmithing trade. He removed to the shops situated near the old Fox Chase Inn, on the West Chester road in Newtown township, where he followed the smithing business for a number of years. This was during the time freight was conveyed from Pittsburg to Philadelphia in wagons and the mail stages traversed the West Chester road, the Fox Chase being one of the places for changing horses. Subsequently he purchased a farm in the same township, where he resided up to the time of his death.

He was united in marriage to Miss Esther Coburn, and their children were as follows: John; Sarah Adeline, deceased; Jesse L.; Esther A., wife of A. Judson Campbell; and Joseph C., a prominent resident of Marples, Pennsylvania. John Van Culin Grim died July 26, 1893, and his wife passed away a few years later.

Jesse L. Grim, second son of John Van Culin

and Esther Grim, was born September 27, 1850, at Fox Chase in Newtown, and his preliminary education was acquired in the public school of Newtown Square. His further studies were carried on at the West Chester High School, which was at that time under the competent supervision of Charles Swain. After completing his education he learned the carpenter's trade with Alfred Yarnall, in which occupation he was successfully engaged for a period of eight years. He then rented the paternal estate, which consisted of one hundred and forty-eight acres, and which under his careful management yielded bountifully. Upon the death of his parents he acquired through purchase the entire property, since conducting an extensive dairy farm, his excellent produce finding ready sale among a long list of select customers. Mr. Grim is an industrious, enterprising and energetic man, and is justly entitled to the success which has attended his efforts in this particular branch of the farming industry. Like his ancestors, Mr. Grim is a firm adherent of the Democratic party, having voted that ticket with but few exceptions since he cast his first ballot. He takes an active interest in all political contests, but has never sought or held any local office.

On September 8, 1887, Mr. Grim married Miss Mary Marquedant Henry, daughter of Charles M. and Adeline (Johnson) Henry, the former named having been born April 25, 1821, and the latter February 4, 1821. Mrs. Henry died November 22, 1883, leaving her surviving husband, who at the present time (1902) is still living, and three children. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Grim are the parents of three children: Alice H., born August 28, 1888; Jesse Nelson, born June 7, 1892; and Mary Myrtle, born March 8, 1896.

LEWIS PHILIPS. In East Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he now resides, engaged in agricultural pursuits, Lewis Philips was born February 27, 1822, the son of Owen and Rachel (Evans) Philips.

Owen Philips (father) was a weaver by trade, but during the greater part of his active career followed agricultural pursuits. He was united in marriage to Rachel Evans, of East Nantmeal township, daughter of Jeremiah and Mary Evans, the latter named being descendants of an old and prominent family. Ten children were the issue of this union, three of whom died in childhood, and the following named children attained years of maturity: Lewis, the oldest surviving member of the family; David a resident of Kennett Square, and engaged in the capacity of clerk for the American Road Machine Company, of which his son, S. Jones Philips, is one of the principal members; Thomas, a resident of Downingtown, and actively engaged in the mill owned and operated by his son, E. Vinton Philips; Abner E., employed as a clerk in one of the Trust Company Banks (Mutual Building Loan Bank, 1219 Arch street,) Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Jesse, deceased, who for a number of years served in the capacity of treasurer of Chester county, Pennsylvania; Josiah, deceased, was a minister of the gospel, of the Baptist church, and his death occurred while he was serving as pastor of the Jenkin Town church; Joseph, deceased, was a carpenter by trade, and was employed by the Schuylkill Navigation Company for thirty years.

The public schools of East Nantmeal township and the private school conducted under the personal supervision of the Rev. Samuel Aaron, at Norristown, afforded Lewis Philips an excellent education by means of which he has been able to cope successfully with the duties of life. After completing his studies, he spent the following six summers in acquiring the trade of stone mason, his winter months being devoted to teaching school. Subsequently he entered into partnership with his brother, David Philips, in the purchase of a farm, consisting of one hundred and one acres, and situated two miles from the village of Nantmeal. This connection continued for five years, but at the expiration of this period of time Lewis Philips purchased his brother's interest and has since resided thereon, being extensively engaged in the production of a general line of farm products. Mr. Philips was one of the organizers of the Republican party, in 1855, served his township as school director for seven years, auditor for several years, was a member by appointment of the election offices, and also served in several minor township offices.

Mr. Philips married Jane Amanda Keeley, daughter of John and Rebecca Keeley, of Upper Uwchlan township, both of whom were born in Chester county, the former named having been one of its prosperous agriculturists. The Keeley family is an old historic family, one of its members, Dr. Jerome Keeley, brother of Mrs. Philips, is a prominent physician of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and was engaged in active practice at Atglen and other towns. Another member of the Keeley family is Avaletta M. Chrisman, of West Vincent township, wife of M. Sham Chrisman, a member of one of the leading families of that township. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Philips: 1. Horace M., a resident of Topeka, Kansas, where he is serving, for the second term, as treasurer of the Shawnee Company; he married Hannah Mary Griffith, daughter of Emmor G. and Martha Griffith, and they have one son living at the present time (1903) Allen Griffith Philips, of Topeka. Mr. Griffith was formerly a farmer.

Lewis Phillips

Jane Amanda Phillips

but later was engaged in a planing mill with Thomas Evans in West Chester, and he also served as county treasurer of Chester county, Pennsylvania. 2. John Alfred, deceased. 3. Ida Jane, deceased. 4. Owen, deceased. 5. Jesse Evans, is a graduate of West Chester State Normal School and Haverford College, was a teacher for many years in the schools of Boston and Roxbury, and at the present time (1903) is a teacher in the Worcester Academy at Worcester, Massachusetts. He married Mary Durham, daughter of Israel Durham, who was formerly clerk and later manager of the Snuff Works at Yorklin, Delaware. Their children are: Edith Jessie, Evan, and Amy Philips. 6. John K., attended the West Chester State Normal School, and is now engaged in agricultural pursuits on the home farm, residing with his parents. He married Fannie M. Krauser, daughter of David and Elizabeth Krauser, of Upper Uwchlan township, the former named being a farmer of that township, and a member of one of the oldest families in Chester county. Their children are: Irma Amanda, twelve years of age; Lewis K., nine years of age; Hugh Lesley, six years of age, and Miriam Elizabeth, three years of age. Mr. Philips and his family are earnest and consistent members of the East Nantmeal Baptist church, of which Mr. Philips is one of the original members, and he with three others are the only survivors at the present time (1903) of the charter members. He is now serving in the capacity of deacon and clerk, and has filled the former named office and also that of church treasurer for almost a quarter of a century. He also held the superintendency of the Sunday school for fifteen years, One hundred and fourteen churches of the county united in the organization of the Northern Union Sunday School Institute (or association), and Mr. Philips has been the president of the association for twenty-five out of the thirty-one years of its existence.

JAMES ANDERSON, a successful young florist of Garrettford, Pennsylvania, is a son of Archibald and Mary (Blackburn) Anderson, the former being the leading florist of Lansdowne, and a very highly respected citizen of that locality.

Archibald Anderson was born in Ireland December 10, 1832, and about 1850 emigrated to America, where he spent some years as a gardener, but later started a milk route and was for twenty-six years engaged in that line. About 1887 he engaged in business as a florist, making a specialty of growing fine roses, and now devotes all of his time and attention to this branch of commercial activity, meeting with unqualified success, being unable with his five large houses to supply the demands of his trade, so that he is contemplating enlarging his plant in the near future. Archibald Anderson married Mary Blackburn, who was born October 2, 1834, and they had the following family: Kathryn, married Edward Reed, and they have two children, Helen and Lloyd; James; David, married Mattie Runyon, and has two children, Pauline and Harold; Mary, unmarried; Archie, Martha and Samuel, triplets, Samuel died, aged about three years, both Archie and Martha are unmarried; William married Bessie R. Lindsay, and they have two children, Russell and David; Anna C., who is unmarried.

James Anderson located in Garrettford in 1891, purchasing four acres of land and putting half an acre under glass. This plant he has thoroughly equipped with all modern appliances, including a fifty-two horse power steam apparatus, and he also makes a specialty of fine roses, the demand for which is larger than he can supply, owing to the superior quality of his product.

Mr. Anderson married Lida Reed, a daughter of Joseph and Jane (Harris) Reed, and she died January 11, 1901, leaving one son, James Reed Anderson, born December 13, 1894.

Having grown up in the florist business, Mr. Anderson understands its every detail, and the future is very bright before him. He is building one of the finest houses in the township, and he is justly regarded as one of the leading young business men of Garrettford.

DAVID ANDERSON. Within a radius of a few miles in the county of Delaware, Pennsylvania, there are to be found three successful florists, a father and two sons, William Anderson, James Anderson and David Anderson, the last named being the subject of this sketch, and he was born in Upper Darby township, March 15, 1866, a son of Archibald and Mary (Blackburn) Anderson.

Archibald Anderson was born in Ireland, December 10, 1832, and about 1850 emigrated to America, where he spent some years as a gardener, but later started a milk route and for twenty-six years was engaged in that line. About 1887 he began business as a florist, making a specialty of growing fine roses, and now devotes all of his time and attention to this branch of commercial activity, meeting with unqualified success, he being unable with his five large houses to supply the demands of his trade, so that he contemplates enlarging his plant in the near future.

Archibald Anderson married Mary Blackburn, who was born October 2, 1834, and they have had the following family: Kathryn, who married Edward Reed, and they have two children, Helen and Lloyd; James, also a florist, married Lida Reed, now deceased, and they had one son, James Reed; David, our subject; Mary, unmarried; Archie and Martha, twins and unmarried; William, who married Bessie R. Lindsay, and they have two children, viz.: Russell and David; Anna C., who is unmarried.

David Anderson received his early education in the public school of Upper Darby, and assisted in the work on his father's farm. When the latter embarked in the florist business, he joined him, learning all the details of the work, and fitting him for engaging in the same line as soon as an opportunity offered. In 1894 he purchased a portion of the estate of William Leighton, consisting of four acres, and now has a fine plant, consisting of five large houses, all devoted to the growing of roses. This plant is most conveniently located on high ground, with a southern exposure, thoroughly fitted with the latest improved eighty-horse power heating apparatus, and it represents an investment of fifteen thousand dollars. The actual measurements of his houses are as follows:

Four houses, 150x20, or 12,000 square feet.
One house 110x11, or 1,210 square feet, making a total of 13,210 square feet.

His heating plant has a capacity equal to supplying several additional houses, which will be added in the near future. Mr. Anderson ships to the wholesale market in Philadelphia, and averages a daily product of four hundred to five hundred blooms.

David Anderson married Martha L. Runyan, and she is a daughter of Henry B. and Pauline Runyan, of Philadelphia. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, namely: Pauline, born in 1881, and Harold, born in 1885, both very bright young people and important factors in the social life of the community in which they reside. Mr. Anderson is justly regarded as one of the leading young business men of Garrettford, and he, his father and brother practically control the trade in their line for that section of the country.

PETER WELLS, one of the best known and most respected citizens of Charlestown township, Chester county, is a grandson of John Wells, who emigrated from Wales with a colony which settled on the banks of the Schuylkill. He was a farmer, and his children were: Peter; John, mentioned at length hereinafter; Enoch, Jessie, Lydia and Sarah. The sons were farmers in Chester county.

John Wells, son of John Wells, Sr., was born about 1800 on the homestead, and was all his life engaged in agricultural pursuits. He succeeded his father in the ownership of the home farm, which he continued to cultivate in a skillful and energetic manner. He married Catharine, daughter of Peter Young, of Charlestown township. Mr. and Mrs. Wells were the parents of the following children: Ruth, who married Aaron Beaver, for years a wheelwright of Chester county; Catharine, who is now living unmarried at the age of eighty-two; Lydia, who became the wife of Joseph Beaver, a farmer of Charlestown township, and who, with her husband, is now deceased; Sarah, who never married, and is now deceased; John, who was born in Charlestown, graduated in 1854 from the University of Pennsylvania, and practiced medicine up to the time of his death, which occurred in about 1870; Peter, mentioned at length hereinafter. It will be seen that the elder son of Mr. Wells, in adopting for his life-work the practice of medicine, introduced a new element into the family, which was thenceforth as honorably represented among physicians as it had formerly been, and still continues to be, among agriculturists.

Peter Wells, son of John and Catherine (Young) Wells, was born November 28, 1830, in Charlestown township, where he received his primary education in the public schools, afterward attending Howard's Academy. He learned the carpenter's trade, which he combined with farming, prosecuting both with a marked degree of success. He now makes his home on land which forms a portion of the old homestead. In politics he is a Republican, thus conforming to the traditions of his ancestors, who were Whigs and ardent supporters of Henry Clay, giving him their votes on the occasions of his nominations for the presidency. He and all his family are members of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Wells married Catharine E., daughter of Peter and Margaret King, and the following children have been born to them: Sarah Emerene, who is the wife of George Pennepacker, and has no children; David Edgar, who is unmarried; and John Sherman, who is unmarried, and has an enviable reputation as a teacher of music, a vocalist and organist. He is a member of the Masonic order, and both he and his brother David Edgar belong to the order of Odd Fellows.

Mrs. Wells is descended from a well known family. Her grandfather's house was in a number of instances a refuge for wounded patriot soldiers, several of whom died there and were buried in the old graveyard. The son of this veteran, Peter, and his wife, Margaret, were the parents of the following children: David, who was a farmer, and died at the age of seventy-four; James, who died in infancy; Moses, who has been at different times in his life teacher, merchant and surveyor; Aaron, who led the life of a farmer until within nine years of his death; Jesse, who is a carpenter by trade, and is also engaged in mercantile business; and Catharine E., mentioned above as the wife of Peter Wells.

OLIVER B. GRIFFITH. One of the farms of Chester county, Pennsylvania, located in East Nantmeal township, is the property of Oliver B. Griffith. He is a descendant of a family of Welsh origin, which was founded by Stephen Griffith, who upon his arrival in this country settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania, where many of his descendants reside at the present time (1903).

Stephen Griffith, Jr., son of Stephen Griffith, the emigrant ancestor, was born April 1, 1815, in the vicinity of Chestnut Hill, Chester county, Pennsylvania. After completing a common school education he learned the trade of a stone mason, which occupation he followed successfully for a number of years. For twenty-three years during the latter part of his life he devoted his time to agricultural pursuits and the management of a general store. He was actively interested in township affairs, and served in various capacities, the principal offices being those of school director, constable and supervisor; his political affiliations were with the Democratic party. Mr. Griffith was united in marriage to Anna H. Rhodes, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. Rhodes, prominent residents of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Sarah R., born August 1, 1836; Rebecca L., born October 23, 1837; Eliza E., born October 21, 1839; Lewis, born August 12, 1841; Davis, born April 3, 1843; Oliver B., born May 11, 1845; George W., born September 11, 1847; Sophia C., born August 30, 1850; Emma L., born June 3, 1853; and Morris F., born April 1, 1855.

Oliver B. Griffith, third son of Stephen and Anna H. Griffith, was born in West Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 11, 1846. He attended the common schools of West Vincent and Uwchlan townships, completing his education at the age of twenty-one years, and then for a period of fifteen years he engaged in farming in the vicinity of his birthplace. He then located in East Nantmeal township and purchased a farm of nineteen acres of rich and arable land, with a dairy of three cows attached, where he is now conducting general farming and dairying. His church connections are with the Baptist denomination, and his political affiliations are with the Democratic party. He served his township as a committeeman for three years. For several years he held membership in the Improved Order of Red Men and the Patriotic Sons of America.

On December 1, 1869, Mr. Griffith married Martha Roberts, daughter of Isaac and Jane Roberts of West Vincent township, where they resided for many years and reared a family of four children. Mr. Roberts was a shoemaker by trade, and this occupation he followed in addition to the cultivation and management of a farm. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Griffith—1. Jennie B., wife of Lewis Buller, a prosperous farmer of East Nantmeal township; 2. Rose, wife of Harry Lillie, who is engaged at his trade of iron worker in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, and they have a family of two children—Alice and Wilbur Lillie; 3. Annie, wife of William Yoder, a representative farmer of East Nantmeal township, and they are the parents of two children—Harry and Elsie Yoder; 4. Samuel, deceased.

ISAAC THOMAS, an old and well established farmer of West Goshen, and one who has rendered to the community useful service in various positions of trust and honor, is a representative of a very numerous family in Pennsylvania, whose American ancestors were from Wales.

His father, Emmor Thomas, a son of Mordecai Thomas, was born on September 13, 1800, in Willistown, Chester county. He was brought up on a farm upon which he worked until his young manhood, when he was given employment in a general store in Cochranville, conducted by his father and a Mr. Lloyd. His father subsequently retiring, Emmor Thomas engaged in the mercantile business, having as partners at different times his brother George and Mr. Lloyd. He was fairly well established when the financial disaster of 1837 overwhelmed the country, paralyzing all business, and he found himself a ruined man, his entire property swept away while he was also indebted to a considerable extent to merchants from whom he had obtained goods. Determined to retrieve his shattered fortune, Mr. Thomas turned toward the west, making his journey in part by canal, at times working on the boat, and again driving the horses on the tow-path. Another part of the way he made afoot, and finally reached the Mississippi river. He here found a congenial occupation, and in course of time rose to the command of a vessel, and he subsequently commanded one on the Muskingum river, under the proprietorship of his uncle, Caleb James. His connection with steamboat affairs was in the palmiest days of river traffic, when the "Father of Waters" and its tributaries carried the vast bulk of the merchandise of the interior, and a large majority of its travelers, and Mr. Thomas grew increasingly prosperous. After some years he was in possession of ample means, and he returned to Chester county, where his first acts attested his nobility of character. His failure in business before his leaving the state had been due to selling goods on credit (the universal custom then), and his inability to make collections of his customers, the only money of the day being valueless notes issued by private banks which had closed their doors in the general disaster. There was no legal method of enforcing collections of such old-time indebtedness as was owing by Mr. Thomas, nor did many regard such a debtor as being under any moral obligation to make payment at so late a day. But Mr. Thomas, moved by a high sense of principle, discharged his every obligation, making payment to his old creditors in person where they were yet living, and in cases where they had died to their children. With reference to the latter class it is to be said that in various instances the children were unaware of the indebtedness, and the sums paid to them were in the nature of an unexpected benefaction. Mr. Thomas passed the remainder of his days in well earned comfort and in the enjoyment of the esteem of the entire community. He was recognized as one of the leading men of the county, and he exercised a salutary influence, aiding with his effort and means every movement promising of advantage to the people, whether in moral or material things. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and his political affiliations were with the Republican party. He passed away, sincerely regretted by all who came within his acquaintance, in June, 1878, at the ripe old age of upwards of seventy-eight years.

Mr. Thomas married Hannah, a daughter of Robert Firlamb, of Middletown, Delaware county, and who long survived her husband, dying in October, 1894. Six children were born of their marriage: 1. Isaac, mentioned at length hereinafter; 2. Mary F.; 3. Lydia H., who married James Patchel, of Edgemont, Delaware county; 4. Annie T., who became the wife of David C. Windle, of West Goshen; 5. Susan H., who married Samuel P. Reno, of Newcastle, Pennsylvania; and 6. Emmor, who died at the age of four years.

Isaac Thomas, eldest child of Emmor and Hannah (Firlamb) Thomas, was born March 12, 1839, in West Goshen township, Chester county, and was brought up on a farm. He received his education in the neighborhood schools, and devoted his efforts to agricultural pursuits, which he followed with success and in which he acquired a wide experience. In 1876 he took up his abode on the homestead whereon he now resides, and engaged in the butcher business, having for his market a large and rich region adjacent to his farm, and is owner of a large amount of property in West Chester. Like his father, he is a man of large business ability, strict integrity, and a progression of spirit which makes him a prominent factor in community affairs. His neighbors have testified to the esteem with which they regard him by calling upon him to fill various important public positions, including those of justice of the peace, tax collector and census taker, in all of which he has acquitted himself in the most satisfactory manner, justifying to the full the confidence reposed in him. He is a Republican in politics.

Mr. Thomas was married, October 25, 1877, to Miss Annie M., daughter of Jesse and Hannah (Hickman) Russell, of Thornbury, Delaware county.

JUDSON G. PHILIPS. One of the highly cultivated and productive farms in Chester county, Pennsylvania, is located in East Nantmeal township, and is the property of Judson G. Philips, who was born October 7, 1848, in East Nantmeal township, a son of Jesse E. and Esther (Trainor) Philips.

Judson G. Philips acquired his preliminary education at the common schools of East Nantmeal township, and after attaining the age of nineteen years he supplemented this by a one-term course at Oakdale Seminary.

His first active employment was on his father's farm and after continuing at that occupation for one year, he passed a creditable examination conducted by the county superintendent, George L. Maris, for the position of teacher. He received the appointment to teach at St. Andrews and St. Matthews schools, both of which are located in West Vincent township, and he also completed a term for another teacher in a school located in East Nantmeal township. He then returned to the paternal roof and for one year attended the Philadelphia market, located at the corner of Twelfth and Market streets, Philadelphia, but this occupation not proving congenial to his tastes, he returned to the farm and for twelve years devoted his entire time and attention to its cultivation and management. At the expiration of this period he purchased a one hundred and forty acre farm, which he has managed successfully up to the present time (1903). He also operates a flourishing dairy of twenty head of carefully selected cows, and the product from this branch of the business is readily disposed of to the Fairmont Creamery, Mr. Philips being one of the seven directors of this extensive and profitable enterprise. He is a member of the East Nantmeal Baptist church, and his political views are in accord with those advocated and supported by the Republican party.

Mr. Philips was united in marriage, January 15, 1874, to Mary S. Pennypacker, daughter of George Pennypacker of East Nantmeal township, Chester county. Their children are—1. Owen L., born April 25, 1876, attended the West Chester Normal School for two years, and graduated from the Millersville State Normal School after a two and a half years' course; the first year following his graduation he taught school in West Nantmeal township and the second year in West Vincent township. He then secured employment on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Rambo, on the Trenton cut-off, where he served for a period of nine months in the capacity of assistant freight agent, and after his resignation from this position he entered into partnership with Mr. R. G. Simpson in the management of a general merchandise store at Eagle, but disposed of his interest to his partner after a period of six months. He then located in Lionville and for one term was engaged as school teacher, and from there he removed to Honeybrook, where he now resides, being employed in the store of Mr. L. P. Williams. 2. Mary Elsie, born December 9, 1877, was a graduate of the West Chester State Normal School in 1897; the following year she was engaged as a teacher at Goodwill school, in West Nantmeal, after which she returned to West Chester and pursued the post-graduate course. She then taught at Chadds Ford for four terms, and declined a reappointment for a fifth term in order to accept a position as principal in the high school at Glen Moore, where she began her term on September 7, 1903. 3. Elma May, born December 13, 1881, completed her common school education at the age of fifteen years, for one year was a pupil at the private school at Chester Springs, conducted by Miss Fannie Stiteler, and then entered the State Normal School at West Chester, from which institution she was graduated in the class of 1902. The same year she received the appointment to teach at the Union school, and her work being so successful she was appointed for a second term and entered upon her duties on August 31, 1903. Mrs. Philips, mother of these children, is one of a family of eight children born to George and May Pennypacker, seven sons and one daughter, five of the sons being now deceased. The surviving members of the family are—Albert, married Caroline Dampman, and ten children have been the issue of this union; they reside in East Nantmeal township; William J., married Sallie Coulter; they reside in East Coventry township, and their family consists of five children; Mary S., wife of Judson G. Philips. Mr. Pennypacker and his wife were consistent members of the Presbyterian church.

J. WERSLER THOMSON, a representative citizen of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has resided during his entire life time, traces his ancestry to David and Phœbe (Thomas) Thomson, his great-grandparents, who were united in marriage in the year 1801, and were the parents of two children—Joseph and Aaron Thomson. They were prominent and influential residents of Willistown township, Chester county. His grandparents were Aaron and Harriet (Evans) Thomson, who were married in 1825, and the following named children were the issue of this union—Addison, Mary, Milton and Wilmer W. Thomson. His parents were Milton W. and Emiline W. (Wersler) Thomson, the latter named being one of two children—Emiline W. and Jacob—who were born to John and Rebecca (Walter) Wersler, who were united in marriage in 1804.

J. Wersler Thomson was born in Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 15, 1865. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood, and by studious and close application to his studies acquired a comprehensive knowledge of the fundamental principles of education. During the greater part of his business career he has been engaged in the Phoenix Iron Works, serving in the capacity of clerk. For a number of years he was the incumbent of the office of custodian of Colonial Land Records of Pennsylvania at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and also creditably and efficiently discharged the duties of postmaster at Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Mr. Thomson possesses the characteristics that insure success in any undertaking or enterprise—energy, perseverance, industry and integrity—and by faithfully adhering to these principles he has gained an enviable reputation among his fellow citizens. His church affiliations are with the Methodist Episcopal denomination, and his fraternal relations are with the Masonic order.

At Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, July 13, 1889, Mr. Thomson was united in marriage to Clara M. Nyman, and one child has been the issue of this union—Harold A. Thomson, born at Phoenixville, February 19, 1901.

SAMUEL RICHARDS SHIPLEY, president of the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia, is descended from ancestors who were early settlers in the states of Pennsylvania and Delaware. William Shipley, his paternal grandfather, was of a Quaker family of Uttoxeter, Staffordshire, England, and came to America about 1750, shortly after the coming of his uncle of the same name, and who was practically the founder of Wilmington, Delaware. Joseph Shipley, of the firm of Brown, Shipley & Co., of Philadelphia, was a descendant of the uncle before named.

Thomas Shipley, father of Samuel R. Shipley, was born in Philadelphia, 4 mo., 2, 1784, and died there, 9 mo., 17, 1836. He was the son of William Shipley (who came in 1750) and Margaret Marles, of Philadelphia. He was a hardware merchant by occupation. He was a man of strong character, unfaltering in advocacy of what his conscience approved. He abhorred human slavery, and for many years prior to his death was president of the Pennsylvania Society for the Abolition of Slavery. His home in Philadelphia was the gathering place of such men as William Lloyd Garrison, Benjamin Lundy, Arnold Buffum, Dr. Joseph Parrish, George Thompson, the noted British anti-slavery agitator and member of parliament, and many others of like mind and sympathies. There, too, the fugitive slave ever found a resting place and aid on his way to freedom, and no man was held in more bitter hatred by the slave-catchers than was Mr. Shipley. His memory was tenderly commemorated by the Quaker poet, Whittier, in the following stanza extracted from a poem written in the year of his death:

"Oh, loved of thousands, to thy grave,
Sorrowing of heart thy brethren bore thee;
The poor man and the rescued slave
Wept as the broken earth closed o'er thee,
And grateful tears, like summer rain,
Quickened the dying grass again."

Mr. Shipley married, 12 mo., 14, 1826, Lydia Richards, who was born in Philadelphia, 4 mo., 29, 1789. She was a descendant of John Sharpless, of Upland. She was twice married, her first husband being Daniel Elliott, to whom she bore four children. By her marriage with Mr. Shipley she became the mother of three children—Samuel Richards, to be further written of; Hannah Elliott, who became the wife of Joel Bean, of San Jose, California, and Catherine Morris, who became the wife of Murray Shipley, of Cincinnati, Ohio. The mother of these children lived to the extreme age of nearly ninety-seven years, dying 12 mo., 11, 1885, at the residence of her son, Samuel R. Shipley, in East Bradford township, Chester county, where she had long made her home, having survived her husband forty-nine years. She preserved her faculties unimpaired until the last. She was a woman of remarkable vigor of body and mind, and was an active and zealous colaborer with her companion in all his humanitarian and benevolent works. Her memory was a storehouse of delightful reminiscences, which she would recount with excellent diction and enthusiastic spirit, to the unflinching pleasure of those about her. She had a distinct recollection of the ravages of the yellow fever in 1793. Her recollection was bright and vivid in recalling Nicholas Wain, John Pemberton, Richard Jordan, Thomas Scattergood, and many other worthy Friends, and she could even, after an interval of eighty years, repeat passages from the discourses of some of the number. She could remember George Washington, when as President he was a familiar figure on Chestnut street in Philadelphia, and his habitual courtliness in bowing to every lady whom he met.

Samuel Richards Shipley, eldest child and only son of Thomas and Lydia (Richards) Shipley, was born in Philadelphia, January 8, 1828, and is now in his seventy-sixth year. He was educated at the Friends' Boarding School in Westtown (a history of which institution appears on other pages of this work), and after five years residence there, arrived at the age of fourteen, he entered upon an active career. Having acquired some knowledge of the dry goods business, in 1852 he became a member of the firm of C. W. Churchman & Co., commission merchants and importers of dry goods. He remained with the house named for five years, during which time he made a number of visits to Europe in its interest. Having retired therefrom, he became senior member of the firm of Shipley, Hazard & Hutchinson, commission merchants for the sale of Philadelphia made goods. In 1864, having had a successful issue of his business, he retired from commercial life, and in the following year was made president of the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia, which had just been founded, and he has been re-elected to the presidency of that institution in each succeeding year. A financier of recognized high ability, he has also been, from its organization, a director in the Central National Bank, one of the successful banks of Philadelphia, and is treasurer of the Philadelphia Free Library. He is a member of the Union League, the Art Club and the Penn Club, all of Philadelphia.

Mr. Shipley was married, at Orange Street Meeting, Philadelphia, 9 mo., 10, 1851, to Anna Shinn, born in that city 10 mo., 26, 1826, died 4 mo., 28, 1888, daughter of Earl and Sarah (Comfort) Shinn. The children of this marriage were: Susan G., born 11 mo., 18, 1852, who is yet living; Anna born 9 mo., 24, 1854, married Samuel Henry Troth, of Philadelphia, to whom she bore a son, John Theodore, and died 6 mo., 26, 1884. Mr. Shipley married, 4 mo., 15, 1890, Agnes Gillespie Evans, daughter of William D. Evans, of Pottstown, Pennsylvania, and of this marriage were born two children, Mary Mallet Prevost, and Agnes Dorothy Shipley, who are both living, as is also Mr. Shipley's grandchild, John Theodore Troth. Mr. Shipley made his residence in Germantown from 1856 to 1864, since when he has maintained a home in Philadelphia, and a summer residence at Winden, near the city of West Chester.

FENEMORE LEWIS THOMPSON, an industrious and highly respected citizen of East Nantmeal township, where he has been engaged in farming pursuits, with the exception of three months, during his entire business career, was born at Font, Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 18, 1868. The Thomson family dates back to Revolutionary days, and it is supposed that they are descendants of Swedish settlers in the United States, as history names them with that nationality. Mr. Thompson has in his possession a chest which was the property of his great-grandfather, George Thompson, who was a sea-faring man. Isabella Thompson, wife of George Thompson, lived to the extreme old age of ninety-six years.

William Thompson, grandfather of Fenimore L. Thompson, was born in the year 1804. He was an upright, conscientious man, active and prominent in local affairs, and he was appointed to serve in various offices of Chester county. Joseph McClure Thompson, uncle of Fenimore L. Thompson, was a soldier in the rebellion of 1861, and, while participating in many engagements, did not receive any serious wounds. He served in the capacity of captain of Company D, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers.

Fenimore L. Thompson acquired an excellent education in the public schools of his neighborhood and at the graded school of Pughtown, the latter named institution of learning being under the competent instruction of Miss Lizzie Hawley. Mr. Thompson chose the occupation of farming for his vocation in life, and, with the exception of three months, he has continuously conducted his operations along that line. The three months were spent in the Kimberton Bakery, where he engaged as a driver, but subsequently was obliged to bake, and finding this task too arduous and confining he relinquished the position and returned to farming. He is now the owner of a ninety acre farm, devoted to the production of a general line of farming, with a dairy of thirteen head of cows. The garden products find a ready sale in the nearby markets, and the products of his dairy are disposed of to the Fairmount Creamery at Font. His farm is well improved and carefully cultivated, and its general appearance indicates the supervision of a thorough and progressive farmer. Mr. Thompson is a Democrat in politics.

On October 12, 1899, Mr. Thompson married Emma Marie Rhodes, daughter of David and Mary Ann (Timler) Rhodes, and they are the parents of one daughter, Elgarda Mae Thompson, born October 6, 1901. David Rhodes, father of Mrs. Thompson, was a general mechanic, and for many years worked at the mason and carpenter trade; later he followed agricultural pursuits. John Rhodes, grandfather of Mrs. Thompson, was a native of Germany and emigrated to this country at an early day. Daniel Rhodes, great-grandfather of Mrs. Thompson, gave by grant a plot of ground near Spring City, Pennsylvania, as a burying ground, and up to the present time (1903) it is known as the Rhodes Burying Ground. On the maternal side

Mrs. Thompson is a descendant of an Irish ancestry. John Timler, maternal uncle of Mrs. Thompson, served as a private during the war of the rebellion, and, while returning to his home, died at Memphis, Tennessee. The Thompson family are well and favorably known in the community, and are active and prominent members of the Lutheran church.

THOMAS E. PARKE, M. D., a practicing physician of Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in Augusta, Georgia, January 3, 1851. He is a son of John E. and Anne Bryan (Graves) Parke, and a descendant of Thomas Parke, who settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1724, and of John Edge, who came from England in 1685, both of whom were prominent members of the Society of Friends. His mother was of Southern birth, of the Hinton-Graves family of Georgia. Another near relative was Dr. Thomas Parke, who was a leading physician at an early day, and at one time President of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Philadelphia.

Thomas Parke was educated at the Lititz Academy, in Lancaster county, a Moravian school which was conducted for fifty years by John Beck, and at Tuscarora Academy, in Juniata county. He began to read medicine in 1868 under Dr. John P. Edge, of Downingtown, Pennsylvania, and later entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, where he further pursued his medical studies under Professor Francis Gurney Smith and other accomplished preceptors. He was graduated in 1871 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and then spent several months in Europe, where he pursued advanced branches in his profession, availing himself of the advantages presented by the best continental medical schools and hospitals. In 1872 he returned to Downingtown, where he practiced medicine with great success for a score of years, retiring in 1894.

Dr. Parke has been officially connected with various prominent institutions where his professional services have been of great advantage to the community. He is a member of the Chester County Medical Society, the Medical Society of Pennsylvania, and the American Medical Association. He was also a member of the Board of Health of Downingtown, and for ten years was secretary of that body. He has been manager of the Chester County Hospital at West Chester since it was organized in 1892, and is a manager of the Rush Hospital for Consumptives, of Philadelphia.

In addition to his close attention to a large practice and other professional duties, Dr. Parke has been actively identified with borough concerns, and was for five successive terms—1880 to 1886—Chief Burgess of Downingtown. He has been a director of the Downingtown National Bank since 1888, and is a director in the Chester County Trust Company of West Chester, the Dime Savings Bank of Chester county, and the Kyle Bank, of Kyle, Texas.

Dr. Thomas E. Parke married (first) February 23, 1881, Miss Meribah A. Willits, of Philadelphia, who died in 1882. He married (second) October 20, 1887, Miss Mary A. Bacon, of Germantown, Pennsylvania, and to them were born two children: William Bacon, born September 19, 1891, died June 1, 1902; Thomas Parke, born July 6, 1901.

ISAAC EUGENE CHANDLER, the well known proprietor of an extensive and well appointed pharmacy at Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a man of great enterprise, good business qualifications, undaunted perseverance and the utmost integrity. He was born in Jennersville, Chester county, October 28, 1862, a son of Samuel D. and Mary A. (Moore) Chandler, and grandson of William Chandler.

Samuel D. Chandler (father) was for many years a leading merchant of Chester county, having owned and conducted general mercantile establishments at Norristown, Jennersville, Hamorton, New London and Kennett Square, Pennsylvania. Three years of his life were spent in the cultivation and improvement of a farm in Kennett township, from whence he removed to New London and later to Kennett Square, and after engaging in the shoe business for one year in the latter named township he retired from active business pursuits. He was one of the organizers of the Kennett Building and Loan Association, in the management of which he took a keen and active interest, and he was also one of the original stockholders of the Kennett National Bank. He was an honored member of the Society of Friends, and a strong and loyal supporter of the principles and measures advocated by the Republican party. Mr. Chandler was married twice; his first wife, Mary Ann (Moore) Chandler, who died August 13, 1883, bore him the following named children—Laura B.; I. Eugene, mentioned hereinafter; and J. Walter, deceased. His second wife, Susan A. Chandler, survived him for more than a year, her death occurring on October 1, 1903. Mr. Chandler passed away at his home in Kennett Square, March 25, 1902.

The educational advantages enjoyed by I. Eugene Chandler were acquired at the New London Academy and Martin Academy, and in 1884 he was graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy. Having decided to test the business opportunities of the western portion of the United States, he accordingly located in Denver, Colorado, where he remained for eight years, three of which were spent in the capacity of clerk, and the remainder of the time he conducted an extensive and lucrative business on his own account. He then returned to his home in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, and established his present business, which has proved a most remunerative source of income. His store is well stocked with a full line of pure drugs and chemicals, also toilet and fancy articles, and the prescription department is under his own personal supervision. He is a stockholder in the button factory, one of the leading industries of the town. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

In Denver, Colorado, November 19, 1889, Mr. Chandler married Nettie Glenn, a daughter of A. Glenn, of Colorado Springs, Colorado. They are the parents of one child, Samuel Walter Chandler, born November 20, 1897.

CHARLES M. JAMES, an enterprising and successful business man and esteemed citizen of South Coventry township, Chester county, is a grandson of William James, who married Mary Dunwoody, a native of Chester county, by whom he was the father of the following named children: James D., Mirich, Daniel, Benjamin Franklin, Rachel, who became the wife of Albert Way, who died in 1865, Sarah, Evan, and Samuel L. William James, the father of these children, died at an advanced age in Indiana.

Benjamin F. James, son of William and Mary (Dunwoody) James, during the greater portion of his life, was a resident of Chester county. He married Margaret Liggett, daughter of Samuel and Barbara (Starret) Liggett, the latter named having been the parents also of the following named children: William, of Pottstown, now deceased; Jacob, who died in Illinois in 1882; John, who died in New Orleans in 1851; George, who is now a resident of Illinois; Mary Ann, who became the wife of G. R. Brinly, of Berks county, and who, with her husband, is now deceased; and Elizabeth, deceased, who was the wife of the late C. R. Rump, of Philadelphia. Mr. Liggett, who was a soldier in the war of 1812, died about the year 1856, and his wife passed away at an advanced age in the year 1862. Benjamin F. and Margaret (Liggett) James were the parents of the following named children—Charles Morgan, mentioned hereinafter; Sarah Ellen, deceased, was the wife of Daniel Bellman; Mary E., widow of John Lewis of Reading, Pennsylvania. After the death of his first wife, Mr. James married Mary Ann Rictor, who bore him the following named children—William, a resident of Chester county; Clara, who became the wife of David Lahr of Chester county; George T.; Evan; Benjmin F., Jr.; Margaret; and Ida, who is now deceased. Mr. James, the father of these children, who attained to a venerable age, is now deceased, as are also his brothers and sister.

Charles M. James, son of Benjamin F. and Margaret (Liggett) James, was born July 4, 1837, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He obtained his education partly in the public schools of his native county and those of Berks county, whither the family moved when he was eight years of age, returning to Chester county and settling in Warwick township when he attained the age of twenty-four years. In 1859 Mr. James engaged in the milling business on Rock Run creek, and in 1872 removed his plant to Chester county, where he has since conducted an extensive and lucrative trade, owing to the ability and energy with which he has prosecuted all his designs. The productive power of his plant is estimated at twenty-five barrels a day. The mill is located on the site of the old Reading Furnace, erected by Nutt & Branson, which was the first to melt ore in Chester county, and which was erected on a portion of the six hundred and fifty acres of land patented by Samuel Nutt, which was estimated in value to two thousand pounds. The old furnace is still standing, and some of the metal is in the bottom to this day. The iron industry, which has grown to such vast proportions and great importance in these days, began in Pennsylvania in a very small way in 1716, a special permit having been granted by the Parliament of Great Britain. Mr. James takes an active interest in local affairs, and neglects none of the duties of a good citizen. His political affiliations are with the Republican party. He attends the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. James married, in 1860, Emma Ibach, of Pottstown, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Annie Elizabeth, born June 6, 1861, is now the widow of J. Yeager; William F., born in 1862, is now engaged in carpentering work in Pottstown; Sarah Ellen, the widow of William Schiller; Laura, born in 1868, is now the widow of William Hartline, of Pottstown; Charles M., Jr., born June 6, 1871; twin children, who died in infancy; and Alice, born in 1876, now the wife of Nathan Garner. In 1884 Mr. James and his family sustained a severe bereavement in the death of the wife and mother, who was also sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends, to whom her many estimable qualities had greatly endeared her.

JOSHUA ROWLAND HOWELL, a recognized leader among the farmers of Chester county, is a representative of a family, which tradition says, was founded in America by two brothers who emigrated from Wales in the time of William Penn. One of them settled in Georgia, and the other found a home in Pennsylvania, taking up his abode in Chester, Delaware county, then Chester county. The occupation of tanner and leather curer was hereditary in the family, being handed down from father to son, the members in the successive generations winning great renown in their chosen calling, which they followed until within a very recent period.

Arthur Howell was born in 1748, in Philadelphia, where he followed in the footsteps of his ancestors as a tanner and leather curer. He was a conspicuous preacher in the Society of Friends. He married Mary Mott. Their children were: William, Joseph, Deborah, Israel, Hannah, Ashur and Jacob. Arthur Howell, the father of the family, died in 1816.

Israel Howell, mentioned above as the son of Arthur and Mary Mott Howell, was born in 1786, in Philadelphia, where he was educated in the common schools and followed the business of his father. In 1828 he moved to Edgmont, Delaware county, where he purchased a farm of two hundred acres and devoted himself to the business of fattening cattle for the markets. He soon built up the village of Howellsville, now known as Gradyville. In 1848, after the sale of his property, he returned to Philadelphia, where for five years he was employed in the custom house. At the end of that time he removed with his family to a farm of sixty acres in East Bradford, where he made his home for the remainder of his life, giving his attention to rural occupations. In 1813 he married Elizabeth Rowland, of Sussex county, Delaware. She was the daughter of John and Sarah Rowland. Her father was also engaged in the tanning business.

The children of Israel and Elizabeth R. Howell were Arthur, Mary Mott, Rowland, Israel, John Rowland, Joshua Rowland, Jacob, Sallie Rowland, and Elizabeth. Israel Howell died in 1864. His wife survived him a little over one year.

Joshua Rowland Howell, son of Israel and Elizabeth Rowland Howell, was born in 1825. He obtained his primary education in the common schools, afterward attending Westtown Boarding School. For six years he was engaged in a tannery in Monroe county, after which he went to Philadelphia, where he was engaged in the leather business, and there remained with his cousins about fourteen years. In 1865 he was obliged to relinquish business on account of ill health, and removed to East Bradford, where he resided with his brother Jacob and family. He subsequently purchased a farm of seventy-five acres, situated very near his brother's, where he has since devoted himself to the dairy business and to cattle raising, with very satisfactory results. His political principles are those promulgated by the Republican party, and his religious connections are with the Society of Friends. It is worthy of remark that Mr. Howell is, at the present time, the only surviving member of a family of nine children, and the only living male member of his generation.

Mr. Howell was married in 1876 to Deborah, daughter of Emmor and Hannah B. Comly. They had one child, Deborah, now the wife of Francis Darlington Brinton, who has charge of the Howell farm. Deborah C. Howell died in 1882, and in 1888 Mr. Howell married her sister, Elizabeth H. Comly, M. D., a graduate of the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania. These two sisters were granddaughters of John Comly, a celebrated preacher in the Society of Friends, and a man of high educational attainments.

D. BARNARD STOUT, a manufacturer of Waterloo Mills, near Berwin, in Chester county, who has a record of honorable service in the Civil war, has built up his business on the field where he began as an apprentice. He inherited his mechanical ability, for he has followed in the line of work in which his father showed more than ordinary capacity.

The father was Charles Stout, born September 30, 1815. He early learned the wheelwright's trade, and worked at it in different places in Chester and Delaware counties, being fifteen years at Waterloo Mills. He was known for skill and originality in his work, and was a member of the United American Mechanics. He was a Democrat, and a member of the Baptist church. His wife was Ann Bittle, and the couple were the parents of four children: Martha J., D. Barnard, Annie and Isaac N. Charles Stout died January 17, 1859.

D. Barnard Stout, second child and first son of Charles and Ann (Bittle) Stout, was born September 8, 1839, at Strafford, Delaware county, the place being known at that time as Unicorn Tavern. He was brought up here, attending the local schools until he went to Waterloo as an apprentice to William Steele in the milling business. He worked as a miller until the Civil war drew him into military service for several years. When he took up industrial life again, it was as a wheelwright with M. H. Wilds, continuing the business on his own account at Waterloo Mills. He has since been located here except for a short time when he conducted a shop at Newton. On going back to Waterloo Mills he opened a blacksmithing shop in connection with the wheelwright work. The small beginning then made has grown into an establishment where all kinds of heavy farm wagons are manufactured, and where four skilled workmen are employed throughout the year. The sterling quality of the stock has given the shop high repute in the section, the work Mr. Stout turns out having been more in common with the old time honest hand-made kind than with the modern factory sort, showy and often flimsy as it is.

His life as a soldier began with enlistment in Captain Bean's company of the Thirty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia. During the three months he was with this command, it was stationed at Philadelphia and Reading. He was discharged August 1, 1863, and enlisted in Company C, Eighty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry. With this command he served with the Army of the Potomac, and bore a part in some of the most important battles of the war. He was in the battle of the Wilderness, and in the battles of Rappahannock, Reams Station, Hatcher's Run, and in many other engagements not so generally remembered. He was with the detachment that captured the Weldon Railroad, and at Hatcher's Run he himself fell into the hands of the Confederates, but ready wit and prompt action restored him to his comrades. He served through the war, and only took his discharge with the disbanding of the army at Harrisburg, June 29, 1865. His brother, Isaac Newton Stout, who was also a soldier, died after his discharge of a wound received during service. He was wounded in the right arm while sergeant of Company D, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry, in the First Brigade, Tenth Army Corps. He had learned the trade of cabinet-maker, and was married only three months before he died. Mr. D. Barnard Stout is a member of McCall Post, No. 31, Grand Army of the Republic, at West Chester, and a member of Wyoming Tribe, No. 231, Improved Order of Red Men, and of Berwyn Lodge, No. 998, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Like most Grand Army men, Mr. Stout is a Republican, and he follows party affairs with interest, and has at various times held local offices.

Mr. Stout married Mrs. Lydia A. Foy, widow of James Foy, and daughter of Samuel and Anna (Anderson) Bewley, January 5, 1868. The mother of Mrs. Stout was also twice married, her first husband being William Jones, to whom she bore two sons, Benjamin and William A. Of her marriage with Samuel Bewley six children were born, namely—Mary L., Lewis, Jonathan, Matilda Davis, Charles, Sarah Kauffman and Lydia A. Stout. Mrs. Stout was born January 2, 1840, and educated in the West Chester schools. She married James Foy in 1859, and he died two years later. Since her marriage to Mr. Stout five children have been born, Charles T., Sally A., Arabella T., Frank D., and Ella M.

GEORGE H. SMITH, of London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a worthy representative of that class of men known as independent farmers. He was born in Delaware, August 22, 1860, a son of George I. and Annie (Kiddle) Smith, formerly residents of Delaware but now of the state of Maryland, and grandson on the paternal side of William Smith and on the maternal side of Hosea Riddle.

George H. Smith spent the early years of his life in his native state, acquired a practical education which thoroughly qualified him for the duties and activities of life in the public schools adjacent to his home, and when he attained his sixteenth year accompanied his parents to Maryland, where he resided for almost a quarter of a century. In April, 1898, he located on the old Crossan homestead, which was the property of his father-in-law, Kennedy Crossan, located in London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and since then has devoted his entire time to the cultivation and improvement of the same, achieving a large degree of financial success from his extensive operations.

On September 30, 1885, Mr. Smith married Margaret E. Crossan, who was born June 22, 1861, a daughter of Kennedy and Margaret (Nichols) Crossan. The following named children were the issue of this marriage—Walter K., who died at the age of ten years, six months and six days; Martha Ann, born April 21, 1889; and George I., born September 9, 1892. Mr. Smith and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian church of Christine, Delaware.

HOWARD W. TOWNSEND, a successful farmer and leading citizen of London Grove township, Chester county, is a grandson of William Townsend, a native of Upper Oxford township. Samuel, one of his children, was born there in 1803, on the old homestead. He received a common school education, and then learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for sixteen years, most of the time in Penn township. He then engaged in farming, and in 1857 moved to London Grove township, where he passed the remainder of his life. In 1832 he married Ruth Ann, daughter of Amos and Ruth Pyle, the former a farmer of Cecil county, Maryland. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Townsend: James, who died in infancy; and Howard W., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Townsend died in 1888, at the advanced age of eighty-five years, and his widow survived him until 1899.

Howard W. Townsend, son of Samuel and Ruth Ann (Pyle) Townsend, was born in 1835, and received a common school education in Penn township. At an early age he moved to London Grove township, where he has since lived on the homestead, devoting himself to agricultural pursuits. He manages the estate on the principles of general farming, and also has a dairy of seventeen cows. His political sentiments are those of the Republican party, and his interest in local affairs is practical and energetic. He takes an active part in every effort to promote the cause of education, and held for eight years the office of school director. He contributed to the Union cause during the Civil war.

Mr. Townsend married, in 1862, Mary E., born in 1836, in New Garden township, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Harper) Walker, the former a storekeeper of New Garden township. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend are the parents of the following children: Elizabeth W., born in 1865, married Dr. P. J. Nichols, and has two children; Ruth A., born in 1866, married Dr. C. C. Bullock; Mary G., born in 1868, unmarried; Samuel W., born in 1871, married Lillian Brosius; and Arthur, born in 1877, unmarried.

WILLIAM C. NIELDS. The work of most men does not afford them a monument to last after they themselves have passed from the earth, but the carpenter is peculiarly privileged in this respect, for he builds for more than the present generation, and the finished production from his hand is a testimony to his skill and a source of comfort to others. There are many structures in Chester county to testify to the excellent workmanship of Mr. William C. Nields, but it would be superfluous to mention these facts here, and we but briefly outline his life on one of the pages of this history.

Thomas Nields, father of William C. Nields, was a resident of East Marlborough township, and was a wheelwright by trade, which may have given the son his bent toward carpentry. He was prominent in local affairs, and was elected to the office of justice, wherein he served for several terms. He was a thorough believer in Republican principles, and was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was twice married; his first wife bore him four children, and his second wife, Orphie (Logan) Nields, daughter of Joseph Logan of East Marlborough township, was the mother of the following named children: Ruth Ann, unmarried; Amos, married, had eight children, six of whom are living and two dead; Mary, deceased; William C.; and Hannah, who became the wife of Edwin Terry, and the issue of this marriage was five children, two of whom, William N. and R. Helen are living.

William C. Nields has passed most of his life in this county, and has followed his trade with much success. At present he has his home and shop in West Bradford township, in the village of Marshallton, and his services are in demand nearly all the year round, for he is careful, methodical in his workmanship, and every piece of work coming from his hands bears evidence of the master mechanic. His services as a soldier were once called into requisition, and for four months he served in the One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Regiment under Colonel Thomas, being honorably discharged at the end of this period. He is a Republican in politics, has held various minor offices, and is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Nields married Martha Groce, daughter of Daniel Groce, who was a canal boss in Juniata county. Their children are: Fannie N., who became the wife of Dr. Young of Coatesville, and of the five children born of this union three are now living; Edwin T., who married Ettie E. Baldwin, and they are the parents of four children: and Anna, a student in the Coatesville school, and now of the West Chester State Normal School.

PHINEHAS PRATT. The first ancestor of this branch of the Pratt family of whom we have authentic information was Abraham Pratt, who was a prominent resident of Dublin township, Delaware county, where his death occurred in 1709, his will being proven December 21, 1709. His wife, Jane Pratt, was executrix of this document, and in it were mentioned the names of his children—Joseph, John, Jeremiah and Elizabeth Pratt.

Joseph Pratt, eldest son of Abraham and Jane Pratt, married, May 9, 1717, Sarah Edwards, daughter of William and Jane Edwards, and located on a farm in Edgmont, where he continued to reside for many years. After the death of his first wife Mr. Pratt married, at Christ church, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 25, 1728, Mary Jones. The children born to Mr. Pratt were: Thomas, Alice, Ann, Sarah, Rose and Joseph Pratt.

Joseph Pratt, youngest son of Joseph and Sarah Pratt, was born in 1727, on the old homestead in Edgmont, where he continued to reside during his entire life, and which he cultivated in such a manner that it yielded him a handsome income. In 1752 he married Jane Davis, and the following named children were born to them: Abraham, Sarah, Jane, Joseph, David, Mary, Priscilla, Thomas and Sarah Pratt.

Thomas Pratt, father of Phinehas Pratt, was born January 13, 1764, and was prominently identified with the various interests of Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where his death occurred in 1820. In 1786 he married Hannah Massey, and six children were born to them, namely: Ann, Susan, Jane, Massey, Priscilla and Phinehas Pratt. The mother of these children died and Mr. Pratt contracted an alliance in 1813 with Hannah Heacock, and by this marriage one son was born, Thomas Pratt.

Phinehas Pratt, deceased, youngest son of Thomas and Hannah Pratt, was born in Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, October 20, 1795. He was a student in the common schools of the vicinity, and after completing his education he learned the trade of a tanner. His natural genius was supplemented by an energy that enabled him to make a success of this occupation, which he followed for many years, after which he purchased the Massey homestead in East Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, which he cultivated to a high state of perfection, and where he passed the remainder of his life. In his political affiliations Mr. Pratt was a Whig and later a Republican; he took an active interest in the cause of education, and advocated every measure that tended to benefit the community.

Mr. Pratt was united in marriage March 15, 1821, to Ann Marsh Marshall, who was born November 6, 1799, a daughter of John and Sarah (Hibbard) Marshall. Mrs. Pratt acquired her education at a seminary in Wilmington, Delaware, possessed a noble and beautiful character which prompted her to be kind and gracious to all with whom she was brought in contact, and in the management of her household displayed great ability. Their children were: Sarah H., born December 21, 1821, became the wife of Edwin James, and died November 7, 1847; Hannah M., born July 2, 1823, died July 10, 1900; Martha, born January 16, 1825, died June 11, 1844; Elizabeth, born January 7, 1827, died December 14, 1847; John Marshall, born March 22, 1828; Susanna, born February 21, 1830, died January 31, 1854; Phineas, born April 23, 1832; Priscilla Bishop, and Jane A. The last two mentioned reside on South Walnut street, West Chester, Pennsylvania. Mr. Pratt died March 1, 1879, and his widow passed away October 19, 1885. Both Mr. Pratt and his wife were earnest and consistent members of the Orthodox Society of Friends, this being the faith in which they were reared.

JOHN MARSHALL PRATT, who has been for many years recognized as one of the leading farmers and most highly respected citizens of East Goshen township, is descended from a family which has long been resident in the county, where the name of Pratt is regarded as a badge of good citizenship.

Mr. Pratt was born March 22, 1827, on the old Pratt homestead in East Goshen, and is a son of Phineas and Ann (Marshall) Pratt. He was educated at the famous school of Jonathan Gause, at the old Mendenhall school, and the Milton Durnall School. He remained on the farm with his father until 1861, when he took charge of the homestead, to the care and management of which he has since devoted himself. His neighbors have given frequent proofs of their appreciation of his many estimable qualities by electing him to various township offices. In politics he is a Republican.

Pinchas Pratt

Ann M. Pratt

Mr. Pratt married, March 19, 1861, Lucinda, daughter of Abner and Phcebe Baldwin, and the following children have been born to them: Ella, who is the wife of John F. Clark; Maurice Baldwin, who holds a position in the Chester County Bank of West Chester; Harry Howard, who is engaged in the hay and grain business; Charles, who is a commission merchant of Philadelphia; Florence, who is the wife of Wayne L. Button, of Pocopson township; Fred A., who is a commission merchant of Philadelphia; J. Herbert; Bertha L.; and Arthur A. Pratt. In addition to the nine who are living, two of the children of this family died in infancy. In 1897 Mr. Pratt and his children sustained a severe bereavement in the death of the mother of the family, her loss being also keenly felt by a large circle of friends.

ADAM LEVINGOOD, a veteran farmer and highly respected citizen of West Nantmeal township, Chester county, is a grandson of Madus Levingood, who was a native of Berks county, Pennsylvania, where he passed his entire life as a farmer. His son Adam, who was also born in Berks county, followed the trade of a carpenter. He married Maria Hardline, and they were the parents of ten children, only one of whom is now living, Adam, mentioned at length hereinafter. All the sons were farmers. When his son Adam was about eleven years old, Mr. Levingood died, leaving behind him the memory of a good and honest man.

Adam Levingood, son of Adam and Maria (Hardline) Levingood, was born September 25, 1813, in Berks county, where his only opportunities for an education were the very meagre facilities afforded by the public schools of that day. For a number of years he worked as a day laborer, becoming in the course of time, by dint of industry and perseverance, a successful and independent farmer. Many years ago he came to Chester county and purchased the farm which has from that day to this been his home. This estate, which consists of ninety-seven acres, is still under the management of its venerable owner, whose vigor and energy are the marvel of all his neighbors. Every day he may be seen, not merely superintending and directing the labors of his farm, but personally taking part in them. Among the difficult tasks in which he bears his full part is that of cutting on the neighboring mountain all the wood needed for use on the farm. As a citizen, Mr. Levingood is regarded with the respect due to his native worth and force of character. While a resident of Berks county he was elected to the office of supervisor. He is an earnest advocate of Republican principles, and a firm believer in Republican doctrines. His church membership is with the German Lutherans.

Mr. Levingood married Harriet Spohn, of Berks county, and ten children were born to them, seven of whom are living, their names being as follows: Mary Ann, who is the wife of William Clauser, a farmer and carpenter; Adam, who is a farmer, and married Amelia Manwiller; Jacob, who is a farmer, and married Elizabeth Frieremuth; James, who is a farmer, and is also extensively engaged in business as a butcher in West Nantmeal township, and married Ella Swinehart; Solomon, who is a farmer, and married Priscilla Gable; Eliza, who is the wife of William Bubb, a merchant of Reading, Pennsylvania; and Sarah, who married Christian Kutz, a conductor on the street railway in Reading. Mr. Levingood is now ninety years of age, his wife being eighty-six. Both are passing their declining years in the enjoyment of well-earned prosperity, happy in the love of their children and grandchildren, and the affectionate veneration of their many friends and neighbors.

SAMUEL IVISON, an extensive landowner in Chester county, and member of the firm of Joseph Cope & Co., of Oxford, Chester county, dealers in grain, hay and fertilizers, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 10, 1851.

John Ivison, grandfather of Samuel Ivison, was born in England, and obtained an excellent education in the district schools. He began his business career in a printing establishment in his native county where he thoroughly learned all the details of the trade, and in 1830, having decided that there were better opportunities for commercial success in the United States, came to this country and located in Philadelphia, where he continued to work at his trade for many years. In politics he gave his allegiance to the Republican party, and in religion he favored the doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal church. He married Anna Sargason, and one son and ten daughters were born to them. Mr. Ivison died at his home in Philadelphia, in 1870, at the advanced age of eighty-four years.

Samuel Ivison, father of Samuel Ivison, Jr., was born in England in 1821, and accompanied his parents when they came to this country in 1830. He attended the public schools of Philadelphia and after completing his studies turned his attention to business pursuits, subsequently becoming interested in the manufacture of cotton goods in his adopted city. In political sentiment Mr. Ivison was a pronounced Republican, but was never inclined to take an active part in public affairs, preferring to devote his time and attention to the requirements of his business. In religious belief he adhered to the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was united in marriage to Rebecca Henderson, and the following named children were born to them: Dr. John, a medical practitioner of Coatesville; Isaac; Mary McDowell; Samuel, Jr. and Anna E. Johnson.

Samuel Ivison, youngest son of Samuel and Rebecca Ivison, spent the early years of his life in Philadelphia, and received his education in the public schools and Lincoln Grammar School of that city. After his graduation from the latter named school he entered the employ of Joel J. Baily & Co., wholesale notion dealers, with whom he remained for one year. He then went to Delaware county and engaged in agricultural pursuits for seven years, being very successful in this undertaking. After the expiration of this period of time he removed to the township of New Garden, where for a number of years he successfully conducted a general store. He then removed to Lincoln when he continued to follow the same line of industry for five years, after which he purchased an interest, in 1885, in the firm of Josiah Cope & Co., manufacturers of fertilizers. They have a large and constantly increasing trade in grain, hay and fertilizers, and have one of the leading business houses in that line in the county. In his political affiliations Mr. Ivison is a firm and loyal adherent of the principles of the Republican party; he has served for three years as a member of the town council and held the office of recorder of deeds for one term. He is a past master of Oxford Lodge, No. 353, Free and Accepted Masons, and a past high priest of Oxford Chapter, No. 223, Royal Arch Masons.

Mr. Ivison has been twice married. His first wife was Margaretta Sharpless, daughter of Joel Sharpless of Delaware county, to whom he was united in marriage on November 25, 1875. Their children were: J. Morton, who married Florence Townsend; and Marion S., who married Robert Armstrong. The mother of these children died October 27, 1880. Mr. Ivison then married, November 25, 1885, Mary Gibson, a daughter of Addison Gibson, a retired citizen of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Josephine C. and Josiah H. Ivison, both of whom are unmarried. Mr. Ivison and his family are regular attendants at the divine services of the Presbyterian church of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

STEPHEN LOVE MOORE, JR., actively and prominently identified with the agricultural and social interests of the township of Upper Uwchlan, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred on March 4, 1879, is a son of Stephen Love and Martha J. (Thackeray) Moore.

On the paternal side Stephen L. Moore, Jr., traces his ancestry back to George and Jane (Jordan) Moore, who came from the north of Ireland about the year 1760, and settled on Market street, between Second and Third streets, Philadelphia, where his death occurred on December 27, 1787. Their son, Charles Moore, born in Philadelphia, January 30, 1771, united with the old Swedes' church in that city, where he served as clerk for several years. In 1797 he removed to Concord and connected himself with the Episcopal church, in which he frequently officiated as lay reader and exhorter, but in 1802 he was baptized as a member of the Brandywine Baptist church, and in 1812 was licensed to preach. Seven years later he became pastor of the Vincent Baptist church, which position he held until 1844. He married Margaret Carroll, daughter of William and Eliza Carroll, by whom he had nine children. Robert Moore, eldest son of Charles and Margaret Moore, was born in Philadelphia, November 29, 1797. He was married, in 1821, to Rachel Smedley, born in Uwchlan, February 4, 1797, after which they settled on land which belonged to her father, and in 1859 they purchased the homestead which contained one hundred and twenty-six acres. They were the parents of six children; Robert Moore died in Upper Uwchlan on May 14, 1852, and his wife died in the same township on October 11, 1870. Thomas M. Moore, third son of Robert and Rachel Moore, was born in Upper Uwchlan, July 1, 1825. He was married in Philadelphia on January 15, 1852, to Charity Ann Love, who was born in East Goshen, March 16, 1827, a daughter of Stephen and Hannah (Johnson) Love. The following year they moved to a farm in Big Spring valley, near Milford Mills, Upper Uwchlan; he was elected a justice of the peace three times, but served two terms only. They were the parents of five children. Thomas M. Moore died April 1, 1899, and was buried at Uwchlan Meeting.

Stephen Love Moore, eldest son of Thomas M. and Charity Ann (Love) Moore, was born November 15, 1852; he married, in Delaware county, March 21, 1878, Martha J. Thackeray, who was born in Philadelphia county, November 11, 1855, a daughter of John Thackeray, who was born in Leeds, England, a son of George and Martha Thackeray, and Isabella Paul, who was born in Trenton, New Jersey, a daughter of James and Margaret Paul, from Edinburgh, Scotland. The children of Stephen Love and Martha (Thackeray) Moore were: Stephen Love, Jr., mentioned hereinafter; John Thackeray, born September 18, 1881, now a carpenter by trade, and Annie Isabella, born October 23, 1889, in Uwchlan township, now attending school in the vicinity of her home.

John Thackeray died May 23, 1896, in Chester county, his wife having passed away on March 7, 1880, in Delaware county. Both are buried in Delaware county.

Stephen L. Moore, Jr., was educated in the schools adjacent to his home, and since completing his education has assisted with the manifold duties of farm life. Being inured to this occupation from boyhood, he is thoroughly conversant with all the details and is considered a first class dairyman; he is also an expert horseman. He is an active member of the Baptist church, and has served in the capacity of librarian of the Sunday school for a number of years. His mother is a member of Windsor Baptist church, as is also his brother, who has served two terms as secretary and treasurer of the Sunday school.

WILLIAM H. CROSSAN. One of the highly cultivated and therefore productive farms of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is located in Franklin township and is the property of William H. Crossan, a son of Kennedy and Margaret Crossan, and his birth occurred on the old homestead in London Britain township, Chester county, July 28, 1856.

The boyhood and young manhood days of William H. Crossan were spent in the same manner as those of most boys reared in the country—attending the district school during the winter season and assisting with the manifold duties of a farm. After his marriage he purchased a farm consisting of seventy acres of rich and arable land located about three quarters of a mile northwest of Landenberg, whereon he has since conducted a general line of farming and dairying. His operations are conducted in a practical and scientific manner, and the appearance of his broad acres, residence which he has rebuilt and out-buildings indicate the careful supervision of a man well versed in the calling he has chosen for his life work. He has always manifested a keen interest in local politics, and has been the incumbent of a number of offices, including those of tax collector, school director, which he filled for fifteen year, and supervisor. He is a member of the Free and Accepted Masons, being affiliated with New London Lodge, No. 554.

On December 20, 1888, Mr. Crossan was united in marriage to Catherine McHenry, a daughter of William F. and R. Elizabeth (Bradway) McHenry, the former named being a retired citizen of East Nottingham township, and the latter having passed away in 1892, aged forty-five years. The following named children have been the issue of this union: Leslie William, born in 1889; Mark Bradway, born in 1890; Ernest Kennedy, born in 1892; Thomas Edward, born in 1893; Donald McHenry, born in 1895; Dorothy Elizabeth, born in 1896; Catherine Martha, born in 1897; and Walter Brown, born in 1898. Mr. Crossan and his family attend the services of the Avondale Presbyterian church, in which body both he and his wife hold membership.

HENRY MARSHALL, a well known farmer and leading citizen of Kennett township, Chester county, belongs to one of the old families of the county, his grandfather, Thomas, having been a farmer in Kennett, and a member of the Society of Friends. He was the father of nine children: Susan, John, Hannah, Sarah, William, mentioned at length hereinafter; Thomas, Carpenter, Alban, and one who died in infancy. Mr. Marshall died February 2, 1851.

William Marshall, son of Thomas, was born in 1807, in Kennett township, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, which he followed throughout life. He was a Republican in politics, and a member of the Society of Friends. He married Martha, daughter of William and Margaret (Lamborn) Walter, and they were the parents of the following children: Henry, mentioned at length hereinafter; Levis, born in 1852, died at five years of age; Franklin, who died young; Anna, born March 25, 1856, married John L. Balderston, and has two children, Robert W., and C. Canby, Jr., Mrs. Marshall died in 1874, and her husband survived her ten years, his death taking place in 1883.

Henry Marshall, son of William and Martha (Walter) Marshall, was born March 27, 1850, in Kennett township, Chester county. He was reared on the paternal farm, and received his education in the public schools and at the Westtown Boarding School. At the end of his student life he settled on the homestead, where he has continued to reside, devoting himself to general farming. He is one of the directors of the Union Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and is also connected with other insurance companies. He takes an active interest in whatever concerns the welfare of the community, and has served for twenty-one years as school director. He is deservedly popular with his fellow citizens, and in the autumn of 1902 they gave him a substantial proof of the regard in which he was held by them by electing him treasurer of Chester county, and he entered upon the discharge of the duties of the office on January 5, 1903. Politically he is a Republican. Like his ancestors, he belongs to the Society of Friends, being overseer clerk of the Preparative Meeting, and serving in various offices and committees in the Yearly Meeting.

Mr. Marshall married, October 16, 1879, Jane H., daughter of Lewis P. and Mary (Hoopes) Harvey, of Birmingham township, Delaware county. They are the parents of the following children: Joseph, who died at five years old; Anna M.; Lewis H.; and Mary H.

SAMUEL HEISTAND LATSHAW. Enterprise, perseverance and thrift are the principal factors in the success which has attended the business career of Samuel H. Latshaw, a successful farmer and miller of East Coventry township, Chester county, who was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, October 6, 1864, a son of John and Mariah (Heistand) Latshaw.

John Latshaw (father) was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, September 16, 1812. His boyhood and early manhood were spent in the vicinity of his birthplace, and later he became a prominent citizen of Montgomery county, where his death occurred in the year 1882. Mr. Latshaw married Mariah Heistand, who was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, August 28, 1815, and died in the year 1886. Mrs. Latshaw was one of a family of seven children, the other members being—David Heistand, born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, and a prominent resident of that section of the state at the present time; Charles, deceased; Samuel, deceased; William, deceased; Nathan, a prosperous citizen of Berks county, Pennsylvania, and Susan Heistand, wife of William Gelman. Abraham Latshaw, brother of John Latshaw, was also a native of Berks county, Pennsylvania. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Latshaw: John, born in Chester county, November 2, 1860, married Annie Clemmer; Harvey, born in Montgomery county, April 3, 1862, married Hannah Clemmer; Samuel H., born in Montgomery county, October 6, 1864; David, born in Montgomery county, June 22, 1867, married Mary Clemmer; Malinda, born in Montgomery county, January 6, 1869, wife of Aaron Brower of Montgomery county.

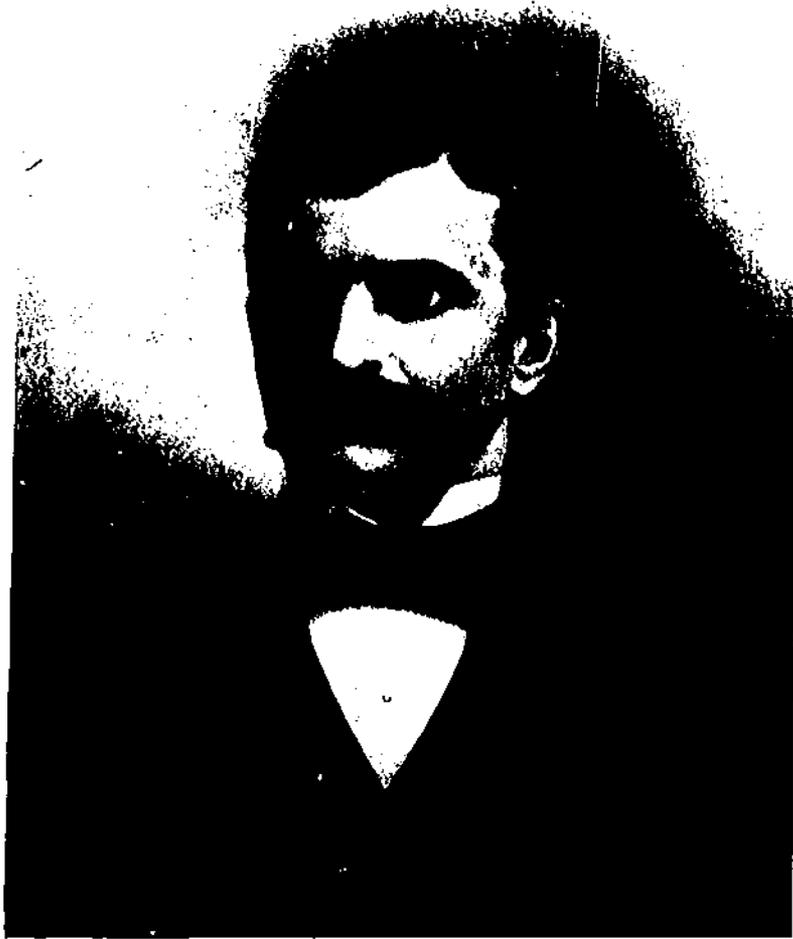

Samuel H. Latshaw was reared in Montgomery county, acquired his preliminary education in its public schools and this was supplemented by attendance for one term at Niantic School, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. When he attained the age of seventeen years he located in Montgomery county, where he remained until twenty-six years of age, when he learned the milling trade. He then removed to Schuylkill county, where he worked for one year, for a short period of time residing in Phoenixville, and then settled in his present location, where he has lived ever since. His time and attention has been exclusively devoted to farming and milling, which occupations have proved a profitable means of livelihood, and he is now the owner and operator of the Latshaw Mill in East Coventry township.

On December 26, 1893, occurred the marriage of Samuel H. Latshaw and Hannah Bechtel, who was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, April 2, 1869, a daughter of William, born in Berks county, December 2, 1820, and died December 8, 1896, and Mary (Obberholtzer) Bechtel, born in Berks county, October 30, 1840, and died January 23, 1888. Ellen Bechtel, sister of Mrs. Latshaw, was born in Berks county, May 7, 1871, is now the wife of David Gelman and they reside in Wilmington, Delaware. Mr. and Mrs. Latshaw are the parents of two children—Verna, born in Chester county, January 10, 1897, and Irene, born in Chester county, February 20, 1898.

WILLIAM L. PAXSON. The Paxson family, worthily represented in the present generation by William L. Paxson, a prosperous and successful agriculturist of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is of English descent, and traces its ancestry back to three brothers—James, Henry and William Paxson—who came to this country in the ship "Samuel," in 1682. They all located in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, William in the vicinity of Langhorne; James near Solebury; and Henry near Newtown. They were all adherents of the Quaker faith. James and Jane Paxson, with their son William and daughter Sarah, left Bycott, Buckinghamshire, England, in the spring of 1682, and came to America, in the good ship "Samuel," landing at Philadelphia, July 22, 1682, and settled shortly after in Solebury, Bucks county, Pennsylvania. William, the son, was born in England in 1675, and in 1696 married Abigail Pounall, and had a family of seven children. Their son Thomas, born in 1705, married Jane Canby, and they had a family of nine children.

Joseph Paxson (great-grandfather), born in 1733, was the fourth lineal descendant of James Paxson, the immigrant ancestor, and about the close of the Revolutionary war he settled in Sadsbury township, Chester county. He married, in 1758, Mary Heston, and they had fifteen children, thirteen of them coming with their parents to Sadsbury, Chester county. His estate consisted of seven hundred acres of choice land.

S H Latham

whereon he, his wife, and thirteen children resided. The old residence is still occupied by one of his descendants. The eldest of the children, Joseph Paxson (grandfather), born in 1759, was a Whig in politics, and was serving as one of the directors of the poor when the present farm near West Chester was purchased by the county. He kept a general store for a number of years, which was afterwards conducted by his two sons. Joseph Paxson married, in 1788, Phebe Cooper (daughter of George and Susannah Cooper, of Lancaster county), and they were the parents of five children; his death occurred in 1827, aged sixty-eight years. He was one of the prominent business men of the community where he resided.

Timothy Paxson (father) was born in Sadsbury township, Chester county, December 20, 1800, and the greater part of his life was spent in that neighborhood. The building now occupied by his son, William L. Paxson, as a dwelling, was erected by him as a residence and country store, and he also was the incumbent of the office of postmaster for many years, it being known as the Black Horse postoffice. In addition to these duties he owned and operated a farm, which was a source of income. In politics he was an old line Whig, and in religion a member of the Hicksite branch of the Society of Friends. Mr. Paxson married, in 1834, Martha Lippincott, a daughter of William and Ann Lippincott, members of old and respected families of Westfield, Burlington county, New Jersey. They had a family of five children: Phebe Ann, born 3 mo., 29, 1835, married Isaac P. Jackson in 1867; William L. Paxson; Mary Jane Paxson, born 4 mo., 5, 1838, died 6 mo., 11, 1863; Elizabeth Paxson, born 8 mo., 8, 1842, married Levi Moore in 1868; Joseph C. Paxson, born 2 mo., 14, 1844, married Mary A. Kling in 1875, and they have a family of five children. Mr. Paxson died March 28, 1863, and was survived by his widow, who passed away in the summer of 1884, aged eighty-two years.

William L. Paxson, eldest son of Timothy and Martha (Lippincott) Paxson, was born in West Sadsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 18, 1836. His educational advantages, which were obtained in the common schools and academies of his native county, thoroughly qualified him for a life of usefulness and activity. His first practical experience was gained by following the vocation of teaching in Chester county, and later he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, being very successful in stock raising and dairying. His property, which consists of one hundred and thirty-seven acres of part farming land and part woodland, includes the family homestead, and is situated on the Philadelphia and Lancaster pike—built in 1792 —and on the ridge which divides the waters of the Susquehanna and the Delaware rivers. He has been somewhat of a dealer in real estate, having owned several properties and erected new buildings on them, besides settling up several estates, and acting as guardian for a number of orphans. Although his time has been so thoroughly occupied with his business pursuits, Mr. Paxson has not been unmindful of his duties as a citizen, having served his township in several offices of trust and responsibility, including that of school director for thirty consecutive years. In religious matters he follows the teachings of his early life, and is actively associated with the Hicksite branch of the Society of Friends. He is a thoroughgoing and public-spirited citizen, and has been active in advancing the welfare and growth of his community.

Mr. Paxson was united in marriage, January 19, 1869, to Rebecca Kling, daughter of David and Mary Kling, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Paxson died in 1874, aged twenty-five years. On February 21, 1878, Mr. Paxson married for his second wife Hannah Wilson, born November 13, 1840, a daughter of Joshua and Hannah Wilson, of East Fallowfield township, Chester county, and a descendant of a family who came to America about three months later than the Paxson family. Three children were the issue of this union, two of whom survive—Benjamin, born in 1879, and Marenha Paxson, born in 1884, both of whom are single and reside with their parents on the homestead. Joseph, born in 1881, died in 1885.

JOSEPH C. PAXSON was born in West Sadsbury township, Chester county, February 14, 1844, and was educated in the common schools, after which he attended Chestnut Hill academy in Lancaster county and Fountain Hill in Chester county. Since then he has devoted his energies to farm work. He wedded Mary A. Kling, in February 1875, and to them have been born the following children: Clayton K., who married Lucy McPherson; David T., William H., Harry A., and Mary R., all of whom are unmarried and are at home.

Mr. Paxson is a Republican in his political views, and held the office of supervisor for some years, as well as other local offices. He belongs to the Grange, and his religious faith is indicated by his connection with the Society of Friends. He has two valuable farms with good buildings, his holdings comprising one hundred and seventy acres of rich land. He has twenty-five head of cattle in connection with twenty head of dairy cattle, and his dairy work forms an important department of his farming interests. Everything about his places is neat and thrifty in appearance, indicating his careful supervision, and he is regarded as a leading and influential resident of his community. He has traveled in a number of adjoining states, and is conversant with the affairs of his country.

T. CHALKLEY PALMER. Prominent among the leading and influential citizens of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred October 23, 1860, is T. Chalkley Palmer, a son of Lewis and Mary (Wildman) Palmer, who possesses in a marked degree the characteristics that insure success in life—executive ability, exceptional business qualifications, unassailable integrity and steadfastness of purpose.

Lewis Palmer (father) was a native of Beattie's Mills, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a descendant of the well known and distinguished Sharpless family, the line of descent being traced through Sarah Sharpless, who was a daughter of Ruth Sharpless. Mr. Palmer was a flour and saw mill owner, conducting extensive operations in a mill located on Ridley creek on the present site of the Media Water Works, and subsequently he turned his attention to the ice business, achieving a large degree of success through his skillful management of this new enterprise. His character and daily life were such as to inspire the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens, and he was chosen to serve as a member of the Media Borough Council. His church connection was with the Society of Friends, and his political affiliations were with the Republican party, of which he was a strong and earnest advocate for many years. He was a noted botanist and mineralogist, and had in his possession one of the finest collection of plants and minerals in Delaware county. For many years he held membership in the Delaware County Institute of Science. Lewis Palmer and his wife, Mary (Wildman) Palmer, were the parents of the following named children—T. Chalkley, mentioned hereinafter; Annie, wife of George Thorp, of Chester, Pennsylvania; John W., a prominent electrician of Media, Pennsylvania; Beulah, wife of Edward Stinson, of Media, Pennsylvania; Sarah, wife of William Evans, of Springfield, Pennsylvania; Charles W., a teacher in the Westtown Boarding School; and Edith L., unmarried. Lewis Palmer, the father of these children, died in 1888; he was survived by his wife, who is now residing in the vicinity of Chester, Pennsylvania.

T. Chalkley Palmer obtained his educational advantages in the Westtown Friends' Boarding School and Haverford College, graduating from the latter named institution in the class of 1882. He became an employee of the Sharpless Dye Works at Chester, Pennsylvania, and in the meantime pursued a special course of study in chemistry at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and at the private laboratory of Professor Henry Trimble, of Philadelphia. At the conclusion of his studies he was appointed to the position of chemist at the Dye Works, and since then has been connected with the enterprise in many capacities, being now a stockholder and one of the directors. It is one of the most extensive and profitable enterprises in that section of the state, and conducts business under the name of the Sharpless Dye Wood Extract Company of Chester, Pennsylvania. Mr. Palmer is a member of the Delaware County Society of Science, and succeeded the late John M. Broomall as its president; is a member of the Academy of Natural Science of Philadelphia, the Franklin Institute, the Society of Chemical Industries of London, the Society of Dyers of London, and the Chemical Society of Paris. He is recognized authority on dyes and chemicals, and has written many papers upon these and kindred subjects, for the Textile College of Philadelphia, and for the principal trade journal, "The Journal of the Society of Dyes and Colors," of London, and "The Franklin Institute Journal of Philadelphia," and in the line of natural sciences for "The Journal of the Academy of Natural Science" of Philadelphia. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Palmer was united in marriage, October 21, 1886, to H. Jane Walters, of Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, a daughter of the late William and Edith (Webb) Walters. Their children are—Walter, born March 30, 1888, and Lewis, born July 28, 1889.

JOHN GARDINER. One of the honored old families of the Keystone state is that which now finds a worthy representative in Chester county in the person of John Gardiner. Whatever has been conducive to the peace and permanent welfare of this, their native land, they have earnestly supported, and for the most part they have lived quiet lives. The Gardiner family trace their ancestry back to the year 1685 when Captain Henry Gardiner came to this country and cast in his lot with the early settlers of Pennsylvania. He had a son named John Gardiner, and among the latter's children was a son to whom was also given the name of John. John Gardiner, Jr., married Mary Taping, and they became the parents of the following children: John, the subject of this review; Elizabeth, who became the wife of E. R. Miller; Henry, who is still unmarried; Margaret, the wife of William Schuke; Anna, who married Dr. S. Walder; Frank, who was murdered; and Alexander, also deceased.

John Gardiner, of this review, is a man of excellent business and executive ability, of keen discrimination, sound judgment and capable management. His efforts therefore have not been limited to one line of business, but he has been connected with many enterprises that have promoted the commercial activity of the city and county. He is the owner of a large and valuable farm in Caln township, Chester county, on which he has a beautiful and attractive home. He is also president of the Continental Brewing Company, of Philadelphia, and for several years has been an active factor in the brewing business. Another important industry with which he is connected is that of banking, and in all these varied relations he has won a high degree of success. His reputation in trade transactions, has ever been above question, and to an unusual degree he enjoys the confidence and regard of those with whom he has been brought in contact through business dealings.

As a companion on the journey of life Mr. Gardiner chose Miss Anna E. Snyder, and the following children have blessed their union: John, who has passed away; Mary A., the wife of Charles Taping; John, the second of the name, and who married Caroline Schmidt; George, deceased; Frank H., who married Mary B. Mergarjee; and Anna B., the widow of Byron Bromley. The family is one of culture and refinement, and the hospitality of their home is enjoyed by many friends.

Since the writing of this sketch, Mr. Gardiner passed away, July 5, 1903.

ADAM WORRALL was a resident and a property owner in what is now Media. His death occurred September 2, 1827. He was the father of four children—Isaac, Adam, Abraham and Ester.

Isaac, eldest son of Adam, was born December 28, 1792. He was a resident and property owner of Upper Providence township, and included the tract now partly in Media, being west of Manchester avenue and south of Washington street, running south to what is now known as the Idlewild road.

He was married, March 12, 1818, to Ann Shauer, who died May 2, 1846.

Isaac, the subject of this sketch, was the sixth child, and was born November 29, 1827. He was a good substantial citizen, and took an active part in all public affairs. His death occurred April 4, 1893.

JAMES B. GILFILLAN. The family of this name has been connected with Chester county for several generations, and creditably identified with its business interests in West Fallowfield township. The old tannery on the Lancaster and Newport pike was long in the possession of the family, and this industry has constituted the principal occupation of father and sons for a quarter of a century or more.

James B. Gilfillan, with whom this sketch is principally concerned, was born in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1850, and as he grew up received an unusually thorough education. After going through the public schools he entered the State Normal School at Millersville, and on leaving there took a scientific course at Lafayette College, Easton. This was followed by a term at Pierce's Business College, in Philadelphia, where he prepared himself thoroughly in the practical methods taught by that institution, which proved of great value to him in after life. When twenty-two years old he engaged in the tanning business with his father, John Gilfillan, who was conducting the old tannery on the Lancaster pike, in a building which is still standing. At the present time Mr. Gilfillan is still engaged in the tanning business, in partnership with a brother. He has always taken an active interest in township affairs, and borne his full share of public responsibilities. His politics may be described as staunchly Democratic, and he is ever found at the front, assisting his party to uphold its principles when campaigns, either local or general, are being waged. He has held the offices of school director and assessor of his township, and so discharged the duties as to give satisfaction to the people.

In 1872 Mr. Gilfillan was married to Clara J., daughter of Jefferson and Sarah McKinn, of Parkesburg, and by this union there were four children. Lillian M., the eldest, married William P. Dunlap, and has three children; Anna Belle is the wife of Joseph W. Paxton; Walter J. is single and remains at home; and James W., died young. Mr. Gilfillan is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He and his wife are members of the Fagg's Manor Presbyterian church. He lives with his family in a pleasant home on a farm of twenty-one acres in West Fallowfield township, and enjoys general esteem as a good neighbor and exemplary citizen.

J. HAVARD DOWNING, postmaster of East Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of Thomas Downing, who was born in Bradninch, in Devonshire, England, December 14, 1691. He was married three times; the name of his first wife is said to have been Ellen, and his second wife, Thomazine, who was perhaps the mother of all his children, two of whom were born in England; and his third wife was Jane Albin, widow of James Albin, and daughter of John and Mary Edge, whom he married 12 mo., 15, 1756. She was a minister, and died 1 mo., 23, 1759; she was survived by her husband, whose death occurred 1 mo., 15, 1772. In 1733 Thomas Downing removed to Sadsbury township, but two years later settled on a five hundred and sixty-one acre tract of land in East Caln township, at the place since known as Downingtown, having been named in honor of the family.

Joseph Downing, the eleventh child born to Thomas and Thomazine Downing, was a native of Sadsbury, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, the date of his birth having been 4 mo., 30, 1734. He married, 10 mo., 9, 1755, at Bradford Meeting, Mary Trimble, born 8 mo., 8, 1736, daughter of James and Mary (Palmer) Trimble, of West Bradford township. After their marriage they settled in the valley, east of Downingtown. Their children were: Thomas, Jane, Mary, Thomazine, Joseph, James, Sarah, Richard and Ann Downing.

Joseph Downing, second son of Joseph and Mary (Trimble) Downing, was born 4 mo., 9, 1769, on the old Downing homestead in East Caln township, upon which the old house which was built in 1726 is still standing, and which has been occupied by descendants of the family ever since, it now being the property of J. Havard Downing and occupied by his son. Joseph Downing married, 4 mo., 25, 1799, Elizabeth Webster, born 4 mo., 15, 1777, daughter of Richard and Phebe (Smith) Webster, of Harford county, Maryland. Their children were: Wesley R., Mary S., wife of Dr. Jacob Sharples, Phebe, Richard I., Sarah W. and Thomazine J. Downing. The father of these children died 12 mo., 28, 1841, and the mother passed away 4 mo., 1, 1840.

Richard I. Downing, second son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Webster) Downing, was born on the old homestead on January 24, 1810. He resided there until he was fifty-three years of age, when he removed to a small farm in West Whiteland township, whereon he conducted agricultural pursuits for the remainder of his life. He married Susan H. Miller, who bore him the following named children: Joseph, who died at the age of fourteen years; Sallie, who became the wife of John J. Pinkerton, of West Chester, Pennsylvania; Elizabeth, whose death occurred in the twentieth year of her age; Henry, deceased; J. Havard, mentioned hereinafter; and Richard, deceased; the deaths of Henry, Joseph and Richard occurred in three weeks time. Mr. Downing was a Republican in politics, active in township affairs, but repeatedly refused to allow his name to be used as a candidate for office. He contributed liberally toward all worthy enterprises, and although not a member of any religious organization he attended the Friends' Meeting, which was the faith of his forefathers. He died in 1890, his wife having passed away on July 4, 1883.

J. Havard Downing, third son of Richard I. and Susan H. (Miller) Downing, was born in East Caln township, March 7, 1845. He was reared on the old homestead, and attended the public and private schools of Downingtown, the Willistown Seminary, completing his education by a three years' course in the seminary at Easthampton, Massachusetts. He followed farming as an occupation until 1890, and eight years later was appointed postmaster of East Downingtown, under the administration of the late President McKinley. His duties were performed in such an efficient and satisfactory manner as to win the approval of his fellow townsmen, and he has been retained as the incumbent of the office under President Roosevelt. He has also held other local offices. Politically he is an adherent of the Republican party, and fraternally he is connected with Williamson Lodge, No. 309, F. and A. M., of Downingtown; St. Alban Commandery, K. T., of Philadelphia; the Grange; and the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Downing married Elizabeth Potts Rutter, of Sweedeland, and four children were the issue of this marriage: Richard I., who died at the age of ten years; Lewis, who resides on the farm; Joseph H., who died in his fifteenth year; and Nellie P., unmarried. The mother of these children died January 23, 1904.

ALEXANDER CROWL, one of the most substantial citizens of East Nottingham township, Chester county, bears the name of his paternal grandfather, who was born on the homestead which has been the birthplace of generations succeeding him.

Alexander Crowl, the grandsire, received his education in the poorly supported and short term "pay schools" of his day, and he gave his life to farming on the place where he was born and where he died. He was an exemplary man, and a Democrat of the old school. By his first marriage to Miss Hood, he became the parent of the following children: Sarah, born July 16, 1794; Finley, born July 19, 1795; Isabella, born April 11, 1797; Alexander, Jr., born May 31, 1799. He married (second) Elizabeth McCormick, who bore him children named as follows: James Latta, born June 8, 1807; Margaret Ann, born November 28, 1809; Levi, born June 3, 1810; Jesse, born June 12, 1813; William Henry, born August 17, 1814.

Finley Crowl, second child and first son of Alexander Crowl by his first marriage, was born in East Nottingham township, Chester county,

Alexander Brown

July 19, 1795. He received such meagre education as was afforded by the neighborhood school, and early in life entered upon an industrious career. From his sixteenth year until he was thirty-two he drove a six-horse freight wagon between Philadelphia and Pittsburg. He then located on a farm near Hickory Hill, in East Nottingham township, Chester county, where he resided for about forty years, and later moved to Elk township, where he died at the age of eighty-four years. He was a Democrat in his political affiliations. He was married to Eliza Greer, a native of the same township with himself, born in 1806, and died in 1850. Their children were: Alexander, born February 10, 1829; Margaret Ellen, born in 1831, who married Enoch Bye, and who resides at Hickory Hill; Patterson, born in 1833; Elizabeth, who married Ralph Grier; John A., deceased; Amos Taylor, who resides in North Dakota; William F., who resides in Wilmington, Delaware; Anna S., who married Townsend Pugh; Jane, who died at the age of four years.

Alexander Crowl, eldest child of Finley and Eliza (Grier) Crowl, was born on the family homestead, February 10, 1829. He received his education in the public schools, and assisted his father on the farm until he was eighteen years old. He then learned the trade of a harness maker, at Texas, in Lancaster county. He subsequently located at Hickory Hill, in Elk township, Chester county, where he opened a shop on his own account, purchasing his tools and material with one hundred dollars borrowed on his note of hand, with his father as his endorser. An entirely capable mechanic, he was also industrious and economical, and he soon built up a remunerative business. After fifteen years, he sold out his shop and purchased a farm near Hickory Hill, upon which he lived for seventeen years, when (in 1881) he exchanged it for that upon which he now resides, and which is one of the handsomest and most highly cultivated in all that neighborhood. One of the foremost agriculturists in the township, Mr. Crowl is recognized as a leader in all that tends to moral and material improvement in the community, but he is averse to being made conspicuous in public affairs, and has never courted office, but served one term most acceptably in the position of supervisor. He is a Democrat in politics, and he was for many years a member of the Lodge of Odd Fellows in New London.

Mr. Crowl was married, December 28, 1854, to Miss Louisa E. Bye, a daughter of Howard and Sarah Bye, born December 2, 1838, in Elk township. The children born of this marriage were: Mary Emma, born June 28, 1857, died December 17, 1869; Guy Walter, born August 12, 1863; he resides with his father, and deals extensively in stock and provisions; Sarah Elizabeth, born March 31, 1867, who became the wife of Frank Kirk; William Norval, born February 2, 1869, who resides at home; Mabel Clare, born January 28, 1877, who also resides with her parents.

RICHARD WHITE WILLIAMS, a late resident of Westtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was one of the best known farmers of that locality and one of the most highly regarded citizens. He was a descendant of one of the early families of Friends, and was connected with some of the oldest families in Pennsylvania. Personally he exemplified the best traditions of the sect to which he belonged, combining with a hatred of pretense the charity that suffereth long and is kind.

He was a son of Abraham and Rachel (White) Williams, who were married March 14, 1804, and became the parents of five children, as follows: 1. Lewis W., born December 20, 1804, died September 19, 1873; 2. Hannah W., born August 11, 1807, died April 5, 1896, who was the wife of John T. Haines; 3. Richard W., of whom a more detailed notice follows; 4. Enoch T., born June 8, 1814, died September 7, 1870, who married Eliza Seal; 5. Ann T., born April 11, 1818. Abraham Williams, the father of this family, was born December 26, 1783, and died September 3, 1861, his wife, who was born August 12, 1781, dying September 13, 1850.

Richard White Williams, third child and second son of Abraham and Rachel (White) Williams, was born July 31, 1809, and trained to the machinist's trade in the Baldwin Works, in Philadelphia. He worked as a mechanic for some years, and then bought the farm in Westtown township, Chester county, that is now occupied by his son. The greater part of his active life was spent as a farmer, and he brought both industry and intelligence to his vocation. He was a citizen of worth and repute, and he gave his political support to the Republican party. He was a member of the Hicksite Friends' Meeting. He died February 1, 1890.

Richard W. Williams married Martha Good, who was born October 5, 1818, near Westgrove, Penn township, on the homestead that has been in possession of her family since it was purchased by Thomas Good from William Penn. Another Thomas Good, who came later in the line, was the grandfather of Martha Good Williams. Thomas Good and his wife Esther were the parents of Joseph, who married Martha Mitchner, daughter of Joseph Mitchener, and his first wife Annie Dunn. Joseph Mitchener married as his second wife, Rebecca Good, a sister of Joseph Good. Joseph and Martha (Mitchner) Good were the parents of Martha Good, who became the wife of Richard White Williams. Joseph

Good died August 11, 1856, and his wife died December 1, 1869.

Richard White Williams and Martha Good were married February 17, 1842, and became the parents of six children, as follows: 1. Rachel White, born November 11, 1842, who married T. Ellwood Brinton (deceased), and had the following children—Florence E., born September 10, 1863, Martha G., who died in infancy, Emily born September 18, 1867, Lillian, born June 21, 1869, Essie P., born October 17, 1871, Marion, born August 20, 1873, Chester, born August 26, 1875, May Z., born May 20, 1877, Ruth Anna, born April 26, 1879, Adariama, born in 1880, and Howard, born October 2, 1882; 2. Joseph Good, born October 9, 1844, who is spoken of at more length; 3. Edwin Jeffries, born November 11, 1846, and died at the age of six years; 4. Richard Townsend, born September 9, 1851, died January 26, 1872; 5. Abram Good, born July 7, 1855, married Irene Hall, March 4, 1880; 6. Annie Good, born January 28, 1858, married October 2, 1900, James Henry Clouser, a son of Aaron L. and Annie (Acker) Clouser, who was born August 19, 1848. Mrs. Martha Good Williams, the mother of this family, has a pleasant home in West Chester, Pennsylvania, and has the satisfaction of seeing the farm, to which she and her husband gave the best effort of their early years, cultivated and cared for by her son. She is a woman of strong and sympathetic personality, much esteemed in her community.

Joseph Good Williams, second child and first son of Richard White and Martha (Good) Williams, was born October 9, 1844, in Parkesburg, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he lived until 1856, when his father bought the farm in Westtown which has since been his home. His early education was obtained at the district schools, and later he attended Prof. Allen's Normal School at West Chester, and the Unionville Academy. He taught school for a year before he began farming. The homestead came into his care, and he has given his best thought to its management. He operates it for general farming and dairying, and keeps abreast of modern methods. During the Civil war he enlisted with the Pennsylvania militia when General Lee was threatening invasion of the north. He served in the cavalry under Captain Wayne McVeagh. Like most men of his record, he is an adherent of the Republican party. He has held most of the local offices, and is now school director, as he has been for twenty-two years. As supervisor he served the township to its advantage, and in every relation of life he has commanded respect and confidence. He is a member of Brandywine Grange, No. 60, Patrons of Husbandry, in which he was grange master for two years, and for several years secretary. He is a member also of the Hicksite Friends' Birmingham Monthly Meeting.

He married, March 6, 1879, Sarah Ann, daughter of Enoch T. and Eliza (Seal) Williams. She was born November 22, 1846. The children born to Joseph Good and Sarah Ann (Williams) Williams, are as follows: Harry S., born December 1, 1879, now a machinist and draughtsman of Philadelphia; Helen G., born September 15, 1881, a teacher in the public schools of Wilmington, Delaware; Mary E., born September 16, 1885.

WILLIAM B. EVANS, a worthy and representative citizen of the borough of Yeadon, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in the township of Upper Darby, on March 25, 1849, a son of John and Mary (Burn) Evans, the former named having been a son of William Evans, who was born October 20, 1776, a son of Jonathan Evans, who was probably a native of Delaware county, his father having been among the early settlers of that section of the state and served in the provincial assembly. Jonathan Evans died in 1817.

John Evans (father) was born August 5, 1821, a son of William and Lydia (Hoopes) Evans, the former named having been born October 20, 1776, and died October 17, 1826, and the latter born January 31, 1785, and died December 15, 1834. On March 9, 1848, John Evans married Mary Burn, who was born in Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, May 16, 1823, a daughter of William and Amy (Bonsall) Burn. William Burn was a son of William and Rachel (Worrell) Burn, and was a stone mason and builder by occupation; he was well known throughout Delaware county for his probity of character. William Burn (grandfather) was a son of William and Jane (Penrose) Burn, the latter named William having been the first of this family of whom there is any authentic record. Jane (Penrose) Burn was a daughter of Christopher Penrose, who was a son of Robert and Jane Penrose, who were the progenitors of this family in Delaware county. Robert Penrose, son of Robert and Jane Penrose, was born in Yorkshire, England, from whence he removed to Ireland and in 1669, married Ann Russell, who bore him three children, among whom was a son Robert, born in 1670, married Mary Clayton in 1695, and the issue of that marriage was thirteen children. With a portion of this family of children Robert Penrose came to the province of Pennsylvania in the year 1717. The following named children were born to John and Mary (Burn) Evans:

1. William B., mentioned hereinafter; 2. Sarah Jane, born August 29, 1852, became the wife of Alfred Steward, and her death occurred October 31, 1880; 3. Rebecca T., born October 24, 1854, died unmarried on April 12, 1880; 4. Amos G., born September 24, 1856, married Margaret Steigelman on September 20, 1882, and his children are: Howard S., born July 27, 1883; Anna M., born July 2, 1885; Mae A., born May 12, 1887; and Cyrus E., born May 31, 1894; 5. Mary E., born August 22, 1866, died March 25, 1870. John Evans, the father of these children, died January 7, 1867, and his wife, Mary (Burn) Evans, died December 29, 1884.

William B. Evans, eldest son of John and Mary (Burn) Evans, was born March 25, 1849. He was educated in the schools of the neighborhood and the Millersville State Normal School in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He remained an inmate of his father's home until 1878, when he engaged in mercantile business at Fernwood, Upper Darby township, in partnership with his brother Amos G. Evans. In this undertaking the two brothers met with a well merited degree of success. In 1883 Amos G. Evans withdrew his interest from the business, and William B. Evans continued the management alone up to the year 1891. He then purchased a plot of land in what is now the borough of Yeadon, whereon he erected a commodious store and dwelling which he has occupied since January, 1892, and up to the present time (1904) has conducted a successful trade. In 1893 he was elected to the office of justice of the peace, and since then has discharged the duties of the position with the utmost faithfulness and efficiency. He is a loyal and public-spirited citizen, and in business and social circles has won the reputation of being trustworthy and reliable. His political affiliations are with the Republican party.

January 12, 1881, Mr. Evans married Florence Worley, who was born June 19, 1858, a daughter of Lewis D. and Hannah Worley. Their children are: Herbert Bartleson, born July 11, 1882; and William Raymond, born December 3, 1887. In 1896 Mrs. Evans was appointed postmistress of Yeadon, with the office in the store conducted by her husband, and by her prompt and faithful discharge of the duties has retained the incumbency of the position to the present time (1904).

EDWARD BROADBELT, an esteemed resident of Leopard, Easttown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of two immigrants, Edward Broadbelt, and Sarah, his wife, who sailed from Yorkshire, England, in 1830, landing in Philadelphia. They soon removed to Newtown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Edward Broadbelt was an old-fashioned English farmer, and he labored on the farm of Mr. Bain, and for other land owners. They reared a family of four sons and three daughters.

James, son of Edward and Sarah Broadbelt, was brought up to the calling of his father, and the two long labored side by side on farms in Delaware county. He married Ann Brannen and they were the parents of six children, James, Edward, Mary, William, Margaret and John.

Edward Broadbelt, son of the parents last named, was born in Easttown. He was reared at the home of Honorable William Evans, of Willis-town township, Chester county, receiving a common school education, and being brought up to farming. He has successfully followed that pursuit to the present time, and since 1886 he has resided at the pleasant cottage home which he now occupies. He is a man who has dignified his vocation by industrious and conscientious effort, has reaped a goodly reward, and has reared his family in that manner which becomes the self-respecting and exemplary citizen. His standing in the community is unimpeachable, and he is held in respect and confidence for his excellent traits of character and exemplary conduct.

Mr. Broadbelt was married, April 4, 1876, to Miss Etta Garner Colehower, daughter of Henry Garner and Eliza (Jones) Colehower, and she was born March 18, 1857, on the William Wayne farm in Easttown township. The children born of this marriage are as follows: Henry Oscar, born November 9, 1878; Mabel Ethel, born September 19, 1883; Lewis Adams, born September 4, 1885; Lydia Ray, born September 28, 1887.

THOMAS R. BOWERS, a leading business man and millowner of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in England, in 1846, and was the son of James and Sarah Bowers. He was educated in his native country, and in 1869 came to the United States. Settling in Philadelphia, he established the mill that bears his name, and three years later moved the business to Chester, where he conducted it for the remainder of his life in the most successful manner, displaying executive ability of a high order. Mr. Bowers was a member of the Masonic order, and other fraternal and social organizations. He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Bowers married in 1869, Hannah Dyson, daughter of Joseph Dyson, of Yorkshire, England, and was the father of five children; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Walter Marvel, of Chester; George D., James, Bessie D., and Thomas B., Jr. Mr. Bowers died in 1896, at the comparatively early age of fifty, leaving to mourn his loss, not only his family and large circle of friends, but all to whom he had been known as an honorable and enterprising business man, and an earnest and public-spirited citizen.

JAMES ALEXANDER CROWL, one of the leading citizens of East Nottingham township, Chester county, is a grandson of Alexander Crowl (who is written of more fully upon other pages of this work), and son of James Latta Crowl.

James Latta, first child of Alexander Crowl by his second marriage, that with Elizabeth McCormick, was born in East Nottingham township, June 8, 1807. He followed farming throughout his life, and with abundant success. With education restricted to such as he could obtain in the ordinary district school, his native ability, industry as a reader and habits of close observation enabled him to acquire an excellent knowledge of men and affairs, and to bring excellent judgment and capability to the duties entrusted to him as the incumbent of various important positions to which he was called by the suffrages of the people. He was supervisor, tax collector, and he was also elected to other township offices at different times. He was an exemplary Christian, a member of the United Presbyterian church at Oxford, Pennsylvania, and a member of its board of trustees. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party until the eve of the outbreak of the slaveholders' rebellion, when, in 1860, he supported Lincoln for the presidency, and was thereafter an earnest Republican. He married, in 1837, Rachel Gibson, who was born in New London township, daughter of James and Dorcas (Blackburn) Gibson, whose families were of Scotch Presbyterian ancestry. James Latta Crowl died in 1870, and his widow survived him until 1880. Their children were: Elizabeth, deceased; Dorcas Ann, died 1900; Helen Jane, died 1877; Catherine Amanda, who became the wife of John B. Gibson; James Alexander, to be further referred to; William Gibson; Matthew A., who resides in East Nottingham township; John Mackey, deceased; Rufus Calvin, who resides in Lower Oxford township.

James Alexander, fifth child and eldest son of James Latta and Rachel (Gibson) Crowl, was born on the paternal homestead farm, and where he now resides, September 13, 1844. He obtained an excellent practical English education, having taken an advanced course in the Oxford High School after he had left the public schools in his home neighborhood. His active years have been passed in the cultivation of his finely improved farm, and in the management of an excellent dairy business. He is regarded with the deepest respect and confidence by the community, and has been called to the office of township auditor. He is a member of the Oxford Methodist Episcopal church, and is a Republican in politics.

Mr. Crowl was married, February 7, 1877, to Miss Alpharetta Roney, who was born September 5, 1853, a daughter of Hamilton and Mary Roney. Their children were: Helen M., born March 27, 1878, who married, March 29, 1899, Fred T. Mackereth, and to them was born a child, Foreda; they reside at Elk View; Ann May, born March 26, 1880, and died July 11, following; Dorcas P., born April 27, 1881; Hamilton F., born October 10, 1883; Grace Latta, born February 17, 1892. The mother of these children died June 17, 1895. Mr. Crowl married (second) on October 24, 1900, Miss Ida E. Kimble, born September 4, 1857, a daughter of Richard and Jane Kimble.

GIBBONS, ABRAHAM AND WILLIAM H. In the death of Abraham Gibbons, which occurred on May 24, 1895, the town of Coatesville, Pennsylvania, lost one of its representative business men, who during an unusually long and active career was closely identified with the financial, manufacturing, political and social interests of the community. He was also a consistent and true Christian in every sense of the word, philanthropic and charitable to an extent known only to his most intimate friends, and broad and liberal in his views of men and things. He was born in Leacock township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, December 29, 1812, a representative in the sixth generation from John and Margery Gibbons, the founders of the American branch of the family.

John Gibbons, the pioneer ancestor, was one of the earliest settlers under the proprietary, and his name appears in Proud's "History of Pennsylvania" among the eminent persons of the Society of Friends who settled near Chester, Pennsylvania, in 1681. He was a resident of Warminster, in Wiltshire, England, where the names of his family appeared on the church records as early as the middle of the sixteenth century. He was the original purchaser of two tracts of land, one in Thornbury and one in Bethel, and he occupied the latter as soon as his improvements were completed, becoming one of the largest landowners of the county. He was impaneled on the jury that tried Margaret Mattson on an indictment for witchcraft, the trial taking place before William Penn and his council, at Philadelphia, in February, 1663-64. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gibbons lost their membership in the Society of Friends, owing to the position taken by the latter in the Keith controversy. She was a fearless and resolute woman, and in her public communication she maintained that the doctrines and discipline of the society were not sufficiently guarded against infidelity. They were the parents of two sons—John and James Gibbons.

James O. Crowl

James Gibbons, son of John and Margery Gibbons, married, in 1708, Ann Pearce, daughter of George Pearce, of Thornbury, an elder of the Society of Friends. They settled on the Westtown plantation which consisted of six hundred acres of rich and fertile land, which was conveyed to him by deed of gift on his marriage by his father, John Gibbons. During the years 1717, 1718 and 1719 he was one of the representatives of Chester county in the General Assembly. Three children were the issue of this marriage: Mary, James and Joseph Gibbons. James Gibbons (father) died in 1732, and his widow then married William Pim, of East Caln, and died in 1753.

Joseph Gibbons, son of James and Ann Gibbons, was born 8 mo., 24, 1712. He inherited four hundred acres adjoining the homestead at his father's death, and resided thereon for the remainder of his life, which terminated about the close of the Revolutionary war. He was a prominent factor in church and state, and a member of the Assembly from 1748 to 1763, a period of fifteen years. He married, 3 mo., 23, 1734, Hannah Marshall, born 9 mo., 7, 1715, and their children were: James, John, Joseph, Abraham, Mary, Ann, Jacob, Hannah and Rachel Gibbons.

Abraham Gibbons, son of Joseph and Hannah Gibbons, was born 7 mo., 15, 1741. After attaining young manhood he settled on a portion of the one-thousand-acre farm owned by his father in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. His first marriage was on 4 mo., 13, 1763, to Lydia Garrett, daughter of William and Lydia Garrett, of Willistown, and his second marriage was on 5 mo., 27, 1790, to Mary Canby, daughter of Oliver and Elizabeth Canby, of Wilmington.

William Gibbons, son of Abraham and Lydia Gibbons, was born in 1764. He was a resident of Leacock township, Lancaster county, and was actively identified with all enterprises that tended to promote the growth and prosperity of the community. His first wife was Jane (Massey) Gibbons, who bore him a daughter, Massey Gibbons, and his second wife was Hannah (Pusey) Gibbons, a much esteemed minister among Friends, who died in West Chester, Pennsylvania, 4 mo., 2, 1868.

Abraham Gibbons, son of William and Hannah Gibbons, was reared on his father's farm in Lancaster county, and attended the schools adjacent to his home. In 1841 he removed to Coatesville, and became associated with Mrs. Lukens, his mother-in-law, in the management of the Brandywine Iron Works. About five years later, Mrs. Lukens having retired from the business, he admitted into partnership his brother-in-law, the late Dr. Charles Huston, and they conducted a successful trade in the iron business until 1857, under the firm name of Gibbons & Huston. In the latter named year the Bank of Chester Valley was organized, Mr. Gibbons was appointed to the presidency, and conscientiously performed the duties of that onerous position for twenty-five consecutive years, after which he resigned his incumbency of office and was chosen as president of the Mutual Insurance Company of Chester County. This position he retained until failing health caused him to relinquish all active business pursuits in 1893. He was a member of the first council of Coatesville, and was largely instrumental in securing for that borough the adequate supply of water that it still enjoys. He held membership in the Society of Friends, and was active in supporting all measures advocated by that body.

Mr. Gibbons married Martha Pennock Lukens, the daughter of Dr. Charles and Rebecca W. Lukens. Their children are: 1. Elizabeth, who became the wife of Dr. Frank P. Housekeeper, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and they are the parents of one son, William G. Housekeeper; 2. Hannah, who became the wife of J. Preston Thomas, of Whitford, Chester county, and their children are: Martha G., George 3rd and Anna M. Thomas; 3. Rebecca, deceased, who was the wife of Charles N. Tatnall, of Wilmington, Delaware, and mother of two children—Charles G. and Abraham G. Tatnall; 4. William H., mentioned hereinafter; 5. Isabella, who became the wife of Charles T. Thomas, of Whitford, Chester county, and their family consists of the following named children: Marion G., John R., Rebecca L. and Jane G. Thomas; 6. Marion, who became the wife of W. H. Beeman, of London, England. Abraham Gibbons, father of these children, died on May 24, 1895, in the eighty-third year of his age, beloved and regretted by all who knew him.

William H. Gibbons, only son of Abraham and Martha P. Gibbons, was born at the old home of the family on First avenue, Coatesville, Pennsylvania, near his present residence, September 16, 1852. His preparatory course of study was pursued at the public and private schools of his native village, and his collegiate course at Haverford College extended from 1869 to 1872, his graduation occurring in the latter named year. For four years he clerked in the office of the Huston & Penrose Iron Mill, and during this period of time thoroughly acquired the details of the iron business. In 1876 he formed a partnership with the late Horace A. Beale at Parkesburg, Chester county, which continued till 1882, when the Parkersburg Iron Company was incorporated with Horace A. Beale as president, William H. Gibbons as vice-president, which offices were continued until the death of Mr. Beale in 1897, when Mr. Gibbons was chosen as his successor and president of the company. Mr. Gibbons served in that capacity until January 1, 1900, when he disposed of his interest in the plant, which made a specialty of the manufacture of locomotive boiler tube iron. Mr. Gibbons is one of the leading men of the county, and one of the most influential and public-spirited citizens of Coatesville. He is a strong Republican in national affairs, but rather inclined to be independent in local politics, preferring to vote for the candidates best qualified for office irrespective of party prejudice. He has been president of the school board of Coatesville for twelve years, and is vice-president of the National Bank of Chester Valley. Mr. Gibbons holds membership in the Society of Friends.

Mr. Gibbons was united in marriage, June 11, 1884, to Miss Harriet Lucretia Fuller, the adopted daughter of J. C. and Caroline M. (Williams) Fuller. Their children are: Caroline M., Elizabeth, Harriet, Ruth Anna and Martha Lukens Gibbons.

MARY A. WILLIAMS. Some women seem to inherit the best qualities of both sexes, and their lives are fraught with an activity that would put to shame many of their stronger brothers, and yet with it all, they preserve that feminine charm and grace which are the birthright of the gentler side of humanity. Miss Mary A. Williams is one of the most highly thought of residents of West Fallowfield township, her life has been spent in ceaseless activity, and in business, social and religious affairs she has proved herself worthy of being classed among the representative people of the county.

Her father, John Williams, was born in Lancaster county on September 8, 1802, and from the days when he was one of the barefooted youngsters who attended the district school until his useful life was closed in death he made Chester county his home. Although a staunch Democrat, he refused nominations to various offices of trust in the township, but he was imbued with an excellent public spirit and is remembered as having been very kind and helpful to those in need. In religion he was a Methodist. He married a Lancaster county lady, Miss Rebecca Ubil, who became the mother of the following named children: Mary A., mentioned hereinafter; Isaac, now deceased, who married Mary Hanna, and had two children; James, deceased, was the husband of Hannah Rambo, by whom he had three children; Sarah, deceased, was the wife of Isaac Townsend, and the mother of two children; Abner; Ruthanna, deceased; Margaret R., who married Alex Martin, and they were the parents of one child; John A., who married Margaret Rambo; Levi P., who married Minerva Robinson, and they had two children; William B., who married Susan McNeil, by whom he had four children; Caleb P., deceased; and Pierce, unmarried.

The eldest child of this large family is Mary Ann Williams. She was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, at the little village of Gum Tree in 1831. She obtained her education in the neighboring schools, and since then has been engaged in the various duties which always come to a long life. She has never married, and at the present time (1904) resides with her brother, Pierce Williams, on her beautiful farm in West Fallowfield township, which she still delights to oversee. She is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and is much interested in the work connected therewith.

JAMES HARVEY CROWL, of East Nottingham township, Chester county, is of an old and influential family. His father, David Alexander, son of James Crowl, was born in the township named, June 27, 1825. David A. Crowl was educated in the neighborhood schools, and on arriving at man's estate engaged in agricultural pursuits, which he followed with great success for more than a half century. He began on a farm in New London township, and afterwards settled upon that in East Nottingham township, upon which he resided during the greater part of his life, and which is now the home of his son, James H. Crowl. Politically he was a Democrat, but he was unambitious of distinction, and would never consent to become a candidate for the public office. He was an exemplary member of the Presbyterian church in New London, and his remains rest in the shadow of the house of worship which he was wont to frequent, his death occurring February 1, 1899, in his seventy-fourth year. His wife was Hannah McHenry, a daughter of John and Ellen McHenry; she was born in 1830, and she died December 11, 1898, less than two months before her husband. Two children were the issue of this marriage—Ella J., born December 10, 1861, who resides in Oxford, Pennsylvania, and James Harvey, born August 16, 1863.

James Harvey Crowl received his preparatory education in the public schools, and took an advanced course in the Oxford (Pennsylvania) Academy. From the time of his leaving school he has carried on farming and dairying on the farm whereon his father passed his declining days, and where he himself, in turn, has reared his family and continues to reside. He is progressive in all pertaining to his calling, and is recognized as one of the most capable and successful agriculturists in the neighborhood. Like his father, he has no taste for public life, and his only participation in political affairs is as a citizen, to express his opinion of measures and men, and to give effect to that opinion at the polls. Holding aloof from blind attachment to a political organization, he supports for office such candidates as commend themselves to him by cleanliness of character and ability rather than by their adherence to a party. He is an earnest advocate of prohibition, and has exerted his utmost influence to promote personal sobriety and to minimize the evils resulting from the liquor traffic.

Mr. Crowl was married, March 14, 1889, to Miss Anna Cloud, born July 22, 1866, a daughter of James and Esther J. Cloud. The children born of this marriage were: Esther, born January 26, 1892; Horace D., born October 9, 1893, died January 21, 1895; Earnest C., born January 23, 1896, and James Eves, born February 8, 1900.

OSCAR E. THOMSON, an influential and public-spirited resident of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in Phoenixville on November 14, 1862, a son of Milton W. and Emline W. (Wersler) Thomson. Milton W. Thomson was one of four children—Addison, Mary, Milton W. and Wilmer W.—born to Aaron and Harriet (Evans) Thomson, who were married in 1825. Aaron Thomson was one of two children—Joseph and Aaron—born to David and Phoebe (Thomas) Thomson, who were united in marriage in 1801, and thereafter resided in Willistown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Oscar E. Thomson acquired his education in the public school, and at an early age commenced work in the office of the Phoenix Bridge Company. After a period of two years he was offered and accepted a position in the engineer's office of the Phoenix Iron Co., and at the age of nineteen was appointed assistant master mechanic for the same company. When he attained the age of twenty-one years he severed his connection with this company to accept a position as an expert on construction offered him by the supervising architect of the United States treasury department, Washington, D. C., which position he continued to fill for a period of five years. He then became a partner with E. L. Dent, of the Dent Iron Works at Washington, but after a period of two years he dissolved his connection with this enterprise and returned to Phoenixville. The estimation in which he is held by his fellow townsmen is evidenced by the fact that he was elected in 1897 to the office of recorder of deeds of Chester county, which he creditably and efficiently filled for one term; is now (1903) serving as state engineer and superintendent of highway bridges and in 1903 was the candidate for state senatorial honors on the Republican ticket. He is an active worker in the interests of his party, and has been elected a delegate to various state and county conventions.

Mr. Thomson married Minnie M. Chrisman, June 1, 1886, a daughter of Robert F. and Hannah S. Chrisman, and they are the parents of one daughter, Fredericka M. Thomson, born July 4, 1888.

WILLIAM JAMES DAVIS, an enterprising farmer and respected citizen of Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a son of John K. Davis, a native of that county. His trade was that of a Mason, which he followed for many years. During the Civil war he served in the Union army. He married Amie, who was born in Chester county, daughter of William Shaanon, for many years deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Davis were the parents of seven sons.

William James Davis, son of John K. and Amie (Shannon) Davis, was born November 3, 1864, at White Horse, Chester county, and received his education in the public schools of the township. At an early age he selected farming for his occupation in life, and has since followed his chosen calling with a zeal and assiduity which have secured for him not merely satisfactory financial results, but also the reputation of a skillful, well-informed and practical agriculturist. He is now working a farm of one hundred and five acres which he devotes to the purposes of general farming, and which he cultivates according to the latest and most improved methods. Attached to this farm is a flourishing dairy of nineteen head of cows. Mr. Davis is a member of Mount Pickering Lodge, No. 446, Free and Accepted Masons. His neighbors have manifested their confidence in him by electing him to the minor offices of the township. Politically he is a Democrat. He and his family attend the German Reformed church.

Mr. Davis married Annie, daughter of John C. and Mary (McNalley) Reber. The former, who was born in Germany, emigrated to the United States when a young man, and the latter is a native of Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the parents of three children: Charlie, who was born April 15, 1890; Harry, who was born April 18, 1893; and Mary, who was born August 1, 1896. All these children are now receiving their education in the public schools of their native township.

ALBAN HARVEY, a successful agriculturist and an enterprising citizen in the township of Birmingham, and who has taken an active part in its growth and development, was born in Birmingham township, Chester county, October 9, 1845, the son of Evans and Hannah G. (Marsh) Harvey.

Evans Harvey was born in Birmingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 12 mo., 11, 1813. He acquired a good common school education, after which he began his life work in the capacity of a farmer. He followed this occupation throughout his entire business career, and by giving his personal supervision to the work he was enabled to realize a goodly profit from his labors. Mr. Harvey was united in marriage to Hannah G. Marsh, daughter of Dr. Rolph C. and Deborah (Hill) Marsh, of Concord township, and who was born 12 mo., 14, 1816. Their children are: 1. Elizabeth, who married Edwin R. Gilpin, and four children have been born to them; 2. Rolph M. Harvey, who married Anna P. Marshall, and their children are: Dr. Ellis M., Charles E., and Bertram Harvey; 3. Alban; 4. John M., who married Mary Hannum. Evans Harvey, father of this family, died 10 mo., 8, 1871, and his wife Hannah H. (Marsh) Harvey, died 6 mo., 26, 1889.

Alban Harvey, second son of Evans and Hannah Harvey, received his early education in the public schools and then the Westtown school, and this was supplemented by a thorough course at the Maplewood Institute at Concordville. He was early inured to the labors and duties of a farm, thus gaining a practical knowledge of the work to which he has devoted his energies up to the present time (1903). His farm consists of one hundred and seven acres of well cultivated ground, devoted to the production of a general line of farming; he makes a specialty of raising mushrooms and he has erected several fine greenhouses on his property for the cultivation of carnations. He has also a dairy of thirty fine head and his farm ranks among the most productive in this section of the county. Mr. Harvey was formerly engaged in farming in Chester county, but removed to his present farm in Birmingham township in 1873. Politically he is an advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and has served his township in the capacity of school director for the past twelve years.

On 5 mo., 21, 1868, Mr. Harvey married Mary P. Marshall, a native of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a daughter of Thomas and Emily (Paxson) Marshall. Three children were born of this union: 1. Evans, born 1 mo., 18, 1871, who married Elizabeth Auld, a daughter of Charles and Mary M. (Smith) Auld, and they are the parents of one child, Mary E. Harvey, born 8 mo., 21, 1894; 2. Emily Paxson, born 1 mo., 9, 1875, died 1 mo., 9, 1875; 3. Edmund A., born 11 mo., 21, 1880, a graduate of Swarthmore College; at present residing at home.

JAMES P. W. BUNTING, a prominent citizen of the borough of Hopewell, Chester county, who has served usefully and acceptably in various public offices, is a grandson of John Bunting, who was born and reared in Lower Oxford township, where he followed the calling of a farmer throughout his life.

John, Jr., son of John Bunting, was born on the paternal homestead. He was given an excellent practical education in the public schools, and on attaining manhood engaged in farming, an occupation in which he is yet successfully engaged. He married Sarah Dunwoody, a daughter of Joseph Dunwoody, a farmer of the same township with himself, and to them were born the following children: Washington, John, Jr., Mary J., Nancy, Hannah E., Robert, William, Joseph, Catherine, two who died in infancy, and James P. W. Bunting.

James P. W. Bunting, son of John, Jr., and Sarah (Drummond) Bunting, was born in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, in 1844. He was educated in the public schools, and became a farmer. He removed in 1874 to his present home in the borough of Hopewell, where to the present time he has been successfully engaged in the calling to which he was reared. A man of excellent business ability, known integrity and public spirit, he has been called to various important public positions in which he has acquitted himself with credit and to the advantage of his neighbors. He has been for several years a member of the board of school directors, and he is the present president of that body, as well as a member of the borough council and the borough treasurer. During the Civil war he enrolled himself among the Emergency forces called out for one hundred days to repel the invasion of the state by the rebel army under General Lee, and during that critical period performed the full duty of a soldier. In religion he is a Baptist, and in politics a Prohibitionist.

Mr. Bunting married, in 1871, Miss Abbie C. Davis, a daughter of James and Elizabeth Davis; her father is a farmer of Upper Oxford township. Of this marriage were born the following children: Sarah, born 1872; Chester L., born 1874; Walter E., born 1876; Martha T., born 1879; Anna R., born 1882; James D., born 1884; Phoebe, born 1886; Francis, born 1888, who died young.

WILLIAM G. STAMP, a prosperous farmer and respected citizen of East Fallowfield township, Chester county, is descended from a family of French origin, which, tradition says, was founded in America by two brothers who were forced for political reasons to fly from their native land. It was presumably in the latter part of the eighteenth century that they sought a home in Pennsylvania, and the cause which compelled them to leave the country of their birth might, in all probability, have been found in the unexampled agitations of the French Revolution. One of these brothers, who was named William, was the progenitor of the Stamps of Chester county. Of the other and of his descendants, nothing whatever is known.

William Stamp, the emigrant ancestor mentioned above, settled in Unionville, where he engaged in mercantile business, and also became the proprietor of a hotel which he successfully conducted in connection with his other occupation during the remainder of his life. He married Hannah McPadden, and their children were: John, who was a teacher; James, who was a millwright; Joseph, who was engaged in the milling business in Crawford county, Maryland, where he died; William, mentioned at length hereinafter; Mary, who married Nicholas Hopkins; and Sarah A., who became the wife of Kendall Kent. Mrs. Stamp, the mother of the family, died about 1850, her husband having passed away some years before. Both are interred in the Friends' burying ground in Unionville.

William Stamp, son of William and Hannah (McPadden) Stamp, was born in 1806, in Unionville, and for forty years followed the trade of a millwright. About 1858 he sold a small farm to "Thomas Seal, Jr." This estate he cultivated successfully for some years. He married Hannah, daughter of Edwin Swayne, and they were the parents of the following children: Edward, who resides in Montrose, Pennsylvania; James, who lives in Delaware; Elizabeth, who married Wesley Freeman, and is now deceased; Sarah A., who became the wife of Abram Long of Lancaster county; William G., mentioned at length hereinafter; Milton, who is a resident of Philadelphia, and married Clara Buffington; Hannah, who is the wife of William Timpler, of Callan township; and Thomas. Mr. Stamp, the father, ended his days in the home of his son William G., where the last years of his life were spent.

William G. Stamp, son of William and Hannah (Swayne) Stamp, was born July 21, 1842, in Unionville, and went as a youth to Wilmington, Delaware, where he learned the trade of a moulder of iron and brass. This trade he followed for some time, and later moved to Lancaster county, where he engaged in farming. Ultimately he returned to his native Chester county, where for twelve years he was engaged in different places in agricultural pursuits. At the end of that time he purchased of Dr. E. L. Palmer, of West Chester, the farm which is now his home. This estate, which consists of one hundred and fifty-five acres, and which testifies by its flourishing condition to the skill and assiduity of the owner, he devotes to the purposes of general farming, and in connection with his agricultural labors also conducts a thriving dairy business. Mr. Stamp possesses in a high degree the confidence of his neighbors, by whom he has been elected to a number of township offices. His political principles are those of the Republican party.

Mr. Stamp married Louisa J., daughter of James B. Pyle, and they are the parents of two children: Emily P. and Wesley J. Stamp.

HENRY C. DEWEES, a son of Thomas B. and Elizabeth Hause Dewees, and who follows farming near West Vincent, Pennsylvania, was born in West Vincent township, Chester county, September 23, 1854. He obtained his education in the common schools, and throughout his entire life has carried on farming on the old homestead. His political support has ever been given to the Republican party, and he has never faltered in his allegiance to its principles. Socially he is connected with the Masonic fraternity and he belongs to the Vincent Baptist church.

He was married, in West Pikeland township, Chester county, January 9, 1884, to Annie M. Young, a daughter of John H. and Margaret W. Young, and a granddaughter of William and Rebecca Wagenseller. Her parents were farming people. To Mr. and Mrs. Dewees have been born four children: Margaret Y., born October 4, 1888; J. Hause, born September 19, 1890; Ida Elizabeth, born November 17, 1896; and Harry Herbert, born March 18, 1902.

THOMAS J. PHILIPS. Among the families of Chester county, Pennsylvania, who bear an honored and honorable reputation, none are more prominent than the Philips family, who are noted for their longevity, their deep religious tendencies, many of the members being ministers of the Gospel, and their strong intellectual capacity, it being a race of teachers from 1797 to the present time (1903), and many of its members have held high official positions in the United States government.

The pioneer ancestors of the family were Joseph, born in Wales, in 1716, and his wife Mary Philips, born in 1710, a native of the same country. In 1755 they settled near West Chester, Pennsylvania, where they pursued their trade of weaving, which proved very remunerative. They were strong adherents of the Baptist faith, being members of the Great Valley Baptist church, thirteen miles distant from their home, and later they held membership in the Vincent Baptist church, which was organized in 1771. Of their four children, David, John, Josiah and Joseph Philips, David, John and Josiah served in the Revolutionary war, the former named serving in the capacity of captain, and the two latter named as lieutenants. Lieutenant Josiah Philips was taken prisoner in New Jersey, and confined on a British prison ship at New York city. The father of these children died May 18, 1792, and his wife passed away December 26, 1792.

The line of descent is traced through Lieutenant John Philips, who resided near Downingtown, Pennsylvania, where his death occurred May 22, 1790, at the age of forty-five years, to his eldest son, George Philips, grandfather of Thomas J. Philips, who was born near Paoli, but in early life removed to a farm near Penningtonville, in West Fallowfield township, where he resided for the remainder of his life. He married and reared a family of children, among whom was a son, John M. Philips.

John M. Philips, father of Thomas J. Philips, was born May 8, 1812, and became a farmer by occupation, following that industry during all his active business career. He took a prominent part in local affairs, and for a number of years served as deacon in the Baptist church of the village. Mr. Philips was twice married. His second wife, Sarah (Jones) Philips, whom he married in 1844, was born in 1818, a daughter of Hon. Thomas and Elizabeth (Todd) Jones, the latter named having been a cousin of Mrs. Lincoln, wife of the martyred President Lincoln. Hon. Thomas Jones was a son of Enoch and Sarah (Davis) Jones, and a grandson of Samuel Jones, whose father, Griffith Jones, came from Wales about the year 1712. Hon. Thomas Jones served as an associate judge of Chester county, Pennsylvania, for several years, and received the appointment of inspector general of the militia of Pennsylvania in 1825, having the distinction conferred upon him of escorting Marquis Lafayette to the battle field of Brandywine. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Philips: Mary, wife of D. B. Miller, an attorney-at-law and who served as president of the National Bank of Lewisburg; Thomas J.; Dr. George Morris, the successful principal of the West Chester State Normal School; Charlotte E., wife of Preston E. Hannum, of Lancaster county; Caroline J., wife of Matthew H. Boyd, of Atglen; Sarah, deceased; and John T., who died in early manhood. John M. Philips, father of these children, died at his home in Sadsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 21, 1879, aged sixty-seven years.

Thomas J. Philips, eldest son of John M. and Sarah Philips, was born at Penningtonville, now Atglen, Sadsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 23, 1846. He attended the public schools of his neighborhood, and then entered the Lewisburg College, now called Bucknell, from which institution he was graduated in 1867, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The following two years were spent in agricultural pursuits on the home farm, after which he went west, where he was employed as a clerk in a store. He retained this position up to the year 1873, when he returned home and was appointed messenger in the House of Representatives. Later he became associated with Alexander Goodwin, and for a number of years they conducted a prosperous business at the Hibernia Iron Works in Chester county, but in 1877 Mr. Philips disposed of his interest in the enterprise and returned to the old farm, which he is successfully operating at the present time (1903). The farm consists of two hundred and forty acres of valuable land, with a dairy attached which is equipped with forty head of finely selected cows. This property was originally owned by his forefathers, who secured a Penn patent land grant of the entire tract.

Since attaining his majority, Mr. Philips has been a leader in the Republican party, and has served in all the township offices, including those of justice of the peace and school director. In 1894 he was elected to the state legislature as the choice of the farmers of the county, and served from 1895 to 1897. During this time he was most active in the interests of the farmers, warmly advocating the famous Oleomargerine Bill and introducing the Hamilton Road Bill. Mr. Philips is an able and fluent speaker, and each year is appointed by the state to address the Farmers Institutes in various counties, the previous year (1902) having charge of fourteen counties. He is also a writer of considerable note, contributing articles to several of the leading magazines and papers of the state. He was connected with several banking institutions, and organized and became the first president of the Atglen National Bank.

In 1880 Mr. Philips married Harriet C. Chalfant, a daughter of Cloud Chalfant, who is a miller by occupation. Their children are: Sarah J., who graduated from the West Chester State Normal School in 1900, and is now meeting with great success as a teacher in the school at Coatesville, Chester county, and Alice L., who is a student at the Swarthmore College. They have a beautiful and pleasant home in West Sadsbury township, Chester county, which is noted for its hospitality, and the family is one of prominence in social circles.

JOSEPH BEALE, a prominent and influential resident of Coatesville, Pennsylvania, and for a quarter of a century serving in the capacity of right of way agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad, is a lineal descendant of Thomas and Catherine Beale, natives of Calne, Wiltshire, England. The pioneer ancestor of the American branch of the family was William Beale, a son of Thomas and Catherine (Cope) Beale, who was born in the vicinity of Calne, England, August 14, 1709. Between the years 1728 and 1730 he emigrated to America and settled in the state of Pennsylvania, and for many years was successful in the cultivation and operation of an extensive tract of land located in what is now known as West Whiteland township. In addition to this property he was the owner of large tracts of land in the Tuscarora Valley, which he subsequently bequeathed to his sons. He married Mary Jenkins, born April 9, 1715, died August 25, 1771, a daughter of David Jenkins. Their children were:

1. Thomas, born August 6, 1737, died June 30, 1803, was one of the judges of Mifflin county and a prominent citizen of Tuscarora Valley;
2. William, born December 24, 1738, died subsequently to the year 1800;
3. John, born December 12, 1740, mentioned hereinafter;
4. Susanna, born December 16, 1742, married Noble Butler, Jr., about the year 1763, and her death occurred in Kentucky on February 2, 1832;
5. David, born June 20, 1745, was for many years associate judge in Mifflin county, and died at his home in Beale township, Juniata county, February 6, 1828;
6. Mary, born October 8, 1747, became the wife of Samuel Hunt, of East Caln, now Downingtown, May 21, 1772, and died September 24, 1820;
7. Joshua, born November 19, 1749, lost at sea in a voyage from the West Indies in 1787;
8. Edith, born June 13, 1752, became the wife of Phineas Whitaker, of East Caln, February 24, 1779, and died February 10, 1831. On March 23, 1774, William Beale, the father of these children, married for his second wife Rachel (Perkins) Lewis, widow of Phineas Lewis, of East Caln. Mr. Beale died November 27, 1800.

John Beale, great-grandfather of Joseph Beale, was born December 12, 1740, in West Whiteland township, Chester county. He enlisted in the Continental army, and, while serving under General Lafayette, died on January 25, 1777, near the head of Elk Valley, where his remains were interred. He was survived by his widow, Tamar (Burgoyne) Beale, a daughter of Joseph Burgoyne, of East Bradford. They were the parents of seven children, among them being Mary, who became the wife of Anthony Gray, of East Bradford, October 14, 1790; and Joseph Beale.

Joseph Beale, grandfather of Joseph Beale, was born in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, June 25, 1774, and upon the death of his father was reared by his grandfather, who resided in the vicinity of Downingtown. He was apprenticed to Benaniel Ogden, who conducted a cabinet-making trade near West Chester, and after thoroughly mastering this art he removed to Philadelphia, and became a member of the extensive furniture manufacturing firm of Beale & Jenison. During the closing years of the Revolutionary war he was stationed in the lower part of Pennsylvania, but his services were never called into action. He held membership in the First Presbyterian church of Philadelphia, and was a staunch advocate of the principles of Democracy. Mr. Beale, who died on his farm in Downingtown, on December 18, 1841, and his wife, Margaret (McDowell) Beale, daughter of Captain James McDowell, of Upper Oxford township, whose death occurred in 1834, aged fifty-three years, were the parents of the following named children: James McDowell, Joseph, Horace Binny, who died in early life; Horace Alexander, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Elizabeth, John Burgoyne and Harriet Beale.

James McDowell Beale, father of Joseph Beale, was born October 22, 1811. He married, December 18, 1838, Elizabeth Fairlamb, who bore him the following named children: Joseph, Dr. George Fairlamb, Robert West, Annetta Fairlamb, deceased, John Burgoyne, Emily Theresa and Horace Alexander, deceased. Mr. Beale, the father of these children died January 1, 1881.

Joseph Beale, son of James McDowell and Elizabeth (Fairlamb) Beale, was born November 10, 1839. His early life was spent in the neighborhood of his birthplace, and he obtained a thorough education in the Coatesville Academy. He then took up the study of law, and after passing a creditable examination was admitted to practice with Judge Joseph Hemphill, of Chester county. He, however, did not follow the general practice of his profession, but for a number of years devoted his time and attention to agricultural pursuits and the real estate business. Subsequently he became actively identified with the Pennsylvania Railroad, and is still the incumbent of the responsible position which was assigned to him twenty-five years ago, that of right of way agent. He is one of the best known and popular citizens of Chester county, an influential factor in all enterprises which have for their object the growth and development of the community in which he resides, a member of the Presbyterian church, and an able supporter of the candidates and measures advocated by the Democratic party. November 30, 1887, Mr. Beale was married to Emma Hatfield, daughter of Abram and Sarah M. (Patterson) Hatfield. They reside in a handsome and commodious home in one of the best residential localities of Coatesville, Pennsylvania. No children have been born of this union.

WILLIAM MODE ELLIOTT, one of the most highly esteemed citizens of East Fallowfield township, Chester county, traces his descent from John Elliott, a native of county Down, Ireland, who about the year 1730 settled on a tract of land consisting of four hundred acres, for which he received a patent from the sons of William Penn. It was situated in what is now East Fallowfield township, and is at the present time the property of Mr. Jesse Shellcross. It is supposed that John Elliott was married in Ireland, but the name of his wife has not been preserved. Their children were: Robert; Moses, mentioned hereinafter; Mary, who married Mr. Allison; and a son, who married Martha Ingram. John Elliott died about 1800, having entailed his property to the children of his sons and daughters.

Moses Elliott, son of John Elliott, was born in the United States, prior to the Revolutionary war, and followed the occupation of a farmer. He married Elizabeth Palmer, by whom he was the father of the following children: Robert; Benjamin; John; Daniel, mentioned hereinafter; William; Mary, who married Eli Baker; Ann, who became the wife of John Chalfant; and Martha, who married William Dowdell. The death of Mr. Elliott took place about 1810.

Daniel Elliott, son of Moses and Elizabeth (Palmer) Elliott, was born in 1799, on the old homestead. He learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed all his life. He married Catherine, daughter of Samuel Lilley, and they were the parents of the following children: William Mode, mentioned at length hereinafter; Mary, who died unmarried. Mr. Elliott died in 1832, at the early age of thirty-three. His widow subsequently married Robert McDonald, and died in the year 1879.

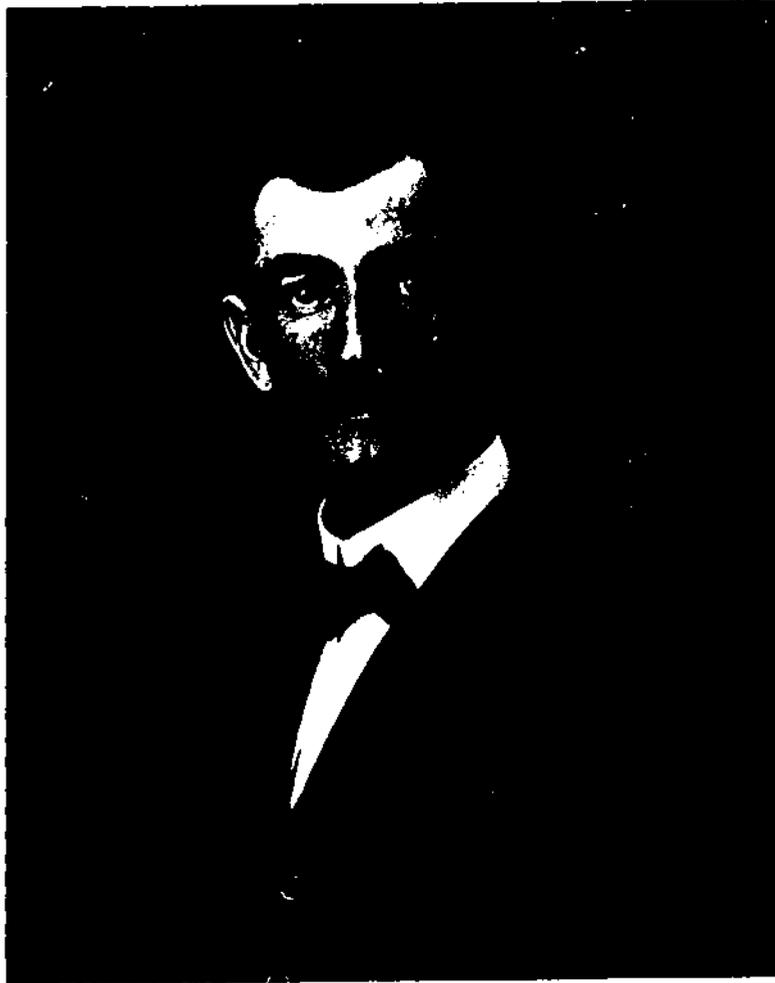

William Mode Elliott, son of Daniel and Catherine (Lilley) Elliott, was born July 30, 1830, on the homestead. He received a common school education, and afterward learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed successfully for many years. In 1866 he purchased the farm which has since been his home, and thenceforth combined agricultural labors with the practice of his trade. In 1900 he retired from business, having reaped the just reward of half a century of intelligent and painstaking labor. He is a Republican in politics, and in 1879 was intrusted by his townsmen with the office of county commissioner, which he held until 1882. Belonging as he does to the generation whose early manhood witnessed the stirring scenes of the Civil war, he can look back upon a military experience, having served in 1863 in Captain Myers' company, (Emergency Troops), which was encamped very near Gettysburg at the time of the battle. He is a member of Coatesville Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and Goddard Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Coatesville. He is a member of the Presbyterian church of Doe Run, in which he has served as an elder for many years.

Mr. Elliott married, February 27, 1873, Mary E., daughter of Johnson Patterson, and the following children have been born to them: William J., who married Flora Moore; Howard B.; Ada; Lilly B., who is the wife of Barton Jefferis; Florence J.; Edward M.; and Elsie Elliott.

CHALKLEY WEBSTER, who has been conspicuously identified with the agricultural interests of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, for a quarter of a century, was born in Laycock township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, July 26, 1830, the son of Jesse and Elizabeth (Lukens) Webster, and grandson of George and Mary Webster, the latter named being the parents of the following named children: 1. George, who married Anna Walton, and their children were: Martha, Mary, Alfred, Asa, Ezra, Charles and George Webster. 2. William, who married Sarah Lukens, and they were the parents of four children: Patience, Samuel, Mary, and Elwood Webster. 3. Naylor, who married Jemima Vickers, and they have reared a family of several children. 4. Jesse, father of Chalkley Webster. 5. Hannah, who became the wife of Elwood Brown, and several children have been the issue of this union. 6. Patience, who became the wife of Allen Smith, and they have reared a family of children.

Jesse Webster, father of Chalkley Webster, was born 2 mo., 18, 1797, and died 4 mo., 4, 1873. By his marriage to Elizabeth Lukens, ten children were born, all of whom attained years of manhood and womanhood. Their children were: 1. Mary, born 4 mo., 5, 1825, died 4 mo., 16, 1873. 2. Sarah, born 3 mo., 17, 1827, died 2 mo., 6, 1873. 3. Edith, born 11 mo., 5, 1828, died 10 mo., 2, 1885. 4. Chalkley, born 6 mo., 26, 1830. 5. Daniel, born 8 mo., 24, 1832, died 10 mo., 28, 1899; he married Beulah Moore and they were the parents of the following named children: Daniel, Channing, Harold, Florence, Howard, Lorena, and Norman, deceased. 6. Lukens, born 12 mo., 8, 1833, married Elizabeth Hallowell, and their children are: Edward B., Edith, Howard, Clarkson, and Percy Webster. 7. George, born 4 mo., 15, 1836, died 10 mo., 31, 1883; he was united in marriage to Phebe Michner, daughter of Dr. Michner, of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. 8. William, born 10 mo., 18, 1838, married Elizabeth Haines, and the issue of this union was six children, namely. Sarah, Joseph, Jessie Anna, Helen, Horace, and Warren Webster. 9. Elizabeth, born 5 mo., 1, 1840. 10. Jesse, born 4 mo., 1, 1842, married Ellen Conard, and they are the parents of the following named children: Rachel, Margaretta, Samuel, Mary, and Jesse Webster.

Wm M Elliott

Chalkley Webster, eldest son of Jesse and Elizabeth (Lukens) Webster, was reared in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and he received a practical education in the schools of Unionville and London Grove. After laying aside his school books, he secured employment with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, but after a short period of time he discontinued his services with that corporation and secured a position as helper on a farm. After serving in that capacity for a number of years, during which time he acquired a thorough knowledge of the routine work of a farm, he purchased a ninety-seven-acre tract of land which he cultivated for six years. He then purchased another farm, consisting of one hundred and eighty acres of rich and arable land, whereon he continued to reside for fifteen years, and in 1878 he became the owner of a one hundred and eighty acre farm at Homeville, Upper Oxford township, where he conducted extensive operations for twenty-one years, after which he disposed of it to his son, Linford Webster. In politics he is a strong Prohibitionist, and he is also very much opposed to the tobacco habit, having often spoken in public on the subject. He has served his township in the capacity of school director, performing his duties in an efficient and creditable manner. He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and is a regular attendant at their meetings, where he performs the duties of minister.

Mr. Webster was united in marriage to Margaret Coates, daughter of Ellis and Abigail (Coates) Coates, and her birth occurred 7 mo., 7, 1832, in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where she was reared; the educational advantages she enjoyed were obtained at the Unionville Academy. The children born of this union are as follows: 1. Eveline, born 6 mo., 15, 1856; she is the wife of Joseph Cloud, and their children are: George, Myrtle, Philena, Clarence, William, Jesse, Mildred, Leona, Frank, Idela, and Pauline Cloud. 2. Joseph, born 12 mo., 15, 1857, married Sophia Fell, and their children were: Hibbard, deceased; Phebe Ann; Mary; and Clarence Webster. 3. Jesse W., born 11 mo., 17, 1859, married Anna Brosius, and they are the parents of two children, Idela and Lillian Webster. 4. Medora, born 1 mo., 7, 1862, wife of Howard Newcomer, and their children are: Rowena, Esther, Wendall, Sarah, and Mary Newcomer. 5. William, born 9 mo., 17, 1863, married Anna Sharpless, and their children are: Sharpless and Raymond Webster. 6. George, born 12 mo., 15, 1864, married Mary Chambers, and they are the parents of one child, Lillian Webster. 7. Linford, born 12 mo., 26, 1866, married Edella Eastburn, and their children are: Marion and Donald Webster. 8. Lillian, born 1 mo., 27, 1873, died 3 mo., 5, 1873. 9. Viola, born 10 mo., 15, 1876. Mr. Webster and his family are widely and favorably known in the community, and are always found on the side of all questions which tend toward the betterment of mankind.

WILLIAM FRANCIS STEELE, a highly respected and influential citizen of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred January 12, 1848, is a son of William and Charlotte (Gordon) Steele, grandson of John B. and Mary Steele, and great-grandson of Robert Steele, who actively participated in the Revolutionary war, and was united in marriage to Miss Booth.

John B. and Mary Steele, grandparents of William F. Steele, were the parents of the following named children: Lydia, born October 19, 1802; Elizabeth, born September 8, 1805; Martha, born October 17, 1807; William, born October 16, 1809; Rebecca, born July 7, 1812; Ann, born September 5, 1814; Joseph born September 25, 1816; and Mary, born October 17, 1820.

William and Charlotte (Gordon) Steele, parents of William F. Steele, reared a family of four children, namely: 1. John G., born July 5, 1842, married Addie Baker and their children are: Mary, George B., and Annie; he married for his second wife, Mary Jacobs, and the children born of this marriage were: John Harry and Mary Frances Steele. 2. Mary Elizabeth, born August 21, 1844, died September 11, 1844. 3. George W., born April 14, 1846, died August 20, 1899; he was united in marriage to Lydia Merrick, and one child was born to them, Charlotte Steele. 4. William Francis, born January 12, 1848.

William F. Steele, youngest son of William and Charlotte Steele, was reared in his native township, Upper Oxford, and acquired a good English education in the local schools. The first three years of his business career were devoted to railroading, after which he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits in Upper Oxford township, and this line of industry he has successfully pursued up to the present time (1903). He served in the capacity of administrator of his father's estate, which consisted of seventy-one acres, disposing of a farm to John Dance, January 31, 1891, but the following year he purchased the property from Mr. Dance and has since retained possession of the same. Mr. Steele is a loyal supporter of the men and measures advocated by the Democratic party, and has been elected to serve in several official positions, namely: assessor; supervisor, which he held for three terms; tax collector, serving for several years, and constable for sixteen consecutive years. In religion he adheres to the tenets of the Baptist faith.

On April 20, 1887, Mr. Steele married Eva L. Hoskins, born in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 26, 1858, daughter of John and Eliza (Dance) Hoskins. John Hoskins was born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, a son of Joseph and Hannah (Brinton) Hoskins, and during his active career he followed the occupation of farmer. Mrs. Steele was reared and obtained her education in the common schools of Lower Oxford township. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Steele: William Francis, Jr., born July 16, 1888; John Herman, born February 6, 1890; George Baker, born February 20, 1892; Mary Eliza, born April 18, 1894; and Emmor Dewitt, born June 11, 1896.

LEWIS W. EVANS, an enterprising and prosperous business man of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is an honored veteran of the Civil war, in which he served the entire length of time, four years, and participated in many of the most important battles and engagements, particularly those which took place in North and South Carolina. He is a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, having been born in the vicinity of Strodes' Mill, East Bradford township, January 24, 1838, a son of William and Elizabeth (Cobourn) Evans, and grandson of Isaac and _____ Evans, the two latter named having been the parents of eight children, all of whom attained years of maturity: 1. Harriet, became the wife of William Riley, and their family consisted of two children—Christian and Thomas Riley; 2. Samuel, married Susan Cooper, and they reared a family of children; 3. William, father of Lewis W. Evans; 4. Thomas; 5. Maria, who became the wife of Isaac Woodward; 6. Hannah, who became the wife of John Ross; 7. Eliza; 8. Susan, who became the wife of Matthias Sellers, and the issue of this union was three children—George, Edward, and Eva Sellers.

William Evans (father) was born near the Brandywine in 1814, was reared to manhood in that vicinity, and attended the common schools adjacent to his home. He was a miller by trade, owned and operated a flourishing grist mill and creamery, and from the proceeds of these enterprises he was enabled to accumulate a sufficient competence for his declining years. William Evans and his wife, Elizabeth (Cobourn) Evans, were the parents of ten children, two of whom are now deceased: 1. Lewis W., mentioned at length in the following paragraph; 2. John, married Margaret Clingan, and the following named children were born to them—Ida, Howard, Warren, Letta, Marion, Charles and Christelle Evans; 3. George, who married Eliza Hogg, and they were the parents of two children—William and Edward Evans; after the death of his first wife, George Evans married Louisa Clingan; 4. Hannah Ann, became the wife of David Kughler, and one child has been born of this union—Elizabeth Kughler; 5. Evan; 6. Evaline; 7. Willanna; 8. Isaac, who married Harriet Shields, and they are the parents of one child—Helen Evans. William Evans, father of these children, died at his home in Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 13, 1889.

Lewis W. Evans, eldest son of William and Elizabeth (Cobourn) Evans, acquired his preliminary education in the local schools of Upper Oxford township and this was supplemented by attendance at Baker's Academy. He began his business career by entering the mill owned and operated by his father, and after becoming thoroughly familiar with all the details of the trade he secured employment at Pennock's grist mill, where he remained until the outbreak of the hostilities between the North and South, when he immediately joined the Union forces and faithfully served his country during the four long and trying years of that terrible conflict. Upon his return from the scene of battle and carnage, Mr. Evans located in the vicinity of Homeville, and worked at his trade for a short period of time, and later entered into partnership with his father in the operation of a grist mill and creamery, and this occupation has engrossed his entire attention up to the present time (1903). Mr. Evans has always evinced a keen interest in township affairs. He has served several years as a director on the school board, and strongly advocated every measure that had for its object the growth and welfare of the community. He holds membership in the Society of Friends, and his political affiliations are with the Democratic party.

Mr. Evans was united in marriage, December 29, 1870, to Anna Mary Seeds, born March 17, 1845, near West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, reared in East Bradford, and educated in the common schools. She is a daughter of Emmor Seeds, born April 30, 1812, and died October 3, 1891, and Rebecca (Steele) Seeds, the latter named being born July 7, 1812, and died September 26, 1887. Their children are: 1. Frank S., born April 14, 1872, was educated in the public schools, later learned the trade of butcher, but is now engaged in the milling business with his father; he is a Republican in politics; he married Elizabeth Simmons, widow of C. P. Simmons, and daughter of Charles Jeffrey, of England, and one child has been born of this union—Mary R., born May 5, 1902;

Mrs. Frank S. Evans was born, reared and educated in England. 2. William Emmor, born April 1, 1875, received a common school education, after which he was employed in his father's mill for a short period of time, then engaged in the meat business, and at the present time (1903) is employed as a commission dealer. He was united in marriage to Laura Jones, daughter of David Jones, a prominent resident of Steepleville, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

GEORGE E. ROSS, a prosperous farmer and influential citizen of Upper Oxford township, is of the fourth generation of a family known in Chester county since the middle of the eighteenth century.

John Ross, the earliest ancestor of whom there is record, was active for the patriot cause during the Revolution, and for his services was granted a large tract of land in western Pennsylvania. He removed there with his family, but his wife soon succumbed to the hardships incident to life in a new country, and he divided his holdings among his three sons, and returned to Chester county. Here he contracted a second marriage, and settled in Upper Oxford township. He here reared two sons and two daughters, from whom the present generations of the family in Chester county are descended. These children were: 1. Abraham, born in 1783; 2. Isaac, born September 21, 1785, who had, among other children, five sons, Abraham, Moses, Robert, George, and Elijah; 3. Ann, born February 5, 1792; 4. Mary born August 20, 1796.

Abraham Ross, first child and eldest son of John Ross, by his second marriage, was born in 1783. He inherited, after the death of his father, the homestead, the remaining property being divided among the other children of his father's second marriage. Abraham Ross married, and the family name of his wife is believed to have been Yerkes. It is known that his family consisted of the following children: 1. John M., further written of below; 2. Samuel, whose wife was Mary Jane Haney Harvey, and whose children were Jemima (deceased), Thomas, Anne and Samuel (deceased); 3. Hugh, who married Eliza Patterson, and became the father of six children; (a) Anna Belle, who married James Andrews; (b) Roberta, who became the wife of Harry Davis; (c) Everett E., who married Jessie Haney; (d) John P.; (e) Mary R.; (f) Hugh Frank, whose wife was Hattie Wilson; 4. Rebecca; 5. Isabelle; 6. Jemima.

John M. Ross, oldest child of Abraham Ross, was born February 8, 1811. He was a farmer and married Hannah Evans; he died December 2, 1872.

George E., eldest child of John M. and Hannah (Evans) Ross, was born on the old family place in Upper Oxford township, January 1, 1844. He was reared here, and obtained his education in the public schools in the vicinity. On leaving school he became a farmer, and he has followed that occupation all his life with energy and ability. At the death of his father, Mr. Ross bought a half interest in the homestead, enriched by the labor of so many generations of his family. He has given himself to the public service both in war and in times of peace. Three times during the Civil war he responded to the need of the hour, and took up arms in defence of the nation—twice in 1863, when Governor Curtin called for troops to repel General Lee, who was threatening invasion of the state, and again in 1864, when he joined the Emergency Corps, and served with fidelity and courage. In politics he is a Republican. He has filled the offices of auditor and treasurer of the township, and occupied the latter position for fifteen years. He attends the Presbyterian church. He is a member of various fraternal organizations, and is affiliated with Skerrett Lodge, No. 343, F. & A. M., Cochranville; the order of Patrons of Husbandry, and the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Mr. Ross has been twice married. His first wife was Mary Burn, daughter of William Burn, of Upper Oxford township. Of this marriage two children were born: Effie May, August 7, 1870, and Mary, who died in infancy. Effie May became the wife of Harry Bolly. The second wife of George E. Ross was Mary Ella Johnson, daughter of James and Mary (Malony) Johnson. Mrs. Ross was born in Lower Oxford, February 13, 1851, and was reared and educated in that township. By this marriage there was one child, John, who died in infancy.

JOHN D. MAKIVER, one of the substantial business men of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born April 16, 1849, in Highland township, Chester county, the son of Aaron and Elizabeth Makiver.

Aaron Makiver (father) came to West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, from the state of Virginia, and his boyhood and young manhood were spent in the home of a Mr. Futhy. He was an enterprising business man and a public-spirited citizen, who won and retained a high position in the community. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Darlington, a daughter of John Darlington, and the issue of this union was two children, namely: John, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Sarah Eliza, wife of Joseph McNeil, and they are the parents of several children and reside at Coatesville, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

The practical education acquired by John D.

Makiver, only son of Aaron and Elizabeth Makiver, was obtained in the schools of Valley township, Chester county, and after completing his studies he learned the trade of blacksmith, which occupation he followed for three years. He then removed to Gallegerville and engaged in the hotel business, but after a short residence in that locality he located in Downingtown, and pursued the same line of industry for several years. He then removed to Chadd's Ford, and for ten years was the successful proprietor of a large and well appointed hotel. In the spring of 1888 Mr. Makiver took up his residence in Russellville, Upper Oxford township, purchased the hotel there, which is one of the oldest inns in the county, and up to the present time (1903) has been very successful in the management of the same. He gives his personal attention to every detail of the business, and by so doing his guests are certain that all their wants will be carefully attended to; he employs none but courteous and accommodating assistants, and in every respect his hotel ranks with the best in that section of the state. For a number of years Mr. Makiver was very prominently identified with local Republican politics, having been assessor for several years, and also the incumbent of other important offices. In religious matters he adheres to the doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal church.

On April 12, 1870, Mr. Makiver married Susan B. Clark, born September 3, 1849, a daughter of Jacob and Sarah Clark, both of whom are descendants of an old and honored Quaker ancestry. Mrs. Makiver was born in East Bradford, near Marshallton, and in the schools of that vicinity she acquired a good English education. Their children are:

1. Harry J. Makiver, born February 3, 1871, obtained his early education in the common schools of his birthplace, then was a student at Shortlidge's Academy, Concordville, Delaware county, later attended the Normal School at West Chester, graduated from Easton Academy, then entered Lafayette College, from which institution he was graduated with high honors, after which he was a student in the law department of Ann Arbor (Michigan) University, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Laws. For one year following his graduation he read law with Mr. Gilpin Robinson, was admitted to the bar at Media, and up to the present time (1903) he has met with a large degree of success in the practice of his profession in the town of Media. He was united in marriage to Margaretta Pennock, a daughter of John Pennock of West Fallowfield, Pennsylvania.

2. Ira D. Makiver, born July 29, 1873, acquired his education in the common schools of his native township, and later was a student at Nottingham Academy. After completing his studies he settled in Philadelphia, and learned the machinist trade with Bement, Miles & Co., with which firm he has been employed for the past ten years. Ira D. Makiver married Nellie McCarthy, of Philadelphia, and one child was the issue of this marriage, John Percy Makiver, who died in early life.

3. Lillian B. Makiver, born January 3, 1880, acquired an excellent education in the common schools of her native township and at West Chester State Normal School, and is now engaged in the capacity of school teacher in Lower Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

JAMES C. COOPER, of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of an old and highly respected family which has long been identified with Lower Oxford township, where his father, John Cooper, was born in 1784.

John Cooper was educated in the public schools, and for many years preceding the advent of railroads was busily engaged in a transportation business, wagoning merchandise and country produce to and from Pittsburg. In later life he was a farmer. He was a man of considerable ability, and for some years served as township supervisor. In politics he was a Democrat. He married Elizabeth Hood, born in 1791, a daughter of Samuel Hood, a well established farmer of the same locality with himself. Their children were: 1. Isabelle, born 1820, who married John Crews, and to them were born seven children; 2. Mary J., born 1822, who became the wife of Samuel Crawford, and to them were born three children; 3. Elizabeth, born 1825, and died young; 4. Thomas J., born 1827, and died young; 5. James C., born 1829; 6. Margaret, born 1831, single.

James Cooper, son of John and Elizabeth (Hood) Cooper, received his education in the neighborhood schools. On arriving at man's estate, he engaged in farming, which has commanded his attention to the present time. He resides upon one of the most highly developed farms in the Chester Valley, a tract of two hundred and forty acres, upon a portion of which he maintains an excellent dairy which utilizes the product of thirty head of finely bred cows. His excellent character and standing in the community are attested by the fact that he has been frequently solicited to become a candidate for important local offices, but his modesty and disinclination for public life have forebade his acceptance. He attends the Presbyterian church, and affiliates with the Democratic party. He is an active member of the fraternity of Odd Fellows, and has occupied various stations in the local lodge.

J. C. Cooper

WILLIAM CHERINGTON WILSON, a practical and progressive agriculturist of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, whose thorough understanding of the business and capable management have brought him success in his undertaking, is a native of the vicinity in which he resides, his birth having occurred there February 23, 1842.

The earliest ancestor of the family of whom there is any authentic record was David Wilson (great-grandfather), whose son, David Wilson (grandfather) was born in Bucks county, near Hatborough, Pennsylvania, but subsequently removed to Chester county, was united in marriage to Elizabeth Stackhouse, and reared a family of eight children, namely: 1. Mary, who became the wife of Amos Packer, and their children were: Elizabeth, a son, Urie Ann, Hannah, Mary, Charles Wesley, and Lucilla Packer. 2. Josiah, married Rebecca Walton, and they were the parents of the following named children: Joshua, Mary, James and Thomas Wilson. 3. Lucy. 4. Urie Ann, who became the wife of Nathan Lee, and their children were: Elizabeth, Isaac, Wilson, Thomas, Urie Ann, William, and Mary Lee. 5. Elizabeth. 6. Joshua, married Hannah Walton, and the following named children were born to them: Lydia, Mary, Rhoda, Hannah, Elizabeth, Rebecca, Abigail, Charles, and Joseph Wilson. 7. David, father of William C. Wilson. 8. Rachel, wife of Amos Harlan, and mother of five children: David, Jehu, Jesse, Jabez Wilson, and Hannah E. Harlan.

David Wilson (father) was born in East Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 29, 1805, obtained his education in the common schools of that neighborhood, and subsequently followed the occupations of cabinet maker and undertaker. In 1830 he changed his place of residence to Upper Oxford township, and pursued the same lines of industry there until 1842, when he purchased a farm which he cultivated and improved up to the time of his decease, which occurred January 26, 1864. In 1828 Mr. Wilson married Ruth Anna Cherington, and they became the parents of the following named children: 1. William, who died in infancy. 2. Isaac, born July 14, 1830, was united in marriage to Barbara Anna Louisa Sellenburger, and their children are: Louisa, Wesley, George, Elmira, Winona, William, Eva, Maud, and Earl Wilson. 3. Mary Ann, who died in early life. 4. Milton, who died in early life. 5. Mary Elizabeth, born in 1834, became the wife of William Summerell, and their children are: Ella, Emily, and Howard Summerell. 6. Albin W., born May 21, 1836, married Elizabeth Meconnahy and three children have been born to them: Emma, Harry, and Marriott, who died in infancy. 7. Emily C., born March 23, 1838, wife of Richard Lewis and their children are: Cherington and Mary Lewis. 8. Abigail C., born February 14, 1840, wife of Christian T. Alexander, and they are the parents of the following named children: Clement C., Walter, Louetta, Austin, Morris, Elmer and Ruth Anna Alexander. 9. William Cherington. 10. Alexander M., born June 4, 1843, married Elizabeth Finglas, and their children are: Percy, Lily, Benjamin, V. L. and Raymond, twins, Alexandrine, and Florence Wilson. 11. Charles Wesley, who died in early life.

William C. Wilson, fifth son of David and Ruth Anna Cherington Wilson, was reared, educated in the local schools, and has spent his entire life up to the present time (1903) in Upper Oxford township. After completing his studies he learned the trade of cabinet maker with his father, and continued in business with him up to the year of the death of the latter named, 1864, when he disposed of the business and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He purchased a farm of thirty-five acres, whereon he conducted operations until 1872, when he sold the property and purchased his present farm of sixty acres, the greater part of which is under a high state of cultivation and therefore yields a goodly harvest. Mr. Wilson has always taken an active part in Republican politics, and has served his township in the capacity of auditor for twelve years. In religion he is a birthright member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Wilson married Rebecca Emma Hurford, who was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 5, 1843, spent the early years of her life there and in East Marlborough township, and her education was acquired in the schools of Kennett Square; she is a daughter of Eber and Hannah (Allen) Hurford. One child, who died in infancy, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson.

FERDINAND WOOD, son of Joseph and Mary (Burns) Wood, whose birth occurred at Chatham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 15, 1828, is actively and prominently identified with various industrial enterprises in the townships of Upper Oxford and Londonderry, including Doe Run in the township last named, and by the exercise of his natural ability, keenness and prudence has succeeded in his business ventures and thus won an enviable reputation in the commercial circles of the community.

Joseph Wood (father) was born in 1787, presumably in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he was reared and obtained a practical education. For a number of years he was a resident of the state of Delaware, later removed to Chatham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, remaining in that vicinity for thirteen years, and finally settled in Londonderry township, where he purchased a farm of one hundred and twelve acres. There was a saw mill on the property, and this Mr. Wood turned into a grist mill, after which he operated it for a number of years, and finally disposed of it to his son, Alfred Wood. From 1833 to 1836 he served in the capacity of county commissioner, discharging the duties of the office in a practical and efficient manner. Joseph Wood had two brothers and two sisters, namely: John, who married a Williamson; Jonathan, who married; Sarah, wife of a Mr. Lutz; and Theresa, who also married. Joseph Wood, was united in marriage to Mary Burns, born in 1791, and their children were: 1. John Milton, who married Susan Underwood, daughter of Henry Underwood, and their children were: Mary Elizabeth, wife of Martin Pyle; Evan Henry; Alice, wife of a Mr. Myers; and Joseph Wood. After the death of his first wife, John Milton Wood married Ruth Adams, widow of Thomas Adams, and one child was born to them, Theresa, now the wife of Lorenzo Hilamon. 2. James Bayard, married Elizabeth Rogers, and their children were: Dr. Henry C., born in 1844, and Mary, who died in infancy. 3. Menander, who was married twice; his first wife was Lavinia Keeley, and his second wife was Annie Schutz; the children born to Menander and Lavinia (Keeley) Wood were: Morris M., born May 31, 1849; Emmor B., born December 14, 1853; Emma and Irene, both of whom died in infancy. 4. Ferdinand, who died in infancy. 5. Alfred, married Martha Crippen, and their children were: Mary, William and Margaret Wood. 6. Hannah, wife of William Rogers, son of Sheriff Rogers, and they are the parents of the following named children: Frank W., Mary Rebecca, Katherine and Sallie Rogers. 7. Ferdinand. 8. Mary Jane. 9. Sarah T. Wood. Joseph Wood, father of these children, died in the year 1856, and his remains were interred at Old Grove Meeting House burying ground.

Ferdinand Wood, seventh child born to Joseph and Mary (Burns) Wood, was reared at Chatham and Upper Oxford, Chester county, and after obtaining a good English education in the local schools he learned the trade of carpenter, which occupation he followed for many years, constructing between fifty and sixty wooden bridges in the county. In 1863 he began the operation of a grist mill at Doe Run, Londonderry township, which he is conducting at the present time; in 1870 he purchased from his brother, Alfred Wood, the grist mill in Londonderry, near Upper Oxford township, which was located on his father's property, and this he rebuilt, and is now conducting extensive operations therein. In politics he is an earnest supporter of the candidates advocated by the Democratic party. He has held the office of school director of the township for several years.

Mr. Wood married Elizabeth Sanders, born September 1, 1827, in the vicinity of Stanton, New Castle county, Delaware, where she was reared and educated in the local schools. She is a daughter of Benjamin and Ellen Sanders, residents of New Castle county, Delaware. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wood are as follows: 1. Millard F., born September 15, 1857, married Sarah Chamberlin, and their children are: Elizabeth, Homer Ferdinand and Millard Wood. 2. Joseph Bayard, born February 26, 1859, married Lucy Robb and they are now residing in Illinois; they have two children, Chester V. and Lillian Wood. 3. Henry Clay, born February 2, 1866, married Hannah Hamilton, of York, Pennsylvania, and they are the parents of two children, Deborah and Clifford Wood.

WILLIAM H. REESE, a prosperous farmer and well known citizen of Valley Forge, Schuylkill township, Chester county, is the son of Edward Reese, a native of Wales, who at the age of nineteen years came to America and settled in Pennsylvania. He prospered in his new home, combining the occupations of a farmer and broom-maker. He was a member of the order of Odd Fellows, and in politics an Independent. He married Eliza Krewson, who died in 1858. The death of Mr. Reese took place March 25, 1899, at the advanced age of ninety years.

William H. Reese, son of Edward and Eliza (Krewson) Reese, was born August 27, 1840, and has from early youth devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, which he has followed with the success merited by his ability and enterprise. His assiduity in his chosen calling has not prevented him from taking a keen interest in local affairs, particularly in the cause of education, in which he has manifested his interest in a practical manner, serving for seven years as school director. He is a member of Peolia Lodge, I. O. O. F. His political principles are those advocated by the Democratic party.

Mr. Reese married, March 27, 1870, Mary E., daughter of Mathew and Susannah (Renard) Ross, and three daughters have been born to them: Susannah, who resides at home; Annie, who is at Bala, and Laura May, who died at the age of fourteen years.

Mathew Ross, the father of Mrs. Reese, was born November 13, 1784, in England, where he served an apprenticeship as silversmith, file-forging and gunsmith. In early life he emigrated to America, and for many years was employed in the Gun Works at Valley Forge. He also owned and worked the farm where his daughter, Mrs. Reese, now lives. During a portion of his life he was engaged in the brewing business, having a small brewery attached to his farm. He was a member of high standing in the Masonic order, and in politics a Democrat.

Mr. Ross married, in England, Sarah ———, who died on the farm in Valley Forge, and he subsequently married, about 1835, Susannah Rennard, who was born February 14, 1807, and was a member of an old and well known family. They were the parents of the following children: 1. Mathew, who was a successful machinist and engineer, and served three months in the army during the Civil war; he died April 18, 1873, aged thirty-seven. 2. Lewis, who was an engineer, served four years on a man-of-war, and is now living in Virginia. 3. Jacob R., who has been for more than thirty years an engineer at Pottsville; he served three months in the Union army. 4. William H., who is an engineer at Canshohacken. 5. Charles, who was, for nineteen years, a locomotive engineer on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and who died September 26, 1900. 6. Mary E., who was born September 19, 1845, and is mentioned above as the wife of William H. Reese. Mrs. Ross, the mother of this family, died January 12, 1892, at the venerable age of eighty-five, having survived her husband nearly twenty years. The death of Mr. Ross, which took place August 8, 1873, was widely and sincerely lamented as that of an able business man, an honorable citizen, and a truly good man, beloved and respected in all the relations of life.

THOMAS F. GRIER, an active and prominent factor in the commercial, political and social circles of the borough of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in which locality he has resided for the past fifteen years, is a native of East Nottingham township and his birth occurred on the old ancestral estate, March 23, 1863. He is a son of Ralph J. and Sarah Elizabeth (Crowl) Grier, daughter of Finley and Eliza (Johnson) Grier, and grandson of Ralph Grier.

Ralph Grier (grandfather), was born in the northern portion of Ireland, where he was reared, acquired a practical common school education, learned the trade of potter, and was united in marriage to Mary Ann Livingston. In 1802 he emigrated to this country, having left his family in their home in Ireland, settled near Risin, Sun, Maryland, and there established a pottery. He was an expert mechanic, possessed remarkable energy and thrift, was conscientious and honest in all business transactions, and therefore his trade increased in volume and importance during each succeeding year. After six years of patient toil and struggle, he succeeded in accumulating sufficient funds to enable him to send for his family to join him in the new home he had provided for them. Among the children born of his marriage was a son, Ralph J. Grier, Jr.

Ralph J. Grier (father) was born in Harford county, Maryland, February 23, 1833, and pursued his studies in the schools of Belair, Harford county, Maryland. His first business experience was gained as a farmer, but this occupation not proving congenial to his tastes and inclinations, he abandoned it and engaged in the pottery business with his father. In 1860 he changed his place of residence to East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and established what is still known as the Grier Pottery, which he successfully conducted up to the time of his death, which occurred August 23, 1902; the plant is now being operated by his son, Stanley Grier. In his political views Mr. Grier was a strong and loyal Democrat, and during his residence in Harford county, Maryland, he was elected by the constituents of that party to the office of deputy sheriff, his administration being marked by the utmost integrity. He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Improved Order of Red Men.

Mr. Grier was united in marriage to Elizabeth Crowl, daughter of Finley Crowl, a prosperous farmer of East Nottingham township, Chester county. Their children are—Ida, who became the wife of L. P. Miller, and they are the parents of three children; Grier, Delmer and Clarence; Clara, wife of Harry Ewing and mother of one child, Paul Ewing; Lillie B.; Edwin Stanley; and Thomas F., mentioned at length hereinafter. The mother of these children is living at the present time (1903).

Thomas F. Grier, son of Ralph J. and Sarah Elizabeth (Crowl) Grier, received an excellent English education in the public schools of his native township, and then engaged in the pottery business with his father until 1889. In that year he removed to the borough of Oxford, where he established a select grocery business, but after conducting this for two years he disposed of it and purchased the good will and trade of a livery stable in the same borough, which was formerly the property of Bronson Slack. This enterprise has engrossed his entire attention up to the present time (1903) and has proved remarkably profitable. He is prompt and reliable in the discharge of his duties and obligations, and all his business transactions are characterized by integrity, honesty and a keen sense of justice. Politically Mr. Grier is a staunch adherent of the principles of the Democratic party, has held the office of burgess of Oxford for three years, and has served as a member of council for three years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Oxford Lodge, No. 353, and Oxford Chapter, No. 223, Royal Arch Masons.

October 11, 1894, Mr. Grier married Annie Brinton, born February 23, 1870, daughter of Henry L. and Sarah (Fisher) Brinton. They are the parents of one child, Evelyn Grier, born December 25, 1897.

WALTER P. FIELIS, well known as an energetic farmer and public-spirited citizen of Lower Oxford township, Chester county, belongs to a family which had its origin in Germany, his grandfather, Peter Fielis, having been a native of that country. On reaching the age of eighteen, he was required, in accordance with the law of the Fatherland, to enter the army in order to fulfill the stated period of military service which the country demands of all her sons. Fearing that the loss of the time which he was thus forced to spend as a soldier would form a serious obstacle to his advancement in life, he deserted and fled to America, where he settled in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and became a farmer. He afterward married, and was the father of a number of children.

William T. Fielis, son of Peter Fielis, was born in 1816, in Lancaster county, where he was educated in the common schools. He learned the trade of a saddler, which he followed for some time, abandoning it in order to take charge of the warehouses of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Parkesburg. The latter years of his life were passed as a farmer in Sadsbury township, Chester county. Mr. Fielis, who was much respected by his neighbors, was chosen by them to fill various minor township offices. In politics he adhered faithfully to the doctrines and measures promulgated and upheld by the Democratic party. He was a member of the Masonic order. He married Adeline, daughter of John and Frances (Stewart) Parke; her father was a farmer of Sadsbury township, who is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Fielis were the parents of the following children: Mary F., who married Levis Miller, and has one child, Amy; Henrietta C., who became the wife of James Townsend; and Walter P., mentioned at length hereinafter. The death of Mr. Fielis occurred April 28, 1888, and his wife survived him two years, passing away November 15, 1890.

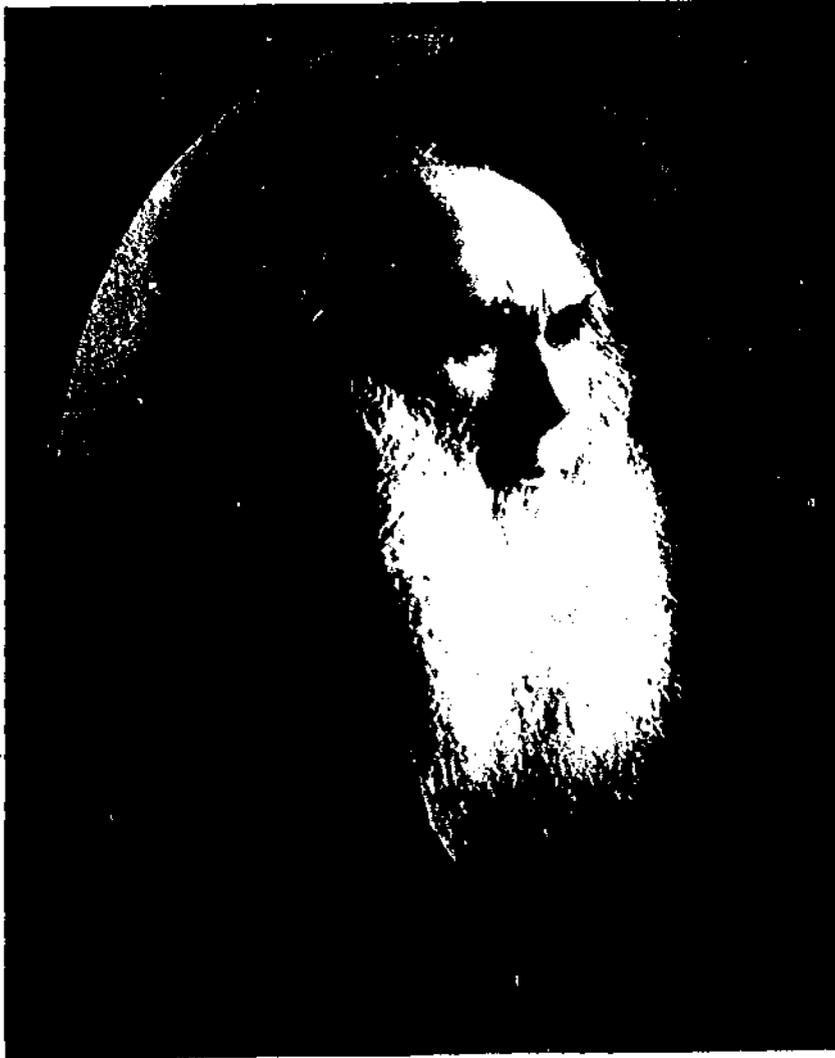

Walter P. Fielis, son of William T. and Adeline (Parke) Fielis, was born May 30, 1854, in Parkesburg, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and received his early education in his native place, afterward attending school in Oxford. He learned the art of telegraphy, which he practiced for a considerable period, but discovered that his predominant taste was for agricultural pursuits. In consequence he relinquished the business of a telegrapher, and purchased the farm which is now his home. The one hundred and eight acres of which he is the owner receive the most careful and intelligent attention, with results which justify him in his choice of the life of a farmer. One of Mr. Fielis's most distinguishing characteristics is the active interest which he takes in county affairs, every project which approves itself to his judgment as having a tendency to advance the welfare of the community receiving his earnest and energetic support, and so fully do his neighbors appreciate this trait in his character that they regard him with confidence as an able adviser in public matters. He was at one time prevailed upon to accept the office of school director, his manner of discharging the duties of the position affording the fullest satisfaction to his townsmen.

The political principles and opinions held by Mr. Fielis are those of a faithful and sincere Democrat, and his aid is always given to the best of his ability in support of the men and measures advocated by his party. His religious affiliations are with the Fagg's Manor Presbyterian church.

NATHAN B. BROOMALL, an honored citizen of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, is a representative of a family which has from a very early period figured prominently in the annals of Chester and Delaware counties, the members in every generation having been distinguished by traits which marked them as good citizens and valued friends and neighbors, loved and respected by all who were in any way associated with them, either in private life or in the administration of public affairs, in which they have taken an active part.

Daniel Broomall (grandfather) was born July 2, 1752, in Glen Riddle, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and his son, Nathan S. Broomall (father), was born in the same vicinity in the year 1777. On August 18, 1806, Nathan S. Broomall married Hannah G. Connor, and they were the parents of the following named children: Thomas, born July 19, 1807; Joseph, born August 22, 1808, and was killed on March 4, 1829, at Rock Dale; Caleb, born May 21, 1810; Cheney, born December 17, 1811; John S., born January 18, 1814; Lydia, born December 18, 1816; Nathan, mentioned hereinafter; Hannah S., born November 25, 1821; Margaret C., born July 16, 1823; Hugh, born June 24, 1828; and David, born September 28, 1830. Mr. Broomall, the father of this family, followed the trade of a miller, a calling which was hereditary in his family, and his death occurred on November 20, 1845. His wife, who was born March 3, 1788, died December 12, 1879, in the ninety-first year of her age. All his sons followed the trade of iron workers.

A. B. Broomall

Nathan B. Broomall, son of Nathan S. and Hannah G. (Connor) Broomall, was born September 9, 1819, and in 1833 entered the employ of Reeves, Whitaker & Company, at Phoenixville. With this firm he remained fifteen years, and about the year 1848 entered the service of Reeves, Buck & Company, an organization now known as the Phoenix Iron Company. At that time they were engaged in nail-making, but since the destruction of their factory by fire—an event which occurred while Mr. Broomall was in their service—they have abandoned the manufacture of nails. For some time Mr. Broomall's position in the establishment was the one known as that of "handy man," but when he retired from business in 1877 he held the office of foreman of the hydraulic shop. The fact that during the whole of his active career, which covered a period of forty-four years, he was in the service of but two establishments, speaks volumes for his diligence and fidelity. He was elected burghess of Phoenixville in 1878-1879-1886, and his administration was noted for the utmost fidelity and faithfulness with which the work of the office was performed. He was formerly an adherent of the Whig party, but in 1856 he voted the Republican ticket and has done so every year since. On February 9, 1846, he became a member of Montgomery Lodge, No. 57, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is the oldest past grand living, being the past grand of Phoenix Lodge, No. 212, and on June 19, 1848, he was appointed the first district department grand master of Chester county. On March 27, 1847, he joined the Masonic fraternity, affiliating with Phoenix Lodge, No. 75, and is now the oldest past master living. He was reared in the religious belief of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Broomall married Eliza L. Knerr, who was born October 28, 1824, a daughter of Isaac and Martha Knerr, of Phoenixville. Their children are: Virginia E., who became the wife of Governor Samuel W. Pennepacker, and they are the parents of the following named children: 1. Dirck Koster, born August 4, 1871; Josephine Whitaker, born November 14, 1872; Eliza Broomall, born October 18, 1874; Anna M. Whitaker, born November 22, 1876; Samuel Richardson, born December 31, 1878; and Bevan Aubrey, born July 29, 1881. 2. C. Harry, who followed in the footsteps of his father, became a machinist, and for a number of years successfully pursued his chosen calling; finally he was compelled by reason of failing health to retire from business, and now lives with his father in Phoenixville. Mrs. Broomall, the mother of the family, died on January 20, 1898, and Mr. Broomall is passing the evening of his days in the enjoyment of material prosperity, the affection of his children and friends, and the sincere regard and respect of the entire community.

JOHN EVERTON RAMSEY. The Ramsey family, members of which have been prominent and active alike in the financial, commercial political and social circles of Chester county, Pennsylvania, are of Celtic origin. The earliest ancestor of the family to settle in the United States was William Ramsey, who emigrated from the north of Ireland in the early part of the eighteenth century and became the owner of a large tract of land in East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, residing there until his death at an advanced age. His son William Ramsey (grandfather) was born in East Nottingham township, but subsequently removed to the vicinity of Georgetown, Lancaster county, becoming one of its prominent and successful merchants. He married Rebecca Wilson, a daughter of the Rev. James Wilson, D. D., a prominent Presbyterian minister of Lancaster county; she was also a niece of the Rev. Dr. Read, of Wilmington, Delaware, and a connection by marriage of the Wise family of Virginia, and the Polk family of Tennessee. William Ramsey and his wife, Rebecca (Wilson) Ramsey, were the parents of two children—James Read and Ann Ramsey.

James Read Ramsey (father) was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1815. He acquired an excellent education at Hopewell Academy and at Washington, Pennsylvania, under the personal supervision of his uncle, the Rev. Obadiah Jennings, D. D., who was actively connected with Washington College. He began his business career in the employ of the firm of Dickey Brothers, extensive merchants and cotton manufacturers at Hopewell, Pennsylvania, where he remained for a number of years. He then purchased an extensive farm near the borough of Oxford, Chester county, which he devoted to general farming purposes, and being a capable and energetic man he achieved a large degree of success in this enterprise. He was one of the incorporators and aided in the construction of the Philadelphia & Baltimore Central Railroad, of which he was a director, and for twenty years prior to his death served in the capacity of treasurer. He was instrumental in the organization of the Oxford Public Library and the Oxford Agricultural Society, being appointed first president of the former and treasurer of the latter, and he was also for many years and at the time of his death a director of the Bank at Oxford. Mr. Ramsey held membership in the Oxford Presbyterian church, served as trustee and treasurer, and was an active member of the building committee during the construction of the new edifice. Politically he was an adherent of the Republican party, and socially a member and served as president of the Union League of Oxford.

Mr. Ramsey was united in marriage, June 6, 1845, to Mary Dickey, daughter of Samuel Dickey, a descendant of one of the pioneer settlers of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: William W., a well known business man in the city of Chicago, Illinois, and president of the corporation of the Northwestern Expanded Metal Co.; Samuel D., an eminent and successful lawyer of West Chester, Pennsylvania; and John Everton Ramsey. James R. Ramsey, father of these children, died at his home near Oxford, Pennsylvania, December 24, 1871.

John Everton Ramsey, third son of James R. and Mary (Dickey) Ramsey, was born July 10, 1853. He pursued his studies at Oxford Academy and Princeton College. In 1878 he received the appointment of cashier of the National Bank of Oxford, of which bank he is now vice-president. The bank was opened as a national institution under the name of "The National Bank of Oxford," February 19, 1865.

Mr. Ramsey was married, June 7, 1888, to Miss Emma E. Alexander, of New Wilmington, Pennsylvania. The children born of this marriage are: Mary Stuart, Helen Alexander and Gladys Dickey.

JAMES P. GLENN. George Glenn, the father of the above mentioned gentleman, was for many years a farmer in West Fallowfield township, and contributed his share to the general agricultural prosperity which has been the marked characteristics of Chester county ever since men first began to settle in its borders. He came of a good, substantial family, and, like the majority of boys who intend making agriculture their life work, learned its fundamental principles while yet attending the district school. He married Miss Ann Coulter, who came of a Lancaster county family, and they became the parents of these children: Eliza J., who married Edward Welch, and had three children: Rachel, deceased; Sallie V., unmarried; Mary W., also single; Margaret F., the wife of F. Brosius, by whom she had four children.

James P. Glenn completes the family, and is a man of modest, retiring disposition, and owns and operates one of the well improved and fertile farms of the county. He has followed this occupation all his life, and has been uniformly successful. The only misfortune which has befallen him and given him a check in his progress was the destruction by fire of his well-stored barn in 1891, but this setback was only temporary, and he has replaced it with a fine modern structure which affords ample accommodation for all his property.

He married Miss Mary W. Reyburn, whose father, Samuel, was a Chester county farmer and a shoemaker by trade. Their only son, Harvey R., is a promising young man, and is now preparing himself for the medical profession by attending one of the leading colleges at Philadelphia.

FRANKLIN DARLINGTON, of East Nottingham township, Chester county, is a representative in the present generation of the large and well known family of that name whose ancestry is given upon other pages of this work. Job Darlington, his paternal grandfather, was born in East Bradford, Chester county, and was the father of ten children.

Joshua, a son of Job Darlington, was born on the paternal homestead 11 mo., 19, 1798, and died 11 mo., 8, 1872, at the venerable age of seventy-six years. He was educated in the famous academical school of Jonathan Gause, in the village of West Chester, and became a man of broad general information and much force of character. After leaving school he worked for a time upon the home farm. He subsequently bought and conducted the old Indian King Tavern, near West Chester, a much frequented house before the advent of railroads. While so engaged, Mr. Darlington also managed a number of freight wagons in the conveyance of merchandise and produce between West Chester and Pittsburg. He was twice married. His first wife, Eliza Mercer, of East Bradford, daughter of William and Sidney (Wollerton) Mercer, who was born 6 mo., 27, 1798, and died 10 mo., 22, 1838, bore him the following named children: 1. Job, born 12 mo., 28, 1820 who married Sarah Brinton; 2. William, who died in his teens; 3. Hoopes, single; 4. Franklin; 5. Sidney, who married Morton Pennock, and to them were born two children; 6. Hannah, who became the wife of Samuel Dixon; 7. Jacob, who died in early life. Mr. Darlington then married Martha Haines, 9 mo., 2, 1841, and they had one son, Jacob H. Darlington. Martha Haines was born in 1805, and died 3 mo., 9, 1870, a daughter of Jacob and Lydia (Thompson) Haines, of West Goshen.

Franklin Darlington, fourth child of Joshua and Eliza (Mercer) Darlington, was born in West Whiteland township, Chester county, 8 mo., 18, 1827. As did his father, he attended the academic school of Jonathan Gause, and afterward located in Kennett Square, where he learned tailoring with his uncle, John Darlington. After serving his apprenticeship he carried on the business of merchant tailor for about sixteen years. In 1863 he responded to the call of Governor Curtin for a force of emergency men to repel the invading Confederate army under General Robert E. Lee, enlisting in the regiment commanded by Colonel Hawley, and with which he performed the full duty of a soldier until the conclusion of the war in 1865. He then took up his residence in East Nottingham township, where he now lives a pleasant retired life, secure in the affections of a large circle of friends who hold him in high regard for his many excellencies of character. He is a Prohibitionist in politics, and is a member of the local Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry.

Mr. Darlington was married, 3 mo., 18, 1865, to Miss Mary G. Jackson, who was born 9 mo., 6, 1831, a daughter of Caleb S. and Mary (Gause) Jackson, of Kennett township, the former named being a prominent farmer of that locality, and the latter a daughter of William and Mary (Beverly) Gause, and a sister of Jonathan Gause, the celebrated school teacher and educator of Chester county. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Darlington are: 1. Frederick, born 4 mo., 23, 1867, who married Miss Josephine Sanford, on 9 mo., 16, 1890, and they are the parents of two children, Josephine, born 7 mo., 16, 1893, and Helen, born 12 mo., 24, 1895. Josephine (Sanford) Darlington is a daughter of Frederick and Mary (Williams) Sanford. 2. Philip J., born 9 mo., 4, 1869, who married Miss Rebecca Matson, 12 mo., 21, 1901, no issue. She is a daughter of Edwin and Hannah (Gause) Matson.

WILLIAM N. GRIER, a well known and public-spirited citizen of Highland township, Chester county, is a grandson of Matthew Grier, who in 1830 came to the United States from county Derry, Ireland, and made his home in Philadelphia, where he engaged in the grocery business on South Fifth street. He was accompanied by his wife and the following children: Robert, mentioned at length hereinafter; Joseph; Samuel; Margaret, who married James Grier; and Mary, who died unmarried. Two other sons, James and Matthew, had preceded him to this country. Mr. Grier remained in business until his death, and his wife, who survived him, also died in Philadelphia.

Robert Grier, son of Matthew and Margrett Grier, was born in 1800, in county Derry, Ireland, and was one of the sons who accompanied the father to the United States. He assisted his father in the grocery business established by the latter, but withdrew from it when he perceived an advantageous opening in a new direction. He established an extensive freight business, transporting merchandise of every description by wagons which ran between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and also between the former city and Knoxville, Tennessee. After conducting this enterprise successfully for some ten years, Mr. Grier turned his attention to farming, settling in the township of Oxford, now the twenty-third ward of Philadelphia. About 1838 he came to Chester county, took up his abode near the village of Doe Run, and there worked at his trade of shoemaking, which he had learned in Ireland. At the end of two years he returned to his farm at Germantown, where he remained until 1854, when he once more removed to Chester county, settling this time at Gum Tree. Here he followed his trade, in connection with farming, until 1868, when he retired and returned to Philadelphia, where he passed the remainder of his life with his son, William N. Grier. He married Elizabeth, daughter of William Nicholson, of Germantown, and their children were: Matthew, who died in infancy; William N., mentioned at length hereinafter; Margaret, who married John Scott; and Robert, who was a member of Company H, of the famous "Bucktails Regiment," and was killed at the battle of the Wilderness. Mr. Grier, the father of the family, died in 1874, and his wife survived him two years, passing away in 1876.

William N. Grier, son of Robert and Elizabeth (Nicholson) Grier, was born April 11, 1837, in Philadelphia, where he received a common school education and learned the trade of a miller. In 1861 he enlisted in Company G, Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, and in 1863 re-enlisted in the same regiment. He was promoted successively to the ranks of corporal and sergeant, and on October 15, 1864, was commissioned first lieutenant of his company. He participated in the battles of Stone River, Chickamauga, and Missionary Ridge, and was with Sherman in his famous march from Chattanooga to Atlanta. At the last named place he was transferred to the Cavalry Corps under General Wilson, as a member of which he passed through the campaigns of Alabama and Georgia. August 23, 1865, he was mustered out at Macon, Georgia, with a record not only of gallantry in the field, but of hardships and privations, having been wounded at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, made prisoner, and condemned to the Andersonville prison pen. He was, however, sent instead to Nashville, and thence to the parole camp at Annapolis, Maryland, where he was exchanged, after which he returned to his company.

On leaving the army, Mr. Grier returned to Chester county, and for a time engaged in the milling business in Delaware. Subsequently he followed the same occupation in Doe Run, and afterward became interested in the marble business in Philadelphia. In 1870 he returned to the old farm in the twenty-third ward of that city, where he devoted himself to market gardening. In 1881 he came to Highland township and purchased his farm, and has given his attention since that time to agricultural pursuits. He is an active member of the Republican party, exerting himself in a practical manner for the public good, and reaping the reward of his efforts in the esteem and confidence of his neighbors, who have given ample testimony of the regard in which they hold him by intrusting him for sixteen years with the office of auditor of the township. He is a member of the Gum Tree Methodist Episcopal church; is which he is now serving on the board of trustees. He belongs to Skerrett Lodge, F. and A. M., of Cochranville, and to Highland Council, Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

Mr. Grier married, in 1873, Amanda, daughter of William Heft, of Frankford, Philadelphia. The following children have been born to them: Robert, who died at the age of seventeen months, seven days; Matthew, who died in infancy; William N. H., who is in business with his father; and Anna, the youngest child, who is still at home with her parents.

WILLIAM P. TREGO, an industrious and highly respected citizen of Brandywine Manor, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has been actively engaged as a carpenter and farmer for over half a century, is a son of Joseph P. and Mary (Dunwoody) Trego, and was born in West Nantmeal township, on October 30, 1830.

Peter Trego, the pioneer ancestor of the family, came to the United States from England in 1681, having previously fled to that country from France to escape the religious persecution which was perpetrated upon members of the Protestant denomination. He settled in Chester county, near what is now known as Delaware county, and his entire time and attention was devoted to agricultural pursuits. His son, William Trego, was an architect and builder and erected many of the buildings which were used during the early period of the history of Chester county. His son, Joseph Trego, was the father of Eli Trego, and he in turn was the father of Joseph P. Trego (father), who was born in Honeybrook township, Chester county, January 1, 1800. Joseph P. Trego married Mary Dunwoody, who was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, March 7, 1794, a daughter of John Dunwoody, who settled in West Nantmeal township in 1730. President Theodore Roosevelt is a direct descendant of the Dunwoody family, and it is through this connection that he derived his great ability as a statesman and soldier. Joseph P. Trego and his wife, Mary (Dunwoody) Trego, were the parents of the following children: Eli D., James G., William P. and Mary Jane, who died in early life.

During his boyhood days, William P. Trego attended the Franklin school in West Nantmeal township, known as Franklin Seminary, and after completing his education he took up farming. His tastes and inclinations, as well as a natural gift and aptitude for handling tools, led him to learn the carpentering trade, which line of industry he successfully followed for seventeen years, during seven of which he also included contracting as a portion of his work. He then purchased the farm which was formerly the property of Robert Neily, consisting of sixty-three acres of rich and fertile land located in Brandywine Manor, Chester county, Pennsylvania. For twenty-one consecutive years he served as treasurer of the school board, was the incumbent of the office of justice of the peace for sixteen years, and held several of the minor offices which were in the keeping of the townspeople. His political affiliations are with the Republican party.

Mr. Trego married Miss Elizabeth A. Grow, daughter of William and Eliza Grow, of West Nantmeal township, Chester county. They are the parents of the following named children: Mary Jane, born November 12, 1864; Laura E., born March 15, 1866; Emma K., born October 2, 1868, died September 8, 1897, was engaged for a number of years as a school teacher; Cora E., born May 19, 1871, died September 21, 1897, also followed the vocation of school teaching; Joseph P., born August 6, 1876, resides at home with his parents on the farm; and Mable G., born October 15, 1880. The family are consistent members of the Presbyterian church at Forks of Brandywine, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

HARRY J. STRICKLAND is third in the line of a family well known as successful and progressive farmers of Lower Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

William Strickland, the grandfather, was born in the township where his life was spent, was reared in the community, and educated in the schools of the neighborhood. He was known as an energetic and well-to-do farmer and among his children was Jesse A. Strickland.

This son was born on his father's farm in Lower Oxford township, January 21, 1823. He was educated in the common schools and then took up his life work on the old place. He put the energy of his best years into his calling and then retired to enjoy the fruits of a well-spent life. He was a member of a military band, organized in Oxford. He is a Republican, and has held various public offices in the township. Mr. Strickland was twice married. His first wife was

William P. Inge

Sarah A. Rutherford, of East Nottingham, Chester county, born June 6, 1831. She died October 3, 1852, having born the following children: 1. Margaret, deceased, who became the wife of John R. Lilly, and left two children; 2. Elizabeth, deceased, who married Malin Kingsley. The second wife of Jesse A. Strickland was Martha J. Dauce, born December 9, 1828, a daughter of Josiah and Martha (Booth) Dauce, the former named a farmer of Penn township. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Strickland; 1. William, born March 28, 1858, died December 12, 1860; 2. Annie B., born March 26, 1862, became the wife of Gardner King, and they have two children: Alta V. and Marjorie King; 3. Harry J., who receives special mention as the present representative of the family. Martha J. (Dauce) Strickland died August 7, 1889.

Harry J. Strickland, third child and second son of Jesse A. and Martha J. (Dauce) Strickland, his second wife, was born on the homestead in East Nottingham township, August 23, 1865. He received the education afforded by the public schools of the vicinity and the Oxford Academy. His interests and inclinations have held him to the calling of his father and grandfather, to which he brings the progressive spirit of a new generation. The religious life of the family is connected with the Methodist church. Mr. Strickland is a Republican, interested in all issues of the party, and a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Harry J. Strickland married, January 1, 1896, Frances L. Harrison Gillespie, daughter of Captain Robert and Martha (Lilly) Gillespie. Captain Gillespie is a civil magistrate of Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Strickland have two children, Eva C., born October 6, 1896, and Robert J., born September 12, 1900.

HARRISON ECKERT. Proximity, inter-marriage and intimate trade relations have for generations so closely connected the people of Lancaster and Chester counties that the populations of these two fine old Pennsylvania counties are more like one great family than separate political entities. West Fallowfield township, in Chester, seems to have been especially active in recruiting from its neighbor, and a perusal of this series of biographies will show that Lancaster county has contributed many of the most substantial citizens therein referred to. Among the number is the gentleman named above, who at present is a substantial farmer of Chester county, residing in West Fallowfield.

His father, Peter B. Eckert, was born and bred in Lancaster county, and passed his whole life within its borders in the quiet pursuit of agriculture. He was an old-fashioned Democrat of the strictly Jeffersonian school, and had little patience with any effort to depart from the principles laid down by the sage of Monticello. He married a Miss King, also of Lancaster, by whom he had nine children. Of these, Rebecca and Susan are dead, the living being: Mary, who is single; Gabriel, who married Sarah Reese, and has one child; Pamela, wife of Samuel Bissell, Hannah, wife of George Sutton; Josie, who married Isaac Shaffer and has two children; Jacob; and the subject of this sketch.

Harrison Eckert grew up on his father's farm in Lancaster county, was educated in the school at Mount Joy, and afterward traveled considerably in various parts of the country. Eventually he removed to Chester county, where he has since been engaged in farming. He owns a good tract of land in Bradford township, and has met with a fair measure of success in his farming operations since taking up his residence in Chester county. He married Emily J., daughter of Josiah B. Crossaw, of Highland township, and his children, all of whom are young and still remain at home, are named Mary, Nellie, Elwood, Charles and Chester. Mr. and Mrs. Eckert are members of the First Methodist church, and in politics, though he votes the Republican ticket, he is decidedly independent, and does not hesitate to criticise the actions of the "machine" when he thinks it wrong.

PALMER C. STRICKLAND. The present generation has little conception of the excitement, the patriotic enthusiasm and sectional hate, and, in many minds, the depressing dread, which prevailed throughout the land during the days of the Civil war. While the old were full of grave apprehension, the young caught the contagion of war which runs riot in boyish blood, and were hurried away to the field of battle with no thought but of their country. This fact is manifested in the case of Robert C. Strickland, who became the father of the above named gentleman.

Robert C. Strickland was only sixteen years old when the war came on, and without the consent of his parents he went to the front and enlisted as a drummer. He had been with his company only three weeks when his father learned of his whereabouts and brought him back home. But the boy was not to be deterred by parental objections, and at the first opportunity ran away and enlisted again. He marched with his regiment, and again and again beat the encouraging roll which held the ranks together, until the ranks were dissolved by peace. The old drum which he carried is still in the possession of the Strickland family, a precious memorial of days ago. Robert Strickland married Sarah A. Jackson, and there were born three children. Amos K. married Hannah Sharpless, who bore nine children, two of whom are deceased; William died unmarried.

Palmer C. Strickland, the third child, was reared in this county, and had the advantage of a fair education. He early began life as a clerk in a general store, but this not proving entirely to his liking, he took up the substantial pursuit of farming, which he continues at this time. His farm is in West Fallowfield township, and consists of eighty acres of good land, which his skillful methods render very productive.

He married Emma Pyle, daughter of John and Harriet Pyle, of Valley township. The children of this union were: Robert G., who is now a student in college at Wilmington, Delaware; and Norman P., who is deceased. Mr. Strickland holds the office of supervisor of his township, and has membership in the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and is an attendant of the Methodist church. His grandfather, William Jackson, was a first cousin of "Stonewall" Jackson, the famous Confederate general.

JOHN W. THORNE, a leading farmer and honored citizen of Highland township, Chester county, is a grandson of John Thorne, who was born near Morristown, New Jersey, came to Chester county about 1825, and purchased some two hundred acres of land in what is now Highland township, his homestead being situated on what is now the E. P. Moore farm. He brought with him his wife and also his family, which consisted of the following children: Joseph; Thomas, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Ann, who married James Smith. Mr. Thorne, who was a member of the Society of Friends, died at the age of seventy-five, and both he and his wife are buried in the graveyard of the Meeting House at Ercildown.

Thomas Thorne, son of John Thorne, was born about 1801, in New Jersey. He was brought up to follow agricultural pursuits, and subsequently came into possession of the homestead. He married Hannah Davis, and their children were: John W., mentioned at length hereinafter; Ann, who married Thomas Humphrey; Philena, who became the wife of David Clark; Milton; Maretha, who married Enoch Moore; Hannah, who became the wife of George Martin; and Mary, who died in infancy. Mrs. Thorne, the mother of these children, died February 2, 1856, at the age of sixty-six, and Mr. Thorne expired April 12, 1872, aged seventy-seven. Both are interred in the graveyard of the Friends' Meeting House at Ercildown, side by side with the representatives of the former generation.

John W. Thorne, son of Thomas and Hannah (Davis) Thorne, was born in 1822 on the homestead, where his boyhood was passed. He received his education in the old log school house, which at that time still remained, a relic of a more primitive period. On reaching manhood he decided to devote himself to the calling which might be termed hereditary in his family, as well as in so many other families of Chester county, that of agriculture, and, in 1847, settled on the farm which is now his home. This estate, which consists of 168 acres, bears ample testimony, in its flourishing condition, to the care which it receives from the owner, and to his abilities as a farmer. It is maintained in a high state of cultivation, and in all respects yields the most gratifying results. The political opinions of Mr. Thorne are those promulgated and upheld by the Republican party. He is a member of Friendship Methodist Episcopal church, in which he holds the office of steward.

Mr. Thorne married Ellen W., daughter of David Walton, and their children are: Edwin W., Archibald, J. Howard, Mifflin W., Florence H., Kinsie, Wilmer C., and Eva, who is the wife of Clarence Newlin. All these children, with the exception of the last named, are living at home on the farm.

JOSEPH T. REYNOLDS, a prosperous farmer and highly respected citizen of East Nottingham township, Chester county, is a great-grandson of Henry Reynolds, who received from William Penn a tract of several hundred acres of land in this, the oldest county of Pennsylvania. This inheritance Henry Reynolds deeded to his son, Jacob, by whom the land was cultivated. He married, and among the children born to him was a son, Jacob, Jr.

This son, who was born in Cecil county, Maryland, after finishing his education, devoted himself to farming. In politics he was first a Whig, and later a Republican. He married Anna Moore, of West Grove, Chester county, and they were the parents of the following children: William M., Mercy, Jacob H., Susan (1), Adrianna, Benjamin C., Joseph T., mentioned at length hereinafter, Granville, Stephen, Anna, and Susan J. (2).

Joseph T. Reynolds, son of Jacob, Jr., and Anna (Moore) Reynolds, was born June 29, 1827, in Cecil county, Maryland, where he received his education in the common schools. He adopted as his vocation the trade of a miller, which he followed until 1863. In that year he moved to Chester county, and settled in East Nottingham township, on the farm which is now his home. This estate, which consists of 175 acres, is maintained in a high state of cultivation, and has attached to it a flourishing dairy of thirty head of cows. Mr. Reynolds is a charter member of the Patrons of Husbandry in his township. His neighbors, by whom he is held in the highest regard, have elected him at different times to various local offices, among them that of school director, which position he filled for ten years, and county commissioner, which he held for three years. Politically he is a Republican. He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Reynolds married, in 1858, Rebecca M., daughter of Abner and Charlotte Pugh, the former a farmer of East Nottingham township. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds consisted of the following children: Walter P., who married Sarah Ambler, and has two children; Elmer E., who married Sophie Reynolds, and is the father of two children; William M., who married Cathy Wilson, who has since died, leaving one child. Mrs. Reynolds, the mother of these children, died in 1867, and Mr. Reynolds married, September 16, 1869, Elizabeth Pugh, his sister-in-law. By this marriage he is the father of the following children: J. Cecil, Elwood A., who married Maud Brown and had one child, who is now deceased; Mary E., and two children who died in infancy.

MARGARET AND ANNIE GIBSON. The history of the Gibson family begins almost with the history of Chester county. Away back in the olden days, when the now beautiful state of Pennsylvania was still largely a wilderness, when settlements were few and far between, when the historic doings of William Penn were still recent, and when scarcely anything was known of the vast country extending beyond the western borders, even at this early day representatives of the Gibson family were on the ground taking part in the formation of what was to prove one of the greatest commonwealths in the future American republic. The first emigrants acquired land under patents granted by Penn himself, and some of the original purchase, after the lapse of many generations, is still retained in the possession of descendants. In fact, it may be stated with historic accuracy that the largest part of what is now called West Fallowfield township once belonged to different members of the Gibson connection. Almost without exception, the men of the family were farmers, and, though leading the quiet and unobtrusive lives incident to agricultural pursuits, they were important factors in the county's development, and furnished material for the best quality of citizenship. When trouble arose, if the colony, the state or the nation was threatened, if a war for liberty was on or rebellion was afoot and needed suppressing, the Gibsons could be depended upon to furnish their full quota and pay their full share of expenses. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn from the records that when the feeble colonies were being convulsed to the very center by the terrible agony of the great Revolution, representatives of the Gibson name were not found backward in the expenditure of blood or treasure. The great-grandfather of the ladies whose names are above given, and who now so worthy represent their family in the hereditary homestead, was a gallant soldier during the mighty struggle under Washington to make good the claim that the colonies had a right to be free and independent states. Coming some farther down the line, it is ascertained that the son of the Revolutionary patriot was on hand to do his part when the United States had its second war with England, as his name is enrolled among the soldiers of 1812.

Jacob Gibson, son of the last mentioned, was a farmer in Chester county during all of his adult lifetime, and, though he made no noise and commingled little with the outside world, he neglected no duty required of him as the father of a family, a neighbor or a citizen. He married Matilda Hayes, daughter of one of his neighbors, and by her had five children, of whom three are living. David H., the eldest son and second child, died at an early age, and Matilda, who was fourth in order of birth, has also passed away. Thomas J., the third of the family, married Lydia McCamant, and is a well-to-do citizen of Chester county.

It is the special object of this sketch to speak a word or two of Misses Margaret Suzana and Annie Gibson, the eldest and youngest of their father's family, respectively. These ladies reside in Cochranville, in the old West Fallowfield township homestead of eighty acres, and it is not too much to say that they are fine samples of the self-supporting American business woman. They conduct a dairy in connection with their farm, keep fourteen cows, and any one who visits the place will easily see evidence of good house-keeping and clean business methods. Everything is kept in shipshape order, and things about the dairy look as neat and new as pins. And not only do the Misses Gibson conduct affairs on the farm with good judgment, but they are well informed as to the markets and stock interests, and know how to buy and sell to the best advantage. But, like all good women, no matter what the pressure on account of business and worldly matters, these ladies find time for much work of a religious or charitable nature, and it would be safe to say that there is not a person of their acquaintance that does not esteem them highly. They are members of the Presbyterian church at Fagg's Manor, which their parents were chiefly instrumental in founding, and every worthy person as well as every worthy cause is sure of a sympathetic hearing if appeal be made to Margaret and Annie Gibson.

EZEKIEL R. NORMAN, a well known and highly esteemed citizen of Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is descended from a family which has long been represented in the Keystone state, and have been for generations farmers and Friends. David Norman was the father of a son, Ezekiel, who settled in Wallingford one hundred years ago. He was a blacksmith, and was celebrated for his skill as an iron-worker, his services being widely sought for. He made the first screws which were used in the Philadelphia mint, and also manufactured screws to raise the Fairmount Water Works. He married Hester Van Culin, and was the father of eight children, only one of whom—Ezekiel R., mentioned at length hereinafter, is now living. The death of Mr. Norman took place May 13, 1864.

Ezekiel R. Norman, son of Ezekiel and Hester (Van Culin) Norman, was born, April 10, 1830, on the homestead where he now resides. He was educated in the local schools, and subsequently learned his father's trade, at which he worked for fifty years. In 1852 he became proprietor of the business. He shared his father's renown as a blacksmith, and also engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Mr. Norman married, October 13, 1875, Jemmima E., daughter of John H. and Sarah E. Miller and they have one son, George E. Norman, born December 9, 1877, who is a chemist.

ROBERT ALBERT HAMILL. Frequent mention is made in these biographies of different members of the Hamill family, a widely distributed social connection found both in Lancaster and Chester counties. They are chiefly farmers, and for generations representatives of the name have owned land and figured with more or less prominence in agricultural affairs. This sketch deals more particularly with Robert Albert Hamill, who is not only a citizen of West Fallowfield township, "native and to the manner born," but one of the most prosperous and popular of the township's many enterprising farmers.

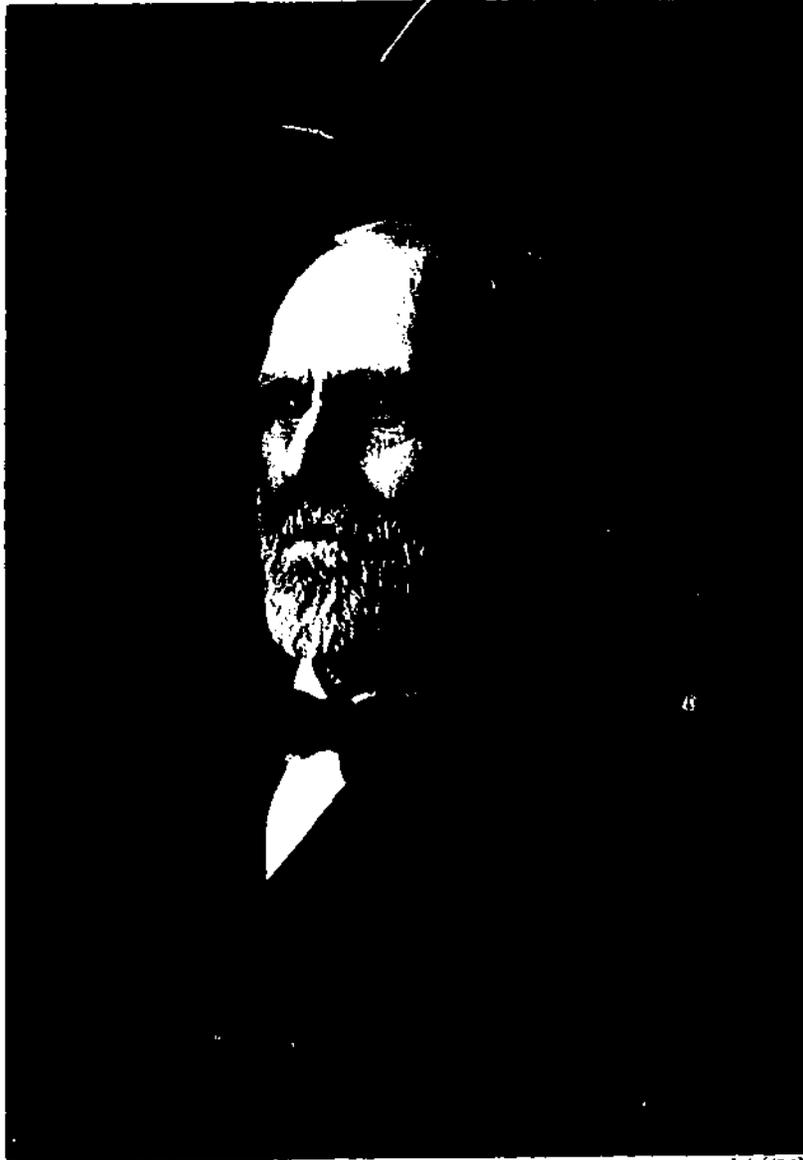

He was born in 1843, and owes his education to the schools of the township with which his interests have always been identified. He engaged in farming in early manhood, and has done well, and at present owns a valuable place in West Fallowfield, which he devotes to general agriculture, but, like many other farmers in this section, pays considerable attention to dairying. The milk from these dairies is sold in bulk to the nearby creameries for manufacture into butter, the farmer furnishing the raw material, while the creamery people do the rest. Mr. Hamill's dairy is one of the largest and best in the vicinity and the quality of his stock ranks with the "high grades."

Mr. Hamill, who is quite patriotic himself, and a citizen of a state noted for its patriotism at every dangerous conjuncture in the country's history, has never failed to answer any call made upon him to assist in efforts to advance the public welfare. He has quite a military experience. He was twice out with the State Militia in the Cumberland Valley, during the Civil war, and was on all occasions all that becomes a good soldier. After returning home from the seat of war he enlisted in the One Hundred and Eighty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, and was stationed at Philadelphia for several months, doing guard duty. At the termination of his term of enlistment he was honorably discharged, and feels a satisfaction in knowing that when the state needed him he did what he could in the cause of law and order. His politics are staunchly Republican, though he has never sought preferment from the party, the only official position held by him being that of school director. Mr. Hamill has strong religious convictions, and has long been an active worker in the Presbyterian church at Fagg's Manor, having for fifteen years been a member of its sessions. Mr. Hamill is well read and well informed, has done some traveling, and altogether is a creditable type of the intelligent farming class to whom the country in every section owes so much of its progress and abounding prosperity.

In 1866 Mr. Hamill was united in marriage with Miss Salome, daughter of Hathorn Freeland, a merchant of Lancaster county. Their rural home is a pleasant place to visit, as, aside from the attractions to be found on a well kept dairy farm, all visitors are assured of a hospitable welcome by the proprietors.

JOHN C. BROSIUS. For many years the figure of Dr. Brosius was a familiar one in the town of Gum Tree, and he will be long remembered by the present generation as a man of excellent character, fine mind, kindly disposition, and with splendid ability in his chosen pursuit. Even in a county so famed for its noble men and women as is Chester, Dr. Brosius held a unique place, and was distinguished from other men by a combination of qualities which afforded him a peculiar place among his fellows.

John Comley Brosius was ushered into the world in Upper Oxford township in the year 1827. He early showed traits of precocity while attending the public school. After this training in the elementary principles, he took a course in one of the prominent medical schools of the city of Cincinnati, where he graduated as a botanic doctor. He then returned and located in Gum Tree, where he engaged in the pursuit of his profession, and also followed farming, until his death. He was a firm believer in the tenets of the Republican party, and from his ancestors, who had been long established in this country, he derived the faith of simplicity, the keynote of the Quaker religion, which was his comfort throughout life and in death.

The Lewis Publishing Co.

F. A. Stock

Ezekiel R. Norman

The maiden name of his wife was Margaret Walton, who was the daughter of Dr. Nathan and Elizabeth Walton, residents of Highland township, Chester county. Dr. Walton was one of the enthusiastic supporters of the Whig party, and later of its Republican offspring, and was much interested in the advancement of education in the community; he passed away in 1854, and his wife, who was before her marriage Elizabeth Barnard, died in 1857. The union of Mr. Brosius and wife resulted in four children: Lewis W. married Elizabeth Acker, who became the mother of two children; Dora E. became the wife of Joseph S. Walton, and had four children; Alva C. died unmarried; and Lillian M. married Walter Townsend.

The death of Dr. Brosius occurred in 1888, and was the occasion of sincere regret throughout the community. His widow still resides on the old homestead of one hundred and twelve acres, which is well stocked with cattle, and is in an excellent location. She is a member of the Society of Friends and is a most estimable lady.

ELMER E. REYNOLDS. The pioneer ancestor of the Reynolds family, whose history has been closely interwoven with that of the states of Maryland and Pennsylvania, especially the latter, since the year 1676, was Henry Reynolds, a native of England, whose birth occurred in 1655, a son of William and Margaret (Exton) Reynolds. After a tedious passage of twenty-two weeks on the Atlantic ocean, Henry Reynolds landed in this country and settled in Burlington, New Jersey. He was married there, November 10, 1678, to Prudence Clayton, daughter of William and Prudence Clayton, of Chichester, Pennsylvania, to which place he removed shortly afterward. He received from William Penn a tract of several hundred acres of land in Chester county, and he also acquired one thousand acres in the Nottingham settlement. The children born to Henry and Prudence Reynolds were—Margaret, Mary, Francis, Prudence, Deborah, William, Henry, John, Hannah, William. Henry Reynolds died August 7, 1724, aged sixty-nine years; his widow died about the year 1728.

Henry Reynolds, son of Henry and Prudence Reynolds, was born August 16, 1693, married, in 1717, Hannah Brown, daughter of William and Catharine Brown of Nottingham, born October 31, 1701, died December 12, 1731 or 1732. He then married, March 23, 1733, Ann, widow of William Howell, and after her decease he married, April 23, 1743, Mary, widow of Jacob Haines. His death occurred December 17, 1779, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. His son, Jacob Reynolds, born September 14, 1728, married, August 10, 1751, Rebecca Day, and among the children born to them was a son named Jacob Reynolds, born November 10, 1755, married, October 19, 1785, Esther Taylor, and their son, Jacob Reynolds, born in Cecil county, Maryland, May 8, 1791, married, November 10, 1813, Anna Moore, daughter of Joseph and Mercy Moore, of West Grove, Chester county; Their children were—William M., Mercy Ann, Esther T., Jacob, Adrianna, Benjamin C., Joseph T., Granville T., Stephen John, Anna, and Susan Jane Reynolds.

Joseph T. Reynolds, son of Jacob and Anna (Moore) Reynolds, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, June 29, 1827. He attended the common schools in the neighborhood of his home, and later learned the trade of miller, which he followed until 1863, when he settled in East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and purchased his farm of one hundred and seventy-five acres of rich and productive land with a flourishing dairy of thirty head of cows. He made many valuable improvements to his property, and erected a fine residence which was called "Peace and Plenty." He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, a Republican in politics, and has repeatedly served in township offices and on the school board, being a director for ten consecutive years. Mr. Reynolds was twice married. His first wife was Rebecca Pugh, whom he married April 22, 1858, and his second wife was Elizabeth Pugh, whom he married September 16, 1869. They were sisters, and daughters of Abner and Charlotte (Michener) Pugh, both descendants of old and prominent Chester county families. By his first marriage there were three children—Walter P., Elmer E., and William M.; and by his second marriage three children—Joseph Cecil, Elwood Abner, and Mary E. Reynolds.

Elmer E. Reynolds, second son of Joseph T. and Rebecca Reynolds, was born at the old home in Cecil county, Maryland, April 15, 1860. His education was received in the schools of Chester county, Pennsylvania, whither his parents removed when he was a child. Since the completion of his studies up to the present time (1903), he has been engaged in agricultural pursuits at his present home, which is situated in East Nottingham township, near the town of Oxford. He is a member of the Society of Friends, that being the religious belief of his ancestors, and his political affiliations are with the Republican party.

In 1888 Mr. Reynolds married Sophie Reynolds, daughter of the late Barclay Reynolds, who was a prosperous farmer of Cecil county, Maryland, and his wife, Amanda (Carter) Reynolds. Their children are: Melvin, born September 8, 1889; and Rebecca, born September 3, 1900.

EDWIN WALTON, a life long farmer and citizen of Chester county, is descended from a family which was planted in America by four brothers, Nathaniel, Daniel, William and Benjamin, who in 1682 emigrated from England in the ship "William Penn" and settled in what is now Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

Benjamin Walton, the youngest of these four brothers, married Abigail Gilbert, and they were the parents of the following children: Benjamin, born September 5, 1760; Nathan, mentioned at length hereinafter; Rebecca, born September 26, 1765; Joseph, born March, 1768; Sarah, born October 10, 1770, married Isaac Hays; Rachel, born August 8, 1773; and Elizabeth, born October 10, 1776.

Nathan Walton, son of Benjamin and Abigail Walton, was born in February, 1763, and settled in what is now Highland township, near the town of Gum Tree, where he took up a tract of land and engaged in farming. Like his ancestors, he was a member of the Society of Friends. He married Ann Roberts, of Montgomery county, and their children were: Jonathan, Lewis, mentioned at length hereinafter; William, Jesse, Nathan, Mary, who married Isaac Walton, and Abner. Mr. Walton, the father of this family, died 9 mo., 13, 1861; his wife expired 1 mo., 15, 1870, and both are interred in the graveyard of the Friends' Meeting House at Ercildoun.

Lewis Walton, second son of Nathan and Ann (Roberts) Walton, was born in 1789, on his father's farm at Gum Tree. He was bred to agricultural pursuits, and when a young man settled on the farm now owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Walton, in Highland township. He married Elizabeth, daughter of James and Lydia Neal, and the following children were born to them; Ann E., who married William Reid, and is now deceased; William, who married Elizabeth Palmer; Lewis, who died in infancy; Edwin, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Emaline, who is unmarried, and lives at Ercildoun, East Fallowfield township. Mr. Walton died September 13, 1861, and his widow survived until January 15, 1870.

Edwin Walton, son of Lewis and Elizabeth (Neal) Walton, was born December 6, 1830, on the homestead. His education was received in the common schools and at Ercildoun Academy. In accordance with his ancestral traditions he was bred a farmer, and in 1858 settled on the estate which is now his home. All his life he has been engaged in farming, the acres of which he is the owner having been cultivated by him according to the best methods, and with the most gratifying results. His devotion to agriculture has not, however, prevented him from actively participating in all the duties of a citizen. In him the cause of education has found a zealous supporter and a kind friend, a proof of his devotion being found in the fact that for thirty-three years he has served on the school board of his township. He affiliates with the Republican party, but limits his active share in politics to the exercise of his right of franchise.

Mr. Walton married Mary D., daughter of Jacob and Sarah Clayton. They are the parents of three daughters and two sons: Elizabeth W., who is the wife of George W. Moore, county superintendent for Chester county; Lewis E., who married Gertrude W. Kent, and is engaged in the lumber business in Philadelphia; Frances E., who married Albert Reynolds, and is now deceased; E. Clayton, who married Mary E. Pownall, and is engaged in the lumber business with his brother in Philadelphia; and Mabel, who is the wife of John Kendig. It is worthy of note that all the descendants of Benjamin Walton, the founder of the family, are members of the Society of Friends.

JAMES ABNER JACKSON. Chester county has many worthy men within her borders, men who have advanced the welfare of the county along all lines, who have made themselves successful, and have thus added to the general prosperity. In the limited space of this work there is little opportunity to furnish to the reader those countless details which are the charm of biography; but the real results of life may be set forth, and among those who are thus sketched is the family of James Abner Jackson, whose sons are well known in West Fallowfield township and are exemplary citizens.

James Abner was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, received his education in the public schools there, and on the completion of his studies learned the trade of a cooper, but followed it only a few years. He was then induced to move to Chester county, where he began tilling the soil in West Fallowfield township. His political belief was that of the Democratic party, and he was one who made his influence felt in many matters of local concern. His death occurred when he was fifty-seven years old. He married Margaret, a daughter of Alexander

Horner Jackson

Stewart, who was a weaver of Lancaster county. Ann^e the only daughter of the marriage, married James Bower, and has two children; Harry became the husband of Helen Null, but she is now deceased.

The sons, William and Hanford, make their home with their mother on the old farm, having been her chief comfort since her husband's death. They were both educated in the schools of the township and then took up the trade of painters. They have become very skilled workmen, and their services are in great demand throughout the country. They support the candidates of the Democratic party, and are members of the Methodist church. They are men of much promise, and their well ordered lives and earnest efforts give them a respected position in society.

Hanford Jackson married Mary B. Carrigan, daughter of Samuel Carrigan of Colerain township, Lancaster county. Mrs. Jackson, the mother, died September 18, 1903.

ELWOOD ABNER REYNOLDS. The Reynolds family, well and favorably known throughout Chester county, Pennsylvania, where many of their members have been prominently and actively identified with various enterprises, are lineal descendants of William Reynolds, a native of England, who married Margaret Exton, and they became the parents of three sons—John, born in 1650, Francis, born in 1652, and Henry, born in 1655.

Henry Reynolds, youngest son of William and Margaret Reynolds, set sail for America in 1676, and after a voyage of twenty-two weeks arrived in this country and settled in Burlington, New Jersey. Here he was united in marriage, November 10, 1678, to Prudence Clayton, daughter of William and Prudence Clayton, of Chichester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, to which place he removed and there resided until his death, August 7, 1724, at the age of sixty-nine years. He was a large land owner in the Nottingham settlement, and at the time of his death bequeathed to his sons Henry and William one thousand acres, while to his son Francis he gave the homestead of two hundred and ninety acres, and to his son John two hundred and ten acres.

Henry Reynolds, son of Henry and Prudence Reynolds, was born August 16, 1693; married, in 1717, Hannah Brown, daughter of William and Catherine Brown, of Nottingham, born October 31, 1701, died December 12, 1731-2. Mr. Reynolds then married, March 23, 1733, Ann, widow of William Howell, and April 23, 1743, married Mary, widow of Jacob Haines. He died December 17, 1779, aged eighty-six years.

Jacob Reynolds, son of Henry and Hannah Reynolds, was born September 14, 1728; married, August 10, 1751, Rebecca Day, and among the children born to them was a son, Jacob Reynolds. Jacob Reynolds, Sr., died February 6, 1799.

Jacob Reynolds, son of Jacob and Rebecca Reynolds, was born November 10, 1755; married, October 19, 1785, Esther Taylor, and they reared a family of children, among whom was a son, who was also named Jacob.

Jacob Reynolds, son of Jacob and Esther Reynolds, was born May 8, 1791, in Cecil county, Maryland, and after completing his education devoted his attention to farming. On November 10, 1813, Mr. Reynolds married Anna, daughter of Joseph and Mercy Moore of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children were—William M., Mercy Ann, Esther T., Jacob, Adrianna, Benjamin C., Joseph T., Granville T., Stephen John, Anna, and Susan Jane Reynolds.

Joseph T. Reynolds, son of Jacob and Anna Reynolds, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, June 29, 1827, and was educated in the common schools of the neighborhood. His first occupation was that of a miller, which he successfully pursued up to the year 1863, when he removed to East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He purchased a tract of land which consisted of one hundred and seventy-five acres, which he has since cultivated and improved to a high state of perfection, and he also operates a dairy of thirty head of cows. He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and a charter member of the Patrons of Husbandry. Since attaining his majority he has given strong support to the Republican party, was a member of the county committee for several years; and also filled several township offices, being a school director for ten consecutive years.

In 1858, Joseph T. Reynolds married Rebecca M. Pugh, daughter of Abner and Charlotte Pugh, and they were the parents of three children—Walter P., who married Sarah Ambler and has two children; Elmer E., who married Sophie Reynolds, and two children have been born of this union; William M., who married Cathy Wilson, who has since died, leaving one child. Mrs. Reynolds, mother of these children, died in 1867, and Mr. Reynolds married for his second wife, Elizabeth Pugh, a sister of his first wife. Five children were the issue of this union, two of whom died in infancy—the surviving members of the family are—J. Cecil; Elwood Abner, and Mary E. Reynolds.

Elwood A. Reynolds, son of Joseph T. and Elizabeth Reynolds, was born in East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in the old homestead, which was named "Peace and Plenty." He obtained his preliminary education at the Oxford Friends' School, and George School, and this was supplemented by attendance at the famous Swarthmore College, from which institution he was graduated. He then returned to the old home farm, where he conducted extensive operations until 1901, when he purchased his present farm in East Nottingham township, which consists of eighty-seven acres of rich and arable land. Mr. Reynolds is a man of integrity and honor, who has exerted an influence for good in the community. He is a faithful attendant at the meetings of the Society of Friends, and is a Republican in politics.

Mr. Reynolds was united in marriage, March 6, 1901, to Maud H. Brown, born in 1880, a daughter of Amos and Mary (Sylvanus) Brown, the former named a prosperous farmer of East Nottingham township, Chester county. One child was born of this union, Joseph T., whose birth and death occurred in the year 1902.

WALTER P. REYNOLDS, an esteemed farmer and worthy citizen of East Nottingham township, Chester county, traces his descent from Henry Reynolds, who was one of the earliest landowners in Chester county, having a grant from William Penn of several hundred acres. This land was deeded by Henry Reynolds to his son Jacob, who industriously cultivated his paternal acres. He married and became the father of a family.

Jacob Reynolds, Jr., son of Jacob Sr., was born in Cecil county, Maryland, and after finishing his education adopted the calling of a farmer. Politically he was a Whig, but in the latter part of his life became a Republican. He married Anna Moore, of West Grove, Chester county, and the following children were born to them: William M., Mercy, Jacob H., Adrianna, Susan (1), Benjamin C., Joseph T., mentioned at length hereinafter; Granville, Stephen, Anna, and Susan J. (2).

Joseph T. Reynolds, son of Jacob, Jr., and Anna (Moore) Reynolds was born June 29, 1827, in Cecil county, Maryland, where he received his education in the common schools. He learned the miller's trade, which he followed until 1863, when he moved to Chester county, and settled on the farm which is now his home, in East Nottingham township. He is the owner of one hundred and seventy-five acres of land, which he cultivates according to the latest and most improved methods, and in connection with which he conducts a fine dairy of thirty head of cows. Mr. Reynolds is a charter member of the Patrons of Husbandry in his township. He possesses in a high degree the esteem and confidence of his neighbors, by whom he has been chosen at different times to fill various township offices, among them that of school director, a position which he held for ten years. He is a Republican in politics, and was elected one term as county commissioner. He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends. He married, in 1858, Rebecca M., daughter of Abner and Charlotte Pugh, the former a farmer of East Nottingham township. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds were the parents of the following children: Walter P., mentioned at length hereinafter; Elmer E., who married Sophie Reynolds, and is the father of two children; William M., who married Cathy Wilson, who has since died, leaving one child. Mrs. Reynolds, the mother of these children, died in 1867, and Mr. Reynolds married, September 16, 1869, Elizabeth Pugh, his sister-in-law. By this marriage he is the father of the following children: J. Cecil; Elwood A., who married Maud Brown, died January 13, 1904, and to whom was born a child, A. Elwood Reynolds; Mary E.; and two children who died in infancy.

Walter P. Reynolds, son of Joseph T. and Rebecca M. (Pugh) Reynolds, was born in 1859, in East Nottingham township, Chester county, where he received his primary education in the public schools, afterward attending the West Chester State Normal School. Deciding to take for his life-work the calling which might be said to be hereditary in his family—that of agriculture—he began his career as a farmer on the homestead, where he remained for some time, aiding in the care and management of the estate, and laying up stores of practical experience. At a later period he purchased a farm in his native township, which he conducts with a skill and thoroughness which have earned for him a high rank among the farmers of the neighborhood. In the cause of education Mr. Reynolds has always taken a deep interest, which he has manifested in the most convincing manner by consenting to hold for twelve years the office of school director. His political principles are those of an earnest Republican. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Reynolds married, in 1882, Sarah E., born in 1856, daughter of J. P. and Elizabeth Ambler. The former is a farmer of Lancaster county, and the latter is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds are the parents of two daughters: Laura M., who was born in 1883; and Ethel E., who was born in 1887.

V. GILPIN ROBINSON. Prominent among the eminent and leading members of the legal profession in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, is V. Gilpin Robinson, whose offices are located in the Stephen Girard Building, and who is in possession of an extensive and influential clientage in addition to his lucrative practice in the Delaware county courts and throughout the entire county. He was born in Wilmington, Delaware, August 21, 1851, a representative of an old and distinguished English lineage.

R. Silpin Robinson

Joseph Robinson, (grandfather) was a native of Delaware. He was well known in business circles as a merchant and importer, being the owner and operator of a line of packets plying between the cities of Wilmington, Delaware, and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, which were known as Robinson's Packets. Mr. Robinson and his wife were the parents of the following named children: Naomi Phillips (Gilpin), Ann Jefferis, Hannah, Joseph, James, George W., John F., Jacob F. and Mary Robinson Lary. Joseph Robinson, father of these children, died in the year 1818.

Jacob F. Robinson (father) was a native of Wilmington, Delaware, and in that vicinity he was reared, acquired a good English education, and spent his young manhood days. Later he located in Indiana, from there removed to Paris, Bourbon county, Kentucky, removing from thence to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, at the commencement of the war of the rebellion, where he resided for a period of time and finally settled in Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Robinson and his wife, Rebecca Ellen (Little) Robinson, a native of York, Pennsylvania, were the parents of five children: V. Gilpin, mentioned hereinafter; Ida; Edward, deceased; Lillian, and Anna Robinson.

The boyhood and early youth of V. Gilpin Robinson was spent in the various localities where his parents resided, and during that period he gained a thorough knowledge of the fundamental principles of education which qualified him for an active and useful career. His father died when he was sixteen years of age, and he then accepted a position as clerk in the office of O. F. Bullard, prothonotary at Media, Pennsylvania, where he remained for two years. At the age of eighteen years he took up the study of law in the office of Edward A. Price, Esq., and after passing a creditable examination was admitted to the Delaware county bar upon attaining his majority. The first year he remained with his preceptor at Media, then engaged in practice on his own account until 1896, when he formed a partnership with Horace P. Green, and for a number of years they conducted business under the firm name of Robinson & Green. After dissolving this business relation, Mr. Robinson became a member of the firm known as Rich, Robinson & Boyer, of Philadelphia, with offices at Sixth and Chestnut streets, but since the dissolution of this connection he has occupied offices in the Girard Building and the Stephen Girard Building, his present commodious suite of offices being in the latter named building. During his career he has been connected with a large number of important cases in Delaware county as well as in the city of Philadelphia. He has gained an enviable reputation as a trial lawyer, and has been an important figure in many hotly contested will cases, the greater part of which he has conducted successfully for his clients. The most notable one was the Robinson will case, which was carried through the courts of the county by Mr. Robinson and Mr. H. P. Green of Media, and was one of the greatest will contests ever fought in the courts of Pennsylvania. It was the will of Letitia Robinson, mother of John B. Robinson and the trial was begun on October 9, 1901, and the verdict was rendered on November 16. In addition to the duties of his legal practice, Mr. Robinson was one of the organizers and served as a director and counsel for the Media Title and Trust Company.

In his twenty-fourth year, Mr. Robinson was elected to the office of district attorney of Delaware county on the Republican ticket, and the fact of his being the youngest candidate ever elected to that responsible office in the county, and the first to be elected for a second term, is sufficient proof of the estimation in which he was held by his fellow-citizens. He was a candidate for the nomination to the office of judge, but was defeated by Judge Clayton. He took an active part in politics during his residence in Media, serving in the capacity of secretary of the Delaware County Republican committee. He is an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, being affiliated with George W. Bartram Lodge, No. 298; Media Chapter, No. 234, Royal Arch Masons, and has served as past high priest, and is a member of the Philadelphia Consistory. He also holds membership in the Art Club, the Young Men's Republican Club, the Historical Society, the Geographical Society and other organizations. For a period of ten years he was an officer in the National Guard of Pennsylvania, and at the time of his resignation from the latter named body was holding the position of captain and aide-de-camp upon the staff of General John W. Schall. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, was for many years a member of the vestry of Christ church in Media, and has been for several years past a member of the vestry of St. James church, at Twenty-second and Walnut streets, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Mr. Robinson has spent a portion of each year in travel through the different sections of the United States, and also in Europe, China, Japan and other countries, his object being to view historic places and to study the habits and customs of the people.

Mr. Robinson married, November 17, 1874,

Sallie M. Baker, a daughter of J. Mitchell Baker, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a sister of Captain Jesse M. Baker, who studied law with Mr. Robinson, and who was formerly district attorney of Delaware county, a member of the state legislature, and an officer in the United States army with the rank of captain. Mrs. Robinson died in 1883. On December 5, 1894, Mr. Robinson married A. May Whartenby, a daughter of Dr. John Whartenby, a well known physician of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Her death occurred on February 8, 1902. No children were born of either marriage.

ROBERT F. WILSON. The Wilson family, of which Robert F. Wilson, of East Nottingham township, Chester county, is a member in the present generation, is of Scotch-Irish origin. The American branch was planted in colonial days, and the original homestead is now in possession of descendants of the original emigrant. During the Revolutionary period, various members of the family performed military service, and Mathew Wilson bore a commission as captain and later as paymaster. He married Jennie Fulton of East Nottingham township.

Robert Wilson, son of Mathew and Jennie (Fulton) Wilson, was born on the family homestead in East Nottingham township, where he died in 1862. He was a farmer, and he also operated a saw mill. By his marriage with Lydia, a daughter of Abner Wilson, of New Garden township, he became the father of five children—Matthew J., Phœbe E., who died unmarried; Tamer T., who became the wife of W. K. Warden; Robert F., who died young; Robert F. (2) who is to be further referred to; and John D. Wilson.

Robert F. Wilson (2) was the fifth child and second son of Robert and Lydia (Wilson) Wilson, and was named for the brother who was born and died before him, and his birth occurred on the family homestead in 1839. He was afforded an excellent education, beginning his studies in the schools at Oxford, and completing them at Westminster College, near Pittsburg. After leaving college he returned to the parental farm, upon which he has ever since continued to reside, and which he maintains in a highly cultivated condition, and continually adding to its beauty and productiveness. His business abilities and integrity have found recognition in his election to various important positions, including those of school director and auditor, in which he has served the community with high capability. During the Civil war he was enrolled with the forces organized to protect the state against the threatened rebel invasions. In politics he affiliates with the Democratic party.

Mr. Wilson was married, in 1870, to Miss Agnes E. Thomson, who was born in 1838, a daughter of Alexander and Margaret (Kerr) Thomson, of the same township with himself. Of his marriage were born the following children: Lydia M., who died young; Robert T. and William T. Wilson, both of whom are in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, holding office positions.

JOHN CARL HILBERT, of Lansdowne, Pennsylvania, was born in Buffalo, New York, December 13, 1861, and is a son of John F. and Mary A. Hilbert, in whose family were four children: William J., a resident of Darby; John Carl, of this review, who wedded Mary A. Burbank, of Westchesterfield, Massachusetts, and has a daughter, Esther A., who was born in Lansdowne, May 14, 1888; Mary, who is the wife of Fred A. Binderwald, of Darby; and Minnie, who is the wife of Christ Kropelin, and has three children: Christ, John and Bertha.

John Carl Hilbert is indebted to the public school system of his native city for the educational privileges which he enjoyed in his youth. After leaving school he secured a situation as a salesman in a dry goods store of Buffalo, and remained there until about 1880, when he decided to learn telegraphy. Accordingly, he went to Philadelphia and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for that purpose. At first he was sent to the station at Morton as a clerk in the office, and there he remained for about three months, after which he was transferred to West Chester, where he spent two years as freight clerk and operator. On the expiration of that period he was given a position at Burmont, having sole charge of the station there until 1888, when he was transferred to Lansdowne where he has since remained. On coming here he took entire charge of all of the railroad business, both freight and passenger, and also became agent for the Adams Express Company and operator for the Western Union Telegraph Company. Through his efforts and business ability he has increased the receipts of the office to three hundred per cent. and has developed the office from a fourth class flag station to a first class office, where tickets can be purchased to all points in the world, and both freight and express matter can be dispatched to any point. From 1889 until 1895 Mr. Hilbert likewise served as postmaster, discharging the duties of that office in addition to his other work, but at the time of President Cleveland's second election he retired from the position.

Mr. Hilbert is quite prominent in local political affairs, and is an active and valued member of the Republican Club of Lansdowne. He is now serving as the real estate assessor of the borough, having been elected in 1901 for a term of three years, and he has also been auditor for six years. In the discharge of his official duties he is ever found to be prompt and capable, and it is with marked interest that he watches the advancement and progress of his locality, co-operating in all measures for the general good. He enjoys to the fullest extent the confidence of the railroad, express and telegraph companies, and owing to his efforts has gained a gratifying increase of business at this point for the corporations.

WILLIAM H. WILSON, a well known and highly respected citizen of Lower Oxford township, who has been actively engaged in various pursuits for more than half a century, is a son of Peter and Mary (Churchman) Wilson, and was born October 24, 1832, in the township of Pennsbury, Chester county, Pennsylvania, this vicinity being the old battle ground during the Revolutionary period.

Ezekial Wilson, grandfather of William H. Wilson, resided at Doe Run, West Marlboro township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, from 1798 to 1802. His boyhood days were spent in acquiring a common school education and assisting with the work upon the paternal estate, and later he learned the milling trade. He married and reared a family of children, among whom was a son, Peter Wilson.

Peter Wilson, father of William H. Wilson, was born in 1792. He attended the common schools in the vicinity of Doe Run, Chester county, and being of a studious and attentive temperament he obtained a practical education. His first occupation was at storekeeping at Concordville, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and subsequently he became the proprietor of a general store at Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, which was devoted to a general line of merchandise. All his business transactions were conducted in an honorable and straightforward manner, and therefore he obtained a full share of the patronage of the town. Mr. Wilson married Mary Churchman, a native of Harford county, Maryland, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Rebecca, died in early life; 2. Edward, died in early life; 3. James, who married Louisa Drake, and six children were the issue of this union; 4. John, deceased, who was survived by his wife, Catherine (Cheyney) Wilson; 5. William H., mentioned at length hereinafter; 6. Margaret, wife of Jackson Watson; 7. Anna, deceased, was the wife of Benjamin Wood; 8. Alfred, died in early life.

William H. Wilson, son of Peter and Mary Wilson, received his educational advantages in the celebrated Jonathan Gause School, at Greenwood Dell, Chester county, at Unionville, Chester county, under Milton Durnall, and at Jordan Bank Academy under Dr. Evan Pugh. In early life he applied himself to thoroughly master the trade of carpenter, and after completing his apprenticeship, in 1853, he located in Chicago, Illinois, and secured employment at his trade. After a residence of one year in that great western metropolis, he returned to his old home in Pennsbury township, Chester county, and engaged in agricultural pursuits for two years. In 1856 he settled in the state of Kansas, and during that and the following year was an active participant in the border war, which was a conflict between the pro-slavery party from Missouri and the free settlers of Kansas. In this agitation John Brown, born at Torrington, Connecticut, in 1800, a descendant of one of the "Mayflower" emigrants, took an active part, and one of his sons was killed in the fracas. Mr. Wilson has in his possession a number of relics and gifts which were given to him by John Brown. Mr. Wilson served as a delegate in the first state convention which convened at Topeka, Kansas, this being the one that framed the free state constitution. In 1858 he returned to Chester county and settled in his native township, Pennsbury. In 1868 he removed to Doe Run, Chester county, where he resided until 1883, and then located in Iowa, where he resided eleven years, and in 1894 he again came east and settled upon his present home. He is a member of the Society of Friends, in which organization he takes a keen and active interest, and his political affiliations are with the Republican party.

On May 16, 1861, occurred the marriage of William H. Wilson and Massey W. Given, who was born March 14, 1838, a daughter of William and Lydia (Lamborn) Given, the former named being a farmer of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Francisca H., Sarah R. and Albert C. Wilson.

JACOB H. WOLF, of Lower Oxford township, Chester county, highly esteemed both as farmer and citizen, is a grandson of George Wolf, a native of Montgomery county, who after receiving his education in the common schools became a farmer. He married and was the father of several children.

Nathan Wolf, son of George Wolf, was born April 10, 1819, on the homestead in Montgomery county, and was educated in his native township. For some time he assisted in the labors of the home farm, and then learned the plasterer's trade, which he followed for the remainder of his life. During the Civil war he served in the Union army as a private. He stood high in the esteem of his neighbors, by whom he was elected to various township offices. Politically he affiliated with the Republicans, giving his earnest support to their measures and doctrines. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Wolf married Sarah Cole, daughter of Jacob Cole, a farmer of Montgomery county, and their children were: William, who is unmarried; Ella, who is now deceased; two children who died in infancy; and Jacob H., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mrs. Wolf died in June, 1883, and her husband passed away March 7, 1903.

Jacob H. Wolf, son of Nathan and Sarah (Cole) Wolf, was born September 4, 1854, on the home farm in Evansburg, Montgomery county, where he received his education in the common schools. He then obtained employment as fireman with the North Pennsylvania Railroad Company, but after a time moved to Philadelphia, where he was the owner of a milk route. In 1884 he removed to Lower Oxford township, Chester county, where he purchased two hundred and forty-two acres of land which formed a part of the Hayes estate. On this land he has since made his home, devoting himself to its cultivation with energy and skill. In politics he is a Republican. He and his family attend the Baptist church.

Mr. Wolf married December 13, 1877, Sarah A., born April 14, 1855, daughter of Michael and Phoebe (Smith) Walker, the former a farmer of Montgomery county. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wolf: Sarah A., born April 14, 1879, and died March 22, 1881; Grace, born September 1, 1880, she married Harry H. McHenry, and has one child, Sarah S. McHenry; Nathan H., born April 15, 1884; Thomas M., born October 16, 1886; Willis, born March 2, 1891; Jacob Earl, born October 6, 1895; Helen V., born December 3, 1898.

—♦♦♦—
WILLIAM ARMSTRONG. The one government institution in which all men feel they have some interest and almost a share, is the postoffice, of all the products of paternalism in government the most beneficial and widespread of its influence for the progress of humanity. And as it is that department of the government which is nearest to the people, so it is the one most widely regulated, and whose servants have the highest general efficiency. In the village of Sadsburyville, Chester county, the postoffice is the most important public place, and the genial postmaster, William Armstrong, is therefore a man of prominence, not only because of the duties which he performs so satisfactorily, but also because he has made an enviable record as a man of business and public affairs in general.

His father, Samuel, was a native of Sadsbury township, and was a leading member of the agricultural class of the county. For many years he had been an advocate of Republican principles, but later became a Democrat. He married Susan Weidner, of Brandywine township, Chester county, and they had the following children: John, who died in youth; Susan J., who married Thomas Hoffman; Margaret, unmarried, and lives in Sadsburyville; Annie, the wife of E. F. Yohn; Ellen, who became the wife of James Clarke and had two children, S. Armstrong and Mable Clarke.

William Armstrong of the same family, was born in Sadsbury township, in the year 1832, and after a course of training in the public schools began life by learning the trade of carpenter. He followed this only a short time, and then engaged in the grocery business, of which he made a considerable success. He had always been prominent in the political work of the Democratic party, and in the year 1896 as a reward for his faithful services his friends selected him for the position of postmaster, and his appointment was soon afterward received. Mr. Armstrong has never married. He is a very popular citizen, is connected with the Odd Fellows lodge, and his church membership is with the Presbyterians.

—♦♦♦—
DR. JOHN A. MORRISON, of Cochranville, is one of the oldest and most venerable residents of Chester county, Pennsylvania. One could not enumerate the many sufferers who have been relieved by his skillful touch or by his wise prescriptions, and during the time that he was engaged in regular practice an entire generation came and went, many of whom were under his care from youth up, and from the earliest period in their memory he was a man of mature years. He not only made a name in his profession, but also found time to devote to public affairs, and over fifty years ago was honored by being chosen to represent the people in Congress. There is exceeding interest attached to the record of such a life, and it would be a matter of pleasure if we could trace his career from childhood to the present, showing the influences which ever turn men this way or that, and the successive acts by which he reached the culmination of his endeavors, but space forbids such an extended account, and a bare outline must suffice.

He claims Lancaster county as the place of his birth, and it was nearly ninety years ago, in 1814, that he came into the world. Although a native of the neighboring county, he has lived in Chester county since boyhood, and was educated in the schools of Sadsbury township. After making up his mind that he would be a physician, he began the study of medicine with Dr. Dilworth, a well known practitioner of East Fallowfield township, and then completed his course at the Jefferson Medical College, graduating in 1837. He was twenty-three years old when he came to Cochranville in 1837, and sought the confidence of the people in him as a doctor of medicine, and his subsequent record shows that the trust was not misplaced. He also opened a drug store in this place, and this is now conducted by Dr. J. B. Leamen. After many years of devotion to business he retired, but still is attentive to his affairs, and his mind is brighter than that of many younger men. He was one of the first stockholders of the Parkesburg National Bank, was appointed a member of the board of directors, and on January 12, 1904, was re-elected to fill the same position. In his younger days he was a member of the Whig party, but now is one of the faithful Democrats in the county. In 1850 he was elected to the Thirty-second Congress from the Seventh district. This was during the stirring and factional ante-bellum days, and he took an active part in what was known as the "Peace" Congress. He is a zealous member of the Presbyterian church at Faggs Manor, and is affiliated with the Masonic order. His long and useful life has been such as to commend him to the confidence and respect of the entire community, his advice in many matters of importance is highly prized, and he is still almost an oracle in the neighborhood where he has resided during his entire life time.

Dr. Morrison married Miss Martha Clingman, a daughter of William Clingman, who was a farmer of Chester county. Their children were: William, who married Miss Cordelia Walker, and she bore him three children; Thomas M., who was killed while serving his country in the war of the rebellion; and George B., who is now deceased.

EDWIN A. PUGH. The Pugh family, of which Edwin A. Pugh, a prominent business man of East Nottingham, Chester county, is a representative, is supposed to be of Welsh extraction and their history is closely interwoven with that of the early days of that portion of Chester county, Pennsylvania, in which East Nottingham is located. The progenitor of the American branch of the family was John Pugh, and he and his wife, Jane Pugh, were the parents of the following named children: Mary, William, John, Sarah and John Pugh. John Pugh, Sr., took an active interest in the various enterprises of East Nottingham, where he resided up to the time of his death, which occurred April 24, 1760.

William Pugh (2), eldest son of John (1) and Jane Pugh, was united in marriage three times. His first wife was Mary Brown, daughter of Messer and Jane Brown, whom he married February 8, 1742; his second wife was Sarah Chandler, daughter of Jacob Chandler, whom he married March 13, 1755; his third wife was Patience Casner. His children were: Jean, Dinah, John, Jesse, Mary and William Pugh.

John Pugh (3), second son of William (2) and Mary (Brown) Pugh, was born June 9, 1747, married May 9, 1771, Rachel Barrett, daughter of Thomas and Hannah Barrett, of East Nottingham, Chester county. Their children were: Jesse, Thomas, William, John, Mary, Hannah, Ellis and David Pugh.

Jesse Pugh (4), eldest son of John (3) and Rachel Pugh, was born March 1, 1772, on the old homestead in East Nottingham, Chester county, where he followed farming throughout his active career. He married Elizabeth Hudson, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Hudson, of East Nottingham, the ceremony being performed March 19, 1795. Their children were: Rachel, Lewis, Amos, Rachel, Adrianna, Reece, Evan, Abner, Elizabeth and Mary W. Pugh. The father of these children died October 16, 1847; his wife died July 18, 1825.

Abner Pugh (5), fifth son of Jesse (4) and Elizabeth Pugh, was born on the old home farm in East Nottingham, Chester county. He obtained the education afforded by the common schools of that day, and his active career was devoted to farming and the burning of lime and brick. He erected the old homestead which is still standing at the present time (1903). He was noted for his excellent judgment, industry and uprightness. Among the children born to him was a son, William Pugh.

William Pugh (6), son of Abner Pugh (5), was a native of East Nottingham, Chester county, having been born in 1845. He was educated in the common schools and Hopewell Academy, and after laying aside his school books he engaged in farming and dairying at the old homestead up to 1884. He then embarked in the creamery business with his son, Harold B. Pugh, and they conducted the same up to the year 1888. He then retired from active pursuits, and spent his latter years in Oxford, Pennsylvania. He was a member of the Society of Friends, a Republican in politics, and was the incumbent of several minor township offices. He married Mary Brown, who was born and reared in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Elisha and Rachel Brown, the former named being a farmer of Goshen township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Harold, who married Clara L. Kirk, and two children have been born to them; Edwin A., mentioned at length in the following paragraph; Charles E., who married Evalene S. Caley, daughter of William R. Caley, of Philadelphia, and they are the parents of one child, Harold Pugh. Charles E. Pugh is a farmer in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. William Pugh, father of these children, died in 1891, and his wife died in 1883.

Edwin A. Pugh (7), son of William (6) and Mary Pugh, was born on the ancestral farm in East Nottingham, Chester county, June 14, 1866. He acquired an excellent English education in the schools of Media, Oxford, and the West Chester State Normal School, and since the completion of his studies he has engaged in agricultural pursuits and the management of several extensive creameries which are located in East Nottingham, Oxford, Hickory Hill, and New London, Pennsylvania, and Cecil county, Maryland. He is a man of good business tact and judgment, is one of the leading business men in East Nottingham township, and has won an enviable reputation in the commercial circles of his native county. He holds a birthright membership in the Society of Friends, and is prominently identified with the Republican party. He is a member of the Order of Heptasophis and also a member of the National Dairy Union.

In 1891 Mr. Pugh married Clara Jenkins, daughter of Evan and Sophia (McCullough) Jenkins, residents of Cecil county, Maryland. Mr. Jenkins was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and his wife was born and reared in Cecil county, Maryland. Three children were born of this union: Mary, Evan and Evelyn Pugh.

FRANCIS X. JONES was born in the city of Philadelphia, in the year 1855, and for many years has been a prominent representative of mercantile interests in this portion of the country. Twenty years ago he accepted a position with the firm of Loeb & Lipper, manufacturers of furs and dress trimmings of New York, Philadelphia and Paris, and has since represented this house. His long connection therewith indicates his business ability and shows the confidence reposed in him by the firm which he represents. Through his business relations he has formed a wide acquaintance and wherever he goes he makes friends.

In Philadelphia, Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Miss Mary T. Clash, a daughter of Garrettson and Elizabeth Clash. She was born in 1855, and her people were very early settlers of Maryland, establishing a home there during the colonial epoch of our country's history. In religious faith they were connected with the Society of Friends, and it was in that persuasion that Mrs. Jones was reared. Mr. Jones, however, was instructed in the teachings of the Roman Catholic church, and from his boyhood has professed that faith.

JOHN FRANCIS X. JONES, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Jones, was born in 1881, and pursued his early education at private academies. Later, he studied at Villanova College, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, at Holy Cross College, Worcester, Massachusetts, and at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Having received the degree of Bachelor of Science from Villanova, and that of Bachelor of Arts from St. Joseph's, Mr. Jones is now a student in the department of medicine of the University of Pennsylvania. He will complete his medical course in 1907.

The family home is pleasantly situated in Upper Providence township, near the Rose Tree Inn, Delaware county, where Mr. Jones has purchased a small farm of eleven acres which is a beautiful country seat. When the hours of business are over he retires there to enjoy the pleasures of outdoor life.

BERNARD J. UNANGST, an extensive agriculturist and stock raiser of West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has resided since 1867, is the sole surviving member of a large family of children born to his parents, both of whom were married twice. His father had four children born to him by a previous marriage, his mother had four children as the offspring of her first marriage, and the issue of their second marriage was two children, Sebina, deceased, and Bernard J. Unangst.

Bernard J. Unangst was born in Northampton county, Pennsylvania, August 19, 1827, reared and educated in his native county, and in due course of time became the owner of almost one hundred acres of ground, which he cultivated and improved to a high state of perfection. In 1867 he removed to West Nantmeal township, Chester county, and purchased his present farm from Mrs. Long, which consists of one hundred and fifty-four acres of rich soil, located within the boundry line of Honeybrook township. Mr. Unangst spent much time and energy on his broad acres, has always been practical and progressive in his ideas, and his produce being of a superior quality finds a ready market, and thus he derives a goodly income from his labors.

In 1852 was solemnized the marriage of Bernard J. Unangst and Elizabeth Wieder, a native of New Jersey, who was born in 1832. Their children are: Solomon, born in 1853, died in 1876, unmarried. Uriah, born in 1858, was united in marriage February 13, 1879, to Emma Parker, born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, March 27, 1860; their children are: John P., born December 15, 1879; Oscar W., born February 20, 1881; Edgar B., born October 3, 1882;

Clarence U., born August 12, 1884; Bessie E.; born November 24, 1886; Omer D., born March 12, 1887; Earl W., born April 6, 1888, died March 14, 1890; Estella M., born March 24, 1889; Howard C., born July 4, 1891; Helen B., born September 22, 1892; Mary A., born July 13, 1894; Ernest, born August 13, 1895, died September 9, 1895; Martha V., born April 7, 1897; Raymond, born September 29, 1898; Paul R., born October 9, 1899, died July 24, 1900, and Uriah, born January 4, 1901.

Mr. and Mrs. Unangst are consistent members of the Presbyterian church, to the support of which they contribute liberally both of their time and money, and in the community they are respected and esteemed for their many excellent characteristics. Mr. Unangst is an ardent Republican, and takes pride in his political record. In his younger days he was an active worker in the party, while living in Northampton county, Pennsylvania.

EDWARD W. HALL. The Hall family, of which Edward W. Hall, for many years a retired citizen of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a worthy representative, is of Welsh extraction, and was founded in this country by Abraham Hall, grandfather of Edward W. Hall, who settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, at an early day. He was promoted to the rank of colonel in the Continental army, and by his brave and heroic conduct on the field of battle won prominence and renown.

Thomas W. Hall, father of Edward W. Hall, was born in Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, 3 mo., 4, 1795, was reared in the neighborhood of his birthplace and acquired a practical education at the common schools. His first business experience was gained in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he farmed for a number of years, and later he was the proprietor of a general mercantile business in the city of Philadelphia. He was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and his political affiliations were with the old line Whig party. By his marriage to Mary Heston, a daughter of Abraham Heston, a merchant in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, the following named children were born: Isaac, William, Edward W., Mary A., Martha R., Sarah, Thomas P., Samuel D. and Harry H. Hall. Thomas W. Hall, the father of these children, died at the home of his daughter, Martha R. Seltzer, in Caln township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 4 mo., 7, 1896. He survived his wife for many years, her death having occurred 6 mo., 3, 1875. They were both worthy and eminently respectable people.

Edward W. Hall, son of Thomas W. and Mary (Heston) Hall, was born in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 8 mo., 25, 1829. After acquiring a public school education, he entered his father's store and for a period of time was employed in the capacity of clerk, later he removed to Bucks county and resided in that section of the state until 1886, and during those years his attention was devoted exclusively to agricultural pursuits. In the latter named year he retired from active business, and up to the time of his death resided quietly in a comfortable and well appointed home in Kennett township, Chester county. His political allegiance was always given to the Republican party.

Mr. Hall was united in marriage, 9 mo., 12, 1882, to Edith W. Spackman, a daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Maxton) Spackman. The paternal great-grandparents of Mrs. Hall were Isaac and Esther (Beale) Spackman, who were residents of Hankerton, near Malmsbury, in Wiltshire, England. The grandparents were Isaac and Susanna (Clayton) Spackman, the former named having been born November 21, 1739, in England, came to this country in 1750, and died April 15, 1823, aged eighty-four years. Thomas Spackman, father of Mrs. Hall, was born in 1782, and died February 20, 1846, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He was a farmer by occupation, a member of the Society of Friends, and an old line Whig in politics. He married Hannah Maxton, a native of Bradford township, and one son and five daughters were born of this union. Mrs. Spackman died September 17, 1884, aged eighty-one years. Mr. Hall won and retained the reputation of an honorable and upright citizen, and both he and his wife were highly esteemed and beloved for their many acts of charity. Mr. Hall passed away 12 mo., 10, 1903.

JOHN H. GOOD, an intelligent and prosperous farmer of Honeybrook township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of one of the early settlers of that county. His grandfather, John Good, became the owner of the farm on which John H. Good now resides about the year 1800, and this estate has been in the possession of the family ever since, a fact which cannot be stated of many farms.

John Good (grandfather) was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and for many years continued to reside in that locality, engaged in the occupation of farming. He was a man of sound common sense, good judgment and a keen insight into matters of business; he was also a true Christian gentleman, and his early religious training and surroundings qualified him to take a prominent place in the Methodist Episcopal church, where he served in the capacity of class leader, exhorter and steward. In politics he was a member of the Federalist party. On March 5, 1811, Mr. Good married Barbara Bruner, a highly cultivated and respected lady, and ten children were born of this union, two of whom are living at the present time (1903). Both Mr. Good and his wife lived to a ripe old age. Mrs. Good was the daughter of Owen and Elizabeth Bruner, who were lifelong residents of Berks county, Pennsylvania, Mr. Bruner being by occupation a farmer and miller, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a staunch Whig in politics. Their children were: Barbara, Abraham, Owen, Jacob, John, Isaac, Elizabeth, Daniel and Frances Bruner.

Abraham Good (father) was born on the old homestead in Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 9, 1823, and his business career was devoted to general farming and dairying, these occupations proving both pleasant and profitable. Politically he was an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and held the position of school director of Honeybrook township for several years. Mr. Good, like his father, was a loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal church, joining it at the age of nine years; he served as trustee for many years, and during his entire life he was especially active and zealous in all matters pertaining to truth and righteousness. In 1851 Mr. Good married Elizabeth Rettew, a daughter of Charles and Sarah Rettew, and to them were born the following named children: Barbara F., John H., Benjamin F., Sarah E., Minnie G., and two children now deceased. Mr. Good was a true and worthy citizen in every sense of the word, and his demise, which occurred July 2, 1897, was lamented by a host of friends. His wife passed away December 16, 1898.

John H. Good, eldest son of Abraham and Elizabeth Good, was born on the ancestral estate in Honeybrook township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 26, 1857, and during his early life he enjoyed the inestimable advantages of a godly home and kind, loving parents. He was reared and educated in his native township, and after completing his studies chose the occupation of farming for his life work. In 1893 the old homestead, consisting of one hundred and eighty-two acres of valuable land, came into his possession and since that date Mr. Good has followed general farming and stock raising. He is exceedingly energetic and practical in the management of his operations, and the general appearance of his property indicates thrift, industry and prosperity. Mr. Good was reared and nurtured in the principles of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he now holds membership.

On December 29, 1898, Mr. Good was united in marriage to Bessie McWilliams, who was born in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, October 16, 1871, a daughter of John and Mary J. McWilliams, descendants of an Irish-Scotch ancestry, who have resided in the state of Pennsylvania for four generations. One child has blessed this union, John H. Good, Jr. Both Mr. and Mrs. Good are happy in the consciousness of having been born of good and honorable parentage, whose worthy example they are endeavoring to follow.

THOMAS H. MARVEL, an influential and esteemed resident of Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in New Garden township, December 10, 1833, a son of Peter P. and Mary Marvel, and grandson of Josiah Marvel, who was a direct descendant of Andrew Marvel, an eminent English patriot and writer, who was born at Kingston-upon-Hull, England, 1620, and died about 1678. Josiah Marvel was a respected citizen of Sussex county. He lived and died on the farm near Georgetown, Delaware, decended to his ancestors by King George, and upon which some of his descendants still reside, and where he reared the following named children: Raymond, Nutter, Peter P., Josiah, Thomas and Ann Marvel. The three first mentioned were the issue of his first marriage, and the latter three were born of his second marriage.

Peter P. Marvel, father of Thomas H. Marvel, was born January 6, 1805, in Sussex county, Delaware. He obtained his education in the common schools of the locality, and upon attaining young manhood removed to New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was actively identified with its various interests. He was united in marriage to Mary Taylor, widow of William Taylor, by whom she had three children: Mordica, who married Rebeca Thompson; Deborah, who became the wife of Eli Thompson; and Rebeca, who died unmarried. Mary (Taylor) Marvel was the daughter of Mortica and Deborah Vernon, and four children were the issue of her marriage to Mr. Marvel: Josiah, born in 1831; Thomas H., mentioned hereinafter; William, born in 1836, married Rebeca Hoops, of York county, Pennsylvania, and they are the parents of two children, Howard and Mary Marvel; Rebeca, born in 1839, who became the wife of John Wilson, and one child has been the issue of this union: Mary Wilson now deceased. Peter P. Marvel died at the age of eighty-eight years.

Thomas H. Marvel obtained his education in the district schools of New Garden township, and Colonel Hyatt's school, Wilmington, Delaware, and for many years thereafter was a prominent factor in all movements that tended toward the improvement and welfare of the community. Shortly after his marriage he located in Wilmington, Delaware, where he engaged in the manufacture of soap and tallow, and after about five years residence in that city he located again in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, but still continued his business in Wilmington for a period of twenty years. About 1873 he purchased a farm in Franklin township, formerly the property of Robert Lysle, where he conducted extensive farming and dairying operations, dealt also in stock, and conducted a flourishing creamery. About the year of 1884 he opened up extensive kaolin mines on his father's farm in New Garden township. After a short period of time this was organized into a stock company incorporated under the name of The Graham Kaolin Company, the product of the mines being of a superior quality. Subsequently Mr. Marvel assumed full control of the plant, and is now conducting the same with his sons, Fred, Percy A. and P. Herman Marvel. They also own and operate a large brick plant in connection with the Kaolin mines, where they manufacture silica and fire brick. In 1898 he removed to Avondale, where he has since resided.

In 1862 Mr. Marvel married Hannah Amelia Lysle, a daughter of Robert and Eliza Lysle. Their children were: 1. Frederic B., born July 19, 1863; 2. Jeannette, born May 17, 1866, became the wife of William Dantz, and they are the parents of two children: Thomas Marvel and Theodore Roosevelt Dantz; 3. Carrie C., born February 23, 1868, died September 4, 1869; 4. Robert Lysle, born March 14, 1870, died March 29, 1891; 5. Percy A., born May 28, 1872, married Eva Matchet, daughter of William Matchet, of Philadelphia, and they are the parents of one child, Percy Marvel, Jr; 6. Harry Vernon, born July 3, 1875, graduate of the Medical-Chi University of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and is now engaged in the active practice of his profession in that city. He married Annie Howell, a granddaughter of Zophar Howell, who became celebrated through his invention of wall paper, and they are the parents of the following named children: Darius, who died in infancy, Henry Vernon and Mary, the latter also deceased; 7. P. Herman, born December 23, 1877, married Martha V. Howell, also a granddaughter of Zophar Howell; 8. Thomas Lawrence, born February 18, 1880, died March 18, 1889. The family are members of the New London Presbyterian church, in which Mr. Marvel serves in the capacity of elder.

ISAIAH H. WILSON. In writing a work of this character it is always pleasing as well as interesting to meet and converse with the old and respected citizens of the community whose entire lives have been spent in advancing and developing its interests and enterprises. Such an one is Isaiah H. Wilson, a native of the township of Honeybrook, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred November 16, 1816.

Alexander Wilson, grandfather of Isaiah H. Wilson, was well and favorably known throughout Chester county, Pennsylvania, as a man of sterling worth, was a cooper by trade and followed that line of industry for many years. He was united in marriage to Mary Thompson, and the issue of this union was six sons, all of whom learned the trade of cooper, and became worthy and useful members of society. One of their sons, Samuel Wilson, served as a Continental soldier during the great and terrific struggle for independence, displaying both courage and fortitude in that trying ordeal.

Samuel Wilson, father of Isaiah H. Wilson, was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1785, and by improving the opportunities of his early life he became a well informed and therefore useful citizen. He was a farmer by occupation, and by conducting his operations on an extensive scale was enabled to derive a comfortable income from his estate. Mr. Wilson married Orpha Trego, who was born in Honeybrook township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1786. She was a daughter of William Trego, who was an active participant in the Revolutionary war and a conspicuous figure at the battle of Brandywine, also a descendant of a family of French origin who came to the United States in 1633, settling in the state of Pennsylvania. They reared a family of four children, two of whom are living at the present time (1903). Mr. Wilson died in 1858, survived by his widow, who passed away six months later.

Isaiah H. Wilson was reared and acquired his education in the common schools of his native township, after which he learned the trade of blacksmith, and for many years was engaged in that occupation. In 1847 he purchased his present farm of one hundred and three acres, and since that date he has devoted all his time and energy to its cultivation and improvement, until now it ranks among the best and most productive pieces of property in that section of the county. The farm originally belonged to his father, who purchased it seventy-six years ago, and thereupon erected large and substantial buildings which his son has improved and made additions to since his ownership. Mr. Wilson conducts general farming and stock raising, both of which occupations have proved prosperous. Mr. Wilson has always upheld the principles of the Republican party.

On January 7, 1841, Mr. Wilson married Sarah A. Criley, who was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, April 22, 1822. Their children are: Catherine Bates, Samuel, deceased; Absalom, deceased; Alice, Isabell, Clara F. Patton, Ida Silcox, I. Heston, Andrew G. Curtin and Samuel W., who enlisted in the Civil war, and lost his life by exposure to disease while in the service of his country. The family are well and favorably known in the community, and they enjoy the confidence and esteem of a wide circle of friends. They are members of the Presbyterian church of Honey Brook, Chester county.

JOSEPH BRINTON, a leading farmer and highly respected citizen of East Fallowfield township, Chester county, is a representative of one of the oldest families in Pennsylvania, the founder of the race in America having landed at Chester in 1684, only two years after the arrival of William Penn. The Christian name of this emigrant, who was a member of the Society of Friends, has not been preserved, but it is known that he settled in Lancaster county, where he took up a tract of six hundred acres of land, the patent for which it is supposed he obtained from or through William Penn.

Moses Brinton, son of the emigrant ancestor, was born in 1725, and resided on a tract of land in Leacock township, eight miles east of Lancaster. Family tradition says that he was a soldier of the Revolution. He married Eleanor Varman, and they were the parents of a son, Joseph. The death of Moses Brinton took place in 1789. His son Joseph married Susanna Rigby, and their children were: James, William, mentioned at length hereinafter; Samuel; Sarah, who married Joseph Cooper; and Mary, who became the wife of Joseph Cole. Joseph Brinton, the father of the family, died April 21, 1809.

William Brinton, son of Joseph and Susanna (Rigby) Brinton, was born October 25, 1785, on the old farm in Lancaster county. He married Gulielma Cooper, of Chester county, and the following children were born to them: Cassandra, who married Thomas Harvy; Jane, who became the wife of Parvin Smith; Joseph, mentioned at length hereinafter; Mary, who married Joseph Hopkins; and Susanna. Mr. Brinton died in 1878, at the advanced age of ninety-three. His wife passed away in 1880, and both are interred in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

Joseph Brinton, only son of William and Gulielma (Cooper) Brinton, was born May 18, 1828, on the homestead in Lancaster county, and was educated in the common schools and at West-town Boarding School. At the age of twenty-three, believing that he had received a divine call to do so, he went to Newport, Rhode Island, and resided in the family of Thomas B. Gould. By this action Mr. Brinton greatly displeased his father, who threatened to disinherit him. After remaining with T. B. Gould for twelve years, Mr. Brinton returned to Pennsylvania, and settled on the farm of four hundred acres which has since been his home. He still devotes himself to agricultural pursuits, being engaged in general farming. He takes a deep interest in the cause of education, and is active in the work of establishing and encouraging schools, seeking to promote every project having for its aim improved methods in the training of the young. His religious convictions are those of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Brinton married, in Newport, Rhode Island, Mary Howland, and the following children have been born to them: David, who married Eleanor Fisher; Annie; William, who married Elizabeth Russell, whose father holds the position of treasurer of the Reading Railroad Company; Mary and Henry. Mr. Brinton married for his second wife Anna M. Howland, a sister of his first wife, and the following named children were born of this union: Gulielma, Jane, Charles and Joseph E. Brinton. In the community in which he resides, Mr. Brinton is respected as a public-spirited citizen and an actively benevolent man.

TAYLOR FAMILY. The following genealogical record had been preserved by Joseph Taylor, son of Jesse Taylor, and was left among his papers in 1826:

Robert Taylor emigrated from Little Leigh, county of Chester, England, in 1682, and settled in Springfield township, now Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1684. He lived near Frankfort. His wife was Mary Hayes. He died in 1695. Their son, Isaac Taylor, came to America in 1683. He settled in Springfield also and in 1689 he married Sarah Broadwell, of Dublin Friends' Monthly Meeting; he died in 1717, and his wife in 1748.

Joseph Taylor, son of Isaac and Sarah, was born in Frankford, near Philadelphia, 11 mo., 11, 1694, removed into Chester county, and married Mary Maris, 9 mo., 29, 1722, in Springfield Meeting House. Mary was the daughter of John and Susanna Maris, was born 1 mo., 9, 1701. After their marriage they moved to West Marlborough, in Chester county, when Joseph died in 1791, in the ninety-eighth year of his age.

Jesse, son of Joseph and Mary Taylor, was born in the year 1726; he married Ann Way, of Kennett township, Chester county, and settled near London Grove Meeting, of which he lived and died a member, in the eighty-ninth year of his age. Their children were: 1. Jesse, Jr., died when a child; 2. Joseph, father of Israel Taylor; 3. Jacob, married and had descendants; 4. Isaac, married a Virginia lady, and was a land surveyor in Kentucky; 5. David, who married Hannah Craig, and settled in Chester county; he was drowned in Laurel Ford Dam, Chester county, while out with a fishing party. His widow afterwards married William Commons. Issue, by first wife: Joseph; our cousin J. C. Taylor, of Chester county, Pennsylvania; Lydia Pierce and Ann Woodrow.

Joseph Taylor, the second son of Jesse Taylor, was born 9 mo., 18, 1751. He married (first) Jane Walters, in 1775. She was the daughter of James and Lydia Walters, of Chester county, and settled near New Garden Meeting. In 1786 Joseph moved with his family, viz.: Jesse, James, Joseph, Israel and Sarah, into Frederick county, Virginia, and from thence into Culpeper county. In Virginia his daughter Ann was born (Rebecca and James Wilson's mother). There were also two other children, Joel and Lydia; the latter died while young. In 1796 Joseph Taylor's wife died; he then removed to Stubenville, Ohio; here it was that his son Joel was drowned in the Ohio river in 1806. He was near the eleventh year of his age, was a lad of great promise, and his untimely end was greatly lamented. Jesse died while in Virginia.

After the death of Joseph Taylor's first wife, Jane Walters, he married Mary Pearson; she was born 12 mo., 3, 1752; died 7 mo., 13, 1829. The children of Joseph Taylor were eight in number. The second son, James, married a Kentucky lady, and settled in Eastern Tennessee, issue:

Isaac, married Miss ———; they had two sons, Isaac and George, now in St. Louis.

James, married Miss ———, now a widow in Texas; have descendants.

Joseph, an eminent lawyer, married Miss McAlpine, settled in Eutaw, Alabama; issue, Virginia, Solomon, Mary Bell and Helen.

Israel Taylor was the fourth son of Joseph and Jane Taylor; he was born near Doe Run, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 27, 1782. Married Susan Mause, in Trenton, New Jersey, March 12, 1808. Died at his residence in Philadelphia, on Sixteenth street, below Arch, October 22, 1850. Interment at Fair Hill, Philadelphia.

Sarah Taylor, daughter of Joseph and Jane Taylor, died May 30, 1872, (unmarried) in the ninetieth year of her age. Interred at Eastland, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in Friends' burial ground.

Ann Taylor, daughter of Joseph and Jane Taylor, married Hugh Wilson; they had eight children, who correspond nearly in age and sex with her brother Israel Taylor's family; of the number was our cousin, James Wilson, also his sister Rebecca Depew.

Returning now to the record of Israel Taylor, the fourth son of Joseph and Jane Taylor, as stated, was married to Susan Maus. She was born near Mount's Mill, above Trenton, July 2, 1785.

COPY OF MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE.

March 12th, 1808.

"To all whom it may concern:—This is to certify that Israel Taylor and Susan Maus, both of Trenton, were lawfully joined together in marriage by me, one of the Elders of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

DAVID BARTINE.

Susan Maus died at Woodside, at the residence of her son-in-law, Daniel R. Bennett, February 1, 1860. Interment at Minersville, Pennsylvania. The eight children of Israel and Susan (Maus) Taylor were married as follows:

1. Joseph Franklin Taylor, born in Trenton, New Jersey, December 30, 1808, married to Adaline Nice, 1844. Joseph died in Minersville, March 27, 1887. Adaline died in Minersville, November 3, 1890; issue: Susan, married William Sterling, of Schuylkill county; William, married Helen Trouser; Anne, married George Wynkoop; Sally, unmarried, died April 26, 1895; Frank, unmarried; Jennie, married Rufus Foster.

2. Maria Ann Taylor, born in Trenton, May 31, 1810, married to Daniel R. Bennett in Barnesville, 1828. Maria died in Minersville, July 14, 1850. She left four sons, viz.: 1. Charles, married Elizabeth White, has one daughter. 2. Alfred, married Mrs. Cox, one daughter. 3. Frank, married an English lady, Eliza Langworthy (both parents deceased). They left two children—Dick and Alice. Horace, the fourth son, born in 1837, was unmarried. He was commissioned captain in the Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers during the Civil war, and was killed at Pocatigo Bridge, Hilton Head, South Carolina, in October, 1862.

3. George Rozell Taylor, born in Trenton, June 21, 1814, married Margaret Nesmith. George died March 30, 1876; his wife soon after in Indiana. His family—Charles, Mary, Helen, Marie, Josephine, Anne and George—all married in the West.

4. Charles M. Taylor, born in Trenton, October 3, 1817, married to Anna E. Sterling, October 15, 1845. Of this marriage there are four children, viz.: James S., Frederick W., Charles M., Annie Gertrude, all married.

James Sterling Taylor married Mary White, November 9, 1879—their family—James S. Taylor, Jr., Adele Marie, Albert Eugene, Irene Earhart, Helena Marguerite, Emily Dorothea and Ella M. Taylor, Mary Louise, Charles M. Taylor (3).

Fred Walter Taylor married Emily Hunt, April 30, 1877. Has one daughter—Florence Emily Taylor. Charles Mause Taylor, Jr., married Ella M. Langstroth, October 26, 1876; no issue. Mr. Taylor died at his residence in Philadelphia, 2022 Race street, on the 18th of October, 1893; interment at Central Laurel Hill, Philadelphia.

Annie Gertrude Taylor married Henry P. Brown, Esq., of Philadelphia, October 3, 1883; children: John Arthur, Charles Taylor, Henry Paul and Joseph Jeanes Brown.

5. Israel Walter Taylor, fifth child of Israel and Susan (Mause) Taylor, was born in Trenton, November 26, 1820, unmarried; died in Minersville, February 10, 1883.

6. Lydia Susan Taylor, born in Trenton, September 2, 1822, married William S. Wright, 1844. He died July 5, 1878, at Litchfield, Connecticut, in the sixty-fourth year of his age. His family: One son, Norman, unmarried; one daughter, Elizabeth, married to Charles Reeves, issue: Mark and Agnes.

7. Edith Taylor, born in Trenton, April 18, 1824, (unmarried). Died in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, June 19, 1880. Interment at Eastland, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

8. Jane Taylor, born in Barnesville, Belmont county, Ohio, October 11, 1827. Married to her brother-in-law, D. H. Bennett, January 19, 1855, in Cincinnati, Ohio, at the residence of William S. Wright, by Friends' ceremony. Jennie died January 17, 1881. The last residence of Daniel and Jennie was at Cressbrook Farm, ten miles from Philadelphia.

Daniel Richards Bennett died April 25, 1890, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. Interment at South Laurel Hill, beside his wife, dear Jennie. She had only one son, Clarence, who died in 1892.

—♦♦♦—

DAVID M. TAYLOR. The early ancestral history of the Taylor family is contained upon preceding pages. The present narrative concerns David M. Taylor, of Oxford, one of the most enterprising business men of Chester county, and an honored veteran of the Civil war.

His father, Joseph C. Taylor, born in 1804, at Unionville, was a tanner by trade, and, with Jonathan Pierce, built at Oak Hill, Lancaster county, what became known as Harlan's tannery, which they operated for several years. Joseph Taylor subsequently relinquished this business and located in Little Britain township, in the same county, where he cultivated a farm, later engaging in a mercantile business in Asheville, where he died, April 26, 1876. He was a man of marked traits of character, influential in all community affairs, and widely known as an uncompromising foe of human slavery. One illustration of his spirit and courage was particularly notable. A colored woman with her two children, who lived in the neighborhood of his farm, were kidnapped by four Maryland slave drivers. Mr. Taylor gave pursuit and overtook the party not far from the Maryland state line, and at the point of his shotgun he compelled the better armed villains to surrender their captives.

Joseph C. Taylor was twice married. His first wife was Susan, daughter of John Twaddle, who bore him two children, Anna and David, both of whom died. His second wife, to whom he was married January 17, 1837, was Jane M. White, a native of Ireland, who survived her husband many years, dying in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, March 28, 1890, aged seventy-seven years. These parents reared five children, all of whom came to maturity and to useful stations in life; 1. B. Frank, who became a conveyancer and justice of the peace at Oxford; 2. John T.; who enlisted in Company A, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was killed at the storming of the enemy's works July 30, 1864, at Petersburg, Virginia; 3. David M., to be further referred to; 4. Edward C., born February 21, 1844; graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1867; was a practicing physician at Marlton, New Jersey, for eleven years, then removing to Oxford, Pennsylvania; he married Mercy A., daughter of R. H. Kirk; 5. Howard J., born October 28, 1857, died January 11, 1878.

David M. Taylor, third of the five sons of Joseph C. and Jane (White) Taylor, was born in Little Britain township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, December 8, 1841. He was educated in the common schools and the Millersville State Normal School. After completing his education he was engaged in a mercantile business until August 22, 1861, when, with his brother, John T., he enlisted in Company A, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and it was his sad fortune to witness the death of that brother, who met a soldier's death while gallantly bearing the colors of his regiment in the splendid charge following the mine explosion at Petersburg, Virginia. David served his full three years term of service and participated in the siege of Charleston, the attack on Fort Wagner, service in Florida, the battle of Cold Harbor and the siege of Petersburg. He was honorably discharged at Bermuda Hundred, August 22, 1864.

In 1866 Mr. Taylor entered upon his active business career in the capacity of teller of the National Bank of Oxford, and this was his introduction to his true vocation. He retired from his position after two years in order to accept that of cashier in the newly organized bank of Kirk, McVeigh & Company. In 1872 he resigned to aid in the organization of the Oxford Banking Company, which, he aiding, was subsequently incorporated under the national banking law as the Farmers' National Bank of Oxford, and of which he has been cashier from that time until 1884, when he was elected to the office of president. The institution has long been numbered among the safest and most prosperous financial institutions of eastern Pennsylvania, and much of the credit for its development and present high status is unstintingly awarded to Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Taylor's high abilities as a financier have found recognition in his election to responsible positions in numerous other corporations which are important to the financial and commercial interests of his village and county. He was for some time president of the Land Improvement Company of Oxford, with its million dollars capital; president of the Oxford Electric Light Company; was secretary for some time of the Oxford Building and Loan Association, and was treasurer of the Oxford Milling Company. Outside his county, he is interested in the First National Bank of Delta, York county, in which he is a director, and is also a director of the First National Bank of Clifton Heights, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and in the Norristown (Montgomery county) Steel Company, in which he was a director, and a director of the Chester County Trust Company of West Chester, Pennsylvania. He is a member of the Presbyterian church of Oxford, and of its board of trustees. In politics he is a Republican. He holds membership with W. S. Thompson Post, No. 363, Grand Army of the Republic, and Oxford Lodge, No. 353, Free and Accepted Masons.

Mr. Taylor was married, December 15, 1868, to Miss Violet H. Rittenhouse, daughter of Azariah and Mary (Warner) Rittenhouse, of Rising Sun, Maryland.

THE MOORE FAMILY, which has been for more than a century and a half resident in Pennsylvania, where it occupies a prominent place in the annals of the Society of Friends, traces its descent from Bethuel Moore, who was born in 1742, and was a member of Evesham Meeting. He married Martha Allen, and died in 1831. His son, Amasa, born in 1770, married Agnes, born in 1775, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Jennings) French. Amasa Moore died in 1810, and his widow survived him many years, passing away in 1854.

Bethuel Allen Moore, son of Amasa and Agnes (French) Moore, was born in 1801, in Moorestown, New Jersey. He was a resident of Philadelphia, and married Hannah Naglee, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Stockton) Inskeep, the former a son of John and Mary (Buckman) Inskeep. The father and grandfather of John Inskeep were both named John. The Inskeep family was founded in America by John Inskeep, who was born in Bodley Greene, Staffordshire, England, and emigrated with his wife, three sons and two daughters. He settled in Burlington county, New Jersey, where he bought two hundred acres of land from John Runners, on which he made his home for the remainder of his life.

Mary Stockton, mentioned above as the wife of Thomas Inskeep, was a daughter of William and Mary (Naglee) Stockton, of Burlington county, who were married in 1775, the former being a member of the legislature. The Stockton family was represented several centuries ago by a Lord Mayor of London, among whose descendants was Thomas Stockton, who lived about the middle of the sixteenth century, and was the father of John, who married Eleanor Clayton. Their son Randall married Elizabeth Clayton, and was the father of Richard, who with his wife, Abigail and three sons, emigrated to America, settling first in Rhode Island and afterward removing to New Jersey, where he made his home in Burlington. Two of his sons settled in Springfield township, where their descendants lived for two or three generations. Richard Stockton, the emigrant ancestor, was the grandfather of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Richard's son, Job, married Ann Petty, and was the father of William, who married Mary Bryan. They were the parents of William, mentioned above as the husband of Mary Naglee, the latter a native of Devonshire, England, whence the family emigrated in 1800.

Bethuel Allen and Hannah Naglee (Inskeep) Moore were the parents of the following children: 1. Agnes French, born in 1826, married James Wilson, of Trenton, New Jersey, and had three children: Laura, Katherine and Helen. 2. Amanda Inskeep, born in 1827, became the wife of Henry Cardwell Potter, a native of England, and had a son Alfred and a daughter, Henrietta. 3. Adrianna, born in 1829, married Samuel Mitchell Anderson, and was the mother of three children: Walter Mitchell, Lewis Rodman and Adrian S. 4. Bethuel Allen, born in 1830. 5. Hannah Stockton, born in 1832, died in 1844. 6. Mary Anna, born in 1834, died in 1842. 7. Jacob Ridgway, born in 1836, died in 1837. 8. Jacob Ridgway (2), born in 1837. 9. Thomas Inskeep, born in 1839. 10. John Stockton, born in 1840, died at the age of two months. 11. Clementina, born in 1841, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, married Charles Hjalmar Wilhelm Oberge, a native of the vicinity of Upsala, Sweden. Their children are: Ullericka Hendrietta, born in 1874; and George Farr, born in 1878. 12. Mary Anna (2), born in 1843, married Edward Thomas Trego. 13. Hannah Rosalba, born in 1844, married John Freeman Mackie, and had one child, Clarence Stockton, born in 1870, died in 1902. 14. William Luskeep, born in 1846, died at the age of two months. Mr. Moore, the father of these fourteen children, died in 1851, at the age of fifty years.

JACOB DOREMUS WYNN, a prominent citizen and farmer of East Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in the house in which he now resides, March 5, 1849, the son of Jonathan and Elizabeth Wynn, the former named being one of a family of nine children, namely: Thomas, a farmer; Samuel, a mason; James, a farmer; William, a carpenter; Isaac, a millwright; Layton; Jonathan, a farmer; and Emily, wife of Henry Buckwalter, now deceased, for many years a prominent resident of Newport, Perry county, Pennsylvania.

Jonathan Wynn (father) was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1806, and on attaining man's estate followed the occupation of farming, pursuing his operations on the farm now owned by his son, Jacob D. Wynn. He was an upright, conscientious man, and during his long residence in that section of the state won an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity. He married Elizabeth Richards, daughter of John and Rachel Richards, her birth occurring in the year 1810, and the following named children were born to them: 1. John R., a carpenter by trade, now leading a retired life in the town of Pottstown; he married Mary Templin, of East Nantmeal township. 2. Rachel Ann, wife of Clayton R. Pike, now deceased, for many years a prosperous farmer of East Nantmeal township; their children are: Doremus, a clerk in the employ of James Brothers, of West Chester; Lizzie, wife of Charles Harring, acting in the capacity of ticket agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Germantown; Sallie, deceased; Lizzie J., wife of Lewis Templin, of East Nantmeal township, a farmer, and their children are: Emma, wife of Ehmer Entrican, a tinner by trade, and they are the parents of two daughters. 3. Marshall, a painter by trade, and resides in Chester county, where he conducts a painting and paper-hanging business; he has two children, Jonathan, a painter by trade, married Annie Swinehart, daughter of William Swinehart, a farmer of West Vincent township, and one child has been born to them, Howard, now residing in San Francisco, California, where he is engaged in the lumber business; he married Clara Hewing, daughter of Samuel L. and Elizabeth Hewing, the former named being a farmer of Warwick township, they have one daughter, Ada, wife of John Ford. 4. Jacob Doremus Wynn.

Jacob D. Wynn, youngest child of Jonathan and Elizabeth Wynn, attended the Union schools of East Nantmeal township, and after completing his education he assisted his father with the work of the home farm, which consisted of one hundred acres of rich and arable land, whereon he has conducted operations up to the present time (1903). Mr. Wynn is a Republican in politics, and while not taking any active part in local politics, is always interested in the leading questions of the day and takes a strong and loyal interest in all national affairs.

Mr. Wynn was united in marriage to Maggie L. Garvine, daughter of William and Maria (Massey) Garvine, the former named being a tinner by trade, and one of the leading mechanics in that line in East Nantmeal township, where they reared a family of three daughters, namely: 1. Isabella, wife of John Croes, of Wilmington, Delaware, foreman of the Wilmington Gas Company Works; they are the parents of three children, Jennie, Anna, wife of William Boone, of Pottstown, Pennsylvania, and Florence, born in Wichita, Kansas. 2. Maggie L., wife of Jacob D. Wynn. 3. Lizzie, wife of E. O. Heck, of Coatesville, Pennsylvania, and a twin sister of Mrs. Wynn. Mr. Heck is a grocer in Coatesville, and the issue of this union was three children: George, a clerk in the Coatesville Iron Works; William Claude, an attorney, and Samuel Jay, who is now attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Wynn are the parents of three children—1. Rachel A., wife of James Essick, a saddler by trade, which occupation he is engaged at in the township of East Nantmeal; their children are: Ella and Margaret Essick. 2. Jesse, married Mary Iona Schick, daughter of George and Emma Schick, of Warwick township, and they are the parents of one daughter, Susanna Frances Wynn; Jesse Wynn is a member of Lodge No. 535, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Nantmeal. 3. Anna, unmarried, resides at home with her parents. The aforementioned children received their education at the Union schools of East Nantmeal township. The church affiliations of the Wynn family are Methodist.

John Wynn, brother of Jacob D. Wynn, enlisted in the Civil war for nine months, served as one of the corporals in Company D, One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Regiment; he received no wounds in any of the engagements in which he participated, but contracted Chickahominy fever, from the effects of which he never fully recovered.

WILLIAM H. MILES was one of the men who responded to the first call of President Lincoln for volunteers, served with distinction and bravery throughout the entire period of the Civil war. He enlisted in 1861 in the Pennsylvania militia, in a company under command of Captain McMullen, later went to Maryland on an emergency call, in 1864 responded to the call for troops to serve one hundred days, joining a Philadelphia regiment under command of Colonel Thomas, and in 1865 enlisted in the First Delaware Regiment, remaining with that command until the close of the struggle.

Mr. Miles was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 26, 1841, attended the common schools of the neighborhood and Eaton Academy, Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, where he acquired a liberal education. He then served an apprenticeship in the milling trade at Clifton, later removing to Kennett township, Chester county, where he assumed the management of a mill which he is successfully operating at the present time (1903). He ranks as a business man of ability and in the commercial world has many warm personal friends who esteem him highly for his integrity and fairmindedness. In his political views he adheres to the principles of the Republican party, and held the office of supervisor for twelve years. He is a member of the Masonic order and the Grand Army of the Republic, taking an active interest in the affairs of both organizations.

Mr. Miles was united in marriage, October 26, 1865, to H. Emma Roney, a daughter of James M. and Sidney Roney, the former named being engaged in agricultural pursuits in Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: 1. James R., born December 23, 1866, married Adelaide Parmelee, who is now deceased. 2. Ella T., born January 2, 1870, became the wife of Ira Bull, and they are the parents of two children—Marie and William Ira. 3. Laura J., born March 27, 1873, became the wife of George Ladley, and they are the parents of one child—Edward Sharpless. 4. Sara S., born April 28, 1875, became the wife of James Worrall, and two children have been born to them—James, Jr., and Mary. 5. William R., born January 18, 1879, unmarried. 6. Alice W., born March 9, 1881. 7. J. Harold, born October 7, 1889. The family attend the Presbyterian church of Kennett township, and have always manifested a deep interest and taken an active part in the work connected with it.

GEORGE PENNOCK. Christopher Pennock, the pioneer ancestor of the American branch of the Pennock family, was an officer in the service of King William of Orange and participated at the battle of the Boyne in 1690. He married, prior to 1675, Mary Collett, daughter of George Collett, of Clonmell, county Tipperary, Ireland. After residing there and in Cornwall, England, he emigrated to Pennsylvania about the year 1685. His death occurred in Philadelphia in 1701. He left three children, two of whom died without issue.

Joseph Pennock, son of Christopher and Mary Pennock, was born in the vicinity of Clonmell, Ireland, in 1677. In one of his passages to this country in a letter-of-marque he was captured by a French ship-of-war, and was confined in France as a prisoner upwards of a year, enduring much hardship. In 1702 he located in the city of Philadelphia, and engaged in the mercantile business until about the year 1714, when he removed to West Marlborough township, Chester county, and settled on a large tract of land, becoming proprietor by virtue of a grant from William Penn to George Collett, his grandfather. In 1738 he erected a large mansion on this property which he named "Primitive Hall," in which he died March 27, 1771. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Levis, born him the following named children: Elizabeth, Samuel, William, Mary, Joseph, Nathaniel, Joseph, Ann, Sarah, Hannah, Levis and Susanna Pennock.

Nathaniel Pennock, son of Joseph and Mary Pennock, was the great-grandfather of George Pennock, and among the children born to him was a son, Nathaniel Pennock, grandfather of George Pennock, who was born on the banks of the Brandywine, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. After attaining man's estate he chose the occupation of farming, and conducted his operations in Franklin township, Chester county. He married Ruth Ann Woodrow.

Levi Woodrow Pennock, father of George Pennock, was a native of Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, the date of his birth being October 8, 1807. He attended the public schools of the neighborhood, and remained at home assisting with the work of the farm until he was nineteen years of age. He then learned the woolen business and after working as a journeyman for several years, purchased his employer's interest in the plant which was known as the Brandywine Mills. Subsequently he disposed of this property and purchased the farm where his son, George Pennock, now resides, and also the mill built by John Pennock, which he successfully operated during the remainder of his active business career. His political sentiments were in accord with those advocated by the Whig and Republican parties.

On July 13, 1852, Mr. Pennock married Sarah M. Minker, and their children were: George, born November 20, 1853; Aaron, born September 26, 1855, died August 13, 1863; Ellis, born September 14, 1857; Ruth Anna, born July 31, 1859, died September 4, 1860; Levi born February 4, 1861, died August 14, 1862; Ruth Anna, born June 9, 1863; Alice, born March 31, 1865; Maria, born October 19, 1867; Annie, born August 2, 1870, died September 4, 1870, and Levi W., Jr., born February 1, 1874, died May 2, 1901. Mr. Pennock, father of these children, was a man of energy, honor and self-reliance, and was one of the leading and substantial men of the township. He died December 3, 1878. His widow is living at the present time (1903) and resides on the old homestead in a residence near that of her son, George Pennock.

George Pennock, eldest son of Levi W. and Sarah M. Pennock, was born on the old homestead, November 20, 1853. He received a good English education at the public schools of his native township and was a student one term at a select school. He remained on the old home farm and assisted his father with the management of affairs and upon the death of his father, he took possession of one of the farms and has successfully managed it for three years. He then purchased his present farm adjoining the old homestead. He conducts general farming and dairying, and is considered one of the representative agriculturists as well as a leading citizen of the county. Politically Mr. Pennock is a Republican; he has never sought office, preferring to devote his entire time and attention to business affairs.

Mr. Pennock married, December 22, 1876, Sarah Jane Cloud, born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 9, 1854, died April 7, 1899. Their children were: Florence E., born June 24, 1877; Edwin L., born October 17, 1879; Charles A., born May 27, 1882, died October 16, 1885; Warren P., born June 23, 1885; Irene M., born October 25, 1889; Ruth Emma, born October 28, 1891; E. Heston, born in 1893, died in 1894, and Sarah Jane, born March 25, 1899. The birthplace of these children was Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM I. HARVEY, deceased, for many years a prominent and active citizen of Embreeville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a consistent member of the Society of Friends, was united in marriage at Coatesville, Pennsylvania, to Rebecca L. Bing, a daughter of John and Philena Bing, the former named having been a public professor in school teaching. The children born of this union were: Marie L., who received a liberal education in the excellent institutions of the county, and is now the wife of Frank W. Keech, owner of a well cultivated and productive farm near the town of East Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania; and John D. Harvey, who also acquired an excellent educational training, and died in 1898, at the age of twenty-four years from diphtheria. William I. Harvey, father of these children, died in 1899, at his beautiful home along the Brandywine, near the town of Embreeville, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a Republican in his political affiliations, and a very progressive man.

Mrs. Rebecca L. (Bing) Harvey is a lineal descendant of the pioneer ancestor of the Bing family, who came over from England at an early day and settled his family in Philadelphia. He was closely related to Lord George Bing, of England, a noted naval officer, who after long and distinguished service in that capacity was ennobled by being made Lord of the Admiralty by the British government, which subsequently conferred upon him the title of Lord Viscount Torrington. A son of the pioneer ancestor was born in Philadelphia, and his son was born and reared in the old town of Chester, a short distance below Philadelphia, on the Delaware river. He married Martha Young, who was born in Ireland and came to America with her parents at an early age, settling in Chester, Pennsylvania, where her marriage occurred. Shortly after her marriage to Mr. Bing, they moved with her father's family to the valley of Virginia, near Staunton, where they continued to reside until the year 1799, when Mr. Bing came to Ohio with his family, and settled on the farm that he had purchased a year previous in Kyger Bottom, and continued to reside there until his death, which occurred in 1824. The farm is still in possession of some members of the family.

ROBERT HAMILL. The above named, who is the proprietor of a prosperous creamery in West Fallowfield township, is a contribution to Chester from Lancaster county, of which he is a native and was long a resident before coming to his present place. He proved to be a valuable acquisition, as he is enterprising and furnishes a market for milk as well as employment for many busy hands at his neatly kept establishment.

Robert Hamill was born at Quarryville, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1847. He was educated in the schools of his native town, and some years ago removed to Chester county and located on a farm of twenty acres in West Fallowfield township, which he conducts in connection with a large creamery. This industry was established in 1881, Mr. Hamill owning about ninety-five per cent. of the stock, and he is now the active head of the concern. This establishment, whose equipment is modern and up-to-date in all respects, consumes from six to eight thousand pounds of milk daily which is manufactured into butter and shipped to various points in the states of Pennsylvania and Maryland. The product turned out by Mr. Hamill ranks high in the market, as it is manufactured with great care, and he generally commands top prices from the dealers. He is one of the owners of the Cripple Creek Mine, and has also an interest in mines in various states in the west. While a resident of Lancaster county, Mr. Hamill was quite active in politics on the Republican side, and held the offices of state and county tax collector for several years. Since coming to Chester county, however, he has paid little attention to politics and held no offices, his time being taken up by the exacting nature of his business. He is social in temperament and rather fond of fellowship afforded by membership in the fraternities, so we find him connected with several of the prominent and popular orders. He is especially active in connection with the Masons and Odd Fellows and seldom fails to be present at the lodge meetings in Cochranville.

In early life Mr. Hamill married Mary A. Fritz, daughter of a prosperous farmer of Lancaster county, by whom he had two children: William Harry, who married Rebecca V. Hastings, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, daughter of L. R. Hastings, of Mechanic Grove, Lancaster county; and Mary A., who became the wife of C. M. Wentz. The mother of these children having died, Mr. Hamill was married in 1887 to Jennie McNeal, daughter of Cyrus McNeal, a Lancaster county farmer, and by this union has the following children: Bertha V., J. Walter and Robert E., all of whom reside at home. Mr. Hamill and his wife attend the Methodist Episcopal church, and they enjoy general respect in the community as people of sterling worth.

JOSEPH KIRKNER, an enterprising farmer and public-spirited citizen of Charlestown township, Chester county, is a son of Robert Kirkner, who was born March 16, 1838, and received his education in the public schools of Charlestown township. His trade, which was that of a miller, he followed successfully, and at the same time conducted a farm with profitable results. His wife, who was born October 2, 1840, in Schuylkill township, where she was educated in the public schools, bore him the following named children: George, Mary Anna, who married John Davis, an ironworker; Joseph, mentioned at length hereinafter; Robert, who is a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and married Mary Jacobs, of Tredyffrin township; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Charles Wilson, a milk-dealer of Philadelphia; Samuel, who is a baker in Berwyn, and married Laura Free; and Sarah Levins, who is employed in Wanamaker's establishment. The youngest of the family, Elmer, is working on a farm.

Joseph Kirkner, son of Robert and Mary L. Kirkner, was born June 18, 1863, in East Whiteland township, and obtained his education in the public schools of his native place. At an early age he became an independent farmer, displaying such an aptitude for agricultural pursuits, that before many years had elapsed he was able to purchase the farm which is now his home. This estate he maintains in a flourishing condition, the result of the constant and skillful attention which he bestows upon it. His agricultural duties, however, are not allowed to absorb all of his time, a due portion of which is given to the consideration of public affairs, and to aiding to the extent of his power every project which has for its aim the welfare of the community. The confidence with which he is regarded by his fellow-citizens, and the popularity which he enjoys, may be inferred from the fact that in 1893 he was elected to the office of school director, which he held until 1896, in which year he was chosen as inspector. He served in this capacity for one year, and is now filling the office of supervisor. This record shows that the trust inspired by Mr. Kirkner's estimable traits of character, which was the cause of his first election to office, was increased by the manner in which he discharged the duties devolving upon him, and led to his being repeatedly placed in positions of responsibility. He has been thrice chosen as a delegate to the county convention. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party. He and his family are members of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Kirkner married Retta M. Young, and their children are: Barclay, who was born December 26, 1884, attends school during the winter, and in the summer works on the farm; Earl, who was born June 6, 1886, also divides his time between attendance at school and work on the farm; and Bessie, who was born October 12, 1892, and is now attending school. The three children are being educated in the public schools of Charlestown township.

Mrs. Kirkner is a daughter of David and Anna Young. The former was, nearly all his life, actively engaged in agricultural labors. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: Isaac, who is a farmer; Lydia, who is the wife of George Mills, a machinist of Philadelphia; and Retta M. who was born February 14, 1858, was educated in the public schools, and became the wife of Joseph Kirkner, as mentioned above.

THEODORE BICKING, a leading manufacturer of Chester county, is a representative of a family, which, notwithstanding the fact that several links in the earlier generations appear to be missing, is undoubtedly one of the oldest in the county. The first ancestor concerning whom any positive information can be obtained was Frederick Bicking, and from the fact that he died in Upper Oxford township, it is supposed that the family had been planted there by his progenitors.

Edmund Bicking, the next in line of descent of whom anything can be known with certainty, settled in East Fallowfield township. He was a papermaker by trade, and was employed in the "old Bobb" mill, now known as the "James Wilson" mill. Edmund Bicking married Sarah Torbett, and they were the parents of the following children: Franklin, who married Rachel Famous, of York county, Pennsylvania; Benjamin F.; Righter, who married Rebecca Riggs; Albanus, who married Louisa Tyson; Sarah A., who became the wife of David McClellan; Benjamin F., mentioned at length hereinafter; Edmund, who married Annie McClymands; Jane, who became the wife of George Dale; and Esther, who married Jesse Goodacre.

Benjamin F. Bicking, son of Edmund and Sarah (Torbett) Bicking, was born October 11, 1830, in East Fallowfield township. He served an apprenticeship to the trade of papermaking, at which he worked in various places until 1862, when he went to Beaver Dam Mills as superintendent for C. S. Garrett, of Philadelphia, one of the oldest and most prominent paper manufacturers of that city. In connection with this position, which he held during the remainder of his life, he took charge of all the real estate of Mr. Garrett, and also conducted two large farms. Politically he was a Republican, but took no active interest in public affairs. He married, in 1854, Eurie, daughter of Joshua and Martha (Valentine) Ecoff, the former a member of one of the old pioneer families of Londonderry township, Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Bicking were the parents of the following children: Mary, who married Scott Quillian; Martha, who became the wife of James Bailey; Joshua, who died at the age of fourteen; Benjamin F., a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; George W., who married Kate Reese; Theodore, mentioned at length hereinafter; Walter, who married Lizzie Reese; Horace; Clara B., who became the wife of Sewell Hill; and Eurie. Mr. Bicking's active career came to an end while he was yet in the prime of life, his death occurring September 2, 1877.

Theodore Bicking, son of Benjamin F. and Eurie (Ecoff) Bicking, was born May 13, 1867, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and passed his boyhood at Beaver Dam Mills, receiving his education in the common schools. After completing his course of study, he entered the paper mill as an ordinary workman, and learned the business of paper-making in the most thorough manner, making himself master of every detail. He filled successively various positions of trust until 1887, when he was sent by the firm of the Garretts to Buck Run, to superintend the erection of their new mill at that place. After accomplishing this work, he returned to the Beaver Dam Mill, of which he was, in 1890, appointed general manager, a position which he now holds, and which he has filled during these many years in such a manner as to give evidence of marked business ability. He affiliates with the Republican party, but is prevented by the pressing and onerous nature of his duties from participating in political affairs, being obliged to devote all his time and thoughts to the many and extensive business interests confided to his charge.

Mr. Bicking married Annette B., daughter of Henderson Paddis, and they have one child, Norman Bicking.

BENJAMIN F. BICKING, a prominent business man of Chester county, is descended from a family which has been for half a century closely identified with the manufacturing interests of Pennsylvania. It is supposed that the family was founded in this country by the ancestors of Frederick Bicking, the first progenitor concerning whom the present generation of his descendants possess any positive knowledge, and whose death occurred in Upper Oxford township.

Edmund Bicking, the next in line of descent of whom anything can be known with certainty, settled in East Fallowfield township. His trade was that of a papermaker, and he worked in what was then called the "old Bobb" mill, but it now designated as the "James Wilson" mill. His son Edmund married Sarah Torbett, and they were the parents of the following children: Franklin, who married Rachel Famous, of York county, Pennsylvania; Benjamin F.; Righter, who married Rebecca Riggs; Albanus, who married Louisa Tyson; Sarah A., who became the wife of David McClellan; Benjamin F., mentioned at length hereinafter; Edmund, who married Annie McClymands; Jane, who became the wife of George Dale; and Esther, who married Jesse Goodacre.

Benjamin F. Bicking, son of Edmund and Sarah (Torbett) Bicking, was born October 11, 1830, in East Fallowfield township. He served an apprenticeship to the trade of papermaking, which he followed for a number of years in different places. In 1862, he was appointed by C. S. Garrett, one of the oldest and most prominent paper manufacturers of Philadelphia, superintendent of his mill at Beaver Dam. To this place he removed, and held the position during the remainder of his life, taking charge also of all the real estate of Mr. Garrett, and acting as manager of two large farms. He was a member of the Republican party, but was not interested in politics to any great extent. He married, in 1854, Eurie, daughter of Joshua and Martha (Valentine) Ecoff, the former a member of one of the old families descended from the original settlers of Londonderry township, Chester county. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bicking. Mary, who married Scott Quillian; Martha, who became the wife of James Bailey; Joshua, who died at the age of fourteen; Benjamin F., mentioned at length hereinafter; George W., who married Kate Reese; Theodore, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Walter, who married Lizzie Reese; Horace; Clara B., who became the wife of Sewell Hill; and Eurie. Mr. Bicking died September 2, 1877, at the comparatively early age of forty-six years.

Benjamin F. Bicking, second son of Benjamin F. and Eurie (Ecoff) Bicking, was born October 13, 1860, in East Fallowfield township. When he was five years old the family removed to Spring Lawn, and two years later to Beaver Dam, where he was educated. At the age of twelve years, he began to learn the trade of papermaking, and afterward filled various positions in the mill until 1888, when he was appointed general manager of the Beaver Dam mill. This position he held until December, 1900, when he was given a similar position in the recently completed mill at Buck Run. This office he still holds, and his whole time is devoted to the able and assiduous discharge of the numerous and important duties and responsibilities which it involves. In politics he is a Republican, but his constant application to business renders it impossible for him to take an active part in public affairs.

Mr. Bicking married, in 1882, Mary, daughter of Henry Schroder, who was the predecessor of his son-in-law in the superintendency of the Beaver Dam mill. Mr. and Mrs. Bickering have four children: Cora, Ralph, Eurie and Marie.

RUDULPH ELLIS was born in 1836 in Elkton, Cecil county, Maryland, a son of Francis Atterbury, a prominent lawyer, and Eliza (Howard) Ellis.

He came to Philadelphia as a boy to enter upon a business career, and entered the firm of Gaw McAllister & Co. as a clerk. At the outbreak of the rebellion he went to the front with the famous First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry during the three months' enlistment, and then became first lieutenant in Rush's Lancers, which later became the Sixth Pennsylvania Cavalry Regiment. From a captaincy in that regiment he became assistant inspector general on the staff of General Torbert, of General Sheridan's division of the Army of the Potomac. He was severely wounded at the battle of Beverly Ford. At the conclusion of the war he resumed business in Philadelphia as senior member of the stock exchange firm of R. Ellis & Co., and although that firm was dissolved about fifteen years ago he continued to keep up his interest in public and financial matters. In 1901, on the retirement of Mr. John B. Gest from the presidency of the Fidelity Trust Company, Mr. Ellis succeeded to the office of this, the largest and most powerful institution of its kind in Philadelphia.

He is a director in many corporations, notably the Pennsylvania Railroad (succeeding the late William L. Elkins), in the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, the Electric Storage Battery Company, the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad, the Mercantile Trust Company, and Manhattan Trust Company, of New York; the Commercial Trust Company, and Fourth Street National Bank, of Philadelphia. He was a member of the committee formed to protect the bondholders of the Asphalt Company of America at the time of the collapse in 1902, and assisted in the reorganization of the property, becoming one of the votary trustees of the new General Asphalt Company.

In 1879 he took up his residence in Delaware county, purchased the old Davis and Pugh farms in Radnor township, and three years later added the Moore property extending into Haverford. The estate consists of over three hundred and fifty acres, and is generally considered one of the finest farms in the county. This has been the residence of Mr. Ellis and his family since 1880. The house which he completed that year stands on the crest of a steep hill which has always been called "Fox Hill," after which the whole property is named.

Mr. Ellis has always taken an active part in public affairs of the township, and when, in 1901, Radnor became a township of the first class, he was elected one of the five township commissioners, and serves as chairman of the highway committee. He has always been a staunch Republican in politics, and not infrequently receives the county leaders at his home. Through his private efforts as well as his official position, he has secured for road purposes throughout the township very large contributions from the wealthy property owners, and has set an example himself by building and presenting to the county the elaborate stone bridge over Ithan creek, on Bryn Mawr avenue. He secured from Mr. John M. Converse, Mr. Lincoln Godfrey, Mr. George H. McFadden and Mr. Frank Clyde similar donations, and another well known Radnorite, Mr. Theophilus P. Chandler, contributed his services as architect in the designing of all these bridges. Mr. Ellis is vice-president of the Radnor Hunt Club, and a member of many other social organizations, among them the Philadelphia Club, the Union Club of New York, the famous Farmers' Club, and he is also a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

Mr. Ellis was married to Helen Struthers, daughter of the late William Struthers, of Philadelphia, who operated many large marble quarries and yards, and donated the tomb in which rest the remains of George Washington at Mount Vernon. They have one child, William Struthers Ellis, mentioned hereinafter. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis were among the founders of the Bryn Mawr Hospital.

William S. Ellis, son of Rudolph and Helen (Struthers) Ellis, was born in 1867, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He is the only child of his parents, and was educated at Harvard University, graduating in the class of 1889. He then entered the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in the class of 1893, immediately thereafter opening an office in Philadelphia. He is a member of the Delaware county bar, attorney for the commissioners of Radnor township, and is secretary to the Commercial Trust Company of Philadelphia. He is an active member of the Republican party, holding various offices. He served as a member of the board of education of Radnor township for six years, was the first president of the Radnor Republican Club, and has been a delegate to various conventions. He is secretary of the Radnor Hunt Club, a member of the Philadelphia Club, the Philadelphia Country Club, and the Union Club of New York. Mr. Ellis attends the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Ellis married, January 25, 1893, Cintra Hutchinson, daughter of the late Pemberton S. Hutchinson, president of the Philadelphia Savings Fund. Mrs. Ellis' mother was Agnes Wharton, daughter of George M. Wharton, the distinguished lawyer of Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis reside in the old Pugh home at Radnor station. They are the parents of three daughters: Sydney, Helen and Cintra.

JOHN E. YOUNG. John Young came to America from England in 1744, and settled in West Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he remained until his death. His son, John Young, married Rebecca Sheward, and their son, the third John, married (first) Ann Woodward, and (second) Mary Grey. Nine children were the issue of the first marriage.

One of the descendants of John Young is John E. Young, of Newlin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His father, George

Young, was born September 17, 1817. He was reared and educated in Chester county, and was always a farmer. His first wife was Emily Jane Maston, who left but one child. His second wife was Phcebe B. Patterson, who was born February 17, 1848. Eight children were born to this union, four of whom are still living: Emmarine J., who married Willis J. Hoopes, now deceased, and two children were born to this marriage; Susanna T., who is single; Clarice M., who married Harry Chalfant, and five children were born to them; and John E. Young.

John E. Young was born on the family homestead in Newlin township in 1864, and he laid the foundation for his after life by the mental training which he received in the Edgefield Institute, an excellent school located in Uwchlan township. Following the example of his fathers, he took up the vocation of farming on the ancestral estate. There are one hundred and fifty-six acres in the place, and under Mr. Young's careful management it shows no signs of impoverishment. One of the important industries of this region is dairying, and he sells a large supply of dairy products from the thirty-five high grade cows which make up his establishment.

Mr. Young married Miss Hannah M. Gibson, who is the daughter of George Gibson, a prominent farmer of East Bradford township. The six children of this union are all at home and attend the schools of the township. Their names are: George, Mary, Edna, Clarence, Harry and Effie. Mr. Young is a thorough believer in good methods of education, and has served his district as director. He is a Republican, and is an active member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

JOSEPH KENNARD SOMMERS, one of the prominent and highly respected citizens of Garrettford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in McWilliamstown, Chester county, February 23, 1860, the son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Flower) Sommers, and a descendant of one of the oldest families in the state, there being little doubt but that all those of the name in Pennsylvania were descended from a common ancestor.

Jacob Sommers (father), was born in Germantown, Pennsylvania, March 1, 1817, a son of Jacob and Sarah Sommers. March 15, 1876, Jacob Sommers located at Garrettford and established a general store, which he conducted successfully until 1893, when he retired from active life and turned his entire business over to his son, Joseph K. Sommers. Mr. Sommers was appointed postmaster at McWilliamstown, Chester county, by President Lincoln, about the year 1860, and held that office for sixteen years. After his removal to Upper Darby he became the incumbent of the office of postmaster at Garrettford, and faithfully and conscientiously performed the duties until the year of his decease (1898), he having continuously filled the position for the long period of thirty-eight years. Jacob Sommers and his wife, Elizabeth (Flower) Sommers, a daughter of George and Catherine (Myers) Flower, were the parents of six children: Emma M., who became the wife of Robert Young, and their children are: Howard E., Anna Cora and Emma Mead; Anna B., who became the wife of George W. Tyson, and their children are: John W., Emma and George; Frank P., who married Mary Wallace, and one child has been born to them, Laura T.; Elizabeth (Lizzie), who became the wife of Frank M. Free, and their children are: Frank J., Nellie G., Lillian M., Edgar, Anna T., Emma Y., Joseph S. and Charles William; Jacob, who married Eliza J. Craig, and their two children are: Ralph and Craig; Joseph Kennard, mentioned hereinafter.

Jacob Sommerz

Joseph W. Summers.

Joseph K. Sommers received his early education in the common schools of McWilliamstown, Chester county, during which time he assisted his parents with the work upon the farm. After completing his studies he went to Philadelphia as a clerk in the novelty store of Messrs. Allison, at Eighth and Market streets, and after serving in that capacity for a short period of time he engaged with his brother in a plumbing business, continuing in that line until the spring of 1876. He then joined his father and assisted with the management of his general store at Garrettford, acting as chief clerk and assistant until the death of the latter, and since that year (1898) up to the present time (1903) the business has increased both in volume and importance. He was also appointed to succeed his father as postmaster at Garrettford, and is now serving his second term. In addition to these duties, Mr. Sommers is a director in the Clifton National Bank, and the present excellent standing of the bank among other financial corporations is largely due to his energy and progressive spirit. He has been a member of the Baptist church for a number of years, and has always contributed liberally of his time and means towards its support. In politics he is an active Republican, always taking a prominent part in town affairs, and being recognized as an important factor in party matters. Fraternally he is a member of Fernwood Lodge, No. 543, F. & A. M.; Chapter, No. 256, R. A. M., and Commandery, No. 53, K. T. Energetic, prompt to grasp opportunities, genial, a faithful public official and a good citizen, Mr. Sommers has gained and holds the full confidence of his fellow-townsmen, and is a representative of the best interests of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He is unmarried.

WILLIAM SCHLEGEL. The early progenitors of the Schlegel family have been at various times prominently identified with the educational and political interest of the central German states. To this family belonged the eminent German philosopher Schlegel, who is frequently mentioned in the history of the fatherland in connection with the importance of his researches as given to the world in his writings. Among his lineal descendants was Phillip Schlegel, a worthy and respected citizen of the ortschaft of Papanau, a small town near the line of Baden and Wurttemberg. He was a miller by trade, and became the owner of a considerable estate. With a strong belief in Democratic principles, he advocated a free and independent government for the people, and taught such views to his two sons, Michael and Phillip, the former of whom was among the Revolutionists of 1848. As history relates, these brave men failed in winning their cause owing to the largely superior numbers of the army of Prussia, and in consequence were termed rebels by the government. Their property was also confiscated, and several members of the Schlegel family fled to France, locating in Strasburg, and their descendants are now among the successful residents of that historical city.

Michael Schlegel, who was amongst the Revolutionists, came to America and spent his remaining days in the new world. His brother Phillip, who learned the miller's trade and after his father's death inherited a portion of the old homestead, located in the village of Dietlingen, in the district of Pfortsheim, Baden, and purchased the old mill property of that village, carrying on business there for a number of years. Although not a college graduate, he was a man of excellent common sense and sound judgment, and his name was synonymous with honorable dealings, while among all who knew him his word was as good as his bond. He was born in 1798 and died in 1862. His wife bore the maiden name of Wilhelmina Burgle, and her father was for many years a school teacher in the village of Dietlingen Baden. Phillip and Wilhelmina Schlegel had a large number of children. William, the eldest, married Catherine Koehler, a daughter of Johannes Koehler, and in 1848 they came to America, locating near Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The husband died in October, 1892, at the age of sixty-nine years, and his wife in March, 1883, at the age of fifty-seven years. Their children were: Anna Mary, who became the wife of David P. Humes, and they had three children—William D., Katie G. and Albert T.; Caroline R., wife of Nicholas Jenney, who bore him two children—Annie and Leah; William, who died at the age of seven years; John P., who married Elizabeth McBride, and had one son, William; Charles W., who married Katie Kent; Albert T., who died in October, 1883, at the age of twenty-one years.

JOHN MILLER, the esteemed representative of a race of farmers who have for several generations been respected citizens of West Vincent township, is a son of John Miller, who was all his life a farmer in his native township. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Elizabeth Smith, a member of one of the old families of West Vincent. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller: 1. Henry, who is a retired farmer, and married Sarah, daughter of Isaiah Wells, of New Castle, Pennsylvania. 2. William, who married Mary, daughter of Mr. Smith, a farmer of East Nantmeal. 3. Jackson, who lived in Chester, was a plasterer by trade, and married Abigail Regester. 4. Jacob, who was a farmer and plasterer, and married Eliza, daughter of Stephen Griffith, of West Vincent. 5. Elizabeth, who became the wife of Henry Thomson, a carpenter, journeyman and surveyer of Pottstown. 6. Hannah, who married Joseph Davis, a farmer of East Pikeland, who is now deceased. 7. Margaret, who is living in the far west. 8. John, mentioned at length hereinafter. It will be seen that the Miller family, in addition to being an old one, was also extremely numerous and that thus it was of appreciable importance in swelling the numbers of the Democratic party, to which Mr. Miller and his sons faithfully adhered.

John Miller, son of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Miller, was born January 8, 1828, in West Vincent township, Chester county, and received his education in the schools of the township. Until reaching the age of sixteen, he remained at home assisting his father in the labors of the homestead, and then worked for six years on different farms in the neighborhood, his services commanding remuneration to such a degree that, when about twenty-two years of age, he was in a position to begin life for himself. He has for many years led the life of an independent and prosperous farmer, managing his estate with skill and enterprise. In accordance with the traditions of his family, he is a strenuous advocate of Democratic doctrines. He and his family are members of the Reformed church.

Mr. Miller married Rachel A., daughter of William and Lucy Thompson, the former a farmer of West Vincent township. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller: 1. Addison, deceased, who married Lizzie, daughter of Samuel Seitz, of Chestnut Hill; their children were: Warren, who is now deceased; Elsie, John Chester, Granville, Mary Esther, Carrie and Sarah May. 2. Lizzie, who is the wife of Allen

Smith, a farmer, who assists his father-in-law in the care of the homestead. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have the following named children: William T., who married Emma McAfee; Frank L., John, Harry, Minnie T., Clarence and Morris. 3. John, who held one of the offices in the gift of the Republicans of Phoenixville, and married Martha, daughter of Joseph Hallman, of Chester Springs. They had three children: John Howard, Jenieve and Charlotte. Mr. Miller is now deceased, and his wife survives him.

SAMUEL D. CORNOG, a man of good business tact and judgment, who by his industry and careful management is now the owner of an extensive and productive farm in Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of a family who were among the early settlers in this section of the state. He was born in Charlestown township, Chester county, February 10, 1853, a son of Abner and Jane (Rodenboh) Cornog. Abner Cornog was a native of Tredyffrin township, Chester county, and his entire business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits; his religious sentiments were in accord with the tenets of the Baptist church, and his political affiliations were with the Republican party. Jane (Dodenboh) Cornog, wife of Abner Cornog, was a daughter of William Rodenboh.

Samuel D. Cornog spent the early years of his life on his father's farm, and his educational advantages were such as were obtainable in the common schools of the neighborhood. He chose farming as a means of livelihood, and has continued in this line of industry up to the present time (1903). He is highly respected in the community for his uprightness of character, which is displayed in his daily life and business transactions; he is a member of the Windsor Baptist church, and casts his vote with the Prohibition party.

On March 4, 1874, Mr. Cornog was united in marriage to Anna M. Supplee, at the residence of her parents, Peter and Elizabeth Supplee, in Easttown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Anna M., who became the wife of Horace Hause, a prosperous farmer of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, and William B. Cornog.

JAMES A. RAMSAY, a well known and prosperous farmer of East Fallowfield, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family that has been identified with the local agricultural interests of Chester county for many years.

James Ramsay, grandfather of James A., lived in what was formerly Highland township, now East Fallowfield. Here Robert, his sixth child, was born in 1809, and was reared on the homestead, attending the neighborhood schools. He learned the trade of wheelwright, and engaged in business with his brother, Daniel. Subsequently he purchased of Allen Mode the farm of one hundred and nine acres near McWilliamstown in East Fallowfield township, where he lived until his death in 1867. He was a man highly regarded in the community, and at different times held most of the local offices. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party. He married Margaret, daughter of Adam Reid, and to the couple the following children were born: James A., whose name appears at the beginning of this article; William R., who married Sarah Bennix, and had nine children; Lizzie, unmarried; Robert E., who married Lizzie Young, and had three children, two of whom have died; Ella M., unmarried; J. F., a farmer, unmarried; Annie, who died in infancy; Charles, who died at the age of eighteen.

James A., oldest child of Robert and Margaret (Reid) Ramsay, was born October 12, 1842, and brought up to a farmer's life. During his young manhood, however, he was engaged in other occupations. For seven years he carried on a meat market, and afterwards was engaged in a general merchandise business at Modena. He was also agent for the W. and N. R. R. for six years, following which service he bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres on the Strasburg road. Here he lived for six years more, and then moved to the farm of one hundred and fifty acres where he now lives, and which has since been his home. He does a general line of farm business, including the management of a fine dairy. In politics he is a Democrat, and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity.

His wife was Amy, daughter of John I. Woodward, and the following children have been born to him: Robert, who married Jennie Faddis, and has one son; Edwin, who married Sue C. Valentine, and has one daughter; Walter R., who lives in Boston, Massachusetts; James A., deceased; Charles I., who is at home.

GEORGE MILLER LEWIS, a prominent man of affairs of Media, Pennsylvania, is a representative of one of the oldest families of Delaware county, whose ancestor, William Lewis, with his wife Ann Lewis, came from the parish of Ilan, in Glamorganshire, Wales, about the year 1686, and settled in Radnor township, Delaware county. Among their children was a son, David Lewis, who subsequently married and was the father of a son, Amos Lewis, who was united in marriage to Hannah Knowles; their son, John Lewis, was born in Radnor township, (on a part of the estate now owned by the heirs of the late George W. Childs) and was twice married, his first wife having been Jane Farr, and his second wife Ann Davis.

George Lewis, son of John and Ann (Davis) Lewis, and grandfather of George M. Lewis, was born in Springfield township, May 15, 1788. After obtaining the educational advantages afforded by the district schools, he engaged in the manufacture of paper, establishing the mills on Crum creek, which he operated for many years, and late in life he retired from that business and removed to Media. He married Edith Worrell, daughter of John Worrell, of Middletown township, and they were the parents of the following named children: Davis, Mordecai, Ann, J. Reece, George and Hannah R. Lewis. The father of these children died February 24, 1870; surviving him was his widow, who passed away December 27, 1886, at the advanced age of ninety-five years.

J. Reece Lewis, father of George M. Lewis, spent the early years of his life in attendance at the district and private schools, and upon attaining young manhood became associated with his brothers in the manufacture of cotton goods. Their business was conducted in the mill on Crum creek, established by their father, and by the exercise of industry and perseverance they succeeded in securing a large and profitable trade. Mr. J. Reece Lewis was always public-spirited, a thorough business man, and took an active interest in all matters pertaining to the upbuilding and improvement of the community. He married Mary A. Miller, and two children were born to them: George M. and Edith A. Lewis. The father of these children died December 8, 1863.

George M. Lewis, son of J. Reece and Mary A. (Miller) Lewis, was born April 16, 1849, in Springfield township. He acquired a practical education in public and private schools, and began his business career in his uncle's cotton factory. In 1869 he formed a partnership with Callender I. Leiper, and engaged in the business of quarrying stone. Their quarries, known as "the old Thomas Leiper's quarries," are situated at Avondale, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and in the management of the plant they employ between fifty and one hundred men. They furnish stone for building bridges and also for foundations, and are conducting a very flourishing business, their name being synonymous with straightforward and honorable dealings. It is claimed that the first railroad in the United States was built to this quarry. Mr. Lewis is one of the directors of the First National Bank of Media. He is a member of the Media Club, having served as the second president of the organization, and at the present time (1904) is the second vice-president of the Rose Tree Hunt Club, and a director of the Master Builders' Exchange of Philadelphia. In his political affiliations he is a firm supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

Mr. Lewis married, October 30, 1872, Sarah Brooke, youngest daughter of the late Hugh Jones Brooke. They have one daughter, Mary Miller, who married, June 4, 1902, Dr. Charles S. Jack, of Philadelphia.

HORACE A. BEALE, deceased, was a man of sanguine and determined temperament, and being possessed of a vast amount of energy, quick perception of opportunities and judicious management, was enabled to conquer every obstacle and achieve substantial success in the business world. He was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, January 25, 1827, and is a descendant of Thomas and Catherine Beale of Caln, Wiltshire, England. William Beale, son of Thomas and Catherine Beale, was born August 14, 1709, and about the year 1730 came to this country and settled in West Whiteland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he became the owner of a large tract of land. He was twice married; his first wife was Mary Jenkin, daughter of David Jenkin, and the issue of this union was eight children. William Beale died December 27, 1800, at the advanced age of ninety-one years.

John Beale, son of William and Mary (Jenkin) Beale, was born December 12, 1740, was reared and educated in his native township, and later in life enlisted in the Continental army as a private. He served under the command of General Lafayette, and during one of the engagements near the head of Elk Valley, on January 25, 1777, he was killed, and his remains were interred in that locality. John Beale and his wife, Tamar (Burgoyne) Beale, were the parents of two children: Mary and Joseph Beale.

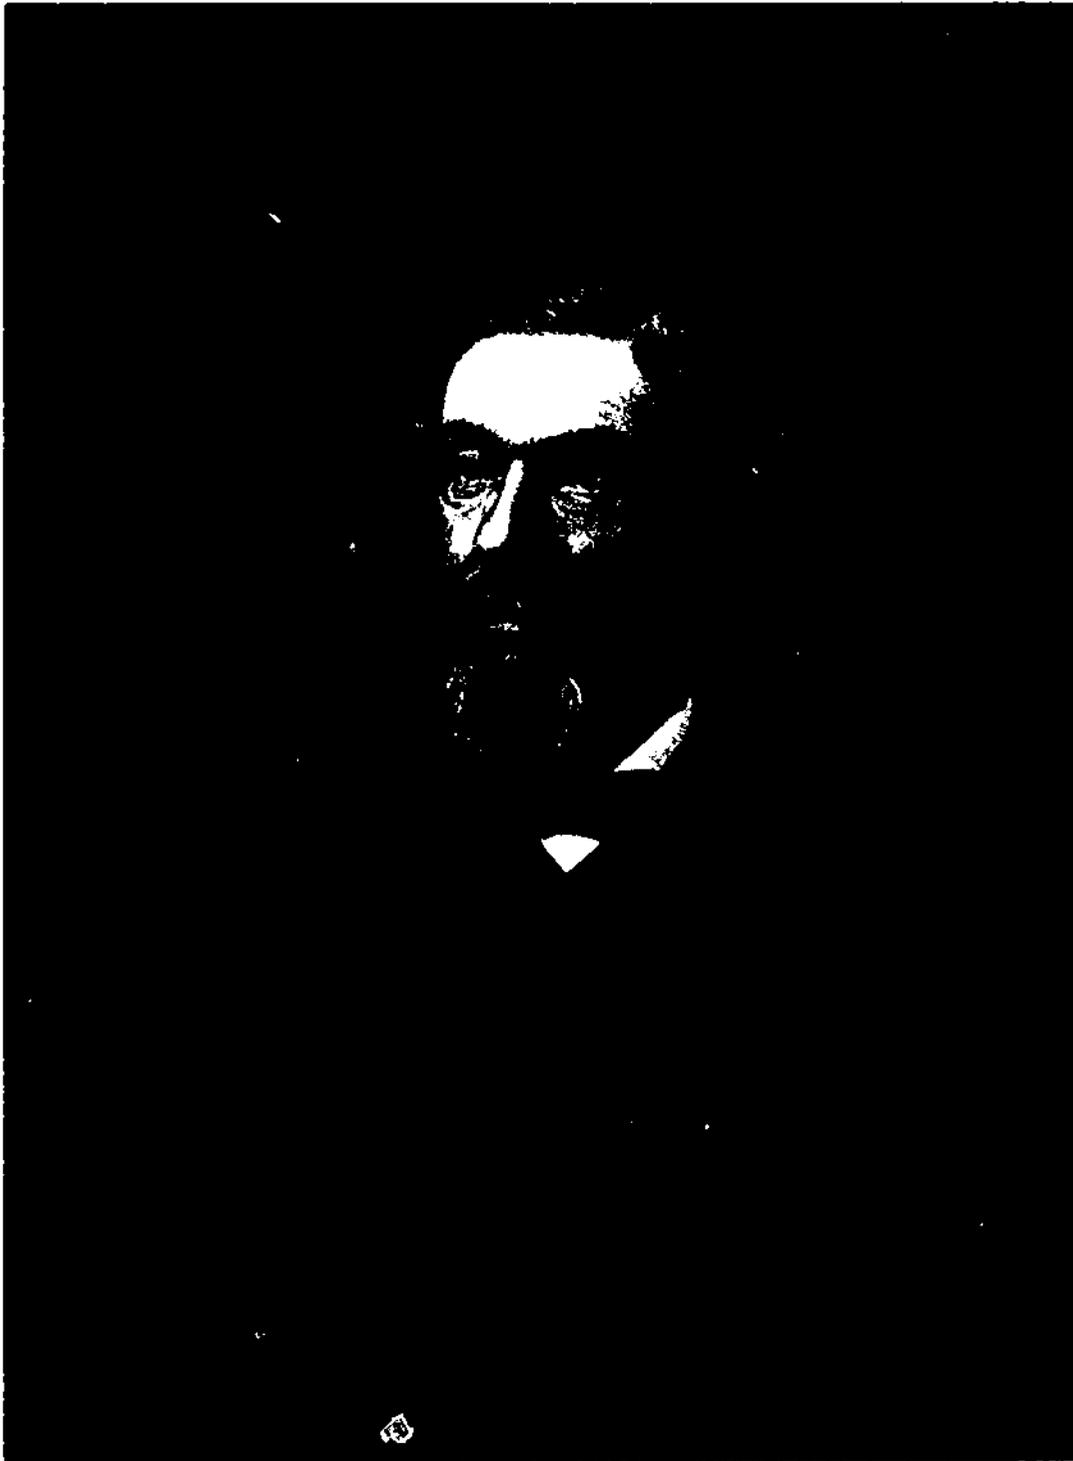

Joseph Beale, father of Horace A. Beale, was born in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, in 1768, and was reared near Downingtown, by his grandfather, with whom he resided after the death of his father. Upon the completion of his studies he engaged in the furniture manufacturing business, and for many years was a member of the firm of Beale & Jenison, of Philadelphia, in which city he made his home for the greater part of his life. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion he adhered to the tenets of the Presbyterian faith, holding membership in the First Presbyterian church of Philadelphia. He was united in marriage to Margaret McDowell, daughter of Captain James McDowell, of Upper Oxford township. Their children were: James M., Joseph, Horace, who died in early life; Horace A., Elizabeth, and Harriet Beale. The father of these children died at his farm in Downingtown, in the year 1841, aged seventy-six years, and the mother died in the year 1834, aged fifty-three years.

Horace A. Beale, son of Joseph and Margaret (McDowell) Beale, was born in Philadelphia, January 25, 1827. He acquired a liberal education in the old Philadelphia Academy and the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from the latter institution after a three years course. His first employment was with the Phoenix Iron Company; in 1846 he accepted a position with the Laurel Iron Works; then was employed at the viaduct in Coatesville; later bought at the Deer Creek Works in Maryland; then leased the Thorndale Iron Works, and the Hibornia Iron Works, and in 1873 he established the iron works at Parkesburg, under the name of Horace A. Beale. Subsequently the firm became Horace A. Beale & Co., by the admission of William H. Gibbons of Coatesville to partnership. In 1882 the Parkesburg Iron Company was organized, and incorporated with a capital of $125,000, the officers being: Horace A. Beale, president; William H. Gibbons, vice-president; Amos Michener, secretary; Samuel R. Parke, treasurer; and A. J. Williams, general manager. These persons remained in their respective places until the fall of 1897, when Horace A. Beale died, and Mr. Gibbons became president; Horace A. Beale, Jr., vice-president; William C. Michener, secretary; George Thomas, treasurer; A. J. Williams, general manager; and E. H. Brodhead, assistant general manager. On January 1, 1900, the president and treasurer retired from the business, and the new officers elected were: Horace A. Beale, Jr., president; A. J. Williams, vice-president; William C. Michener, secretary; E. H. Brodhead, treasurer and general manager; H. B. Wiese, superintendent; and John R. Humpton, assistant manager. The product of these mills consists of boiler tube-iron skelp, the annual output being twenty thousand tons. The plant has been greatly improved, buildings erected on a larger scale, and the capacity for business has been increased thirty-three and one-third per cent. since 1900. The buildings consist of three mill buildings, one forge building, three charcoal houses, two scrap houses, a machine shop, two trimming houses and other necessary houses. The mill consists of four two-high plate lines driven by a horizontal slide-valve engine, two three-high muck-bar roll-train driven by a vertical slide-valve engine, twelve heating furnaces, twenty-two forge fires, three puddling furnaces with double-acting upright hammer, and two horizontal hammers. There are employed at these works five hundred men, and the location of the works in this town increased the growth of the community in a remarkable manner.

During the Civil war Mr. Beale took an active part in defending the states of Maryland and Pennsylvania from the invasions of General Lee, raising and commanding an independent infantry company in the years 1862 and 1863. In his political affiliations he was an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, was a prominent member of Williamson Lodge, No. 309, Free and Accepted Masons, of Downingtown, and a member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

H. D. Bealer Jr.

Horace A. Beale

In 1855, Mr. Beale married Caroline Dougal, daughter of James Dougal, of Northumberland county, and her death occurred in 1859. Ten years later he was united in marriage to Ellen M. Mendenhall, daughter of the Rev. Edwin H. Mendenhall, and one son was born to them, Horace A., Jr.

Mr. Beale, who was esteemed in the community for his many acts of charity and kindness toward the poor and afflicted, died November 3, 1897, survived by his widow and son. Mrs. Beale resides in a handsome and commodious house in Parkesburg, Pennsylvania. She has traveled extensively throughout Europe, and has also spent considerable time in Cuba, Mexico and Alaska. She has devoted a large amount of time and attention to various forms of charitable and philanthropic work in Chester county, and at the present time (1903) is serving as vice-regent of the Daughters of the Revolution.

Horace A. Beale, Jr., son of Horace A. and Ellen M. (Mendenhall) Beale, was born February 10, 1870. His education was acquired in the schools of Parkesburg, the Uryhouse school at Fox Chase, Philadelphia, the Hill school at Pottstown, and Haverford College, where he completed his course. For a short period of time he was engaged in the capacity of assistant chemist with the Penant Steel company at Steelton, near Harrisburg. He then became actively connected with the plant at Parkesburg, was employed in the various departments where he became familiar with all the details of the industry, and is now filling the office of president. In politics he is a strong Republican, is an active man of affairs, and was appointed a delegate to the national convention held at Philadelphia in 1900. He is a great lover and admirer of horses, and is probably the owner of more automobiles than any man in the county, taking keen pleasure in traveling through the country in this mode of conveyance. He has toured not only his own state but also the majority of the New England states. His fine spacious residence is located on the hill near his old home.

Mr. Beale married Mary Rogers Hartshorn Dunning, a daughter of Erastus Clark (of the United States navy) and Harriet Shallcross (Morris) Dunning, the latter named being a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Hastings (Brian) Morris. The issue of this marriage was one son, Horace Alexander (3), who was born June 9, 1901.

FRANKLIN WORDEN MILLER, a well known farmer and esteemed citizen of East Vincent township, Chester county, is a son of John R. Miller, a native of the county. He was one of seven brothers, the names of the others being as follows: Samuel, Henry, Josiah, Sebastian, Perry Davis and Jones. All these, with the exception of the last named, who is living in Ohio, are now deceased. John R. Miller, who was born in 1834, spent his life as a farmer in his native county. He married Matilda Rheinhart, who was born in 1843, in Chester county. Her two brothers, Allen and Silas Henry, are both deceased, as are also her two sisters, Susan and Mary Ann. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller: Franklin Worden, mentioned at length hereinafter; Harry R., who was born in 1875, and married Mamie Dilworth, of Montgomery county; and William Sorber, who was born in 1877, married May Scheyner, of Spring City, and has one child. Mr. Miller, the father of these three sons, and a man of unpretentious worth, died August 8, 1895, and his widow is still living, being now sixty years of age.

Franklin Worden Miller, son of John R. and Matilda (Rheinhart) Miller, was born July 22, 1866, in Chester county, as were both his brothers. He received his education in the schools of his native township, completing his course of study at the age of eighteen. Since that time his life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, his aptitude for which has been fully demonstrated by the successful results which have attended his intelligently directed and persevering labors. As a citizen Mr. Miller is fully alive to the duties of his position, and is never found wanting in the fulfillment of any of his political obligations. No better evidence of the regard in which he is held by his townsmen can be desired than that which is furnished by the fact that, for the last four years he has held the office of inspector of election.

Mr. Miller married, March 8, 1888, Ida Miller, and the following children were born to them: Howard, who was born October 31, 1890, and died in December, 1890; Edna May, who was born in 1893; and Stella, who was born in June, 1896, and died in October, 1896. All these children were natives of the same county as their parents and grandparents.

Mrs. Miller belongs to another branch of the same family as that of which her husband is a member. Henry R. and Mary (Murray) Miller, residents of Chester county, were the parents of the following children: Ellwood, who lives in Philadelphia; Jesse, who resides in East Pike-land township; Ella, who married William Brown; and Ida, who was born August 27, 1865, and became the wife of Franklin Worden Miller, as mentioned above. Mr. Henry R. Miller is now deceased. The Miller family is one of the most numerous in Chester county.

JOSEPH I. JENKINS. William Jenkins, of Tenby, in the county of Pembroke, Wales, was married 7 mo., 2, 1673, to Elizabeth Griffith, daughter of Lewis Griffith. The births of their children are recorded at South Wales Monthly Meeting of Friends, Great Britain. By deeds of lease and release, 24th and 25th of October, 1681, William Penn conveyed to William Jenkins, of Tenby, one thousand acres of land in Pennsylvania. Of this Jenkins conveyed five hundred acres to Francis Howell of Llancilio, in the county of Caermarthen, September 3, 1686, and this was taken up in what is now Whiteland township, Chester county. The remainder was also laid out in Duffryn Mawr, or Whiteland, one-half to William Jenkins and one-half to James Thomas, to whom Jenkins had sold it, September 30, 1686.

William Jenkins appears to have arrived in Pennsylvania in 1686 and settled in Haverford township, presumably on two hundred and fifty acres of land he had purchased from John Poyer, July 13, 1686. About 1698 he removed to Abington township, (now) Montgomery county, and from this family Jenkintown derives its name. He was an active and influential member of the Society of Friends, and had suffered persecution in his native country. In 1691 he was one of the justices of the courts for Chester county, and in 1690 and 1695 served as a member of assembly. He died 4 mo., 7, 1712, aged about fifty-four years. His wife died 9 mo., 14, 1711. Their children were four in number: 1. Margaret, born 3 mo., 23, 1674, married Thomas Paschall, Jr.; 2. Sarah, born 10 mo., 7, 1675; 3. Elizabeth, born 5 mo., 2, 1678, died 9 mo., 14, 1711, unmarried; 4. Stephen, born 9 mo., 24, 1680, died 9 mo., 14, 1761.

The last named was married at Abington Meeting, 9 mo., 14, 1704, to Abigail Pemberton, daughter of Phineas Pemberton, one of the most prominent Friends in Bucks county. She was a minister, and died 9 mo., 2, 1750, aged seventy years, nine months, twenty-one days, and was buried at Abington Meeting. The children of Stephen and Abigail were William, Phineas, Phebe, Sarah, Abigail, Stephen and Charles.

William Jenkins, born 8 mo., 16, 1705; died 1 mo., 5, 1763; resided in Abington, and by Lydia his wife had four children, William, born 1 mo., 15, 1747-8; died 5 mo., 1750; John, born 7 mo., 25, 1749; William, born 5 mo., 17, 1752; died 6 mo., 1753; Mary, born 8 mo., 10, 1754.

Phineas Jenkins, born 8 mo., 16, 1707, married (first) Isabell, daughter of Joseph Mather, who died 8 mo., 31, 1728. By a second wife, Mary, he had children, Sarah, Israel, Mary, Phineas, Stephen, William, Jesse and Amos.

From some branch of the family came John Jenkins, who married Elizabeth Ray, and lived in Abington township, on the road from Abington Meeting to Hallowell's Mill. Beside a son Joseph he had Jesse, who died in 1864, near Abington Meeting, killed by a blast, and Isaac, a teacher, who went to New Orleans in 1817.

Joseph Jenkins, son of John and Elizabeth, was born about 1784, and died 12 mo., 19, 1862; married in 1812, Tacy Martindale, born 2 mo., 21, 1792; died 8 mo., 12, 1857; daughter of Amos and Martha (Merrick) Martindale, of Byberry. They had Martha, married John Erwin, Mahala, John, Amos, Jesse and Wyman.

John Jenkins, son of Joseph and Tacy, was born in Philadelphia, May 13, 1822; married Martha Morrison Erwin, born March 16, 1826; died July 6, 1892; daughter of Joseph and Hannah Erwin, of Moreland township. Her grandfather, John Erwin, came to America during the Revolution and settled in Southampton, Bucks county. He married Susan Tomlinson, who was a descendant of the Dracot family of France. John Jenkins was a miller, millwright, ship-carpenter and joiner; he received a common school education, but was not connected with any religious organization; in politics he was a Whig and Republican; he was a member of the Masonic Order. He enlisted in 1861 in Company A., Fifteenth Regiment Ohio Volunteers. He died September 18, 1898. He was the father of the present Joseph E. Jenkins and Zachary T. Jenkins.

Joseph E., son of John and Martha (Erwin) Jenkins, was born near Jenkintown, in Bucks county, in 1855. When he was six years old his parents removed to Wilmington, where he received his education and learned the trade of a plumber. He made a success of his calling, owning a store and conducting a large business. He was a member of the board of health of Wilmington, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity, having taken the Blue Lodge and Commandery degrees. He is an honorary member of the Delaware Historical Society, and belongs to the Republican party.

He married Ella Farron, born in 1857, a daughter of Arthur and Annie (Monaghan) Farron, of good old Scotch-Irish stock, the father being a cooper of Wilmington, Delaware, in 1881. In 1890, he moved to his present home in Pennsbury township, where the youngest of his three children was born. The children are, Howard, born in 1882, Gilbert, born in 1886, and Joseph, Jr., born in 1894.

Zachary Taylor, the only living brother of Joseph I. married Amelia Brammen, and has three children.

J. GILBERT HATFIELD. The Hatfield family is numbered among the oldest and most influential in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and they have been noted for many excellent and sterling traits of character, which have been displayed both in their public and private lives, and which are characteristic of J. Gilbert Hatfield, thus constituting him a fitting representative of the name.

The founder of this family was the youngest son of Lord Saulsbury, who came to this country and settled in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, at what is known as Hatfield Station. His son, Nathau Hatfield, was the founder of the family in Chester county, and he and his wife Margaret were the parents of the following named children: Andrew, John, Samuel, Adam and Ahna. Nathan Hatfield devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits, and in his political affiliations he was first a Whig, and later, when the Republican party was formed to prevent the further extension of slavery, he joined its ranks.

Samuel Hatfield, son of Nathan and Margaret Hatfield, and grandfather of J. Gilbert Hatfield, married for his first wife Catherine Keplor, who died June 22, 1830, aged fifty-one years, four months and one day, and her remains were interred at Brandywine Manor, Pennsylvania. The issue of this marriage was eight children: Margaret, Abram, Simon, Samuel, John, Catherine, Benjamin and Sarah. For his second wife Mr. Hatfield chose Ellen —, who died in New Jersey, leaving no issue. Samuel Hatfield died in 1870, aged eighty-six years, eleven months and twenty-two days, and was buried at Brandywine Manor, Pennsylvania.

Abram Hatfield, eldest son of Samuel and Catherine Hatfield, and father of J. Gilbert Hatfield, received his education in the celebrated Jonathan Gause school in Unionville, Chester county, and later became interested in the iron business at the old Wagontown Iron Works, of Chester county. He was an advocate of the principles of Republicanism, and was an active worker in all movements and measures which tended to benefit his community. He married Sarah A. Patterson, a daughter of Alexander and Eliza J. Patterson, of Mount Joy, Pennsylvania, and their children were: Alexander P., Eliza J., Florence, Samuel, J. Gilbert, Emma, Anna P. and Alice Hatfield.

J. Gilbert Hatfield, third son of Abram and Sarah A. Hatfield, was born October 30, 1838. He was educated in the common schools of Chester county, and is a man of excellent business and executive ability. He is the owner of a fine homestead in Calu township, Chester county, which consists of two hundred and four acres of productive land, upon which is located a very valuable sand mine. The sand produced from this mine is of the finest quality, and is used for the construction of the finest china and glass; the mine is leased by the Golding & Sons Company of Trenton, New Jersey. His reputation in all trade transactions has ever been above question, and to an unusual degree he enjoys the confidence and regard of those with whom he has been brought in contract through business dealings. In his political preferences he follows in the footsteps of his ancestors, and votes with the Republican party, on whose ticket he has been elected to various offices of trust and responsibility. In 1864 he answered the call for emergency men to aid in crushing out the rebellion, but he never performed any active service, owing to the speedy termination of the war.

Mr. Hatfield was united in marriage, in 1869, to Emma Ralston, the ceremony having been performed at Brandywine Manor, Pennsylvania, by the Rev. Dr. Greer. Their children are: 1. Blanche Ralston, who died in early life and is buried at the Fairview cemetery; 2. Henry Gilbert, who married Edna McClure, and they are the parents of four children: John Gilbert, Benjamin McClure, deceased, Robert Ralston, Henry Donald; 3. Anna Patterson, who resides at home, and is an artist of note; 4. Clara Gilbert, who resides at home; 5. Chauncey Baugh, who holds an important position at the Huston Iron Works at Coatesville.

Emma (Ralston) Hatfield, wife of J. Gilbert Hatfield, traces her ancestry to James Ralston, the founder of the family in America, who married Mary Cummock, came to this country in 1743, and settled at Snyder, Northampton county, Pennsylvania, at what was known as the Irish settlement. James Ralston and his wife emigrated from Baly Mony, county Antrim, Ireland, and they were the parents of six children: John, mentioned hereinafter; Lettice, unmarried, departed this life September 30, 1848, aged eighty-seven years and six months; James, unmarried, departed this life January 20, 1836, aged sixty-nine years; Robert, died October 13, 1785, aged fifty-five years; Jane Ralston Rosebaugh, died March 27, 1809, aged seventy years; Samuel, died January 11, 1795, aged twenty-four years.

John Ralston, son of James and Mary Ralston, was born in Snyder, Pennsylvania, in 1735, and died February 17, 1795. He was very famous during the Revolutionary period and was chosen a signer of the Declaration of Independence, but was unable to perform this important office owing to a severe attack of illness. He married Christiana King, whose remains are interred at Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church, and she bore him one son, James Ralston, who was the founder of the family in Chester county. James Ralston married Frances Grier, and subsequently settled at Rockville, Chester county; their children were: John, James, Christiana and Nancy, the latter named becoming the wife of the Rev. Dr. Grier.

James Ralston, son of James and Frances Ralston, pursued the vocation of farming at Rockville, Chester county. His first wife, Margaret (Happersett) Ralston, bore him the following named children: John, Happersett, Thomas, Frances, Agnes, Louisa and Reese. His second wife, Mary (Martin) Ralston, bore him six children: Emma, aforementioned as the wife of J. Gilbert Hatfield; Henry, Robert, Edwin, Anna and Helen. James Ralston, the father of these children, died May 20, 1885, in the eighty-second year of his age. He bore a name which has been honored and esteemed in old Brandywine Manor church for several generations, and was one of the worthiest of his family.

SAMUEL RHOADES. One of the well known men of Lancaster county during the last century was Joseph Rhoades, father of Samuel Rhoades, who conducted a mill in Chester county, and later moved to Lancaster county, where he was in business for some years, and had the reputation of being a very capable and energetic business man. He had been reared in that county and had the privilege of acquiring an education in the public schools. He reared a large family and was able to give them a fair start in life. His son John married Mary A. Penegar, who bore him five children; William was the husband of Mary A. Wallace, and they had seven children; Catherine, the wife of Samuel Gauser, had nine children; Henry became the husband of Mary Ann Moore, by whom he had three children; Jeremiah married Hannah Slack, and they had three children; Thomas was the husband of Lydia A. Valentine, who became the mother of nine children; Mary Ann married Thomas Corwin, and had one child. Joseph Rhoades was caught in the machinery at Lancaster county and killed.

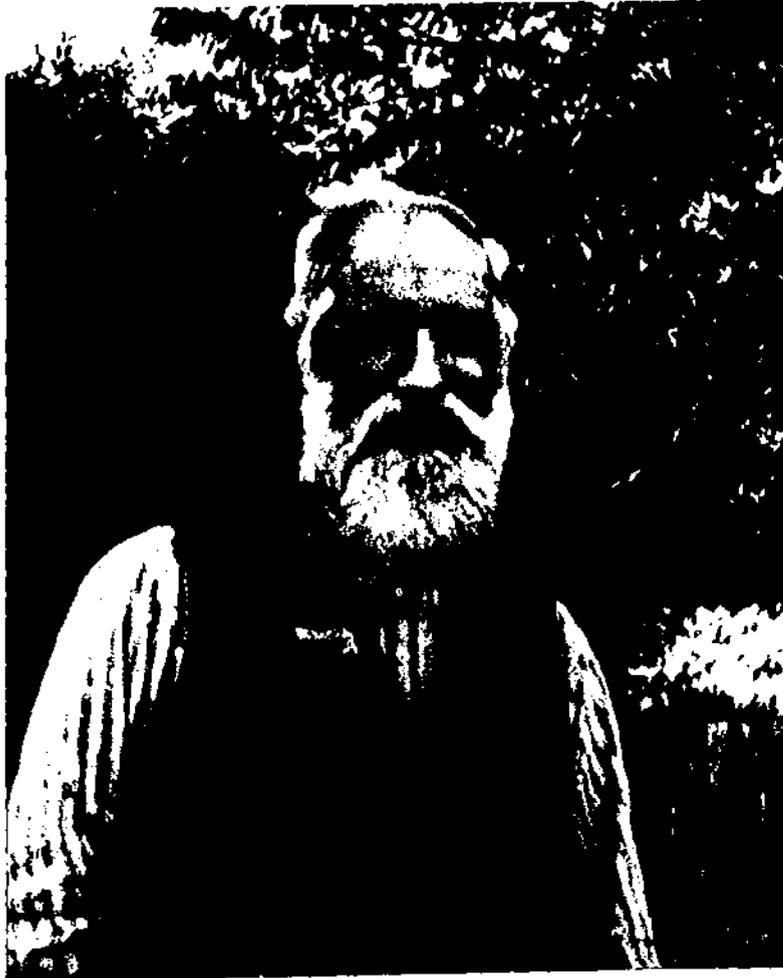

Samuel Rhoades, to whose life this sketch is devoted, is now one of the retired men of the county, having met with marked success in his ventures, and thus being able to spend his days in peace. After receiving a fair training in the public schools, he went into a store as clerk, and in this way laid the foundation for his future career. He married Edith Hinkson, the daughter of James Hinkson, a prosperous farmer of Highland township, and by this union the following children were born: Laura, who married Dr. William L. Phillips, and has two children; James H., deceased; and Anna, unmarried. Mr. Rhoades has a fine residence in Cochranville, and he lives there with his granddaughter, Edith Phillips, who keeps house for him and brightens the years which are now swifter in their flight than in his youth. He has always cast his vote for the Republican candidates, and his interest in public matters is shown by the fact that he served as director of his school district. He is a member of the Masonic lodge and has passed through all the chairs of the Odd Fellows organization; his religious membership is with the Methodist church. He is highly esteemed and has made an enviable record in the various enterprises in which he has participated.

OLIVER MARTIN. The Martin family was founded in Chester county, Pennsylvania, by Abraham Martin, the grandfather of our subject, who made merchandising his life occupation, and was a man highly respected and esteemed by all who knew him. He married, and his children were: Joseph, who is now deceased; Abner, who married a Miss Seeds, by whom he had four children, Martha, John, Ruthanna and Amor; Martha, deceased; and George, the father of our subject.

During his boyhood and youth George Martin acquired a good practical education in the public schools. He then engaged in a wholesale house in Philadelphia, and later successfully engaged in teaching school for a time, but during the greater part of his business career he followed merchandising in Marshallton, being one of the leading and representative citizens of that place. He was a faithful member of the Society of Friends, and a regular attendant at its meetings. After a useful and well spent life, he passed away in 1892 and was buried in the Marshallton cemetery. In early manhood he married Orphie Marshall, and the children born to them were as follows: Abraham, who wedded Mary Taylor and has one child, Abraham; Marshall, deceased; Edwin, who married Lizzie Trimble, and has two children, Mable and Fredrica; Mary E., the only daughter in the family; and Oliver, our subject.

Oliver Martin was born in Marshallton, December 6, 1850, and was given good educational advantages, being a student in the Fairville school, and Worrell's Academy in West Chester. Having become thoroughly familiar with mercantile pursuits in his father's store, he has devoted his attention principally to that business since reaching manhood, and is today the owner of a large general store in Marshallton, carrying a well selected stock of everything carried in a first class establishment of the kind. Besides his town property, he also owns a fine farm of two hundred and ten acres at Chadd's Ford.

Samuel Rhoades

Mr. Martin was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Woodward, a daughter of David Woodward, of Marshallton, and five children grace this union, namely: Viola, Nelson, George, Alvin and Marshall, all of whom are single and living at home. The Democratic party finds in Mr. Martin a stalwart supporter of its principles, and he has served with credit as school director in his township. A man of keen perception and unbounded enterprise, he has met with success in business affairs, and is now numbered among the prosperous and substantial citizens of his community. His genial, pleasant manner has made him quite popular, and he is held in high esteem by all who know him.

JAMES YARNALL has passed the Psalmist's span of three score years and ten, in fact has reached the seventy-seventh milestone upon life's journey, his birth having occurred on the 9th of September, 1826. He is a native of the town of Edgemont where he is still living, and is a representative of one of the old and distinguished families of the Keystone state. Far back into the colonial epoch of our country's history can his ancestry be traced. He is a representative of the third generation bearing the name of James, and his paternal grandfather, James Yarnall, received a deed from William Penn for the land which is now in possession of our subject, and which since that time has never been owned by any one save representatives of the Yarnall family. James Yarnall (father) was born November 17, 1789, and was united in marriage to Anne Sharpless, whose birth occurred November 13, 1795. The mother passed away at a comparatively early age, being called to her final rest October 25, 1826, but the father attained an advanced age, passing away December 30, 1861. They were married on the 14th of April, 1819, and their union was blessed with five children, namely: Rachel S., who was born April 15, 1820, and died May 24, 1842; Nathan S., born April 6, 1822; Sarah E., who was born August 17, 1824, and died September 25, 1825; James, the subject of this review; and Anne, a twin sister of James, born September 9, 1826.

In his boyhood days James Yarnall whose name introduces this record, pursued his education in the pay schools, and when not engaged with the duties of the school room, his time and labors were given to the farm work so that he gained good practical experience of all the toil incident to the cultivation and development of a farm. His preliminary education was supplemented by study in Westtown Academy, which at that time was conducted by Daniel Reece, and of which Nathan Sharpless was the superintendent. Until his father's death, Mr. Yarnall continued to live at home and to assist in carrying on the work of the farm. In 1861, at the time of his father's demise, he came into possession of the old homestead comprising one hundred and thirty-five acres, and in the intervening years his attention has been given to the further development and improvement of this property, which is now one of the valuable farms of this portion of the state. It is all under cultivation and general farming is carried on, the rich and well tilled fields returning to the owner golden harvests for the care and labor bestowed upon them. He has known no other home save for a brief period of eight years, from 1888 until 1896, when he resided in Thornbury, Delaware county. In the latter year he returned to the ancestral home, where he is now living in the midst of comfortable surroundings which indicate that his life is one of industry, good management and enterprise.

On the 2d of July, 1855, Mr. Yarnall was united in marriage to Miss Edith D. Stackhouse, a daughter of Emlen and Catherine (Meredith) Stackhouse, and unto them have been born two children, Rachel S., the elder, born June 14, 1857, is now the wife of James C. Brinton, who was born in Thornbury, Pennsylvania, April 20, 1851, and is a son of John and Sarah Ann (Manley) Brinton, in whose family were seven children, namely: Joseph, Anne, Mary, Emily, Winton, George and Lizzie. Mr. and Mrs. James Curtis Brinton now reside upon her father's farm, the Yarnall homestead, and their union has been blessed with six children, as follows: Edith Y. Brinton, who was born February 4, 1883, and died March 2, 1883; Katie Y., born June 8, 1886; Sarah Baker, born March 20, 1888; Edith May, born July 26, 1891; James Yarnall, born March 10, 1897; Rachel Olive, born October 30, 1898. Catherine, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Yarnall, is the wife of Jerome Levis Pyle, who is represented elsewhere in this work.

In his political affiliations Mr. Yarnall is a pronounced Republican, always voting the straight ticket. He keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day, as every true American citizen should do, and his careful study of public questions has led him to the belief that the best elements of good government are contained in the Republican platform. In local offices, however, where no issues are involved, and the only matter of consideration is the capability of the candidate to discharge the business of town or county, he votes independently. While never an aspirant for office, he was elected by his fellow townsmen and served for one term as supervisor. Mr. Yarnall is widely known in the portion of the state where his entire life has been passed, and the fact that many who have been acquainted with him from boyhood are numbered among his staunchest friends is an indication that his has been a honorable and upright career.

JOHN FRANKLIN GRUBB, a sagacious farmer and worthy citizen of East Coventry township, Chester county, is a representative of a family which has been for many generations resident in the county, and the members of which, as farmers, have assisted materially in promoting the prosperity of the community in which they resided.

David Grubb was born in 1809, on the homestead, and in connection with his agricultural labors followed the trade of a wheelwright. He married Elizabeth Grubb, who was a distant relative, and by this marriage there were no children. After the death of his wife Mr. Grubb married Julia Ann Stager, and the following children were born to them: Etta, who was born in 1836, and married Louis Henry Fulman, a farmer and butcher; Harrison, who was born October 26, 1840, became a farmer, and died in 1896; John Franklin, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Grubb, the father, died in 1894, at the advanced age of eighty-six, and is buried in the family burying-ground in Brownback cemetery. He was a man who possessed the confidence and respect of all who knew him.

John Franklin Grubb, son of David and Julia Ann (Stager) Grubb, was born June 1, 1842, in the house which is now his home in East Coventry township, and was educated in the public schools of the county. From early youth he has been engaged in farming, to which he has devoted himself, not merely with industry, but also with zeal and ardor. His success is undisputed, and his wealth of information and practical experience cause him to be regarded as an authority on subjects connected with his calling. At the outbreak of the Civil war he helped to fill the quota of men called on for service by the government, but remained at his post as a farmer, feeling that he could best serve his country by strict attention to the duties of his chosen calling. He takes an interest in all matters which concern the well-being of the community, and is ever ready to discharge his obligations as a citizen, alike in the sphere of political improvement and progress, and in that of social reform.

Mr. Grubb married, February 22, 1873, Mary J., daughter of David Edgar Miller, and the following children have been born to them: Harry Irwin, who was born January 3, 1874, in Chester county, is a farmer, and married Susannah Reinhart, July 6, 1893; and David Edgar, who was born December 21, 1876, in Chester county, married, in 1901, Clara, daughter of George Fairheller of Rogers' Ford, Montgomery county, and has one child. Mr. Grubb is the owner of the homestead, which has been in the possession of the family for more than a century and a half. He is strongly attached to his ancestral home, and indulges the hope that the old house which has been the dwelling of his forefathers and the acres which have been tilled by them may remain in the possession of his descendants for many generations to come.

JEROME LEVIS PYLE, M. D., was born in Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, September 9, 1857, and is the son of Eli and Hannah (Levis) Pyle. His father Eli was the son of Eli and Rachel (Esworthy) Pyle, and one of a family of nine children. Eli, the grandfather of Jerome Levis, was the son of Stephen and Rachel (Stokes) Pyle.

Dr. Jerome Levis Pyle received his early education in the public schools of his native town; he then took a three years' course at the Maplewood Institute, after which he commenced to read medicine preparatory to entering Jefferson Medical College, through which he passed, taking a complete course in medicine and surgery. It took him three years to complete this course, and he then graduated with honors in 1885. He then came to Glen Mills, where he opened an office for the general practice of medicine, and has since built up, through patient effort and painstaking work, quite an extensive practice. In political adherence, Dr. Pyle is a Democrat, and during the seventeen years he has spent at Glen Mills he has occupied several official positions, among them being pension examiner, which position he held for three years, having received his appointment during the administration of President Cleveland. For several years he served on the board of education. He finds time also to take an active interest in various social and secret organizations, among them being the F. and A. M. and Tammenend Tribe, Independent Order of Red Men, also Westmont Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Tanguay, Pennsylvania. Besides these he is a member of the State Medical Society and of the County Medical Society. In many of these he occupies the position of past officer. During his residence in Edgemont, he has been medical examiner for many local and foreign insurance companies.

Dr. Pyle was married, November 12, 1892, to Catherine Meredith Yarnall, a daughter of James and Edith D. (Stackhouse) Yarnall. They have had a family of four children, namely: Lafayette Yarnall, born April 21, 1893, died July 12, 1894; Jerome Levis, born February 1, 1895, died January 7, 1902; James Yarnall, born February 10, 1896, and Brinton Lewis, born September 30, 1902.

James Yarnall, father of Mrs. Pyle, was the son of James and Rachel (Sharpless) Yarnall, and their three children were: James, Nathan and Annie.

JOHN HENRY, of Wayne, Pennsylvania, the son of William and Mary (Thistle) Henry, was born on his father's farm in the county of Cavin, near Barleyborough Ireland, January 15, 1843.

In 1855 he emigrated to America, settling in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in business until 1871, when he purchased a farm of one hundred acres near Wayne, in Chester county, and located there. In 1861 he established a milk route in Philadelphia, and conducted a very successful business for several years. He is a prominent member of the Masonic order, and is a charter member of Cassia Lodge, of which he was one of the organizers. He has been an Odd Fellow for thirty-six years, and is a charter member of the American Protective Association of Philadelphia. He is also a member of the Knights, Birmingham Lodge in Philadelphia.

In 1864 he married Phoebe Davis, a daughter of John and Martha Davis. They had one son, John Davis Henry, who died young. Some time after the death of his first wife, Mr. Henry married Martha Wiley, who was a native of Ireland, and who came to Pennsylvania in 1861. They had four children: 1. John, who married Anna Brown, a daughter of Thomas and Sarah Brown, and who have one child; 2. Margaret, who married Morris Rossiter, of Wayne; they have three children, Mahlon, Ella and Dorothy; 3. Clinton De Witt Pawling, who lives on the homestead in Wayne; 4. William who also lives at home.

EDWARD H. WIAND. In East Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred September 11, 1859, Edward H. Wiand now resides and is a worthy representative of that class of men known as independent farmers. He is a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Price) Wiand and grandson of John and Mary (Gross) Wiand.

John Wiand (grandfather) was born at an early date in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and served as a private during the war between America and Great Britain in 1812. He was united in marriage to Mary Gross, and seven children were the issue of this union—Samuel, father of Edward H. Wiand; Daniel, deceased; Jacob, who died in 1903 at the age of eighty-seven years; David, a resident of Chester county, Pennsylvania; John, also a resident of Chester county; Catherine, wife of Senacau Ratcliff, and Elizabeth, wife of John Lahr. John Wiand, father of these children, died when he attained the age of seventy-five years.

Samuel Wiand (father) was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 31, 1812, and resided in that vicinity throughout his entire life-time. On May 5, 1840, he married Elizabeth Price, who was born May 3, 1823, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Smith) Price. Their children were: Price, born June 16, 1841; Melvina, born September 28, 1842, wife of Davis Griffith; Deriza, born April 23, 1844, wife of James Ludwig; Lewis, born May 12, 1846; Elmira, born December 5, 1850, wife of Jacob Loomis; George, born June 1, 1854, died April 6, 1858; Mary, born December 17, 1856; Edward H., born September 11, 1859; William, born July 17, 1861, died August 16, 1896; Hannah, born July 29, 1864, died August 18, 1864; Albert, born December 23, 1867, died August 22, 1879. Samuel Wiand, father of these children, died at his residence in Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 12, 1899, and his remains were interred at Brownback's church yard.

Edward H. Wiand, fourth son of Samuel and Elizabeth Wiand, attended the public schools of East Coventry township, and after completing his education located on the Posey farm, where he was extensively engaged in farming pursuits for fourteen years. In 1902 he purchased his present farm consisting of a number of acres of well cultivated and improved land, which by careful and judicious management will yield an abundant harvest to repay him for his labor. In religion Mr. Wiand adheres to the tenets of the Baptist church, and in politics he strongly advocates the principles of the Republican party.

Mr. Wiand was united in marriage to Mina F. Harley, a daughter of Joseph Harley. Her death occurred May 10, 1900, and her remains were buried in the Baptist church yard at Parker Ford, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Wiand were the parents of six children, five of whom are living at the present time (1903). Norman Stauffer, born April 15, 1886; Stella Blanche, born December 7, 1887; Agnes, born September 2, 1891; Raymond, born January 27, 1894; Ida, born December 5, 1898, and Cora Elmira, born July 27, 1896, died March 1, 1897.

JOHN Y. CALVERT, one of the well known representatives of agricultural interests and a man of prominence in public affairs in connection with the discharge of official duties, was born February 23, 1860, in Newtown, Pennsylvania, and his entire life has been passed in this locality. He is the eldest son of James Pyott and Hannah (Yerkes) Calvert. In his boyhood days he attended the public schools, and through the months of summer assisted his father in the work of the home farm. Then wishing to acquire a better education than was afforded in the district schools of the neighborhood, he left home and became a student in the Millersville Boarding School, of Pennsylvania. When his education was completed he returned to his father's farm, remaining there until 1893. In the meantime, in 1892, he had purchased what is known as the Caleb Lewis farm, consisting of one hundred and forty-three acres, of which one hundred and twenty-five acres is under cultivation, and since that time he has continuously carried on agricultural pursuits on his own account. He is one of the prosperous men of Newtown, successfully controlling his business affairs, and his practical experience, keen discrimination and unfaltering energy bring to him creditable and desirable success.

Mr. Calvert has been a prominent factor in political circles for many years and his fellow townsmen, with appreciation of his worth, capability and loyalty, have frequently called him to public office. He is now serving for the third term as auditor, and was appointed to the position of postmaster by the late President McKinley. This is indicative of his advocacy of Republican principles. Where questions of state and national importance are involved he is certainly a firm adherent to the Republican party and its platform, but at local elections where no issue is involved he supports the candidates whom he thinks best qualified for office and is ever earnest and untiring in behalf of any movement or measure which he believes will contribute to the general good.

On December 6, 1888, Mr. Calvert was united in marriage to Eliza M. Brooke, of Newtown, a daughter of Jesse and Sarah Jane (Moore) Brooke. Her father was a son of Alexander and Elizabeth (Sloan) Brooke, and after arriving at years of maturity he wedded Sarah Jane Moore, of Haverford, a daughter of James A. and Eliza (Lindsey) Moore. This marriage was blessed with four children: Horace Lindley, Eliza Moore, Mary Frances and James Franklin Brooke. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Calvert have also been born four children: Lydia B., born September 19, 1889; Reece Garrett, born April 3, 1891; William Brooke, born November 19, 1892; and Frances Brooke, born August 24, 1894. Mr. Calvert has a wide acquaintance in this locality where his entire life has been passed, and the qualities of an upright manhood, his fidelity to duty and his reliability in business have made him one of the respected and worthy citizens of this section of Pennsylvania. Over the record of his private life and his public career there falls no shadow of wrong or suspicion of evil.

JOHN PENNOCK. The family of this name has been identified with Chester county from a time when "the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," as the law writers would put it. The ancestry were Quakers, and, as is the usual custom of these worthy people, the descendants have mostly adhered to this simple but effective form of the Christian faith. It is not the intention here to set forth an elaborate genealogy, as for the purpose of this sketch a beginning will be made of Robert I. Pennock, a worthy representative of the family who long followed farming in London Grove and West Fallowfield townships. He was a quiet, unpretentious man, who attended strictly to his own business, and endeavored to carry out the injunction of the prophet to "do justice, practice virtue and walk humbly with thy God." After a blameless life, extending to the age of fifty-seven years, this good man closed his mortal career at Cochranville, January 30, 1873. By his marriage in early life with Elizabeth E. Wallace, of Russellville, he has four children, three of whom are still living. Charles, the eldest, has passed away; Mary is the wife of Jesse Halton; Sarah, the youngest, married William H. Hanna; John S., is the subject of this sketch.

John S. Pennock was educated in the public schools of the various townships in which they lived, and at an early age began clerking in a store as his first business venture. He soon gave this up, however, to learn the butchering trade, and in 1868 started in this line of business on his own account. He lives in Cochranville, and has a well equipped slaughter house on the land adjoining his home. He has done well in his chosen calling, has a good patronage in the town and surrounding country, and is looked upon as one of the substantial business men of the village. Besides his own business, he is not neglectful of public duties, and has given a reasonable amount of time to township affairs. His political affiliations, like those of his name generally, have always been Republican, though he aims to vote conscientiously and for the best interests of the people. His township has honored him in past years by election to the office of justice of the peace and auditor, and in discharging his official duties he ever displayed the same sense of right-doing that distinguished him in his private transactions. He was elected on January 12, 1904, as a director of the Parkesburg National Bank. Mr. Pennock attends the Friends' Meeting. He is a member of the Order of Odd Fellows, in which he has held the financial secretaryship since 1880, and he has carried the wampum of the Red Men, Champlota Tribe, No. 162, for a period of ten years.

John S. Pennock

Mr. Pennock married Maggie, daughter of Samuel Pennock, a miller of Lower Oxford, and the children resulting are thus recorded: Mabel E., who married J. F. Chamberlain, and has four children; J. Vernon, who is single; Margaret, wife of H. J. McKaiver, a rising young lawyer of Delaware county; and Ralph, who married Zoella May Fritz, daughter of Benjamin Fritz, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM S. MOORE. The first ancestor of this branch of the family of whom we have any authentic information was William Moore. He was well known in his day for his physical prowess and he was with Washington's army at the battle of the Brandywine in the capacity of teamster in the wagon train. He married a Miss Marshall, and among his children was a son, William, who married Martha Evans, by whom he had the following children: 1. George W., who married Jane Shillingford; 2. Job, who married Margaret Hoffman; 3. Charles, who became the father of William S. of this review; 4. Susanna, who did not marry; 5. Maria, who died in childhood; 6. Samuel, who married Hannah Ann Bonsall, who was a daughter of David and Mary (Heacock) Bonsall, and had one son, Lewis Watkin.

Charles Moore, third child of William and Martha (Evans) Moore, was born in the village of Upper Darby 5 mo., 25, 1816, and here his father was for many years a resident. Charles Moore had learned the milling trade and for many years pursued his trade in Upper Darby township. He married Eleanor Thomas, of Delaware county, and had a family of the following children: Margaret, who married Joseph W. Pullen; two children who died in childhood; Joseph, who married Anna Taylor; William S., of this review. The parents of this family are deceased.

William S. Moore, whose name introduces this review, was born in Haddington, now the thirty-fourth ward of Philadelphia, and his education was obtained in the public schools of Upper Darby. In 1876 he entered the employ of V. E. Bond, of Upper Darby, and has continued in his employ uninterruptedly to the present time. By his fidelity to duty and straightforward methods in his business transactions, Mr. Moore has not only won the trust and confidence of his employer, but has as well the respect of all who know him. In 1889 he was appointed postmaster of Upper Darby, and has held that position for the fourth consecutive term. Mr. Moore takes an active interest in the material welfare of his native village. He is a member of the Upper Darby Building and Loan Association, of which organization he was elected secretary in 1902. Fraternally, Mr. Moore is a member in good standing of Fernwood Lodge No. 453, F. and A. M., the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, William Penn Lodge No. 273 of Manoa; and Union Star Council, O. U. A. M. No. 204 of Fernwood. Politically he allies himself with the principles of the Republican party.

William S. Moore was married, 6 mo., 1887, to Jeanne M. McLeod, daughter of John and Isabelle McLeod. The children by this union are: 1. William H., born 9 mo., 3, 1888. 2. Frank, born 7 mo., 12, 1890. 3. David G., born 2 mo., 16, 1895. 4. Norman, born 7 mo., 7, 1899.

JAMES PYOTT CALVERT, a descendant of John Calvert, to whom the property on which Mr. Calvert now lives at Newtown, Pennsylvania, was granted by William Penn, was born in Newtown, May 28, 1868, the son of James Pyott and Hannah (Yerkes) Calvert. The Calvert property descended from John Calvert, the original grantee, to his son Abram Calvert, and from him to his son Reece Garrett Calvert, and from him in turn to James Pyott Calvert, the father of James. Reece G. Calvert (grandfather) married Deborah Pyott, and their family consisted of ten children. James Pyott Calvert is one of a family of three children, he being the youngest; his elder brother John Yerkes Calvert was born February 22, 1861; his sister Lydia Calvert is now deceased.

James P. Calvert spent the early years of his life in acquiring knowledge at the public schools of Newtown, at the same time giving such assistance as he could after school hours in the work on his father's farm. Not being satisfied with the mental training received at the local schools, he attended the boarding schools at Moorestown, New Jersey, and at Swarthmore, Pennsylvania; he finished his education by taking a course at Fewsmith's Business College at Philadelphia. Subsequently he returned to the farm, and took an active interest in the operation and management thereof, where he remained until 1893. He then rented the entire place, consisting of one hundred and seventy-five acres, which he conducted until his father's death in 1898, when he came into possession of the property. Practically the entire farm is under cultivation, yielding a general line of product. Mr. Calvert has endeavored to keep pace with the time in equipping his farm with the latest features in machinery and labor-saving devices. In state politics Mr. Calvert has always voted the Republican ticket; in local affairs, however, he has always advocated the election of those whom his judgment selected as being the most likely to work for the good of the greatest number. His religious life has been spent among the Friends of his community.

On October 11, 1893, Mr. Calvert married Sallie Bunting Serrill, of Newtown Square, a daughter of Josiah and Hannabell (Lewis) Serrill. Mrs. Calvert is one of a family of four children, the others being, Edwin L., deceased; Joseph L., born October 24, 1876; and Elizabeth B., born August 20, 1879. Mrs. Calvert was born September 21, 1868; she has one child, a daughter, Elizabeth Serrill Calvert—born May 28, 1895.

GEORGE A. CHRISMAN, a representative citizen of East Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who at the present time (1903) is successfully engaged, in partnership with his brother, Ernest S. Chrisman, in the cultivation and operation of the "Old Chrisman Farm," was born in Jersey City, New Jersey, March 25, 1874, a son of John B. and Sarah (Lawson) Chrisman.

John B. Chrisman (father) was born on the Cold Spring farm in Chester county, Pennsylvania, was reared and educated in that neighborhood, and in due course of time became one of its active and useful citizens. He was a Republican in politics, and during the Civil war enlisted his services in behalf of his country, being a member of an emergency corps. He was united in marriage to Sarah Lawson, daughter of William Lawson, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and eight children were born of this union, three of whom are now deceased—the surviving members of the family are—William L., born July 24, 1871, read law in the office of Clark & Dennison, and for the past four years has been practicing his profession in the city of Philadelphia; in 1901 he married Annie Pierce Miller, and two children were the issue of this union, one of whom is now deceased. George A., born March 25, 1874, mentioned at length hereinafter. Ernest S., born October 10, 1875, attended the school at Coventryville until the age of sixteen years, the following two years was engaged as a clerk in the general merchandise store conducted by his father at Coventryville, and later he was employed as a station agent at the same town, having the care of the United States mail and other matter. For one term he was a pupil at Banks Business College in Philadelphia, and after his graduation from that institution he returned home and again entered his father's store. Subsequently he returned to Philadelphia and entered the employ of H. W. Butterworth Sons & Co., manufacturers of textile machinery, and was employed by them for three years. He retained his next position until April 15, 1902, when he returned to Coventryville, and entered into partnership with his brother in the cultivation of a farm. Jessie L. and Ethel M. completed the number of children.

The parents of George A. Chrisman removed to Coventryville, Pennsylvania, when he was a child and he attended the public schools of that neighborhood until he attained the age of twelve years. He remained at home until he was fourteen years of age, then entered the State Normal School at West Chester, where he pursued his studies for one term. He returned home, and during the year 1890 entered his father's store, where he served in the capacity of clerk for a short period of time. He then located in the city of Philadelphia, pursued a course of stenography and typewriting at Banks Business College, and up to April 15, 1903, was engaged in that line of business in various houses in Philadelphia. He then returned to his home in East Nantmeal township, and in partnership with his brother purchased the "Old Chrisman Farm" which they are conducting successfully at the present time.

On March 11, 1901, Mr. Chrisman married Cecelia F. Elder, one of a family of three daughters born to Henry C. Elder, a resident of Philadelphia, his occupation being that of an agent for a manufacturing establishment of that city. Their children are: Sarah Jean, born April 10, 1902, and George A., Jr., who is the sixth member of his family to bear the name of George, but they were not all in direct succession.

T. FRANK BARTHOLOMEW, of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he has a well-established reputation as an enterprising-business man, is of English ancestry, although the exact date of the emigration of the family has not been ascertained.

John Bartholomew, father of T. Frank Bartholomew, was born in Upper Providence township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and was by occupation a farmer. He belonged to the Dunkard church, of which he was an active member. He married Charlotte Wilberham, who died while still in early life. Mr. Bartholomew died in 1884, at the age of eighty years.

T. Frank Bartholomew, son of John and Charlotte (Wilberham) Bartholomew, was born May 8, 1861, in Upper Providence township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and was educated at Norristown, in the same state. He began his business career with an iron company at Phoenixville, remaining seven years in their employ, and acquiring that thorough knowledge of the business which stood him in such good stead in after years. In 1888 he removed to Chester and became bookkeeper to the celebrated firm of Robert Wetherill & Co., subsequently connecting himself with the Chester Manufacturing Company as secretary. On March 4, 1892, Mr. Bartholomew became general manager of the whole business. In this position he has remained to the present day, his ten years' record testifying to the ability, energy and faithfulness with which he has discharged the duties of his office. Some idea of the proportions of the business may be formed from the fact that the works give employment to a force of three hundred and twenty-five hands. That Mr. Bartholomew is able to fill satisfactorily, in an establishment of this description, the important position of general manager, is sufficient proof of his capacity as a business man.

Mr. Bartholomew married, July 2, 1900, Lidie, daughter of John Conway.

WILLIAM H. HICKS, a successful farmer of East Goshen township, is descended from a family of old settlers, Edward Hicks having purchased of Thomas Goodwin, in 1769, the land which has ever since been in the possession of his descendants. Charles Hicks, son of Edward, married Hannah Marshall.

Edward Hicks, son of Charles and Hannah (Marshall) Hicks, was born in 1820, on the homestead. Here he passed his boyhood, receiving his education at the celebrated school of Jonathan Gause. His religious belief was that of the Society of Friends, of which he was a member. He married Amy Marshall, and had a family of eight children: Charles, deceased; Kimball, deceased; Edward, who is now living in East Goshen; John, who resides in London Grove township, Chester county; Hannah, who became the wife of Edgar Tyler, and is now deceased; William H., mentioned at length hereinafter; Emma, who married William Pratt, and is now deceased; and Lizzie, who died young. Mr. Hicks, the father of this family, died in October, 1889.

William H. Hicks, son of Edward and Amy (Marshall) Hicks, was born April 8, 1865, on the homestead in East Goshen. He obtained his education at the public schools of his birthplace, and at Millersville. During his early manhood he assisted his father in the care and management of the homestead, and after his marriage removed to the "Charles W. Roberts farm", which consisted of one hundred and eighty acres. In the autumn of 1889 he purchased the homestead, where he has since resided, and which he has cultivated with great success. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Hicks married, February 7, 1884, Anna M., born November 3, 1862, daughter of Phineas and Emily Pratt. Mr. and Mrs. Hicks are the parents of the following children: Charles H., born November 24, 1884; Edgar Tyler, born October 24, 1886; Anna Marshall, born February 11, 1888; Earle Evans, born November 17, 1889; Casper Pratt, born November 25, 1892; William H., Jr., born March 29, 1894; Walter Le Roy, born January 22, 1896; and J. Russell, born February 12, 1902.

SAMUEL HART. Samuel Hart, Sr., who was the father of the gentleman mentioned above, was a native of Chester county. He grew up here, was educated in the public schools of Berks county, and then entered one of the iron mills, where he was employed as a forger or smith. He was elected on the ticket of his party, the Republican, to various places of trust, and was held in high regard by his neighbors and friends. His wife was Lavina Moore, whose father was a resident of Berks county. She became the mother of a large family, as follows: Mary A., who married Thomas Moyer, by whom she had three children; George, who married Margretta Whiteman, and their family consists of four children; Susan, who became the wife of Jonathan Parr; Daniel, who married Caroline Himmelburger; Sophia, who became the wife of Levi Snavely, by whom she had two children, and after his death she married Casper Rotte; Agnes, who became the wife of C. Beers; and William, who died unmarried.

Samuel Hart, Jr., completed the record of the children. Most of his early training was received in Berks county, and when he became old enough he followed in the footsteps of his father and learned the trade of a forger in the iron mills. He has become very proficient in this work, and at the present time holds a position in the mills at Parkesburg, this county. He has made money and has become the owner of a nice farm in West Fallowfield township, upon which he has some high grade cattle. He was married to Kate, a daughter of George Kissinger, who was a farmer of Perry county, this state. Their children are: Annie, who became the wife of H. Althouse, and they have one child; Ida, who became the wife of William Gill, by whom she has one child; Harry; William; Carrie; Mabel and Frank; the five last named are unmarried and reside at home. Mr. Hart is one of the local leaders of the Republican party, and is a highly esteemed resident of the township.

JOHN E. SELLERS. Chester county is dotted over with pleasant farms of moderate size, productive and convenient to one of the largest markets in the country. One of the most profitable industries is the dairy business, and it has increased in importance as new and improved methods have been introduced, so that a large portion of the farmers run in connection with their general farming operations a dairy, which affords them a regular and certain income. One of these well-to-do agriculturists and dairymen of West Fallowfield township is John E. Sellers, who is progressive in his methods, energetic and resourceful in carrying out his enterprises, and is an esteemed citizen of the community.

His father, Matthias Sellers, was a native of this township. He had a bent toward some mechanical pursuit, which induced him to learn the carpenter's trade, but he later gave this up and engaged in farming, which he followed for the remainder of his life. He was one of the prominent Democrats of the county and was elected to the offices of supervisor, school director and auditor. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His life covered a span of sixty-three years, the year 1890 being the year of his death, and his remains rest in the cemetery at Atglen. By his wife Susan, a daughter of George Evans, a farmer near West Chester, he had four children. William, who is deceased; George, who became the husband of Lucy Crawford, and they have two children; Taylor E., who is deceased; and John E. Sellers.

The last named son has resided in Chester county most of his life, is indebted to the schools here for his education, and has made his farm of eighty-six acres a model in many respects, so that he is a man to whom success has come as a matter of course. He has traveled over the country considerably and his experiences have confirmed him in his love for his old home and settled way of life. His wife was Mary, the daughter of Abner and Mary Williams, farmers near Cochranville, and the three children of the union are: Eva, the wife of John Moore, by whom she had four children; Bertha and Edith, both of whom are single, and living at home. Mr. Sellers is firm in his adherence to Democratic principles, and has held several offices; he is also a member of the Red Men, and he and his family belong to the Methodist church.

SAMUEL WHITSON. One of the most interesting and profitable of the departments of agricultural science is that of fruit raising. It lacks many of the disagreeable things connected with other divisions of farm labor, and the profits are just as sure and the round of normal crops can be depended upon as certainly as the harvests of grain. Chester county is fortunate in having one of the large fruit producers of the country in the person of Samuel Whitson, and baskets of his luscious pears may be found in the fruit stalls of the principal cities of the entire country.

Mr. Whitson was born in the adjacent county of Lancaster, in Sadsbury township. Children of eastern parents are more fortunate, as a rule, in the matter of educational training than those born in the newer west, where the principal thought is directed to gaining a livelihood; so Mr. Whitson was privileged to complete the public schools and then take a course in the Millersville State Normal, thus acquiring a good mental equipment for future usefulness. He moved over into Chester county in 1852, and since that time has made his home at Atglen, West Sadsbury township. He has a beautiful fruit farm here, and has an immense grove of pear trees, thirty-five hundred in all, from which he derives a fine revenue, and he has likewise gained considerable distinction from the quality of the fruit.

Mr. Whitson takes a prominent part in public affairs, his political sympathies being with the Republican party. He is a member of the county committee, has served in the important office of auditor, and at the present time is on the borough council. He has never been married. He is an earnest member of the Society of Friends, and he has made his ability felt in the meetings as an able speaker, thus exercising an uplifting moral influence throughout his community.

THOMAS KEMPIS BULL. In the death in 1893 of Thomas Kempis Bull, of East Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, lost one of its most worthy citizens. He was a representative of a family that has had an honorable record in the state since Revolutionary days. His own service to agriculture was not only direct through his interest in advanced and scientific methods, but indirect through the force and high character of the man that dignified his calling.

He was a son of the Rev. Levi Bull, through whose zeal St. Mary's Episcopal church was founded, of which church he was rector for many years. Farming was his avocation, and he served the higher interests of the community through his realization of the possibilities of rural life, and his effort to bring these possibilities before the people, no less than in his religious ministrations. He died in 1859, and then his son Thomas K. left his neighboring farm and took up his residence on the old homestead, where his widow now makes her home. The wife of the Rev. Levi Bull was Ann Hunter Jacobs, who was born in the vicinity of her life-long home.

Thomas Kempis Bull was born July 23, 1810, in East Nantmeal township. He was educated in the local schools, and chose farming as his occupation. The farm which he cultivated during the lifetime of his father was in the neighborhood of the homestead. His interests were not bounded by the farm, however. He was keenly alive to all matters of the popular welfare, and took a practical part in politics. For several terms he was elected by the Republican party as representative from Chester county in the state legislature, and he held most of the township offices at different times. The title of colonel by which he was known was not acquired in actual military service, but through his being made colonel of the state militia. He was a member and an earnest worker in the Episcopal church. He died in 1893.

Mr. Bull married Julia Hannah Henderson, daughter of Captain Thomas and Julia Ann (Seeger) Henderson, of New Holland, Lancaster county. To Mr. and Mrs. Bull were born two daughters—Caroline Jacobs, who was educated in the local schools, and in the Darlington school at West Chester, and Annie Hunter, who died in the fifteenth year of her age.

JAMES S. CARPENTER. The family of this name was founded in Chester county by Henry Carpenter, grandfather of the above named gentleman, who settled at Downingtown many years ago, and lived there during the remainder of his days. He followed farming, affiliated politically first with the Whigs, then with the Republican party, and was a citizen without reproach in the various walks of life. All of his five children were sons, and their names were Israel, George, Jerry, Raymond and Joseph. George Carpenter, second of these sons in order of birth, removed to Juniata county, where he married Mary Townsley, and by her reared a large family, consisting of nine children, who are thus recorded: James S.; Jerry, who married Eliza Laird; George, who married Lydia Myers; Barton, who married Rebecca Baker; Elizabeth, who first married J. Jackson, and secondly, George Carr; Edwin, who married Katie Sisters; Benton, who married Elizabeth McClure; Mary, widow of John Dallett; and Annie, wife of John Woodward.

James S. Carpenter, eldest of the children above enumerated, was born in Juniata county, Pennsylvania, April 7, 1852, and as he grew up followed the usual routine of attendance in the public schools. Having many blood relatives in Chester county, and finding still stronger attractions there in the shape of a wife, he eventually made that county his home. After his marriage to Eva Wetherby, of Coatesville, he removed to the farm in Caln township where he at present resides. This place, consisting of sixty-six acres, Mr. Carpenter has been cultivating with success for many years, and his location is one of the most pleasant in Chester valley. His political affiliations have always been with the Republican party, though he has usually contented himself with a quiet vote and held no office but that of school director, which he filled several terms. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and has fraternal connections with the Red Men, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

BENJAMIN C. MITCHELL. The above named gentleman, though at present a citizen of Chester county, is well known in other parts of the state by reason of residence at various important centers. For years he was in the hotel business, had charge of a number of leading hostelrys, and established a reputation as one of the most successful as well as most popular of Pennsylvania's caterers. During his connection with this business, which brings one in contact with that many-faced entity known as the traveling public, Mr. Mitchell necessarily became widely acquainted with people from all parts of the country. He had opportunities to go into politics to advantage, and at one time was made a tempting offer in the way of a nomination, but he declined all overtures in order to follow his business career. Finally he abandoned this occupation, and decided on that most independent and, if rightly pursued, most pleasant of all occupations, the life of a farmer. As the result of this resolve we find Mr. Mitchell now established on a fine farm of four hundred and twelve acres in West Brandywine township, which he has cultivated with the energy and skill that marks all his undertakings.

Amos Mitchell, the father of our subject, married Sarah E., daughter of Benjamin Conklin, a farmer of Damascus, Pennsylvania, and by this union reared a large family: Analiva, the eldest, married Virgil Mitchell, and has two children; Eliza T., widow of J. L. Brush, has four children; Amos J., who married Delilah Dodge, has eight children; Ransom Y., who married Lydia A. Avery, and they have five children; Loretta V., wife of J. Lukens, has four children; Nancy W., who married J. O. Jackson, has five children; Alice V., wife of S. H. Vail, has one child. Benjamin C. Mitchell, who completes the life of the children just enumerated, received his education principally in the academy at Damascus, Pennsylvania. He entered early upon his business career and soon showed aptitude in whatever pursuit he undertook. As previously stated he drifted into the hotel business and though he made a success of it he at length wearied of the occupation and decided to devote his life to agricultural pursuits. His location in Brandywine township is in every way desirable, and all the surroundings give evidence of good husbandry. Mr. Mitchell is earnest and enthusiastic in support of Republican principles, and could have held office if so inclined, as he has always been popular with the party workers. While residing at Bradford, Pennsylvania, he was brought out as a candidate for mayor of that enterprising city, but put away the temptation by a positive declination. Mr. Mitchell's only fraternal connections are with the Masons, and he takes an active interest in the affairs of that ancient order. He married for his first wife Pamela, daughter of John Brandamore, a potter of Honesdale, Pennsylvania, and his second wife was Margaret F. Mitchell. Maggie, the only daughter, was married to Thomas Shackman, of Coatesville, assistant secretary of the Chester County Mutual Insurance Company. Clinton, Mr. Mitchell's only son, is a young man of bright promise, at present a resident of Philadelphia.

CHARLES COULTER. The above named, who is a prosperous farmer of West Brandywine township, belongs to a family of German descent, which has had representatives in Chester county for many years. His grandfather, Michael Coulter, emigrated from Germany during the earlier years of the last century, and located near Diamond Rock. He purchased land in that vicinity and spent his life in agricultural pursuits. He was an industrious and well informed German of the type that have done so much for the development of the United States, and during his lifetime was much esteemed by his neighbors. Of his three sons the only one now living in Chester county is James, who married Mabel Evans, and has three children. John, the second son, moved to the west, and the family lost all trace of him afterward. Charles, the youngest, married Jane Jones, by whom he reared a family of nine children, but both parents are now sleeping their last sleep in the Radnor cemetery. Their children were Jones, who married Anna MacFee, and has seven children; James, who has two children; Mary Ann, wife of John Cooper, and they had seven children; Margaret, who married Benjamin Bond, and has seven children; Martha, who married J. Funderwith, and has four children; Benjamin, who married a Miss Evans, and has three children; George, who married a Miss Kyne, but has no children; and Lewis, who married a Miss Ewen.

Charles Coulter, Jr., whose name completes the above list, was born on his father's farm in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and attended school at Spring Mill, in East Whiteland township. He was reared to farm work, and upon arriving at suitable age entered into that honorable calling as his life's occupation. He has met with success and is now regarded as one of the substantial and deserving farmers of the county. In 1870 he was united in marriage with Mary Ann, daughter of Charles Cramp, of Berks county, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Pierce. Mr. Coulter attends the Lutheran church, and in political affairs is affiliated with the Democratic party.

HADLEY MITCHELL, a well known farmer of Chester county, belongs to a family which was originally resident in Pennsylvania, where Joseph Mitchell was born in Montgomery county. At the age of twelve years he was taken to Delaware, the family being thus planted in that state. Joseph Mitchell was all his life an agriculturist. He married Sarah Harlan, daughter of a Delaware farmer, and was the father of the following children: Hannah, who married Samuel Cranston, had one child, and is now deceased; Elizabeth, who married Mr. Gawthrop, had three children, and is now deceased; Thomas, mentioned at length hereinafter; Sarah, who married Stephen Wilson, and was the mother of four children; Joseph, who married Mary Pool, and had one child; David, who married Edna Sharpless, and was the father of ten children; Edwin, who remained single; Emily, who became the wife of Wilmer Palmer, and had two children.

Thomas Mitchell, son of Joseph and Sarah (Harlan) Mitchell, was born in 1812, at Mill Creek Hundred, Delaware, and throughout his life followed the occupation of a farmer. He also conducted a store for some years. He married Sarah, daughter of Amos Greenfield, a farmer of New Garden, and they were the parents of one child; Harlan, who married Annie Chandler, by whom he had one daughter, Ella, who is now the wife of George Fredd, and has a family of children. After the death of his wife, Harlan Mitchell married Libbie, widow of Mr. Richards. The second wife of Mr. Mitchell was Mabel, daughter of Israel Hoopes, a farmer of Kaolin, Chester county, and by this marriage he was the father of the following children: Israel H., who married Ada Forsythe, and had two children; Sarah J., who remained single; Hannah M., who married Frederick Woodward, and was the mother of six children; Joseph H., who married Annie Eastburn, and had three children; and Martha J., who is unmarried. Mr. Mitchell, in marrying for the third time, chose for his wife Eliza, daughter of John and Anna (Pennock) Hadley, the former a farmer of West Marlborough. By this marriage, which took place in 1852, the following children were born: 1. Mabel, who is unmarried; 2. M. Shepherd, who married Mary Hoagland; 3. John, a twin of M. Shepherd, who died in infancy; 4. Hadley, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Mitchell, the father of the family, died in 1872, and his widow passed away in 1894.

Hadley Mitchell, son of Thomas and Eliza (Hadley) Mitchell, was born in 1856, on the homestead in Mill Creek Hundred, Delaware, and educated in the public schools of his birth-place. When ten years old, he moved with his father to New Garden township, where, until reaching the age of twenty-two, he assisted in the labors of the paternal farm. He then spent some time in Delaware and Pennsylvania, principally Chester county, at farm work until 1897, when he purchased the farm which is now his home. This estate, which is known as the "old Lewis property," consists of eighty-five acres, and is kept under the care of Mr. Mitchell, in admirable order and in a high state of cultivation. The political sentiments of Mr. Mitchell are those of an Independent Republican. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Mitchell married March 23, 1897, Mary, a daughter of Ellis and Lydia (Taylor) Parker, the former a farmer of East Marlborough. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell are the parents of two children: Ellis, born January 21, 1898; and Thomas, born September 2, 1900.

WESLEY FLOWERS, known and respected these many years, both as a farmer and citizen, in Kennett township, Chester county, is a son of Perry Flowers, who was born in 1800, in Dorchester county, Maryland, where he was educated in the common schools, and afterward made farming the business of his life. He married Sinia, daughter of John Patterson, a farmer of Dorchester county, Maryland, who married a Miss Wright, and the following children were born to them: Nathan, who married Rebecca Wheeler, and has seven children; Harriet, who is unmarried; Edna, who became the wife of John Noble, and has five children; Alcaid, who married Rebecca Mowbray; Catherine, who is unmarried; Emily, John and Charles, who are all deceased; Wesley, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Willis, who married Mary Morgan. Mr. Flowers died 9 mo., 1865, and his remains are interred near his home in Caroline county, Maryland, and his wife, Sinia Patterson died 1 mo., 6, 1873, and is buried at the same place.

Wesley Flowers, son of Perry and Sinia (Patterson) Flowers, was born 4 mo., 25, 1838, in Dorchester county, Maryland, where he was educated in the common schools. In 1861 he enlisted in the First Eastern Maryland Regiment, commanded by Colonel James Wallace, and served through almost the entire period of the Civil war, leading the life of a soldier for three years and a half. Chief among the memorable events of the war in which he participated were the Gettysburg and Falling Water campaigns. Since leaving the army he has led the quiet life of an agriculturist. April 3, 1873, he removed to New Garden township, and in 1882 to his present residence in Kennett township, Chester county, where he has combined the business of a florist with that of a farmer, having greenhouses in connection with his farm. In politics he has always been a strong Republican. He and his family attend the Methodist church.

Mr. Flowers married 2 mo., 28, 1878, Mary, born 8 mo., 21, 1855, daughter of Cloud and Elizabeth (Green) Smith, her father being a stone mason of Loudonderry township. Mr. and Mrs. Flowers are the parents of one child, Bertha C., born 10 mo., 10, 1879, who is unmarried, and lives at home on the farm.

WILLIAM VOGDES DAVIS, a prominent citizen of Media, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family whose history is closely identified with that of Chester and Delaware counties, as his great-grandparents, Joseph and Sarah Davis, were residents of the township of Williston. His grandfather, James Davis, was born near White House in Williston township, Chester county, enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the common schools there, and upon attaining young manhood removed to Edgemont, Delaware county, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was united in marriage to Sarah Fairlamb, daughter of Robert Fairlamb, of Middletown, and the following named children were born to them: Robert, Mary, Sarah, Alice and Susan Davis. Mr. Davis and his family were believers in the doctrines of the Quaker faith. His death occurred in 1855, and his wife died in 1882, aged eighty-seven years.

Robert F. Davis, father of William V. Davis, was born in 1822, on the old homestead in Edgemont, and was a pupil in the district schools of that neighborhood. He devoted his entire attention to farming interests on the paternal estate, and met with gratifying success in the management of the same. He took an active interest in the Friends Meeting House at Williston, being a member of that body during his entire manhood. Mr. Davis married Sidney Vogdes, daughter of Aaron Vogdes, of Williston, Pennsylvania, and a descendant of the Wayne family of which General Anthony Wayne was a member. Their children are: Samuel F., Anna, Elizabeth, deceased, Mary Ella, wife of Wilmer E. Smedley, of Willistown, and Susanna, deceased. The father of these children died October 20, 1901.

William V. Davis was born in Edgemont township, April 17, 1855, acquired his early education in the public schools of the vicinity, and this was supplemented by a thorough course of study at Shortlidge's Academy, Concord township. For several years after completing his education he followed farming pursuits in Edgemont township, but in 1890 entered the service of the government in the United States custom house in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He has been the incumbent of this office up to the present time (1903) with the exception of six years, when he was engaged in journalistic work in Media, Pennsylvania. In politics Mr. Davis is a stalwart Republican, supporting all measures that tend toward the public good and welfare of the community. He is prominently affiliated with Rose Tree Lodge, No. 275, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having passed all the chairs of the lodge. He is also a member of the Hicksite Friends Meeting at Willistown, to which he contributes most liberally both of his time and money.

On February 16, 1881, Mr. Davis married Etta Vernon, daughter of Dr. David Ashbridge and Elizabeth Margaret Denison (Cooper) Vernon. Their children are: Greta Vernon, born January 10, 1885, and Ada Elizabeth Davis, born January 12, 1887. Dr. David A. Vernon, father of Mrs. Davis, was for many years editor of the "Delaware County American," and he and Thomas V. Cooper were the founders of the same, Mr. Cooper disposing of his interest to him while he was in the army. Dr. Vernon was active during the war, and he was a well known citizen of Delaware county. His wife is a sister of Hon. Thomas V. Cooper, of Media, Pennsylvania.

J. WILLISTON WATT. The family of Watt, which has many members in eastern Pennsylvania, is descended from a purely Scottish-Irish stock which transplanted itself to Ireland in the sixteenth century, on account of the religious persecution which made Caledonia a dark and bloody ground.

The pioneer emigrant to America was James Watt, paternal great-grandfather of J. Williston Watt, who came in the seventeenth century, landing after a sea voyage of four months in New Castle, Delaware. He then located in Lower Oxford township, Pennsylvania, married and reared a family. Among his children was James, who remained in Lower Oxford township, Chester county. He married, and among his children was a son John, born in 1810, in the home which his father had built.

John Watt received as ample an education as the common schools of the day would afford—a thorough grounding in the elementary branches, sufficient equipment for all the ordinary duties of life, in all of which he acquitted himself usefully and honorably. He married Margaret Armstrong, a daughter of John Armstrong, a well-to-do farmer of Bucks county, and of their union were born the following children: Anna M., who became the wife of Samuel Crosby, and who died after becoming the mother of six children; Susan E., who died single; Jackson A., who married Anna E. Poley; Francina, James and Margaret, all of whom died young; and John.

John Williston Watt, youngest child of John and Margaret (Armstrong) Watt, was born at the ancestral home in 1847. He began his education in the common schools in the neighborhood, and pursued advanced studies at Hopewell Academy. He then took a course of instruction in a commercial college in Philadelphia, with the intention of fitting himself for a business career. When he left the institution he was thoroughly qualified to enter upon the life which he had looked forward to, but his health was impaired to such a degree that sedentary pursuits were to be avoided and he returned to the farm, which has since been his home, the scene of his useful labor, and a spot where he has in large degree regained his original strength and vigor. Industrious and sagacious in the conduct of his affairs, he has prospered, even while he has been at times a victim of adversity, as when four years ago, he lost several of his farm buildings by fire, involving him in large expense in replacing them. Intelligent and enterprising, he has at all times borne a full share in advancing the interests of the community along educational, religious and material lines, but has habitually declined all overtures to accept a public office. He attends the Presbyterian church, and in politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Watt married, in 1896, Miss Esther Woods, a daughter of Richard Woods, a leading farmer of the Cumberland Valley, and of this marriage was born a son, John W. Watt, in 1898.

SAMUEL H. BROOMELL, a birthright member of the Society of Friends, in which organization he is an active and prominent factor, is a lineal descendant of John Broomall, who came to Pennsylvania in 1682, and after his marriage settled in Edgmont or Lower Providence. His death in the latter named township occurred in 1729, and he was survived by his widow, Mary Broomall, and the following named children: John, Lydia, Ellen, Mary and Jane Broomall.

John Broomall, Jr., eldest son of John and Mary Broomall, married, October 12, 1720, Anne Lewis, and among the children born to them was a son, Daniel Broomall, who married Martha Talbot, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Talbot, of Middletown. They resided for a number of years in Middletown, but subsequently changed their place of residence to Thornbury. Their children were: Hannah, Joseph, John, Isaac, Nehemiah, James, Jacob, Rachel, David, Elizabeth, Joseph and Nathan, twins, and Daniel Broomall. Daniel Broomall, father of these children, died April 2, 1817, and his wife, Martha (Talbot) Broomall, passed away May 3, 1812; their remains were interred at Middletown.

Samuel H. Broomell

Isaac Broomell, as this branch of the family write the name, third son of Daniel and Martha (Talbot) Broomall, was born August 27, 1762, and married, January 11, 1792, Lydia Neal, born May 12, 1772, daughter of John and Susanna Neal, of Concord. Their children were: 1. John, father of Samuel H. Broomell. 2. Daniel, who married and his children were: Sidney, Lydia, Philena, Susanna, William C., died March 4, 1900, and Frank Broomall, died September 2, 1895; Daniel Broomell died October 24, 1866. 3. James. 4. Isaac, married Rachel Wilkinson, and they are the parents of the following named children: Sarah, Edward, Henry, Thomas, Albert, Eva, and Norman Broomell; Isaac Broomell died October 15, 1891. 5. Sidney, who became the wife of William Preston, and one child was born to this union, Kersey Preston, died January 12, 1855; Sidney Preston died January 17, 1882. 6. Elizabeth, who became the wife of James Davis, and their children were: a daughter, deceased; Ann; Isaac, died January 1, 1900; Rachel, Emily, Martha, Sarah, Ellen, Mary and Abbie Davis. Isaac Broomell, father of these children, died at New London Cross-roads, in November, 1834; his wife, Lydia (Neal) Broomell died in Upper Oxford township, September 2, 1853.

John Broomell, eldest son of Isaac and Lydia (Neal) Broomell, was born January 10, 1794. He was an active and influential citizen of Upper Oxford township, and his business career was characterized by the utmost honesty and integrity. Mr. Broomell was married three times; by his first wife, Letitia, the following named children were born: Elizabeth and George. By his second wife, Esther (Moore) Broomell, the following named children were born: Letitia and James, who were twins and are both dead, Letitia died 5 mo., 5, 1898, and James died 9 mo., 6, 1896; Elizabeth, Seneca, and Samuel H. Broomell. Esther (Moore) Broomell died November 27, 1842. John Broomell chose for his third wife Sarah Moore, born 9 mo., 13, 1803, and her death occurred October 8, 1887. Mr. Broomell died at his home in Upper Oxford township, March 15, 1881.

Samuel H. Broomell, youngest son of John and Esther (Moore) Broomell, was born in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 13, 1842. His early education was acquired in the public schools of his native township, and this was supplemented by attendance at a private school under the competent supervision of Henry S. Kent, and at Millersville Normal School. For a short period of time he was employed in teaching school during the winter months, and the remainder of the year was devoted to agricultural pursuits. In 1881 he purchased his father's farm, which consisted of two hundred acres, half of which he subsequently disposed of, and two years later he erected a comfortable and commodious residence which he and his family are now occupying. Politically, Mr. Broomell is a strong advocate of the Prohibition party, and for one term he served in the capacity of school director. He is very prominent in the meetings of the Society of Friends, holding in succession the offices of elder, overseer, and at the present time (1903) minister. In addition to these duties, Mr. Broomell holds five clerkships in the meetings—clerk of yearly meeting of ministers and elders; clerk of quarterly meeting of ministers and elders; clerk of Penn's Grove monthly meeting, which he has held for twenty-nine years; clerk of preparatory meeting, which he has held for thirty-four years; and clerk of the committee having charge of "Friends' Home" of Western quarterly meeting.

On February 20, 1873, Mr. Broomell married Mary E. Cloud, daughter of James and Esther Jane (Kent) Cloud; their children are: 1. J. Howard, born January 18, 1874, married, March 16, 1899, Evelyn L. Coates, daughter of Pusey and Adeline Coates, and they are the parents of one child, Helen Broomell, born April 7, 1902. 2. Edward, born March 17, 1876, married, June 25, 1899, Tacie D. Coles, and one child has been born to them, Gladys Broomell, born March 29, 1900. 3. Ella, born June 30, 1878. 4. Annie, born November 21, 1880, became the wife of J. Paul Harlan, March 27, 1902, and their child, Paul Deaver Harlan, was born February 4, 1903.

SAMUEL NEELEY, a worthy citizen of St. Peter's, Chester county, well known and much respected by his townsmen, is a grandson of Mr. Neeley, a native of Ireland, who emigrated at an early age to America, settled in Pennsylvania, and found a home in the old county where many of his descendants still reside. His wife was a native of Chester county, and they were the parents of the following children: Robert, who was born in Chester county, was a drover by occupation, and lived to an advanced age; Joseph M., mentioned at length hereinafter; William, who was also born in Chester county, was a farmer, and lived to be an old man; Washington, who was a preacher; James, who was a printer, and died in Philadelphia; and John, whose death occurred in Illinois. Mr. Neeley, the father of these six sons, lived many years in the land of his adoption, and closed his long and useful life not far from the close of his latter half-century of existence.

Joseph M. Neeley, son of Mr. Neeley, was born in 1801, in Chester county, and was by trade a master plasterer. His success in his chosen calling was due to capability, joined to the habits of industry and fidelity which attended him throughout life. He was respected by all, both as a man and a citizen. He married Miss Garrett, and their children were: Sarah Jane, who married Edward Peachin, a tanner; Susannah, who became the wife of William Luckens, a grocer of Philadelphia; and William, a plasterer, who married Elizabeth Krup, and has two children. After the death of his wife, Mr. Neeley married Annette Edwards, born in 1825, daughter of David Edwards. Mr. Edwards was a farmer, and his other children, all of whom are now deceased, were as follows: Thomas, who married and had four children; John, who married and was the father of two children; George, who never married; Mary, who became the wife of Christopher Friday; Rachel, who married Frank Rapp; and Elizabeth, who was the wife of Mr. Eagle. All the sons were farmers. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Neeley: David, who married Miss Strengfellow, and has three children; Mary, who became the wife of John Keebler, a cracker baker of Philadelphia, and has one child; Martha, who married Oliver Frees, a farmer, and is the mother of two children; Samuel, mentioned at length hereinafter; Annie, who is the wife of Stephen Whalley, a farmer, and has one child; Robert, who is a plasterer, and unmarried; Josephine and Charles, both of whom are deceased. The death of Mr. Neeley, which was mourned, not only by his family and friends, but by all who had been in any way associated with him, occurred in the year 1883.

Samuel Neeley, son of Joseph M. and Annette (Edwards) Neeley, was born July 25, 1850, in Chester county, and received his education in the public schools of Philadelphia. Adopting as his life-work the trade of his father, he became in the course of time a master plasterer and contractor. Inheriting an aptitude for the business, and guided by the same principles of diligence and integrity which had contributed so largely to render his father's career a successful one, he prospered to a remarkable degree. For twenty years he conducted a flourishing business, and in 1898 found himself in such circumstances as justified his retirement. Withdrawing to his native Chester county, he purchased the property on which he has since resided, and where he is now reaping the fruits of his industry. He is a member of the Masonic order, affiliating with William C. Hamilton Lodge, No. 500, F. and

A. M., of Philadelphia. In the sphere of politics he is identified with the Republican party. His church connections are with the Methodist denomination.

Mr. Neeley married Mary Wilson, of Philadelphia, and they are the parents of two daughters: Laura, who is the wife of Eugene Abbott, a manufacturer of Philadelphia; and Catherine.

DILLER RANCK. Enterprise, energy and perseverance have been the chief factors in the success which has crowned the well directed efforts of Diller Ranck during a period of almost half a century devoted to agricultural pursuits. He was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1839, the son of Jacob and Lucy Ranck, natives of Earl township, Lancaster county, who are descendants of a German ancestry that have made their home in the state of Pennsylvania for many generations. Jacob and Lucy Ranck are the parents of eight children, six of whom are living at the present time (1903) and are loyal citizens of this great commonwealth.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Mr. Ranck were obtained in the common schools of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and after completing his studies he devoted his attention to acquiring a thorough knowledge of the occupation of farming. He pursued this line of industry for many years in Bird-in-hand township, Lancaster county, from whence he removed to Honeybrook township, Chester county, in 1885, and purchased his present valuable farm of one hundred and eighty-eight acres. This ground is rich and fertile, produces a large and varied crop of garden truck, and in addition to this he operates a dairy equipped with sixteen head of choice cows producing a rich quality of cream for which he receives the highest market price. On this property there is a rich vein of magnetic ore highly charged with nickel, and this mine, while not large in area, amply makes up for this deficiency in its productiveness of a first class ore, out of which is manufactured the finest quality of tin and steel. Mr. Ranck is proud of this acquisition to his farm, it having proven to be a remunerative source of revenue during all the years of his ownership. Mr. Ranck is affable in manner, has the power of winning and retaining friends, and has been honored by his fellow townsmen by being chosen a member of the school board, which office he filled both creditably and acceptably for a number of years.

In 1864 Mr. Ranck was united in marriage to Eva Ann Bair, who was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Clarence, deceased; Edwin J., Marcus, Leeta, George W., Martha L., Anne M., and Rufus Ranck, deceased. Mr. Ranck and his family are members of the German Reformed church, taking an active interest in the work of the various societies connected with it, and Mr. Ranck serves as a member of the board of trustees.

SAMUEL A. MASSEY. The Massey family of Chester county, of which Samuel A. Massey, of Lower Oxford township, is a descendant in the present generation, is of English origin, and doubtless came from Cheshire. The American ancestor was probably Thomas Massey, who came in the "Endeavor," 7 mo., 29, 1683. In 1692 he married Phebe, daughter of Robert and Mary Taylor, she having been a passenger on the same vessel. In 1696 Thomas Massey bought three hundred acres of land in Marple township. He died 9 mo., 18, 1708, aged forty-five years, and his widow married Bartholomew Coppock, and died 12 mo., 27, 1749. The children of Thomas and Phebe Massey were Esther, Mordecai, James, Hannah, Thomas, Phebe and Mary.

Thomas (2), eldest child in the family above named, was born 11 mo., 21, 1701, and died 6 mo., 13, 1784. He married, about 1724, his cousin, Sarah Taylor, daughter of Isaac and Sarah Taylor, of Springheld. She was born 1 mo., 9, 1703, and died 9 mo., 28, 1786. They had fourteen children.

Isaac (3) sixth child and second son of Thomas (1), was born 2 mo., 5, 1732, and died 2 mo., 6, 1792. He devised £20 toward rebuilding Williston Meeting House. He married, at Goshen Meeting, 6 mo., 9, 1763, Phebe Ashbridge, born 10 mo., 16, 1739, died 11 mo., 27, 1774, a daughter of George and Jane Ashbridge, of Goshen. Their children were Jane, Hannah, George, Mary, Sidney and Daniel.

Daniel (4), youngest child of Isaac (3), was born in Goshen township, where he cultivated a farm during his active life. He was originally a Whig in politics, and became a Republican when that party was organized.

Isaac (5), son of Daniel (4), was born on the homestead farm, educated in the neighborhood schools, and was a farmer. He was twice married, first to Eliza Brown, who bore him three sons, George, Isaac and Samuel; the two first named died young, and Samuel is to be written of hereinafter. Isaac Massey married for his second wife, Hannah Millhouse, and their children were four sons, Jefferson, Edward, Howard and Ira.

Samuel A. (6), youngest child of Isaac (5) by his first marriage, was born March 22, 1823, in East Pikeland township. He was educated in the neighborhood schools, and served an apprenticeship to a coach maker at Parkesburg, becoming a most proficient workman. On coming of age, in 1845, he established a factory of his own near Hayesville, Chester county, and had made a most prosperous beginning, when his establishment was completely destroyed by fire. Undeterred by this serious disaster, he removed to near Cochranville, Chester county, where he resumed his business, and which he conducted with a large measure of success for several years. In 1861 he assisted in raising Company B of the Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. In 1862 he removed to Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, where he assisted in raising Company K of the Fiftieth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, in which he served as second sergeant. In 1866 he took up his residence in Lower Oxford, where he has since conducted a finely cultivated farm of one hundred and twenty acres and a model dairy establishment. Known for his untiring industry and strict probity during a long and useful life, Mr. Massey has always enjoyed the esteem of the community, and has been called to the positions of tax collector and assessor. He is a Republican in politics, and an active worker in the cause of temperance. In religion he is a birthright member of the Society of Friends. He is an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Massey was married 10 mo., 1, 1846, to Miss Letitia Paxson, a daughter of Joseph and Sarah Paxson, her father being a prosperous farmer of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Massey were: 1. Annie, who married John Gilbert, and had six children; 2. Adeline, now the wife of James Wilson; 3. Matilda, who married Jonathan Mitchener, and to whom were born six children; 4. Emma, who is unmarried; 5. Garvin P., who married Agnes McFadden, and to them were born five children.

JOHN G. SCHOBBER. The state of Pennsylvania has been one of the centers of colonization from the German fatherland even before William Penn received his grant, and one would expect to find, therefore, on its soil some of our leading German-American citizens, which is the case. Among the more recent arrivals from the old country was John M. Schober, who was born in Germany, and after growing to manhood came across the sea to find a more congenial home. He took up his residence in Philadelphia and engaged in the butcher business, which he prosecuted with the German energy and made return him good receipts. He had married before coming to this country Kathrina Benz, who became the mother of the following children: Anna M., who married A. C. Wicket; Gottlieb, deceased; Katie, also deceased; Caroline, single; and John G. The elder Mr. Schober, contrary to the usual rule of Germans, made the Democrats the party of his choice; fraternally he was a Red Man and a Mason.

John G. Schober grew up in the city of Philadelphia, and when he had become old enough to work, his father took him into his shop and taught him the butcher's trade. Thus equipped he has made considerable success in his affairs, and at the present time conducts a large farm and a store in Sadsburyville, Chester county. He devotes his attention to his business interests, but is always ready to assist any work of public nature in the town or township. He votes the Republican ticket; in Masonry he has become very prominent, having reached the twenty-ninth degree. He married a Chester county lady, Mary L. Andes, whose father, Martin, was a farmer in Sadsbury township. Of the two sons born of this union, the first, John G., Jr., died in infancy; Edward is now a student in Pierce's Business College at Philadelphia. The family are earnest members of the Octoraro Presbyterian church.

JACOB HOOK, for many years a prosperous farmer and honored citizen of Chester county, was descended from ancestors who were among the early settlers of the county. His father, Henry Hook, was born on the homestead, and during the Revolutionary war served as a teamster in the Continental army. He was present at the battle of Brandywine, and was one of those who shared the hardships of the ever memorable winter at Valley Forge. He married and became the father of the following named children: Samuel, John, George, Henry, Jacob, mentioned at length hereinafter, Catherine and Mary. Most of these children, all of whom are now deceased, lived to old age.

Jacob Hook, son of Henry and Catherine Hook, was born January 19, 1799, on the homestead, and all his life followed the calling of a farmer. In this he prospered as his ability and integrity deserved, reaping financial profit from his well-directed efforts, and winning the richer reward of the esteem and confidence of his neighbors, a merited tribute to his sterling worth of character. He neglected none of the duties of a good citizen, and when any question relating to local affairs was under consideration, his influence and aid were always given on whichever side he thought most likely to promote the cause of right and advance the best interests of the community.

Mr. Hook married Mary, born December 5, 1810, daughter of John and Hannah (Templin) Defrain, whose other children were: Catherine, who died at an early age; and Charlotte, who was born June 18, 1828, married Amos Grubbs, a merchant of Zeiglersville, and was the mother of twelve children, eight of whom are now deceased, and are buried in Brownback church. Mrs. Grubbs died July 5, 1885. Mr. and Mrs. Defrain moved to Chester county when their daughter Mary, (who became the wife of Jacob Hook, as mentioned above), was about eighteen years of age. The death of Mrs. Defrain occurred when she was about seventy-four years old, and she and her husband, who has also been many years deceased, are buried in Brownback cemetery. Among the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hook were two daughters: Hannah, who was born July 22, 1838; and Victorine, who was born October 20, 1842, and became the wife of Mr. Grepps.

The death of Mr. Hook, which occurred in 1854, at the comparatively early age of fifty-five, was mourned not only by his family and near friends, but was sincerely lamented by the whole community in which he resided, where he was regarded as an upright, conscientious citizen, and a kind friend to all with whom he was in any way associated. His daughters, Miss Hannah Hook and Mrs. Victorine Grepps, the former of whom is the owner of the homestead, now reside in the old house in which their father and grandfather were born, which has been familiar to them from their earliest recollection, and which is endeared to them by a host of associations. The ancient dwelling, which is stored with relics and mementoes of the past, possesses a more than common interest for those versed in the historic and traditionary lore of Chester county.

REV. THOMAS R. McDOWELL, the efficient and beloved pastor of the Presbyterian church at Upper Octoraro, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a graduate from Princeton Theological Seminary and a man of rare intellectual attainments and pleasing address, is a representative of a family of Irish extraction who have made their home in this country since the middle of the eighteenth century. He was born in New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 22, 1855, a son of James B. and Eliza (Hall) McDowell.

James McDowell, the pioneer ancestor of the family, was born in the north of Ireland in the year 1740, educated in the common schools of his native county, and when he attained his eighteenth year emigrated to America and located in the state of Pennsylvania. He served in the Continental army during the Revolutionary war, and as a reward for his faithful service and heroic conduct on the field of battle was commissioned as captain of a troop of light horse militia in Chester county on May 1, 1786. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Loughhead, a native of Concord, for a number of years settled on land partly belonging to her, and about 1798 purchased a tract of four hundred and twenty-five acres on Elk, whither he removed with his family, which consisted of the following named children—Mary, Jane, John, Margaret, Catherine, Elizabeth, Ann and Martha. Mr. McDowell died September 12, 1815, and his remains were interred in New London.

John McDowell, eldest son of James and Elizabeth McDowell, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1768. He was reared on his father's farm and received the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of his day. On May 1, 1789, he was commissioned ensign of the Fourth Company, Fifth Battalion of militia in Chester county, and August 1, 1814, was commissioned by Governor Findlay an ensign of the Ninth Company of the Ninety-first Pennsylvania militia. He married Sarah Gettys, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, who bore him several children. His death occurred in 1837.

John McDowell, son of John and Sarah McDowell, was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania. His early life was spent in attendance at the village school and assisting with the labors on the homestead, and his business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits which proved a lucrative means of livelihood. He was upright and conscientious in all his transactions, was an attendant at the services of the Presbyterian church, and an honored and valued resident of the community. By his marriage to Eliza J. Carlile, he became the father of a family of four children. His death occurred in 1860, in the seventieth year of his age.

James B. McDowell, son of John and Eliza J. McDowell, was born in the vicinity of New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1827. During his boyhood he acquired a practical education in the schools adjacent to his home, and by steady application and perseverance in his studies became thoroughly qualified to fill the responsible position of principal of the New London Academy, in which capacity he served with credit and distinction for many years. Subsequently he was appointed cashier of the Citizens' National Bank of Middletown, Delaware, and was filling this position at the time of his death in the year 1864. He held membership in the Middletown Presbyterian church and was a member of the board of elders; in politics he was an adherent of the principles of Republicanism. Mr. McDowell and his wife, Eliza (Hall) McDowell, a native of Cecil county, Maryland, and a daughter of Levi and Elizabeth (Raukin) Hall, were the parents of six children. Mrs. McDowell passed away in 1862, aged thirty-seven years.

Thomas R. McDowell, son of James B. and Eliza McDowell, was prepared for college at the West Nottingham Academy in Cecil county, Maryland, then entered Delaware College, Newark, Delaware, from which institution he was graduated with honors in the class of 1881, after which he pursued a three years' course at the Princeton Theological Seminary, graduating therefrom in June, 1884. His first call was to the pastorate of the Lower Brandywine Presbyterian church, located near Wilmington, Delaware, but in 1889 he returned to Chester county, Pennsylvania. On May 22, 1889, he was appointed to the pastorate of the Upper Octoraro Presbyterian church, located near Parkesburg, the history of which dates back to 1720. He is a deep and earnest thinker, an eloquent and forceful speaker, and by his conscientious performance of every day duties has endeared himself to his parishioners and all with whom he is brought in contact. In addition to his pastoral duties, he assumed the charge of three chapels which were located respectively at Parkesburg, Pomeroy and Sadsburyville. Politically Mr. McDowell is a Republican, and has served as secretary of the school board of Sadsbury township. He is a member of Dupont Lodge, No. 29, Free and Accepted Masons of Wilmington, Delaware, and of Centerville Lodge, No. 37, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Rev. Thomas R. McDowell married, March 14, 1888, Sophia S. Pusey, a daughter of Edward Pusey, of Wilmington, Delaware. Three children were the issue of this union—Edward P.; James B., died at the age of fourteen months; and J. Norman McDowell.

CHARLES ALBERT MERZ, who resides in Warwick township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he is an active and prominent factor in the various enterprises and industries that conduce to the material growth and development of that locality, is a native of Reading, Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred in that city May 24, 1869, and he is a worthy representative of an old and honored German lineage. His parents are Albert and Catherine (Geilger) Merz. Albert Merz was born in Germany, January 21, 1835, educated in the institutions of learning in that country, and in 1860, being then in the twenty-sixth year of his age, he emigrated to this country and for the past ten years has been a representative citizen of Chester county, removing to that vicinity from the city of Reading. His wife, Catherine (Geilger) Merz, was born in Germany, November 2, 1836.

Charles A. Merz was reared in the city of Reading, and his educational advantages were acquired in the public schools. Since attaining young manhood he has devoted his energies to business interests, and being a man of strong will, great energy and strict adherence to a course which he believes to be right, has commanded the respect and commendation of all with whom he has had personal or business relations.

Mr. Merz was united in marriage, November 2, 1889, to Sarah Herscher, who was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1869, and the following named children were the issue of this union—Katie, born in Reading, Pennsylvania, October 23, 1890, died October 8, 1898; George, born in Reading, Pennsylvania, October 20, 1892, died October 11, 1898; Samuel Many, born in Reading, Pennsylvania, October 2, 1893; Philip, born in Reading, Pennsylvania, September 7, 1896; Wilhelm, born in Chester county, July 5, 1898; Henry, born in Chester county, September 3, 1900; and Charles, born in Chester county, December 14, 1902.

F. F. VANDERVOORT, a prominent man of affairs of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of an ancient Dutch family, the founder of which in America emigrated from Holland in 1645 and settled in New Amsterdam, shortly before the city came under the sway of the last of its Dutch governors, the renowned Stuyvesant, whose arbitrary rule even his own countrymen were not unwilling to exchange for the more liberal government of the English, but who, despite his faults, lives in history as a gallant soldier and fearless ruler.

Benjamin F. Vandervoort, father of F. F. Vandervoort, was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Among his not very remote paternal ancestors he numbered one who served in the patriot army of the Revolution, and was also prominent in ecclesiastical affairs, being the second recorder of his church. Benjamin F. Vandervoort was a white lead manufacturer, and at the time of his death was president of the White Lead Manufacturing Association. He married Caroline Fahnestock, who was descended from an old German family. Mr. Vandervoort died in 1883, leaving behind him the memory of a good man and a highly respected citizen. His widow is still living.

F. F. Vandervoort, son of Benjamin F. and Caroline (Fahnestock) Vandervoort, was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1865. He received his education in the public and high schools of his native city, where he afterward engaged in the iron and steel business. Later he acted as stenographer to the Keystone Bridge Company, afterward serving as salesman for the same company. In 1897 Mr. Vandervoort went to Philadelphia as eastern salesman for the La Belle Iron Company of Steubenville, Ohio. In this, as well as in the previous positions which he occupied, he built up for himself the reputation of an able, energetic business man of the strictest integrity. In October, 1901, Mr. Vandervoort assisted in organizing the Chester Iron and Steel Company, of which he was made general manager. The fact that he holds this position at the present day testifies to the ability and assiduity which have marked his discharge of the duties of the office.

JOHN OLIVER, a well known citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, under whose supervision some of the finest buildings in the town have been erected, was born November 4, 1842, in Ireland, where he received his education and learned the trade of a stone mason. His father was Edward Oliver, a farmer and stone mason, who came to the United States in 1865, and died in 1870.

Mr. Oliver accompanied his father to America and settled in Chester, where he worked at his trade. In 1874, in partnership with his brother Thomas, he engaged in business as a contractor and builder. The firm has been extremely successful, having built a number of the handsomest and most important edifices in the city of Chester. Among them may be mentioned the Chester Hospital, the Crozer Home, all the Shaw and Essex Mills, the mills owned by James Irving, St. Paul's church, and the Crozer Homeopathic Hospital. In addition to these the firm has erected the building occupied by the Franklin Fire Insurance Company, and also many residences. They give constant employment to a force of over one hundred men.

Mr. Oliver is a member of the Masonic order, and of the Independent Order of Red Men, and is active in the affairs of these organizations, as well as in the duties of a citizen.

Mr. Oliver married, in 1888, Mary Jane Mackey, and has three sons: John, David and Thomas Oliver.

W. D. CRAWFORD, a leading man of affairs of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family of Irish origin, which emigrated to the United States at a comparatively early period, and settled in Pennsylvania.

Albert Crawford, father of W. D. Crawford, was probably born in Blair county, Pennsylvania, whence he departed, when a young man, in company with Dr. Peter, an old iron manufacturer. It was in 1842 that Mr. Crawford left home and made the journey to Pittsburg, with this experienced guide, under whose auspices no doubt, he established there the Juniata Iron Works, thus entitling himself to the distinction of being classed among the pioneers of the iron industry in Pittsburg. Connected with him in the management of the works were his four brothers. Mr. Crawford died in 1901, leaving behind him the memory of a long, useful and prosperous life.

W. D. Crawford, son of Albert Crawford, was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and received his primary education in the public schools of his native city, afterward becoming a student in the Western University of Pennsylvania. In 1880 he went to assist his father in the Juniata Iron Works, where he remained until 1899, acquiring a thorough knowledge of the business in all its branches. In 1899 he removed to Chester, in order to assume the position of superintendent of the Tidewater Steel Company's works, in that city. This very extensive establishment, which has been for the last three years under the management of Mr. Crawford, employs a force of seven hundred men, and exports its manufactures to all quarters of the globe. The remarkable success of the business and the merited celebrity which it enjoys are due, in great part, to the careful and thorough superintendence of the works by Mr. Crawford, enforced by his fine abilities and practical knowledge of details.

The pressing demands of the duties of his position have left Mr. Crawford little time to form connections with fraternal societies, but he is, nevertheless, enrolled among the members of the venerable order of Free and Accepted Masons.

Mr. Crawford married, December 21, 1880, Dora Louisa, daughter of J. H. Schlagle, of Pittsburg. Of five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, three are living: David L., Robert F., and Joseph I. Crawford.

SAMUEL W. WOOD, one of the leading citizens of Chester, Pennsylvania, is the bearer of a name familiar as that of more than one of the old families of New Jersey, which appear, at least in the majority of cases, to be of English origin.

Samuel J. Wood, father of Samuel W. Wood, was born in Newark, New Jersey, and in 1844 removed to Westchester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he made his home until 1858. He served in the National Guard, and on the outbreak of the Civil war recruited Company I, Second Delaware Regiment. He served three years in the army, attaining to the rank of captain, and took part in several engagements. He married Phoebe B. McLaughlin, a descendant of a family well known in Pennsylvania, her great-grandfather having been an old resident of Delaware county.

Samuel W. Wood, son of Samuel J. and Phoebe B. (McLaughlin) Wood, was born January 11, 1849, in West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was educated in the local schools, after which he learned the trade of a coach painter. In September, 1869, he enlisted in the Eleventh Regiment, United States Infantry, and went to Clarksville, Texas, with the rank of sergeant, returning after his discharge to Delaware. In 1876 he organized Company A, American Rifles, to represent the state of Delaware at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia. Later, when this company formed part of the First Regiment, National Guard, state of Delaware, Mr. Wood was commissioned major of that regiment, in which he subsequently served for seven years with the rank of colonel. From 1860 to 1890 Mr. Wood resided in Wilmington, Delaware, where he worked at his trade, and also filled the position of assistant in the postoffice. In 1890 Mr. Wood removed to Chester, where he is now a prosperous merchant.

Mr. Wood is an active member of the Republican party. During his residence in Wilmington, in 1880, he was connected with the Young Men's Republican Club, and is a member of the corresponding organization in Chester. He was once named for the nomination for governor of Delaware. He is a member of the Masonic order.

Mr. Wood married Susan N., daughter of James Hindle, of Philadelphia, and has a family of three children: Laura M., Charlotte H. and Harry G. Wood.

CHARLES M. STONE, the chief accountant of the Tidewater Steel Company of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, has risen to his present responsible position through honest and earnest perseverance in those honorable paths which lead to real success.

Alson H. Stone, father of Charles M. Stone, was born in Herrick, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, a son of Calvin Stone, who was a native of the state of Connecticut. Alson H., after acquiring a common school education, learned the trade of civil engineer and followed this occupation with a large degree of success for a number of years; he was also extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits, and was one of the prominent and influential men of the town. He was united in marriage to Miss Louise Faunce, a daughter of Samuel Faunce and a descendant of a Faunce who served in the capacity of sheriff of Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, in the early part of the eighteenth century; her brother, John E. Faunce, filled the position of speaker of the house of representatives. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stone, five of whom are living at the present time (1903). Mr. Stone's death occurred in the year 1885, but his widow is still alive.

Charles M. Stone, son of Alson H. and Louise Stone, was born in Herrick, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, September 12, 1865, and his literary education was obtained in the local schools of his birthplace, which he attended until he attained the age of twelve years. He then entered the employ of a bank in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he remained for four years. He then went west and settled in Denver, Colorado, where he took an active interest in the commercial and political affairs of the city, and was elected to the office of deputy sheriff in 1890 and served in that capacity for one year. Mr. Stone then returned to Philadelphia and devoted his attention for several years to the insurance business in that city, being very successful in this line of trade. In 1900 he took up his residence in Media, Delaware county, and assumed the responsibilities of chief accountant of the Tidewater Steel Company, one of the important industries of the state, and in the discharge of his duties he exhibits great business capacity and strict integrity.

On December 22, 1887, Mr. Stone was united in marriage to Miss Nellie C. Foster, a daughter of Charles H. Foster, of North Carolina. Mr. Foster was formerly a resident of Maine, where he was well and favorably known as an eminent lawyer and newspaper writer of note. At the breaking out of the war, Mr. Foster resided in the south, but his sympathies being in favor of the Union army, he came north and served as colonel during that terrible struggle. One child has blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Stone, Charles A., born August 12, 1889.

WESLEY K. SHEPPARD, one of the leading farmers of Delaware county, and a highly respected citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family which has been for nearly three quarters of a century represented in the state.

J. D. Sheppard, father of Wesley K. Sheppard, was born in England, his family being people of wealth and of some prominence. At the age of twenty-five he came to the United States and settled in Philadelphia, where he engaged in the manufacture of shawls. He was very successful, being for a long time at the head of a large and lucrative business. He married Sarah Blakely, and was the owner of a country home at Wallingford, which he purchased in 1850. Mr. Sheppard died in 1868, shortly after his retirement from business.

Wesley K. Sheppard, son of J. D. and Sarah (Blakely) Sheppard, was born December 31, 1857, in Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the local schools. He was one of a family of six children, and early in life decided to devote himself to agricultural pursuits. He settled in Chester, where he is the owner of one hundred and fifty-six acres which he cultivates in the most thorough and improved manner, and on which he carries on the business of a general farmer and dairyman, being the possessor of sixty cows. Mr. Sheppard is active in local affairs, and has filled the office of supervisor. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens, both as an enterprising and successful farmer, and as an honorable and public-spirited official.

Mr. Sheppard married, July 31, 1895, Lizzie, daughter of Henry Greenwood, of Chester. Three children have been born to them: Ruth A., Warren K. and Roland K. Sheppard.

THOMPSON HUDSON, Jr., justice of the peace of the borough of Hopewell, Chester county, Pennsylvania, has served in that capacity for the past twenty-one years. During that long period his administration has been marked with the utmost fidelity and conscientiousness, and he is widely known and universally respected as a man of practical business ability and influence. He was born in Hopewell borough, in 1853, a son of Thompson and Elizabeth Hudson, and grandson of Benjamin Hudson.

Benjamin Hudson (grandfather) was the pioneer ancestor of this branch of the Hudson family, and upon his arrival in this country, in 1700, from his native home in England, he settled in Hopewell borough, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Here he devoted himself to farming pursuits, and this vocation he followed throughout the many years of his active and useful life. He acquired a practical education in the schools of his county, and by reading good literature, observation and experience, he became well informed on all the leading questions of the day. He married a Miss Metcalf, a native of Chester county, and among the children born to them was a son, Thompson Hudson. This son became the father of our subject, Thompson Hudson.

Thompson Hudson, Sr., was born on the old homestead in East Nottingham township, now Hopewell borough, Chester county, in 1801. He attended the public schools of the neighborhood and acquired a good English education. After leaving school, through his knowledge and brightness, he became a teacher at Bell Air Academy, where he remained for seven years. He then erected a building and opened a private academy of his own in Hopewell borough, which he conducted successfully for a period of fifteen to eighteen years. His memory is held in honor for his excellent educational work, and many of the older people who live in and about Hopewell treasure pleasant recollections of him as a bright example of the really capable teacher, and of his academy as one of the most flourishing scholastic institutions in Chester county. Among his pupils were such men as James Pollock, who became governor of the state of Pennsylvania, and Hon. Jesse C. Dickey, who represented the Sixth Congressional District in congress. Thompson Hudson, Sr., was always looked upon by the people of his day as a competent and capable man, and especially as an educator. During the later years of his life he was interested in farming. He was an active and aggressive worker in the ranks of the Republican party, and was selected by the citizens of Hopewell township and borough to serve as burgess, as a member of the council, and in other township offices.

Thompson Hudson Sr.

He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Dickey, born in 1813, a daughter of Robert and Sarah Dickey, the former named having been a representative farmer of New London township, Chester county. The following named children were born to them: 1. Benjamin Franklin, who is serving as judge in Atchison City and county, Kansas; he married a Miss Mitchell, and they are the parents of six children; 2. Robert, married Elizabeth Chamberlin, and four children are the issue of this union; 3. Sarah, wife of A. F. Martin, Esq., attorney at law at Atchison City, Kansas, and the mother of six children; 4. Rachel, unmarried, serving in the capacity of missionary in Japan, where she has been for nine years; 5. Keziah, wife of Harry Harpins, and they are the parents of one child; 6-7. Joseph and Jesse, twins, deceased early in life; 8. Thompson Hudson, Jr., the subject of our sketch, mentioned at length hereinafter. Thompson Hudson, Sr., died in 1879, and his wife in 1900.

Thompson Hudson, Jr., son of Thompson and Elizabeth Hudson, received his early education at the Millersville State Normal School, and then entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia. Later he returned to his home on the farm and took up school teaching as a vocation, which he followed successfully for ten consecutive years in Chester, Lancaster and Clearfield counties. In 1882 he was elected justice of the peace for the borough of Hopewell, and has held commission as such to the present time, and now receives the greater part of the work pertaining to the office in the southern portion of the county. He has a thoroughly practical knowledge of law, and in addition to his adjudication of cases he frequently acts as attorney in other courts and his opinions are regarded with confidence. He is an ardent Republican in politics. He has held the office of burgess, member of the town council, secretary of the school board and deputy coroner, which offices he has held for many years. His opinion on all public questions is highly regarded. He is an honored member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and has passed all the chairs in his lodge.

In 1877 Mr. Hudson married Martha Cooper, daughter of Samuel and Mary Cooper. Her father was a prosperous farmer of West Nottingham township. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson are Rachel, Dickey, Mary C., Keziah H., Margaret S., Bessie H., Ida C., Martha A. and Thompson Hudson, the third.

MICHAEL HONAN, whose name has been prominently connected for many years with the commercial and political interests of the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in county Limerick, Ireland, the son of John Honan, who came to this country in 1852 and settled in Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he pursued the occupation of farming. He had an accurate and thorough knowledge of the best methods of carrying on this industry, and his products were always of such excellence as to find a ready sale in the markets, thus bringing to him good financial returns. Mr. Honan was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Dillon, and eight children were born to them, six of whom are living at the present time (1902). Mr. Honan died in the year 1878.

Michael Honan, son of John and Catherine Honan, received his literary education in the local schools, and after completing his studies he engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1869, and in addition to these duties he acted in the capacity of bookkeeper. He then began business on his own account as a contractor, and built a part of the seventy-five miles of railroad from St. Paul to Duluth, built the Darby & Ridley Park Railroad, the Front Street Railroad of Chester, and was appointed roadmaster of the West Chester Railroad. This position he retained for the long period of twenty years, owing to his excellent business ability, executive capacity and strict integrity. Mr. Honan secured the contract for he building of twenty miles of sewers at Plainfield, New Jersey, and a similar contract at Wilksburg, Pennsylvania, and he also constructed a large portion of the sewers in the city of Chester. He was awarded the contract for the construction of the Second, Third and Seventh street bridges, and he also erected the bridge at Kensington, Pennsylvania, which required the services of four hundred men in its construction. Another large undertaking which Mr. Honan had the contract for was the digging of a canal from the Ninth street bridge to the Delaware river for the Eddystone Company. Mr. Honan is an expert in his line, and his proficient services, honorable business methods and promptness have been the salient features in his success. He has now a liberal patronage, and his continued business prosperity seems assured. In his political affiliations he is a staunch adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and was elected to fill the responsible office of treasurer of the borough of South Chester, and also was a member of the council for the second ward of the same borough. Both Mr. Honan and his sons, Harry and Michael, Junior, rank high among the leaders of the Republican party, and their opinions carry weight, and they have given their aid and influence in a large measure to the furthering of party interests. Mr. Honan is also prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity.

In July, 1857, Mr. Honan married Miss Elizabeth Mulholland, daughter of John Mulholland, and the following named children are the surviving members of their family: Mary, Margaret, Harry, James, Michael and Elizabeth C. Honan.

JOHN QUIGLEY, an enterprising and prominent agriculturist of Tredyffrin township, Chester county Pennsylvania, belongs to that class of men who through their own efforts have achieved a competence, and by their honorable dealing command the esteem and confidence of those with whom they have been brought in contact. He was born in Brallyglen township, county Donegal, Ireland, and inherited in a great measure some of the chief characteristics of that country—hardihood, perseverance, ambition, wit and repartee.

Charles Quigley, grandfather of John Quigley, was a native of county Donegal, Ireland, a section noted for its rich soil, beautiful scenery, and pleasant congenial residents. By occupation he was a carpenter and farmer, owning about seventy-five acres of land which was divided into three separate farms, with buildings thereon, which were very productive of barley, oats and potatoes. His products being of an excellent grade, he readily disposed of them in the near-by markets, and in this manner accumulated a goodly competence for his declining years. He was of a gentle, conservative disposition, and by his exemplary life and character won and retained the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens.

Charles Quigley, Jr., father of John Quigley, was born in county Donegal, Ireland, where his education was acquired from private tutors. He began his business career as a farmer, conducting his operations on a farm of twenty-five acres which was given to him by his father; the ground was well cultivated and improved so that he was enabled to place upon the market as fine specimens of garden produce as could be found in that section of the country. He was united in marriage to Rose Money, a native of Ireland, and daughter of John and Mary Money, the former named being a farmer by occupation.

John Quigley, son of Charles and Rose Quigley, was born and reared in the same house as his father, and his education was obtained under the personal supervision of private tutors in the neighborhood. He emigrated to this country in June, 1852, being the second and last child of the family to leave the old homestead. He settled in Blue Bell, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and for four seasons was employed on an extensive farm; later he removed to the western part of the state, settling near the Alleghany mountains, where he assisted in the construction of railroads for upwards of forty years. During this period he was engaged on the work of nearly all of the railroads running through this section of the state, serving in various capacities, and, being a man of quick and accurate judgment, his services were of especial value to his employers. After retiring from railroading and contracting, Mr. Quigley located in Tredyffrin township, borough of Wayne, and purchased twenty-nine acres of barren and impoverished land, and after a few years of hard work and careful cultivation the soil became rich and productive. He derives a goodly income from the sale of vegetables and grain, for which there is always a constant demand and which finds a ready sale in the near-by markets. He has been a lifelong Democrat, giving an earnest and hearty support to the principles of the party.

Mr. Quigley was united in marriage to Eliza J. Bloomer, a daughter of Edward and Caroline Bloomer, of county Tyrone, Ireland, who came to this country with his family at an early date, and was one of the pioneer settlers of Pennsylvania. Mr. Bloomer was a butcher and farmer by occupation. Fifteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Quigley, ten of whom are living at the present time (1903), and of these six are married and reside in comfortable homes in Chester and Delaware counties, Pennsylvania. The members of the family are: Edward T., Charles B., George F., Mary E., Patrick H., John A., James J., Joseph, Richard A., Caroline T., Harriet, Anna R., Rose E., Charles and John Quigley. The family are attendants of the Wayne Catholic church, to which they contribute liberally both of their time and money.

MILTON S. HEYBURN, a retired agriculturist of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of a family who were among the early settlers of Delaware county, living principally in Birmingham and Aston townships. His grandfather, George Heyburn, was born and reared in the state of Delaware, where he became the owner of a tract of land and pursued farming. He latterly purchased considerable lands in Birmingham township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and here spent the remaining years of his life, and died at the age of more than three-score years. He was a man possessed of much force of character, and was respected and esteemed by all who knew him. He was an exemplary member of the Society of Friends. He married Elizabeth Burgess, and to them were born children as follows: 1. Sarah, who married Mr. Baker; 2. Elizabeth, who married Robert Bullock; 3. Ann, who married Thomas Bullock; 4. John, who was the father of Milton S. Heyburn; 5. George, who married Rachel Brinton, and had children: Edith, who married Wesley Mattson; Letitia, who married Alexander Slack; John B., who married Sarah Gilpin, and had children; Gideon, who died in early life; Weldon Brinton, who became the United States senator from Idaho; Georgeanna, who married Wesley Batting; Elwood E., who married Miranda Carver; Mary, who married Harry Marshall; William, who married and removed to Kentucky; 6. Susan, who married Eli Seal; 7. Mary, who married James Twaddell.

John Heyburn, father of Milton S. Heyburn, was born in the township of Birmingham, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1797, received a good common school education, and after attaining young manhood purchased his father's farm and made agriculture the principal business of his life. Politically he was formerly a Whig, but after the formation of the Republican party joined its ranks. He served usefully in a number of local offices. In his religion he favored the doctrine of the Society of Friends. Mr. Heyburn was united in marriage to Letitia Brinton, of Chester county, also a member of the Society of Friends. She was a daughter of Edward Brinton, a prosperous farmer of Birmingham township, Chester county; their children were: Elizabeth, wife of William T. Talley; they have four children; Sarah, wife of Isiah Miller; they have one child; George, died in childhood; Brinton, married Ruth A. Miller, and four children have been born to them; Mary, died young; Edward, unmarried; Caleb R. (now deceased) married Elizabeth Hannum, and five children were born to them, three of whom are now deceased; Anna Louisa, unmarried; Susan P., wife of Atwood Pyle; they have five children; and Milton S. Heyburn. The mother of these children died in 1877, aged seventy-six years.

Milton S. Heyburn, youngest child of John and Letitia (Brinton) Heyburn, was born in Birmingham township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, 12 mo., 24, 1835. He was reared on the paternal farm and educated in the public schools of his native county. He inherited a love for agricultural pursuits, which was the vocation of his ancestors, and devoted his entire life to the cultivation of his farm, consisting of one hundred and twenty-five acres of valuable land and also has a large selection of milch cows and other live stock. Of late years he has practically retired from the active conduct of his business, which has been entrusted to the care and management of his son, Isiah M. Heyburn, who is fully capable of assuming the responsibility. Mr. Heyburn has always affiliated with the Republican party, and he has been chosen to serve in several local offices, the duties of which he performed in a highly creditable and efficient manner.

October 25, 1865, Mr. Heyburn married Eliza Hannum, a daughter of Edwin and Mariah (Miller) Hannum, her father being a successful agriculturist of Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: 1. Harry H., born August 22, 1866; he married Margaret Darlington, and their children are Alfred Darlington, J. Edward and Weldon B., Jr. 2. John E., born June 2, 1869; he married Mary R. Van Leer, and their children were Louisa, deceased; Paul Grant, Milton S. Jr., Jennie, Maud, and John Van Leer. 3. Isiah M., born August 25, 1876; he married Margaret R. Bointon, and their children are Marion E., Sarah E. and Helen B. Heyburn.

WILLIAM E. VOORHEES, a well known citizen of Kennett Square, Chester county, traces his descent from Steven Coert Van Voorhees, who emigrated from Holland in April, 1660, and settled at Flatlands, Long Island. He was then somewhat past middle life, having been born in 1600, and was the father of ten children. One of his sons, Coert Stevense, came with his father to this country, when about twenty-three years old, having been born in 1637. He lived in Flatlands, married Marretje Garitse Van Couenhoven, and had a family of eight children. Of these, Garret Coerte, also of Flatlands, married first, Mensie Janse, and second, Willempie Pieters, whom he wedded April 26, 1685, and was the father, by these two marriages, of eight children in all. He died in 1703. Of his sons, Hendrick Gerritse, born in Flatlands, removed to Freehold, Monmouth county, New Jersey. He married, May 3, 1717, Jannetje Andress; second, Jannetje Van Arsdalen; and third, Sara Schenck. In all, he was the father of twelve children. One of his sons, Roelof, baptized September 19, 1742, married, March 31, 1768, at Freehold, New Jersey, Rebecca Pease, and their son, Elias, married Martha Joice.

Elias Franklin Voorhees, son of Elias and Martha (Joice) Voorhees, was born February

3, 1811, and about 1825 went to Philadelphia. He married Elizabeth Swallow, born September 5, 1813, and they were the parents of the following children: Jacob S., mentioned hereinafter, Martha, Mary, Rebecca and Elwood.

Jacob S. Voorhees, son of Elias Franklin and Elizabeth (Swallow) Voorhees, was born November 6, 1832, and married Sarah E., daughter of William and Elizabeth (Shepard) Jones. Their children were: Joseph Franklin, born July 6, 1859; Mary Martha, born August 11, 1861; Elizabeth, born November 29, 1865; Laura, born September 8, 1868, now deceased; William E., mentioned at length hereinafter; Jane, born March 16, 1874; John, born May 22, 1876; Bertha, born July 14, 1878; and Walter J., born March 5, 1880.

William E. Voorhees, son of Jacob S. and Sarah E. (Jones) Voorhees, was born January 6, 1870, at Montgomeryville, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the common schools of Shannonsville (now Audubon) Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and at Palm's Business College, Philadelphia. In 1887 he came to Kennett Square, where he has since resided. He is connected with the American Road Machine Company, is the editor of the "Kennett Advance" and is secretary of the borough council.

Mr. Voorhees married, March 6, 1895, Anna R., daughter of Joseph and Emma McMullin. The former has held various local offices, among them those of justice of the peace and burgess, having filled the latter position for several years. Mrs. Voorhees was born June 8, 1867, in Kennett Square, and spent her early life in that borough, receiving her education in the local schools and at Martin's Academy. Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees have one child: Sarah Emma, born December 15, 1898. Mr. Voorhees is regarded as one of the enterprising business men of Kennett Square. He is one of those who represent the ninth generation of descendants of the founder of the Voorhees family in America.

JOSEPH R. KENWORTHY. This name is of English origin, and the founder of the family which bears it was an emigrant to Chester county many years ago. Shortly after his arrival from England he located in what is now known as Rock Run, near Coatesville, and started a woolen mill, which in time proved to be a valuable local industry. Before leaving his native land John Kenworthy had married Marian Rowble, and their five children, mostly born in this country, are all living. Hannah, the eldest, married Albert Boyd, and has three children; Jennie is the wife of Charles Unstead, chief of police of the borough of Coatesville; Mamie, the third child, is single; William married Lillian Galloway, and has two children.

Joseph R. Kenworthy, youngest of the family above described, was born in 1860, reared on his father's homestead and educated in the schools of Coatesville. About 1886 he began farming on the place in West Fallowfield township where he resides, and he has met with a fair measure of success in his various ventures. His farm, which is of good quality as to soil and well improved, consists of one hundred and six acres, and Mr. Kenworthy, in addition to his general operations, conducts an up-to-date and profitable dairy. In 1886 Mr. Kenworthy was united in marriage with Emma, daughter of John Gilfilian, a respected citizen of Chester county, and has four children, Howard, Mabel, Lucy and Harry, all of whom are attending the public schools. Though Mr. Kenworthy votes the Republican ticket and has always been enthusiastic in support of his party, he has not been an office seeker or office holder. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church at Fagg's Manor and do their full share in helping forward the religious work. It is not too much to say in addition that Joseph R. Kenworthy enjoys and deserves general esteem as a good neighbor and good citizen. He belongs to the younger generation of Chester county farmers, and the manner in which he has managed his estate indicates sound judgment in matters agricultural. His farm is well tilled and his stock kept in good condition, while the outbuildings and fencing, those sure indicators of good or bad farming, are of such a character as to lead to the conclusion that Mr. Kenworthy not only understands his business but attends to it in systematic manner.

WILLIAM EZRA HOOPES, a prominent and progressive agriculturist of Edgemont township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a representative of one of the oldest families of this commonwealth, is the son of Edwin and Anna (Baker) Hoopes, his birth occurring in Chester county, November 29, 1859.

His early education was obtained in the public schools of Westtown, and during his leisure hours he assisted his father with the management of the home farm, which gave him a thorough knowledge of the vocation which he has followed for the greater part of his active business career. In 1876 he went to Concord and for six months was a student in the boarding school which at that time was under the careful supervision of Joseph Shortledge, and after the expiration of this short period of time he returned home and assisted his father with the work on the paternal estate, continuing this occupation until 1881, he being then twenty-two years of age. Mr. Hoopes then went west and settled in Richmond, Indiana, where he engaged in farming on a somewhat larger scale than he had been accustomed to. He was employed in different localities, and therefore gained a favorable opportunity of acquiring a vast amount of information which has been of considerable use to him in later years. He remained in that section of the country for six years, and upon his return to his native state again became associated with his father in farming interests, continuing this connection for about nine months. He then removed to the farm which he now operates and which is owned by his father and in the management of which he has met with remarkable success. He is practical and progressive in his ideas, and his broad acres attest what can be accomplished by intelligent culture and improved methods. The farm is one of the historic places of the township, and has only been in the possession of four owners; it passed from Willis Baker to George Baker, from him to Isaac Thatcher, and was purchased from him by Edwin Hoopes, father of William E. Hoopes. Among the farm buildings is a commodious residence that was built by Nicholas Willis in 1784, and the bricks that were used in its construction were made and burnt on the premises. In state politics Mr. Hoopes has always voted the Republican ticket, but has steadily refused to accept any local office.

In 1884 Mr. Hoopes was united in marriage to Mary Hinshaw, of Randolph county, Indiana. Their children are: Harry, deceased; Caroline G., born in 1886; Edwin A., born January 12, 1888; Anna M., born in 1890; Joshua G., born in 1892; Lizzie, deceased; and Ellsworth, born in 1900. The ancestral history of the Hoopes family will be found in another sketch in this work.

◆◆◆◆◆

WILMAR GRIFFITH, an honored citizen and lifelong resident of Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a man of enterprise and excellent business ability, exerts an influence for good in the community, and throughout the years of his useful life has enjoyed the confidence and esteem of all with whom he is brought in contact either in public or private life. He was born February 12, 1846, a son of Charles N. and Martha E. (Phillips) Griffith.

Charles N. Griffith (father) was born in West Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1820. During his youth he was debarred from receiving the educational advantages he desired, but by a careful and systematic course of reading and study at home he soon familiarized himself with the ordinary English branches, and later, by experience and observation, became an intelligent and well informed man, especially on subjects found in history and the Bible. He learned surveying and conveyancing, but his career was principally devoted to farming interests, which he conducted on a forty-two acre farm in Uwchlan township, to which he afterward added a farm of fifty-four acres; he was also the owner of an extensive tract of timber land. He was formerly an adherent of the Whig party, but prior to the Civil war he changed his allegiance to the Republican party. In 1860 he was elected to the position of justice of the peace in Uwchlan township, and served in that capacity for twenty-eight consecutive years; was school director for a long period of time; served as county auditor for one term; in 1866 was appointed revenue collector for his district and was frequently a delegate to the county conventions of his party, and was called upon to serve as a juror in the supreme court.

Charles N. Griffith was united in marriage to Martha E. Phillips, and the issue of this union was the following named children—1. Cecelia, who became the wife of Oliver Channell, a cigar dealer in West Chester; 2. Wilmar, mentioned hereinafter; 3. Emerson, a graduate from the military academy at West Point, New York, in 1868, served twenty years in the regular army as lieutenant and captain, resigning in 1888, and he and his wife Bessie (Irwin) Griffith now reside at West Chester, Pennsylvania; 4. Daniel, who married Emma Trace, and they reside at Pottstown, Pennsylvania; 5. Joanna, who became the wife of John Hanson, an employe of the Pottstown Iron Company; 6. Mary, who was formerly a teacher in the public schools of Philadelphia. The family held membership in the Windsor Baptist church, Mr. Griffith serving as deacon and secretary for many years. He died in September, 1887, in the sixty-eighth year of his age.

Wilmar Griffith attended the public schools of Uwchlan township, and the education he derived therein thoroughly qualified him for a career of usefulness and activity. In early life he learned the trade of carpenter, and for about six years pursued that occupation, achieving a large degree of success. He then engaged in farming, and since 1888 has conducted his extensive operations on the home farm. He is progressive and practical in his ideas, has cultivated his land to a high state of perfection, and therefore his broad acres yield a plentiful harvest. Since attaining his majority Mr. Griffith has cast his vote with the Republican party. In 1889 he was appointed by the court to serve as assessor and constable of his township, and his services have frequently been called into requisition as a member of the election board of his district.

On February 10, 1868, Mr. Griffith married Rebecca Mitchener, a native of South Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are Martha, Lewis and Charles Griffith. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Pughtown, in which Mr. Griffith has served in the capacity of president and secretary of its board of trustees for a number of years.

JOHN JACOB PFITZENMEYER is a worthy representative of that class of men known as independent farmers, who are recognized throughout the length and breadth of the country as examples of what a man can accomplish who relies upon his own energy, perseverance and persistent labor for success. He was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 5, 1837, a son of John J. Pfitzenmeyer, Sr., a native of Germany, who came to this country and settled in Chester county about the year 1827. His first employment in the land of his adoption was that of teamster, and subsequently he purchased a farm in West Caln township, devoting the remainder of his life to the cultivation and improvement of the same.

The educational advantages enjoyed by John J. Pfitzenmeyer, Jr., were obtained in the public schools of Wallace township, and the nine years following the completion of his studies he was employed as a farm laborer by the month. At the expiration of this period of time he began farming on his own account, and in 1884, by the exercise of industry and economy, had accumulated sufficient money to purchase his present farm of one hundred and fifty-five acres, thirty-five of which is timber land, which was formerly known as the Reed property. He is an intelligent and progressive farmer, who has witnessed during his long and active career a wonderful progress in agriculture and a vast material growth in the township. For one term he filled the office of supervisor of West Brandywine, having been elected on the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Pfitzenmeyer married Mary Etta Hayes, a daughter of Margis Hayes, a respected citizen of West Brandywine township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: William H., who is engaged in farming pursuits; Thomas H., who is also a farmer; and Selena, wife of Joseph Lowery, who is employed in the capacity of clerk.

HARRY GILBERT HATFIELD is extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits in Caln township, Chester county. Success in any calling is an indication of close application, industry and faithfulness, qualities which are numbered among the leading characteristics of our subject, and the greatest reward of the successful man is his consciousness of having acted well his part.

This Mr. Hatfield has ever done, and he to-day stands among the highly respected citizens of his community.

He is a member of an old and prominent family long identified with the interests of Chester county, his great-great-grandfather, Nathan Hatfield, having located here in a very early day, and Hatfield Station was named in his honor. He married Margaret _____, and they had the following children: Andrew, John, Samuel, Adam and Anna. The grandparents of our subject were Abraham and Sarah (Patterson) Hatfield, and in their family were the following children: Florence, Samuel, Emma, Anna P. and J. Gilbert. The last named became the father of our subject and he married Emma Ralston, the daughter of James and Mary Ralston. Five children were born unto this marriage, namely: Blanche R., who died when young and lies buried at the Fairville cemetery; Harry G., the subject of this review; Anna P., who is an artist of note, and is at home with her parents; Clara G., also at home; and Chauncey, who holds an important position at the Huston Iron works, of Coatesville.

Harry Gilbert Hatfield, of this review, is a native son of Caln township, Chester county, where his entire life has been passed, and where he is now numbered among the leading agriculturists. He received his early education in the common schools of his neighborhood, which was later supplemented by a course in the Coatesville school. When the time came for him to inaugurate independent action he chose the life of an agriculturist, and his homestead farm adjoins that of his father. For his wife Mr. Hatfield chose Miss Edna McClure, a daughter of Benjamin McClure, and three children were born to brighten and bless their home, but Benjamin M., the youngest son, has passed away. The two surviving children are J. Gilbert and Robert R. In political matters the Hatfields have been identified with the Republican party since its organization, and Mr. Hatfield, of this review, gives an earnest support to its principles.

MARGARET AYERS. The name of this lady has undergone several changes by marriage and was originally Margaret Moore. Her residence in Brandywine township is something of a landmark and historic celebrity, owing to its association with "the Father of His Country." It seems that on occasions of his passage to and fro through eastern Pennsylvania, Washington made his stopping place in Chester county, at one of the old-fashioned inns then found at intervals along the routes of travel. Owing to this fact it was in later times called the Little Washington Inn, and as everything connected with the first president is sacred in the eyes of Americans, a house which was honored by his personage is regarded with a feeling of reverence. It is in this historic building that Mrs. Ayers makes her home, and here she has long enjoyed the companionship of many friends.

A. J. Pfitzenmeyer

Thomas Moore, her father, was a carpenter who for many years had charge of work in his line in the coal mines at Pottsville, Pennsylvania. Margaret, his only daughter, was born during the residence at Pottsville, and when she grew up was married to Thomas Costigan, who emigrated to this country from county Tipperary, Ireland. He was a man of marked business ability, and during the later years of his life was connected in a prominent way with various large undertakings. He was a contractor, and did work in this line for every important railroad in the state. At certain periods of his career he was associated with such men as A. K. McClure and Russell Thayer, which indicates the high standing of Mr. Costigan in his special calling. He purchased the Little Washington Inn above described, and made his home there until the time of his death.

Mrs. Ayers had seven children by her first husband, but unfortunately lost all of them by death. For her second husband she married Joseph Ayers, a miller of Coatesville, Pennsylvania, and all of the five children by this union are also deceased.

Downingtown, where Mrs. Ayers makes her home, is pleasantly situated in Chester valley and enjoys excellent railroad facilities for a place of its size. It has a bank, various churches, good schools, some manufactories and mills, gas works and other luxuries of civilization. It is a pleasant place to live, and none of its inhabitants are more esteemed in the circle of their acquaintance than Margaret Ayers. Her religious faith is Roman Catholic, and she is a member of the church of that denomination at Downingtown.

WILLIAM W. DAVIS is a representative of a class of young, energetic and enterprising men who are prominent factors in the development and prosperity of a community, and whose abilities are directed to the accomplishment of valuable results. Although not a native of Chester county, his birth having occurred on the old homestead in the state of Delaware, in 1872, he is recognized and given a place among the prominent and public-spirited citizens of that locality.

Mr. Davis is a grandson of Eli Davis, who was born on the old homestead, at what is known as Thomson's Station, Delaware. Eli Davis acquired a practical education at the private schools in his neighborhood, and subsequently followed the occupations of mechanic and farmer, in each of which he was eminently successful. He married, and among the children born to him was a son, William T. Davis, who became the father of William W. Davis.

William T. Davis was born on the ancestral estate in Delaware, in 1838, received a common school education, and then devoted his attention to the work upon the farm, where he remained until 1879. In that year he took up his residence in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and purchased what was known as the old "Whitson Farm" which he cultivated and improved for many years. Recently he determined to lay aside the arduous cares of a business life, and accordingly he removed to West Grove, Chester county, where he is spending his declining years in ease and comfort. He was joined in marriage to Mary Collins, a daughter of Edward Collins, a prosperous farmer of Delaware. Their children are: Lola, wife of Taylor Haines, and one child is the issue of this marriage; Elizabeth, unmarried; Eva, wife of Walter Squier, and William W. Davis.

William W. Davis, son of William T. and Mary Davis, obtained his preliminary education at the public schools of New London, Chester county, and this was supplemented by attendance at Palm's Business College in Philadelphia. His first business experience was gained by taking charge of the warehouse at Kelson, Pennsylvania, where he remained for several years, after which he purchased his present home in London Grove township, Chester county, which consists of one hundred and fourteen acres of well tilled ground, with a dairy of fifteen head of select cows attached. His method of operations is progressive and modern, and the splendid results obtained from his labor should serve as an incentive to further effort on his part. He is a Republican in politics, and has been chosen by his fellow citizens to serve in several minor offices.

Mr. Davis was united in marriage, in 1902, to Daisy Moore, a daughter of George and Hannah Moore, residents of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Davis and his wife attend the services of the Methodist Episcopal church of London Grove.

WILMER LARKIN STEELE, a representative citizen of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, traces his ancestry back to the early part of the eighteenth century, when Ninian Steele and his wife and children emigrated from the north of Ireland and settled in New London township, Chester county. His death occurred in December, 1745, and he was survived by a widow and the following named children: Robert, Martha, Samuel, Susannah, Ninian and William Steele.

Samuel Steele, son of Ninian and Mary Steele, was a resident of Thunder Hill in New London township, and at his death, which occurred in May, 1760, he was survived by a family of eleven children. William Steele, son of Samuel Steele, was born in 1731, and settled on a farm two miles east of the village of New London, this property remaining in the family for three generations. On January 21, 1756, he married Elizabeth Magee, who bore him one son. William Steele died September 5, 1797, and his wife passed away July 5, 1779. John Steele, son of William and Elizabeth Steele, was born in 1760, married Ann Montgomery, April 11, 1781, and died April 29, 1841. William Steele, son of John and Ann Steele, was born in 1783, married, June 18, 1809, Mary Kimble, who bore him nine children; his death occurred July 12, 1869. John K. Steele, eldest son of William and Mary Steele, was a carpenter by trade, and pursued this occupation in addition to extensive farming operations, which he conducted on two farms he owned in New London township, Chester county. He was one of the influential and public-spirited citizens of the community, and an active member of the New London Presbyterian church. He was united in marriage, March 2, 1837, to Ann Wilkinson; and five children were the issue of this union.

Nathaniel Steele (father), son of John K. and Ann Steele, was born on the old homestead in New London township, Chester county, March 21, 1816. His entire business career has been devoted to the cultivation and tilling of the soil, this occupation proving a most lucrative means of livelihood. Being an intelligent and public-spirited citizen, he has been called upon to serve in various township offices, and at the present time (1903) is filling the position of constable, being elected on the Republican ticket. Mr. Steele married Sarah Farra, a member of the Presbyterian church of New London, and they are the parents of the following named children: Ida, wife of Harry Miller, of Kennett Square; Wilmer Larkin, mentioned hereinafter; Maurice, Carrie and Ethel, the three latter named residing at home with their parents.

Wilmer L. Steele was born in what is now Franklin (then New London) township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 20, 1878. He was reared in the two aforementioned townships, educated in the public schools and followed farming until the fall of 1899, when he engaged in the milling business. After serving as an assistant for one year, he assumed complete charge of the Joel Conard Mill, which he successfully operated for two years, and in the spring of 1904 has arranged to return to the same, with the additional labor of managing the one hundred-acre farm which is connected with the mill. During the summer of 1903 he devoted his attention exclusively to general farming. His political views harmonize with those advocated by the Republican party.

On March 5, 1903, occurred the marriage of Wilmer L. Steele and Mildren Cloud, a daughter of Joseph and Evaline (Webster) Cloud, of Franklin township, the former named being a son of Edwin and Elizabeth (Evans) Cloud, and the latter a daughter of Chalkley Webster.

EZRA LUND. The flourishing village of Landenburg, in London Britain township, derives its principal importance from the extensive woolen mills which for a third of a century have been associated with the names of the Lunds, father and son.

James Lund, the father, came of a family of spinners and weavers in the home of that industry in England. He was a son of Joseph Lund, and was born in the village of Bradford, Yorkshire, England, December 21, 1836. He received his education in a parish night school, and at an early age began his apprenticeship in the woolen business. Having become an expert workman, he worked as a journeyman in various cities in England, Belgium and Germany. In 1868 he came to the United States, landing in New York city in October, and proceeding thence to Philadelphia, where he entered the employ of Scheppers Brothers, as expert weaver and foreman. For ten years he was related to that firm in that capacity, and in 1878 he relinquished his position and took up his residence in Landenburg, taking employment in the woolen mills of Landenburg & Co. The next year (1879) he purchased the mills from the assignees of the firm, and conducted the business under his own name until 1892, when the style of the firm became T. & A. Lund, and it so remained until the death of Mr. Lund in June, 1894. Under his management the Lund Woolen Mills became the most important manufacturing establishment in its region. Its principal product was woolen yarns, which found a ready market throughout the entire United States, the name of their maker being recognized as ample assurance of their superiority.

An excellent mechanic, Mr. Lund was also a capable business man, and he bore an unsullied character. He was an honored member of the Society of Sons of St. George, and he was a Republican in politics. He married Ann Jagger, who was also a native of Yorkshire, England, and of the same village with himself. Their first three children were born near that place, and were: 1. Henry, in 1857; 2. Mary, deceased; 3. Fred, born in 1860, and who now resides in Landenburg, Pennsylvania. Ezra, their fourth child, is to be further referred to. Laura, their fifth child, was born January 16, 1866, in Belgium, while the father was pursuing his occupation in that country. She married William W. Sullivan, and they reside in Landenburg, Pennsylvania. Thomas, the sixth child, was born in Bradford, England, in 1868; he married Laura Wayne, and they reside in Landenburg. The mother of this family, who is yet living, at the place last named, came to the United States with her children in 1871, three years after her husband, who would not send for them until he could establish them in a comfortable home.

Ezra, fourth child and third son of James and Ann (Jagger) Lund, was born November 16, 1862, in Queensbury, Yorkshire, England. He began his education in the parish schools in his native land, and was nine years old when he came with his mother to rejoin his father in America. For three years thereafter he continued his studies in the public schools of Philadelphia, and when twelve years old began learning the trade of a spinner under his father. During three and one-half years of the time that father and son were associated in the woolen business in Landenburg, young Lund conducted the store connected with the factory, and in November, 1899, after the death of his parent, he became the owner of the factory, which he has conducted to the present time. A master of his business in a mechanical way, he fully maintained the high prestige the establishment had enjoyed under the senior Lund, and, ambitious of leading wherever advancement were possible, he has at various times introduced innovations which have served to give his mills rank among the very first in manufacturing facilities and in perfection of product. He is a prime factor in promoting every public interest, and occupies a place of influence and great usefulness in the community. He was four years postmaster at Landenburg, and his political associations have always been with the Republican party.

Mr. Lund was married, August 7, 1884, to Miss Lizzie J. Fisher, a native of Landenburg, born May 14, 1863, a daughter of Mr. Thomas Fisher. Their children, all born in Landenburg, are: 1. Gertrude A., born September 15, 1885, who was educated in the public schools of her native village and at the Woman's College, Frederick, Maryland; 2. Clara E., born January 25, 1888, who was educated in the public schools; 3. Ezra Thomas, born September, 1892; 4. Grace E., born June 11, 1896.

ANDREW BURK DONNON. Agricultural interests claim the time and attention of Andrew B. Donnon, who resides in the township of Easttown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred February 22, 1843, in Chester Valley, Pennsylvania. The pioneer ancestor of the American branch of the family was Andrew Donnon, grandfather of Andrew B. Donnon, a native of Wales, who came to this country in 1790, settled on a farm at Peach Bottom, on the Susquehanna river, and up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1835, was engaged as foreman at the slate quarries.

Andrew Donnon, Jr., father of Andrew B. Donnon, was born in 1798, at Peach Bottom, Pennsylvania. His boyhood was spent in acquiring a common school education, after which he was employed in the slate quarries, and upon the death of his father succeeded him to the position of foreman. He also engaged in slate roofing, receiving the contract for the Turk's Head Hotel in West Chester, and a large barn on the George Miller farm near White Horse, these being the two first slate roofs put on buildings in Chester county. Mr. Donnon was also a noted raftsmen, following this occupation at the breaking up of each succeeding winter. He was united in marriage to Eliza Burk, and three children were born to them, namely: Elizabeth, Mary Ann and Andrew Burk Donnon. Mrs. Donnon was the daughter of Huey and Elizabeth (Layman) Burk, the former named having been born in Montgomery county; later he opened the old Burks Hotel, at Peach Bottom, and this hostelry was in the possession of the family for forty-four years. His wife, Elizabeth (Layman) Burk, was a daughter of Thomas Layman, who came from Switzerland, in 1811, and settled at Peach Bottom, Pennsylvania.

Andrew B. Donnon, only son of Andrew and Eliza Donnon, was reared on the old homestead and educated at the common schools of the neighborhood. Upon attaining young manhood he settled on a farm in Chester Valley, his birthplace, which he cultivated for a number of years; later he removed to the old Sloan farm, located in Montgomery county, and in 1873 he took up his residence on the Bishop farm, in Easttown township, Chester county, which his wife inherited from her father's estate. The greater part of this property is under a high state of cultivation, and yields to the owner a goodly income in return for the labor and care bestowed upon it.

October 1, 1867, Mr. Donnon married Jennie Smedley Porteus, and the following named children were born to them: Anna Belle, born August 30, 1868; Jennie Porteus, born October 14, 1869; James Henry, born October 15, 1870; Franklin Andrew, born December 9, 1871; Charles Ogden, born September 29, 1873; Bessie, born October 29, 1874, died July 6, 1877; Lizzie, born August 16, 1875; George Miller, born December 25, 1877; Mary Etta, born January 1, 1878; Andrew H., born November 30, 1879;

Grace, born April 7, 1881; Mable, born July 7, 1882, died in infancy; Edgar, born June 30, 1885, died in infancy; Edith P., born July 6, 1886, also died in infancy. The mother of these children passed away November 11, 1889.

ELMER ELLSWORTH SCHRACK, a member of a well known firm which conducts a large creamery business under the title of the West Caln Creamery, and one of the substantial young business men of West Caln township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born August 19, 1862, and is a native of the township in which he resides. The earliest ancestors of the American branch of the Schrack family of whom there is any authentic information were Daniel and Elizabeth (Kepler) Schrack, who settled in West Caln township, Chester county, where the former named devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits. They were the parents of the following named children: Rachel, William, John, Samuel, Eliza, Benjamin and Henry B. Schrack.

John Schrack, third child of Daniel and Elizabeth (Kepler) Schrack, was born May 2, 1798. He took an active interest in township affairs, and in every respect proved himself to be a worthy citizen of the community. He married Jane White, daughter of Richard White, of West Caln township, and five children were the issue of this marriage: Elizabeth, who died at the age of five years; Rachel S., died unmarried; John Henry, mentioned hereinafter; Elizabeth K., also died unmarried; and Richard White, who married for his first wife, Anna M. Grubb, who bore him the following named children: John K., Debbie Jane and Anna; his second wife, Margaret (McPherson) Schrack, who is now residing in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, bore him one child, Elma McPherson Schrack.

John Henry Schrack, the eldest son of John and Jane (White) Schrack, was born March 21, 1833, on the homestead in West Caln township, near the present location of the creamery. During the greater part of his life he has followed the occupation of farmer, but in addition to this he is identified with his sons, Elmer E. and J. Walter in the West Caln Creamery, in the operation and management of which he takes an active interest. He is now a resident of Wagontown, and has been honored by election to the following named offices: school director, which he filled for twenty-one years; constable; auditor, being the incumbent for ten years; assessor and assistant assessor. On October 29, 1857, Mr. Schrack married Sarah Jane Mercer, born November 25, 1834, daughter of Caleb and Mary Ann (Marsh) Mercer, and they are the parents of five children; John Walter, born September 19, 1859, married, June 16, 1885, Charlesanna J. Stackhouse, who bore him two children, one of whom is living at the present time; Caleb Horace, born May 1, 1861; Elmer E., mentioned hereinafter; Jennie White, born September 17, 1864, died in 1866; Florence Evelyn, born August 30, 1876, now residing with her parents.

Elmer E. Schrack, third son of John Henry and Sarah Jane (Mercer) Schrack, received a practical education in the schools of his native county. During the early part of his business career he engaged in farming, but on June 30, 1884, in partnership with his father and brother, John Henry and J. Walter Schrack, the present business was established, which is now one of the leading creameries in that section of the state. Although the business is conducted under the style of the West Caln Creamery, the butter bears the imprint of John H. Schrack. In politics Elmer E. Schrack is a staunch Republican, and in his public as well as private life he has proven his integrity and ability. He is a member of the Brandywine Manor Presbyterian church, is a member of the board of trustees, and he stands high in the estimation of his fellow citizens. He has served his township most acceptably as township auditor for the past fifteen years, and in May, 1902, he became the incumbent of the office of justice of the peace. He is a young man with a very promising future before him, and the success which has attended his efforts so far is well merited.

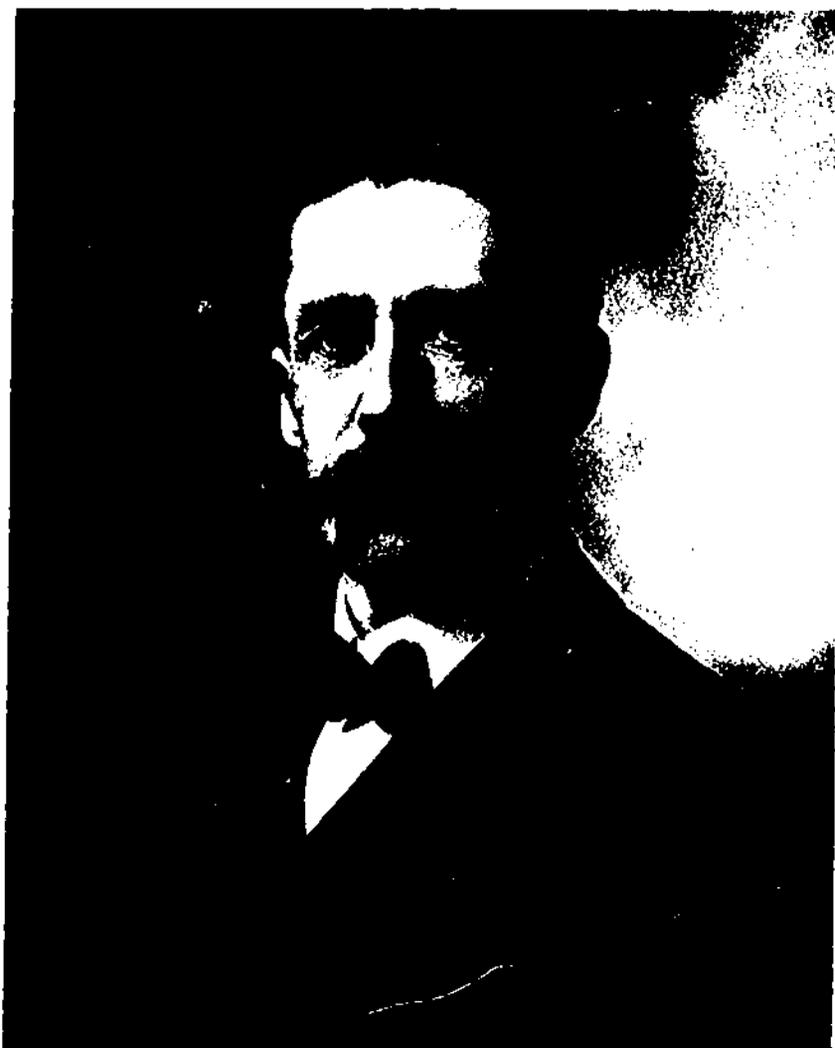

Mr. Schrack was married, April 26, 1893, to Florence Way, born April 28, 1867, a daughter of James and Sarah Jane Way, the former named being a son of Caleb and Rebecca Way, the original settlers of the Way family in this country, and Caleb is a descendant of John and Ann Way. The following named children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Schrack: James Henry, born July 4, 1894; Earl White, deceased; and Ernest Way, born November 16, 1900.

WILLIAM HASTINGS. Chester county is justly proud of its many worthy citizens, many of them men who have met with more than ordinary success in life, and in the list of leading men must be included one of the progressive residents of the little town of Atglen, William Hastings.

His father, John Hastings, was for many years a well known resident of Drumore township, in Lancaster county. After acquiring an elementary training in the public schools he had set himself to the tilling of the soil. But he was also a tanner by trade, and fortified with these two occupations he was able to rear a family and afford them many of the comforts that make life agreeable. He was a Democrat in politics, and at different times was made the recipient of various offices of trust in the township. His wife's maiden name was Rebecca Russell, and her parents were Francis and Margaret Russell, of Lancaster county. Seven children were born of this union—Mary E., died unmarried; George R., married Jane Dickey, who became the mother of one child; Howard F., the husband of Emma Cunningham, who has two children; Emma R., single; L. Ruther, married Annie Ewing, and they have six children; Margaret, died in youth.

J. Hechracke

Emery E. Schwack

William S. is the remaining child of the above parents, and, like his father, was born within the confines of Lancaster county. His parents were very desirous of having their children well educated, and after William had completed the usual course of fundamentals he was sent to the Millersville State Normal School, and then to Eastman's Business College at Poughkeepsie, New York. Being now well equipped for life, he first turned his attention to farming, which he continued until 1867, and then entered the coal and grain business at Christiana. He has followed this general line of trade for a long time, and is thoroughly versed in all its departments, but he has transferred the place of his business to Aiglen, Chester county, and is now the manager of a large warehouse there and does an extensive business.

Mr. Hastings married Miss Ella Harrar, a daughter of one of the leading merchants of Christiana, John D. Harrar. John D., the only son of this marriage, married Helen Phillips; and the other child is Ruperta.

Mr. Hastings served with the Pennsylvania Volunteers, Forty-seventh Regiment, Company H, being called into service at the time of the Gettysburg riot, and those at Minersville and Reading, and was mustered out at the last named point. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and is held in high regard in his borough.

FRANCIS F. HOFFMAN. The farmers of Chester county are among the most prosperous people of the country. Farms are, as a rule, not so large as those of the west, nor are men so prodigal of their soil, leaving many acres to run to waste or lie uncultivated, but care, method, thrift are everywhere in evidence, making the whole vicinity like one large garden, producing in abundance all the harvests of nature. One of the finest farms in the county is owned by Francis F. Hoffman, whose place is in Sadsbury township, and is in many ways a model, as its owner is one of the wide-awake and progressive residents of the same township.

His father was Francis, Sr., who was born and educated in the above mentioned township. He was in early life a cabinet maker by trade, later followed carpentering for a time, but finally gave up these occupations to engage in farming, in which he met with satisfying success throughout the rest of his life. In political belief he was Democratic, he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and belonged to that well known religious organization, the Octoraro Presbyterian church. He married Annie, the daughter of Joseph Filson, who was a farmer of West Caln township. Joseph F. the first child of this union, died unmarried; Sarah A. is also deceased; Ella M. is the wife of Wilson E. Toland; Thomas R. is the husband of Susan Armstrong, who is the mother of one child; Albert F. is deceased; Hannah M. married W. Sheneman and had one child; Mary married Thomas Hope and had two children.

The family list is complete with the name of Francis F., Jr., who was married twice. His first wife was Ada Stott, a resident of Stottsville, this county, a town that was named after some member of her family. The three children who graced this union were: Maude, now deceased; Edith M., and Helen, who is also dead. By his second wife, who was Fannie, the daughter of John Davis, of Sadsbury township, there were born: Francis, Jr., John D., William, Clara and Sarah A., all of whom reside at home.

Mr. Hoffman is an ardent Democrat, and has held the office of school director; he belongs to the Octoraro Presbyterian church. He devotes his farm principally to the raising of cattle.

JOHN DAVIS. Different members of the Davis family are prominent in the various walks of life and are well known in Chester county. The father of the present generation was Lewis Davis, who came of a good family of the county, and passed his life in West Caln township. After a fair amount of mental training he began farming, and continued this vocation as long as he was able. He was blessed with a large family, and was fortunate in bringing most of them to maturity. He chose as his wife Elizabeth Markley, whose father was a farmer of Nantmeal township, and the fourteen children of this union were as follows: Hannah, unmarried; Isaac, unmarried; Lewis, Jr., also single; William, single; Margaret, who married William Asle and had four children; Markley, married Miss Rettew; Reese, married Miss Hickman, who became the mother of four children; Brooke married Miss Simmons, and has three children; Joseph is single; Benjamin became the husband of Miss Quay, who is the mother of two children; Elizabeth, who married Mr. McPherson, has four children; Mary, who married Elias Bair, has four children; Peter died in youth.

John, the particular member of the household in whom we are at present interested, completes this family, and he was born and reared in West Cahn township. He early showed skill in the use of tools, and accordingly took up the trade of carpenter, but later went into a store as clerk. But the independent life of the farmer appealed to him more than all these, and he became one of the progressive agriculturists of Sadsbury township. He has followed this occupation ever since, and is now owner of a fine place with up-to-date improvements, and all methods and means calculated to make tilling of the soil profitable. There are one hundred acres in the farm, and he has a dairy of twenty cows, which affords him a steady and certain revenue, and in this way the products of the land are consumed on the place, thus retaining the richness of the soil.

Mr. Davis married Clara E., a daughter of Cheston Connell, a farmer of Honeybrook township, this county: Fannie, the first born of the marriage, married F. Hoffman; Martha died in youth; Emma is the wife of William Jones; Gertrude is the wife of Evan Bair; William married Margaret Knaur; Clara is unmarried; and Herbert is deceased.

Although Mr. Davis holds firmly to the principles of the Republican party, he is not an office seeker, and has refused several nominations. He and his family belong to the Presbyterian church.

JOHN H. TOLAND. The little town of Sadsburyville, in Chester county contains two generations of the Toland family, father and son, who are both well known in the county, and have by their industry and skill become excellent representatives of their trade and occupation.

Eli Toland, the father, claims Lancaster county for his birthplace, and he also grew up there and was educated. He early began to learn the trade of carriage making, and became expert in this calling, which he followed for many years. He married Phoebe Wiedier, who lived in West Brandywine township, Chester county. She is now deceased, but by her marriage she became the mother of the following children: Wilson E., who married Ella Hoffman; Emma, who married S. Taggart; Mary L., deceased; Frank L., the husband of Laura Krause; Clara, deceased, and John H.

John H. Toland has been a prominent citizen of the county for many years. He learned the carriage making trade under the direction of his father, and also became a skillful painter. He later took up the business of undertaker, and now has a fine establishment in that line in Sadsburyville. He married Miss Kate Butler, whose mother, Ann C. Butler, is a retired widow living in Unionville, this county. Mr. Toland has found the Democratic party conforming to his ideas of politics in most things. He finds much wholesome recreation in the Masonic and Odd Fellows orders, and in religion is a member of the Presbyterian church.

DANIEL M. FIELD, deceased, for many years a highly respected resident of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in the township of Newtown, Pennsylvania, in 1844, the son of Joseph and Eliza (Robbins) Field.

Daniel M. Field received the educational advantages afforded by the public schools of Wilmington, and at the early age of twelve years began his business career in the capacity of assistant to his father in a blacksmith shop. Later he learned the trade of carriage maker and wheelwright, which he successfully followed for a number of years, after which he purchased a farm of ninety-three acres in Concord township, and devoted his attention to the production of a general line of garden produce. In 1902 they met with a severe loss occasioned by an incendiary fire, which destroyed a fine barn and all their stock, tools and crops which were stored in it. They immediately rebuilt, and are now the possessors of a large and modern barn, which, in addition to their well tilled fields, make their property one of the best and most productive in that section of the state.

Mr. Field married Lavinia Slaughter, a daughter of William and Melinda Slaughter, the former named being one of the prosperous farmers of Delaware county, a prominent member of the Knights Templar, and, at one time, served his county in the capacity of county commissioner. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Field, namely: Margaret (Maggie), deceased; Annie, deceased; William S., unmarried; James, deceased, was the husband of Emma Clark; Mary M., unmarried, and Cornell Field, unmarried. All the members of the family are earnest and active members of the Village Green Baptist church, taking a deep interest in all the societies connected with it, and they are also prominently identified with all the social events of the town. Mr. Field's death occurred in February, 1896.

WILLIAM M. HANNUM. After a useful and honorable business career Mr. Hannum is now living a retired life in Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, enjoying the well earned measure of rest which should always follow years of labor. He is a native of that township, his birth occurring there in the year 1834, the son of Edward and Maria Hannum.

Edward Hannum was born in Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1803, and his education was acquired in the common school of the neighborhood. He then took up farming as a vocation, and by following the most approved and progressive methods was enabled to derive a goodly income from his estate. He was united in marriage to Maria Miller, of Concord township, and their children were: Isabella, wife of Mr. Kurtz; Harry, who married Phœbe ———; Susan, wife of Thomas Pancoast; Martha, wife of William Beatty; Annie, unmarried; Eliza, wife of Milton Heyburn; Samuel, who married Annie E. Wilson; Edna, wife of Samuel Smith, and William M. Hannum.

William M. Hannum, youngest child of Edward and Maria Hannum, attended the public schools of Aston township, where he acquired an excellent education. He commenced his business career in the capacity of school teacher, but after following this vocation for two years he decided to devote his energies to agricultural pursuits. He pursued this occupation for a number of years, and by dint of industry, perseverance and good management succeeded in accumulating a sufficient competence to enable him to retire from the daily routine of labor. Mr. Hannum has always taken an active part in local affairs, being a prominent factor in every enterprise that had for its object the welfare and improvement of the community. Politically he supported the principles of the Republican party, and was the incumbent of the office of school director for a number of years.

Mr. Hannum married Harriet C. Thatcher, daughter of John W. Thatcher, an agriculturist of Aston township. Their children were: John, died in childhood; Lucy; William M., Jr., deceased; Harry, unmarried, an employee of the Charter Bank of Media, Pennsylvania; Elizabeth, unmarried, engaged in the occupation of teaching school; and Belle Hannum, unmarried.

ANDREW OSBORNE, a well known and successful agriculturalist of Upper Chichester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family whose history is closely identified with that of Delaware county, his father, the late Andrew Osborne, having occupied several official positions in the county for a number of years.

Andrew Osborne, Sr., was born in Ireland in 1838, the son of James and Nancy (Love) Osborne, who were residents of county Tyrone, Ireland, where Mr. Osborne was engaged in farming interests. Andrew Osborne came to this country in 1847, he being then only nine years of age, landed in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, but subsequently removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where he acquired an excellent education in the public schools. Later he changed his place of residence to Upper Chichester township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he turned his attention to farming. He possessed that resolute purpose and unconquerable industry which enabled him to overcome all obstacles, and in the management of his agricultural interests he met with gratifying success. In his political preferences Mr. Osborne was a Democrat, as his judgment sanctioned its principles and policies. He served as county commissioner for three years at Media, Delaware county, acted in the capacity of mercantile appraiser, and was appointed to the position of quarantine officer for Delaware county by Governor Patterson. Mr. Osborne's interest in the affairs of the town was of that practical character that prompted him to put forth every effort for the good of the community and for the adoption of measures which would lead to its upbuilding and substantial improvement.

Mr. Osborne was united in marriage to Caroline Barlow, daughter of Milton Barlow, who was employed in the postal service at Wilmington, Delaware. Their children were: Rachel, unmarried; Jennie, deceased; Gilbert, deceased; Anna (1), deceased; Anna (2), unmarried, and Andrew, Jr., unmarried. Mr. Osborne and his family have always been earnest and consistent members of the Presbyterian church of Upper Chichester. Mr. Osborne and wife are both deceased.

The surviving members of the family reside on the ancestral estate, which consists of fifty acres of well cultivated ground, and they also have a dairy of twenty cows. Andrew Osborne, Jr., has had complete charge of the affairs of the farm since the death of his father, and has conducted them in such a manner that he merits the confidence and high regard of all his neighbors and friends.

CHARLES WEINERT, one of the large landowners and thoroughgoing agriculturists of Upper Chichester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in the city of Philadelphia, the son of Charles F. Weinert.

Charles F. Weinert belongs to that class of America's adopted citizens, who, seeking a home in the new world, have adapted themselves to the changed conditions and surroundings, and, by the exercise of native ability, untiring energy and sound judgment, have worked their way steadily upward. Mr. Weinert was born in Germany in 1811, acquired an excellent education in the German Universities, and in 1844, accompanied by his wife, came to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and at once engaged in the butcher business. He soon gained a place among the foremost business men of the city, and won for himself a handsome competence, which was entirely the outcome of his own personal effort. Mr. and Mrs. Weinert became the parents of the following named children: 1. Jacob, married Belle Hamilton; they have three children; 2. Louisa, wife of M. Stephens;

3. Emma, deceased; 4. John, deceased; 5. Henry, deceased; 6. Charles Weinert.

Charles Weinert acquired his education in the public schools of Philadelphia, after which he turned his attention to farming interests, deciding to make that vocation his life work. He removed to Upper Chichester township, Delaware county, in 1883, purchased a farm of one hundred and thirty-three acres, and since that date has devoted his energies to farming and dairying, being now the owner of twenty head of fine cattle. Mr. Weinert's political affiliations are in sympathy with the Democratic party, and he has served in the capacity of supervisor of the township for five years. He is an active member of the Order of Red Men, Knights of Pythias, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Weinert was united in marriage to Lena Denner, daughter of George Denner, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, but formerly a resident of Germany. Their children are: Louisa, wife of Arthur Hanby; they have one child; Margaret, unmarried; and Caroline Weinert, unmarried. Mr. Weinert and his family are earnest and faithful members of the Presbyterian church of Upper Chichester, Pennsylvania, and contribute liberally to its support.

JAMES MALESTA. The Malesta family, of which James Malesta, an esteemed and well known citizen of Upper Chichester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a representative member, is of Italian extraction, and the earliest ancestor of whom there is any authentic record was ——— Malesta, grandfather of James Malesta, who was a native of Naples, Italy, and upon his arrival in the United States located in the city of Philadelphia, where he at once engaged in mercantile pursuits, and in due course of time became one of its prominent and successful merchants. He married and reared a family of children.

Jacob Malesta, father of James Malesta, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1850. He pursued his studies in the public schools of that city, and obtained a practical education which thoroughly qualified him for a life of business activity. He engaged in the provision business, and being a man of good, practical judgment and ability, he improved every opportunity for gaining trade, and thus met with a large degree of success in his undertakings, which has proved a remunerative source of income from its establishment up to the present time (1903). Mr. Malesta married Elizabeth Araba, a native of Philadelphia, and eleven children were the issue of this union, three of whom died in infancy. The surviving members of the family are: Frank, unmarried; Jesse, unmarried; John, unmarried; Angeline, wife of Fred Speck; Catherine, unmarried; Madeline, wife of George Kenton; Rosie, unmarried; and James, mentioned at length in the following paragraph.

James Malesta was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1878. He enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the public schools of that city, and began his business career by farming at Lynwood, Delaware county, where he remained for four years. He then became the owner of fifty-four acres of productive farm land in Upper Chichester, Delaware county, where he conducts general farming and also operates a flourishing dairy of thirty head of cows. He possesses remarkable energy and perseverance, is earnest and diligent in all his undertakings, and his business transactions are characterized by a keen sense of justice. His religious faith is that of the Catholic church, and his political views coincide with those advocated by the Republican party.

Mr. Malesta married Miss Bartelukina, a native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and three children were born of this marriage, all of whom died in infancy.

SAMUEL K. CHAMBERS, president of the First National Bank at West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and also one of the prominent business men of that section of the state, is a lineal descendant of John Chambers, son of William Chambers, who was born December 28, 1662, and married for his first wife Elizabeth Austwick, a daughter of Philip Austwick, and after her decease married Deborah Dobson, a daughter of Richard Dobson, of Tollerton, in the county of York, England. John Chambers and family brought a certificate from Friends of York, England, dated March 6, 1712-13, which was presented in Philadelphia, after which they removed to New Jersey, where they resided for a short period of time. In 1715 they settled on White Clay creek, in the edge of New Castle county, Delaware, where they purchased a farm known as the "Hopyard." John Chambers died December 7, 1730, and his wife, Deborah (Dobson) Chambers, died June 24, 1731.

Richard Chambers, third son of John and Deborah Chambers, was born June 20, 1700, married June 19, 1729, Elinor Miller, daughter of John and Mary Miller, of New Garden township. Their eldest son, John Chambers, born March 26, 1730, married Sarah Black, daughter of David and Rachel (Harris) Black; eight children were the issue of this marriage. Richard Chambers, fifth child in order of birth born to John and Sarah Chambers, and grandfather of Samuel K. Chambers, was born October 16, 1775, and his death occurred October 17, 1863. His children were: Sarah, Margaret, John W., father of Samuel K. Chambers, and who married Mary Jane Kimble, of New Castle county, Delaware; Caroline, David, Elizabeth and Richard Chambers.

Samuel K. Chambers, son of John W. and Mary Jane (Kiuble) Chambers, was born in the state of Maryland, February 19, 1845, and educated in the common schools of that vicinity and at Westtown Boarding School. His first business experience was gained in a commercial establishment in New Garden township, which position he retained until 1864, when he enlisted in the One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Regiment, which served under the command of General Lew Wallace, and bore himself with distinction and bravery throughout the various battles in which the regiment participated. After his honorable discharge from the service of the United States, Mr. Chambers returned to West Grove and established a coal and lumber business, which he has successfully conducted up to the present time (1903). In business transactions his name is the synonym of honesty, and his associates in the commercial world place the most implicit confidence in his integrity and fairness. He was the organizer and is now acting in the capacity of president of the First National Bank of West Grove, and in addition to these duties he serves as vice-president of the West Chester Trolley Company. He is a prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic, in which organization he takes a deep and abiding interest.

In 1877 Mr. Chambers married Rebecca W. Ballard, a daughter of Martin L. Ballard, a prosperous and enterprising manufacturer of Canton, Ohio. Their children are: Mary B., a student at Smith College, and Helen H. Chambers, who is pursuing her studies at Cushing Academy. The family attend divine services in the Presbyterian church at West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Both Mr. and Mrs. Chambers have traveled extensively throughout the United States and Europe, visiting the various historic and beautiful places of note and interest. Mrs. Chambers is now acting in the capacity of president of the State Women's Christian Temperance Union, a most worthy enterprise, which has a membership of fifteen thousand loyal and devoted women.

JOSEPH P. LYNCH, of West Grove, Pennsylvania, comes of an ancient and honored family of county Cork, Ireland. There have been one hundred and forty-three families of the name in the direct ancestral line of Mr. Lynch, members of which have held consecutively the office of mayor or judge in Galway, Ireland, in the course of the past centuries. The old Lynch castle there is of historic interest, and attracts travelers and sightseers. The story is told that in 1543 there lived in Galway a Fitzgerald Lynch who was mayor of the city, and also the owner of a fleet of ships in the merchant marine. This fleet was under the management of his son, who on a certain voyage seized the captain of the vessels, took command himself and turned to piracy. He had soon terrorized the whole coast, and his father put in commission another fleet for his capture. After a long and hot pursuit, and a desperate resistance on the part of the pirate ships, the degenerate son was brought home. It was the father himself who threw around his neck the rope that hanged him, and it is said that the justice thus summarily meted out gave rise to the term "lynch law," as applied in this country to executions without benefit of judge or jury.

Michael Lynch, father of Joseph P., was born in Ireland, in county Cork, in 1837. He was educated in the common schools of his native island, and spent a few years there as a farmer, but in 1854, when he was twenty-three years old, he sought wider opportunities in America. He settled in Kelson, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he bought the old Bullock farm, which he tilled until the time of his death. He was known all about that section as a practical farmer, with the shrewd sense and characteristic humor of his race. He was a member of the Catholic church, and voted with the Democratic party. He died in 1875, being still survived by his wife, Margaret Leahy, of county Cork, Ireland, whom he married in America. The children born of his marriage are as follows: Nora, Julia, Ellen, who married E. C. Austin, and has one child; Margaret, who married James Headley, and is the mother of one child; Mary, now the wife of Charles Dingee, and the mother of one child; Dennis, who married Elizabeth Keating, and has five children; John F., a lawyer who died unmarried; M. Henry, who married Mary Carey; Cornelius, who died unmarried; J. P., already mentioned as a resident of West Grove, Pennsylvania.

J. P. Lynch was born in Landenburg, Chester county, on his father's farm, in 1874. His education in the public schools was supplemented by private schooling. His first business experience was as clerk in the West Grove postoffice, where he remained for a year. He then entered the employ of Dingee & Conard, whose establishment is known as the largest rose-growing house in the United States. The firm carries a general line of nursery stock, and Mr. Lynch, having a natural aptitude for the work and a great love for it, was soon an adept at the business. When Mr. Conard retired from the firm, the management of affairs was turned over to Mr. Lynch, who proved fully equal to the exacting demands of his position. There are seventy greenhouses belonging to the establishment, and eight acres are under glass. More than a million rose plants are grown annually, as well as another million of miscellaneous plants. Mr. Lynch took charge in 1894, and has become well known in his line of work. In 1897 Henry Lynch and J. P. Lynch bought the business from Charles Dingee, and have extended both the equipment and the patronage. J. P. Lynch is a life member of the American Florist Society, and a member of the Pen and Pencil Club of Philadelphia, as well as of the Athletic Club of that city. He belongs to the Order of Elks, and is president of the Roosevelt Club of West Grove. He takes a lively interest in politics and is prominently mentioned as Republican candidate for the legislature from the southern district of Chester county. Mr. Lynch is devoted to outdoor sports, and has traveled much, both abroad and in this country.

CHARLES MOORE, a prosperous farmer and highly respected citizen of Lower Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a son of William and Mary (Bartholomew) Moore, and his birth occurred at Utica, New York, April 5, 1829. William Moore (father) was born in New York state, and was educated and reared to manhood in the vicinity of his birthplace. He subsequently became one of the pioneer captains on the Erie canal, where for many years he owned and operated a passenger canal boat, and became well and favorably known in his line of enterprise. He married Mary Bartholomew, daughter of Captain Andrew and Martha (Hosford) Bartholomew, and the issue of this union was the following named children: 1. Edward, who married and settled at Grand Rapids, Michigan, where he died on October 17, 1903, leaving two children—John and Gertrude. 2. Walter, who married and spent the latter years of his life at New Orleans, Louisiana. 3. William, who married and settled near Grand Rapids, Michigan. 4. Andrew B., who resides in Jersey City, New Jersey. 5. Martin A., who married and resides at Sioux City, Missouri. 6. Mary, who became the wife of Henry Moseley, of Albany, New York. 7. Charles, mentioned hereinafter.

Mrs. Mary (Bartholomew) Moore, wife of William Moore, was a descendant of the Rev. Andrew Bartholomew, who was born August 8, 1745, and who was among the early settlers along the Hudson river. The Rev. Andrew Bartholomew was married on December 27, 1769, and he and his wife were the parents of the following named children: 1. Marilla, born December 4, 1770; 2. Sarah, born March 3, 1773, died May 5, 1773; 3. Andrew, born March 20, 1774, mentioned hereinafter; 4. Martin, born August 18, 1776; 5. Sarah, born June 4, 1779, died April 23, 1780; 6. Roswell, born January 28, 1781, died April 7, 1830; 7. An infant who was born and died May 10, 1784; 8 and 9. Horace and Harris, twins, born May 28, 1785; 10. An infant born August 25, 1787, died September 10, 1787. Captain Andrew Bartholomew, eldest son of the Rev. Andrew Bartholomew, was born March 20, 1774. Upon attaining manhood years he became one of the first steamboat captains on the Hudson river, and he was widely known as a man of rare courage and great mechanical skill, these characteristics being noted traits in the family. He married Martha Hosford, who bore him the following named children: 1. Marilla, who became the wife of Andrew Kirk, of Albany, New York; 2. Harris; 3. Martin; 4. Mary, who became the wife of William Moore as aforementioned, and the mother of Charles Moore.

Charles Moore, youngest child of Captain William and Mary Moore, acquired his educational training in the schools of Hartford, Connecticut, and other cities where he had from time to time resided. Having a natural aptitude and liking for mechanics, he learned the trade of a machinist, and pursued this line of industry for some time at Hartford, Connecticut. In 1880 he removed to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he was successfully engaged as an expert machinist, and during a period of over a score of years he performed considerable experimental and practical work both as a machinist and inventor, and has perfected a number of labor-saving devices and machines which have been brought into universal use. In 1884 he located in Chester county, took up his abode in Lower Oxford township, and has since led a retired life on his well cultivated and productive farm of three hundred acres. At the outbreak of the Civil war Mr. Moore enlisted with the Ohio Volunteers, but his military experience was chiefly confined to patrol duty. In the sphere of politics he is an earnest supporter of the principles and measures advocated by the Republican party.

Mr. Moore was united in marriage to Anna J. Sykes, daughter of William Sykes, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The issue of this union was two children: Charles S., who died young; and William B., who was born February 22, 1871, married November 17, 1897, Susanna R., daughter of J. Barcklay and Susanna (Criswell) Smith; she was born October 24, 1874, and they are the parents of two children: Charles B., born May 22, 1899, and Anna, born July 12, 1902. The death of Mrs. Charles Moore, which occurred in February, 1897, was felt as an irreparable loss by her family, and as a personal bereavement by a large circle of relatives and friends. Mr. Moore and his family attend the Protestant Episcopal church.

Charles Moore

THAD W. HARRY. Among the passengers on the "Vine" of Liverpool, which arrived at Philadelphia on the 17th of 7th month (September), 1684, were "From Macchinleth in Montgomeryshire, Hugh Harris and Daniel Harris." At Radnor Monthly Meeting, 2 mo., 8, 1686, "William Howell & George Painter are ordered to speak to Hugh and Daniel Harry concerning their Parents money." At the same meeting, 4 mo., 10, 1686: "George Painter & William Howell according to former order did speak with Hugh and Daniel Harry who have promised yt if any friends would lay out money in England upon their parents account they would out of the Product or growth of this Countrey make them satisfaction." The two forms of spelling the name were continued for many years.

Hugh Harris and Elizabeth Brinton, daughter of William and Ann Brinton, of Birmingham, declared their intentions of marriage at Chichester Meeting, 1 mo. (March), 1, 1686, and again 2 mo., 12, 1686, and were doubtless married soon after the last date. He settled in Birmingham, where, on 4 mo., 11, 1695, William Brinton conveyed to him and his wife two hundred and fifty acres of land. On November 19, 1707, Hugh purchased four hundred and thirty acres of land in East Marlborough. He was a weaver by trade and died in 1708, leaving nine children:

1. Evan, died in East Marlborough, 1728; m. Elizabeth ———.
2. William, died in Sept., 1758; m. Esther ———. See below.
3. Hugh, died in Kennet, 1760; m. Elizabeth Wickersham, 1730-1.
4. John, m. about 1732, Frances ———, and removed away.
5. Elizabeth, m. Robert Eachus and John Gleave, and died 1758.
6. Ann, m. Thomas Speakman, ancestor of the family here.
7. Jane, m. Alexander Underwood and went to York county.
8. Lois, supposed to have married John Kersey.
9. Olive, m. Daniel Baily, 1 mo., 16, 1720-1, and d. 10 mo., 4, 1766.

William Harry (2) purchased, November 28, 1727, from his mother, one hundred and seventy-seven acres of the Marlborough lands and settled thereon. He devised the homestead to his son William, subject to legacies to the other children, Amos, Hugh, Silas, Esther, Abigail, Dinah and Olive; the last named being mentioned as helpless. These were not in membership with Friends, but Amos was admitted 11 mo., 4, 1752, married Hannah Baily the same year and had several children.

Silas Harry, son of William and Esther, purchased from his brother William, March 14, 1768, eighty-two and one-half acres of the homestead, in East Marlborough. He sold a part of this in 1780 to James Nethery, and appears to have left the township before 1786. He married about 1767, Mary Cloud, born 10 mo., 17, 1747; daughter of William and Mary (Peirce) Cloud, of East Marlborough. She died leaving three children, after which he married again. These children were Stephen, Jesse and Mary, who married Joseph Logan.

Stephen Harry, born 1 mo., 24, 1768; died 5 mo., 3, 1821; married Sarah Hayes, born 4 mo., 16, 1769; died 2 mo., 11, 1844; daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Job) Hayes, of East Marlborough. Prior to 1809 he was a farmer in West Marlborough, but in that year purchased a farm of one hundred and nine acres in West Fallowfield, from Samuel Hallowell and Elizabeth his wife, of East Marlborough, and died thereon, leaving ten children:

- Benajah, b. 12 mo., 26, 1790; d. 3 mo., 13, 1864; m. Hannah Gatchel.
- Olive, b. 10 mo., 28, 1793; d. 2 mo., 28, 1832; m. James Haslett, Esq.
- Mary, b. 7 mo., 29, 1795; d. 8 mo., 28, 1851; m. Thomas Jackson.
- Lydia, b. 8 mo., 23, 1797; d. 3 mo., 25, 1853; m. David Shortlidge.
- Job, b. 12 mo., 9, 1799; d. 2 mo., 14, 1876.
- Elizabeth W., b. 1 mo., 11, 1802; d. 9 mo., 24, 1844; m. ——— Daniel.
- Jesse, b. 3 mo., 20, 1804; d. 3 mo., 12, 1883, unmarried.
- Stephen Cloud, b. 7 mo., 20, 1806; d. 5 mo., 31, 1890; see below.
- Samuel Hayes, M. D., b. 4 mo., 16, 1809; d. 8 mo., 30, 1881; m.
- Nathan Hayes, b. 11 mo., 4, 1811; d. 11 mo., 12, 1879; unmarried.

S. Cloud Harry, son of Stephen and Sarah, was married September 19, 1833, to Sarah Ann Baker, born September 14, 1810; died September 28, 1856; daughter of Levi and Ann (McNeil) Baker. For some years he kept a hotel at Chatham, but in 1859 he purchased from B. Franklin Cheevers a farm of eighty-two acres in Popcopson township, where he resided the remainder of his long life. He and his wife were both interred at the Friends' graveyard, London Grove Meeting. They had seven children:

- Lavinia, b. July 11, 1834; d. Feb. 4, 1835, in infancy.
- Ann B., b. Feb. 21, 1836; d. Jan. 22, 1853, unmarried.
- John Baker, b. May 21, 1838; d. Nov. 20, 1899; m. Elizabeth W. Peirce.
- Eugene, b. June 14, 1840; d. Aug. 3, 1873, unmarried.

William Baker, b. at Chatham, May 23, 1842; see forward.

Sarah Augusta, b. Sept. 6, 1847; d. Sept. 15, 1848, in infancy.

Evan B., b. Sept. 13, 1850; d. May 27, 1851.

William B. Harry, above, was married, January, 1867, to Martha Emma Shank, born at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, July 12, 1849, daughter of Henry M. and Emmaline (Worth) Shank, the latter now of Stowe, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. He inherited the homestead in Pocopson, and continues to reside thereon and follow farming. He and his wife have four children: Stephen Cloud, born July 23, 1868, now teaching in Baltimore, Maryland; Thaddeus Worth, born September 23, 1871; Maude Ethel, born September 13, 1887; Florence Emma, born September 28, 1890.

Thaddeus W. Harry, born in Pocopson, was educated in the public schools and at the Friends' School at West Chester, after which he entered the employ of William Sellers & Co., Philadelphia. In 1894 he came to Toughkenamon and started in the general store business, which he still conducts. He married Alexine L. Birch, daughter of Edward K. Birch, a merchant of Philadelphia, and has three children, Thaddeus, Jr., Cloud and Lawrence. He is an earnest Republican, and was appointed postmaster five years ago, which office he still holds. He is a member of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, and belongs to the Society of Friends.

NATHAN D. LANCASTER, an enterprising and esteemed citizen of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a man of good business tact and judgment, prompt and reliable in the performance of all obligations, and by the exercise of those characteristics which insure success in life—industry, perseverance and enterprise—has acquired a handsome competence for his declining years. He was born in Pennsbury township, Chester county, August 18, 1844.

His educational advantages were obtained in the common schools of his birthplace and at Wyer's Academy in West Chester, and his business career has been devoted to farming and butchering, which occupations he has conducted on an extensive scale. His farm is located in a beautiful region, is equipped with all the modern and improved machinery for the scientific cultivation of the soil, and is conceded to be one of the most productive estates in that section of the county. Mr. Lancaster is not unmindful of his duties as a citizen, takes a keen and intelligent interest in all local affairs, and is now the incumbent of the office of school director. He staunchly upholds the principles and measures advocated by the Democratic party, to which organization he has given his support since attaining his majority.

November 8, 1868, Mr. Lancaster married Ada Taylor, a daughter of Milton and Sarah Taylor, the former named being a prosperous miller of Kennett Square, Pennsylvania. Their children are: 1. Joseph, who married Ella Mendenhall, and they are the parents of five children; 2. Harry N., unmarried; 3. Albert C., unmarried; 4. George W., unmarried; 5. S. Gert-rude, who became the wife of Irvin C. Brinton, and two children have been the issue of this union. Mr. Lancaster and his family attend the services of the Baptist church in Kennett township.

MAHLON MANCILL. One of the highly cultivated and productive farms for which Chester county, Pennsylvania, is noted, located in Kennett township, is the property of Mahlon Mancill, who from 1880 up to the present time (1903) has been prominently identified with the agricultural and political affairs of this section of the state. He was born in West Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 12, 1846, a son of David D. and Sarah (Hinkson) Mancill.

David D. Mancill (father) was a native of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, obtained a common school education, and was reared to manhood in the vicinity of his birthplace. He served an apprenticeship at the blacksmith trade, and for a number of years followed that occupation at Village Green, Delaware county; later he removed to West Vincent township, Chester county, where he resided for several years and devoted his attention to the cultivation of a fine farm, and subsequently he became the owner of the celebrated Royal Spring farm in East Vincent township. David D. Mancill and his wife, Sarah (Hinkson) Mancill, were the parents of the following named children: Mary, born July 5, 1830, became the wife of Aaron King; Susanna, born January 13, 1832, became the wife of Joseph Philips; Morris H., born February 18, 1834, married Mary Ann Christman, and after her decease married Emma Johnson; Caroline P., born February 28, 1836, became the wife of Dutton Slaughter; Harriet B., born November 26, 1837, died April 30, 1865; L. A. Barton, born February 3, 1840, died August 28, 1840; William, born November 14, 1841, died March 3, 1850; George Elwood, born April 8, 1844, married Martha Rankin Hinkson; Mahlon, born August 12, 1846; and David D., born September 16, 1849. David D. Mancill, the father of these children, died in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he spent the latter years of his life; his wife, Sarah (Hinkson) Mancill, died in March, 1883.

Manlon Mancill acquired his education in the common schools of West Vincent township and at private schools in Philadelphia, and year by year this has been supplemented by that broader knowledge which can be obtained only in the school of experience. After completing his studies he thoroughly mastered all the details of the carpenter trade, which line of industry engaged his attention for the following ten years, after which he established, in partnership with his brothers, George E. and David D. Mancill, a grocery store at 3600 Market street, Philadelphia. They carried a large and select line of goods, and this fact combined with the prompt and courteous attention given to customers quickly won for them many friends, and their trade increased rapidly both in volume and importance. At the time of their disposal of the business, in 1879, it was one of the leading establishments of its kind in that section of the city. In 1880 Mr. Mancill purchased a farm of ninety-three acres in Kennett township, and since that time has devoted his energies to general farming and dairying, achieving a well merited degree of success. Since attaining his majority his political allegiance has been given to the Republican party; he is now the incumbent of the office of school director for the township of Kennett, and the duties of the position are discharged with marked ability and fidelity.

Mr. Mancill was united in marriage, February 22, 1877, to Jeannette Fairlamb, and they are the parents of three children, all of whom are unmarried and reside at home: Robert F., born May 27, 1878; Nomann, B., born October 29, 1882; D. Duer, born March 2, 1883. The family are faithful members and attendants of the Baptist church of Kennett township, and take an active interest in the work of the various societies connected with it.

MARSHALL REGESTER, who was during a long and active life a prominent and highly esteemed resident of Chester county, Pennsylvania, belonged to a family which has been for several generations represented in that and the neighboring county of Delaware. His grandfather, John Regester, was a chairmaker of Edgemont, Delaware county, and was the father of the following named children: Abraham H., Joseph, Priscilla, Elizabeth and Margaret. John Regester, who lived to an advanced age, was a member of the Society of Friends.

Abraham H. Regester, son of John Regester, was born in Edgemont, Delaware county, served an apprenticeship to the shoemaker's trade, and later settled on a farm in Chester county. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and in politics a Whig, subsequently identifying himself with the Republican party. He was twice married. By his first wife, whose name was Priscilla Chalfant, he was the father of the following named children: William, who was a miller, and died in 1899 in West Chester; Priscilla, now deceased, who was the wife of Clement Cooper; and John, who was a miller, and died in Edgemont. His second wife was Urzilla Marshall, a native of Chester county. Their children were: Sarah, died February 8, 1903, who was the wife of Hoopes Marshall, of Westtown; Joseph, who is a resident of Philadelphia; and Marshall, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Regester died in June, 1870, and the death of his wife took place some ten years later.

Marshall Regester, son of Abraham H. and Urzilla (Marshall) Regester, was born April 15, 1838, in Birmingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He passed his boyhood in his native place, and when he was fifteen years of age the family removed to Edgemont, where, on attaining his majority, he began life on his own account as a farmer. In 1880 he purchased the old homestead of Jeremiah Bishop in Upper Providence township. This farm, on which he resided until his death, contained one hundred acres of improved land. In 1889, his barn, a fine structure, was set on fire, and was consumed with all its contents, consisting of eighteen cows, four hundred bushels of wheat, and the farming utensils. The disastrous effect of this great calamity was in the course of time completely overcome by the enterprise and perseverance of Mr. Regester, and his farm, and all pertaining to it, was left in a flourishing condition. Politically he was a Republican, and the esteem in which he was held by his neighbors is sufficiently proved by the fact that, for fifteen years he held the office of supervisor. He was a man of sterling integrity, and he exerted a salutary influence throughout the neighborhood. His death occurred April 9, 1903.

Mr. Regester married Caroline, daughter of Hiram Green, and to them were born two children, George Ellsworth and William Marshall, the latter named of whom died at the age of seven months.

George Ellsworth Regester, eldest son of Marshall and Caroline (Green) Regester, was born March 29, 1863, on the family homestead. He attended the country schools and made his home on the parental farm. For some years he was engaged as a machinist at Upper Providence. After the death of his father he took charge of the farm, upon which he now makes his residence. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, affiliating with lodge No. 275, is secretary of that body, and has sat as a representative in the Grand Lodge. He is also a member of the Patrons of Husbandry, lodge No. 173, of Media. In politics he is a Republican. He has served as tax collector for nine years, as assessor for twelve years, and he is secretary of the school board at the present time.

He married Mary Tyson, and to them were born: Howard Marshall, Clarence, who died in infancy; Emma P. F., Laura Green and George Ellsworth Register.

EDMUND STEWART, an old and estimable citizen of Ridley Park, was born in Ridley township, December 4, 1838, son of Isaac and Rebecca (Berry) Stewart, who were also natives of the same township.

Isaac Stewart was a dairyman, and a man of excellent character. He was one of a family of eight children, the others being William, James, Thomas, Peter, Sarah (who married Richard Berry), Elizabeth and Margaret. The children of Isaac and Rebecca Stewart were: 1. William, who married Sarah E., a daughter of William Horne; 2. John, who married Rebecca Worrall; 3. Charles, who married Jennie Nelson, and to whom were born four children, two of whom survive, viz. Laura and Florence; 4. Edmund, further referred to hereinafter; 5. Mary Ann, who married Henry Westcott; 6. Richard B., who married Martha, a daughter of Abram Ward; 7. Isaac, who died, aged twenty-two years; 8. Albert, who is a professor in Hamilton (New York) University, and who married Sarah Shirley, and to whom was born a son, George H.

Edmund, fourth child in the family last named, began his education in the public schools in his native place, and pursued his advanced studies in a private school in Upland. After leaving school he engaged in dairying with his father upon the paternal farm. Since the death of his father he has conducted the same business upon his highly cultivated farm of sixty-nine acres, and maintains his home in one of the most substantial and attractive farm residences in Ridley township. He is a man of broad information and high standing, and has ever exerted a potent and salutary influence in the community.

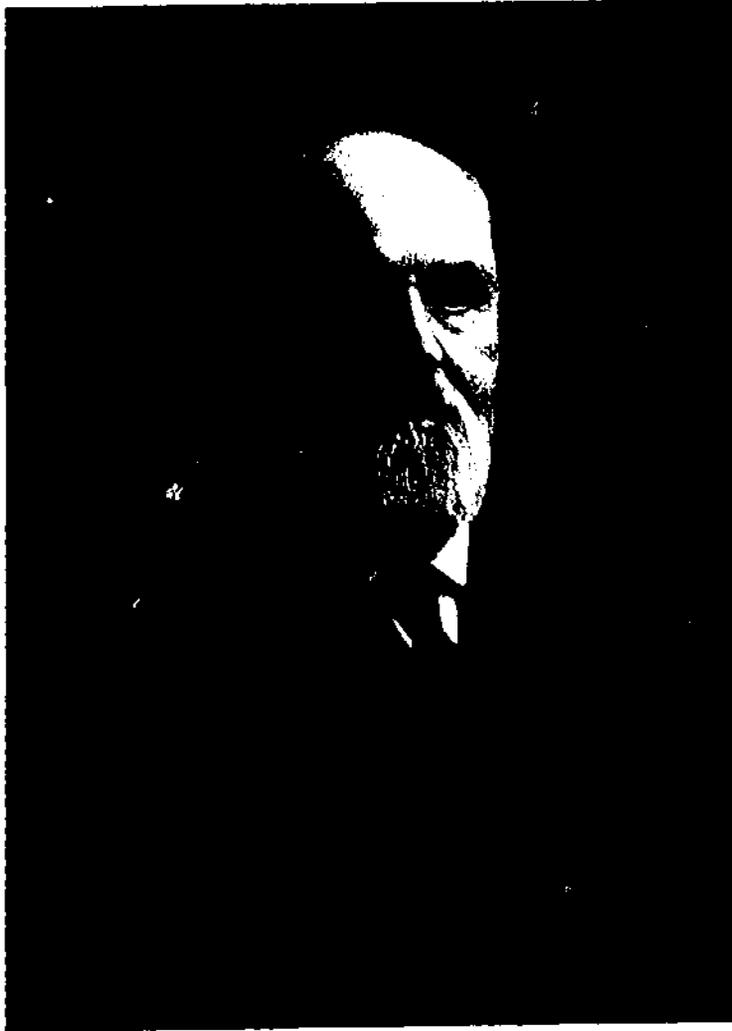

Edmund Stewart was married 2 mo., 25, 1864, to Mary G. Caldwell, a daughter of James and Susan (Seary) Caldwell. She was born 3 mo., 4, 1842, one of five children, of whom she was the second. Her brothers and sisters were David L., Hannah P., Anna E. and Charles E., of whom she and her first named brother alone survive. The children born to Edmund and Mary G. Stewart were as follows: 1. Frank C., born January 8, 1865, deceased, July 13, 1865; 2. Susan R., born January 27, 1867, deceased, November 18, 1874; 3. Isaac W., born January 24, 1870; he married, July 27, 1890, Martha, daughter of James and Eliza (Truitt) Parsells, and their children were: Ruth P., born March 18, 1891; James Caldwell, born February 11, 1893, died September 26, 1893; Mary Caldwell, born January 27, 1895; David Caldwell, born May 11, 1898; Helen Porter, born July 16, 1900; all of these are living in Ridley township, except James, who died in 1893; 4. Howard Caldwell, born May 5, 1877; 5. Raymond Lewis, born June 19, 1878, deceased, July 26, 1878. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stewart are consistent members of the Prospect Hill Baptist church.

JOSEPH MARIS WORRELL was born October 13, 1826, on the farm where he now resides, in Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His parents were Isaac and Abigail (Worrall) Worrell. Isaac Worrell was born in Springfield township, Delaware county, November 8, 1795. He was the son of a farmer, and lived on a farm during his early life. In later years he owned a large amount of real estate which had belonged to the family since 1770. His ancestors were Quakers, and were among the earliest settlers in Delaware county. In common with them all, he exhibited the Quaker trait of stability which caused them to found a home that should be handed down from generation to generation. He remained all his life on the farm where he passed his early life, and was known throughout the county as a man of sterling worth. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and always retained the principles which governed that worthy and devout body of men and women. In politics he was a Whig. He died in 1850. His wife survived him for twenty-two years.

His son, Joseph Worrell, was born on the farm which belonged to his father, and which descended to him at his father's death. He has a farm of one hundred and thirteen acres, which he keeps in a fine state of cultivation. Like his ancestors, he takes the keenest pleasure in the ownership of a homestead which his descendants will one day inherit. He is a worthy member of the Society of Friends, and ranks high in the record of public opinion. He has served as inspector of elections, and has faithfully performed the duties of the office. He always votes the Republican ticket.

His first wife was Miss Margaret Jane Bishop, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hunter) Bishop. They had two children, Abbie Ann, who is the wife of James Taggatt, of Philadelphia; Matilda, the second daughter, is the wife of Winfield Worrell, of Media. Mr. Worrell's second wife was Miss Martha E. Nusum, daughter of William and Martha (McClure) Nusum, of Lower Providence.

Edmund Stewart

POWELL DICKINSON, a leading farmer of Delaware county, traces his descent from William Dickinson, who was a resident of the county prior to 1797, and was a prominent man in the community. He owned a small part of what is known as the Dickinson homestead, engaged in teaching, and served in the local offices of the township. He married Prudence Powell, and they were the parents of three children: John, Lizzie, who became the wife of Alexander Pratt; and George P. Dickinson.

George P. Dickinson was brought up on the paternal farm and learned the carpenter's trade, but on reaching maturity turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, in which he was highly successful and accumulated a large property. His specialty was buttermaking for the Philadelphia market, and the excellent quality of his production gained for him a wide reputation. He was an active member of the Society of Friends. He married Hannah, daughter of Daniel Leedom, of Bucks county. Their children were: Charles, born December 31, 1819; Emily, born October 23, 1821; George, born October 19, 1825; Elias H., born October 7, 1834; Powell, mentioned at length hereinafter; Hannah, born November 11, 1843. Though extremely unassuming both in character and demeanor, the painstaking industry and honorable dealing of Mr. Dickinson, together with his many quiet and unobtrusive virtues, won for him the respect and confidence of all who knew him. He died in 1876, and his wife survived until 1890.

Powell Dickinson, son of George P. and Hannah (Leedom) Dickinson, was born October 1, 1839, in Haverford township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and received his education in his native place and at London Grove, Chester county. He settled on the homestead, and has devoted his life to agricultural pursuits, on which he is a recognized authority. His political principles are those advocated and upheld by the Republican party. He and his family are members of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Dickinson married, January 3, 1866, Ellen, daughter of John W. and Elizabeth (Worrell) Morton, and a descendant of John Morton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Of the four children who compose the family of Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson, the eldest, John Morton, was born February 5, 1869, was educated at Haverford College and Palm's Business College, of which latter institution he is a graduate, and now occupies a clerical position with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Joseph E., the second child in the family, was born August 6, 1872, was educated at Swarthmore College and Palm's Business College, and is now proprietor of the Berkshire Inn at Atlantic City, New Jersey. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson are:

Florence Elizabeth, who was born September 15, 1876, and was educated at the Race Street Friends' College, Philadelphia; and Laura Blanche, who was born December 3, 1879, and also received her education at the above mentioned institution.

JOHN FLEMING. Among the most successful and highly esteemed residents of Haverford township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is to be named John Fleming, whose life of industry and usefulness and whose record for integrity have given him a firm hold upon the regard and confidence of the community. He is now retired from active business pursuits, and enjoys a comfortable competency which is the result of his well directed efforts along business lines. He was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, November 28, 1828, the son of Andrew and Catherine (Patten) Fleming.

Mr. Fleming enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of his native county, after which he served four years as an apprentice learning the trade of shoemaker, which he followed, with a certain amount of success, up to the year 1850. Then having decided that there were better opportunities for a successful business career in the United States, he took passage in a sailing vessel which was four weeks making the journey across the Atlantic Ocean. He located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he remained for six months, and then removed to Upper Darby, where he was engaged at his trade four years, being an employe of Mr. George Richards. In May, 1855, Mr. Fleming returned to Ireland, and October 23, of the same year, was united in marriage to Miss Jane Blakely, a daughter of George Blakely, of county Tyrone. Mr. Fleming returned to this country, accompanied by his wife, and established a shoemaker's business on his own account opposite the Eagle Hotel in Haverford township, where he conducted a successful trade for ten years. After making two or three changes in his business address, in 1896 Mr. Fleming purchased his present farm in Haverford township, and turned his attention to the milk business, which proved a profitable source of income, owing to the fact that he was thoroughly reliable and honorable in all his trade transactions, and in this manner won the confidence as well as the patronage of the public. Of late years he has been succeeded in the business by his son. In his political views Mr. Fleming is an Independent, and although of foreign birth is a loyal American citizen, true to the institutions of his adopted land. In 1896 Mr. Fleming made another trip to his native country, and owing to the wonderful improvements that have been made in the mode of travel in recent years, the journey was performed in five days.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Fleming were: Emiline, wife of Charles Hanley; Melvina, wife of Leighton Sorason; Kate, who became the wife of Samuel Hughes; she died April 29, 1895; George B., died November 12, 1895, was engaged in the milk business; John, died September 10, 1896; William, who resides with his parents and is now conducting the milk business; and Benjamin F. E. Fleming. The family are active and consistent members of the Presbyterian church of Haverford township, Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM E. WEBB, M. D., one of the leading medical practitioners of Unionville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred April 14, 1863, is a descendant on the paternal side of Richard Webb, who came from the city of Gloucester, England, to Philadelphia in 1700, and four years later became one of the early settlers of Birmingham, where he was an active and public-spirited citizen and served in the capacity of justice of the peace. His wife, Elizabeth Webb, a noted minister of the Friends, had visited this country in 1697 and 1698, and in 1710 paid a religious visit to her native land. Their children were: William, Mary, Esther, Sarah, Daniel, Benjamin, Elizabeth and James Webb. The father of these children died in 1719.

William Webb, son of Richard and Elizabeth Webb, was a prominent resident of Kennett Chester county, and actively associated with its political affairs; he was a member of the assembly for many years, and was also the incumbent of the office of justice of the peace. On January 22, 1709-10, he married Rebecca Harlan, daughter of George Harlan, and the following named children were born to them: William, born November 13, 1710, and Ezekiel, who became the father of Ezekiel Webb. William Webb died in 1753.

Thomas Webb, son of Ezekiel Webb, married Esther Paxton, and the following named children were born to them: Matilda, married ——— Walters; Mary, who became the wife of Caleb Woodward; Esther, who was united in marriage to Raoul Jefferis; Jane, who became the wife of William Taylor; Ezekiel, who died in childhood; Henry, who married a Griffith; Thomas, who married Mary Lillie, and William Webb.

William Webb, father of Dr. William E. Webb, was born July 25, 1820, and was the youngest son of Thomas and Esther Webb. He was twice married, his first wife having been Sarah Coates, who bore him four children: Henry Clay, George Thomas, and two who died in infancy. His second wife was Phoebe Pownall and the children born to them were: 1. Sarah, who died in early life; 2. Katherine E.; 3. Esther, died March 12, 1901; she was the wife of Chester Chandler and their children were: Norman B., William L., Phoebe, Margaret and Emma Chandler; 4. Joseph, married Louella Pyle, and the surviving members of their family are: Bertha, Katherine, William L. and Louella Webb; 5. Phoebe D., wife of Howard C. Maule, and mother of three children, Ada, Lydia and Katherine Maule; 6. L. Pownall, married Katherine Alexander; their children are: Alexander, Herbert and Morris J. Webb; 7. William E., subject of sketch.

William E. Webb, son of William E. and Phoebe (Pownall) Webb, acquired his literary education at the local schools of Unionville, the Unionville Academy, and the West Chester State Normal School, after which he matriculated in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. After pursuing the regular course of instruction he was graduated from that institution in 1887, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and at once entered upon the active practice of his profession at Unionville, Pennsylvania, where he has remained up to the present time. He is engaged in a general practice of medicine and surgery, and the liberal patronage which he enjoys attests to his professional ability, his skill and his devotion to the calling which he has made his life work. In addition to these duties Dr. Webb served in the capacity of medical examiner for the Pennsylvania Railroad for ten years.

Dr. Webb married Emma G. Evans, daughter of Leiper P. and Grace A. Evans, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Webb was born August 21, 1869, and her education was acquired at the Millersville State Normal School. Their children are: William, born January 4, 1893, Grace E., born October 15, 1895, and Phoebe Pownall, born August 26, 1898.

SAMUEL F. DAVIS, of Willistown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his forefathers for several generations, have been well known farmers of Chester and Delaware counties. His great-grandparents were Joseph and Sarah Davis, whose son James was born near White Horse in Willistown township, Chester county. Subsequently he moved to Edgmont township, Delaware county, where he bought a farm. He married Sarah, daughter of Robert Fairlamb, of Middletown, and had a family of five children, namely: H. Robert, Mary, Sarah, Alice and Susan. James Davis and his wife were members of the Society of Friends. He died in 1855, and his wife died in 1882, at the age of eighty-seven.

Robert F. Davis, first child of James and Sarah Davis, was born on his father's farm in Edgmont in 1822. He attended the district school and grew up in the activities of country life. He made farming his occupation, and was energetic and successful in his work. He married Sidney Vodges, a daughter of Aaron Vodges, of Willistown. Both he and his wife cherished the traditions and principles of the faith in which they were born, and were members of the Willistown Friends' Meeting. Their children were: Samuel F., Annie, Elizabeth, deceased; William V., of Media, Pennsylvania; Susanna, deceased; and Mary Ella, wife of Wilmer E. Smedley, of Willistown. James Davis died October 20, 1900, and his wife died in October, 1886.

Samuel F., oldest child of James and Sidney (Vodges) Davis, was born October 20, 1847, in Edgmont township, Delaware county. He was brought up on the farm and educated in the public schools of the district. He worked with his father until 1878, when he bought the old Ezra Thomas farm, in Willistown, and moved to Chester county. The farm comprises one hundred and forty acres of land, and Mr. Davis has given much study to the adaptability of the soil and to scientific methods of agriculture. The dairy is his most important line of work, though he raises a general line of crops. As a member of the Society of Friends, he takes the place held by his father and grandfather.

Mr. Davis married Miss Ida Ruhl, a daughter of William and Elizabeth Ruhl, of Philadelphia, in 1900.

BENNETT S. WALTON, a highly respected citizen of London Grove, West Marlborough township, is descended from an old Pennsylvania family, his great-grandfather, Joshua Walton, having been a resident of Byberry, Philadelphia county, whence he removed to New Garden township, Chester county. He was probably married twice, and by his first wife had, among other children, four sons: Thomas, Joshua, Jr., Isaac, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Nathan.

Isaac Walton, son of Joshua, was born December 17, 1770, and married Isabel Starr, who was born March 3, 1757. They were the parents of the following children: 1. Reuben, who was born March 21, 1797, married ———— Thompson, and had one child, Gilpin; 2. David, mentioned at length hereinafter; 3. Sarah, who was born March 31, 1803, and married George Meredith; 4. Isaac, Jr., who was born April 14, 1807, married Martha Humes, and was the father of the following children: Emeline, born September 23, 1837, married David Swayne; Edwin, born May 1, 1840, married Phoebe M. Pusey, by whom he had one child, Mary Emma, born September 30, 1869, and after the death of his wife married Hannah, widow of ——— Babel, and daughter of John and Isabel Christy; John Henry, born March 7, 1842; and Marietta, born February 1, 1845, married a Miss Hayes, and had one child, Martha, who became the wife of Walter Cheney. After the death of her husband Mrs. Hayes married Henry Hayes, and had the following children: Gertrude, who married Sharpless Baker; Anna, Emma and Henry, Jr.

David Walton, son of Isaac and Isabel (Starr) Walton, was born May 11, 1798, and in 1817 or 1818 removed to West Marlborough. He married Elizabeth Pusey, and was the father of the following children: Jesse P., born in 1825, married Margaretta, daughter of Joseph S. Walton; Franklin, who died in infancy; Bennett S., mentioned at length hereinafter; and David R.

Bennett S. Walton, son of David and Elizabeth (Pusey) Walton, was born December 26, 1829, in London Grove village, West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and received his education at Friends' School in his native place and at a school in Kennett Square. For a time he conducted a store in London Grove, and afterward devoted himself for many years to agricultural pursuits, but has now retired from active labors of the farm. In matters of religion he adheres to the faith of his forefathers, who were members of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Walton has been three times married, all his wives being sisters of the name of Bailey. His first wife, Rebecca, was the mother of one child, William B. By his second wife, Elizabeth, he had three children: Edward B., Franklin D. and Charles S. The name of Mr. Walton's third wife, who is still living, is Tacie.

Mr. Walton's eldest son, William B., married Clara Pennock, and has had three children: Bennett P., Rebecca and Warren. Charles S., the youngest son of Mr. Walton, married Edna Sweigart, and has two children: Tacie and Charles Eugene.

THOMAS MARSHALL. The career of Thomas Marshall, a prominent builder and contractor of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, illustrates, in no uncertain manner, what it is possible to accomplish when perseverance and determination form the keynote to a man's life. Depending upon his own resources, looking for no outside aid or support, he has risen to a place of prominence in the business world.

Thomas Marshall was born in Londonderry, Ireland, in 1843, and was a pupil in the public schools of that vicinity up to the year 1864, after which he assisted his father in the building and contracting business for several years. While thus employed he also devoted considerable attention to acquiring a thorough knowledge of the details of the business, and being possessed of an apt, receptive mind he was able in four years' time to conduct a business of his own. February 27, 1868, Mr. Marshall left his native country in order to avail himself of the better opportunities for a business career in the new world. He settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and in partnership with another established a contracting business, and from that time on the success which has come to them has been the result of industry, perseverance and well-directed effort. Mr. Marshall erected a commodious and handsome residence in the township of Springfield, which he fitted up with all modern conveniences, and here his family has resided ever since. He is thoroughly alive to all that pertains to good citizenship, and although entirely devoid of all political aspirations, is interested in whatever has a tendency to permanently benefit his locality.

Mr. Marshall was married twice, and two children were born of each of these unions. One of his sons, John James, acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of his birthplace, and this was supplemented by a thorough course in mechanical engineering in Swarthmore College, from which he received his diploma. Since that date he has been engaged in the building and contracting business with his father.

THEODORE PENNOCK. The Pennock family of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, represented in the present generation by Theodore Pennock, a prominent and influential business man of that town, trace their lineage to Christopher Pennock, a native of Ireland, who came to this country and settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1685, was united in marriage to Mary Collett, daughter of George Collett, of Ireland, and his death occurred in the city of Philadelphia in the year 1701.

Joseph Pennock, son of Christopher Pennock, was born in Ireland, in 1677, and at the age of eight years accompanied his parents to this country. He was educated in the schools of Philadelphia and was a prominent factor in the commercial circles of that city until 1714, when he removed to West Marlborough township. He married Mary Lewis, of Delaware county, and six sons and six daughters were the issue of this union.

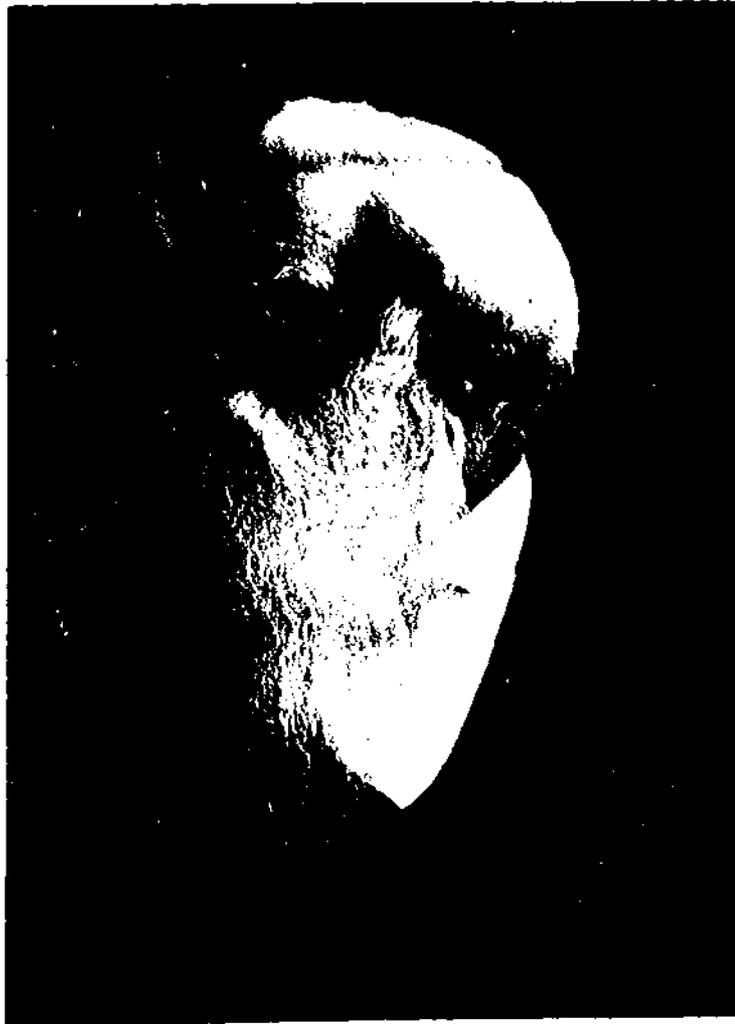

William Pennock, son of Joseph and Mary Pennock, was united in marriage to Hannah Chamberlin, whose death occurred soon after the birth of her first child, who died in infancy. For his second wife William Pennock married Alice Mendenhall, daughter of Moses and Alice (Bowater) Mendenhall, and they were the parents of one son.

Samuel Pennock, born November 23, 1754, son of William and Alice Pennock, married Mary Hadley, of Millcreek Hundred, New Castle county, Delaware, a daughter of John and Margaret (Morton) Hadley, who bore him the following named children—Margaret, Simon, Phœbe, Moses, Elizabeth, Amy, Hannah, John and Mary. Mr. Pennock was a chair, reel and "little wheel" manufacturer.

Moses Pennock, son of Samuel and Mary Pennock, was born November 14, 1786, in the township of East Marlborough, and at an early age became interested in agricultural inventions. He was by occupation a farmer and his inventive genius aided him in simplifying and improving the old methods of farming. He was the first to invent and use the revolving horse rake, which he patented in 1822, and two years later he invented and put into practical use the discharging hay rake which has since come into universal use. The following is an extract from "The History of American Manufacturers," 1868:

"Among the inventions relating to agriculture patented early in this decade that deserve to be mentioned specially, is the grain drill, which may be said to have revolutionized the system of grain planting in America. The most successful machine of this description of which we have any record was invented by a practical farmer of Chester county in Pennsylvania, Moses Pennock, of Kennett Square, who is also accredited with having been the inventor of the Revolving Horse Rake, of which the identical model, in all important respects, may now be seen in almost every hayfield in this country and in Europe. He, however, left the drill in a rude form, and the agriculturists of America are indebted for the improvements that have been made upon it and its present perfection to his ingenious son, Samuel Pennock, now residing on the old homestead, which his ancestors obtained by grant direct from William Penn. Patented in 1841, this invention was regarded with incredulity by those whom it was especially designed to benefit, and it was only after repeated experiments and the lapse of years that its value was recognized and acknowledged. In 1853 it received the first and highest premium awarded to Grain Drills by the Commissioners of the World's Fair, held in the city of New York, and shortly afterward the British Government incorporated drawings and specifications of it in a Report on Agricultural Improvements. It is asserted that repeated experiments have demonstrated that by the use of the drill a saving of fifteen to twenty-five per cent. may be made in seed, with an increase of yield of six to eight bushels per acre over the old broadcast method of sowing."

James Fenimore Cooper

Mr. Pennock was a Democrat in his political affiliations, and his religious views coincided with the doctrines of the Society of Friends. Mr. Pennock married Mary Jones Lamborn, daughter of Robert and Martha (Townsend) Lamborn. Their children were—Thomazine, wife of Isaac Meredith; Jesse, who married Hannah Yatman; Samuel, who married Deborah A. Yerkes, a daughter of John and Ann (Dull) Yerkes; Hannah, wife of Castner Hanway; Barclay, who married Lydia A. Caldwell; Morton, who married Sidney W. Darlington; Edith, unmarried, Joanna, wife of Vincent Bernard; and Sarah, who died in the sixth year of her age. Moses Pennock, father of these children, died August 26, 1860, and his wife, Mary J. (Lamborn) Pennock, died March 27, 1866, aged seventy-four years. They were both consistent members of the State Street Friends' Meeting at Kennett Square, which they helped to organize and establish.

Samuel Pennock, son of Moses and Mary Pennock, was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 8, 1816, and after acquiring a common school education he learned the trade of carriage maker. He then went to Wilmington, Delaware, and for one year was engaged with the firm of Harlan & Hollingsworth, after which he returned to the old homestead and began the study of agricultural machinery, having developed marked mechanical genius along that line. He greatly improved the grain drill which was patented by his father, and in 1859 invented and patented the "Iron Harvester," the first mowing machine in America that was equipped with a cutter-bar that could be raised and lowered without the driver leaving his seat. In 1877 he invented, patented and introduced into use the "Pennock Road Machine," the first practical machine in this country for the construction and repairing of roads.

On September 18, 1853, Mr. Pennock married Deborah A. Yerkes, daughter of John and Catherine (Dull) Yerkes. Their children are—1. Frederick M., born July 5, 1855; he married, December 25, 1880, Cora Webster, and their children are—Donald, born April 22, 1886, died July 18, 1887, and Ruth, born April 24, 1890. 2. Charles J., born November 18, 1858, married May 31, 1882, Eleanor M. Phillips, and their children are—Richard Morton, born May 22, 1883, Samuel, born July 13, 1884, and Margaret, born March 18, 1886; the mother of these children, Eleanor (Phillips) Pennock, died January 26, 1889. On June 10, 1891, Mr. Pennock married Mary M. Scarlet and the issue of this union was one child, Jean Scarlet, born May 6, 1892. 3. Theodore, mentioned at length in the following paragraph:

Theodore Pennock, son of Samuel and Deborah A. Pennock, was born in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, March 3, 1860, his parents having removed to that locality in 1844, there being only thirty houses erected there at that time. He acquired his education at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, completed his course in 1879, and upon his return to Kennett Square was instrumental in the establishment of the Pennock Road Machine Works in that borough, and was actively interested in the manufacture and introduction of these machines into practical use. In 1872 he became an active partner in the firm of S. Pennock & Sons, which was composed of his father, Samuel Pennock, and two brothers, Frederick M. and Charles J. Pennock. This firm was later incorporated under the name of S. Pennock & Sons Company, and continued in business up to March 1, 1886, when it was reorganized under the name of The American Road Machine Company, of which Mr. Pennock was one of the board of directors and also for some time superintendent of the works. He subsequently disposed of his interest in the business, and in 1893 was instrumental in the organization of the Kennett Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, which was later disposed of to the Consolidated Electric Company of Philadelphia, who in turn sold the franchise and property to the United Gas Improvement Company, and this corporation in turn sold the property and rights to the White Clay Creek Supply Company, of which organization Mr. Pennock is one of the board of directors. During the autumn of 1902 Mr. Pennock was an important factor in the organization of the Eastern Condensed Milk Company of Kennett Square and he is now serving in the capacity of president and general manager. He has won an enviable reputation for strict integrity and sound business judgment, and was honored by his fellow citizens by election to the office of councilman. He is a Republican in politics, and fraternally a member of Kennett Lodge, No. 475, Free and Accepted Masons; Kennett Chapter, No. 275, the Centennial Commandery at Cransville, Chester county, and the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine. Mr. Pennock has spent considerable time in travel, visiting the notable places of interest throughout his own and other states in the Union.

October 16, 1883, Mr. Pennock married M. Louise Sharp, daughter of George and Mary Gregg (Hughes) Sharp, the former named being one of the successful agriculturists of Chatham, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are—Theodore, Jr., born July 30, 1884, died October 22, 1899; Mary D., born October 17, 1889; George Sharp, born February 16, 1892; and Herbert Jefferis, born February 10, 1894.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN VERNON, a man of practical business ability and experience, who at the present time (1903) is conducting agricultural pursuits in a highly scientific and progressive manner, was born in West Marlborough township, near Doe Run, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 4, 1855, a son of Ottey and Margaret P. (Martin) Vernon.

The earliest ancestor of whom there is any record was James Vernon, who among his children had a son, Ralph Vernon, born in 1795, who was united in marriage to Ann Ottey, and their children were: 1. Eliza, who became the wife of Clayton Yarnall, and three daughters were born to them: Mary, wife of ——— Garner; Emma, wife of Dr. Lloyd; and Fanny, wife of William Crane. 2. Sarah, who was united in marriage to Jacob Dickson, and their children were: Mary and Mabel, the last named of whom was the wife of a governor of Iowa. 3. Ottey, father of William F. Vernon; 4. Maris; 5. Emma, wife of Edward Styles, attorney for the Pennsylvania Railroad; their children are: Edward, Maris, manager of the Bostonian Opera Troupe, Dorothy; Anna; and Emma.

Ottey Vernon, eldest son of Ralph and Ann Vernon, was born June 9, 1823. He acquired a good common school education, and his entire life was characterized by honesty, strict integrity and fidelity to every duty which devolved upon him. By his marriage to Margaret P. Martin, twelve children were born, all but two of whom are living at the present time (1903). Their names are: William Franklin, born April 4, 1855; Ella D., born March 4, 1857; Edgar R., born April 2, 1860; Maris H., born in December, 1861, now deceased; Howard, now deceased; Sarah; Eugene; Elizabeth; Horace; Dorothy G.; Margaret; and Anna, born July 4, 1878.

William F. Vernon, eldest son of Ottey and Margaret P. Vernon, was reared and obtained his education in the common schools of New Castle, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and after completing his studies engaged in the meat and pork packing business with his father, who was actively interested in that line of industry for many years. In 1881 Mr. Vernon changed his place of residence to the township of New Garden, Chester county, remaining a resident of that locality until 1891, when he purchased his present farm in West Marlborough township, it being formerly the property of Margaret Sharp-less. In addition to general farming and dairying, Mr. Vernon is extensively engaged in the wholesale stock business which has proved a very profitable source of income. He is an excellent farmer, a reliable citizen, and as a neighbor and friend possesses the good will and esteem of the entire community.

Mr. Vernon was united in marriage to Emma Darlington Burn, who was born May 22, 1855, reared in Darby township, and acquired her education in the schools of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; she is a daughter of John and Rachel Ann Burn. Their children are: Norman D., born May 20, 1881; Clifford H., born October 15, 1885; Clarence, born November 14, 1889, and Ralph, born July 14, 1890.

GEORGE BOLTON LOWNES, one of the leading farmers of Delaware county, is descended from Hugh Lownes, who was born near Chester, England, and suffered imprisonment on account of his religious belief. After his release he embarked for America with his wife Jane, also a native of Chester, but died on the voyage, of a disease contracted while in prison, and was buried at sea. His widow, with her four children, settled in 1685, in Springfield township, Delaware county, where she took up a large tract of land, part of which is still in the possession of her descendants. A cave on this land served as their dwelling until they could build the log cabin in which they lived previous to the erection of a house which became the residence of the family for many generations. The log cabin was situated between Woodland avenue and the present home of Joseph Lownes, Sr., and the property owned and occupied by them has never been out of the Lownes name until it was sold after the death of George B. Lowne's father, and a part is still owned by the present Joseph Lownes, a brother of our subject. The cave which was the first dwelling of Jane Lownes and her children is marked by a stone bearing the inscription, "Jane Lownes' cave and dwelling, 1685." The children of Hugh and Jane Lownes were: 1. Joseph, born August 1, 1660, drowned in Darby creek, near Tinicum, when thirty years of age; 2. Hannah, born in England, October 23, 1662, who married Thomas Collier, of Darby; 3. James, born September 7, 1665, who married Agnes Cowpland; 4. George (1), born in England, November 10, 1668, married, in 1701, Mary, daughter of Benannel Bowers, of New England. Their children were: 1. Benannel, who married Alice Williamson, and their children were: Benannel (2); Joseph; Alice; Hugh (2); George; and Mary. 2. George, born in 1708; he died in 1773, and is buried in St. Paul's cemetery, in Chester. His children were Slater, Rebecca, Mary and Curtis. Of these, Slater married Eleanor (name unknown) and they had one daughter, Clarissa, who died in 1837, at fifty years of age, and is buried at Lownes, or Blue Church, Springfield township. Curtis, the brother of Slater, had a daughter who married a Levis, and they had a son, Curtis Lownes Levis. A son of Curtis Lownes, John, born in 1796, married Rebecca Crosby, born in 1797, and they had a daughter, Sarah, who married Crosby Morton, and their daughter, Susan, married Frank Black, ex-mayor of Chester, and was the mother of Crosby Morton Black, now living in Chester, Hannah, daughter of John Lowne, married William Maddock, and had one son who died young, and another named Lownes, who is now living at Ridley Park. Curtis, son of John Lownes, born in 1820, died in 1829. John and his son Curtis are buried at St. Paul's, Chester.

Joseph, son of Hugh (2) and Rebecca (Rhoades) Lownes, was born in 1786, and married first, Rachel Massey, and second, Priscilla Pratt. By his first wife, Rachel, he had the following children: Rebecca, Hugh (3), born 1811, died 1834; William, born 1814, died 1837; Phineas, born 1816, married Emily Lewis, sister of Howard Lewis, and their children were: Anna, William, who married Eunice Stephens, and was the father of one son, Edward, who died at the age of twenty; and Emily, who married Dr. Walter Browning, of Philadelphia. Massey Lownes, the next child of Joseph and Rachel Lownes, married John Jackson, her second cousin, and their children were: Rebecca, Joseph, who married Marie Rice, and was the father of two daughters, Marie and Bessie, the latter deceased; Anna, who married James Monaghan, of Swarthmore, and their children are Florence, Gertrude, Hannah and James. Joseph, son of Jacob and Rachel Lownes, married Minerva Webb, and they celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary, January 9, 1903; no children were born of this marriage. Joseph Lownes was at one time teacher of the Springfield Central School, was school director for several terms, and held the office of auditor for the township, in addition to serving in 1824 as supervisor. He was a man whose advice was much sought in the settlement of disputes among his neighbors. He died in 1872, and is buried at Springfield Meeting House.

George B., son of Joseph and Rachel Lownes, was born in 1825, married Rebecca, daughter of Alban Webb, January 11, 1849, and their children are:

1. William, born January 9, 1850, married, October 13, 1881, Florence Thayer, born July 11, 1854, daughter of Nathan Thayer, who was deputy collector of the port of Boston. Their children are: Nathan Thayer, born March 16, 1883; Rebecca, born August 26, 1884; Emily, born June 20, 1887; and Charlotte, born September 1, 1895.

2. George Bolton, married (first) Elizabeth Cummings, and (second) Mary Datesman; they have a son Edward D. Lownes.

3. Mary Moore, born August 24, 1854, married S. Edgar Levis, of Clifton Heights, and has four children: Florence Webb, born October 11, 1881; Oborn, born February 1, 1885; George B., born October 23, 1890; and Hannah, born March 2, 1895.

4. Hannah Darlington, born April 6, 1856.

5. Joseph, born July 24, 1858.

6. Edward, born August 22, 1860; he attended Westtown Boarding School, and graduated in 1881 from the University of Pennsylvania, after taking the civil engineering course of three years. He became eminent in his profession in Philadelphia and Buffalo, and was assistant surveyor of Los Angeles, California. He was also chief engineer of irrigation operations at Flagstaff, Arizona, and built the Ventura Valley Railroad. He married Viola Healy, and they were the parents of one child, Viola, born April 25, 1896. Edward Lownes died June 7, 1900, and is buried at Media.

7. Francis, who married Eliza Florence Rogers.

8. Minerva, born June 7, 1865, educated at Friends' Select School in Philadelphia.

9. Jane Carpenter, born April 16, 1867, married John H. Webster, Jr., who graduated in the same class with Edward Lownes from the University of Pennsylvania, and is district surveyor for the tenth district of Philadelphia. Their children are: 1. Edward; 2. Mary, deceased; 3. Harold; and 4. Lydia. George Bolton Lownes, a cousin of George B., was supervisor of Springfield township in 1799, also in 1817 and 1818. In 1801 he was overseer of the poor. Each township took care of its own poor until 1806, at which time George Bolton Lownes was an active overseer. He owned nearly one thousand acres in Springfield township, where Morton now stands. No more need be said of him than is on his tombstone at the Lownes church which he founded: "An honest man and a useful citizen."

George Bolton Lownes, son of Joseph and Rachel Lownes, was born January 25, 1825, and has always followed agricultural pursuits. He is the owner of a farm of one hundred and twenty-two acres in Springfield township. His education was received at the Friends' School at Westtown. He is an influential citizen. He married Rebecca Webb.

Nathan Thayer Lownes, son of William H. and grandson of George B. Lownes, graduated in 1900 from the Friends' Select School, and has since secured a position with the Rapid Transit Company in the motive power department.

T. ELWOOD MARSHALL, prominently and actively identified with various important enterprises in Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in which vicinity his birth occurred September 20, 1855, is an intelligent and active business man who thoroughly understands the principles and details of commercial life, and who has won and retained an enviable reputation among his associates for his unswerving integrity and uprightness of character.

Thomas Marshall (father) was born on the farm owned and operated by his father in Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 8, 1818, a son of Robert and Mary (Hoopes) Marshall. He pursued his studies at the common schools of the neighborhood and the private school at Unionville, the latter named being then under the excellent preceptorship of Jonathan Gause. He then entered the grist mill operated by his father, and during his apprenticeship there gained a thorough knowledge of the trade of miller, which qualified him for engaging in business on his own account. He successfully conducted a grist mill on the site now operated as a paper mill by his sons, Israel W. and T. Elwood Marshall, until 1856, and during that year he established a business for the manufacture of paper. This proved a most profitable enterprise, and during his many years of management he built up an extensive and lucrative trade. In religion he strictly adhered to the doctrines of the Society of Friends, and in the sphere of politics he was active and influential in the support of the Republican party. Mr. Marshall was married to Mary Way, a daughter of Moses and Susanna (Wilkinson) Way, the former named having been a resident of Pennsbury township, Chester county, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Their children are: Israel W., who is written of in the preceding sketch; Mary, born March 12, 1852, who became the wife of Dr. Taylor S. Mitchell, and they are the parents of three children; and T. Elwood, further mentioned hereinafter. Thomas Marshall, father of these children, died March 6, 1887. He was survived by his wife, Mary (Way) Marshall, who is living at the present time, (1904).

T. Elwood Marshall, son of Thomas and Mary (Way) Marshall, attended the academy in Kennett Square, Chester county, which was under the personal supervision of Professor Swithin Shortlidge, and this was supplemented by a course in the schools of Wilmington, Delaware. He served an apprenticeship at the trade of manufacturing paper, and in due course of time he became an expert workman in this art. His great energy and fine business ability have been important factors in the success achieved in the operation of three paper mills, in which enterprise he is associated with his brother, Israel W. Marshall. The mills are located in Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, at Yorklyn, New Castle county, Delaware, and at Wooddale, New Castle county, Delaware, and Dr. Taylor S. Mitchell holds an interest with his brothers-in-law in that last named.

Mr. Marshall is a director in the Fibre Specialty Company of Kennett Square, and also fills a similar position in the Eastern Condensed Milk Company, and the Kennett National Bank. He is and has been for some years a school director. His political affiliations are with the Republican party. He is a member of Kennett Lodge, No. 475, Free and Accepted Masons; Kennett Chapter, No. 275, Royal Arch Masons; and New Century Lodge, No. 1122, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

November 3, 1880, Mr. Marshall married Ella S. Good, daughter of John and Ann (Brown) Good, the former named being an extensive hardware dealer of Wilmington, Delaware. Their children are: John A., born March 31, 1882; Henry W., born January 20, 1884; and Estella, born January 12, 1892.

ISRAEL W. MARSHALL, eldest son of Thomas S. and Mary (Way) Marshall, was born at the old Marshall homestead in Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 12 mo., 29, 1850. He spent his early boyhood days under the parental roof, in the meantime acquiring a rudimentary education in the schools of the neighborhood. At the age of fourteen years he entered the academy at Kennett Square, under the principalship of Professor Swithin Shortlidge, and after a two years course there he became a student at the Swayne Academy at Kennett Square, which institution was under the preceptorship of the late Evan T. Swayne, and for two years longer continued his educational career.

He then returned home and shortly afterward became engaged in his father's paper mill, and from the beginning of his active career the young artisan applied himself with the same thoroughness and adaptability that characterized his work in the school-room. No sooner had he learned the various details entering into the art of paper making under the methods employed and used by his father, then he set about to devise and perfect a process for the production of a quality of paper, the fibre of which, after being chemically treated, greatly increased its utility and market value.

RESIDENCE OF ISRAEL W. MARSHALL.

General to Marshall

Soon after having inaugurated these improved methods and processes into the old mill which his father had operated for some time at a loss, the enterprising young paper manufacturer, in connection with his brother T. Elwood Marshall, succeeded in turning an unprofitable and chaotic business and trade into a successful and lucrative enterprise. After operating the old homestead mill for some time, the two brothers found that their trade for the improved product was greatly in excess of the capacity of the old mill, and they erected a new plant at Yorklyn, New Castle county, Delaware, just across the Mason and Dixon line. Here the Marshall Brothers have an extensive and modern mill equipped with special improved machinery and other auxiliaries, also warehouses necessary to meet the increasing demands of their trade, and it would be needless to say that it is one of the leading enterprises of its kind in this part of the country, and that the brothers, by their thrift and enterprise, have been instrumental in the progress and advancement of the entire community. In addition to their manufacturing interests, they are the largest real estate owners in upper Delaware or lower Pennsylvania. They own the old homestead farm of two hundred acres, the farm of one hundred and sixty acres at their Yorklyn mill, and the farm of seventy-five acres at Wooddale.

In addition to his extensive interests in the firm of Marshall Brothers, Israel W. Marshall is a stockholder and director of the Fibre Specialty Company of Kennett Square; he is vice-president and a director of the Eastern Condensed Milk Company of Kennett Square; and a director of the White Clay Supply Company of Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The above named enterprises, and others in which Mr. Marshall is interested, furnish an important nucleus for the growth and development of the boroughs of southern Chester county. He also owns a farm of one hundred and twenty acres adjoining the Marshall Brothers' Yorklyn farm. Fraternally he is a member of Lafayette Lodge, No. 14, Free and Accepted Masons, of Wilmington, Delaware. He was married, October 17, 1877, to Elizabeth C. Mitchell, daughter of Joseph and Hannah M. (Cloud) Mitchell, and their children are: Irwin, born September 20, 1880, died in 1881; J. Warren, born October 30, 1881; Anna H., born August 20, 1883; T. Clarence, born August 5, 1885. Mr. Marshall is a member of the Society of Friends, and an uncompromising believer in the principles of the Republican party. He has never sought a public office, but has been a school director in his district for years, and has refused the nomination on his ticket for the state legislature. Few men have started under such adverse conditions as the subject of this sketch and made the success that he has. This has been brought about by fair, square dealing with all men, and there is no business man in the state who enjoys or could expect to have a more enviable reputation than he has.

MOSES JACKSON WELLS, a leading and public-spirited citizen of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and prominently identified with its agricultural interests, was born in that vicinity, in 1831, the son of Moses and Judith Wells.

Moses J. Wells was reared in his native township, and acquired in the common schools of the neighborhood a practical education which prepared him for the active duties of life. Upon attaining young manhood he decided to follow the quiet but useful calling of agriculture, and being a man of considerable ability, great energy and good judgment, he has been quite successful in this undertaking and is now in comfortable circumstances. For the past thirty years he has conducted his operations upon the farm whereon he now resides, which is equipped with all the needful and improved machinery. Mr. Wells is a Democrat in politics, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and throughout his long residence in this section of the state has been esteemed and respected by all.

He was united in marriage to Mary Afflick, who was born November 21, 1831, in Clifton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Owen and Debby Afflick, and the following named children were born to them: George Edward, born December 12, 1854; William Henry, born April 8, 1856, and Moses Humphrey, born July 4, 1858, now deceased.

ARTHUR ALWYN BENKERT, who is manager of the Faraday Heat, Power and Light Company at Morton, Delaware county, is a native of the county and obtained his education in the public schools, with the exception that for a period of six months he was a student in a private school in Philadelphia, pursuing a commercial course. He then entered upon his business career in the capacity of a clerk in a Philadelphia store, where he remained until twelve years of age. He then entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as operator, and remained with that corporation until sixteen years of age. At that time he secured a position in a freight office operated by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Eighteenth and Market streets, in Philadelphia, continuing in that position for ten years, when he was transferred to the Pennsylvania Railroad station at Morton, serving as ticket agent.

While there engaged Mr. Benkert was united in marriage to Miss Cora E. William, a native of Pittsfield, Massachusetts, and to them have been born two sons. Harry N., the elder, born in Morton, acquired his early education in the schools of this place, and afterward attended the Preparatory School of Swarthmore, being the first student to leave that institution with a scholarship entitling him to admission to Swarthmore College. In the latter institution he was graduated, and is now assistant professor in English and other branches in that college. Irwin Benkert, the younger son, was born in Morton, and having attended the public schools he is now pursuing a commercial course in Pierce's Business College in Philadelphia, and also assists his father in the Faraday Heat, Power and Light Company at Morton.

On severing his connection with the railroad company Mr. Benkert devoted his time to experimenting with electricity at a place below Morton, which he called Faraday Park. His investigation and experimental work resulted successfully, and resulted in his being selected as manager of the Faraday Heat, Power and Light Company at Morton, in which capacity he has since remained, controlling this plant, which supplies the three boroughs of Rutledge, Swarthmore and Morton with light. Mr. Benkert has a comprehensive and thorough understanding of electricity and thus he is well qualified for the position he is now filling. He is also secretary of the Morton Building and Loan Association, and is a prominent and influential citizen whose labors in behalf of the town in which he resides have been effective and far-reaching. He is an active and valued member of the Knights of Pythias, and is also an Odd Fellow. He is also manager of the Morton Public Library, and was secretary of the first organized council of the borough of Morton, but resigned because of a law which permits no secretary of the council to be a stockholder of the borough, Mr. Benkert holding stock in the borough. He contributed to the aid of the Springfield Free Fountain Society, and he is an honorary member of the battalion formed of young men of Rutledge and Morton. A member of the Episcopal church, he has been very active in church work, and is superintendent of the Sunday school. He has also been a school director in Springfield township, and secretary of the school board of Morton, and for a number of years has served on the board of this borough. The cause of education always finds in him a warm friend who does everything in his power for its welfare. Mr. Benkert is a most public-spirited and progressive man and has done much for Morton and the surrounding country, co-operating in every plan for general progress and improvement. He is deeply interested in the promotion of measures for the welfare of the community, and his many excellent traits of character have won for him the high regard of all with whom he has been associated.

JAMES EDWARDS, M. D., of Morton, Pennsylvania, one of the oldest physicians in that section, is a native of Delaware county, and was born September 27, 1818, a son of Garrett and Sydney (Smedley) Edwards. His father owned the farm where Dr. Edwards now lives, and in connection with his farming carried on a business as carpenter and contractor.

The boyhood of Dr. Edwards antedated the present school system and he was sent to a subscription school. Later he worked at carpentry with his father, but he was not content to follow the trade for life. He wished to take a medical course, saved what money he could and applied for admission to Jefferson College, Philadelphia. He paid his way by teaching school during vacations, and using his slender means with the utmost economy, the young student was enabled to finish his course and was graduated in 1847. He opened his first office in Wilmington, Delaware, where he remained for three years, when he went to California. At the end of thirty-two years (in 1882) he returned to Morton, Delaware county, which has since been his home and the field of his professional work.

Dr. Edwards was one of the organizers of the Republican party in 1856, and has voted for all its presidential candidates from John C. Fremont to William McKinley. He is now in his eighty-sixth year, and his political recollections run far back. He recalls cheering during the Jackson campaign of 1828, and vividly remembers the political excitement of the times. He has never been a strict partisan, and the tolerance of his views and the moderation of his life may explain the unusual measure of physical and mental vigor that is his.

SIMON EMERY, prominent among the veteran farmers of Chester county, is a son of Jacob Emery, who was born in 1796, in West Pikeland, and combined with his agricultural labors the business of a dealer in stock. Tradition says that he was a soldier in the war of 1812. He married Abigail, daughter of Henry Slawyer, a farmer of Charlestown township. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Emery: Simon, mentioned at length hereinafter; Eliza, who became the wife of Peter Derry, a farmer of Charlestown, and is now deceased; Esther, who married John Macwilliams, a farmer;

Joseph H. Mac El'Ray

Martha, who is the wife of John Yeager, who has for years been the proprietor of a large hotel, the history of which dates back to the Revolutionary period; Jacob, who is a farmer now living in retirement in Spring City; and Albert, who for a number of years was in the shoe business in Phoenixville, and is now deceased.

Simon Emery, son of Jacob and Abigail (Slawyer) Emery, was born January 2, 1823, in or near Kimberton, Chester county, and was educated in the public schools of his native place, and at the Friends' Seminary. After leaving school he assisted his father in the labors of the homestead until 1849, when he became an independent farmer, taking up his abode on a small farm purchased for him by his father. Here he remained for five years, and at the end of that time, sold the property to Mr. George Derry, on terms by which he was allowed to live on the farm, free of rent for two years. For two years afterward he worked in the iron mines, being employed in taking out ore for the Phoenix Iron Company. He then purchased the farm which has been his home for forty-five years, and on which he has devoted himself to general farming. The estate is one of sixty-five acres, including some valuable woodland. Like so many men of his generation, Mr. Emery can look back upon a military experience, albeit a brief one. During the Civil war he enlisted, but was compelled at the call of duty to return home, his aged parents being unequal to the care and management of the homestead, when deprived of his assistance. The high place which he occupies in the regard of his neighbors may be inferred from the fact that he has filled all the minor offices in the township. For eight years he was a member of the Chester and Delaware Troop, and was also connected with the Philadelphia until it ceased to exist. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religious matters he affiliates with the Lutheran church.

Mr. Emery married Catharine, daughter of George and Sarah Pugh, of West Vincent township. Mr. Pugh, who was a miller by trade, worked the old mill at Brandywine, which was run by water-power, the grain being ground by stone bars.

REV. JOSEPH H. MAC EL'REY, River View, near Trainer, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

"Speak of me as I am. Nothing extenuate, or set down aught in Malice."

This is an excellent motto for such persons as Rev. Adam Clark, D. D., Benjamin Franklin and others, who were careful to write as much of their own life sketches as they could, that others might see them as they saw themselves, for they knew they were sure to be seen later as others saw them.

Only a private citizen during all my residence in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, since 1889, I am but little known in this region. Therefore, whether I was wise or otherwise in permitting a sketch of myself to appear with the galaxy of worthies, generally well known to each other, comprising the present volume, is not now to be decided. My own thought had decided adversely. But I yielded to affectionate solicitude which I more greatly would please than myself. I am not aware of ever having accomplished anything worthy of special or permanent record, in a busy life of what I think has been faithful work. The youngest and only member of my father's family, my genealogy is brief, but, as a pedigree is an indispensable accompaniment, it is a good thing to have. Mine reaches beyond seas. My name is of Spanish origin, but has in it a Scottish strain. I was born in Ireland, Derry county, and came to America in early boyhood, finding a home in the family of a married sister and her husband, Matthew Anderson, two of whose daughters now compose my household.

My primary education was received in the public schools, and later on had a course in an academy, in which I bartered instructions in music for what I needed in special studies. I next read medicine with Dr. Gleason, took the course of medical study, and entered upon the practice of the healing art. Although I had encouraging success, I did not like the business, and I noticed that generally the doctors' pride in the profession decreased as their years increased, and they discovered more and more how little worth is medication intrinsically. The doctors are as ready as their patients to admit that there are too many sickly people, too many doctors and too much medicine. But in these conditions the present is worse off than the past. Shakespeare advised the people of his time to "throw physic to the dogs." But the dogs of that day, just like the dogs of this day, will not eat what they do not need and could not digest, and therefore do not need medicine. There is no country in which such enormous quantities of "doctor stuffs" are consumed as in America, because we are the most enormous eaters and drinkers in the world. We lay every product of the field under tribute to our appetite.

I was fond of public speaking, in which I had considerable practice in lecturing. But, for yet another reason, I decided to make a life change. And here I wish to record in permanent form a deserved tribute of unfading affection to my mother, the first love I knew, and whose sudden mortal passing developed the first sorrow of my young life. At her knee I learned to read and write, before seeing the inside of a schoolhouse.

And other lessons of first importance she imparted and impressed were more valuable than all the garnishings and feterings of highest academic lore. The thrilling pressure of her lovely hand upon my head as she kissed my forehead and said, "your father and I do heartily desire to have you educated for the church," seemed to me indelible, although she did not live to see her desire fulfilled. But the sequel will ever demonstrate the persistent survival in the after life of the lessons imparted intentionally or unintentionally at the hearthstone, by words and acts eagerly noticed and spontaneously absorbed and ineffably recipient, made to preoccupy first places in the new mind. No wonder one of the great mothers of France said: "Give me the first five years of the child, and after that you may do with it as you will, I have preoccupied the heart and mind. The prodigal many go far, but will return." The many will at sight condemn this as an extreme premise of a mere theorist, but their second thought will cause them to return and accept the premise. The great Greek philosopher said, "This world will not come right until it shall have learned the value of the little child." "The child is father to the man" has become a popular aphorism. But in that for too seldomly "applied science of the fireside," let the crowded reformatories, houses of correction, and, later on, the penitentiaries, tell the criminally inexcusable negligencies of parents in not preoccupying the new, open, pure, ready, receptive child mind, in words and practices as shall develop the happy household, the righteous family.

I entered the Theological Seminary at Gambier, Ohio, and was ordained in St. Mark's church, Coshocton county, Ohio, in 1864, where I had officiated most of my seminary course, performing thus double duty. Soon after ordination, the beloved Bishop wrote as follows: "My Dear Mr. MacEl'Rey:—Learning of your felicitous ability of offhand address, I earnestly desire to impress upon your consideration the question of your duty to be a missionary at large, within a radius, of say, two counties for the present, visiting waste places, opening fallow grounds, and ministering in whatever ways may be indicated." The desire was gratified, the work was as laborious as such work should always be, but, during the war period, when all was under unusual tension, political sentiments, uttered sharply, affections keenly tested, family ties rudely severed, many favoring hopes cut, private life became quite chaotic, at least throughout the border states, north and south, and therefore, much of my services soon became fully as "secular" as "sacred." Just before opening a meeting of somewhat unusual numbers and qualities, a gentleman asked me, "do you know how to become all things to all people? If so, now is a chance for you," I replied, "certainly I do know. The first and ever essential element is, speak the truth. The second essential is, speak the truth in love. The third essential is, that the mind and soul of the speaker must be so pervaded by these essentials, as shall secure in both speaker and hearer that earnestness that shall beget conviction." Those effects were gratifyingly produced upon the quite diverse assemblage then present. These conditions have the Divine guarantee upon them, "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free indeed." Again, at a crowded meeting for the ingatherings of Christian commission workers, a company of quite differently disposed missionaries were determined to make peculiar trouble. They came a long distance, from a locality where effectual resistance had been made against all aid of army work. Fierce threatenings of physical hostility were most vehemently used, but the powerful use of words of truth and love quieted the mistaught, and our work proceeded successfully. It was not unusual to be called thirty or more miles to officiate at the obsequies of a soldier. I never declined. I could fill many pages with peculiar incidents connected with the war, from assisting to obtain a volunteer to that of being present at the capture of the Kentucky raider, General Morgan, a handsome, polite and cultured gentleman, who said his company never killed a man. We conducted him and the remaining few officers of his little band to the Columbus prison. Remaining there a brief period, they found one night a convenient boat which landed them safely on the Old Kentucky shore. They had plenty of cash. Mr. G—ll, keeper of the prison, was a kind hearted man. General Morgan was soon after shot at early dawn, in the dooryard of the house in which he lodged the previous night.

Incessant work and that pest—fever and ague—of the middle western states, much impaired my health, and I returned east for recuperation. I took work in the diocese of Pennsylvania, taking charge of St. Albain's parish, Philadelphia. By invitation of the rector I visited a clerical convocation in St. Martin's church, Marcus Hook, where I obtained my first knowledge of Delaware county and its people, in 1869. In the vestibule of the church I was introduced to Mrs. Emma Trainer Shivers, widow of Dr. James K. Shivers. He was graduated through the entire course of the University of Pennsylvania. He was a thorough musician. He traveled through all parts of Europe. He practiced medicine in Delaware. In 1864, he entered the service of the government as surgeon in Sherman's army, serving there seven months. He died suddenly in Sherman's camp, December 27, 1864. His remains repose in the Shivers family vault, in Woodlands cemetery, Philadelphia. At the opening of the convocation alluded to, Mrs. Shivers presided at the organ and led the singing. That evening I said to myself, "I shall marry that lady if I can." Ours was a case of love at first sight, as twenty-nine years of mutual heart union from the hour of our meeting, twenty-five years of which in our married life passed over us without one moment of discord. We might and perhaps should have married four years before, but our case may have verified the old saying, "that the course of true love never did run smooth," viz: even if something might be cast in to physically interrupt the flow. A pressing anxiety moved a near relative, but not one of her own family, to call on her "relating to the visits of that stranger, I am creditably informed that he is an Irish man and a Catholic and an adventurer. I beg you to look into this most important matter." Her voluntary servitor was so earnestly dismissed by refreshing his memory with the facts that his own paternal ancestry were all Irish and Catholics, that he did not call again. Not to be non-plussed, the kind relative importuned Bishop Stevens to help him. The Bishop learned from Ireland "that this Irishman had a pedigree there, that the family were of good repute, were not Catholics, and not very deeply Irish," as the Bishop sometime after informed me, excusing himself for not acquainting me of the case before he wrote, but he thought it better not to let me know till later. I fully approbated the course of the Bishop, and we knew each other better. This bit of romance cleared our course from all attempted obstructions, but, being at that period engaged in the erection of two churches, and knowing that the fortress in which my heart was lodged was impregnable, I decided that as the good time was coming we would wait a little longer.

We were married November 25, 1873, in St. Martin's church, Marcus Hook, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. The Right Reverend Bishop, M. A. DeWolfe Howe, D. D., officiated. In Susquehanna, where I had been officiating some time, we opened housekeeping in a property I bought two years before. The affliction in my eyes from which I suffered many years, led me to visit the celebrated ophthalmologist, Dr. St. John Rosa, in New York. He urged me to abandon the steady ministry as soon as possible. I did so. I turned attention to out-of-doors work, and built several houses in that town. We then traveled one year, mostly in the south. We also spent two winters in Washington, the city all Americans should see. We again returned to Philadelphia, where we resided two years. We next came to the farm near Trainer, originally owned by William Trainer, father of my wife. He sold the farm to his son David, and he (David) sold the farm to us. In Trainer I built seventeen substantial seven-room houses, twelve brick, and five frame, more houses than had been built there during twenty years, and I carried on farming.

During these years I delivered one public discourse each week, generally in Philadelphia, and lectured four months at the National Farm School, Doylestown, Pennsylvania. Such have been some of my pedigree before I put on, while I wore, and since I put off clerical harness.

Emma Trainer, only daughter of William and Mary Trainer, was born in Marcus Hook, Pennsylvania, in 1834. Emma Trainer MacEl'Ray, entered into immortality November 4, 1898, at River View farm, near Trainer, Pennsylvania. Her threefold personality should be comprehensively described as truth, beauty, goodness. These three must compose the complete character. No competent person could minimize these proportions in her symmetrical life.

Benevolence distinguished her,
 Garish displays she could not bear.
 Her guarded tongue and gentle speech
 Obtained for her far wider reach
 Of gracious influence and power
 Than fiery words in scorching shower.
 The pastor's ideal wife she made,
 She was to him a powerful aid.
 At home, abroad, where'er we went,
 She sowed the seeds of sweet content,
 That, amongst all, the precious flower
 Might blossom in the family bower.
 Her's was a pleasant, useful life,
 As child, as maiden, and as wife;
 And, when invited to go higher
 And join the innumerable choir,
 She calmly heard the great surprise
 Of Christ, to enter Paradise.

JOSEPH H. MAC EL'REY

AMOS T. WILLIAMS. Thomas Williams, the pioneer head of a considerable line of descendants, several of whom were active factors in later Pennsylvania history, was a native of Ireland, and in infancy was taken by his parents to Wales, where his young life was spent. When a young man he emigrated to America, took up his abode in eastern Pennsylvania, and became a missionary worker of the Society of Friends, a work to which he earnestly devoted his energies, and by which he was an instrument for the accomplishment of much good. He married and raised a family of children, among whom was Benjamin Williams, born in Chichester, who learned the trade of blacksmith, and who is remembered by older persons in the locality in which he lived as an honest, industrious and successful man. As among the enrolled militia of the state, he was drafted for service during the war of 1812, and he served faithfully and well. His wife was Rebecca Truman, daughter of Amos Truman, of Marcus Hook, who in 1700 drove stage and carried mail between Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Benjamin and Rebecca reared a goodly family of ten children: Amos T., Benjamin, who married Mary Moore, of Delaware county; John who married Jane Sweet, of Delaware county; Sarah, who became the wife of Francis McKee; Jane, who became the wife of Bernard McCormick, of Philadelphia; Susan, who became the wife of George Wright, of Philadelphia; Selina, who became the wife of Edward Pike, of Delaware county; Mary, who became the wife of Jacob Williams; and two other children, both of whom died in infancy.

Amos T. Williams, the mason of Chester whose work during the last more than half century may be seen in thousands of homes and other buildings in that city and vicinity, is a native of Chester, born in 1826. He was educated in the public schools, and afterward was apprenticed to learn the mason's trade. Later on he entered the navy and spent some years in that service, but in 1862, after his return home, he enlisted in the army for service during the war of 1861-65, and in which his record was entirely honorable. Returning home from the army, he turned his attention to his trade, and for more than half a century he has devoted his time to that calling, and with a fair measure of success as the result of his industry.

Mr. Williams married Margaret Harris, daughter of Edward and Margaret Harris Carter, and a descendant of one of Delaware county's prominent old families. The children of this marriage have been as follows: Edward C., who married Anna Newell, a daughter of former state senator Newell; Emma, who married John Willard; William S., who married Elizabeth Shack; Anna, who married Paul Maher, of Philadelphia; Benjamin F., who married Abbe Kellar, of Chester; Charles, who married Anna Tigart; Catherine, Mary, Edgar and John, none of whom married; and Mortimer, Clara, Newton and Rosanna, all of whom died early in life.

ELWOOD H. JAMES, of Sharon Hill, is regarded as one of the leading citizens of the borough, and since his residence here he has by his thrift and enterprise contributed much to the material growth and advancement of the neighborhood in which he resides.

Mr. James is one of a family of twelve children. His father, Morris James, was a son of Joseph and Ann (Morris) James. Sarah Ritner the mother of Elwood H. James, and a lineal descendant of Governor Ritner. Morris and Sarah (Ritner) James had born to them the following named children:

1. John Ritner, deceased; 2. William Morris; married Anna Francis and has one child, a daughter Mary; 3. Mary Ritner, who became the wife of Thomas Beaumont, and has two children; 4. Edward Jones, who married Elizabeth Rodney, and they have three children; 5. Elwood H., who is the subject of this review; 6. Washington W.; 7. Alfred; 8. Margaret, married Frank Epright; 9. Sarah Elizabeth, married Henry Hoskins; 10. Henry B., married Abby Sill; 11. Anna, who resides at home; 12. Eva, who married Thomas Rodenburgh.

SAMUEL BROWNBACK STAUFFER, a successful farmer and highly esteemed citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is a representative of a family which would seem, judging by its name, to have come originally from Germany, and which has been for a considerable period numbered among the residents of Chester county.

Samuel Stauffer was, according to family tradition, born on the homestead and led the life of a prosperous farmer in his native place. Notwithstanding the fact that his modest and unobtrusive merit and genuine ability earned for him the sincere friendship and fullest confidence of his neighbors, he could never be prevailed upon by their entreaties to become a candidate for office, so unwilling was he to exchange the quiet and retirement of domestic life for the agitations of politics. He married Rebecca, daughter of John Brownback, a farmer of West Vincent township, who was descended from an old Chester county family. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer: Mary C., who became the wife of Joseph Friday, who was once a farmer, and at one time conducted a flourishing mercantile business, which has recently declined; and Abram B., who was a farmer, and married Ella Shantry. After the death of his wife, Mr. Stauffer married Mary Ada, daughter of John M. Stauffer, a farmer of East Coventry. The children of Mr. Stauffer's second marriage were as follows: Olive R. P., who is married; Sarah, who is now deceased; John Brownback, and Samuel Brownback, mentioned at length hereinafter. It is uncertain whether the name Brownback is of English origin, or whether it has been corrupted from the German.

Samuel Brownback Stauffer, son of Samuel and Rebecca (Brownback) Stauffer, was born December 1, 1843, and received his education in the public schools of Birchrunville and Chestnut Hill. He has always devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, in which his intelligent efforts and well-directed labors have met with gratifying and merited success. While not desirous of political preferment, Mr. Stauffer has at different times filled the various minor offices of the township, being elected thereto by a majority of his neighbors, who testified in this manner to their appreciation of his many estimable qualities. In politics Mr. Stauffer is a staunch Democrat. He was one of the founders of St. Matthew's Reformed Lutheran church, in which at one time he served as deacon.

Mr. Stauffer married Clementine, daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth Brownback, and they are the parents of two children. The father of Mrs. Stauffer was a farmer of East Coventry, and few men have been more highly respected in the community. He was an honored member of the Reformed church, among the officers of which he was for many years numbered. He reached the remarkably advanced age of ninety-three, and the vigor of his constitution, naturally very great, remained almost unimpaired to the end of his life, he was able to continue his active career within a few months of his decease. The entire community, and especially the church with which he had been so long connected, mourned his loss as that of one who both by precept and example had been for nearly a century a leader in the paths of rectitude and virtue.

GEORGE E. FULMER, a prominent young business man of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, the son of George and Hannah Fulmer, was born January 1, 1868, in East Whiteland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

John Fulmer, grandfather of George E. Fulmer, was a resident of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and his birth is supposed to have taken place in this vicinity. He attended the public schools of the neighborhood, subsequently becoming a teamster and lime burner, which occupations he followed with a large degree of success during his entire active career. He married, and among the children born to him was a son, George Fulmer.

George Fulmer, father of George E. Fulmer, was born April 6, 1824, in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he acquired a common school education. He began his business career by entering the employ of the Cedar Hollow Lime Company, and by the faithful and conscientious performance of his duties was promoted to the position of foreman, in which capacity he served for nineteen years. In addition to this business he was the owner of a farm in East Whiteland township, Chester county, which he operated and from the proceeds of which he derived a goodly income. Mr. Fulmer was united in marriage to Hannah G. McCool, daughter of Christian and Mary Ann McCool, and her birth occurred August 17, 1833; Mr. McCool was a prominent citizen of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Fulmer were: Mary, deceased; Christian M. F., born March 16, 1857, engaged in the lumber business at Farmington, Pennsylvania; Hiram, born November 9, 1859, now engaged in the Spring City Glass Works; and George E. Fulmer. The father of these children died October 6, 1882, survived by his widow, who is now residing in Morristown, Pennsylvania.

George E. Fulmer, son of George and Hannah Fulmer, obtained a practical education in the public schools of East Whiteland township, and this course of study fully qualified him for the active duties of life. In politics he is a staunch adherent of the principles of Republicanism. He married Kate E. Jacobs, a native of East Whiteland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of the late Joseph and Sarah Jacobs.

JAMES LAURENCE MERRYLEES, D. D. S., of Phoenixville, Chester county, widely known as a successful and enterprising dental surgeon, was born September 9, 1877, in Johnstown, Atlanta, Georgia, and received his primary education in the public schools of Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1891. Later he became a student in the University of Pennsylvania, and in 1896 received from the Philadelphia Dental College the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery.

He began practice at 1624 Susquehanna avenue, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and some time after became manager of the United States Dental Parlors, at 531 Smithfield street, Pittsburg. While holding this position he also conducted two offices in Philadelphia: one at 2519 West Eighteenth street, and the other at 1741 Ridge avenue, both being known as the Philadelphia Dental Parlors. He was extremely successful in the management of the Pittsburg office, and under his supervision the business in Philadelphia developed into such proportions as to lead to the opening of an office in the Colonial Building in Ridge street, Phoenixville. It is this office over which Dr. Merrylees now presides, and which is equipped with every facility for dental work in all its branches. The office is conducted under the name of the Philadelphia Dental Parlors, and, while the scale of prices ranges very high, it is so arranged as to bring the benefits of the attendance within the reach of those in limited circumstances.

Dr. Merrylees married, October 22, 1900, Florence P., daughter of Robert and Mary Tyson, of Tredyffrin township, where the family is well known and highly respected, being connected with the Foulks and Russells, two of the oldest families in Pennsylvania. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, by the Rev. Dr. Patterson, of Warrentown. Mrs. Merrylees was educated in Tredyffrin township, and in 1896 graduated from the Wowan's Homeopathic Hospital of Philadelphia with a trained nurse's certificate. Her competence and success in her chosen calling were very marked, and it was while engaged in professional work that she first became acquainted with Dr. Merrylees. Their married life, though very happy, was of brief duration, being terminated in January, 1902, by the death of Mrs. Merrylees, an event which was felt as a personal bereavement by a very large circle.

While the measure of success to which Dr. Merrylees has attained is an unusual achievement for a man not yet in the prime of life, it is felt, by all who know him, to be the result of genuine professional ability, which is destined to win for him still greater distinction in the future.

ROBERT ELLIOTT, one of the most highly respected citizens of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in England, May 22, 1822, and is the son of John Elliott, who, the year in which his son was born, brought his family to the United States. He settled in Philadelphia, but afterward removed to Chester county in order to secure better opportunities for working at his trade of weaving. He was united in marriage to Sarah Jane Elliott, a first cousin, who bore him seven children. Mr. Elliott died in 1875, and his wife passed away in the year 1854.

Robert Elliott, third child in order of birth born to John and Sarah Jane (Elliott) Elliott, was educated in the common schools adjacent to his home, and at an early age went to work at Crozer's mill at Upland where he remained several years. He then removed to Rockdale, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he was employed in a cotton mill for a number of years, after which he located in Trainer, Pennsylvania, where he worked at his trade for a period of four years. While a resident of the latter named borough he enlisted in the One Hundred and Nineteenth Pennsylvania Regiment, served about three years, and during the last year of the war he was severely wounded in the battle of the Wilderness by a ball passing through his head. As a consequence of this injury Mr. Elliott has since been incapacitated for active work, but has occupied his time in looking after his property interests in Chester, Pennsylvania, whither he removed at the close of the war, and where he has resided ever since. In religion Mr. Elliott adheres to the tenets of the Protestant Episcopal church, and in politics to the principles of the Republican party.

Mr. Elliott married, in 1845, Mary St. Leger, who was born in Stayleybridge, England, a daughter of Daniel and Sophia (Vaudray) St. Leger. Daniel St. Leger was born in Queens county, Ireland, a descendant of an honored Irish lineage and of French descent. He was engaged as a machinist in Dublin, Ireland, and followed the same occupation in Chester, Pennsylvania. He came to the United States in 1826, resided in New York city, later in Paterson, New Jersey, and finally settled in Chester, Pennsylvania, where his death occurred June 24, 1877. Sophia (Vaudray) St. Leger, wife of Daniel St. Leger, was a daughter of Thomas Vaudray, whose birth occurred in England, but his parents were natives of France.

WALTER SENIOR, prominently identified with the agricultural interests of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred October 12, 1857, is the son of Thomas and Eliza (Thrift) Senior, the former named being a native of Yorkshire, England.

Upon attaining young manhood, Thomas Senior emigrated to the United States for the purpose of bettering his financial condition, and about the year 1848 began the manufacture of woolen goods in the mill now used as a grist mill in the village of Charlestown. His business steadily increased in volume and importance and was one of the principal industries of the township; he continued in the same line of trade until he began the manufacture of calico prints, which enterprise has claimed his time and attention up to the present time (1903). He was united in marriage to Eliza Thrift, whose father learned the trade of carpenter, which he pursued during the years of his early manhood, but in after life he became a well known and prosperous merchant of Paterson, New Jersey.

The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Senior: John H., a woolen manufacturer, engaged in business with his father; William, also engaged in the manufacturing business with his father; Jennie, who resides at home; Joseph, formerly engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods, but at the present time (1903) actively connected with the carpet business; Walter, engaged in agricultural pursuits; Thomas Lawrence, died in early life, and Thomas Washington Senior, who also died in early life. Mr. Senior has always taken an active interest in the movements tending to the development and progress of this locality and has been instrumental in promoting its improvement.

Walter Senior, fourth son of Thomas and

Robert Elliott

Eliza Senior, after obtaining a good, common school education, entered his father's woolen manufactory, where he thoroughly mastered all the branches of the trade, and this occupation claimed his entire time and attention up to the year 1877. He then settled on the old homestead in Charlestown township, and was extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits for twenty-three years, after which he removed from the old property and settled on his present farm, which is located in the same township. He is a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, in whose ranks he has always been an earnest and indefatigable worker. Mr. Senior is unmarried.

JOHN LEVI HOFFECKER, known throughout East Vincent township as an energetic and successful farmer, and an active and worthy citizen, is a grandson of John Hoffeecker, a merchant of Berks county. He married, and subsequently moved to Chester county, where his descendants still reside.

John Levi Hoffeecker, son of John Hoffeecker, was born September 30, 1834, in Berks county, and about 1840, was taken by his parents to Chester county, where the remainder of his life was passed. He learned the trade of a stone mason and cooper, but never practiced it much, preferring to devote himself to farming, in which he engaged successfully for many years, combining with his agricultural labors the trade of a butcher. For several years he was a director in the Farmers' National Bank of Phoenixville, and was all his life a man who took an active interest in local affairs, consenting to serve as both a member of the school board and as tax collector. He was prominently identified with the order of American Mechanics. His political principles and theories were those of an earnest Democrat. He was a member of the Reformed church. Mr. Hoffeecker married Rachel, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Ricksleir) Hazzard, the former a farmer of Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Hazzard were the parents of two daughters, one of whom, Margaret, married Benjamin, son of Samuel Buckwalter, a member of an old Chester county family, and was the mother of three children. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Buckwalter married Jacob Keiler, a Chester county farmer, and in his latter years an undertaker. Mr. and Mrs. Keiler were the parents of one son, Hosea, who is a carpenter in Spring City, married a Miss Loomas, of Pottstown, and has no children. The other daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hazzard was Rachel, born in East Vincent township, and mentioned above as the wife of John Levi Hoffeecker.

There was also one son, Samuel T., who is now an undertaker in Philadelphia.

The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoffeecker: S. Ella, who is the wife of Thomas Buzer, a teamster of Philadelphia; Alvin, who is a farmer in East Coventry, and married Ada, daughter of Joseph Johnson, a farmer of East Vincent township; Annie M., and John Levi, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Hoffeecker, the father of the family, died in 1896, and his widow now resides with her daughter, Annie M., on the old homestead.

John Levi Hoffeecker, son of John Levi and Rachel (Hazzard) Hoffeecker, was born July 19, 1870, in East Vincent township, where he received his education in the public schools. On reaching manhood he engaged in business as a butcher, succeeding to the proprietorship of the establishment conducted by his father. His prosperity in this calling was such that after fourteen years he was enabled to retire from business, and to purchase the farm on which he has since resided. In 1896 he came into possession of this property, which consists of fifty-six acres of valuable land. The farm is managed in such a manner as to yield the best possible results, and during the threshing season the owner further displays his enterprise by conducting a thriving business with a traction engine. Mr. Hoffeecker has been placed by the votes of his neighbors in the offices of town clerk, auditor and inspector and has discharged the duties of these positions in a manner entirely satisfactory to all concerned. The men and measures advocated by the Republican party find in him a staunch supporter. He is a member of Spring City Lodge, No. 557, Free and Accepted Masons, and also belongs to Phoenix Chapter, No. 198, Royal Arch Masons, and Jerusalem Commandery, No. 15, Knights Templar. He holds the rank of past master in the Blue Lodge. He is a member of the German Reformed church.

Mr. Hoffeecker married Adella, daughter of Nathan and Edith (Brownback) Yeager, the former a farmer of East Coventry township. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffeecker are the parents of a son and a daughter: Nathan A. and Annie E. Hoffeecker.

E. P. BRUBAKER, an active business man now living at Glen Moore, was born at Bear-town, Carnaervon township, Lancaster county. His ancestors were natives of Lancaster county, and were of good, industrious stock.

He was born March 12, 1855, and is a son of Perry and Sarah (Barclay) Brubaker. His father was a plasterer by trade. His mother was one of a family of six children, three boys and three girls, the father being a shoemaker. Mr. Brubaker attended school at Beartown and elsewhere in Lancaster county until he was nineteen years old. For several years after leaving school he followed various lines of work without adopting any particular trade, and then began dealing in live stock in a small way. The business has grown, and he has carried it on successfully ever since. His operations extend over a wide area, and he is looked upon as a thoroughly competent judge of cattle.

In 1891, he married Addie Pfahler, daughter of John Pfahler, of Wallace township, Chester county. John Pfahler was a farmer, was twice married, and had three children by each wife. Addie (Pfahler) Brubaker died of blood poisoning, and is buried at Churchtown, Lancaster county. Her death was a great shock not only to her family, but to the community, for she was widely known and loved. She was a woman of sympathetic nature and earnest character, and her helpful and cheerful personality was ever a benediction. With her husband, she was a constant attendant of the Methodist Episcopal church of Beartown. She was a faithful worker in the society, and devoted to the interests of the church, and her hand was extended in aid and comfort to any one in sickness or trouble. She left four children—Grace, Lottie M., Edward P. and Margaret E.

SNOW FAMILY. The ancestry of Howard A. Snow, who died in Washington, D. C., June 9, 1884, reaches back in unbroken record to the beginning of English settlement in America. The line includes men and women who helped to make famous New England character and New England institutions. The children of Mr. Snow are of the ninth generation in direct descent from Puritan stock.

Nicholas Snow (1) came from Plymouth, England, in the ship "Ann" in 1623. Soon after his arrival in the colony he was made clerk and member of the court. He remained in Plymouth until 1645; when he removed to Eastham, where he held the office of town clerk from 1646 to 1663, and was selectman for seven years thereafter. He was also a deputy in the general court and representative in the colonial legislature. The Plymouth church records say that Nicholas Snow was associated with Governor Prince in the purchase of the Nansett lands, now the township of Eastham, on which a church was built. He was a son of Simeon Snow, a ship builder of Plymouth, England, and was born about 1601. He died at Eastham, Massachusetts, in 1676. In 1627 he married Constance, a daughter of Stephen Hopkins, one of the Pilgrims of the "Mayflower." Mrs. Snow died at Eastham, October 10, 1677.

Mark (2), eldest son of Nicholas and Constance (Hopkins) Snow, was born at Plymouth, May 9, 1828. He was twice married, the first wife being Ann, daughter of Josiah Cook. Anna, the one child of this marriage, was born at Eastham in 1656. The second wife was Jane, a daughter of Governor Thomas Prince, born at Plymouth in 1640.

Nicholas (3), second son of Mark and Jane (Prince) Snow, was born in Eastham, December 10, 1663, and married Lydia Shaw in 1689. Nathaniel (4) third son of Nicholas and Lydia (Shaw) Snow, married Thankful Gage, of Harwich (formerly Eastham). He was a merchant engaged in the West India trade, and owner of several vessels. Edward (5), fourth son of Nathaniel and Thankful (Gage) Snow, was born in Harwich, in 1741, and was married, in 1755, to Sarah Twining. Edward Twining (6), fourth son of Edward and Sarah (Twining) Snow, born at Harwich in 1774, married Emily Watson Dean. Edward (7), second son of Edward Twining and Emily (Dean) Snow, was born in December, 1799, at Newburgh, Maine. He married Sophia Simpson.

Howard A. (8), son of Edward and Sophia (Simpson) Snow, born at Oldtown, Maine, September 25, 1825, married Abby Chamberlain in 1848. Two children were born of this marriage: Willis Howard, born May 16, 1850, and died in September, 1883, and Fannie Pitman, born October 7, 1861, who married Samuel L. Monroe, of Alexandria, Virginia. Howard A. Snow was married a second time, the last wife being Helen S. Carre, of Washington, D. C. The children of this marriage are as follows: Helen Howard, born April 2, 1875; Phillip Carre, born August 22, 1877; Anna Foster, born December 24, 1879; William Pope, born December 15, 1881. Howard A. Snow died in Washington, D. C., June 9, 1884.

PROF. HENRY B. WHITTINGTON. The Whittington family has been established for many years in Pennsylvania, and its members have been found in various walks of life. Just how far back in the early history of the country the annals of the house may go is not definitely to be traced, but it is known that the grandfather of Professor Whittington was a coachmaker during the trying days of the Revolutionary war, and he is said to have manufactured some vehicles for the use of the Continental army. He had a son by the name of Benjamin, who was by trade a maker of surgical instruments, and had his establishment on Market street below Eighth. For thirty years he was connected with the Seventh and Third Street Railway, and held a position with this company at the time of his death, which occurred in 1886. He had married Sarah Darling, and these worthy people became the parents of Henry B. Whittington.

It was in Philadelphia that this last named gentleman came into the world, the date of his birth being July 13, 1832. He was fortunate in being reared in the cultured city of Philadelphia, and the early training which he received in the excellent schools of the city did much to shape his future course. He completed the curriculum of studies at Juniper Street School, and soon afterward began teaching. He taught under the laws of 1854, and spent the next eight years among the mountainous counties of Blair and Bedford in western Pennsylvania. He was constantly gaining experience and he was chosen to the superintendency of the schools in Hollidaysburg, Blair county, which he held until he terminated his services in that part of the state and moved back to his old home in Philadelphia. This was in 1862, and he had been previously married. He made this city his home for a number of years, and his breadth of mind and general ability enabled him to branch out into many lines of work. He taught in Philadelphia for a time, then held a position in the grammar schools of Germantown, and afterwards became supervising principal of the Philadelphia schools. He was also identified with the journalism of that city for a number of years, and proved himself a writer of no mean ability. He was on the staff of the Press, the Evening Herald, the old morning Post and he is noted for his authorship of the work on the history of the early settlers on the Delaware up to the adoption of the state constitution in 1797, which is a valuable treatise on the early annals of the state. Professor Whittington gave up active participation in these lines of work in 1897, and moved out to the pretty little town of Swarthmore in Delaware county, where he established a nice home for himself and family, and now lives in the quiet enjoyment of the pleasures that come to a man who has been able to accomplish something in life, and in those delights which the literary man above all feels.

Professor Whittington was married in 1859 to Miss Sarah Elizabeth McCord, a native of Blair county; her parents, Joshua and Frampton McCord, had emigrated to Blair county from Clearfield, Massachusetts. The eldest daughter born to these parents was Mary Bringham Whittington, who was born in 1860, passed through the public schools in Philadelphia and is now residing at home. The next child was born in 1864, and was named Frank B.; he was educated in the city and now has a position with the Pennsylvania Railroad in Philadelphia. Horace Mann, the last child, was born in 1868, and is now living at home in Swarthmore. Professor Whittington belongs to the Masonic lodge in Philadelphia, being an honorary member of Lodge No. 457. He has always been a Republican and for several years has been judge of elections.

CHARLES W. KENNEDY, deceased, was the son of William Kennedy, and in the prosecution of his business interests, which were principally conducted in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, he was energetic, resolute and masterful and possessed to a high degree those characteristics which inspire confidence in all with whom he came in contact.

Mr. Kennedy was a self educated man, and by his own efforts completed an electrical engineering course, to which line of business activity he devoted his energies throughout his career. He first served in the capacity of telegraph operator, in the mean time pursuing his studies for the position of electrical engineer, and by his perseverance and inventive genius, he largely mastered the great principles as well as the practical work of his profession, and gained considerable prestige in the line of his chosen calling. He established an office and plant in the city of Philadelphia, where he conducted a large and lucrative business up to the time of his death, which occurred September 1, 1902, at Ocean Grove, New Jersey; his demise was the result of an accident which happened in his plant and was caused by the explosion of a carboy of nitric acid. Politically Mr. Kennedy was an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and fraternally he was a member of the Masonic order.

Mr. Kennedy was married twice, his first wife being survived by a daughter, Myra Ferry, now the wife of Francis A. Pocock, of Lansdowne, Pennsylvania. In 1882, Mr. Kennedy married Sarah Harris, who was born at Matawan, New Jersey, in 1854, a daughter of Alexander Hamilton and Maude (Stille) Harris, prominent residents of New Jersey. Mrs. Kennedy acquired her preliminary education at the public schools of her native city, and this was supplemented by attendance at the Glenwood Institute. The following named children were born of this marriage: Charlotte Merrill, who died in infancy; Ruth Merrill, born in Wilmington, Delaware, in 1885, became a student at the Swarthmore College Preparatory School, where she continued her studies until the death of her father, when she put aside her text books and returned to her mother's home, where she is now residing; Elizabeth Foster, was born in Wilmington, Delaware, in 1886, and was accorded similar educational privileges to those which her sister enjoyed. The family reside in a fine mansion in Rutledge, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, located upon the dividing line between Ridley and Springfield townships, this property being deeded to Mrs. Kennedy by her late husband. The household is noted for its hospitality, and the members of the family possess a large and select circle of friends in the community in which they reside, as well as in Wilmington, Delaware.

CHARLES C. TOWNSEND, for many years a leading representative of the agricultural interests of Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born on the old homestead in Thornbury township, April 7, 1865.

The Townsend family was first represented in America by three brothers—John, Henry and Richard—who emigrated hither from Norfolk county, England, about the year 1645, and during the same year Governor Kieft granted them a patent of the town of Flushing. In the meantime John, the eldest brother, had taken up land near New York, but alarms from the Indians and other difficulties caused him to leave his improvements and commence the settlement of Flushing, where he was soon joined by Henry. On account of their variance of opinion on religion and politics with the Dutch authorities, they left Flushing, Long Island, and removed to Warwick, Rhode Island, where they became members of the Provincial Assembly, in addition to holding municipal offices. In 1656 they determined to once more attempt a settlement on Long Island, and with other parties obtained a patent in Jamaica, then called Rusdorp.

Their religion, that of the Quaker, and political zeal soon created more disturbances, and in 1657 Henry was sentenced to pay eight pounds Flanders or leave the province in six weeks, for having "called together conventicles." The people of Flushing addressed a remonstrance to the governor, written by the town clerk and signed among others by Tobias Feake, sheriff, and Noble Farrington, both magistrates, and presented it to the sheriff. The clerk and magistrates were then arrested, together with John Townsend, upon the charge of having induced the magistrates to sign, and he was ordered to find bail in twelve pounds to appear when summoned. He was brought before the council January 15, 1658, and condemned to pay one hundred pounds Flanders, and to remain arrested until it was paid. We have no definite information as to how these matters were settled, but Henry's signature, as witness on an Indian deed, proves that he was in Oyster Bay the same year. He seemed to be much more involved in troubles coming from "countenancing Quakers" than his brother John, yet in January, 1661, two of the magistrates furnished the names of twelve persons, including John and Henry Townsend and their wives, for that offense. John Townsend settled in Oyster Bay between the middle of January and the middle of September, 1661, and Henry must have settled there previous to that date, although he was not admitted as a townsman until November 4, 1661. Nothing is known of Richard Townsend, the youngest of the three brothers, until he appears in Jamaica in 1656. His first wife was a sister of the wife of his brother Henry, and a daughter of Robert Coles.

The next in line of descent was John Townsend, who was a resident of Oyster Bay, Long Island, from whence he removed in 1722 to Chester Creek, Pennsylvania, where he purchased a one-thousand-acre tract of land from Mr. Mercer, who purchased it from William Penn in 1682. John Townsend and his wife Catherine were the parents of eight children, namely: Amos, Phœbe, Rebecca, Ann, Hannah, Mary, Rachel and John.

John Townsend, youngest son of John and Catherine Townsend, inherited his father's large estate in Chester county, on which he resided and to the cultivation of which he devoted his entire time and attention. His wife, Deborah (Jones) Townsend, daughter of Richard Jones, a prominent citizen of Goshen, Pennsylvania, bore him three children: John, who died a bachelor; James and Rebecca.

James Townsend, second son of John and Deborah Townsend, was born July 16, 1756, on the old ancestral estate which he inherited upon the death of his father. His boyhood was spent in attendance at the village school, where he obtained a practical education, and upon attaining young manhood he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He married, and two children were born to him: Eber, born in 1787, and Mary, who became the wife of Joseph James, and they settled on a portion of the Townsend tract.

Eber Townsend, only son of James Townsend, was born on the old homestead in 1787. He was reared on the farm, and acquired his education in the common schools of the neighborhood. Like his forefathers, he devoted his attention to farming, and he erected the mansion which is now standing on the old estate, and which has been the home of his descendants ever since. He married Eliza Chaney, daughter of William and Catherine Chaney, and they had two children: Henry and Catherine, the latter having died in infancy. Eber Townsend died May 9, 1866; his wife passed away January 30, 1875.

Henry Townsend, only son of Eber and Eliza Townsend, was born on the homestead, November 24, 1840. He was educated in the common schools, and, being reared upon a farm, his thoughts naturally turned in that direction when old enough to enter a business career. He filled various local offices, and was the prime mover in the organization of the Chester County Mutual Security Fire Insurance Company, and served as its secretary until his death. He married Emma Hood, who was born in Newtown, Delaware county, and reared in Willistown, Chester county, a daughter of Benjamin and Hannah (Garrett) Hood. Their children were: Clara, died in infancy; Florence, died in infancy; Laura, who died September 2, 1898; Charles C. Politically Mr. Townsend was a Republican. He died August 8, 1882.

Chas. C. Townsend

Charles C. Townsend, only son of Henry and Emma Townsend, was reared on the home farm and educated in the public schools and West Chester Normal School. When fifteen years of age, at the death of his father, he left school and took up the management of the farm, where he has since made a specialty of dairying and the raising of thoroughbred poultry. He has held all the local offices of his township, and is the leader of the Republican party in that locality.

Mr. Townsend was married, October 15, 1891, to Laura Elizabeth Fine, born March 18, 1871, in Easttown, a daughter of Isaac and Eleanor (Oliver) Fine, of Easttown, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Florence, born August 14, 1892; Henry, born October 24, 1893, died at the age of five years; Dorothy, born July 11, 1895; Theodore Oliver, born February 19, 1897, died in infancy; and Miriam, born July 11, 1899.

GEORGE M. SMITH, of Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, has applied the conspicuous business talents, which he shares in common with his brothers, Edward W. and Charles A. Smith, to mercantile lines. His work has been of that substantial order which helps in the upbuilding of a town and redounds to personal profit.

Mr. Smith was born in Delaware City, Delaware, June 15, 1858. He was a son of Dunham and Charlotte (Curry) Smith. His early schooling was in Delaware City, and he afterward attended the Oakdale school in Springfield township. He was ambitious, and during the summer vacations he worked in the brick yard at Morton. In 1887 he had saved capital enough to begin business for himself, and he opened a small grocery store in Morton. He soon had a large share of the patronage of his townspeople, and with the growth of trade took his brother, Charles A. into partnership. Continued prosperity led to further expansion. Another store was opened at Swarthmore, and the prestige and experience of the firm assured its success from the start. After it was established on a solid basis George M. Smith withdrew, leaving the Swarthmore concern in the hands of his brother. Mr. Smith now gives all his attention to the original store in Morton, and has the leading grocery business of the place. Mr. Smith brings to public affairs the same grasp that has given him commercial success. He shows more than the good citizen's interest in school matters, and is alert in all measures for town improvement. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, which he serves on its official board and in the capacity of trustee.

George M. Smith married Mary E. Patterson, of Delaware City, Delaware, the home of his childhood. Five children have been born, two of whom died in infancy. Those living are Florence E., Charlotte Evelyn and John Maxwell.

VICTOR DANIEL SHIRER, actively and prominently identified with the commercial, political and social interests of Swarthmore, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, possesses in a marked degree those characteristics which insure success in whatever profession or vocation they follow, namely: energy, enterprise, perseverance and industry. He was born in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, December 15, 1869, a son of Henry and Mary Ann (Stout) Scheirer (that being the way the father spelled the name, the former named having been a descendant of a German ancestry.

Henry Scheirer (father) was also a native of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, a son of John Scheirer, who was an enterprising and prosperous agriculturist of the state of Pennsylvania. In early life Henry Scheirer served an apprenticeship at the trade of saddler, and this industry engrossed his entire time and attention during his business career, which covered a period of many years. He was an active and public-spirited citizen, loyal and true to every trust reposed in him, and his influence for good was largely felt in the community. He was united in marriage to Mary Ann Stout, born August 12, 1838, a daughter of William Stout, who took a leading and prominent part in the affairs of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania. Their children were—Jane R., widow of Joseph Bertsch, of Allentown, Pennsylvania; Catherine E., wife of S. C. Troxell, of Emmons, Pennsylvania; Ambrose P., deceased; Thomas D., a resident of Scranton, Pennsylvania; John W., a citizen of Allentown, Pennsylvania; George H., deceased; Victor Daniel, mentioned at length hereinafter; Minnie A., wife of L. T. Bachman, of California; Irene M., serving in the capacity of school teacher at Allentown, Pennsylvania. Henry Scheirer, father of these children, died in 1877; he was survived by his wife, who now resides in Allentown, Pennsylvania, and seven children. The family hold membership in the Lutheran church, to the support of which they contribute liberally both of time and money.

Victor D. Shirer attended the common schools of his native town, and by paying strict and close attention to his studies acquired an education which has enabled him to cope successfully with the duties and responsibilities of life. He began his business career as a clerk in a dry goods store, but later established a drug business at Allentown, Pennsylvania, which proved a profitable source of income for a number of years. In 1886 he matriculated at the College of Pharmacy in the city of Philadelphia, and was graduated from that well known institution in the class of 1893. He then located at Swarthmore, Delaware county, where he accepted the position as manager of a drug store owned by Dr. Morton, and during his seven years' incumbency was faithful and true to the interests of his employer. In September, 1900, he purchased the business and at the present time (1903) is successfully conducting the same. His establishment is stocked with a large and select line of drugs, which are always fresh and reliable, perfumery and toilet articles; his extensive prescription department is under his own personal supervision, and his many patrons receive courteous and prompt attention which insures for him their constant patronage. Mr. Shirer has taken an active interest in local politics and in state and national affairs he casts his vote for the candidate who, in his opinion, is best qualified for office. He is an honored member of George Bartram Lodge, No. 298, Free and Accepted Masons of Media, Pennsylvania. Mr. Shirer is unmarried.

JOSEPH M. WEBB, a well-known and prosperous agriculturist residing in the township of East Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born on the old homestead in Chester county, July 5, 1857, a son of William and Phœbe (Pownall) Webb.

Richard Webb, the pioneer ancestor of this branch of the Webb family, was a native of Gloucester, England, from whence he emigrated to America, landing at Philadelphia, in 1700, and four years later took up his residence in Birmingham, where he served in the capacity of justice of the peace. The following named children were born to Richard and Elizabeth Webb, the latter named being a noted minister, who visited this country in 1697 and 1698, and in 1710 paid a religious visit to her native land: William, Mary, Esther, Sarah, Daniel, Benjamin, Elizabeth and James Webb. The father of these children died in 1719.

William Webb, eldest son of Richard and Elizabeth Webb, upon attaining young manhood settled in Kennett, Chester county, where he took an active interest in local affairs; for many years he served as a member of the assembly, and he was also the incumbent of the office of justice of the peace. He was united in marriage, January 22, 1709, to Rebecca Harlan, and among their children was a son, also named William Webb. William Webb, Sr., died about the year 1753.

William Webb, son of William and Rebecca Webb, was born November 13, 1710, and married, September 23, 1732, Elizabeth Hoopes, a daughter of Daniel Hoopes, a prominent resident of Westtown. Their children were: William, Stephen, Rebecca, Ezekial and Jane Webb.

Ezekial Webb, third son of William and Elizabeth Webb, was born in June, 1747; he was married twice, his first wife having been Cordelia Jones, and after her decease he married Elizabeth Hollingsworth.

Thomas Webb, son of Ezekial Webb, was born March 10, 1781, and was united in marriage to Esther Paxton, who was born July 19, 1781. Their children were: Matilda, who was married to Mr. Walters; Mary, who became the wife of Caleb Woodward; Esther, who became the wife of Raoul Jefferis; Jane, who became the wife of William Taylor; Ezekial, born November 25, 1804, died May 19, 1843; Henry, who married Miss Griffith; Thomas, who married Mary Lillie; and William Webb. Thomas Webb, father of these children, died September 14, 1860, survived by his widow, who passed away July 4, 1868.

William Webb, son of Thomas and Esther Webb, was born July 25, 1820, and was one of the prominent and influential citizens of Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was united in marriage to Sarah Jane Coates, who was born December 12, 1820. Their children were: 1. Matilda, died in infancy; 2. Henry Clay, born August 18, 1844, married Ruth Anna Lamborn, and their children are: Frederic F., born June 18, 1870, married Laura C. White; Sarah Jane, born February 5, 1872; Ella C., born October 5, 1873, wife of Walter Windle; Maud, born October 19, 1879; Florence, deceased; Joseph Coates, born July 26, 1888, and Clyde Webb, born September 6, 1893. 3. George Thomas, born July 15, 1849, married Almena Rich. The mother of these children died August 10, 1849. Mr. Webb chose for his second wife Phœbe Pownall, and the following named children were born of this marriage: 1. Sarah Jane, born January 23, 1853; 2. Katherine E., born April 13, 1854; 3. Esther P., born August 27, 1855, wife of Chester Chandler; 4. Joseph M., born July 5, 1857; 5. Phœbe D., born August 18, 1859, wife of Howard Maule, and their children are: Ada E., born September 15, 1884; Lydia C., born June 26, 1886, and Katherine F., born September 29, 1894; 6. Morris S., born October 22, 1861, died August 19, 1863; 7. William E., born April 14, 1863, and 8. Levi P., born November 5, 1868, married Kate Alexander, and they are the parents of three children, namely: John Alexander, born February 1, 1891; Hubert J., born April 20, 1892, and Morris P., born February 28, 1899. The father of these children died December 12, 1897.

Joseph M. Webb, eldest son of William and Phoebe Webb, obtained a liberal education at the common schools of his native township and the Unionville Academy. Being inured to farm labor and therefore familiar with all the details of successful agriculture, he devoted his attention to that pursuit upon completing his studies and has continued it up to the present time (1903). In his political affiliations he is a Republican, always giving his party a loyal and active support.

Mr. Webb married Lorella K. Pyle, who was born January 29, 1859, a daughter of Taylor and Elizabeth May Pyle. Their children are: Bertha H., born February 19, 1881; Katherine, born November 15, 1882; William T., born February 5, 1885, and Lorella J., born March 18, 1887.

BENJAMIN BARTRAM (53) was born in Lower Darby township, November 11, 1837, fourth son and child of Thomas L. (35) and Elizabeth (Davis) Bartram.

He received his education in the common schools of his native place, and after completing his studies found employment as a clerk in a grocery store. He subsequently returned to the paternal farm, where he remained until the breaking out of the Civil war. Enlisting in Company K, Fifteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, he performed the full duty of a soldier for a period of almost three years (two years and ten months), participating in all the stirring campaigns of the army of the Potomac under McClellan, Burnside, Hooker, Meade and Grant. After his honorable discharge from the army, he accepted a position as baggage master for the Pennsylvania Railway, on the Washington & Philadelphia Division, which he has worthily filled to the present time, covering the long period of thirty-eight years.

Mr. Bartram was married, in 1873, to Elizabeth Noble, born November 15, 1848, a daughter of Jesse W. Noble, a native of Ridley township, and Elizabeth (McEuen), his wife, from Philadelphia. They have no children.

RALPH L. HENDERSON. The ancestor from whom descends Ralph L. Henderson, a leading business man of Norwood, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was Matthew Henderson, a native of county Tyrone, Ireland, who emigrated to the United States in 1818.

Matthew Henderson located in Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in farming. He was a man of excellent character, industrious and thrifty, and he accumulated a considerable property, including three farms aggregating two hundred and thirty-four acres, upon portions of which now stand the villages of Norwood and Ridley Park. He was a Presbyterian in religion, and in politics first a Whig, and later a Republican. He married Sarah Irvin, who bore him six children—Mary Erskine, Robert, David, Matthew, Sarah and Irvin.

Ralph L. Henderson was born in Crumlyne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, May 27, 1876. He received his education in the common schools of the county, and after completing his studies took a clerkship in a grocery store. After some years he abandoned this calling and learned the trade of a plumber. Having mastered the trade, he established a business on his own account in Sharon Hill, where he remained for some years. In seeking a larger field, he removed his establishment to Norwood, where he enjoys a prosperous trade. A skilled mechanic and with excellent business qualifications, and known for his high integrity, he possesses the confidence and respect of the community.

Mr. Henderson was married, in 1901, to Miss Ethel R. Shemeley, a daughter of David and Sarah (Johnson) Shemeley, of Camden, New Jersey.

ROBERT M. SIMMERS, of Phoenixville, Chester county, prominent and highly respected as a farmer, a citizen and a veteran of the Civil war, is descended from a family of Dutch origin, his great-grandfather having emigrated from Holland, where the name was in the early generations spelled Simon. Daniel, the son of the emigrant, followed the occupation of an iron moulder, and served in the Revolutionary war with the rank of captain. His son, also named Daniel, was likewise an iron moulder, and helped to make one of the first heating stoves in this country. He was employed at the old Warwick furnace. The name of his wife was Julia Guest.

Robert M. Simmers, son of Daniel and Julia (Guest) Simmers was born March 24, 1846, at Warwick Furnace, and until reaching the age of fourteen attended the common schools. Although but fifteen years old at the time of the outbreak of the Civil war, he responded to the call to arms, and enlisted on July 13, 1861, in Company A, Fifty-third Regiment of Infantry, Pennsylvania Volunteers, which formed part of the First Division, First Brigade, Second Army Corps, in the Army of the Potomac. He remained with this regiment for three years, participating in the siege of Yorktown and the battles of Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, Gaines Hill, Savage Station, the Seven Days' Fight at Harrison Landing, Chantilly, Malvern Hill, second Bull Run, and South Mountain. At the last named place he sustained a severe injury, the limb of a tree, which was cut off by a shell, falling upon him and crushing his shoulder. He lay on the field from evening until nine o'clock the following morning, when he was taken to the hospital at Frederick, and was afterward cared for at Baltimore. At the second battle of Bull Run he was called off on picket duty, lost his way, strayed into the Confederate camp, and was fired on, when he escaped by getting into a hollow tree. He stood by the side of General Phil Kearney, when the latter was shot at the battle of Chantilly. During Mr. Simmers' term of service his regiment lost over eighty per cent. of its members. In consequence of an attack of typhoid fever he was sent to the Jarvis Hospital in Baltimore, and on recovery was pronounced unfit for army duty. At the close of his third year of service, in response to his own request, he was not discharged, but assigned to special duty at the hospital. He again enlisted, in the Seventy-sixth Regiment of the Veteran Reserve Corps, which was on duty in Baltimore until January, 1865.

On his return to civil life, Mr. Simmers supplied the deficiencies of his early education by attending for two terms a private academy in Pughtown, and then accepted a position with Kaler & Wagner, the largest firm in Phoenixville. After remaining with them three years and a half, he engaged in farming, and in 1873 established himself in his present place of abode, where he has since devoted himself, with very successful results, to market gardening.

Mr. Simmers has always been a Republican. In 1864, being then only eighteen years of age, he voted for Abraham Lincoln, availing himself of a privilege granted by special act of Congress to all soldiers who had served three years. He has voted at every election since, always on the Republican side. In 1895, with no effort on his own part, he was appointed by the Hon. Thomas J. Edge to a position in the Dairy and Food Bureau of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Simmers was thoroughly surprised at his appointment to an office, which he has filled in a manner which causes him to be regarded as the most efficient man in the department. He is a charter member of Post No. 45, Grand Army of the Republic, Phoenixville, and of Veteran Corps No. 22, at Palstown. He is also a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics. Since the war he has been in receipt of a pension for injuries received in the line of duty.

Mr. Simmers married, February 11, 1869, Mary E., born in 1847, in Phoenixville, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Gearheart) Jones, the former a blacksmith for many years for the Phoenix Iron Company. Mr. and Mrs. Simmers are the parents of the following children: 1. Isaac, deceased; 2. Roberta, who is a graduate of the public schools of Phoenixville, resides at home, and is now engaged in teaching music; 3. Robert J., Jr., who graduated from Pierce's Business College, Philadelphia, who for ten years has been cashier for an important corporation; 4. J. Walter, who graduated from the Pennsylvania State College, and is now a mechanical engineer, engaged with the Brown Hoisting Machine Company of Cleveland, Ohio; 5. Lizzie Edna, who graduated from the West Chester Normal School, and is now teaching in the public schools of the township; 6. Clayton Miller, who graduated from the public schools of Schuylkill and Phoenixville, after which he spent three years at Lehigh University, where he stood first and second in his classes, and was awarded a scholarship over thirty-one other competitors. In September, 1898, he was appointed a cadet at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, where in the first year he was head of his class in mathematics, stood from three to five all through the course, and was fifth in his class at graduation in 1902. During that year he was engaged in practice on the "Indiana," and succeeded in putting six shots out of six into the target, and, on another occasion, eleven out of seventeen, the best record ever made by any cadet. For this feat he was presented with a medal by President Roosevelt, which was delivered to him with his diploma. For three years he was leader of the academy choir. He is an expert swordsman, tennis-player, and boxer, and for two years held the office of president of the Young Men's Christian Association. 7. Ella P., who graduated from the public schools, and afterward studied for two years at West Chester, and at the Business College of Norristown.

DR. ROBERT AIKEN GIVEN, now deceased, widely known as a successful physician and held in honor as a sincere humanitarian, was a native of Ireland, born in the parish of Ardstron, county Tyrone, March 15, 1816, a son of William and Violet (Caldwell) Given.

He was educated for the profession of surgeon in the English army, and was graduated from the University of Dublin. In 1836 he came to America with his brother, Alexander Fred Given, who went to Alabama, while he himself remained in Philadelphia. There he entered the State University, and took a complete course in medicine and surgery, and was graduated with honors. He was then appointed to the position of physician in the Eastern penitentiary, where he served for seven years. He was next appointed to the position of physician at the Pennsylvania Insane Asylum, but after three years he engaged in private practice in Philadelphia, in which he continued until 1859.

During his years of valuable experience and observation both in the penitentiary and the insane asylum, as well as in his private practice, Dr. Given had made a special study of nervous diseases, and he became convinced that many serious mental troubles could be averted if the nervous system could be restored in time. He eventually removed to Clifton, where he purchased the beautiful estate now known as Burn Brae, and proceeded to carry out his ideas. This most ideal spot, comprising sixty acres of gently rolling land, Dr. Given devoted entirely to the purposes he had at heart. The grounds afforded exercise and recreation spots for his patients, and the pure, invigorating air lent its aid to the restoring of disordered nerves. Such surroundings, warm sympathy expressed in person through words and deeds, and careful direction as to diet and habits, were the dependence of Dr. Given in the treatment of his patients. In other words, he built up a real home for those who came under his charge, usually to the number of forty persons, and watched over them not only as a physician, but as a guardian and friend. The tables were supplied with vegetables, fruits, milk, butter and eggs, produced upon the estate, and the ice used in the summer was taken in winter from the two streams of crystal clearness which intersected the property. During his conduct of the institution, Dr. Given brought health and a new life to hundreds of invalids, and made for himself a name as a real benefactor of his fellow-man. Nor did his works cease with his death, for his tasks were taken up by those who were his kinsmen, and who, through association with him, had caught that inspiration which had made his own life a blessing to all about him.

R. A. Givens

J. W. Phillips

The wife of Dr. Given was Elizabeth Lapsley Peebles, a daughter of the Rev. John and Jane (Lapsley) Peebles, of Philadelphia, a most cultured and energetic woman, who was his real helpmeet in his every endeavor, and who, after his death, devoted herself to the work which had claimed the service of her talented husband. Born to them were four children: 1. Singleton Alexander Mercer Given, now deceased, who became a physician. He married Albertine Pritchett, and three children were born to them: James Cresson, Kennett Caldwell and Frances Mercer. 2. Jeanette, who married Dr. James Phillips. 3. Alexander Frederic, who married Theodora Hopkins, and to whom was born two children—Renald and Beatrix Knilaus Given. 4. Bessie Lapsley, who married Arthur Lovell, and to them were born three children,—Elizabeth, Dorothy Fox and Constance.

Dr. Phillips, a son of the Rev. Samuel H. and Martha Phillips, was educated at Toronto, and completed his professional studies in England, where he was graduated from the Royal College of Surgeons. Returning home, he established himself at Syracuse, New York, in a private practice, which he abandoned to become an assistant to Dr. Given, at Burn Brae. After the death of Dr. Given, in January, 1888, Dr. Phillips, in association with Dr. S. A. Mercer Given, conducted the institution until the death of Dr. Phillips, in September, 1900. Dr. S. A. Mercer Given then directed the management, in connection with Dr. N. S. Yawger, until February, 1901, when occurred the death of the former named. Since that time, the institution has been maintained under the direction of the family of Dr. Robert Aiken Given, with Dr. Yawger and Dr. C. J. Bolles, both honor graduates in their respective departments, as capable assistants. During all the various changes wrought by death, the Burn Brae Home has been conducted according to the plans laid down by its founder, and at the present time is recognized as one of the most useful and successful remedial institutions in the state.

Mrs. Phillips survives her husband, and, with her, their three children, Elsie M., Mildred and Elizabeth, who are being carefully educated and afford every promise of usefulness in future life.

WILLIAM PIERCE PENNYPACKER, one of the leading farmers of East Pikeland township, belongs to one of the old agricultural families of the county. He is a grandson of Jonas Pennypacker, whose son Nathan was born on the homestead in East Pikeland township. Nathan Pennypacker was a prominent man in the community, taking an active part in politics, and holding for a number of years the office of school director. He married Lydia Brownback, and died in 1887 on the homestead, where his life had been spent.

William Pierce Pennypacker, son of Nathan and Lydia (Brownback) Pennypacker, was born November 26, 1845, on the homestead in East Pikeland township, and was educated in the public schools of his native place and at a boarding school in Phoenixville. He supplemented this course of study by a period of attendance at the Pierce Business College in Philadelphia, and then returned to the home farm, where he remained, assisting in the care and management of the estate, until the death of his father, when he succeeded to the ownership of the property. Here, in his ancestral home, he has since led the life of an energetic, prosperous farmer, representing the fourth generation of his family which has tilled the same acres and occupied the same house. Following the example of his father, he has participated actively in public affairs, and is now serving his second term as justice of the peace. He has always been elected to office by the Republican party, of which he is a strong and faithful member. He has for a long time held the position of secretary to the Reformed church in East Vincent, to which he and his family belong. He has also been for years a member of the consistory.

Mr. Pennypacker married Emma O. C., daughter of Jacob and Hannah Christman. The former, a native of East Vincent township, was a farmer in East Coventry, where he held several minor offices. Mr. and Mrs. Pennypacker are the parents of two children; Colket Rissel, who was born September 26, 1875, on the homestead, was educated in the public schools of East Pikeland, and is now assisting his father on the home farm; and Alma Samanna, who received her education in the public schools of the township, and at the Phoenixville high school under the tuition of Professor Taylor. She also resides on the homestead. It is worthy of note that the family continues to recruit the ranks of the Republicans, the son of Mr. Pennypacker being, like his father, a staunch supporter of their doctrines both in theory and practice.

JAMES ANDERSON. The pioneer ancestor of the Anderson family, of which James Anderson, a successful agriculturist of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a worthy representative of the fifth generation, was James Anderson, a Scotch emigrant, who married Elizabeth Jerman, a daughter of Thomas Jerman, a noted Quaker preacher and thrifty miller, and settled very early in the Chester Valley. Mr. Anderson was the owner of about one thousand acres of land, on which was located one of the most historic residences in Chester county. In the fall of 1777 the British passed through Chester county in the campaign for the possession of Philadelphia, and they committed great depredations at this house. The family escaped to a place of secrecy north of where Phoenixville is now located, and the soldiers destroyed the furniture and other property, including cows, beef cattle, sheep, swine and fowls: they preserved the meat in the house, as boards with blood stains on them still give ample evidence.

Captain Patrick Anderson, son of James and Elizabeth Anderson, was born July 24, 1719, on a farm on Pickering creek, in what is now Schuylkill township, and was the first child of European parents born within the limits of the old township of Charlestown. He acquired his education in the schools of Philadelphia, and later taught school in his father's house. Upon the death of his father he came into possession of the old homestead, upon which he built an extensive saw-mill. He was thrifty and enterprising, and was the owner of a large number of slaves. In 1774 he was elected one of the Chester county committee of which Anthony Wayne was chairman. In March, 1776, he was appointed by the assembly senior captain of a Pennsylvania battalion of musketry, and, though then considerably advanced in years, he accepted the position and recruited a company. This battalion, under the command of Colonel Samuel J. Atlee, was placed on the right of the American army at the battle of Long Island, fought with great gallantry, capturing from the British and holding a height, and were instrumental in saving the army from destruction. Later he was placed in command of the first company of the state regiment on foot, and later of a company in the Thirteenth Pennsylvania Regiment in the Continental line. He was elected a member of the assembly in October, 1778, was re-elected in 1779, 1780, and 1781, and as a member of that body voted against all efforts to abolish slavery in Pennsylvania. In 1781 he was appointed by the Assembly one of the board of commissioners to provide for the navigation of the Schuylkill river. Captain Anderson was married three times; his first wife was Hannah Martin, and their children were: Rebecca and Harriet. His second wife was Elizabeth Morris, and their children were: Isaac, James and Elizabeth. His third wife was Ana Beaton, and seven children were the issue of this union. He died in 1793, and his remains were interred in the yard of the Valley Episcopal church.

Isaac Anderson, son of Patrick and Elizabeth (Morris) Anderson, was born November 23, 1760, and during his boyhood days often accompanied the Indians, who still frequented the valley of the Pickering, on their fishing and hunting expeditions. During the Revolutionary war he was one of the squad who visited William Moore and searched for arms, and in the fall of 1777 during the British invasion, he led a company of militia to the assistance of Washington, and while the army lay at Valley Forge he carried dispatches to and from the Congress at York. He was a Jeffersonian Democrat, and after the close of the war was appointed a justice of the peace. In 1802 he was elected to the assembly, and from 1803 to 1807 he was a member of the State legislature. In the Monroe campaign in 1816 he was a presidential elector, and he was also at one time prominently suggested as a candidate for the governorship. He was one of the first Methodists in the state of Pennsylvania, he and his wife, Mary (Lane) Anderson, (a great-great-granddaughter of Samuel Richardson, one of the earliest Philadelphia judges and provincial councilors, and also a great-great-granddaughter of Barbara Aubrey, a first cousin of William Aubrey who married Letitia Penn, and whose ancestor, Sir Reginald Aubrey, was one of the Norman conquerors of Wales in the twelfth century), having been converted in 1780, and he frequently preached for that sect. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were the parents of eleven children; his death occurred October 27, 1838.

Joseph Anderson, son of Isaac and Mary (Lane) Anderson, and father of James Anderson, was born on the old homestead in Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a prominent and influential citizen of the community, and was united in marriage to Rebecca Warkhiser, a daughter of Colonel Warkhiser, who served as a private in the Revolutionary war, a colonel in the war of 1812, and was a member of the state legislature.

James Anderson, son of Joseph and Rebecca Anderson, was born on the old homestead in Phoenixville, Schuylkill township, Chester county, June 9, 1850. He obtained an excellent education in the schools of his native township, and since attaining his majority has devoted his time and attention to farming, in which occupation he has been very successful. Mr. Anderson is an Independent in politics, but his views coincide frequently with those of the Republican party; he has served his township in the capacity of school director for nine consecutive years. He is a man of great energy, decision, and firmness of character, inflexible in his principles and the maintenance of that which he believes to be right.

On March 17, 1880, Mr. Anderson married Annie P. Justin, a daughter of Jones and Elizabeth (Pennypacker) Justin, representatives of prominent families of Chester county, and a cousin of Ernest Justin, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Isaac L., born April 17, 1882, resides at home, and Elizabeth T. Anderson, born in August, 1884.

EDWARD BROWNBACK SOUDERS.

Among the representative citizens of Schuylkill township, who located about two and a half miles southeast of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of Edward B. Souders, who was born in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, August 8, 1870, a son of Samuel H. and Lucetta J. (Brownback) Souders, who are residents of Philadelphia, the former named being a representative of the Prudential Insurance Company of America.

During his early life Edward B. Souders acquired a liberal educational training which thoroughly qualified him to cope with the duties and responsibilities of an active business career. He was a student in the public schools of Philadelphia and Phoenixville, at Pennington Seminary, the State Normal School at West Chester, Ursinus College, and Pierce's Business College in the city of Philadelphia, where he completed his course. He gained his first practical experience in his uncle's grocery store at Centerville, which he successfully managed for two years, and for a like period of time he served as postmaster of Centerville, administering the duties of the office with promptness and efficiency. The following year he spent with his aunt on a farm in the vicinity of Malvern, after which he moved to Phoenixville and conducted a grocery store for one year. He then changed his place of residence to Chester Valley, conducted a store there for some five years, and at the expiration of this time, in August 1898, purchased his present home in Schuylkill township, Chester county. For a short period of time he was employed with the firm of Gimball Brothers in Philadelphia, and was an employee of the Acme Tea Company for six months, during which time he opened several stores in different localities for them. Since dissolving this connection he has superintended the work of his farm, which consists of seventy acres of rich and arable land. He is industrious and persevering, practical and progressive in his ideas, has his farm equipped with the most modern agricultural implements, and therefore merits a large degree of success in his undertaking.

Mr. Souders married, April 12, 1893, Margaret F. Davis, a daughter of Albert K. and Matilda F. Davis, of Howellsville, Chester county. Their children are Edward D. and Annie Lucetta Souders. Mr. Souders is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and his wife holds membership in the Presbyterian church.

LEWIS HENRY DAMPMAN, a well known and highly respected citizen of Warwick township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a native of that locality, the date of his birth being January 28, 1856. He is a son of David and Elizabeth (Bender) Dampman, and grandson of John and Maria (Hustenstien) Dampman, the two latter named having died at a ripe old age, and their remains were interred in Chester county, Pennsylvania, the place of their nativity.

David Dampman (father) was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania February 8, 1803. He obtained the education afforded by the common schools of that day, and this instruction was supplemented by judicious reading and a comprehensive observation of men and things. He was one of the pioneer merchants of the county, gained a large amount of financial success in his enterprises, and his name was synonymous with honorable transactions and strict business principles. He died in 1879. His wife, Elizabeth (Bender) Dampman, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 2, 1820, and died in 1893; she was the daughter of John and Lizzie Bender. Their children were: Lewis Henry, mentioned at length hereinafter; George, born in Chester county, May 22, 1859; John, born in Chester county, August 2, 1884, married Mary Jones; and the following named members of the family are deceased—Hannah, David, Lizzie, Joseph and Benjamin Dampman.

Lewis H. Dampman was reared in his native township of Warwick, attended the common schools, and after completing his studies, at the age of sixteen years, began work on a farm. Being naturally quick and observant he soon became thoroughly familiar with the routine work, and for a period of almost six years he faithfully and conscientiously performed all the duties allotted to him. Since then, by exercising the most commendable characteristics—energy, prudence and industry—he has been enabled to maintain a comfortable home for his family. He is upright and high principled in his character, and as a neighbor, friend and citizen is highly esteemed in the community.

Mr. Dampman was united in marriage, October 2, 1876, to Sarah Hummel, who was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Henry and Lydia Hummel. Their children are: 1. Lydia, born August 15, 1877, now the wife of David Thompson, of Chester county, and mother of two children—Ethel and James Thompson; 2. William, born June 2, 1878, married Sarah Pauly, a native of Chester county; 3. Daniel, born January 28, 1880, is unmarried and engaged in farming pursuits; 4. Annie, born July 18, 1882, unmarried; 5. Clara, born September 22, 1883, unmarried; 6. Cleveland, born July 28, 1885, is a farmer by occupation; 6. Emma, born May 2, 1888, unmarried; 7. Sarah, born April 9, 1890. All these children were born in Chester county, Pennsylvania.

JAMES GRAHAM LYONS, of Wallace township, Chester county, is a native of Pennsylvania, born in Fulton county, June 13, 1843. His parents were John M. and Catherine Virginia (Ross) Lyons. The father was a son of James Lyons, who was born in Huntingdon county, in 1786, and died in March, 1872.

The children of John M. and Catherine (Ross) Lyons were: Bruce, who married Mary Patterson, in August, 1841; Frances, who was born October 10, 1839, and married George Chestnut, in 1867; James Graham, before named; John W., born January 26, 1845, who married Mary Ainsley, in 1880; William, Mabel (deceased), Charles, (deceased) and Alice.

James G. Lyons, son in the family last named, began his education in the township schools, and afterwards attended Millwood Academy. He had barely completed his twentieth year when, on July 3, 1863, he enlisted in the Twenty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, with which he participated in the stirring campaigns of the Army of the Potomac, and in numerous sharp engagements, until February 20, 1864, when he was honorably discharged at Chambersburg. In 1879 he took up his permanent abode in Wallace township, where he has since been engaged in the occupation of farming. Bearing a full share of a citizen's duties in the support of religious and educational institutions, he has never sought political preferment.

Mr. Lyons was married, September 23, 1879, to Mrs. James Buchanan, whose maiden name was Mary M. Atkins. She was born October 20, 1841, daughter of John and Margaret D. Atkins, of Chester county. She is of an old and honorable family, her paternal grandparents being William and Susan Atkins; her maternal grandparents were Thomas and Mary McClune, and her maternal great-grandmother was Emily Starling. Mrs. Lyons preserves with commendable pride an old land grant made by William Penn to one of her ancestors. The ancient document, executed in 1765, is written upon genuine parchment, and bears the kingly seal of his majesty George III. The deed covers, in part, the farm upon which Mrs. Lyons now resides, and the tract has ever remained in possession of some branch of the Lyons family from the time of the original grant. Mrs. Lyons is also the owner of a unique collection of almanacs covering all the years between 1800 and the present day.

EDWARD BAKER ASHBRIDGE. The family to which Edward B. Ashbridge belongs is of English-Welsh extraction, and is among the oldest in Pennsylvania, having been planted here as early as 1698, by George Ashbridge, who purchased a grant of land from William Penn in that year. He came from England and settled first in Philadelphia, later removed to Edgmont, then in Chester, now Delaware county. On August 23, 1701, at Providence meeting, George Ashbridge married Mary Malin, and the following named children were born to them: John, George, Jonathan, Mary, Elizabeth, Aaron, Hannah, Phebe, Lydia, and Joseph. The mother of these children died February 15, 1728, and on January 6, 1730, Mr. Ashbridge married Mrs. Margaret Paschall; his death occurred at Chester in 1748.

George Ashbridge, second son of George and Mary Ashbridge, was born December 19, 1704, and in 1732 he came to Goshen township, Chester county, and took possession of the farm purchased for him by his father, the same having come down by will to the present owner, Edward B. Ashbridge. George Ashbridge was elected to the assembly in 1743, and continued to be elected each year until his death, which occurred March 6, 1773. He married Jane Hoopes in 1730, and their children were—Mary, George, William, Susanna, Phebe, Jane, Daniel, Joshua and Lydia.

Joshua Ashbridge, grandfather of Edward B. Ashbridge, was born on the old farm, September 17, 1746, and subsequently became one of the viewers who located the present almshouse of Chester county. On November 4, 1773, he married Jane Davis, and five children were born to them: Daniel, Joseph, Thomas, Lydia and Hannah. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ashbridge were members of the Society of Friends; his death occurred September 4, 1820, at an advanced age.

Joseph Ashbridge, father of Edward B. Ashbridge, was born on the old homestead September 5, 1777, and acquired his education in the common schools of the vicinity. Being familiar with farm work from his boyhood, he followed that occupation upon attaining young manhood, and for more than sixty years disposed of his produce in the market of Philadelphia, taking the goods there with a wagon and team of horses. Mr. Ashbridge was a prominent member of the community, and was chosen to serve in the various town offices, which he filled both creditably and acceptably. His religious membership was with the Society of Friends. He was united in marriage to Miss Mary Baker, daughter of Edward Baker of Edgmont. Their children were: Jane, Susan, William, Mary Ann, John, Edward Baker, J. Davis, Henry C., and Anna M.; of this family Edward B. and J. Davis are the only survivors. Mr. Ashbridge died May 10, 1847.

Edward B. Ashbridge was born on the old homestead in East Goshen township, Chester county, July 28, 1827. Until he attained the age of fourteen years he was a pupil in the district schools, after which he went to Unionville, and under the preceptorship of Jonathan Gause and Joseph Strode studied algebra, surveying and navigation. In 1845 he engaged in the occupation of teaching school, and after being thus employed for a year and a half his father died; he then returned home and assumed the management of the home farm, which was then almost a wilderness. He cleared the ground of the stones and brambles, and for twenty years devoted it to the pasturage of cattle, and in the meantime followed his trade of surveyor, and is probably able to locate more corner stones in Chester county than any other man. Politically, Mr. Ashbridge is a Republican; he has served as county surveyor for six years, (two terms); auditor of the township for thirty-six years, and also as school director. He is a faithful attendant at the services of the Friends' Meeting House.

On October 2, 1851, Mr. Ashbridge married Miss Susan B. Seal, born August 3, 1830, daughter of Jesse and Sally (Sharpless) Seal. Their children are: Charles, born October 30, 1853, died June 5, 1860, at the age of seven years; Clara, born June 17, 1856, died March 23, 1883, aged twenty-seven years; Sally S., born April 17, 1859, died aged seven months, November 30, 1859; Howard, born March 28, 1861, a successful farmer, married Rebecca Smedley, daughter of Chockley Smedley, and their two children are: Carlton, born February 22, 1892, and Elva M., born October 22, 1895; E. Lewis, born September 21, 1866, who is unmarried and resides at home; Ann Mary, born May 4, 1868, wife of Joseph H. Hilton; their children are: Stella, born March 1, 1899, and Mary A., born May 17, 1902.

WILLIAM PENN MATLACK, deceased, through a long, useful and active life won the confidence and respect of his fellow-men, and when his life's labors were ended the community mourned the loss of one of its valued citizens.

He was born on the old Matlack homestead in West Goshen township, Pennsylvania, October 3, 1805, the son of Jonathan and Sally (Messer) Matlack. Jonathan Matlack was a man of remarkable industry, energy and enterprise, and prosecuted his business interests, which consisted chiefly of transactions in real estate and dealing in stocks, in a manner that brought to him rich returns for his labors. He was the owner of a large tract of land in West Goshen and a hotel in West Chester, from the rental of which he realized a goodly income. He married Sally Messer, who was a kind-hearted woman and beloved by all who had the honor of her acquaintance, and the following named children were born to them: George M., Richard I. and William Penn Matlack.

William Penn Matlack obtained a liberal education in the schools of his native county, after which he pursued a course of study to qualify him for admission to the bar of Pennsylvania, but, abandoning this profession, he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, which he continued to follow up to the time of his decease, meeting with that success which invariably attends industry, perseverance and an integrity of character that gains for its possessor the esteem and confidence of his friends.

In 1864 Mr. Matlack was joined in marriage to Miss Larissa D. Ladd, who was born in Mississippi, a daughter of Joseph A. and Martha (Lagnias) Ladd. Their children are: Martha Mary, died at the age of nine years; Evangeline, and Alda Peora Matlack, who died at the age of five months. Mr. Matlack died in September, 1883, survived by his widow, who resides on the old homestead.

LEWIS WALTON, for many years one of the most successful farmers and highly respected citizens of Highland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a representative of a family of English origin, the American branches of which were founded by four brothers—Nathaniel, Thomas, Daniel and William—who came to this country in the ship "Welcome" in 1682, and among the one hundred passengers, most of whom were Friends, was the founder of the state of Pennsylvania, William Penn. The four Walton brothers settled in the vicinity of Byberry, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Isaac Walton, presumably a brother of the four above mentioned, was the father of eight sons and one daughter, among whom was Benjamin Walton.

Benjamin Walton, son of Isaac Walton, was united in marriage to Abigail Gilbert, and the issue of this union was seven children: 1. Benjamin, born September 5, 1760, was a resident of Abington, Montgomery county, from whence he removed to Gum Tree, Chester county, and some of his descendants are residing at the present time at Ercildou, West Chester, and throughout Chester county. 2. Nathan, mentioned hereinafter. 3. Rebecca, born September 26, 1765. 4. Joseph, born March 5, 1768. 5. Sarah, born October 10, 1770, became the wife of Isaac Hayes, and their children were: 1. Benjamin, who married Ann Borton, and the children of this union who attained years of maturity were: J. Borton, Mary, wife of William Baily, of West Chester, Pennsylvania; Dr. Isaac J., deceased; Edward, who was married, and is now deceased; and Ann, also of West Chester, Pennsylvania. 2. Mary, who became the wife of Daniel Thompson, and their children were: Isaac, deceased; Samuel, who is married, and resides in the city of Philadelphia; Elizabeth Ann, who became the wife of Mr. Hutten, and they reside in London Grove, Chester county; Sarah, deceased; Mary, deceased. 3. Isaac. 4. Sarah. 5. Israel. 6. Rachel, born August 8, 1773. 7. Elizabeth, born October 10, 1776.

Nathan Walton, second son of Benjamin and Abigail (Gilbert) Walton, was born February 20, 1763. He removed from Byberry, Montgomery county, to Chester county and took up a tract of land near the village of Gum Tree, in what is now Highland township. His occupation in life was that of a farmer, and in religious matters he followed in the footsteps of his ancestors, having been a member of the Society of Friends. He married Ann Roberts, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and their children were: 1. Jonathan, whose grandson, Jonathan L., is a resident of Salem, Ohio, and he also has a sister Rebecca Roberts, who resides in Damascoville, Ohio. 2. Lewis, mentioned hereinafter. 3. Abner, who married Lydia N. Taylor, and they were the parents of seven daughters, namely: 1. Susanna T., wife of Dr. Isaac D. Johnson, of Kennett Square, Chester county, and at her death she left two daughters: Laura I. Johnson and Maud Davis. 2. Sarah Ann, now deceased, was the wife of William Clark, and after his death she removed with her surviving children to Dakota. 3. Anna Maria, who became the wife of Robert Cochran, and their children were: Charles, Frederick, Harry and Percy; since the death of her husband, Mrs. Cochran has resided with the latter named child. 4. Elizabeth T., who died unmarried. 5. Priscilla, who was twice married, and is now deceased, she left two daughters: Louisa, who was married to Dr. Baggs, and after his death she went abroad and has since resided there with her children; and Eva S. Temple, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. 6. Isabel, who became the wife of Mr. Atherton, and she bore him a number of children. 7. Abneretta L., who became the wife of Mr. Wood, and they now reside in Brooklyn; her mother, who is now well advanced in years, resides with them. 4. Jesse, who died in 1827. 5. William, who died in 1827. 6. Nathan, who was born 6 mo., 13, 1801, and now resides on the farm where his father settled in Highland township, Chester county. He was twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth Truman, who at her death left two daughters: 1. Mary Ann, who was the wife of the late Chalkley Coates, and they were the parents of the following named children: Malissa, Jennett, Eva, wife of William Moore, of Philadelphia; Irene, who was the wife of William Trente, and at her decease left two children; Elizabeth, deceased; and Ida, who resides with her mother in Philadelphia. 2. Eliza, now deceased. Nathan Walton married for his second wife Elizabeth Barnard, and their children are: 1. Margaret W., who became the wife of Dr. J. Comly Brosius, now deceased, and they were the parents of the following named children; Lewis W., who married Elizabeth Acker, and their children are: Malcolm A. and Joseph W. Borisus. Dora E., wife of Joseph S. Walton, and they reside at the George School with their four sons: George Arthur, J. Barnard, Jesse P. and Lewis Brosius Walton. Alva Curtis, died unmarried. Lillian M., wife of S. Walter Townsend, and they reside at the home of her parents. 2. Nathan P., who married Elma Moore, daughter of Sharpless and Rachel Moore, and their children were: Annie, deceased; Florence, deceased; Sharpless M., who married and resides in the state of Washington; and Nathan P., who married, and is now the father of three children: Paul, Elma and Vera Walton. 3. J. Barnard, who married Annie Pyle, and now reside in Champaign, Illinois, their three sons are: Harry L., Howard T. and Clarence T. Walton. 4. Samuel B., who married Hannah Smith, and they reside in Chicago, Illinois; their children were: Mabel, deceased, who was the wife of Charles Field, and mother of one child, Katharine Mary; and Elizabeth, unmarried. 5. Lewis, who married Alberta Balthus, and is deceased. The father of these children was for many years a successful and prosperous farmer, as well as a valued practicing physician. He died 11 mo., 1854, and was survived by his wife. Mary, the seventh child of Nathan and Ann (Roberts) Walton, was the wife of Isaac Walton, and at her death was survived by two children: Amelia M. Bentley, who with her husband and children removed from Ohio and settled further west; and Ann R. Kent, wife of Mahlon Kent, of Christiana, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

Lewis Walton, second son of Nathan and Ann (Roberts) Walton, was born November 8, 1789, on the old homestead near Gum Tree, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He chose the occupation of farming for his life work, and when a young man took up his abode on the estate which is now the property of Mrs. Elizabeth P. Walton, in Highland township. He was a thorough and enterprising agriculturist, and a faithful and upright citizen. He adhered to the religious belief of his forefathers, having been a consistent member of the Society of Friends.

Lewis Walton was united in marriage to Elizabeth Neal, daughter of James and Lydia Neal, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Ann Elizabeth, born 1 mo., 26, 1826, and on 10 mo., 15, 1846, became the wife of William M. Reid, and their children were: Jane, died in childhood; Lewis Walton, died in childhood; Margaret Emma, died in childhood; Mary Elizabeth, became the wife of Oliver P. Baldwin, and they with their three sons—William M., George E. and Oliver H.—reside in Parkesburg, Chester county; William M., died in childhood; James Edwin, who married M. Fannie Baldwin, they are the parents of two children: Charlotte Emma, who died in infancy; and William Stuart, who resides with his parents in Philadelphia. Ann Elizabeth Reid, the mother of these children, survived her husband several years, her death occurring 1 mo., 29, 1897. It was written of her: "Hers was a beautiful life, rich in good works. To a gentle and modest manner was added a mind replete with purity and truth. Ever ready to do good, yet all was done under that covering of humility which was a marked feature of her character. She lived and labored in the love of her Lord." 2. William, born 7 mo., 11, 1827, at the old homestead on the farm now owned by his widow, Elizabeth P. Walton, the same on which his parents settled and resided during their entire married life. He married Elizabeth Palmer, 3 mo., 13, 1862, and their children are: Mary W., wife of Edward Swayne, and mother of three children—Norman W., Edith W. and Donald—the family reside near West Chester, Chester county; Isaac P., unmarried; Gertrude A., unmarried; Bertha, wife of Vincent S. Pownall, of Coatesville, Chester county, and they are the parents of one child, Ruth Elizabeth Pownall; Robert Lewis, unmarried; and Emma E., also unmarried. William Walton, like most of his family, was a farmer by occupation, and a consistent member of the Society of Friends, having been a valued elder of Fallowfield Monthly Meeting. He died 10 mo., 3, 1867, in the sixtieth year of his age. "As a citizen he was honored and respected, and upright in all his dealings. As a Friend he was faithful, generous and kind, a wise counselor to those who sought advice of him. He was a man of unobtrusive manner, diligent in business, but not permitting this to interfere with religious duties. He was governed by that love which unites in Christian Fellowship. As a husband, father and brother his devotion shone forth in tender solicitude and care for those connected by such close ties." 3. Lewis, deceased in childhood. 4. Edwin, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. 5. Emmaline, unmarried, who resides at Ercildoum, East Fallowfield township, Chester county.

Lewis Walton, the father of these children, died September 13, 1861, leaving to all who had known him the memory of a well spent life. His wife, Elizabeth (Neal) Walton, whose many estimable qualities had endeared her to a large circle of friends, passed away January 15, 1870. Their remains are interred in the graveyard of the Friends' Meeting House at Ercildoum, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

—◆◆—

LUKENS. Jan Lucken was among the first settlers at Germantown, now part of the city of Philadelphia. He was one of the thirteen heads of families who arrived at Philadelphia on the 8th of October, 1683, as passengers on the "Concord," William Jeffries, master, after a voyage of nearly eleven weeks. Some were from Germany and others from Holland, and it is not certainly known from what place Jan Lucken came. His wife Mary, doubtless newly married, accompanied him. They were perhaps Mennonites at the time of their arrival, but at a later date were identified with the Friends. His name became Anglicised to John, and in time Lucken passed into Lukens. John Luken and Arnold Clinken were appointed overseers of the Germantown Meeting, 1 mo., 25, 1706, and he was frequently a representative thence to the quarterly meeting. By occupation he was a weaver. His will is dated 8 mo., 9, 1741, and was proven January 24, 1744. His widow died in 1742, aged eighty-two years. They had eleven children:

1. Elizabeth; b. 7 mo., 28, 1684; m. Edward White, 1717.
2. Elsie (Alice), b. 5 mo., 10, 1686; m. John Conrad, 1706.

3. William, b. 12 mo., 22, 1687-8; m. Elizabeth Tyson. See below.

4. Sarah, b. 7 mo., 19, 1689.

5. John, b. 9 mo., 27, 1691; m. Margaret Kuster, 1711.

6. Mary, b. 11 mo., 18, 1693; m. John Ger-rit (Jarrett), 1712.

7. Peter, b. 1 mo., 30, 1696; m. Gainor Evans, 1719.

8. Hannah, b. 5 mo., 25, 1698; m. Samuel Daniel Pastorius, son of Francis Daniel Pastorius, 1716.

9. Mathias, b. 8 mo., 13, 1700; m. Ann Johnson, 1721.

10. Abraham, b. 7 mo., 16, 1703; m. Mary Marle and Elizabeth Walker.

11. Joseph, b. 9 mo., 3, 1705; m. Susanna Marle, 1728.

William Lucken was married about the 10th month, 1710, to Elizabeth, daughter of Reynier Teison (Tyson), also a passenger on the "Concord," who settled at Germantown. They settled in Upper Dublin township, and in 1718, he was appointed as overseer of Horsham Meeting. He died in 1739, before his father, and his widow was buried at Abington Meeting, 2 mo., 18, 1765, aged seventy-four years and four months. They had children, William, John, Mary, Sarah, Rein-ear, Matthew, Jacob, Elizabeth, Joseph. The father, in his will, devised to each of his daughters, Mary and Sarah, £75 in horses, cows, household goods, etc., and £25 in money, provided she pleased her mother in marriage. Sarah married her first cousin, John Lukens, afterward surveyor-general of Pennsylvania, son of Peter and Gainor Lukens. Whether she received her legacy we are not informed.

William Lucken, Jr., inherited one hundred acres of land in Horsham, which his father had purchased of Joseph Hall. He was married 11 mo., 1741, to Martha Penington, daughter of Thomas and Martha Penington, and after her death he married, in 1752, Elizabeth Penington, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Michener) Penington, and first cousin to his first wife. In that day Friends thought they had Scriptural authority to forbid a man marrying any nearer relation to a former wife than of his own; and as marriages between first cousins were not allowed, William Lukens was disowned 5 mo., 25, 1752, but in 1757 made a satisfactory acknowledgment for the offense. By his first wife he had five children: William, Thomas, Elizabeth, Rachel and Elizabeth 2d; and by the second, Jonathan, David, Jacob, Thomas and Daniel.

Daniel Lukens, the last named, was born in 1760, and was married 4 mo., 20, 1792, to Mary Shoemaker, daughter of Isaac Shoemaker, of Upper Dublin township. In 1797 they removed to East Fallowfield township, Chester county, bringing a certificate of membership from Horsham to London Grove Monthly Meeting, and became members of Fallowfield Meeting. At a later date Solomon and Charles Lukeus, sons of David and nephews of Daniel, came to the neighborhood, and from the family of the last the Lukens Iron Works at Coatesville get their name. Daniel Lukens died 1 mo., 9, 1842, in his eighty-second year, and his wife, 10 mo., 26, 1839, aged seventy-five years, one month and twenty-three days. She was a prominent minister in the Society of Friends, and traveled much in religious service. They had nine children:

Daniel, b. 3 mo., 16, 1793; married Rachel Conard. See below.

Hannah, b. 9 mo., 2, 1794; d. 3 mo., 4, 1856.

Rebecca, b. 1 mo., 18, 1796; d. 4 mo., 22, 1863; m. Gideon Peirce.

William, b. 9 mo., 23, 1797; m. Rebecca Truman, 3 mo., 22, 1821.

Elizabeth, b. 7 mo., 21, 1799; m. Jesse Webster, 5 mo., 13, 1824.

Martha, b. 10 mo., 26, 1801; m. Benjamin Clendenon, 10 mo., 17, 1833.

Rachel, b. 7 mo., 14, 1803.

Mary, b. 5 mo., 28, 1805; d. 1 mo., 18, 1842, unmarried.

Sarah, m. 1 mo., 16, 1840, William Webster.

Daniel Lukens, Jr., of the fifth generation in this country, was married 2 mo., 11, 1830, at West Grove Meeting, to Rachel Conard, born 6 mo., 28, 1802; daughter of Jesse and Ann (Pennington) Conard, of New London township. They reside in London Grove township, where he died 12 mo., 16, 1869. He had seven children:

Joseph. See forward.

Jesse, b. 12 mo., 5, 1833; d. 8 mo., 17, 1837.

Mary, b. 1 mo., 15, 1835; m. Justus C. Strawbridge, of the firm of Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia.

Anna, b. 6 mo., 22, 1837; d. 9 mo., 10, 1864.

Martha, b. 7 mo., 6, 1839.

Daniel S., b. 3 mo., 30, 1841.

Rachel C., b. 4 mo., 17, 1843; d. 2 mo., 5, 1862.

JESSE C. LUKENS. Among the residents of East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who are prominently and actively identified with its farming interests, is Jesse C. Lukens, a native of London Grove township, Chester county, his birth having occurred there in the year 1856.

Joseph Lukens, son of Daniel and Rachel (Conard) Lukens, was born in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 6 mo., 8, 1832. He was reared in that vicinity and obtained the educational advantages that were afforded by the common schools of that day. Being inured from his early boyhood to the duties of farm life, he naturally chose that occupation when he attained a suitable age for making a choice and pursued it during the many years of his active and useful life. He is one of the representative farmers of that section of the county, was a strong and loyal Republican in his political views and was chosen by his fellow-townsmen to serve in several minor township offices. He was united in marriage to Catherine A. Dance, and their children were: Jesse C. Lukens; Clara Lukens (now Clara Pitt) and George Lukens, all of whom are living.

Jesse C. Lukens was born and reared on the old homestead in London Grove township, and was a regular attendant at the Maplewood Institute, in Delaware county and in the schools of Kennett Square, where he obtained a thorough and practical education. He began his business career as a farmer, and this line of industry he has followed ever since, being now the owner of a fine farm in East Nottingham township, consisting of one hundred and thirty-three acres with dairy attached. His commodious residence, out-buildings and in fact the entire estate indicate by their neat and thrifty appearance the supervision of a master hand. His methods are practical and progressive and in consequence his broad acres yield a plentiful harvest. His political affiliations are with the Republican party.

In 1886 Mr. Lukens married Euphemia Reilly, who was born in 1862, a daughter of the late John and Mary Reilly, the former named having been a prosperous farmer of Harford county, Maryland. Their children are: Norvin, born in 1889; Mabel, born in 1890; Lester, born in —; Mildred, born in 1895, all of whom are living, and two children who died in infancy. Mr. Lukens and his family attend the services of the Presbyterian church of East Nottingham township.

GEORGE W. LUKENS. Prominent as a leader in the ranks of the Republican party for the southern section of Chester county, Pennsylvania, where for generations past his family have been important factors in its activities, George W. Lukens has won and retains the utmost regard and confidence of his constituents, and well merits their appreciation of his services. He was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1867.

Daniel Lukens (grandfather of George W. Lukens), whose birth occurred on the ancestral estate in London Grove township, Chester county, upon the completion of a common school education became a farmer by occupation, and continued this line of industry during his entire lifetime, which was spent in the home of his birth. In politics he was an ardent Republican, giving an active and earnest support to the men and measures advocated by that party. He married and became the father of several children, among whom was a son, Joseph Lukens.

Joseph Lukens, father of George W. Lukens, was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, educated in the common schools of the neighborhood, and for several years thereafter was engaged in the work upon the farm. He was then offered the position of superintendent of the warehouses at Lincoln, Chester county, Pennsylvania, which he accepted, and by his faithful and conscientious discharge of the duties devolving upon him in this responsible capacity, he has retained the position up to the present time (1903). Politically he is a staunch advocate of the Republican party, and was chosen to fill the office of school director for a number of years.

Mr. Lukens was united in marriage to Catherine Dance, daughter of Josiah Dance, who is successfully engaged in farming pursuits in the township of New London. Their children are: Jesse, who married Euphemia Riley, and they are the parents of six children; Clara, wife of William Pitts, and mother of one child, and George W. Lukens. Mr. Lukens and his wife are consistent members of the Society of Friends, that being the religious belief of their forefathers.

George W. Lukens, the youngest son of Joseph and Catherine Lukens, attended the public schools of London Grove township and Maplewood Institute, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. After completing his studies he returned to his home and assisted with the work there until 1887, when he purchased his present home in London Grove township, which was known as the old Brown farm, and contains eighty-eight acres. Here, by the exercise of industry, perseverance and good management, he has succeeded in making his property one of the most productive and profitable farms in the whole county; in connection with his general farming interests he conducts a dairy which is equipped with twenty-four head of select cows. He holds membership in the Roosevelt Club, at West Grove, being one of its most active members, and also in the Society of Friends.

In 1887 Mr. Lukens married Anna L. Quimby, of Wilmington, Delaware, and one child was born to them, Cortland Lukens. After the death of his wife, which occurred in 1900, Mr. Lukens chose for his second wife Martha P. Jackson, a daughter of the late Isaac Jackson, who was an agriculturist of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The ceremony was performed in 1902.

JOSEPH PENNOCK HICKMAN. The Hickman family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, of which Joseph P. Hickman, a prosperous and progressive agriculturist, is a representative member, date their residence in this section of the state from the time of the arrival of William Penn.

James Hickman, great-grandfather of Joseph P. Hickman, was a prominent citizen of Chester county, where he was born, reared and acquired his education in the common schools. He married Elizabeth Cheney, a daughter of Squire Thomas Cheney, who became famous in United States history for having shown General Washington, at the battle of Brandywine, the exact positions of the British troops. Their children were: Hannah, Thomas, Alice, Francis, Mary and James Hickman.

Thomas Hickman, eldest son of James and Elizabeth Hickman, and grandfather of Joseph P. Hickman, was also a native of Chester county, and he enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the district school. He was united in marriage to Ruth Hannah Rhodeback, and their children were: Joseph Pratt, mention of whom is made hereinafter; and Caroline, born August 3, 1838, who subsequently became the wife of Isaac L. Dutton, and their children were: Joseph H., who married Isabelle Hill, and one child has been born to them; Norman Hill Dutton; Howard; Arthur Pratt; Henry Sharpless, who married Mabel Mullin, and they are the parents of one child, Sarah Mullin Dutton; Carrie Anita; Isaac Lowell and Bertha May Dutton.

Joseph Pratt Hickman, father of Joseph P. Hickman, was born September 6, 1836, and attended the common schools of Birmingham township, where he obtained a practical education. He was twice married, his first wife having been Mary Eleanor Williamson, to whom the following named children were born: Joseph Pennock, born March 9, 1863; William E., born in 1864, at the present time (1903) engaged in agricultural pursuits in the township of Pocopsin; he married Esther Hannum, and two children have been born to them; Gideon, who died in infancy and Lewis W., born in 1866. The mother of these children died August 27, 1866, and Mr. Hickman was subsequently united in marriage to Georgiana Yearsley, and six children have been born of this union.

Joseph P. Hickman, eldest son of Joseph P. and Mary E. Hickman, was born March 9, 1863, in the township of Birmingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He pursued his studies in the public schools of the vicinity, and after completing his education devoted his entire attention to farming and dairying on the estate at Chadds Ford, Birmingham township, which he inherited from his mother, Mary E. (Williamson) Hickman, to whom it was bequeathed by her grandfather. The old homestead was built in 1709, and, together with the land, which is well cultivated and therefore very productive, has been handed down from generation to generation from the time of William Penn. Mr. Hickman is useful and prominent in his community, where he wields considerable influence, and is active in religious affairs, being a member of the Presbyterian church of Dilworthtown.

On June 21, 1888, Mr. Hickman married Mary Dwyer, who was born May 4, 1864, in Cecil county, Maryland, a daughter of Dennis and Rebecca (Willis) Dwyer. Their children are: Joseph Willis, born June 12, 1889; George, R., born September 12, 1891, and Mary Eleanor, born October 27, 1899.

JOHN F. CHAMBERLAIN. Cochranville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is not a large and extensive city and has not the advantages of being situated on a railroad, but still it occupies a place of importance in the district of which it is the center, and in its confines we find some of the most esteemed and worthy citizens of the county. The full quota of the prominent residents of Cochranville would not be complete unless mention was made of John F. Chamberlain, who for a number of years has been actively identified with the various interests of the community, business, political, fraternal and social.

He was born in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1859. He received a practical education in the public schools of the adjoining county, Lancaster, and this knowledge was supplemented by experience and travel. Being filled with the desire for change which is so characteristic of youth, he went west and for a period of twelve years was associated with the varied phases of life to be found in that section of the United States, after which he returned east and at once devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits. After following this occupation for a short time, he learned the trade of butcher and subsequently established a business of his own for the sale of that necessary article of food in Cochranville, which he is conducting at the present time (1904), and in which he has achieved a large degree of success. He purchases large quantities of cattle, which he readily disposes of to his numerous customers and patrons, and also to the trade. A proof of his eminent trustworthiness and the estimation in which he is held by his fellow townsmen is evidenced by the fact that he has been chosen to fill the offices of auditor, assessor and tax collector. He is an earnest and consistent member of the Baptist church, a member of the Masonic fraternity and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and a strict adherent of the principles of the Democratic party.

Mr. Chamberlain was married to Mabel Pennock, daughter of Jonathan Pennock, of West Fallowfield township. Their children, all of whom are unmarried and reside at home, are: J. Everett, Franklin E., Norman P. and Thomas Chamberlain.

EVERETT E. ROSS, of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, traces his ancestral line to the patriot Ross family of Revolutionary days.

John Ross, for important services rendered during the war for Independence, was rewarded with a considerable grant of land in the western part of the state of Pennsylvania. He moved there with his family, but on the death of his wife divided the land among his three sons and returned to Chester county. He married a second time, settled in Upper Oxford township, and reared a family of two sons and two daughters. These were: 1. Abraham, born in 1783; 2. Isaac, born September 21, 1785, among whose children were Moses, George and Elijah; 3. Ann, born February 5, 1792; 4. Mary, born August 20, 1796. At his death John Ross divided his property among the children of his last wife, the homestead falling to Abraham, the eldest son.

Abraham Ross, first child and eldest son of John Ross by his second marriage, was born in 1783 and married, it is supposed, a woman named Yerkes. His family consisted of the following children: 1. John M., who married Hannah Evans, and had a son George E.; 2. Samuel, whose wife was Mary Jane Harvey, and whose children were Jemima (deceased) Thomas, Anne Samuel (deceased); 3. Hugh, who married Eliza Patterson; 4. Rebecca; 5. Mary; 6. Isabella; 7. Jemima.

Hugh, third child and third son of Abraham Ross, was born on the old homestead in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, August 1, 1818. He was educated at Hudson's Academy, Hopewell. After leaving school he taught for a time, and then his father purchased for him a tract of land of about one hundred acres. He has since carried on this farm, but his outside duties have been many. He was school director of his township for twenty years, and at different times has served as justice of the peace and as auditor. He married Eliza M. Patterson, and three children were born to them as follows: 1. Anna Belle, who married James Andrews, and whose one child died in infancy; 2. Sarah Roberta, who married Harry Davis; 3. Everett E., of whom a more detailed sketch is given; 4. John P.; 5. Mary R.; 6. Hugh Frank, who married Hattie Wilson, and to whom was born one child, John.

Everett E., third child and eldest son of Hugh and Eliza (Patterson) Ross, was born March 28, 1860, on the farm which is now his home. He grew up in Upper Oxford township and was educated in the public schools of the place, being graduated from the Union High School under James W. Andros. He became a farmer, beginning his work on the home place, which he inherited on the death of his father. His own effort, on the basis of his father's industry has placed him among the progressive and successful agriculturists of the community. He has borne his share in local public life, having been at various times a member of the board of county commissioners, judge of elections and auditor. He is now United States internal revenue collector. He is a member of the Masonic lodge of Cochranville, and is also a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is a Presbyterian in religion, and an active member of the Republican party.

Mr. Ross married Jessie, daughter of James and Mary (Orthop) Hancy, born in Upper Oxford township, April 24, 1866. She was educated at Fernwood Academy. One child, Mary Patterson, was born to the couple July 2, 1901.

MORTON PHELPS DICKESON, M. D., of Aston township, Delaware county, a physician of unquestioned reputation, is descended from Thomas Dickeson, who emigrated to New Jersey as one of the original Fenwick colony, and there founded a family which has ever since been resident in the state.

William T. W. Dickeson was born in 1828, on the homestead in Woodbury, New Jersey, and graduated as a civil engineer from the University of Pennsylvania. He had a predisposition, however, for the medical profession, and studied with that end in view, and took instructions in pharmacy under Dr. Graff. After graduation, he opened a drug store in Philadelphia, which he conducted until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he was appointed assistant surgeon of the Ninety-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, of the famous Pennsylvania Reserves. At the close of the war, he opened practice in Media, where he now resides in the enjoyment of a well-earned professional reputation. He has been thrice married. His first wife was Unice Burchard, by whom he had two children: John B. and William W. Dickeson. In 1860 he married Eunice, daughter of Jacob Snider, of Philadelphia, the inventor of the Snider rifle. Only one child was born of this marriage, Morton Phelps, mentioned at length hereinafter. Dr. Dickeson's third wife was a Mrs. Ormsby.

Morton Phelps Dickeson, son of William T. W. and Eunice (Snider) Dickeson, was born October 8, 1864, in Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and received his primary education in the Friends' School at his birthplace. Later he became a student at Shortlidge's Academy, and then entered the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, from which institution he graduated in 1886. He was graduated in 1888 from the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, bearing off the highest class honors. He then served eight months as resident physician, after which he took charge of the dispensary. Subsequently he was appointed assistant to Dr. William H. Pancoast, professor of anatomy at the same college, and also became assistant in the Department of Bacteriology. In April, 1888, he came to Aston township, Chester county and has since been engaged in the successful practice of his profession. He has also an extensive practice in Philadelphia.

Dr. Dickeson is a member of the American Medical Association, and holds the office of president of the Alumni of the Medico-Chirurgical College. He is a member of the board of State Medical Examiners, the State Board of Health, the Philadelphia Medical Club, and the Media Choral Society. He is prominent in all affairs of the township, and was formerly connected with the House of Refuge at Eden Mills. He does not allow his professional duties, absorbing as is their nature, and strict as is the attention which he bestows on them, to render him oblivious of the obligations of a good citizen. Dr. Dickeson is the possessor of one of the most desirable residences in the town, in which he makes his home with his mother.

WILLIAM J. OGLESBY, a highly respected citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, and for many years actively and prominently identified with the commercial and political interests of the city, is a descendant of an honorable Irish family, which for more than half a century has been resident in the United States. He is a son of Robert and Ann Jane Oglesby, was born in Ireland in the year 1844, and emigrated to this country with his parents the same year.

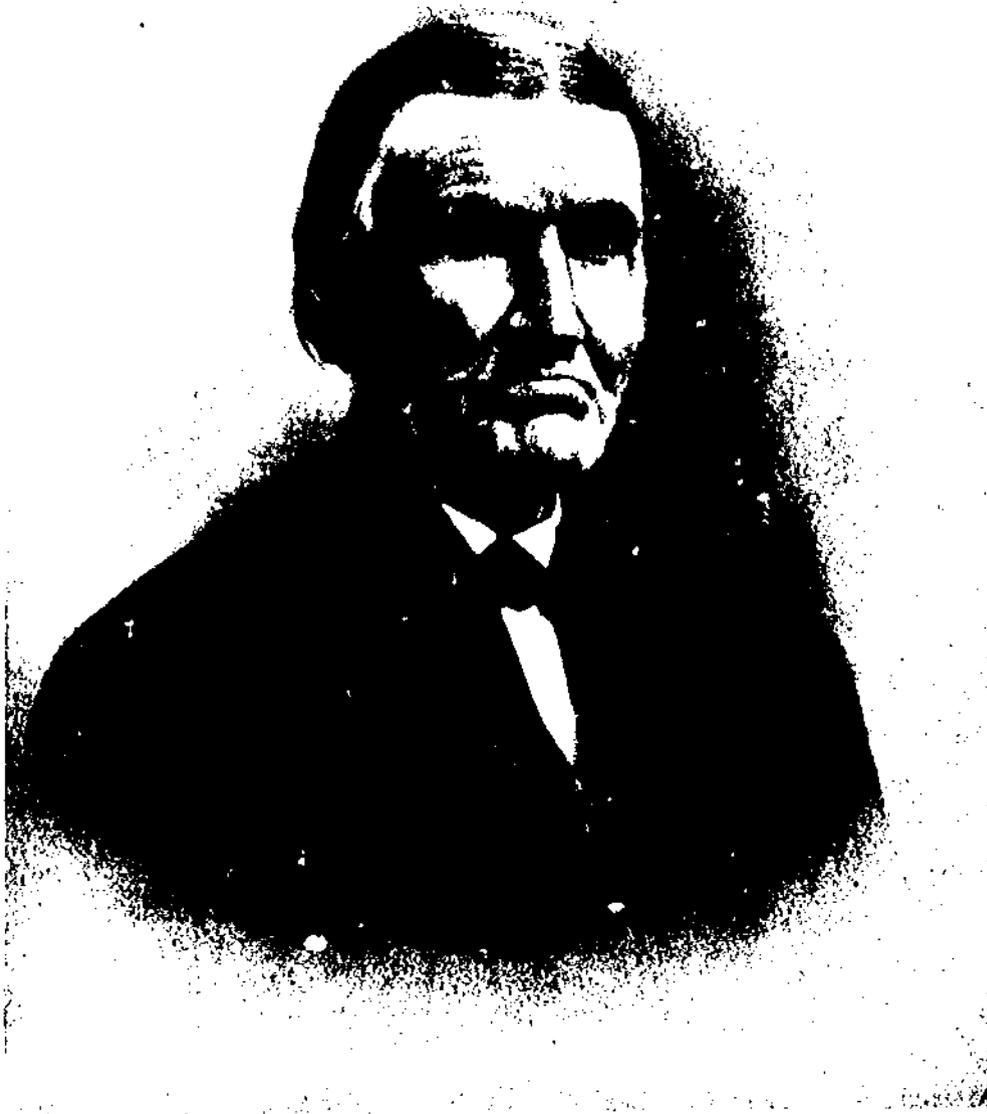

He received a common school education, after which he learned a trade in ship yards and for a number of years was employed in the yards of W. Frick, T. E. Reamey and other builders. He subsequently engaged in the manufacture of confections, ice cream, etc., and for fourteen years successfully followed this line of business. During the Civil war he enlisted twice in the emergency corps, serving in 1862 as a member of the Tenth Pennsylvania Regiment, and the following year was a member of the Thirty-seventh Pennsylvania Regiment. He was under the command of Captain William Frick and Captain W. Thatcher. He served for a number of years in the select and common councils, and at the present time (1904) is serving his second term as city comptroller. His political affiliations are with the Republican party.

Mr. Oglesby married Jane Konworthy, daughter of Matthew Konworthy, and the following named children were born to them: Charles, deceased; Mary, deceased; Robert and Samuel Oglesby.

THE WORTH FAMILY of Coatesville, Pennsylvania, of which J. Sharpless and William P. Worth are worthy representatives, is prominent among the many influential and distinguished families resident in that section of the state. The pioneer ancestor, Thomas Worth, was among the early settlers under William Penn, and from the fact that he brought his Bible, printed in 1636, with him it may be inferred that he was a man of exemplary character and unimpeachable integrity. Thomas Worth was born in England in 1649, was a resident of Oxtou, county of Nottingham, from whence he sailed on the 21st of the second month (April, O. S.), 1682, and landed in Pennsylvania about the beginning of the sixth month following. He settled in Darbytown, later removed higher up in the township, and, having a more liberal education than the majority of the residents of the neighborhood, his services were constantly in demand in the performance of such duties as required an expert and ready penman. In 1697 he represented Chester county in the Provincial Assembly. In 1685 he married Isabelle Davinson (Davidson), who emigrated from the county of Darby, England, and bore him three children—John, Thomas and Sarah Worth. Thomas Worth, the father of these children, died 2 mo., 10, 1731, and his wife died 3 mo., 3, 1709.

Thomas Worth, second son of Thomas and Isabelle Worth, was born 1 mo., 4, 1688. At the time of his father's death, he inherited two hundred and twenty-two acres of land in Darby, and in 1738 three hundred and fifty acres in East Bradford was bequeathed to him by the children of his brother, John Worth, this being a portion of the estate which they inherited from their grandfather, Thomas Worth, the pioneer ancestor. In 1749 Thomas Worth was commissioned a justice of the peace and of the court of common pleas, in which office he was continued by reappointment until a few years prior to his death. He married Mary Fawcett, a daughter of Walter and Rebecca (Fearne) Fawcett, of Ridley, who was born 9 mo., 25, 1697. Their children were: Samuel, Susanna, Lydia, Rebecca, Hannah, Ebenezer, Joseph and Mary Worth.

John Worth

The Lewis Publishing Co.

L. A. STROUT, Chicago, Ill.

S. B. Worth

Thomas Worth (father) died and was buried at Bradford Meeting, 12 mo., 22, 1778.

Samuel Worth, eldest son of Thomas and Mary Worth, was born 1 mo., 25, 1718. He married, 10 mo., 27, 1744, at Birmingham Meeting, Elizabeth Carter, a daughter of George and Elizabeth Carter, of East Bradford. His second marriage was to Jane Buffington, widow of John Buffington, and daughter of Jonathan and Mary Thatcher, at Bradford Meeting, 4 mo., 30, 1778. The children born of his first marriage were: John, Thomas, Joseph and Elizabeth Worth. Samuel Worth was a prominent resident of West Bradford, and his death occurred 12 mo., 31, 1781.

John Worth, eldest son of Samuel and Elizabeth Worth, was born 10 mo., 5, 1745. He resided in Mortonville, and for many years owned and operated a mill there. On April 11, 1789, he was commissioned a justice of the peace, and of the court of common pleas for the district composed of Pennsbury, East and West Bradford, Newlin and East Fallowfield townships. He was united in marriage to Mary Bentley, daughter of George and Jane Bentley, who was born 12 mo., 15, 1754, and the children born of this union were: Thomas, Elizabeth, Ebenezer, Samuel, John, George, Ennor and Benjamin Worth. John Worth, father of these children, died 10 mo., 17, 1790; he was survived by his wife, who passed away 12 mo., 20, 1830.

John Worth, third son of John and Mary Worth, was born 6 mo., 25, 1782, in West Bradford township. He settled first about half a mile south of Marshallton, afterwards removing to a farm in the vicinity of Romansville, where he conducted general farming on an extensive scale. He was a carpenter by trade, but devoted most of his time to agricultural pursuits. The esteem in which he was held by his fellow townsmen was evidenced by the fact that he was appointed to the office of county commissioner, and for twenty-five years was their choice for the position of justice of the peace. He was a consistent member of the Society of Friends, the religious faith of his forefathers, and served as an elder in that body. He married Lydia Carpenter, a daughter of William and Rachel Carpenter, and they were the parents of the following named children: William C., Sheshbazzar Bentley, Richard J., Samuel A., Rachel A., who became the wife of John White, John D., Lydia Maria and Elizabeth M., who became the wife of Jacob S. Wickersham. John Worth, father of these children, died 1 mo., 16, 1878. His wife, Lydia (Carpenter) Worth, born 2 mo., 10, 1785, daughter of William and Rachel (Carter) Carpenter, and granddaughter of George and Lydia (Worth) Carter, died 6 mo., 10, 1832.

Sheshbazzar B. Worth, second son of John and Lydia Worth, was born 12 mo., 1, 1807, at Marshallton, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He attended the common schools adjacent to his home, and this knowledge was supplemented by attendance at the school under the excellent preceptorship of Jonathan Gause, one of the most efficient educators in Chester county. In early manhood he devoted his attention to teaching school, a vocation he followed for several terms and in which he achieved a fair degree of success. For two years he served an apprenticeship in the blacksmith trade, and at the expiration of this period of time he established a store at Embreeville, which he operated successfully for eleven years. He then entered into partnership with Hugh E. Steele in the operation and management of the Laurel Iron Works, located near Mortonville, Chester county, which they conducted for several years. In the meantime, the Parks, having purchased the Elk Iron Works in Cecil county, Maryland, offered Mr. Worth the management of the plant and business, which he accepted and conscientiously filled for five years, while still retaining his interest in the Laurel Iron Works. This position was tendered to him on account of the thorough knowledge he possessed of the iron trade, and also his excellent business qualifications. While at Elk Iron Works, in 1852, Mr. Worth and his partner, Mr. Steele, purchased what was then known as the Try Delphia Iron Works at Coatesville, which had been built by the three Yearsley brothers some time previous. Mr. Worth moved to Coatesville about a year later. The name of the plant was changed to that of the Viaduct Iron Works and was operated by Mr. Worth and Mr. Steele up to 1874, the year of the death of Mr. Worth, under the firm name of Steele & Worth. Mr. Steele then reorganized and made a stock company of the concern, under the name of the Steele & Worth Company, the sons of Mr. Worth—J. Sharpless and William P. Worth—holding their interest for some time. Mr. Worth was one of the leading business men of his day in the iron trade, was one of the prominent members of the Hicksite Friends' Society, and a staunch Republican in his political affiliations.

In Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, June 7, 1848, Mr. Worth married Elizabeth Sharpless, who was born in East Goshen, February 19, 1823. She traces her ancestry to John Sharpless, a pioneer ancestor of the American branch of the family, who married Jane Moor, and they were the parents of seven children. The next in line of descent was Joseph Sharpless, who married Lydia Lewis, and ten children were born of this union. Jacob Sharpless, son of the aforementioned couple, married Ann Blakey, and among the ten children born to them was a son, John Sharpless, whose wife, Elizabeth (Yearsley) Sharpless, bore him twelve children, one of whom, John Sharpless, (father) was born in Concord, 7 mo., 8, 1799, married at Concord Meeting, 4 mo., 5, 1820, Charity Thatcher, born 6 mo., 18, 1801, and their respective deaths occurred—9 mo., 8, 1872, and 3 mo., 7, 1831. Sheshbazzar B. Worth died at his home in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, November 18, 1874; his wife died in the same town on July 12, 1879. Their children were: Isabella P., born March 1, 1849; John Sharpless Worth, and William Penn Worth.

John Sharpless Worth, elder of the two sons of Sheshbazzar and Elizabeth (Sharpless) Worth, was born at the Elk Iron Works, Cecil county, Maryland, February 15, 1851. He was reared in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, whither his parents removed during his childhood days, and his education was acquired at the academy in that village and at Swarthmore College. At an early age he entered upon his business career, gaining his first mechanical knowledge under his father in the Viaduct Iron Works at Coatesville. He and his brother, William P. Worth, subsequently disposed of their stock in the Viaduct Iron Works and in 1880 built the Brandywine Rolling Mills. The following year they began operations under the firm name of Worth Brothers, and the enterprise was a success from the beginning. In 1888, the Viaduct Works being for sale, they purchased it and are now operating it, in addition to the Brandywine plant, under the style of the Coatesville Rolling Mill Company. In 1895 the firm of Worth Brothers was incorporated, and the style changed to Worth Brothers Company, and from time to time they have extended their plant and business. In 1900 a plant for the manufacture of boiler tubes was added to the Viaduct property. Continuous additions, in the way of steel plants and rolling mills, have been added to the Brandywine mills since 1895, until they are amongst the largest and most modern in the country, and have the distinction of being able to roll wider plates than any in America. Their manufactories consist of a high grade boiler, tank and ship plate, also boiler tubes. They give employment to about two thousand men, and their trade extends all over the country.

John S. Worth is president of the Worth Brothers Company, and is also a director in the National Bank of Coatesville. He is unmarried, and resides on a farm, on the hill, north of the borough limits of Coatesville. His religious views are in accord with the tenets of the Society of Friends, and his political affiliations are with the Republican party.

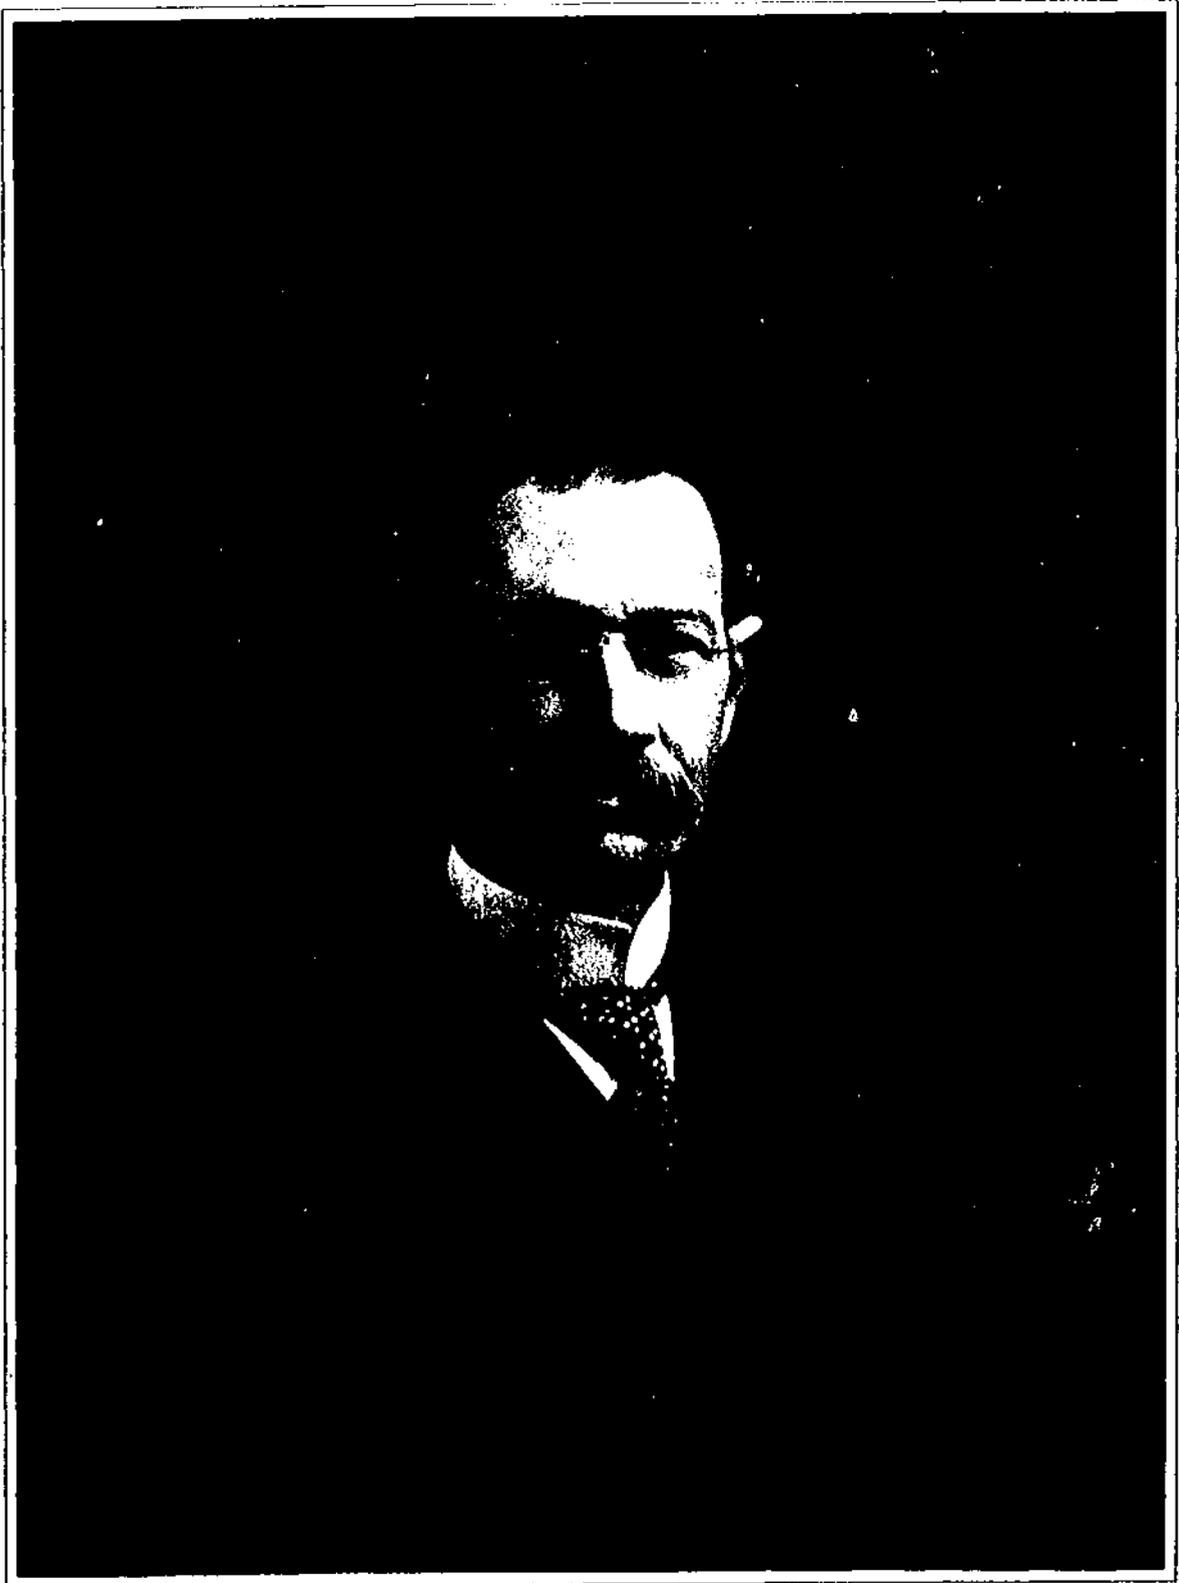

William P. Worth, youngest son of Sheshbazzar and Elizabeth (Sharpless) Worth, was born in the Worth homestead in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, June 23, 1856. His education was acquired in the academy at Coatesville, and at Swarthmore College. He was reared in the iron business under the mastership of his father, and has been associated with it throughout his life. He is secretary and treasurer of the Worth Brothers Company, and is president of the National Bank of Coatesville, and is prominent in other enterprises. He is a strong advocate of the principles of Republicanism, but has never taken any active part in local politics. In Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 29, 1879, Mr. Worth married Caroline Hallowell, born in Sandy Spring, Maryland, December 14, 1856, a daughter of J. Elgar and Anna W. (Townsend) Hallowell. Their children are: Edward Hallowell, born in Coatesville, December 5, 1880; George S., born in Philadelphia, January 30, 1882; Charles, born in Philadelphia, April 24, 1883, died August 26, 1883; Anna T., born in Philadelphia, January 3, 1885, died April 9, 1885; Alice, born July 1, 1887; William A., born October 19, 1892, and Elizabeth, born March 11, 1895.

JAMES C. MEGRAW. Arthur J. Megraw was born and lived in the northern part of Ireland, and after arriving at years of maturity he wedded Eliza Clark, of county Antrim, Ireland. To this marriage were born the following named: Arthur J., who is living in Delaware county, Pennsylvania; William, who resides in Ireland; Jane, who is married and lives in this locality; Martha, the wife of Joseph Baker, a resident of Delaware county, by whom she has four children; John, of Delaware county, who wedded Mary Rigby and has four children; Robert, who is married and resides in Pennsylvania; Ansley, a resident of Ireland; Elizabeth, the wife of Hugh Campbell, of Delaware county, by whom she has three children; Edward, who is married and makes his home in this section of the state; and James C. who wedded Lucy Jones, a daughter of Miller Jones, a minister of Delaware county. By their union the following children have been born: Mary, Miller, Arthur, John and Elizabeth, all of whom are under the parental roof.

James C. Megraw was born in county Antrim, Ireland, March 28, 1853. Crossing the Atlantic to America in 1886, when twenty-three years of age, he located in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he attended school to some extent. He then came to Delaware county, locating in Aston township, where he again took up educational work as a student in the Maplewood Institute. He also taught for some time in that school, and afterward entered the employ of Rhoades Brothers' Woolen Mills, at Aston Mills, occupying a clerical position in the office. His close application and capability there won him promotion from time to time until he became head bookkeeper, and he was also made confidential clerk to the firm.

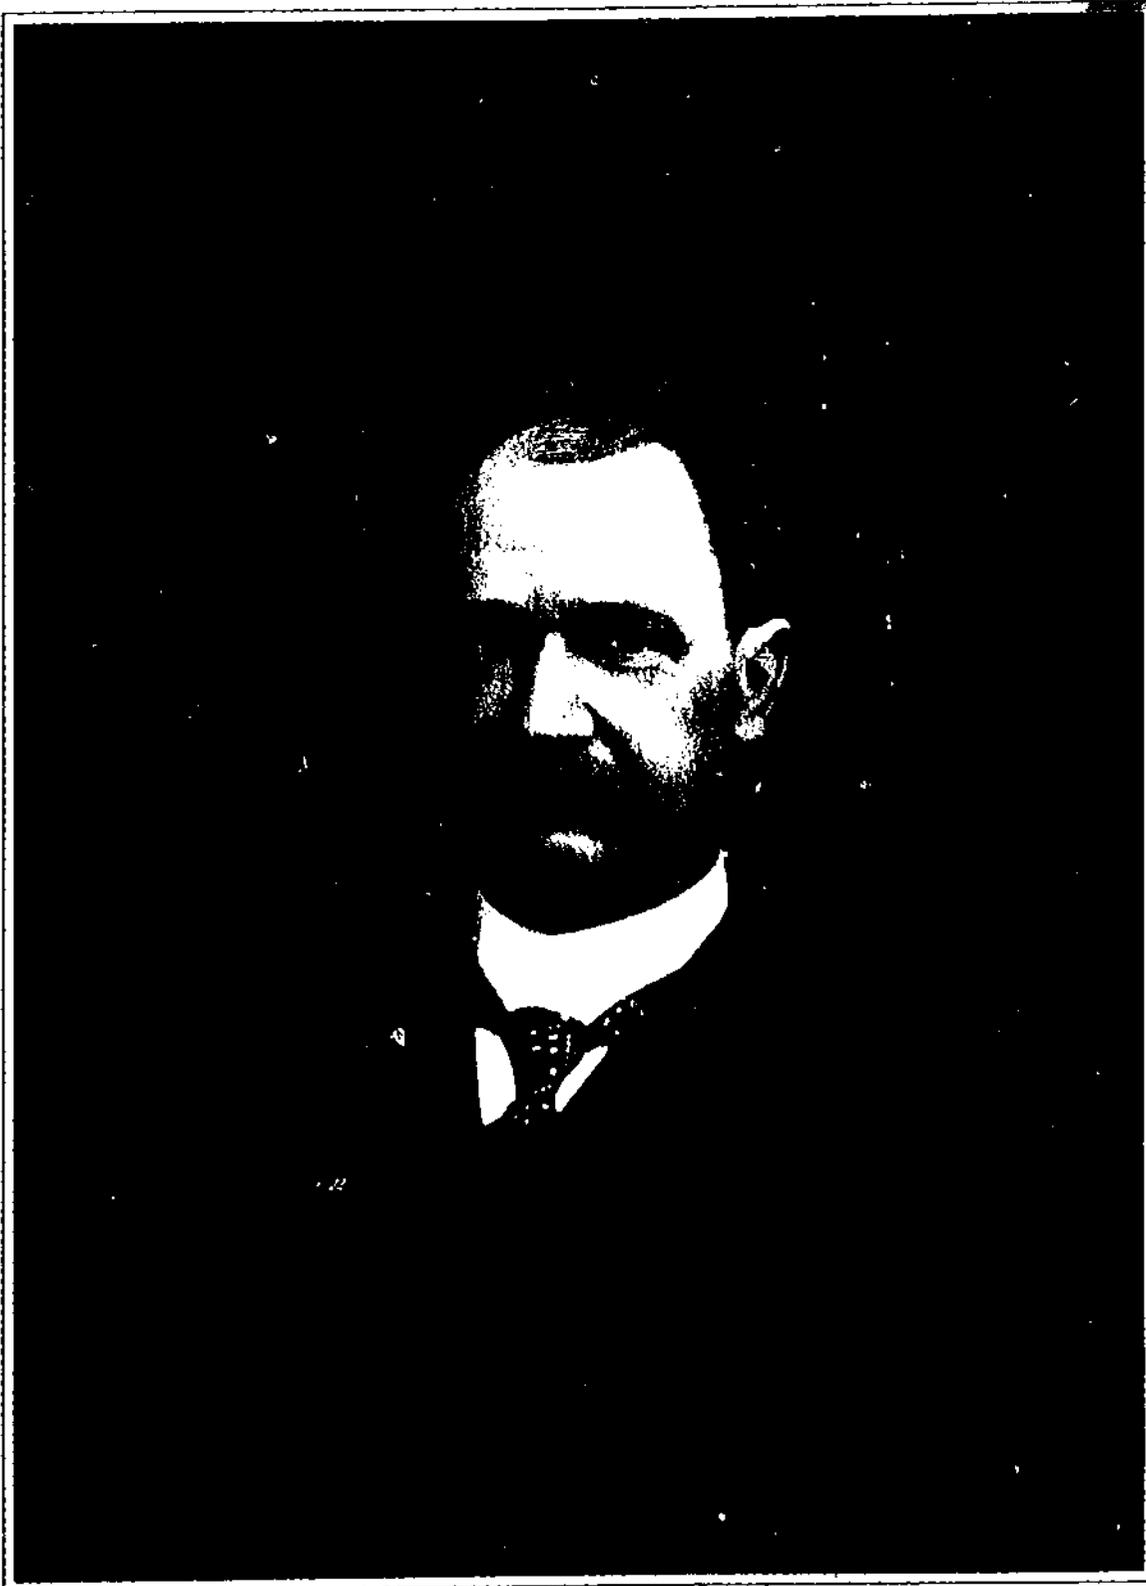

Mr. Megraw is a Republican in his political

The Lewis Publishing Co

A. S. H. & Co. Chicago, Ill.

J. P. Worth

The Great Publishing Co

Copyright 1914

W. P. North

views, and is now serving as a school director. In his fraternal relations he is a Mason and also an Odd Fellow. He is likewise connected with the Knights of the Golden Eagle and with the American Protective Association. He lives in a beautiful home in Aston township, and since taking up his residence in Delaware county has become one of the representative and esteemed citizens of this portion of the state.

His religious belief is indicated by his membership in the Baptist church, and his family attends its services.

JOSEPH PENNYPACKER CORNETT, deceased, for almost thirty years a resident of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, was a representative of that sturdy, independent and industrious element to which the commonwealth of Pennsylvania owes much of her progress and development. He was born on the Cornett homestead farm in Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 14, 1829, and died December 18, 1897, in Phoenixville. He was a man of sterling qualities, and by his faithful and conscientious performance of the various duties that devolve upon mankind won the confidence and esteem of those with whom he was associated, either in public or private life.

John Cornett, father of Joseph P. Cornett, was a descendant of a Scotch-Irish ancestry who trace their lineage back to the French Huguenots; they were adherents of the Presbyterian faith, and were noted for their loyalty and fidelity to their church. He was one of eight children, five of whom emigrated to this country subsequent to the settlement of John Cornett (father), who came from county Armagh Ireland, about 1790, and settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a stone mason by trade, and followed this occupation in connection with farming. He married Jane Knowles, who was born and reared in the Great Valley, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and of this union were born the following named children: Samuel, William, Joseph, John Latta, James Alexander, Sarah, Jane, Joseph Penny-packer and Elizabeth Ann, all of whom are now deceased with the exception of the latter named. John Cornett and his wife were members of the Great Valley Presbyterian church, in which faith they reared their children.

Joseph P. Cornett received his early education in the common schools of the neighborhood, and later attended a select school known as the Phoenixville Classical Institute. Shortly after attaining his majority he took up the study of dentistry at the Philadelphia Dental College, from which institution he was graduated in the year 1855. He practiced his profession in Berks, Lehigh, Clearfield and Chester counties, Pennsylvania, and during this period of time he gained an extensive and varied business experience. At the breaking out of the Civil war he enlisted in the One Hundred and Ninety-ninth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and after three years of service was mustered out with the rank of lieutenant. He was an active member of the First Presbyterian church of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, in which he was trustee for many years and served as treasurer for eight years.

Mr. Cornett was married, June 2, 1868, in Curwensville, Clearfield county, Pennsylvania, to Miss Susanna Patton Hipple, who was educated in the public schools and at Linden Hall, Leticz, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. She was a daughter of Edward A. Hipple, a native of Chester county, by occupation a lumber merchant, who married, in 1842, Maria Patton, a native of Clearfield county. John Patton, grandfather of Mrs. Cornett, was in early life a lieutenant in the United States navy, serving for eight years, a portion of which time he was under the command of Commodore Stephen Decatur. John Patton was a son of Colonel John Patton, a hero of the Revolutionary war, who was born in Sligo, Ireland, in 1745, and settled in 1765, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he became a prosperous merchant. He was one of the original members of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick of Philadelphia, which organization was afterward merged into the present Hibernian Society. During the Revolution he was a member of General Washington's bodyguard, and a colonel of the Sixteenth Additional Continental Regiment. He had charge of the defenses of the city of Philadelphia, and at the darkest hour of the struggle was one of the patriotic merchants of the city who, with Robert Morris and others, gave their personal bonds to the amount of twenty thousand pounds, his share of the contribution being two thousand pounds. He served three terms as sheriff of Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, and in 1779 moved to Center county, where he built the old Center Furnace, in 1791, which was the first one ever in blast west of Harrisburg. His death occurred in 1804, at which time he was major-general of a division of the state militia.

The children born to Joseph P. and Susanna P. (Hipple) Cornett are: Elizabeth Alice, Anna Maria, Samuel Elbert and Joseph Edward Cornett.

WILLIAM T. DANTZ, serving in the capacity of postmaster of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was appointed to that position by President Roosevelt, who has been an intimate friend of Mr. Dantz for many years, their friendship being formed in the state of North Dakota.

William T. Dantz was born in Gum Tree,

Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1862, and acquired his education in the State Normal School at West Chester and in the schools of Wilmington, Delaware. Upon the completion of his studies he went west and located in the Bad Lands of North Dakota, where for six years he was successfully engaged in the cattle business. At the organization of Billings county, he served two terms as superintendent of public instruction. In 1886 he became actively associated with the railway mail service between St. Paul and Helena, and continued this line of industry for several years, after which he returned east and later was appointed to his present position, that of postmaster of West Grove, and ever since his incumbency of this responsible office has acquitted himself with credit and honor, giving entire satisfaction to all members of the community. In his political affiliations Mr. Dantz is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, owning and conducting a staunch Republican newspaper, the West Grove Independent.

Mr. Dantz was united in marriage to Jeanette Marvel, who was born May 17, 1866, a daughter of Thomas Marvel, who was born in New Garden township, December 10, 1833, the son of Peter P. and Mary (Vernon) Marvel. Their children are: Thomas M. and Theodore R. Dantz, both of whom are unmarried and reside at home with their parents. Mr. Dantz is quiet and unassuming in manner, but energetic and successful, and his course in life has been such as to command confidence and win respect and esteem.

WILLIAM HENRY HARTMAN, an enterprising agriculturist of Schuylkill township, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, who has achieved remarkable financial success, was born in Charlestown, Pennsylvania, January 16, 1866, the son of David R. Hartman.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by William H. Hartman were obtained in the common schools of his native township, and these were supplemented by a two years' course of instruction at the Edgefield Institute, in Uwchlan township, Chester county. His first business experience was gained in the drug trade in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he remained for seven years, but at the expiration of this period of time he was obliged to retire from this vocation on account of failing health. He then returned to Schuylkill township, purchased the property which was formerly owned by Mr. Quick, erected comfortable and commodious buildings thereon, and since that time has successfully followed agricultural pursuits. His land is under a high state of cultivation, and his operations, which have been conducted on an extensive scale, have proved very remunerative. In politics Mr. Hartman is a staunch Democrat, and earnestly supports the principles and tenets of that great political organization. He has served in the capacity of inspector of elections for the township of Charlestown, filling that office for a number of years. He is a prominent member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics.

February 22, 1898, occurred the marriage of William H. Hartman and Jennie Ropp, who was born in Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 18, 1871, a daughter of George W. and Jennie (McDonnah) Ropp, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Their children are William Sheldrick and David F. Hartman. George W. Ropp, father of Mrs. Hartman, was born at Williams Corner, Schuylkill township, a son of Amos Ropp, who was a blacksmith by trade and followed that occupation for many years in that locality. George W. Ropp was a carpenter by trade, and he and his two sons were active participants in the Civil war, serving with the Union army.

P. LAFFERTY, a prominent citizen and councilman of the borough of Sharon Hill, Pennsylvania, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1827. His father, Charles Lafferty, was engaged for many years by the Philadelphia and Reading and also by the Pennsylvania Railroad in hauling freight and passenger cars by horse and mule teams. During his many years of residence in this section, he was looked upon with confidence and trust by friends, neighbors and business acquaintances, as a man of integrity of character, and wholly to be relied upon.

P. Lafferty, after completing his education in the public schools of Philadelphia, entered his father's employ, remaining with him for many years. In 1850 he was appointed mail carrier between Philadelphia and Washington, Pennsylvania, which position he held until 1855. He was then appointed by President James Buchanan to a responsible position in the navy yard at Philadelphia, in which he remained until 1861, when he retired from active business. He maintained his residence in Philadelphia until 1897, when he removed to Sharon Hill, on the property he had owned there for some thirty years, which consisted of one hundred and twenty acres of excellent farm land, and which he had only used until now as a summer home. Here in his stables he has a number of fine thoroughbred horses and colts, which have afforded him many pleasurable hours. Mr. Lafferty has taken a keen interest in the development of the borough of Sharon Hill, and has been largely instrumental in its upbuilding. His services as councilman have been highly appreciated, because of his sincere desire to look at all questions impartially and to decide them in the interests of the public.

In 1853 Mr. Lafferty married Jane Dougherty, a daughter of Andrew and Belle Dougherty, of Philadelphia, and their children are Isabella, Rose, Mary, Frank, Charles and John Lafferty.

E. LIZZIE LOBB, whose artistic talent has gained her a reputation that extends beyond the borders of Delaware county, was born in the borough of Alden in 1858, and there her education was acquired. She possessed special aptitude in her studies, but her tastes and talents all lay in the direction of art. She possesses natural ability in that direction and has spent much of her time in painting. The collection of her works, showing more than ordinary skill and ability, adorns the family home in Alden.

Miss Lobb is a daughter of Isaac Lobb, who at the age of eighty-two years is still enjoying excellent health and possesses much strength and ambition. He wedded Jennie Johnson, who died a number of years ago, leaving the father to care for three small children. Mrs. Lobb was a native of England, and from that country crossed the Atlantic to America, taking up her abode in Delaware county. The father of Isaac Lobb was Joshua Lobb, who was born on the old family homestead in Alden and owned considerable land at that place. At his death the ancestral home was deeded to his son Isaac, and in turn he deeded the property to his three children, all of whom are living with him in Alden borough.

The sisters of Miss Lizzie Lobb are Renna J. and Ray D. Lobb. The former named was born in the borough of Alden in 1852, was educated in the Friends' School in Darby, Delaware county, and has always remained at home with her father. The other member of the family, Ray D., was born in 1860, and likewise obtained her education in the Friends' School at Darby. The property which is owned by the three sisters is splendidly located and makes a beautiful summer residence.

JOHN FRANKLIN BEATTY. Among the prominent business men of Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, who are actively identified with its commercial, political and social affairs, may be mentioned the name of John F. Beatty, who was born in Springfield township, Pennsylvania, February 23, 1856. The family is of Scotch-Irish origin, its first representative in America being Thomas Beatty, great-grandfather of John F. Beatty, who was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, and came to this country at a very early age, and settled in Delaware county, where his son, William Beatty, grandfather of John F. Beatty, was born. William Beatty served as a soldier during the war of 1812, engaged in farming and was the original discoverer and owner of the process of manufacturing and tempering edge tools, operating a plant up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1842. He was a prominent member of the Presbyterian church at Middletown, Delaware county.

William N. Beatty, father of John F. Beatty, was born on the old Beatty homestead in the township of Springfield, in 1828, and after attaining young manhood succeeded his father in the manufacture of edge tools, their plant being situated on the borders of Crum creek, in Springfield township. Both father and son conducted a very successful and extensive business, as their process of tempering was the only one in use in this country at that time. In his political affiliations Mr. Beatty was a Jacksonian Democrat, and served in the capacity of school director for one term. In 1852 he married Martha Hannum, a daughter of Edwin Hannum, and a native of Delaware county. Mrs. Beatty is of direct Welsh descent, and her family is among the oldest in Pennsylvania. Their children are: Ella M., John F., William P. and Edwin H. Beatty. The father of these children died at his home in February, 1878, after an active and useful life spanning half a century. He was survived by his widow and children.

John F. Beatty received his education in the public schools of Springfield township and at Swarthmore College, which latter institution he attended for two years. In 1871 he entered his father's factory and assisted in the manufacture of edge tools, remaining until 1876, when he accepted a position in a grocery store, but after 'three months' service in this line of work he returned to his former occupation, at which he was engaged for five years more, or until his removal to Morton. In 1881 he established a coal and feed business in Morton, and being energetic and enterprising, he was soon in possession of a large trade which has steadily increased up to the present time (1903). In addition to this enterprise Mr. Beatty is interested in several other directions, being a director and stockholder in the Faraday Electric Light, Heat and Power Plant of Morton, also treasurer of the Morton Fire Company, and he was formerly treasurer and director of the Morton Building and Loan Association. He is a large real estate owner, and takes an active interest in every project that favors the growth and advancement of the township; he is a life member of the Morton Free-

Library Association, and contributed liberally to the support of the Springfield Free Fountain Society.

Politically Mr. Beatty is an ardent Democrat, well grounded in the basic principles of his party and active in their support. For twelve years he was treasurer of the Morton Democratic Association, has been a candidate for sheriff, was elected first burgess of Morton borough and has also served in the capacity of justice of the peace. He has represented Delaware county in the state conventions of the Democratic party, and has taken an active part in their proceedings. He is a member of Fernwood Lodge, No. 543, Free and Accepted Masons, of Philadelphia.

November 23, 1881, Mr. Beatty married Mary Grace Cooke, who was born near Valley Forge, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Lewis D. and Eunice (Adams) Cooke, of Glendolden, Delaware county. Their children are: 1. Emma C., born January 1, 1883; her education was acquired in the public schools of Morton, after which she went to the Preparatory School at Swarthmore, Delaware county, later was a pupil for two years at George's Private School, in Bucks county, near Newtown, and at the present time (1903) is a student at Swarthmore College, from which institution she expects to graduate soon. 2. Jean Lewis, born May 6, 1885, has received the same educational advantages as her sister. 3. Martha Beatty, born January 19, 1887, died in childhood. Mrs. Beatty obtained her education in the schools of Upper Darby and the Friends' Select School, from which she was graduated.

CHARLES PANCOAST, one of the successful farmers and prominent citizens of Marple township, was born December 2, 1839, and is a son of Samuel and Tamer (Bishop) Pancoast. Tamer Pancoast is a daughter of Joseph Bishop, of Upper Providence, and his children were as follows: Thomas married Jane Townsend; Randal, married Maria Massir; Joel, unmarried; Jeremiah, married Hannah Eachus, a daughter of Evan Eachus; Emily, unmarried; Orpah, unmarried; Tamer, mother of our subject.

Samuel Pancoast, father of our subject, was born on the old homestead in Marple, and was of a family of five children, namely: John, married Sarah Thomas, and, as his second wife, Hannah Ogden; William, married Margaret Bishop; Seth, married Margaret Levis; Rebecca, unmarried. The children of the parents of our subject who are living are as follows: Charles; Emily, married Mr. Leads, of Philadelphia; Hannah P., who resides on the old homestead, was educated at the schools of Marple, and graduated at Westtown; Margaret; Anna, who resides on the old homestead, and was educated at Marple and Westtown, graduating from the schools of the latter place; Thomas, married Susan Hammun, and is a farmer of the village of Green, Delaware county, Pennsylvania; John, married Eleanor Lawrence, who died very soon after their marriage, and he then married Emily Dunn, who died; Samuel, who resides on the old homestead, was educated at Marple and Westtown, and is a member of the Society of Friends, and is very highly respected throughout the community. Samuel Pancoast, the father, left a large estate to the children at his death.

Charles Pancoast was born and reared upon the homestead farm, and has followed an agricultural life. During his boyhood he attended school at Marple and Westtown, and was graduated from the Westtown Normal School. His upright life, free from any contention, has been spent in this neighborhood where his word is accepted as being fully equal to another man's written bond, and he, like the other members of his family, stands very high among his fellow-citizens as a man of sterling character and high moral worth.

GEORGE ADAM HOFFMAN, a successful farmer and leading citizen of West White-land, Chester county, belongs to a family which traces its descent from two brothers who emigrated from Germany to Pennsylvania, about the time that the province was colonized by William Penn. One of the brothers settled in Berks county, not far from where the city of Reading now stands, and the other found a home in Chester county, settling in what is now West White-land. By thrift and industry he soon acquired a tract of about six thousand seven hundred acres of rich farming land. About 1700 a church was built and a graveyard laid out on a two-acre tract given by the elder Hoffman. The church, which was of the Methodist Episcopal denomination, was first built of logs, as time went on was twice rebuilt, and is now a very pretty edifice, in the heart of the old settlement. The ancient Hoffman homestead, which stood in close proximity to the present one, has been razed and in its place stands a very pretty farm house with out-buildings. Of the six thousand seven hundred acres of the original tract, between three and four thousand acres now remain in possession of the family.

George Hoffman was born in 1796, attended the common schools, and at an early age began to assist in the labors of the home farm. Tiring of this, he left home and went to Gallagherville, near Coatesville, where for a short time he kept a tavern. After a second experience in farming, this time on his uncle's farm in Uwchlan, he went to Baltimore, where he again became the proprietor of a public house. Soon after he moved to Hanover township, Columbiana county, Ohio, where for six years he conducted a large farm. During his residence here he inherited, on the death of his father, a farm of one hundred and twenty acres in East Bradford, near West Whiteland, and thereupon returned to Pennsylvania, where he passed the remainder of his life. He was a man of some prominence in the township, where he held a number of minor offices. In politics he was a strong Democrat, and in religious matters an independent thinker. He married, February 15, 1821, Sidney, daughter of James and Lydia Maxton, the former, who was a descendant of old settlers, being a well known old-time blacksmith of Downingtown. After his retirement from active life he lived until his death on a small but valuable farm in the neighborhood, being the owner of two other small farms in the vicinity. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman were the parents of eleven children: George H., Jane H., Mary E., Vernon Lewis, mentioned at length hereinafter; Levi J., John M., Elizabeth R., Melinda Ann, Benjamin M., Lydia J. and Naomi. Mr. Hoffman, father of the family, died in 1876, and his wife passed away in 1891.

Vernon Lewis Hoffman, son of George and Sidney (Maxton) Hoffman, was born August 23, 1825, in Marlborough township, Chester county, and received his education in the common schools, after which he aided his father in the care and management of the homestead, which in course of time he inherited. He conducted an extensive dairy business, keeping about fifteen head of stock, and his excellent produce found a ready sale in the Philadelphia markets. He possessed in a high degree the esteem and trust of his townsmen, who honored him for ten years with the office of supervisor. In early life, his political opinions were those of the Democratic party, but he subsequently became an Independent. His religious beliefs were those of the Methodist Episcopal church. He married, in 1855, Sarah, daughter of Adam and Elizabeth Fisher, of Uwchlan township, Chester county. The former was the owner of a farm of about one hundred acres, which is now occupied by his son. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman: George Adam, mentioned at length hereinafter; Laura N., born March 12, 1862; Thomas J., born March 14, 1863; and Bertie E., born June 29, 1868. Of these the eldest only is living, the others having died in infancy. Mrs. Hoffman died some years since, in the sixty-third year of her age.

George Adam Hoffman, son of Vernon Lewis and Sarah (Fisher) Hoffman, was born May 18, 1859, and in his boyhood attended the common schools, afterward spending one term at the West Chester State Normal School and the same length of time at Miller's Academy. He has made farming the business of his life, first engaging in it in East Bradford, and now residing on one of the most beautiful farms in West Whiteland. Like his father, he conducts a dairy business, his butter and other produce commanding high prices in the markets of Philadelphia. It is worthy of note that the farm which is now his home was also his birthplace, and that he is surrounded by the scenes amid which his early life was passed. He takes an active interest in local affairs, and has been called by his neighbors to fill positions of trust, having served one term as school director, three years as auditor, and holding at the present time the office of supervisor, to which he was elected in 1898. In politics he is a strong Republican. He and his family attend Friends' Meeting.

Mr. Hoffman married, in 1879, Hannah, daughter of J. Erskine and Mary Baldwin, of West Bradford, descendants of early settlers of that region, where Mr. Baldwin is the owner of a farm of about one hundred and sixty acres. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman are the parents of four children: Sarah E., born June 26, 1880; Mary Ann, born June 20, 1881; Ira B., born November 8, 1883; and Vernon L., born September 19, 1885. Of these, Sarah E. is the wife of George J. Wilson, a resident of Paoli, Chester county, and a prominent insurance agent of Philadelphia. They have one son.

PETER A. CHANDLER. A large part of the population of Chester county have been born within the limits of the county, and their ancestors have resided here for several generations. Still, there is quite a sprinkling of people who have come to the county from near-by places, or even from the old world, and numbered in this class is Peter A. Chandler, who has a beautiful home in West Bradford township, and is a man much esteemed in the community.

He is the son of one of the most prominent physicians of the state of Delaware, to which the Chandler family first came after arriving in this country. Dr. Joseph P. Chadler was one of those well rounded, kindly men who adorn any profession, but seemed to have especial fitness as a physician. He was married to Elizabeth, the daughter of Peter Hendrickson, and the following children were born to them: Joseph H., who became a physician, and married Sallie B. Pugh, two children being born to them; Benjamin, the next child, died young; William also passed away in youth; Ella married Joseph Noblitt; Elizabeth married Samuel G. Simmons, and became the mother of two children; Margaret married Samuel Gregg, and they had five children; Rebecca is the wife of J. D. Sissler, the proprietor of the Sissler Business College, at Wilmington, Delaware, and they have two children; Thomas married Louisa Thomas, and four children were born to them.

Peter A. Chandler, the other child of the family, is a native of Delaware, and his education was received in the Fairville Academy of that state. Following this period of preliminary training he took up farming, and was industriously engaged in this pursuit at the time the Civil war broke out. He then enlisted in the First Delaware Battery of Wilmington, and during the time that he was at the front he had a record of bravery and fidelity to duty. He was in many engagements, including the campaigns in Texas and Louisiana and in the New York riots. He was wounded five different times, and he still carries one of the bullets in his body, a reminder of the hard experiences through which he passed in the service of his country. After the war he returned to his former pursuit, and is still occupied with the management of his farm of fifty acres in West Bradford township, near Romansville.

Mr. Chandler married in 1868, becoming the husband of Rachel A., the daughter of Milton Nichols, who was a hotel proprietor in Delaware, and was one of the strong Whig-Republicans of the times; his remains now rest in the Longwood cemetery. Ella R. was the first child born of this marriage, and she is now the wife of Harvey T. Baldwin, by whom she has had five children; the other daughter is Bertha M., and is living at home unmarried. Mr. Chandler is a staunch Republican, and has been chosen to several township offices, at the present time serving as school director. He is past grand in the Odd Fellows' lodge and takes an active interest in the fraternity. The family are attendants at the Brandywine Centerville church.

BALDWIN BRECKENRIDGE, a successful farmer and worthy citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, is descended on both sides from ancestors who were among the early settlers of the county. On the paternal side the family is of Welsh extraction, the emigrant ancestor being supposed to have been one of the pioneers in West Pikeland township. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Breckenridge served as a soldier in the war of 1812.

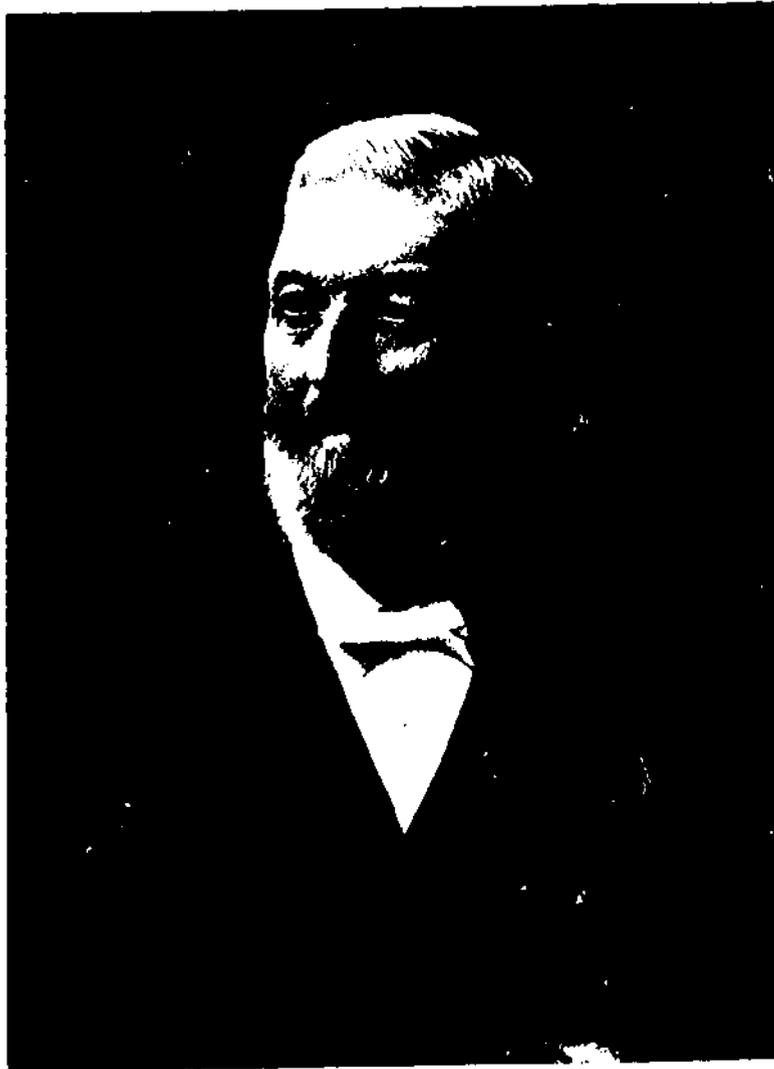

William Breckenridge was born January 25, 1819, in Chester county, and received his education in the public schools of his native township. He was a hard-working man during the greater portion of his life. He married Anna, born October 7, 1824, in Chester county, daughter of Uriah Brown, a native of the same county, and a carpenter by trade. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Breckenridge: 1. George, who was a farmer in Chester county; during the Civil war he enlisted in Company —, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and by reason of hardship, lost his life in the service of his country; 2. Anna, who is a dressmaker; 3. Hannah, who became the wife of Isaac Davis, a carpenter of Chester county, now deceased; 4. Davis, who is a truck merchant at Rosemont, Pennsylvania; 5. Baldwin, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Breckenridge, the father of the family, closed his long and useful life in April, 1902, at the age of eighty-three.

Baldwin Breckenridge, son of William and Anna (Brown) Breckenridge, was born February 25, 1856, in Wallace township, and was educated in the public schools of his birthplace. Since leaving school his life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, in which he has met with a gratifying measure of success. He is the owner of a farm of fifty-six acres, situated near Milford Mills. His land, which is carefully cultivated according to the latest and most improved methods, is devoted to the purposes of general farming, and the superior products of his dairy command good prices and a ready sale. The engrossing nature of his duties as an agriculturist has prevented Mr. Breckenridge from taking an active part in public affairs, but he has never failed in attention to the essential duties of a citizen. In politics he is an earnest supporter of the principles and measures advanced and upheld by the Democratic party. He has never married.

JOHN B. RHODES, for many years prominently identified with the commercial and political interests of Aston Mills, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is the grandson of John Rhodes, who in 1827 emigrated from Yorkshire, England, and settled in Aston township, where he came to his death by drowning, and with him his two daughters, in the great freshet of August, 1843.

William Rhodes, son of John Rhodes, came to this country from England, and in 1828, also located in Aston township, where he was employed for the remainder of his life in a factory devoted to the manufacture of cotton fabrics. Prior to his emigration to America he married Miss Hannah Kay, and their children were: John B., William, Samuel, Thomas, Ann and Susanna, all of whom were born in the United States.

Sam B. Rhodes

John B. Rhodes, the eldest son of William and Hannah Rhodes, was born January 27, 1829, in Aston township. The public school system having not yet been introduced in that section of the state, his education was not begun until he was old enough to attend the sessions of a night school, where he obtained a knowledge of the rudimental branches. At the very early age of six years he entered a cotton factory with a view of becoming proficient in that branch of industry. Later he was employed in the different departments of a weaving mill, and ultimately he acquired a practical knowledge of all branches of the business. He remained an employee of the factory until he attained his majority, after which he embarked in business in Crozerville, Delaware county, where he remained and prosecuted a successful trade until 1864. He then purchased from Mr. Elwood Tyson what is known as the Aston Mills property, and has since been engaged in the manufacture of doeskins, jeans, and dress-goods. The success he obtained in this enterprise moved him in 1866 to rent the Knowlton Mills, at Knowlton, Middletown township, which are still controlled by him. To this already extensive manufacturing venture was added, in 1882, the purchase of the West Branch Mills, in Aston township, which are now operated to their full capacity. Beginning at the very bottom round of the ladder, Mr. Rhodes has advanced steadily step by step until he is now occupying a position of prominence and trust reached by very few men. Through his entire business career he has been looked upon as a model of integrity and honor, never making an engagement that he has not fulfilled, and he is an example of what determination and force, combined with the highest degree of business integrity, can accomplish for a man of natural ability and strength of character.

In his political affiliations Mr. Rhodes is a firm advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and he was elected a delegate to the St. Louis convention which in 1876 nominated Tilden and Hendricks for the first offices in the gift of the people. He is a prominent member of Benevolent Lodge, No. 40, Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Aston, and has represented it in the grand lodge for a number of years. He is a regular attendant of the Methodist Episcopal church of Aston, though educated in the tenets of the Protestant Episcopal faith.

WILLIAM H. LYONS, a veteran of the Civil war and a highly respected citizen and successful business man of East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, near the borough of Avondale, in 1840.

Josiah Lyons, father of William H. Lyons, was a native of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and he acquired a practical education in the common schools of that vicinity. Upon reaching man's estate he became a farmer, and after successfully pursuing that occupation for several years he engaged in the buying and selling of cattle, which was a most profitable means of livelihood in those days. He was a strong advocate of the cardinal principles of the Republican party, to which he gave an active and earnest support, and for a number of years he was an incumbent of several minor township offices. He was united in marriage to Ellen Cummings, a native of London Grove township, Chester county, and by this union the following named children were born: Mary A., wife of Professor Anderson, and mother of six children; Elizabeth, wife of William Thompson, and they are the parents of one child; and William H., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Lyons met with a sudden death, being killed by a steer while discharging the duties of his employment. He was respected and esteemed in the neighborhood, and his sudden demise was sincerely mourned by a wide circle of friends.

William H. Lyons, only son of Josiah and Ellen Lyons, obtained an excellent English education at a private school in London Grove township, which was under the competent instruction of Hiram Slack. He then learned the trade of carpenter, and by steady and close application during his apprenticeship he became a thorough-going and skilled mechanic. For a number of years he was engaged as a journeyman for William Pusey, but during the progress of the Civil war he left his employment in order to show his patriotism and love for his country by enlisting his services in its behalf. In 1864 he enlisted in the Two Hundred and Third Pennsylvania Volunteer Regiment, which was under the command of Colonel Moore, and served with honor and distinction at the battles of Fort Fisher and Petersburg. His term of enlistment expired in 1865, while the regiment was stationed at Wilmington, North Carolina, and Mr. Lyons received an honorable discharge from the services of the United States. He then returned to his old home in London Grove township, where he remained until 1867, and in that year he purchased his present home in East Nottingham township, Chester county. From that date to the present time (1903) Mr. Lyons has been engaged in agricultural pursuits and the operation of a bone mill. His political views have always been in accord with those of the Republican party, and he has been elected to serve in several minor township offices. He is an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Lyons was united in marriage, in 1865, to Hannah E. Williamson, daughter of the late James Williamson, who followed the occupation.

of carpenter in New London township, Chester county. Their children are: Frank, who married Hannah McCarrigan; William H., Jr., who married Clara Keyholl; and Elizabeth, unmarried, who resides at home with her parents. The success which has attended the efforts of Mr. Lyons is attributable to his own energy and thrift, and he deservedly ranks among the prominent and influential citizens of the community.

PHILIP S. BISHOP, one of the enterprising and progressive business men of Easttown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, having acquired marked success in the management of various enterprises, was born in Edgemont township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, April 19, 1833, a son of Philip and Phebe (Wood) Bishop, and grandson of George and Sabina Bishop, who came to this country from Germany, and were the parents of two sons and three daughters—Philip; George, Maria, wife of George Baker; Julia Ann, wife of Aaron Green; and Sabina, wife of Mr. Knox, who located in Haverford township.

Philip Bishop, father of Philip S. Bishop, was also a native of Edgemont township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and in this vicinity he spent his entire life. He was united in marriage to Phebe Wood, daughter of Nathan Wood, and the issue of this union was the following named children: George Wayne; Marion, born in 1829; Maria, born in 1830, who became the wife of Joseph Hizer, and her death occurred in 1900; and Philip S. Bishop.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Philip S. Bishop were obtained in the public schools of Edgemont township. In early life he learned the carpenter trade with James Haddock, beginning his apprenticeship in 1850. For his first year's work he received thirty dollars; for the second year, the sum of fifty dollars, and the third year, the remuneration was seventy-five dollars. He was then employed as a journeyman at one dollar and twelve cents per day, and assisted in the construction of the court house and other large buildings at Media, Pennsylvania. In 1891 he purchased the Jabez Beaumont farm in Easttown township, which he is now successfully operating in connection with his carpenter trade. In 1899 he became the owner of another farm, located in Chester Valley, where he resided for two years, but at the expiration of this period of time he disposed of this property and realized a goodly profit. Mr. Bishop, in association with his son, Davis Thomas Bishop, has been engaged in contracting and building in and around the vicinity of Berwyn. He was engaged in the capacity of car inspector for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for five years, and for two years was employed by the Union Car Manufacturing Company. Mr. Bishop is a staunch Republican in politics.

In 1855 Mr. Bishop married Deborah N. Beaumont, daughter of Jabez Beaumont, and two children have been born to them: 1. Davis Thomas, born in 1859, married Florence Matlack, daughter of Captain William Matlack, and their children are Thomas, born in October, 1894; Annie Matlack, born in July, 1896; and Jeremiah Beaumont, born July 1, 1898. 2. William Beaumont, born in 1863, married, in 1896, Alice Sill Yarnall, daughter of Nathan Wood and Lydia Ann (Sill) Yarnall; they are the parents of one child, Adelaide Elizabeth, born in February, 1898.

GEORGE SEVERN JARVIS. In the borough of Norwood, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred on December 28, 1876, George Severn Jarvis is now conducting an extensive and profitable business, and is regarded as one of the influential and public-spirited citizens of the community. He is a son of James W. and Sarah Irvin (Henderson) Jarvis, who were also the parents of Edwin Henderson Jarvis, who for many years was a resident of the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Sarah Irvin (Henderson) Jarvis is a daughter of Matthew Henderson, who was a native of county Tyrone, Ireland, came to the United States in 1818, and located in Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, at the age of sixty-three years. A portion of his land is now the site of the village of Norwood and Ridley Park, and is in the possession of some of his descendants. His wife, Sarah (Irvin) Henderson, born him six children, four sons and two daughters.

George S. Jarvis was a student in the public schools of Ridley township and Ridley Park, and by close application and attention to his studies he acquired that practical and thorough education which is so essential to success in every walk of life. In early life he learned the trade of butcher, and has followed this occupation up to the present time (1903), being now the proprietor of a fine establishment for the sale of meats and general merchandise in the village of Norwood. He has a large and steady patronage, which is due to the fact that his stock is of the best quality and that his customers and patrons receive prompt and courteous attention.

Mr. Jarvis was united in marriage, August 6, 1901, to Margaret Harris Sipps, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Robert and Margaret Sipps, and one daughter was born to them, Marion Hazzard Jarvis.

MRS. SUSAN MOORE, of Philadelphia, is descended on the paternal side from German ancestry. Charles Lutz, and his wife, Catherine, were the parents of nine children: William, George, Evan, Samuel, Henry, Michael, Charles, John, and Susan, who was born February 28, 1820, in Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, and married James S., son of James Moore, who emigrated from England to America.

James S. Moore was an enterprising business man. He established a coal and lumber trade at Prospect Park, Ridley township, and also owned and managed a large brewery in Philadelphia which he had inherited from his father. The place known as Moore on the Pennsylvania Railroad was named in honor of this family. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Moore: 1. James, who married into the Gray family of Philadelphia. 2. George, who, since the death of his father, has conducted the business at Prospect Park, and who married Eliza Fletcher, a sister of the recorder of deeds of Philadelphia. 3. Harry, who married Sarah Gilmore of Philadelphia, and has five children: Charles, Laura, Sallie, Harry and George. 4. Frederic, deceased. 5. Frank, also deceased. 6. Eliza, who lives at home with her mother. 7. Sarah, who became the wife of Alfred Deering, of Philadelphia, and to whom the following children have been born: Ella N., Fannie, Mabel, Edwin, Charles, deceased; and James, also deceased.

Mr. Moore, the father of this family, died in 1884, leaving many with whom he had been associated in different relations of life to mourn his loss. He had been greatly prospered in temporal matters, and his widow is the owner of much real estate, both in Prospect Park and in Philadelphia.

REBECCA A. SMITH, widow of James A. Smith, and an honored and respected resident of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in which vicinity she has made her home for many years, is a daughter of William Phy, who was born on board a vessel while on the voyage from France to the United States. He is a descendant of a family who were among the first settlers of the city of Philadelphia, and his death occurred in 1869, at the age of eighty-four years.

Rebecca A. Smith was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, in 1826, and she acquired an excellent education at the private schools of Philadelphia. In 1843 she was united in marriage to Jacob Smith, who was born in 1827, and during his entire business career successfully followed agricultural pursuits. His death occurred shortly after their marriage, and subsequently his widow married James A. Smith, now deceased, and the issue of this marriage was a son, who resides in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and has a family of three children. Mrs. Smith was the owner of three small farms which are located in Delaware county, one of which she deeded to her son. She is a woman of clear intellect, refined sensibilities and true womanly instincts, and during her married life devoted her entire time to the duties that devolved upon her in the capacity of wife and mother.

SAMUEL CROSBY, deceased, a citizen of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, whose active life is behind him, leaves a worthy family in the field; he was a farmer known for his enterprise, and his sons are doing good work in various lines. He was of the fourth generation of his family in Chester county, and his kindred are widespread throughout the country.

The family records begin with William Crosby, who married Rachel Henderson, in 1743. Seven children were born, of whom David was the sixth. David Crosby married Ruth Walker, January 1, 1784, and had seven children, William Henderson being the oldest. Ruth was the daughter of Samuel Walker, and there is now in possession of Miss Eliza Crosby a punch bowl which he brought from Ireland in 1724, according to an inscription it bears. David Crosby died in February, 1834. His son, William Henderson, married Jane Dickey, at the Manor meeting house in Chester county. He was born in 1784, and died December 3, 1871. The farm which he long conducted was near the Union school house, Lower Oxford township, and he was also engaged in the hotel business. He was a man of strong individuality, and a staunch Presbyterian. His children were as follows: 1. Isabella, who died young; 2. Caroline, who became the wife of Stewart Woodside, of Chester county; 3. Eliza, who married John Thompson of Chester county; 4. David, deceased; 5. James, deceased; 6. John, who was a professor in a preparatory school in Kent county, Maryland; 7. Samuel, to whom fuller notice is given; 8. William, deceased.

Samuel, seventh child and fourth son of William Henderson and Jane (Dickey) Crosby, was born April 3, 1827, in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His education was that of the average country boy; he went to the district school, where elementary instruction was thorough in those days, and worked on the farm under his father's direction. He remained on the homestead until 1861, when he bought the farm he owned at the time of his death, on the Mt. Vernon road, about a mile and a half north of Oxford. In 1893 he gave the management of his farm into other hands, and moved to his home in Oxford. He was always one of the dependable men of the community, and was for a long time a trustee of the Presbyterian church.

February 24, 1858, he married Annie M. Watt, a daughter of John Watt. Mr. Watt was born and spent his life on a farm about one and one-half miles north of Oxford on the Scroggie road. The children of Samuel and Annie M. (Watt) Crosby, were six in number, namely: 1. Margaret, who married Alfred Ramsey, of Lower Oxford township; 2. William Henderson, who is now living in Maryland; 3. John W. W., who lives on the old homestead; 4. James Jackson, who is professor in a school at Pekin, Illinois; 5. Samuel Albert, who is in business in Chicago; 6. Howard B., engaged in the dairy supply business in Philadelphia.

GEORGE B. JOHNSON, a well known and eminent representative of the legal profession in the borough of West Chester, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of Robert Johnson, a native of Radnor, Wales, and Margaret (Braithwaite) Johnson, a native of Braithwaite, Cumberland-shire, England. On account of the persecution of the Quakers in England, Robert Johnson removed to Coleboy, county Wicklow, Ireland, from whence he and his wife accompanied the English and Irish Quakers who settled the manor of Letitia Penn, which they named after their New Garden Meeting in the county of Carlow, Ireland. Robert Johnson purchased from the proprietors four hundred acres in the northeast corner of the township, where he died in 1732, leaving children: Benjamin, James, Joshua, Robert, Abigail and Ann Johnson.

Benjamin Johnson, eldest son of Robert and Margaret Johnson, married, 9 mo., 5, 1729, Mary Jackson, a daughter of Ephraim and Rachel (Newlin) Jackson, of Edgmont, the latter named being the daughter of Nicholas Newlin, the founder of Newlin township. The homestead which contained three hundred and sixty acres was left to Benjamin, who sold a portion of it in 1739 to Joshua Pusey. Later he removed to Nottingham, where his son, Caleb Johnson was born.

In early life Caleb Johnson, son of Benjamin and Mary Johnson, was a school teacher in Lampeter, and in 1769 he became treasurer of Lancaster county, and his residence was in the borough of Lancaster. On 6 mo., 21, 1765, Mr. Johnson married Martha Davis, a daughter of Joseph and Mary Davis, the former named being a native of England. Their children were: Benjamin, born 3 mo., 25, 1766; Mary (Crew), born 8 mo., 6, 1767; Margaret (Maule), born 4 mo., 27, 1769; Joseph, born 11 mo., 13, 1770; Jacob, born 5 mo., 29, 1772; Rebecca (Maule), born 3 mo., 5, 1774; Ann (Hobson), born 12 mo., 15, 1775; Elizabeth (Maule), born 3 mo., 16, 1779; and Robert, born 12 mo., 2, 1781.

Benjamin Johnson, eldest son of Caleb and Martha Johnson, founder with his brother, Jacob Johnson, in Philadelphia, prior to 1795, a book store and extensive publishing house which was conducted first under the firm name of Johnson & Davis, subsequently Benjamin & Jacob Johnson, which the children and grandchildren of Jacob Johnson have continued under the firm name of Topliff & J. Warner Johnson, as publishers of law books, at 535 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, to the present day. In 1795 Benjamin Johnson accompanied William Savery, Samuel Emlen and other noted ministers of the Society of Friends in a general tour of England, France and Germany. He owned, in addition to large estates in Philadelphia, extensive paper mills located near Newark, Delaware, at Laurel, now Landenberg, and on Muddy Run, a branch of the Octoraro, in Lower Oxford township, Chester county. His summer home was "Chamounix," a beautiful country mansion which is now a part of Fairmount Park in Philadelphia. He married Jane Richards, only child of Daniel and Rachel (Bettle) Richards, of Philadelphia. Their children were: Caleb, who married Susan Morris, of Philadelphia; Edward, who married Ruth P. Brinton, of West Chester; William Savery, who married Sarah Paul, of Strafford, Delaware county; Benjamin, mentioned hereinafter; Rachel, who became the wife of Stephen Morris, of Philadelphia; and Richard, who died unmarried.

Benjamin Davis Johnson, fourth son of Benjamin and Jane Johnson, moved from Philadelphia to Parkesburg in 1846, and thence to Alton farm in East Bradford township, Chester county, in 1864. He married Elizabeth Coale, a daughter of William, of Harford county, Maryland, and Elizabeth Ferree (Brinton) Coale, of Paradise township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Rachel Morris, who became the wife of Dr. E. Hopkins, of Darlington, Maryland; William Coale, who married Martha Bettle, of Philadelphia; Lydia Coale, who became the wife of J. Clemson Sharpless, of Downingtown; Richards H., who married Laura Cochran, of West Chester; Jane J., who became the wife of Oliver Sidwell, of West Chester; Frederick B., who married Anna Black, of Philadelphia; George B., mentioned hereinafter; and Lindley, who married Mary Mercer.

George B. Johnson, fourth son of Benjamin D. and Elizabeth C. Johnson, was born near Parkesburg, Sadsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 8, 1858. He was a graduate of the Westtown Friends' School, and later pursued a post-graduate course under Professor J. H. Worrall, at West Chester, which was equivalent to completing the junior year at Harvard. For a period of almost three years after completing his studies, he devoted his attention to civil engineering, and in 1876 was appointed to a position in the bureau of awards of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, where he spent the summer and autumn of that year in the faithful discharge of the duties connected therewith. On January 1, 1877, he entered the law office of Oliver Sidwell, Esq., at West Chester, and subsequently pursued a course of legal study under the efficient preceptorship of Hon. Joseph J. Lewis, one of the most talented attorneys in the state of Pennsylvania. He was admitted to practice in the courts of Chester county in September, 1880, and from that year up to the present time (1903) has been actively engaged in his chosen calling in the borough of West Chester and the courts of Delaware and Philadelphia counties, of which he is also a member. Mr. Johnson is also an active practitioner in the United States courts in Philadelphia, in which he has tried many important cases, he being a noted and eloquent orator.

Geo. F. Johnson

Mr. Johnson was united in marriage, May 29, 1889, to May Cooke, a daughter of Dr. George Cooke, of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania. They have one daughter, Marjorie Payne Johnson, born March 8, 1895.

No attempt is made here to enumerate the descendants of Robert Johnson, the pioneer ancestor, as they have been scattered all over the United States, being especially numerous in Indiana and the middle west, the direct descendants who have remained in Chester and Delaware counties only being named in this brief review. There are also ancestors on the paternal or maternal side from the families of other English emigrants who came over in the Puritan, Quaker and Huguenot immigration to America, many of whom are mentioned elsewhere in this history. Among them are descendants of the families of Oliver and Rebecca Cope, who came with William Penn; from Richard Buffington, the first child born of English parents in Pennsylvania; from Philip and James Coale, associates of George Fox; from William Brinton, of Birmingham, a descendant of Adam de Brinton, who had his English estates confiscated for his part in the Barons war at Runnymede in 1216, and from Daniel Ferree or Verree, a French Huguenot, whose forefathers were Dukes of Normandy and their descendants chief justices of England for several generations after the Norman conquest. Daniel Ferree died for his religion, upon the revocation of the edict of Nantes (1685), and his children were pioneer settlers in Paradise township, Lancaster county, in 1715.

WILLIAM L. HEDRICKS, one of the foremost among the enterprising farmers and active citizens of Schuylkill township, Chester county, is a grandson of Stephen Hedricks, an iron-worker, who lived to the age of eighty-four years.

His son, Charles, was born in Chester county, where he followed the occupation of a farmer. He married Harriet, daughter of John Hahn, who was engaged in the iron business in this county.

William L. Hedricks, son of Charles and Harriet (Hahn) Hedricks, was born October 14, 1869, in Tredyffrin township, where he obtained his education in the public schools. On beginning life for himself he was employed as a clerk by Isaac Price, at Schuylkill Corners, remaining in this position six years. For five years he was in the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company in the capacity of a foreman, and then engaged for several years in the business of raising garden produce, both wholesale and retail. He now resides on the old Buckwalter farm in Schuylkill township. This estate, which consists of fifty-six acres, he cultivates for purposes of general farming and gardening. He also carries on threshing with a fine traction engine, and is engaged in other industries of a kindred nature. The success which has attended him in all his undertakings furnishes the best and the most convincing evidence of his business ability and his practical skill. He takes an active part in local affairs, and has been elected by his neighbors constable of the township. His political affiliations are with the Republicans. He is a member of Paoli Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Hedricks married Anna Carpenter who was born October 5, 1869. Mr. and Mrs. Hedricks are the parents of two children: a daughter, Margaret, and a son, Charles, who is named in memory of his grandfather.

HERBERT A. MOZER, one of the enterprising and prosperous agriculturists of Chester county, residing in the vicinity of Kimberton, was born in East Fikeland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 29, 1877, a son of William S. and Louise (Yeager) Mozer.

William S. Mozer (father), also a native of East Pikeland township, Chester county, was reared on the old homestead and received the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of that day. His entire life was spent in this locality, many years of it being devoted to the cultivation and improvement of a fine farm, supplied with good buildings, which is now the property of his son, Herbert A. Mozer. He always manifested a keen interest in all questions that affected the material growth and improvement of the community, and his political allegiance was given to the Democratic party. He served as constable of the town for twenty-four consecutive years, and was also collector of taxes and school director for a number of years. William S. Mozer and his wife, Louise (Yeager) Mozer, were the parents of four children—Herbert A., mentioned at length hereinafter; Alice, deceased; Harry, employed as a machinist in the Phoenix Iron Works; and Charles, employed as a conductor on the Electric Railroad in Phoenix, Pennsylvania. The death of Mr. Mozer occurred April 10, 1902. His wife is also deceased.

Herbert A. Mozer grew to manhood on his father's farm, and the early years of his life were spent in attendance at the public schools of the community, where he acquired a practical education, and in gaining a thorough knowledge of agricultural pursuits, which he has put to a practical test during the past few years. He resides on the old homestead, is active and industrious, and by his practical and progressive method of conducting his business is enabled to realize a goodly profit from his labors. In politics he follows the example of his father, and casts his vote with the Democratic party, but has not taken any active part in township affairs. Mr. Mozer is unmarried.

GEORGE BRINTON PAINTER, of Darby, Delaware county, is a representative of an old and honored Pennsylvania family. His paternal grandparents were William and Phebe (Churchman) Painter, both of whom were buried at the Penn's burying ground, at Wilmington, Delaware.

Their son, Darwin Painter, was born March 12, 1820, near Brandywine Summit, Birmingham township, Delaware county, where he died January 22, 1891. In early life he was a farmer, and for a number of years afterwards he was a merchant in Concordville, Delaware county. He was a most worthy and upright man, and was held in high esteem. For a number of years he was a justice of the peace. He was married August 28, 1839, to Sarah Brinton Peirce, a daughter of William and Sarah (Brinton) Peirce. She was born January 4, 1821, probably at Middletown, and died at Concordville, February 18, 1887. She was a woman of high excellence of character and through her kindness and benevolence she attached to herself all who knew her.

The children of Darwin and Sarah Brinton (Peirce) Painter were: 1. George Brinton, further mentioned hereafter. 2. William P., born in Birmingham, Delaware county, February 3, 1842; he is a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and is a practicing physician in Darby, is treasurer of the borough and a director in the Darby Bank; he married Margaret Middleton, and they are the parents of a child, Rosalie M. 3. Emlen, born September 8, 1844, and died at Spuyten Duyvil, near New York city, January 15, 1890; he was a druggist by occupation; he married in San Francisco, California, Lizzie Staples; their children were: (a) Adaline, born August 24, 1873, died in 1882; (b) Edward E., born February 20, 1875, and died in 1898; David, born July 9, 1878, Phebe, born March 19, 1881, and Elizabeth Darwina, born May 19, 1882; the mother of these children died February 23, 1883; Emlen Painter then married, February 7, 1884, Mary H. Weeks, and to them was born a son, William W., December 8, 1889. 4. Phoebe, born October 29, 1846, and died June 25, 1848. 5. Jane B., born July 27, 1849, and died at East Bradford, December 30, 1872; she married Mark H. Darlington, March 26, 1872, and of this marriage was born a son, Dr. Emlen Painter Darlington, of Kennett Square. 6. Samuel H., born January 26, 1852; he was educated at Maplewood Academy, at Concordville, where he was afterwards a merchant; he then purchased and has since cultivated the homestead farm at Brandywine Summit; he married, at West Chester, February 10, 1876, Edith L. Thomas, who was born November 21, 1854, a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth R. (Smith) Thomas; their children were: (a) Jennie T., born March 30, 1878; (b) Isaac D., born August 22, 1880; (c) Walter, born April 27, 1884; (d) Sarah B., born April 22, 1887.

George Brinton Painter, eldest child of Darwin and Sarah Brinton (Peirce) Painter, was born in Birmingham, Delaware county, June 22, 1840. In early life he became a student in the Westtown Boarding School, which was then under the direction of Professor David Reece. Having graduated after the completion of his course, he became an employee in the store of R. J. Halderman, of West Chester, in which establishment he remained for three years, and during this time he gained a full mastery of business principles and methods. He then went to Concordville, where he purchased the general store of William Chanler, which he conducted for four years, sold out and removed to Philadelphia. About that time the firm of J. C. Chance & Company had failed, and Mr. Painter purchased the interests of the creditors, after which he settled all outstanding accounts and under the firm name of Chance & Painter resumed business, dealing only in dry goods, the enterprise being located at Fifteenth and Market streets. Subsequently Mr. Painter purchased his partner's interest and continued in business alone. While still conducting his store he secured the position of buyer with the firm of Folwell Brothers, with whom he was connected for several years. He subsequently disposed of all his business interests in Philadelphia and removed to Darby with the intention of leading a retired life, but inactivity was utterly foreign to his nature, and he established a flour and feed store which he still conducts.

During the Civil war, Mr. Painter manifested his loyalty to the Union cause by enlisting in response to Governor A. G. Curtin's call for troops. In politics he has always been a Republican where state and national questions are involved, but in local affairs his support is given to the men whom he deems best qualified for office. He is active in public and business affairs in Darby, and at the present time is vice-president of the First National Bank, and, with the exception of the president, is the only charter member of the board still connected with the institution. He is also a member of the board of directors of the Lansdowne and Darby Savings Fund and Trust Company.

April 13, 1865, Mr. Painter was married to Emma J. Thatcher, a daughter of Garrett and Hannah H. (Pyle) Thatcher. Of this marriage was born one child, Howard Thatcher Painter, October 7, 1866, who married Eva Wheaton Converse, of Boston, daughter of James Wheaton Converse, Jr., by whom he has one daughter, Dorothy Converse Painter. Emma Thatcher Painter died February 3, 1889, and for his second wife, George B. Painter married Sarah Mull Runyan, daughter of William and Mary A. (Green) Runyan.

THOMAS W. BROWN. The progenitor of the American branch of the Brown family, of which Thomas W. Brown, an esteemed and respected citizen of Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative, was David Brown, born December 18, 1758, who came to this country from Ireland, accompanied by two brothers, and presumably settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. In 1798 David Brown located in Lancaster county and purchased a four hundred acre tract of land, whereon he resided up to the time of his decease, April 21, 1843. David Brown married Diana Allen, and nine children were the issue of this marriage: Allen, David, John, Sarah, James A., Mercer, William, Jane, and George Brown.

James Allen Brown (grandfather), fourth son of David and Diana (Allen) Brown, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, January 25, 1792. He married Anna D. Pusey, born January 30, 1796, and they were the parents of the following named children: John, Lea P., Samuel P., James A., Mary D., Emily, and David Brown.

Lea P. Brown (father), second son of James A. and Anna D. (Pusey) Brown, was born on the old homestead in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, September 28, 1817. He was reared in his native township, educated in the common schools, and his business career was devoted to farming on the paternal estate, whereon he conducted extensive operations up to the time of his decease, January 23, 1890. Mr. Brown was united in marriage to Elizabeth P. Patterson, and two children were born to them: Thomas W., born September 26, 1856, and James Edgar, born July 8, 1865, married Mary D. Ross, and their children are: Eleanor, Frances, Marion, and Ross Brown.

Thomas W. Brown, eldest son of Lea P. and Elizabeth P. (Patterson) Brown, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, September 26, 1856. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood, where he acquired a practical education which thoroughly qualified him for the active duties and responsibilities of life. He assisted with the work on the old homestead until the spring of 1884, when he removed to Coleraine, Lancaster county, but the following year he located in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, assumed charge of his father's farm there, and this property he became the possessor of by inheritance at the time of his father's decease. His farm consists of one hundred and fourteen acres of fertile and arable land, devoted to general farming purposes, and the products of his farm well repay him for the care and labor bestowed upon it. He is a staunch and earnest supporter of the principles of the Republican party, has filled the office of auditor, and is now serving in the capacity of school director of the township.

In 1882 Mr. Brown married Georgie A. Paxson, born in Coleraine, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, March 5, 1857, a daughter of William and Mary Paxson. Their children are: Wanita, born February 22, 1889, Leola, born June 24, 1891, and Pauline, born May 9, 1896. William Paxson, father of Mrs. Brown, was a son of Joseph and Sarah (Walters) Paxson; William Paxson and his wife, Mary Paxson, were the parents of the following named children: Oric, married Mary Drennan; Edwin, married Anna Moffie; Margretta, deceased, was the wife of John Johnson; Washington, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; Joseph, deceased; William, married Estelle Deaver; Georgie A., wife of Thomas W. Brown; Elwood, married Lily Malford; Harry, married Lily McCarter, and Sumner Paxson. For more than a quarter of a century Mr. Brown has maintained the character of an upright and intelligent business man, and in his dealings he has been noted for judgment, prudence, honesty and foresight.

BAYARD A. CONARD, actively and prominently identified with the various interests of Font, Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of William Conard (Conradt), a native of Germany, who settled in Horsham township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, about 1740, removing to Londonderry township, Chester county, about the year 1799. His time and attention were directed principally to agricultural pursuits, and, being a practical and progressive man, he was eminently successful in this undertaking. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Diademia Anne Bean, was a native of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, a birthright member of the Quaker religion, as was also her husband, and their respective deaths occurred at eighty years and eighty-four years.

William Conard, son of William and Diademia Anne Conard, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania. During the early years of his lifetime he was engaged in the quiet but useful calling of a farmer, conducting his operations in Penn township, Chester county, but subsequently he retired from business pursuits and resided in Wilmington, Delaware. He was a beloved and esteemed member of the Society of Friends, taking a keen and active interest in all their meetings. He was united in marriage to Rachel Gray, daughter of Anthony and Mary (Beale) Gray, who bore him several children. His death occurred in Wilmington, Delaware, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years.

Edmund Conard, son of William and Rachel Conard, was born in Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Upon attaining young manhood he chose the occupation followed by his forefathers, that of farming, which proved a remunerative means of livelihood for a number of years. Later he changed his place of residence to Wilmington, Delaware, where he engaged in the grocery business, and he remained a citizen of that town up to his decease, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. His wife, Lydia M. (Andress) Conard, was a daughter of Frederick and Phebe Andress.

Bayard A. Conard, son of Edmund and Lydia M. Conard, was born in Wilmington, Delaware, October 5, 1855. During his early childhood his parents removed to Fulton county, Illinois, but after a residence of four years in that section of the United States they removed to Kent county, Maryland, and after a residence of a similar period of time there they returned to Wilmington, Delaware. At the age of fourteen years he was apprenticed to the printing trade, at which he was employed as a journeyman and foreman for a number of years. After abandoning this line of trade he engaged in the general merchandising business, commencing his operations at Chadds Ford, where he remained for six years. At Upland, Delaware county, he continued in the same business for ten years, and from thence removed to his present residence at Font. He achieved a large degree of success in his new enterprise during his residence in the various localities, and has won an enviable reputation among his business associates. He also serves in the capacity of postmaster of the village. He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, a member of the State Military Organization of Delaware, and is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of Pythias.

At Marshallton, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 5, 1879, Mr. Conard was married to Phebe J. Baldwin, daughter of Erskine and Mary Baldwin. Mr. Baldwin is a farmer by occupation, and both he and his wife are members of the Society of Friends.

THE WILLS FAMILY. Michael Wills, with his wife and family, came from Rathdrum in the county of Wicklow, Ireland, in the spring of 1728, and in the year 1729 his name appears among the taxables of Whiteland township, Chester county. After this he disappears from the county and had probably removed to Philadelphia county. At the time of making his will, November 28, 1748, he was living in Lower Merion township, Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county. Tradition and such evidence as is obtainable indicate that the Wills family, like the Hunters, Waynes and others who came from Wicklow, were English, and that they removed to Ireland during the Revolution of 1688, in or after the English army.

Owen Thomas and Catherine Wills were married at Christ church, Philadelphia, August 25, 1730. This was doubtless the daughter of Michael Wills. One Thomas Wills appears in the tax lists for Middletown township (now) Delaware county, 1729 and later, and it is a question whether he was the son of Michael or a younger brother. He married, March 22, 1730-1, Ann Penrose, widow, daughter of Peter Hunter, and died June 20, 1772, aged seventy-seven years. He was ancestor of the Hemphill family of Chester county.

Michael Wills, Jr., born about 1709, married Jane Mather, daughter of Thomas Mather, who is said to have come over in the same vessel with the Wills family, she being ten years younger than her husband. Her brother James married Joanna Wills, sister to Michael, and they settled in Harford county, Maryland.

Several letters from relatives in Ireland, to Michael Wills, have been preserved, and show that his residence must have been at different places, as they are directed to Tredyffrin, Merion, Radnor and Newtown. One of these, written by William Peters, an uncle, dated August 22, 1743, reads: "Your grandfather and grandmother send their blessing to your father, including all your brothers and sisters." These grandparents may have been the parents of William Peters, for in another letter, dated May 26, 1749, he speaks of his father as being nearly six score, or one hundred and twenty years old at that date. The tax lists show that Michael Wills, Jr., was living in Tredyffrin in 1749-1754, and in Coventry, 1756-1764, and perhaps later. In 1764 he was assessed with one hundred and thirty acres of land, six horses, nine cattle, twenty sheep and a servant. He afterward lived in Plymouth, Montgomery county. A tombstone in the churchyard of St. David's, or Radnor church, contains this inscription:

Yours Sincerely
H. H. H. H.

"Here Lies interr'd in full assurance of a joyful Resurrection the Body of Michael Wills who after he had liv'd through a long Course of years a patern of virtue Patience & Piety Eschanged this Earthly for a Heavenly habitation on the 8th Day of October 1794 In the 86th year of his Age. To whose Memory this Monument was Erected by his disconsolate Widow." (Some other lines follow).

His widow survived him ten years, just the difference in their ages, and was buried at the same place. Their grandson, the late A. Allen Wood Wills, of Downingtown, to whom we are indebted for much of the family history, says: "My grandfather was reputed a careful business man. His wife Jane managed things very energetically, and I remember to have heard my father say that if his father had been equally shiftly they might have owned a half a township of land."

"My grandfather had three sons, Jeremiah, Michael and John: also three daughters, Rebecca, Mary and Elizabeth. The first of the sisters married Michael Mather, the second Jacob Whiteman, and the third John Mather. This may not be the order of their ages, and there may have been more of them, but I think these are all that left children."

Michael Wills, third, born in Chester county, about 1755, died January 15, 1829; married Ann, daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Keyser Wood, of Roxborough, Philadelphia, both of German descent. She died April 29, 1832. They had fourteen children, nine of whom lived to maturity; as follows:

1. Elizabeth, married Levi Evans and had five sons and one daughter.
2. Andrew, born June 18, 1798. See forward.
3. Jane, married John B. Hahn and had eight children.
4. William of Plymouth, died 1877, married Elizabeth Marple and had children: Allen, married Hannah Supplee; Andrew, married Eleanora Williams; Clarence, married Harriet Hogan; William, married Sarah Roberts; Annie, married William E. Cochran; Lewis.
5. Mary, twin with William, married first John Hunter, secondly Francis Parke, but had no children.
6. Ann, married John Gorgas and left one daughter, Susan Gorgas, living in West Chester.

7. Allen Wood, born February 23, 1810; died October 28, 1873.

8. Rebecca, died in her minority.

9. Sarah, died unmarried.

The other five children were buried at Radnor churchyard.

Andrew Wills, M. D., born in Plymouth township, Montgomery county, died at Lionville, Chester county, July 7, 1871; married in Philadelphia, November 12, 1826, Sarah Hannum, born May 2, 1807, died in Norristown, April 1, 1883; daughter of James Hannum and Sarah Edge Reese, of Downingtown. He studied medicine and was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, 1825, and practiced medicine in Chester county for forty-six years. He and his wife were buried at St. John's church, Norristown. They had fourteen children, as follows:

1. Sarah Ann, born February 28, 1828; died at Downingtown, January 10, 1843.

2. Mary, born May 21, 1829; married Washington T. Koplín, and lives at Norristown, Pennsylvania.

3. Ellen, born September 6, 1830, is living in West Chester, Pennsylvania, unmarried.

4. Morgan Reese, born in West Whiteland township, October 21, 1831, married Mary Hitner Dager and secondly Elizabeth Willits Marple. He is editor and proprietor of the Norristown Herald since 1864, issued daily after 1869. He has two daughters.

5. Edward Smith, born January 21, 1833; married Fanny Humiston and secondly Marion Anna Isabell. He has been superintendent of the Atchison, Kansas, Water Company since 1884, and has had ten children.

6. Clara, born August 31, 1834; married Hunter Evans Van Leer. They live in Philadelphia and have had eight children.

7. Rebecca, born March 8, 1836; married in 1876 D. Smith Talbot, attorney-at-law, of West Chester, Pennsylvania. No issue.

8. Andrew, born April 25, 1837, was wounded at Fort Donelson, and died February 18, 1862, unmarried.

9. Horace, born November 11, 1838; died August 20, 1854.

10. Frances Jane, born September 2, 1840; died October 24, 1842.

11. Elizabeth, born November 13, 1842; died June 14, 1898; married D. Webster Evans of Uwchlan township, and left one son.

12. Ann, born March 13, 1844; married T. Lewis Vickers, of Lionville, now of New York city. They have one daughter.

13. Susan, born September 8, 1846; died same date.

14. Florence, born December 25, 1848; married George R. Hoopes, of West Chester, wholesale grain dealer, sometime sheriff of Chester county. They have two daughters, both married.

Allen Wood Wills married Elizabeth H. Evans and resided at Downingtown. After his death there was found among his papers a manuscript containing interesting facts relative to the family history, which were subsequently put into print by a nephew for private circulation. He had six children:

1. Rebecca, married Dr. Samuel Ringwalt, of Lancaster county, and had one son, John Luther Ringwalt, now of Philadelphia.

2. Anna, married Daniel Baugh, and resides in Philadelphia.

3. George E., born September 16, 1842; died December 31, 1884; married Tamazine Zook, now wife of Charles Downing, of Downingtown. He left one child, Elizabeth Hunter Wills.

4. J. Hunter, a merchant in Downingtown mentioned hereinafter.

5. Abner E., residing in Philadelphia; unmarried.

6. Allen Wood, died at Downingtown, unmarried.

J. Hunter Wills, second son of Allen Wood and Elizabeth H. (Evans) Wills, and a prominent merchant and leading business man of Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born July 2, 1845, in East Brandywine township, Chester county, which was the home of his parents, who in 1853 took up their residence in Downingtown.

J. Hunter Wills acquired a liberal education in the public school and academy at Downingtown, and the public school and a commercial college in the city of Philadelphia. In 1863 he began his business career by engaging with Baugh & Sons, of Philadelphia, and continued in their employ for a period of thirteen years. February 14, 1876, he established a business on his own account at East Downingtown, and since that date has conducted a general mercantile trade which is the most extensive in that section of the county. He has been an important factor in the material growth and development of the community in which he resides. He was the founder of the Downingtown Building and Loan Association, which has proved so beneficial to the working people of the town, and for the first twelve years filled the office of president. He is a member of the board of trade, and is a manager of the Northwood cemetery at Downingtown, which, through his instrumentality, is becoming one of the most beautiful resting places for the dead in the county. Mr. Wills was a member of the Downingtown school board for twelve years, the president of the same for nine years, and during that period of time greatly improved the system by extending the term and improving the grade. He was chief burgess of the borough from 1900 to 1903, during which time many of the important manufacturing plants were established in the town. For a number of years he has been active in public affairs, is a member of the Chester county Republican Committee.

For twenty-nine consecutive years Mr. Wills has served as a member of the vestry of the Episcopal church, toward the support of which he has contributed most liberally. During the war of the Rebellion he served his country with credit. He enlisted in 1861, being then only sixteen years of age, as a drummer boy under General Brooke, in the Fifty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, later served with the First Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry, and in 1863 enlisted in the Twenty-ninth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served during the battles of Antietam and Gettysburg. He is a member of General W. S. Hancock Post, No. 255, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Pennsylvania, and is chaplain, trustee and representative to the department encampment; served on the staff of the department commander in 1903, and on that of the national commander in 1904. He is affiliated with Potter Lodge No. 441, F. and A. M., Philadelphia.

Mr. Wills married, in 1881, Katherine Elliott Lindley, of Downingtown, Pennsylvania, who died February 18, 1898. One son was the issue of this union, William Mintzer Wills, who is a member of the class of 1904 of Haverford College.

JOHN O. K. ROBARTS, editor and proprietor of the Phoenixville Messenger, is known throughout Chester and adjoining counties in Pennsylvania for his lively and virile paragraphs, is an Englishman, born at Plymouth, in Devonshire, the town from which the Pilgrims sailed and for which they named their settlement in this country.

John O. K. Robarts was born May 29, 1835, a son of Thomas and Mary Robarts, and is the last of a family of nine children. He came to America with his father and mother when he was fifteen years old. The landing was made in New York, May 15, 1850, after fifty-three days on the Atlantic. The party soon moved on into Pennsylvania, and the first five years of his life in this country John Robarts spent in and about Reading. During this time he attended school, worked in the mines, and learned the trade of pattern making. He moved to Phoenixville April 1, 1855, and has since made it his home. For the past thirty years he has been editor of the Messenger, a weekly newspaper founded in 1871. He has been a Republican all his life, but has only once been an office holder. His independent administration brought him more hard knocks than profit, and he did not care to repeat.

the experience. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, which he joined more than thirty-five years ago, and which holds his heartiest allegiance in spite of experience in many secret orders. He has been well known as a singer, his musical gifts contributing largely to his popularity; but the real basis of the esteem in which he is held is the sentiment which he long ago made the motto of his life, "The man is he who does manly things."

His wife, who was a Miss Thomson, and one daughter, Mrs. John A. Yost, constitute his household.

J. F. RAMSEY, of East Fallowfield, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of a family probably of Celtic origin that has furnished much valuable citizenship to Chester county, and contributed largely to its industrial development.

The grandfather of J. F. Ramsey was James Ramsey, who was a resident of the old Highland township, now called East Fallowfield. James Ramsey was the father of a large family. Robert, the sixth child, born in 1809, was brought up on his father's farm, and educated in the local schools, afterward learning the trade of wheelwright, and engaging in business with his uncle. But farming was to him a more congenial occupation, and subsequently he purchased one hundred and nine acres of land in East Fallowfield township, near McWilliamstown, where he lived until the time of his death, in 1867. He was a man of high repute in his section, who stood always for the higher interests of the community. He was a Democrat, and at different times held most of the local offices. As a member of the Presbyterian church he was one of its active workers and liberal supporters. His wife was Mary, a daughter of Adam Reed, and his children were as follows: James, a farmer of East Fallowfield; William R., who married Sarah Bennix, and was the father of nine children; Lizzie; Robert E., who married Lizzie Young, and had three children, only one of whom survives; Ella M., who died unmarried; J. F., who receives further mention in this article; Annie, who died in infancy; Charles, who died at eighteen.

J. F. Ramsey, sixth child and fourth son of Robert and Mary (Reed) Ramsey, was born in East Fallowfield township, September 5, 1853, on the farm which is now his home. His early instruction in the district school was supplemented by study at the Unionville Academy, and he early began his life as a farmer. To him has fallen the care of the home place, and his pride in the old associations has been mingled with the wish to leave a worthy impress of his own work there. He takes especial interest in the fine dairy, which he manages in connection with a general line of farm work. He is an active participant in local affairs of the Democratic party, being a member of the county committee. He is a member of Williamson Lodge, No. 309, Free and Accepted Masons, of Downingtown, and also of the Junior Order of American Mechanics of Mortonville, Pennsylvania.

CHARLES E. SMITH, a prominent and successful agriculturist of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Germantown, Pennsylvania, in 1825, the son of Timothy Smith, who was born in England, where he obtained a practical education in the common schools of his native town. After completing his studies, Timothy Smith learned the trade of cloth manufacturing, and to this occupation he devoted his entire time and attention, becoming one of the prominent cloth manufacturers of his town. His death occurred in the year 1863.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Charles E. Smith were obtained in the common schools of Germantown, Pennsylvania, after which he entered a factory and learned the trade of cotton spinner. He pursued this occupation for a number of years in his native town, discharging his duties with marked fidelity and ability. In 1855 he removed to Delaware county, and for thirty years he continued to labor at his trade of spinning. After the expiration of this long period of time, Mr. Smith purchased a tract of land which he devoted to the cultivation of a general line of garden produce, and he also owns an extensive milk dairy. He is a man of sound judgment, keen discretion and untiring energy and to these qualities are attributed the success that he has attained in this undertaking.

On March 17, 1851, Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Margaret C. Lord, daughter of James Lord, and nine children were born to them, three of whom are living at the present time (1902). Anthoni C., J. B. and Panola Smith. Charles E. Smith, a grandson of Mr. Smith, enlisted in Company C, Sixteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served faithfully in the Philippine Islands during the Spanish-American war, making an excellent record.

THOMAS HARGREAVES. In business life Mr. Hargreaves has attained a high degree of success. Whatever he undertakes he carries forward to a prosperous conclusion, and to-day he is acting in the capacity of manager of the Grand Opera House and also proprietor of the Arcade Hotel, both of which buildings are situated in the city of Chester, Pennsylvania.

Thomas Hargreaves, grandfather of Thomas Hargreaves, was born in England, where he acquired a practical education in the common schools; later he learned the trade of spinner in the village of Derry, Lancastershire, and followed that occupation there until 1850, when he came to America and settled in Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He secured employment in the carpet weaving factories of the city, and by exercising prudence and thrift he was enabled to accumulate a competence for himself and family. He was twice married, his first wife having borne him three sons: George, James and John.

George Hargreaves, father of Thomas Hargreaves, was born in Lancastershire, England, and after obtaining a good common school education he learned the trade of dyer, at which he worked in the English cotton factories until he came to the United States, and also located in the city of Chester, where he resided for the remainder of his life. He was an ardent supporter of the men and measures advocated by the Republican party and always took an active interest in all local affairs. He was also a prominent member of Larkin Lodge, No. 76, Knights of Pythias. Mr. Hargreaves was united in marriage to Miss Mary Fletcher, and the following named children were born to them: Alice, Ella, George, died in early childhood; Thomas, Sarah, died in childhood; and Jennie Hargreaves. The father of these children died in 1890, and his wife passed away in the year 1889.

Thomas Hargreaves, youngest son of George and Mary Hargreaves, was born at Chester, Pennsylvania, August 6, 1860. He was reared in his native city, where he attended the public schools, and after completing his course of study he was employed in the mill with his father from the age of sixteen until he attained his twenty-first year. Later, Mr. Hargreaves established a bottling business at Chester, manufacturing soft drinks, which occupation he followed until 1890. He then erected the Grand Opera House, of Chester, which furnishes a handsome house for amusement and public gatherings and fills a want long felt by the people of this city. Mr. Hargreaves is now the manager of the opera house, and in 1899 he organized and has since had on the road a circus which has met with abundant success and encouragement and has permitted him to display his thorough knowledge of the class of amusement appreciated by the American public. In January, 1892, he became the proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel in Chester, and since that date he has also assumed control of the Arcade Hotel, two of the leading hotels in the city. Being fond of athletic sports, and having a special liking for the national game of base ball, he early became an expert player, and later organized a base ball club in the city of Chester, with which he visited all the principal points in eastern Pennsylvania, and successfully contended on the diamond with many of the best base ball teams in this part of the state. This organization became well known in the sporting circles of the country, and in addition to winning fame as expert players, was also very successful from a financial standpoint. In his political affiliations Mr. Hargreaves is a Republican, and has served in the Chester city council for the past fourteen years; he also served for three years as chief of the fire department of the city. He is a member of Camp No. 489, Patriotic Order of the Sons of America.

Mr. Hargreaves married Miss Ella McClurg, a daughter of John and Jane (Robinson) McClurg, and their children are Ella and Thomas, who died in infancy.

CAPTAIN CHARLES D. HARRIS, a prominent citizen of Norwood, Pennsylvania, was born in 1846, in Philadelphia, and is the son of John A. and Amanda (Dancenhower) Harris. He served in the army during the Civil war, and about 1893 moved to Norwood, where he accepted the office of justice of the peace. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Captain Harris married, in 1875, Clara Virginia, daughter of James R. Walker, of Philadelphia. Mr. Walker, who was descended from an old family, was born in 1808, in Monmouth county, New Jersey, and engaged in the shoe-cutting business in Philadelphia. He married, in 1847, Amanda Singerly, of that city, and their children were: Sarah, who married Theodore Reeve, of Philadelphia; William F., who married Idylette Prosser, of Rhode Island; Clara Virginia, mentioned above as the wife of Captain Charles D. Harris; and Franklin Lincoln, who married Margaret Richardson, of Philadelphia.

JOHN WALTER CHANDLER, deceased, was a lineal descendant of William and Rebecca (Wilkinson) Chandler, who had by their marriage a son Allen Chandler, who was born 10 mo., 22, 1759, and died 12 mo., 24, 1837; he married Sarah Pyle, daughter of Joseph and Alice Pyle, and was born 8 mo., 25, 1758. To this marriage were born six children, namely: 1. Joseph, born 1 mo., 10, 1790; 2. John, born 12 mo., 24, 1791; 3. Hannah, born 2 mo., 6, 1794; 4. William, born 3 mo., 27, 1796; 5. Allen, born 7 mo., 16, 1798; 6. James, born 12 mo., 17, 1800.

John Chandler, second son of Allen and Sarah (Pyle) Chandler, married, 5 mo., 11, 1826, Maria Jane Walter, who was born 3 mo., 21, 1804, and was a daughter of William and Sarah (Taylor) Walter. William Walter, grandfather of John Walter Chandler, was a son of Joseph and Jane (Brinton) Walter, the former named having been a son of Goodwin Walter, who was the first of this branch of the family of whom we have any authentic information. The early ancestors of these different families through which John W. Chandler was descended were members of the Society of Friends, and were numbered among the leading families of their generation and day, and many of their descendants are to the present time faithful adherents to the religious belief of their forefathers. John and Maria Jane (Walter) Chandler were the parents of the following named children: 1. Daniel Webster, born 3 mo., 19, 1827; he married Emma Babb. 2. Sarah W., born 3 mo., 10, 1829; she became the wife of Colonel Kersey Coates, one of the principal founders of Kansas City, Missouri. 3. John Walter, born 1 mo., 29, 1832. 4. William Allen, born 9 mo., 10, 1834; he became a practicing physician, and was united in marriage to Louisa Stemm. 5. Joseph James, born 1 mo., 26, 1839.

JOHN W. CHANDLER

John Walter Chandler, the third child and second son of John and Maria Jane (Walter) Chandler, was born at Doe Run, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 1 mo., 29, 1832. When he was five years of age his parents removed to Kennett Square, where he was sent to private school, and subsequently completed his education at the West Grove and London Grove Boarding Schools. He then returned to the parental roof and assisted his father upon the firm until 1852. Having decided upon a professional career, he took up the study of dentistry in the office and under the direction of Dr. Howard Chambers, with whom he remained for a year and a half, and during this period he gained an excellent knowledge of both the mechanical and scientific departments of the profession. He entered upon practice on his own account in Chatham, Chester county, where he remained for four years, a portion of which time was spent in professional work in Kennett Square. At the expiration of this period of time he relinquished the practice of his profession on account of ill health, and subsequently engaged in mercantile pursuits, continuing in this line and other enterprises until 1892. In that year he removed to Kansas City, Missouri, remained a resident there until 1895, and then returned to his native state and took up his residence in Lansdowne, Delaware county, where he was to some extent engaged in the real estate business. Mr. Chandler was a man of excellent business qualifications and scrupulous integrity, and was respected in the community for his general usefulness and sterling character. He was reared in the faith of his forefathers, and he brought up his family in the same faith. He was a member of Rising Star Lodge, No. 126, Free and Accepted Masons, of Philadelphia, which he joined in 1866. In politics he was a Republican.

John Walter Chandler was married, 1 mo., 1, 1861, to Almira L. Taylor, who was born 12 mo., 9, 1838, a daughter of Milton and Sarah (Sharp) Taylor, and of this marriage were born four children: 1. Frederick T., born 12 mo., 5, 1863; he married Hattie M. Andrews, of Philadelphia, and their children are: Eleanor, Marion, Burton and Frederick. 2. Louisa, who became the wife of Wallace C. Williams, and they are the parents of one daughter, Myra C. Williams. 3. Percy M., born 2 mo., 6, 1873; he married Emma B. Mendenhall. 4. Mary, who became the wife of Albert R. Loughlin. The death of John Walter Chandler occurred at his home in Lansdowne, Delaware county, 4 mo., 25, 1903.

TAYLOR FAMILY. A pretty story comes down to us from the time of religious persecution, to the effect that the Taylor ancestor was among those who found himself, with some others, an inmate of a prison on account of his adherence to the doctrines of George Fox and failure to observe the ordinances of the established church. A fashionable young woman happened to be visiting in the vicinity of the prison, and for entertainment was taken to see these strange fanatics who were arousing some curiosity by their unusual behavior. As the visitors passed around, she noticed one of the prisoners engaged in writing a letter, and stepping behind him, she peered over his shoulder to see what he had written. Turning his eyes to hers, he administered a mild rebuke, and she retired abashed. Not alone did the reproof smite her conscience, but the look from those eyes was a shaft to her heart from which she could not escape, and not long after his release she decided to cast her lot with him and the despised sect of which he was a member.

Tradition gives the name of Thomas Taylor to this ancestor, and states that he was the father of Robert Taylor, who came to Pennsylvania among the first of Penn's colonists. An examination of the facts will show, however, that Robert's parents must have been married before the persecution of the Quakers began, but the above incident harmonizes very well with what is known of the son's own experience, and doubtless refers to him.

Robert Taylor, of Clutterwick, in Cheshire, and twenty-eight others, were indicted at the Quarter Sessions in Chester, January, 1662, for "unlawfully assembling together at the House of John Dove in Coddington within the County aforesaid, the 19th Day of November last past, upon Pretence of joining together in religious Worship of God." For this offence they were fined two pounds and ten shillings each, and refusing to pay were sent to prison for three months.

About a year later Robert Taylor married, and the name of his wife, unless he were married more than once, was Mary Hayes. The children of Robert and Mary Taylor were ten in number:

1. Rachel, b. 11 mo., 15, 1664; m. Jonathan Livezey and Benjamin Gilbert, and was the mother of Benjamin Gilbert, the Indian captive.
2. Isaac, b. 8 mo., 1, 1666; see forward.
3. Josiah, b. 11 mo., 3, 1668; d. 1700; m. Elizabeth Pennell.
4. Phebe, b. 6 mo., 15, 1670; d. 12 mo., 27, 1749; m. Thomas Massey and Bartholomew Coppock.
5. Thomas, b. 10 mo., 8, 1672; d. 1 mo., 1, 1672-3; buried at Whitley.
6. Mary, b. 1 mo., 14, 1673-4; m. Henry Lewis, 10 mo., 20, 1692.
7. Thomas, b. 2 mo., 7, 1676; d. 1725; m. Hannah Howell.
8. Jonathan, b. 6 mo., 24, 1678; d. 1709; m. Frances Hugh.
9. Martha, b. 12 mo., 6, 1680; m. John Fincher, 1699.
10. Jacob, born in Pennsylvania, supposed to have married Deborah Norbury, and died in 1742.

Among the purchasers of land from William Penn was Robert Taylor, of Little Leigh, in the County Palatine of Chester, husbandman, to whom Penn conveyed one thousand acres of unlocated land in Pennsylvania, by deeds of lease and release, dated 2d and 3d of March, 1681, for the sum of £20. Clutterwick appears to have been a hamlet in Little Leigh, according to "Leycester's Historical Antiquities," published in 1673.

In a Registry of Arrivals in possession of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, it is stated that the "Endeavour" of Lonodon, George Thorp, master, arrived here the 29th of 7th month (Sept.) 1683. "Mary Taylor, late of Clatterwick in Cheshire, came in ditto shipp: children: Isaack, Tho; Jona; Pheb; Mary & Martha Taylor." Robert Taylor, the father, had come over the previous year and must have brought his eldest daughter and second son with him. Tradition says that he brought Rachel to prevent her marriage to a person not approved by him.

Of the land purchased in England, a tract of four hundred acres was surveyed November 11, 1682, on Crum creek, in Springfield township. Of the remainder five hundred and fifty acres were located October 30, 1683, on Darby creek, in Marple township. Robert Taylor settled on the Springfield tract, and there died in April or May of 1695. By his will it appears he had left some real estate in England, a part of which had been settled on his wife at the time of her marriage. She was a sister to Jonathan Hayes, a settler in Marple, and one of the justices of the common Pleas. She married a second husband, Joseph Selby, in the 2d month, 1701, and died 2 mo., 11, 1728.

Isaac Taylor (2) received from his father a deed of gift, dated 6 mo., 20, 1689, for three hundred acres of the Springfield tract, and was married 9 mo., 4, 1689, at a meeting at the house of Richard Wain, in Cheltenham, Philadelphia county, to Sarah Bradwell, who with her mother, Mary, and sister Mary Bradwell, had arrived on the Unicorn, 10 mo., 16, 1685. They settled on the land given him by his father, and were active members of Springfield Meeting, of which he was appointed an overseer, 9 mo., 28, 1715. Being deceased, Thomas Pearson was appointed to succeed him 12 mo., 25, 1716. Isaac Taylor died in 1717, and his wife in 1748. The children of Isaac and Sarah Taylor were eight in number:

11. Isaac, b. 6 mo., 28, 1690; m. Sarah Smith, 1719.
12. John, b. 7 mo., 27, 1692; m. Elizabeth Eachus about 1733.
13. Joseph, b. 11 mo., 11, 1694; d. about 1791; m. Mary Maris.
14. Mary, b. 10 mo., 21, 1697; m. Job Thomas, living in Md., 1729.
15. Benjamin, b. 7 mo., 18, 1700; a cordwainer in Phila., 1729.
16. Sarah, b. 1 mo., 9, 1703; m. about 1725 her cousin Tho. Massey.
17. Elizabeth, b. 4 mo., 9, 1705; m. James Sharpless, 4 mo., 12, 1729.
18. Josiah, b. 4 mo., 7, 1708; d. 3 mo., 1765; see below.

Josiah Taylor (18) learned the tailor trade, perhaps with his brother Joseph, and doubtless removed with him to West Marlborough, about 1724. He was married at Bradford Meeting, 3 mo., 14, 1730, to Jane Steward, of Bradford, born June, 1709, daughter of Alexander Steward (properly Stuart) and Mary Baily, now wife of George Harlan, of Bradford, at or near the present county almshouse. There is reason to believe that her father was kidnapped, with other youths, in Scotland, and sold here to pay his passage and some profit to the parties engaged in the villainous traffic. He was bound to Francis Chadsey (now Chads), of Birmingham, for eight years from the 14th of September, 1697, but was assigned to Henry Nayle, of Thornbury, in 1701, for the remainder of his time. He died in Kennett, 11 mo., 5, 1714-15.

Josiah Taylor settled in Kennett at the time of his marriage, and became the owner of land immediately east of the present borough, but it was not till 1738 that his membership was transferred from London Grove to Kennett Meeting.

Like his fellow citizens, he took his turn in the township offices, and was overseer of the poor in 1741 and constable in 1744. He devised the homestead to his son Caleb, subject to the maintenance of his mother during life. The children of Josiah and Jane were nine in number:

19. Abraham, b. 11 mo., 21, 1731; d. 1809; See forward.

20. John, b. 1 mo., 25, 1733; m. Hannah Thatcher, 7 mo., 11, 1753.

21. Rebecca, b. 9 mo., 9, 1736; died young or unmarried.

22. Sarah, b. 10 mo., 12, 1739; m. Charles Hall, about 1761.

23. Mary, b. 12 mo., 14, 1742; living and unmarried in 1814.

24. Caleb, b. 10 mo., 21, 1744; d. 10 mo., 29, 1818; m. Margaret McDugan.

25. Jehu, b. 3 mo., 23, 1747; died young.

26. Israel, b. 6 mo., 7, 1749; died young.

27. Jane, b. 8 mo., 23, 1751; m. John Churchman, 12 mo., 23, 1773.

Abraham Taylor (19) was married April 28, 1759, by the Rev. Eric Unander, the Swedish minister at Wilmington, to Rebecca Way, born 7 mo., 16, 1735; died 10 mo., 14, 1816; daughter of John and Ann (Hannum) Way, of Kennett (now Pemsbury) township. For this way of marriage they made an acknowledgment to Kennett Monthly Meeting. In 1774 complaint was made that he had accepted the office of collector of the provincial tax and had sold the goods of some Friends who had conscientious scruples against paying the tax. For this he made an acknowledgment. In 1787 Rebecca Taylor was recommended as a minister in the Society of Friends, and continued an active and useful member until her death.

By deed of February 8, 1753, Abraham Taylor purchased from Robert Read and wife Sarah a tract of land in Kennett, bounded on the north by Marlborough township, and on the south by the state road. By deed of 9 mo., 14, 1791, he and wife conveyed a triangular piece of 40 square perches, at the eastern end of the tract, to Jacob Peirce, Samuel Pennock, Townsend Lamborn, Thomas Peirce (son of Caleb), William Packer and David Peirce, as trustees on behalf of Kennett Meeting, for school purposes. In 1776 Abraham Taylor purchased from Jesse Mendenhall and wife about one hundred and fourteen acres of land southward of his former purchase, and in 1790 conveyed the same to his son Jacob. Abraham and Rebecca Taylor had six children:

28. Jacob, b. 2 mo., 13, 1760; d. 5 mo., 30, 1838; m. Hannah Taylor.

29. John, b. 9 mo., 10, 1762; d. 12 mo., 13, 1850; see forward.

30. Benjamin, b. 5 mo., 18, 1767; d. 6 mo., 9, 1833; m. Hannah Richardson.

31. Ann, b. 2 mo., 13, 1770; died unmarried.

32. Joshua, b. 7 mo., 4, 1771; d. 8 mo., 7, 1827; m. Ann Buffington.

33. Joseph, b. 4 mo., 24, 1776; d. about 1799; m. Abigail Edwards.

John Taylor (29) learned the trade of a mason, and about the year 1790 was engaged with others in the erection of two stone barns and a still house for Christian Bucher, of Donegal, Lancaster county, and boarding, as was customary, with their employer. An intimacy sprang up between John Taylor and the eldest daughter, Anne Bucher, which ripened into match-making. This was opposed by her parents, perhaps for no other reason than that the Taylors were of a different nationality. However, one bright morning Anne was not up and about at the usual hour, so her father called to his wife, "Wo ischt die Anne?" When search was made she could not be found. It was then discovered that her saddle was not hanging on the staircase at its usual place, and her favorite riding horse was out of the stable. The couple had eloped, got married, and in due time returned and were forgiven.

Christian Bucher was born March 27, 1742, of parents who came from Switzerland, or the Palatinate, of Swiss descent. He married Frances, daughter of Melchoir Brenneman, a Lutheran clergyman, April 5, 1768, and had children: Anne, born January 18, 1769; Elizabeth, born November 1, 1770; Frances, born December 30, 1772; Christian, born March 19, 1775; Mary, born November 22, 1777; John, born January 15, 1780; Martin and Joseph. The father died December 27, 1825, at the residence of his son-in-law, John Brandt, husband of Frances Bucher.

At Kennett Monthly Meeting, 2 mo., 14, 1793: "Complaint is made of John Taylor (Abraham's son) for accomplishing his Marriage with a young Woman not in membership with us by ye assistance of a Magistrate; therefore Enoch Wickersham, Sam'l Pennock & Sam'l Harlan are aptd to endeavor to take a solid opportunity with him in order to convince him of the inconsistency of his Conduct, & except they find cause to forbear prepare a Testimony, inform him thereof & produce it to next meeting; & if an opportunity cannot be had with him conveniently, as he lives at a considerable distance, they are desired to write to him on ye occasion & report of their care." The committee had an opportunity with him, but failing to convince him of his error, they prepared a testimony of disownment against him, which was approved and signed at the meeting held 4 mo., 11, 1793.

By deed of 3 mo., 13, 1792, Benjamin Way, of East Marlborough, and Mary his wife, conveyed to John Taylor, of Kennett township, mason, a tract of one hundred and eighty acres in East Marlborough, on the east side of the road leading northward from Kennett Square. John Taylor also purchased, by deed of 3 mo., 16, 1792, from James Hollis and wife Phebe, a lot of half an acre in Kennett Square, for £100. Robert Wilkin and Lydia his wife, on 7 mo., 11, 1793, conveyed to John Taylor, of Donegal township, Lancaster county, mason, three acres and twenty-eight perches in Kennett Square, for £400 Pennsylvania currency. It is probable that John Taylor did not reside very long in Lancaster county. In 1799 he was assessed in East Marlborough with one hundred and eighty acres of land, two horses, four cattle, a log house and a still house, all valued at $2,288. In 1816, John Taylor and wife, Benjamin Taylor and wife, and Joshua Taylor and wife conveyed to Jacob Taylor, their brother, their interest in the lands of their father, being one hundred and seven acres in Kennett township. Jacob sold it the same year to William Walter. Ann Taylor, wife of John, died 9 mo., 29, 1850. They had nine children:

34. John, b. 8 mo., 1793; m. Margaret Edmondson.

35. Joseph, b. 9 mo., 8, 1795; d. 6 mo., 22, 1885; see forward.

36. Joshua, b. 8 mo., 3, 1797; d. 1 mo., 27, 1873; see forward.

37. Rebecca, b. 8 mo., 18, 1799; d. 12 mo., 27, 1881; m. Harlan Gause.

38. Fanny, b. 1801; d. 1870; m. Lewis Gause.

39. Martin, b. 8 mo., 1803; m. Mary Ann Hamrick.

40. Abraham, b. 1806; died young.

41. Ann, b. 6 mo., 1809; m. James White.

42. Sarah, b. 6 mo., 1, 1811; m. Samuel Jacobs and is still living at Hamorton, Pa.

Joshua Taylor (36) was married in Philadelphia, October, 1829, to Mary P. Dixon, born in Delaware, 1806; died in Kennett Square, October 21, 1892, daughter of William and Susan (Pierson) Dixon. He was a farmer at the homestead, just north of Kennett Square, and he and wife were buried at Longwood cemetery. They had five children:

43. Lydian, b. Jan. 21, 1831; d. Dec. 19, 1876; m. Theophilus E. Sickels.

44. Henry Willis, b. Dec. 2, 1832; m. Emma L. Jackson and lives at the homestead.

45. Ellen, b. March 11, 1837; living in Kennett Square, unmarried. She is active in social affairs and philanthropic work of all kinds.

46. Josephine, b. March 3, 1839; d. Feb. 28, 1844.

47. Susan, b. June 23, 1843; m. Larkin Jackson.

JOSHUA TAYLOR (32), son of Abraham and Rebecca Taylor, was born 7 mo., 4, 1771, married Mary Ann Buffington, and their children were: 1. Thomas, unmarried, who lived to the mature age of ninety years; 2. Rebecca, unmarried; who lived to be nearly ninety years of age; 3. Jacob, who married for his first wife Almira Lewis, and for his second wife Mary Ellen; 4. Zebulon, unmarried; 5. Milton, who married Sarah Sharp; see forward; 6. Frank, who was a practicing physician; he married Priscilla Lamborn, and they were the parents of one son, Ernest Taylor; 7. Annie, who became the wife of Alexander Hamilton, and their children were: Willis, Byron and Alexander Hamilton; 8. Lydia, who remained single.

Milton Taylor, fourth son and fifth child of Joshua and Mary Ann (Buffington) Taylor, was born at the family homestead, formerly known as the old Potter farm, located near what is now known as Clifton Mills, Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 2 mo., 18, 1808. He acquired his educational training in the schools of the neighborhood, and spent his early years of manhood on the paternal farm, which he later operated for some time in connection with the flour and grist mill now known as the Clifton Mills. It was the scene of this place that Bayard Taylor refers to in his "Story of Kennett," and it was here that Mr. Taylor spent the most of his fourscore years of life. He was a just and conscientious man in all the affairs of life, fond of good literature and was known as an exceptionally well read man. He died 3 mo., 1, 1888. He was married to Sarah Sharp, who was a daughter of Jesse and Phebe (Walter) Sharp, and to this union were born the following name children:

1. Phebe A., born 10 mo., 7, 1834; she became the wife of Joseph G. Taylor, of West Chester.

2. Maria Louisa, born 4 mo., 1836; she became the wife of Lewis Agnew.

3. Almira Lewis, born 12 mo., 9, 1838, became the wife of John W. Chandler.

4. Lawrence, born 1840, unmarried.

5. Mary A., born 1842, became the wife of William Stone, who was for some time a practicing attorney of New York city.

6. Adelaide A., born in 1844, who became the wife of Nathan Lancaster, of Pennsbury township, Chester county.

7. Caroline, born in 1846, became the wife of Major David Corbin, who was elected to the United States senate, but did not serve.

8. E. Worthington, born in 1848, unmarried.

9. George S., born in 1851. He married and resides at Portland, Oregon.

The mother of this family, Sarah (Sharp) Taylor, died 4 mo., 12, 1893. She was a most estimable lady, who possessed many excellencies of character and was beloved and esteemed by all who knew her.

CAPTAIN GEORGE HOCKIN, for many years a prosperous and well known resident of Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Cornwell, England, in 1836, a son of William and Grace (Williams) Hockin, the former named having been a successful agriculturist for the greater part of his life.

Captain Hockin was indebted to the public schools of Cornwell, England, for his literary education, and after completing his studies, at the age of fourteen years, he went to sea as a cabin boy, and from that early day he was practically self-supporting. He remained six years in the service of his employers, and during that period of time he had the opportunity of sailing all over the world and acquiring that broad knowledge of many different countries, their people and customs, which can only be obtained by means of travel. In 1856, being then twenty years of age, Captain Hockin came to the United States, and for the following ten years he was engaged in running boats on the Erie Canal, being the owner at different times of three boats. He employed men for the purpose of running his boats, he being at the same time engaged in the capacity of agent for a large commission house. The last boat that he purchased met with an accident and was sunk at the Eddystone Manufacturing Pier, and from that time until his death, a period of twenty-four years, he was in the employ of the same company in the position of bookkeeper. Captain Hockin was a leading and influential citizen of Wallingford, taking a deep interest in all pertaining to its material growth and welfare, and he enjoyed the confidence and high regard of the entire community. He endeared himself to the poor and distressed by his gentle sympathy and his liberal benefactions, excellent conversational powers and unaffected companionability. His death occurred June 4, 1903, after an illness of about six months.

Captain Hockin was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Hoppin, a daughter of William Hoppin, in 1861, and the following named children were born to them: Grace, Elizabeth, Alice, Mamie and George Hockin.

CHARLES AIKEN SMITH, of Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, whose indomitable energy and perseverance has won him deserved success and an enviable position in commercial circles, was born June 18, 1860, in New Castle township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, the son of Dunham and Charlotte M. (Curry) Smith.

88

Charles A. Smith remained at home with his father until 1890, in the meantime acquiring a common school education and a thorough knowledge of the printing business which he intended to follow in his business career. Subsequently he entered into business relations with his brother, E. W. Smith, at Morton, where they established a paper, giving it the name of The Morton Chronicle. This enterprise proved a profitable source of income to both partners, owing to the fact that they were men of positive character, undoubted ability, and fearless in their upholding of right and in their denunciation of wrong. During President Cleveland's administration Mr. Smith was appointed postmaster at Morton, and during his three years' incumbency he performed the duties allotted to him in a highly satisfactory manner. He was largely instrumental in the organization of the Building and Loan Association of Morton borough, in which he was a stockholder for a number of years; he was also active in the organization of the Morton Public Library, in which he holds a life membership, and he is now serving in the capacity of a director in the Swarthmore Building and Loan Association. In the management of these various duties Mr. Smith has displayed characteristics which are essential to the success of any enterprise—business qualifications and practical experience. In 1892 Mr. Smith located in Swarthmore, where he has since conducted an extensive mercantile business.

In 1893 Mr. Smith married Hannah Mary Steele, of Media, Pennsylvania, who was born in Willistown, Chester county, April 28, 1861. She is a daughter of Joseph R. and Abigail (Yarnall) Steele, the former named being born in Newtown township, June 19, 1821, son of John and Ann (Rowland) Steele, of Willistown. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, namely: Charlotte Mills, who is a student in the high school of Swarthmore, and Elizabeth Steele Smith. Mr. Smith and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Swarthmore, to the support of which they contribute liberally both of their time and money.

REV. ISAAC N. RENDALL, D. D. For upwards of a third of a century the name of the Rev. Dr. Isaac N. Rendall has been associated with one of the most notably useful educational institutions in the land, and one whose history is absolutely unique—Lincoln University.

Through his Scotch heredity, he was possessor of those mental and moral qualities which mark the man set apart to serve God well by serving his creatures. His father, Hugh Rendall, was of Scotch birth, son of such a sire as might have been the prototype of him whom Burns depicted in his devotions in the "Cotter's Saturday Night." Hugh Rendall left his native land in his young manhood and came to Nova Scotia, where he married Harriet Watson, also of a Scotch family. The pair removed to Utica, New York, where the father engaged in farming and there was born their son Isaac.

Isaac Rendall was born in 1825. Owing to the necessity for him to work for his livelihood, his education was not obtained until he was well advanced in manhood. He began his studies in the common schools and was prepared for college at the City Academy. Entering Princeton College, he was graduated from that institution in 1852, when twenty-seven years of age. He then entered Princeton Theological Seminary, and graduated with the class of 1855, at the age of thirty years. He was ordained in the ministry of the Presbyterian church, and his first charge was a congregation in Madison county, New York. Here he served acceptably and usefully until 1865, when he was called to the superintendency of Lincoln University. He possessed peculiar qualities for the position. A determined opponent of human slavery, which he abhorred as a crime against humanity and a sin against God, he had freely used his voice and pen and means in aiding slaves to freedom, and in supporting the administration of President Lincoln in the prosecution of the war which resulted in freedom for all. The work upon which he now entered demanded herculean effort. Lincoln University, at his coming, was little more than academical in character. It had scarcely obtained an existence when the Civil war opened, and during that momentous struggle its class rooms were of necessity but sparsely occupied. When he entered upon his own duties, he found quarters for only sixteen students. He associated with himself another devoted man, the Rev. A. Westcott, from near Milton, Pennsylvania.

The first year of Dr. Rendall's presidency was marked by two important accomplishments, the graduation of the first class from the collegiate department, and the establishment of the theological department, from which the first class was graduated in 1868. Meantime the material condition of the institution had become materially improved, and a substantial beginning had been made toward the acquisition of the present splendid properties, the means for much of which were procured in large measure through the persistent effort of Dr. Rendall.

Dr. Rendall has long occupied the position of justice of the peace, and it is significant to note that he conducts his office rather as a mediator than as an officer of the law, it being his fixed rule, in all possible cases, to bring contestants into agreement through his personal effort, and without legal formalities. The simple fact affords a key to his character, which has for its most marked traits fairmindedness, justice and mercy.

DAVID H. COPE. The progenitor of the American branch of the Cope family was Oliver Cope, a native of Abury, Wiltshire, England, who purchased land from William Penn by deed of September 8, 1681, and his arrival in this country is supposed to have been as early as the year 1683. He located on Naaman's creek, below the circular line of New Castle county, Pennsylvania, and here he resided up to the time of his death, which occurred in May, 1697. He left a wife, Rebecca Cope, and four children—William, Elizabeth, Ruth and John Cope. Rebecca Cope died at the residence of her son, John Cope, in Bradford, about 1728.

John Cope, youngest son of Oliver and Rebecca Cope, purchased two hundred acres of land in Bradford in 1712, and erected a log house thereon, where he resided for many years and reared a large family of children. Mr. Cope was married three times. The name of his first wife is not known; his second wife was Charity Evans, widow of John Evans, and daughter of Robert and Jane Jefferis, of East Bradford; his third wife was Elizabeth Fisher, widow of Thomas Fisher. The following named children were born to him by these marriages: Hannah, Samuel, Mary, John, Nathan, Caleb, Joshua and Joseph Cope. John Cope, father of these children died February 14, 1773, aged eighty-two years.

Samuel Cope, eldest son and second child of John Cope, was born and reared on the old homestead and subsequently settled on the eastern portion of this estate. He married Deborah Parke, daughter of Jonathan and Deborah Parke, who resided on the adjoining farm, and the following named children were born to them: Charity, Jesse, Samuel, Abiah, Rebecca, Jonathan, Deborah, Mary, Sophia and Deborah (2).

Abiah Cope, third son and fourth child born to Samuel and Deborah Cope, was an upright, conscientious man and performed the various duties of husband, father and citizen in a highly commendable manner. He was united in marriage to Jane Morris, daughter of David and Jane Morris, of Berks county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: David, Samuel, Abiah and Morris Cope.

David Cope (grandfather), eldest son of Abiah and Jane Cope, was born in Lower Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a student in the common schools of the neighborhood, and after attaining man's estate milled and farmed as a means of livelihood. In 1809 he married Elizabeth House, and they were the parents of several children, among whom was a son, George H. Cope.

George H. Cope (father) was also a native of Lower Oxford township, Chester county, having been born in 1816, on the old homestead, where he was reared to manhood. He received the best education afforded by the public schools of that day, and having a natural inclination for agricultural pursuits he chose that vocation for his life work. He married Mary A. Phillips, who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1816. Their children were: Samuel P., deceased, was united in marriage to Margaret Rielly, and they were the parents of one child, Mary E., wife of George W. Johnson, and three children were the issue of this union. Rachel L., unmarried. John W., married Jennie Williams, now deceased, and six children were born to them. George H., Jr., married Lydia Thompson, and they are the parents of two children. David H. Cope. George H. Cope, father of these children, died in 1890 and his demise was sincerely mourned by all who had the honor of his acquaintance.

David H. Cope, son of George H. and Mary A. Cope, was born on the old home farm in Lower Oxford township, Chester county, March 14, 1838. After completing the regular course of instruction at Hopewell Academy, which was one of the prominent institutions of learning in Chester county, Mr. Cope served in the capacity of school teacher there for several sessions. He then located in the city of Philadelphia, where he engaged in the grain commission business, and this enterprise he conducted successfully for twenty-five years. At the expiration of this period of time he returned to Lower Oxford township, purchased a one hundred and six acre farm which was formerly the property of Mr. Kirk, and at the present time (1903) is actively engaged in the raising of pigs of all breeds, having two hundred head in his possession. Mr. Cope is a practical business man and well merits the success which has attended his efforts. He is loyal in his advocacy of the principles of the Democratic party, and has held the office of auditor for several years. He is an honored member of the Masonic order, in which organization he takes a keen and active interest. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

In 1867, Mr. Cope married Susanna Twaddell, daughter of John Twaddell, a miller of Tweedale, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Lorena, born in 1869, died in 1871; John T., born in 1870, died in 1871; and Samuel V., born in 1872, unmarried, who resides in Virginia. Mrs. Cope died at her home in Lower Oxford township in 1872.

DANIEL A. SELLERS. In the township of West Fallowfield, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where Daniel A. Sellers was born in the year 1855, he has spent his entire life, and, depending solely upon his inherent business qualities, he has gained a position of prominence among the leading agriculturists of that locality.

He obtained his early education in the public schools of that neighborhood, and this was supplemented by a regular course of study at the State Normal School in Millersville, Pennsylvania. He began his business career in the capacity of school teacher, and being well qualified to fill the requirements of this occupation, he continued to serve as an educator in various townships for a number of years. While devoting his best energies to the work of instruction, Mr. Sellers is still a student and is well versed in literature and topics of general interest.

In addition to this vocation, Mr. Sellers has devoted considerable time and attention to agricultural pursuits, being the owner of a fine farm of ninety-seven acres in West Fallowfield township, upon which he has erected a handsome residence for his family and substantial commodious out buildings for his crops and cattle. In his political preferences he is a Republican, and has always given his earnest support to the men and measures adopted by that party. He is a prominent member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

In 1877 Mr. Sellers married Rachel Rambo daughter of David Rambo, an enterprising and successful farmer of West Fallowfield township, Chester county. One child has been born of this union, Bertha, who resides at home with her parents, and whose time is devoted to teaching music. Mr. Sellers and his family are active members of the Baptist church, to the support of which they contribute liberally both of their time and money.

FRANCIS H. GREEN, A. M. Professor Francis H. Green, who occupies the chair of English in the West Chester State Normal School, is a native of Pennsylvania, born at Booth's Corner, Delaware county, May 19, 1861. His paternal grandfather, Abraham Green, came from England and settled in Delaware county. Sharpless Green, son of Abraham Green, was born in 1830 on the family homestead, where he died in 1887. He was a successful merchant, a Methodist in religion, and a Republican in politics. His wife was Mary, a daughter of James Booth, and they became the parents of seven children: Nelson C., Charles, Lydia, who became the wife of Curtis C. Hanby; Phoebe; Mattie, who became the wife of George L. Stranbridge, of West Chester; Francis H., and a son who died in infancy.

Francis H. Green, of the family named, passed from the public school to the West Chester State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1882, the year of his attaining his majority, and he subsequently graduated in English courses at Amherst and Harvard. For two years he taught in the public schools of Chester county, and then accepted the chair of English in Juniata College, Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania. In 1882 he relinquished this position to take a similar chair in the West Chester State Normal School.

An accomplished educator in the department of which he is the head, Professor Green is widely known in educational circles as a gifted literateur, whose broad knowledge has been acquired not only through systematic study, but through extensive travel in Europe and intimate acquaintance with such eminent men of letters as Oliver Wendell Holmes, James Russell Lowell and John Greenleaf Whittier. For many years he has been known as a lecturer of marked ability on educational, economic and social topics, before teachers' institutes, literary clubs and reform societies. In the past year he delivered more than two hundred lectures in various parts of the country, including his addresses before the Chautauqua Summer School, over which he presided. He is regarded as the earliest and foremost exponent of social reform in Pennsylvania, and is an earnest laborer in the cause of temperance, and founder of the Knights of Temperance in Chester county. A graceful and forceful writer, he has long been a welcome contributor to the pages of leading magazines and newspapers upon the various topics which engage his attention, and to which he devotes the culture of a scholar and the deep interest of the real humanitarian.

WILLIAM H. WOOD, a prominent engineer and designer of special machinery of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born November 26, 1844, in Stockport, Cheshire, England, and is a son of James and Elizabeth Wood. He was educated at Stockport and in Derbyshire, and studied and learned his trade under his father, James Wood, who was a prominent engineer and manager of large engineering works in his native country (and who was the inventor of compressing by heavy pressure fluid copper in moulds for making copper rollers solid for engraving for calico and other printing, as well as other metals, in advance of Sir Joseph Whitworth), where he followed it and became prominently known as a designer of large hoisting engines for coal mines; also for hydraulic and other machinery. On coming to this country, he settled at 176 Broadway, New York, as a consulting engineer, where he was well known by reputation, and his connection with a large number of American Engineering Works. While there he designed large air compressors for the Nevada mines; also large pumping and other machinery in connection with the mines. He also invented refrigerating and ice making machinery, the last of which was built for the Lancaster Brewing Company. All this machinery is successfully working at the present day. From New York he went to Philadelphia, and in 1892 established himself in Media, as a hydraulic engineer and builder of special machinery. The superiority of the machinery constructed by him is best attested by the fact that he enjoys the patronage of the leading manufacturers of the country, as well as the United States government, among whom I may mention the following: The Watrous Engine Works Co., Ltd., Brantford, Ontario, Canada; Fox Solid Pressed Steel Co., Joliet; Tobin & Hamler Manufacturing Co., Chicago, Illinois; Franklin Boiler Works Co., Troy; Farrar & Trefts, Buffalo; Thompson Kingsford Boiler & Machine Works, Oswego; Ames Iron Works, Oswego, New York; Thomas McNeill & Bro., Pittsburgh; James Lappan & Company, Pittsburgh; Erie City Iron Works, Erie; Dickson Manufacturing Co., Scranton; Chas. H. Cramp Shipbuilding Co., Kensington Ship Yard, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Wm. Allen & Sons, Worcester; Cogley's Holyoke Steam Boiler Works, Holyoke, Massachusetts; H. B. Beach & Sons Boiler & Machine Works, Hartford; Berlin Bridge Co., East Berlin, Connecticut; Cooke Locomotive & Machine Works, Paterson; The New Jersey Steel & Iron Co., forming part of the American Bridge Company's plant at Trenton, New Jersey; Gaar, Scott & Co., manufacturers agricultural engines and boilers, Richmond, Indiana; The C. H. Dutton Co., Kalamazoo, Michigan; Kewanee Boiler Co., Kewanee, Illinois; S. Freeman & Sons, Racine, Wisconsin; Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co., Chicago, Illinois; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway Co., Burlington, Iowa; Anaconda Copper Mining Company, Anaconda, Montana; Union Iron Works, San Francisco, California; The Honolulu Iron Works, Honolulu, Hawaiian Island; The Walsh & Weidner Boiler Co., Chattanooga, Tennessee; Birmingham Boiler Works, Birmingham; Hartley Boiler Works, Montgomery, Alabama; The Aultman & Taylor Machinery Co., Mansfield, Ohio; De Fries & Co., Dusseldorf, Germany, and others.

Mr. Wood is the inventor of a hydraulic riveting machine, the patent for which was secured November 28, 1893, and also the patentee of a hydraulic automatic safety valve, as well as a patent circular flanging machine, which invention was patented July 2, 1895, as well as a patent for an improved hydraulic adjusting valve for adjusting the pressure on the rivet to suit the thickness of plates being riveted. He also has patents for the guides for improvements on his Single Standard Steam Hammers.

Wm. K. Wood.

In addition to supplying the machinery for the firms mentioned and others, Mr. Wood is the builder of the hydraulic riveters and cranes for the United States government Boston and New York navy yards. He is connected with works at Reading, Pennsylvania, where all his machinery is manufactured, notwithstanding all his machinery bears the name of "W. H. Wood, Engineer, Media, Pa." which is cast on it.

Mr. Wood married, in 1884, Miss Bertha A. Crane, of Trumansburg, and a resident of Elmira, New York.

LEES FAMILY. Daniel Lees was born in England, and in his youth enjoyed the advantages of a good education which he acquired in his native land. He then came to the United States, and taking up his abode in Delaware county, he was given the responsible position of manager in the Lewis Woolen Manufactory. After serving there for some time he went to Philadelphia, where he was engaged in the same line of business, but he is now deceased.

He was a Republican in politics. He married Sarah Greenwood, a daughter of John Greenwood, a manufacturer of Springfield, Pennsylvania, and they became the parents of six children, namely: Elizabeth, Alice, Hannah, who is deceased; George, who has also passed away; T. Frank, who wedded Mary Scott; and Mary J. Lees. Part of the time she occupies a fine home at Lewin, Delaware county, and during the remainder of the year makes her home in Philadelphia. She was educated in the schools of the latter city, and has traveled quite extensively, gaining thereby the knowledge and culture which only travel can bring. A member of the Methodist church, she takes an active part in its work, progress and upbuilding, is associated with a number of its societies, and is widely known for her many acts of charity and benevolence.

FREDERICK H. IRWIN. For several centuries the Irwin family, represented in the present generation by Frederick H. Irwin, a prosperous and progressive agriculturist of West Brandywine township, have been active and prominent in the history of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and among its most influential members was Nathaniel Irwin, who was an officer in the Revolutionary war and particularly noted for his courage and acts of heroism on the field of battle.

Frederick H. Irwin was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania. His education was acquired in the public schools of Honeybrook township, and upon completing his studies he adopted agriculture as the occupation best suited to his tastes and inclinations, and has since been continuously engaged in the cultivation of the soil. He is a Republican in politics, a leader in his township, and for several years has served in the capacity of school director and assessor. He takes a deep interest in the cause of education, and his incumbency of the former named office gave entire satisfaction to the residents of the township. He was a member of the state militia at the time a call was made for troops, and served during the allotted period of time. Mr. Irwin is a man of intelligence and character, is well informed on all current topics, and is most highly esteemed by all who have the honor of his acquaintance.

Mr. Irwin was united in marriage to Jane Buchanan, daughter of William Buchanan, a merchant of Honeybrook township, Chester county. Their children are: William, Anna, Agnes and Harry Irwin, all of whom are unmarried and residing at home with their parents. Mr. Irwin and his family are prominent in the work of the various societies connected with the Presbyterian church, in which they hold membership.

SAMUEL R. PARKE, deceased, was a worthy representative of a family who have for many years been classed among the leading and influential citizens of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The family is of Scotch-Irish origin, and the first of the name to come to this country was Arthur Parke, a native of Ballybagly, county Donegal, Ireland, who was accompanied by his wife, Mary Parke, and four children, Joseph, John, Samuel and a daughter, who married William Noblett. They settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania, prior to the year 1724, and took by warrant an extensive tract of land lying along the limestone road in West Fallowfield township, near where the town of Parkesburg now stands. It was largely through his instrumentality that the Octoraro Presbyterian church was established, and his remains were interred there in February, 1740. His real estate was divided between his two sons, Joseph taking the southern and John the northern portion.

John Parke, great-grandfather of Samuel R. Parke, erected buildings on his portion of the estate and continued to reside thereon up to the time of his decease, which occurred July 28, 1787, aged eighty-one years. He was survived by his widow, who died May 21, 1794, at the age of eighty-two years, and their children were Arthur, Joseph, John, William, Mary, Elizabeth, Jane, David and Samuel Parke.

John Parke, grandfather of Samuel R. Parke, was born on the old homestead near Parkesburg, in 1739, and upon attaining man's estate engaged extensively in farming interests. He was a Federalist in politics, and a member of the Octoraro Presbyterian church, which is one of the oldest churches in Chester county. He married Ann Denny, and five children were born to them, namely: Elizabeth, Mary, Arthur, Jane and John Parke. The father of these children died November 15, 1823, at the advanced age of eighty-four years.

Arthur Parke, father of Samuel R. Parke, was born in the township of Highland, in 1785, and his entire business career, which was devoted to agricultural pursuits, was spent in that locality. He served in the capacity of a private during the war of 1812, and displayed both courage and valor in the discharge of his duties. He was an adherent of the Democratic party, and served in a number of local offices. He was united in marriage to Mary Reynolds, a native of Wilmington, Delaware, who was formerly a member of the Society of Friends, but later joined the Octoraro Presbyterian church, of which her husband was a member. Mr. Parke's death occurred October 30, 1858, in the seventy-seventh year of his age; his widow died in 1868, aged seventy-five years.

Samuel R. Parke, son of Arthur and Mary Parke, was born in Highland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 9, 1833, and obtained a good common school education, which was supplemented by a course of study in Blair Hall at Fagg's Manor, Chester county, from which institution he was graduated in 1852. He remained on the home farm until he attained his twenty-ninth year, when he located in Parkesburg and engaged in the grain, coal and lumber business. In 1869 he established the private banking firm of Parke, Smith & Co., which continued its operations until 1880, when it became known as the Parkesburg National Bank, and up to the time of his death Mr. Parke acted as its president. He also served as treasurer of the Parkesburg Iron Company, vice-president and director of the Parkesburg Water Company, and a director in the Parkesburg Building and Loan Association. Politically Mr. Parke was a firm advocate of the Republican party, and was chosen by his fellow-citizens to serve as county surveyor, a position he held for three years, also as Burgess and justice of the peace. He was a member and deacon of the Octoraro Presbyterian church, and served in the capacity of trustee and superintendent of the Sunday school connected with it.

In 1858 Mr. Parke married Annie E. Martin, a daughter of Thomas Martin, of London Grove, Chester county, by whom he had two children: Arthur T., who married Clara R. Chambers, and two children have been born to them; and William, a practicing physician of Philadelphia. The mother of these children died in 1862, and on October 26, 1882, Mr. Parke married Ida S. Wilson, daughter of Amos G. and Rachel P. Wilson, the former being a merchant of Parkesburg. Their children are: Mary R., unmarried, who has traveled extensively in foreign countries; and Samuel R. Jr., both of whom reside with their brother, William Parke, in Philadelphia. Mr. Parke, father of these children, died January 12, 1899, and his wife, Ida S. (Wilson) Parke, died March 16, 1903.

R. FRANK COCHRAN. The late Captain David H. Cochran, Forty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, made a most honorable record during the Civil war. In civil life he was a harness and collar maker at Cochranville, Chester county, employing six to eight men and conducting a large business. He married Rachel Andrews, and of this union were born a large family of children who, in turn, have left numerous descendants. Mary and Annie, the two eldest daughters, died in infancy. James, the eldest son, first married Rebecca Rudolph, by whom he had two children, and his second wife was Mary Stitzer. Arthur and David died in childhood. Hannah, the third daughter, married Alfred Clarke, of Parkesburg, and to them was born one child. Jennie, the fourth daughter, married Charles B. Harvey, by whom she had three children.

R. Frank Cochran, who was the sixth of the above enumerated children, was reared to manhood in Cochranville, Chester county, and as he approached manhood took steps to perfect himself in the printer's trade. For this purpose he entered the office of the Oxford Press, in Chester county, and worked there until he became a part owner of the paper. He continued the publication for some time, but eventually disposed of his interest and spent some years as a journeyman printer in newspaper offices of Vermont, Philadelphia and Wilmington. In 1879 he returned to Chester county, and ten years later was appointed postmaster as Cochranville, receiving a reappointment in 1897, and being booked by general consent as his own successor after his term expired. When the peace of the state was disturbed by the outbreak of the riots at Pittsburg, Mr. Cochran enlisted in a company organized at Oxford to suppress the disturbance, and remained in service until the trouble was over.

Mr. Cochran married Annabel, daughter of John J. Caruth, of Lower Oxford, in Chester county, and has two children—John Edwin and D. Francis. He holds membership in the Odd Fellow's lodge, having passed through the various chairs.

Few men in Pennsylvania can claim so ancient a state ancestry as Mr. Cochran. Even before William Penn had made his historic landing in the latter part of the seventeenth century, the forefathers of the Cochrans were settled in Chester county. They purchased large tracts of land, and a part of this is included in the site of the present town of Cochranville, which was named for the family.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAM TORRENS, a prominent representative of the business interests of Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born near Belfast, Ireland, September 26, 1851, a son of James and Margaret (Mackey) Torrens, who were the parents of the following named children: William, now a resident of New York city; Sidney, the wife of Robert McConoghy, of New York city; Margaret, whose death occurred in Ireland, and Robert Cunningham Torrens. Robert Cunningham, great-uncle of Robert C. Torrens, was an active participant in the Revolutionary war, serving in the capacity of an officer under General Washington. After the termination of the war he returned to Ireland, taking his sword with him, and it is now in the possession of Mr. William Torrens, of New York city, a brother of Robert C. Torrens.

Robert C. Torrens was a student in the McGill College, Londonderry, Ireland, after which he entered Queen's College, Belfast, Ireland, from which institution he was graduated in 1867. Two years later he came to America, located in New York city, and engaged in the grocery business. He disposed of this business two years later on account of ill health, and then removed to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he pursued the same line of trade for a short period of time. He then took up his residence in Fernwood, Delaware county, acted in the capacity of manager for Barton Brothers, lumber and coal merchants, but after a short space of time he removed to Wilmington, Delaware, and rented the DuPont farm for seventeen years. After the expiration of this period of time he located in Swarthmore, and established a lumber and coal business which he conducted for two years. In April, 1897, he finally settled in Haverford township, and purchased a farm which consists of one hundred and thirty-eight acres of finely cultivated land, and is now known as the "Brae Side Stock Farm." This is one of the most beautiful and productive farms in the township, and since becoming the owner of it Mr. Torrens has devoted his entire time and attention to the breeding of live stock, in which occupation he has met with an unusual degree of success. In his political affiliations he is a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party, having voted that ticket ever since his majority. He is an active member of the Knights of Pythias.

September 26, 1871, Mr. Torrens married Miss Ellen Porter, a native of Chester county, and a daughter of John Porter, who came to this country from Ireland in 1868. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Torrens, three of whom are living at the present time, namely: Margaret S., Jane and Sidney Torrens. The names of their deceased children are: Catherine, died at the age of eight months; Jane, died at the age of nine years; William, died when five years old; and Helen, who died at the age of three years. Their deaths occurred in the same week from that dread disease, diphtheria. Mr. Torrens and his family are active and earnest members of the Presbyterian church of Willistown, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

REV. ROBERT WATSON, PH. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, son of Robert and Catherine (Thomson) Watson. His parents were also natives of Scotland. His father came to Canada in his youth, became a missionary in the Presbyterian church, and is yet engaged in missionary work in the land of his adoption.

Robert Watson, son of the parents named, began his education in Scotland, and finished his preparation for college in the Collegiate High School at Fredericton, New Brunswick, Canada. In 1893 he graduated from the University of New Brunswick, with the governor general's medal in Political Economy. Coming to the United States, he pursued post-graduate studies in Princeton (New Jersey) University, and in 1895 received the master of arts degree from that institution. Graduating from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1896, in the spring of the same year he received calls from four different churches, and accepted that to his present charge, being ordained by the Presbytery of Chester, June 4, 1896. His devotion to his people, and the cordial relations which exist between him and them is evidenced by the fact that he has declined repeated calls from other churches since entering upon his present pastorate.

Mr. Watson takes a lively interest in synodical and Presbyterial work, and was twice elected a commissioner to the General Assembly. In 1901 he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Gale College, Wisconsin. He became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1899.

Mr. Watson was married, in July, 1896, to Miss Georgia Maud Belyea, of New Brunswick, Canada, who was doing missionary work among the freedmen in the south. She comes from one of the oldest families in New Brunswick, being of Huguenot stock on both sides; her mother was first cousin to Sir Leonard Tilley, one of the ablest of New Brunswick's governors.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Watson, all born in Oxford, Pennsylvania, are: Paul Belyea, born in July, 1897; Knox Belyea, born in January, 1899; Grace Navarre, born in January, 1900; and Ruth Navarre Watson, born in January, 1903.

FAUCETT FAMILY. Among the prominent and influential families of Chester county, Pennsylvania, none are more conspicuous and noted for their integrity, uprightness and honorable and conscientious dealings with their fellowmen than the Faucett family, the pioneer ancestors of which, as far as there is any authentic record, were George and Isabella Faucett.

Henry Faucett, son of George and Isabella Faucett, was a native and lifelong resident of Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a public-spirited citizen, took an active interest in the affairs of the township, and exerted an influence for good in the community. Henry Faucett and his wife, Hannah Faucett, were the parents of the following named children: Ebenezer, born January 28, 1783; Margaret, born October 17, 1784; George, born October 15, 1786; Rebecca, born November 25, 1788; Sarah, born July 29, 1792, Hannah, born April 11, 1796; Anna, born November 18, 1800; and Margaret (2), born November 9, 1807, became the wife of Mr. Yearsley.

George Faucett, second son of Henry and Hannah Faucett, was born in Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 15, 1786. He was active and prominent in the various enterprises of that section of the county, and later he identified himself with the business interests of Birmingham township. He was a member of the Order of Free Masonry. He was united in marriage to Mary Yearsley, and the issue of this union was eight children:

1. Nathan, born in Westtown township, December 27, 1823, was married three times; his first wife was Isabella Smith; his second wife was Elizabeth Taylor; his third wife was Sadie Sharp. The children born of his first marriage were: Anna Mary, who became the wife of James Kirkpatrick; George S., who married Ada Clayton; and Estella, who became the wife of Pennock Williamson.

2. Hannah Ann, born in Westtown township, August 6, 1825, became the wife of John Ingram; their family consisted of one child; both are deceased.

3. Henry, born in Westtown township, January 12, 1828; married Prudence G. Smith, daughter of Isaac Smith and Ann his wife; his family consisted of two children—Sarah Louisa, deceased, and Henry Prudentia, who married Mae Mathues; their family consists of one son, Henry Mathues Faucett, being Henry the fourth.

4. George, born in Westtown township, August 1, 1830.

5. Mary Jane, born in Westtown township, December 1, 1833; married William Shimer; his family consisted of one child, Hannah Mary.

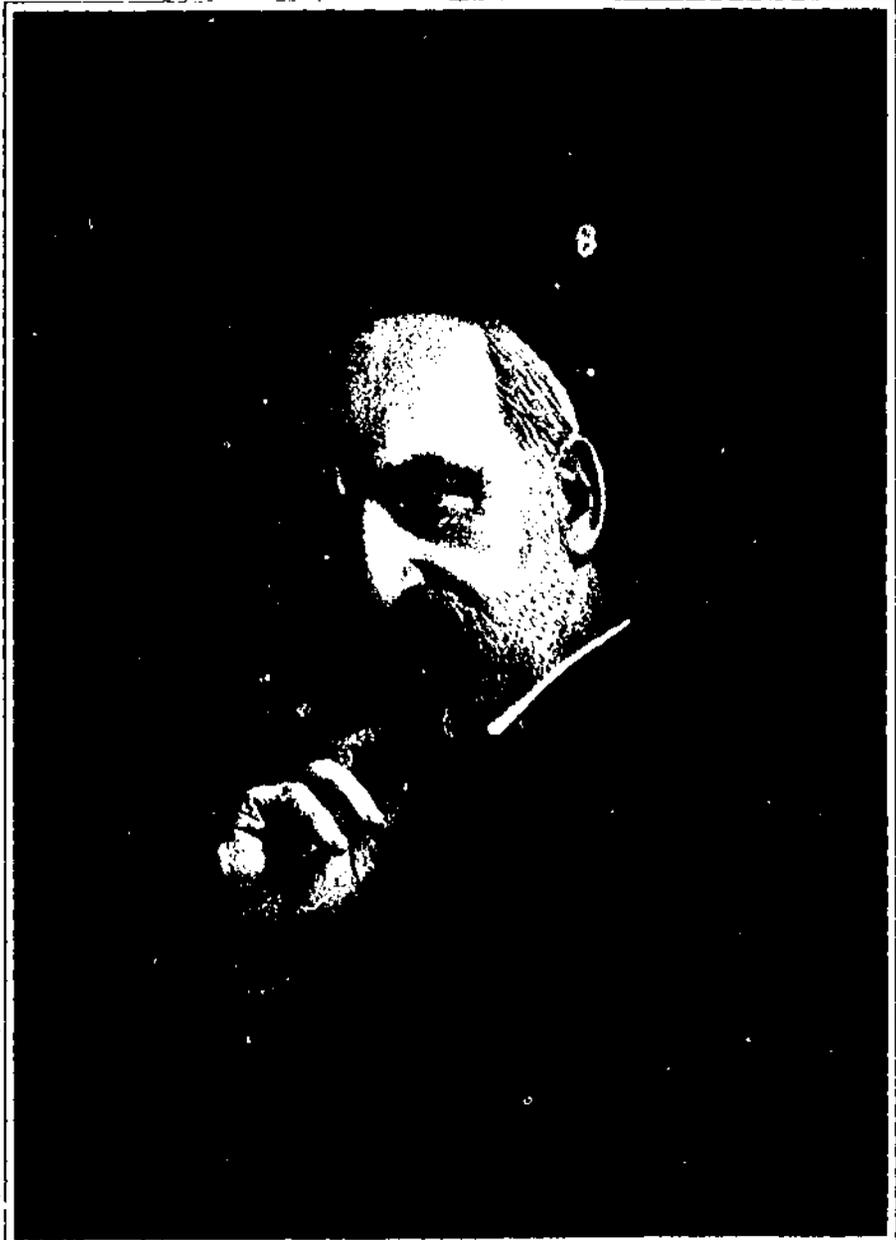

6. Ebenezer, born in Birmingham township, April 2, 1836, married Deborah Kimball, and they are the parents of four children: Anna, Eber O., Eugene and Laura, deceased.

7. Joseph O., born in Birmingham township, August 16, 1838, married Sarah E. Mercer; he was an agriculturist by occupation, and is now living a retired life in the borough of West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

8. Elizabeth, born in Birmingham township, June 6, 1840, now the wife of George W. Seeds. George Faucett, father of these children, died at his home in Birmingham township, July 4, 1840; his wife, Mary (Yearsley) Faucett, died in September, 1841.

George Faucett, third son of George and Mary Faucett, was born on the old homestead in Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 1, 1830. In early colonial times the family conducted a general store in a log cabin, which was also their residence, but during the eighteenth century a large and handsome house was erected, which has since been remodeled, and some of the timbers of the old log cabin were used as joists in the re-construction of the mansion. Mr. Faucett acquired a practical education in the common schools of the vicinity, and upon reaching man's estate decided to follow the occupation of farming, to which he devoted the active years of his life on the homestead farm, which was willed to him by his father. Of late years he has retired from active pursuits, taking up his residence at the Turks Head Inn, West Chester, Pennsylvania, where he enjoys the society and companionship of his friends and neighbors, by whom he is highly esteemed for his integrity and steadfastness of character.

Mr. Faucett married Margaretta C. Smith, daughter of Isaac Smith, and their children are: 1. Casper Pennock, born on the homestead in Westtown township, December 21, 1855, was a graduate of the West Chester Normal School, and married, December 18, 1895, Maryetta Tyson, daughter of Judge and Susan (Patterson) Tyson, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He now resides on the old homestead, is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, and a Democrat in his political views. 2. Alexis Smith, born on the homestead in Westtown township, April 8, 1859. He was educated at the West Chester Normal school. He married Helen Noble, daughter of John Noble, and they now reside in West Chester, Pennsylvania. Alexis S. Faucett is one of the firm of George Faucett & Sons. He is a member of the Episcopal church.

The Curtis Publishing Co

J. A. Smeckel Orange NJ

H. G. Ashmead.

HISTORIC HOMES AND INSTITUTIONS AND GENEALOGICAL AND PERSONAL MEMOIRS OF
CHESTER AND DELAWARE COUNTIES,
PENNSYLVANIA.

EDITORS OF GENEALOGICAL DEPARTMENTS:

CHESTER COUNTY,
GILBERT COPE.

DELAWARE COUNTY,
HENRY GRAHAM ASHMEAD.

"Knowledge of kindred and the genealogies of the ancient families deserveth the highest praise. Herein consisteth a part of the knowledge of a man's own self. It is a great spur to virtue to look back on the worth of our line."—LORD BACON.

"There is no heroic poem in the world but is at the bottom the life of a man."—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

ILLUSTRATED.

VOL. II.

NEW YORK ... CHICAGO:
THE LEWIS PUBLISHING COMPANY
1904.

INDEX.

- Abraham, Daniel, 194.
 Abraham, Daniel C., 194.
 Agnew, Thomas E., 316.
 Alden, Martha W., 190.
 Aldred, Thomas M., 470.
 Alexander, William C., 125.
 Allen, Davis E., 347.
 Anderson, Archibald, 182.
 Appleby, David, 89.
 Armitage, The Preparatory and Fitting School, 204.
 Arnold, Walter J., 53.
 Arthur, Rebecca J., 237.
 Ash, Mathew, 109.
 Ash, Robert F., 108.
 Ashbridge, J. Davis, 438.
 Ashmead, Henry G., 138.
 Baker, Amos S., 386.
 Baker, Enos L., 244.
 Baker, George L., 364.
 Baker, Harry S., 245.
 Baker, John P., 483.
 Baker, William H., 242.
 Balderston, John L., 551.
 Baldt, Frederick, 92.
 Baldwin's, Miss, School for Girls, 314.
 Baue, John M., 407.
 Barnard, Enos P., 513.
 Barnard, Eusebius R., 459.
 Barnard, Isaac D., 565.
 Barnard, Jeremiah, 454.
 Bartleson, Henry C., 189.
 Bartram, John H., 567.
 Bartram, Mordecai T., 543.
 Battin, Thomas F., 84.
 Beatty, Edwin H., 224.
 Beatty, Ella M., 225.
 Beatty, Robert W., 205.
 Becker, Joseph, 348.
 Bell, Samuel R., 89.
 Bernard, Reuben, 387.
 Berry, William H., 95.
 Riles, Charles C., 256.
 Bieder, William, 349.
 Bishop, Joseph, 214.
 Bittle, Walter S., 171.
 Black, George F., 213.
 Black, J. Frank, 68.
 Blaine, Edward, 79.
 Bolmar, Antoine, 565.
 Bonsall, 27.
 Bonsall, Charles, 29.
 Boon, Jacob, 231.
 Booth, Osborn, 285.
 Briggs, Isaac, 254.
 Broomall, Henry L., 131.
 Broomall, John M., 126.
 Broomall, William B., 129.
 Broome, Charles A., 330.
 Brosius, J. Howard, 377.
 Brower, William, 471.
 Brown, George T., 524.
 Brown, George W., 253.
 Bruner, David J., 496.
 Buffington, James G., 436.
 Bullock, Ulysses G., 529.
 Bunting, David S., 96.
 Bunting, Samuel S., 239.
 Burnley, Michael, 266.
 Bushong, Henry, 540.
 Butler, George D., 419.
 Butler, James, 437.
 Byers, Robert, 471.
 Byrne, Thomas F., 584.
 Caldwell, Charles, 233.
 Caldwell, David L., 597.
 Caldwell, Robert W., 503.
 Caldwell, William S., 305.
 Caddwells, The of Morton, 233.
 Caley, Samuel, 147.
 Calhoun, William, 220.
 Callanan, John M., 110.
 Campbell, James A. G., 93.
 Campbell, W. John, 545.
 Carey, Edward, 143.
 Carney, Thomas, 393.
 Carr, Franklin P., 228.
 Carr, Lewis W., 492.
 Carr, Samuel T., 221.
 Carr, William H., 229.
 Carter, John I., 386.
 Carter, John W., 284.
 Cassatt, Alexander J., 411.
 Chadwick, Robert, 50.
 Chalfant, William, 549.
 Challenger, John F., 314.
 Chambers, Charles W., 370.
 Chambers, David J., 366.
 Chambers, Morris E., 367.
 Chambers, Richard B., 375.
 Chandler, Edwin A., 526.
 Chandler, Isaac F., 448.
 Cheyney, 292.
 Cheyney, Alice, 400.
 Cheyney, George S., 405.
 Cheyney, John P., 453.
 Cheyney, William G., 294.
 Cheyney, William L., 119.
 Childs, Joseph H., Sr., 201.
 Clark, Morgan H., 497.
 Clark, Walter M., 484.
 Clark, William C., 265.
 Clayton, The Family, 395.
 Clevensline, Henry, 494.
 Cloud, P. Allen, 489.
 Cloud, Thompson M., 330.
 Cloud, William P., 487.
 Clymer, John W., 260.
 Coates, George, 484.
 Cochran, Archibald A., 75.
 Conard, Alfred F., 428.
 Conard, Joel P., 317.
 Conard, Samuel, 232.
 Conard, The Family, 317.
 Conard, Thomas P., 304.
 Conner, John, 200.
 Conrad, William C., 213.
 Cook, Marcellus S., 382.
 Cooper, Pennock, 381.
 Cooper, The Family, 358.
 Cooper, Thomas V., 44.
 Cope, 425.
 Cope, Josiah, 427.
 Cornogg, Ulysses G., 275.
 Cox, George, 506.
 Cox, John, 530.
 Craig, Jacob, Jr., 94.
 Crager, Nathan P., 585.
 Crossan, Calvin J., 520.
 Crossan, Marshall S., 300.
 Crossan, Thomas E., 519.
 Crothers, Samuel R., 73.
 Crozer, Edward, 10.
 Crozer, John P., 6.
 Crozer, J. Lewis, 10.
 Crozer, Samuel A., 8.
 Crozer, The Family, 5.
 Crozer Theological Seminary, 1.
 Crozier, J. Eli, 566.
 Culver, Sanford, 566.
 Cunningham, George A., 401.
 Cunningham, Susan J., 154.
 Dale, Charles, 408.
 Darlington, Henry C., 482.
 Darlington, Isaac, 565.
 Darlington, Lamartine, 500.
 Davis, Charles W., 497.
 Davis, Harry M., 183.
 Davis, Isaac P., 462.
 Davis, Morgau R., 183.
 Davis, William H. H., 474.
 Davis, William L., 465.
 Deery, John E., 586.
 Deshong, Alfred O., 65.
 Deshong, The Family, 64.
 Detwiler, Isaac, 472.
 Dewees, Jacob H., 399.
 Dewees, Thomas B., 494.
 Dickinson, Maurice M., 212.
 Dickinson, William, 212.
 Dolbey, Conrad K., 234.

- Dorlan, Mary J., 324.
 Drake, Frank M., 273.
 Drayton, George, 166.
 Duffee, John H., 217.
 Dunmore, Edward D., 583.
 Durnall, Edwin J., 161.
- Eachus, Edwin E., 215.
 Ebricht, Jacob, 258.
 Eckfeldt, Adam C., 241.
 Edwards, George Y., 228.
 Edwards, Samuel, 30.
 Eisenbise, Henry A., 84.
 Ellreth, Jacob R., 177.
 Elliott, John, 518.
 Ellis, Nathaniel M., 589.
 Embree, 431.
 Embree, Lydia, 433.
 Emery, Eugene C., 356.
 Emery, Thomas W., 326.
 Epright, Hannah, 325.
 Epright, The Family, 324.
 Erskine, James, 248.
 Esrey, David R., 70.
 Esrey, James, 165.
 Essig, C. J., 271.
 Evans, Franklin G., 537.
 Evans, George D., 188.
 Evans, Jesse B., 421.
 Evans, John, 146.
 Evans, J. Engle, 142.
 Evans, Joseph H., 103.
 Evans, Lewis H., 516.
 Evans, William, 510.
 Everhart, James B., 337.
 Eves, William D., 307.
 Ewing, J. Hunter, 258.
 Ewing, William B., 445.
- Fahey, John, Jr., 556.
 Fairlamb, Horace W., 91.
 Faucett, Casper P., 569.
 Faucett, Ebenezer, 502.
 Faucett, Emilen C., 501.
 Faucett, George S., 511.
 Faucett, Henry, 280.
 Fell, Herbert D., 304.
 Felton, Samuel M., 80.
 Fetters, Horace A., 440.
 Fetters, Isaiah, 498.
 Finkbiner, John E., 460.
 First National Bank of Media, 136.
 Fisher, John P., 439.
 Flagg, J. Foster, 166.
 Flower, Charles, 135.
 Flower, John R., 114.
 Forsythe, Lewis, 451.
 Fox, James G., 402.
 Frame, William E., 456.
 Freeborn, James, 203.
 Freemann, John S., 259.
 Friday, Christian, 355.
 Friday, John W., 348.
 Friday, William, 495.
 Fry, Edward S., 87.
 Fulton, Ambrose C., 406.
 Fulton, James, 298.
 Fulton, John M., 398.
 Fulton, Joseph, 406.
 Fulton, J. Whittier, 485.
 Fulton, The Family, 398.
 Fulton, William T., 319.
 Funderwhite, John C., 329.
 Funk, Henry, 460.
 Fussell, Morris, 507.
- Gallagher, Harry K., 291.
 Garber, Henry O., 543.
 Garretson, James E., 185.
 Gartside, Benjamin, 62.
 Gartside, James, 63.
 Gawthrop, Emmor D., 576.
 Gawthrop, Joseph R., 559.
 Geissinger, Freeman J., 223.
 Gibbons, Joseph, 212.
 Gilbert, Edwin, 384.
 Gilkyson, Hamilton H., 488.
 Gilroy, Henry E., 104.
 Good, George, 456.
 Good, Lewis P., 365.
 Gough, Rufus W., 72.
 Graham, Wesley M., 413.
 Grant, Charles P., 264.
 Gray, Jerome B., 480.
 Green, 110.
 Green, Daniel H., 199.
 Green, Frank D., 112.
 Green, Horace P., 158.
 Green, Robert, 194.
 Green, William H., Jr., 52.
 Green, William H., Sr., 51.
 Greenfield, Henry C., 478.
 Griffith, Davis, 439.
 Griffith, Horace S., 262.
 Griffith, Morris F., 358.
 Griffith, Thomas W., 515.
- Habbersett, Jacob, 270.
 Habbersett, The Family, 270.
 Hackett, M. F., 590.
 Hadfield, Edward J., 482.
 Haines, Townsend, 564.
 Haines, Wilmer J., 367.
 Hall, B. T., 80.
 Hamilton, John, 87.
 Harlan, Henry, 398.
 Harlan, The Family, 398.
 Harper, John, 580.
 Hartman, David R., 343.
 Hartman, John S., 586.
 Hartman, William D., 339.
 Harvey, Rolph M., 283.
 Hause, Horace, 417.
 Haverford College, 168.
 Hawley, Joseph W., 137.
 Hawthorne, John L., 66.
 Hayes, Isaac I., 338.
 Heacock, Jonathan, 206.
 Henderson, David I., 219.
 Henderson, Isaac N., 572.
 Hepburn, Robert H., 370.
 Hetzel, George C., 88.
 Hibberd, Jacob, 155.
 Hibberd, John, 104.
 Hibberd, John, 220.
 Hibberd, Henrietta L., 104.
 Hibberd, Walter T., 263.
 Hickman, Edward S., 65.
 Hickman, Jesse J., 568.
 Hickman, John, 564.
 Hickman, Marshall B., 466.
 Hicks, Francis W., 362.
 Hicks, John H., 393.
 Hiestand, Amos, 461.
 Hiestand, Reuben, 446.
 Highley, Evan, 342.
 Hinkson, Henry M., 47.
 Hipple, Elijah G., 542.
 Hipple, Harry L., 269.
 Hipple, Henry, 236.
 Hipple, Jesse, 239.
 Hires, Charles E., 415.
- Hodgson, Robert H., 295.
 Hoffman, Elizabeth J., 157.
 Hoffner, Henry M., 184.
 Holman, Joseph W., 594.
 Holman, Leon E., 587.
 Holmes, Richard, 216.
 Hood, James P., 388.
 Hoopes, Henry H., 443.
 Houston, Howard H., 451.
 Houston, Thomas J., 41.
 Howard, Baldwin, 240.
 Howard, Frederick A., 61.
 Howard, William E., 61.
 Howell, Charles H., 582.
 Hower, Frank A., 173.
 Hughes, Robert G., 593.
 Hughes, Thomas, 174.
 Hull, James D., 155.
 Hull, William I., 154.
 Hunt, H. L., 312.
 Hunt, Mary J., 312.
 Hunter, Samuel R., 121.
 Hutchison, James N., 308.
- Ingram, Alexander H., 306.
 Ingram, H. G., 114.
 Ingram, Marshall A., 284.
 Irving, William A., 312.
- Jackson, James C., 160.
 Jackson, John G., 160.
 Jackson, Letitia, 316.
 James, Alfred, 198.
 James, Levi G., 82.
 James, Washington W., 187.
 Jefferis, Jesse P., 442.
 Jefferis, Joshua, 555.
 Johnson, Alexander, 208.
 Johnson, Charles E., 273.
 Johnson, David M., 45.
 Johnson, Isaac D., 557.
 Johnson, Thomas W., 326.
 Johnson, William A., 193.
 Johnson, William S., 17.
 Johnston, George J., 217.
 Johnston, Wallace B., 76.
 Jones, Isaac T., Jr., 180.
 Jones, Isaac T., Sr., 179.
 Jones, John, 422.
 Jones, Richard L., Jr., 261.
 Jones, Richard L., Sr., 265.
 Jones, Samuel M., 379.
 Jones, William, 404.
 Jones, William D., 267.
- Keech, James, 409.
 Keech, The Family, 409.
 Kealey, Horace W., 511.
 Keenan, William I., 434.
 Keenen, The Family, 433.
 Kelly, Patrick J., 264.
 Kelton, William N., 573.
 Kennady, John W., 448.
 Kennady, William S., 522.
 Kennedy, William D., 191.
 Kent, Henry T., 26.
 Kent, Mary A., 27.
 Kent, Samuel L., 27.
 Kent, Simmons, 165.
 Kent, The Family, 24.
 Kirk, Thomas, 430.
 Knight, William H., 561.
 Kromer, James F., 235.
- Lamorelle, Paul, 596.
 Langley, Edward, 488.

- LaRoche, Maximillian F., 222.
 Latshaw, Daniel B., 463.
 Latshaw, Jesse J., 401.
 Lawrence, Henry, 172.
 Lawrence, Samuel H., 429.
 Lawrence, The Family, 429.
 Lawrence, Thomas D., 172.
 Leamey, Isaac W., 227.
 Leamey, W. Walter, 228.
 Lee, Robert N., 176.
 Leedom, Charles, 202.
 Leedom, Joseph, 210.
 Lees, Daniel, 274.
 Lees, T. Frank, 275.
 LeFevre, W. Harry, 373.
 Lewis, David E., 272.
 Lewis, John R., 211.
 Lewis, Phineas, 412.
 Leys, James F., 14.
 Lindcamp, John A., 481.
 Lindsay, George B., 48.
 Little, George, 446.
 Lloyd, Horace H., 365.
 Lloyd, Truman B., 512.
 Lobb, Preston W., 414.
 Locke, Samuel D., 182.
 Logan, Elizabeth, 223.
 Long, Charles R., 313.
 Lorenz, Albert G., 168.
 Lownes, Francis, 161.
 Lownes, Joseph, 205.
 Lownes, William H., 237.
 Lowry, Walter B., 224.
 Lukens, Levi, 181.
 Lutz, John M., 192.

 Mackereth, Fred T., 529.
 Mackey, A. Wilson, 527.
 Mackey, David, 477.
 Mackey, Joseph Q., 391.
 Mackey, William C., 342.
 Mackey, William S., 525.
 MacPherson, Campbell, 200.
 Maddock, Israel M., 34.
 Maddux, Daniel P., 76.
 Magill, Edward H., 151.
 Makiver, Harry J., 131.
 Maplewood Institute, 115.
 March, J. Frank, 425.
 March, John F., 333.
 Maris, Edward, 101.
 Maris, John M., 100.
 Marley, Joseph, 381.
 Marshall, Hoopes, 428.
 Marshall, John, 216.
 Marshall, Margaretta, 406.
 Martin, Isaac, 449.
 Marvel, Howard T., 286.
 Mathues, Allen C. W., 148.
 Mathues, William L., 346.
 Matthews, Alfred H., 186.
 May, Addison, 338.
 McCall, George A., 334.
 McClellan, Joseph T., 175.
 McClure, Alexander K., 344.
 McClure, William J., 109.
 McCullough, Allan, 268.
 McCullough, Sanders, 322.
 McCurdy, Charles W., 331.
 McDonald, Patrick, 355.
 McFadden, Edward, 218.
 McFadden, Mercer, 527.
 McFadgen, Wilmer L., 537.
 McFadden, John R., 533.
 McFarland, George, 400.
 McFarland, Harry J., 408.

 McNeil, Caleb F., 361.
 McNeil, Charles L., 366.
 Media Court House, 247.
 Menagh, Joseph R., 197.
 Mendenhall, Henry, 118.
 Mendenhall, John H., 119.
 Mendenhall, Joseph T., 552.
 Mengel, Charles J., 327.
 Mercur, James W., 54.
 Meredith, Daniel, 410.
 Meredith, John, 416.
 Messick, Joseph, 102.
 Michener, Ellwood, 575.
 Michener, Maurice C., 117.
 Miles; The Family, 396.
 Miles, Theodore, 396.
 Miller, Harry J., 368.
 Miller, Jesse, 588.
 Miller, Lewis P., 532.
 Miller, Newton, 420.
 Miller, William H., 143.
 Monaghan, Robert E., 339.
 Monholland, W. J., 409.
 Mooney, John A., 493.
 Moore, Charles, 124.
 Moore, Daniel F., 584.
 Moore, Francis J., 435.
 Moore, George, 374.
 Moore, Nathan B., 257.
 Moore, Philip, 257.
 Moore, Robert F., 417.
 Moore, Samuel H., 258.
 Moore, Thomas E., 458.
 Moore, The Family, 256.
 Moore, William A., 457.
 Moorhead, Mary F., 221.
 Morris, Charles E., 106.
 Mosteller, Joseph, 354.
 Mosteller, Park V., 500.
 Mullin, Thomas E., 581.
 Murray, John S., 204.
 Myers, Walter S., 524.

 Neal, Samuel H., 79.
 Nields, Henry C., 339.
 Notable Buildings, 5.

 Oliver, Edmund, 83.

 Palmer, Charles, 71.
 Palmer, Marshall, 490.
 Pancoast, Thomas, 278.
 Parke, Agnes G., 317.
 Parker, William M., 272.
 Parkinson, Thomas W., 220.
 Paschall, 276.
 Paschall, Joseph H., 277.
 Passmore, Benjamin J., 413.
 Passmore, Oscar F., 369.
 Patchel, George G., 206.
 Patchel, George S., 242.
 Patchel, James, 207.
 Pechin, Peter, 203.
 Peck, David Y., 333.
 Peirce, Albert G., 560.
 Peirson, David Y., 590.
 Pendleton, Garnett, 37.
 Pennington, Chandler, 536.
 Pennock, Abraham L., 577.
 Pennock, Caspar, 577.
 Pennock, Joseph L., 579.
 Pennock, Samuel J., 486.
 Peters, Harriet P., 80.
 Phillips, David, 518.
 Phillips, Edwin S., 548.
 Phillips, Samuel J., 553.

 Phillips, John M., 563.
 Phillips, William H., 562.
 Pierson, David T., 523.
 Pinkerton, Samuel S., 198.
 Place, Benjamin F., 444.
 Platt, John, 146.
 Pond, Joseph E., 223.
 Potts, Charles, 124.
 Powel, William M., 86.
 Powell, Elizabeth, 230.
 Powell, Elwood G., 230.
 Powell, Hibbard, 193.
 Powell, Vernon, 440.
 Powell, Walter C., 187.
 Pratt, David, 206.
 Pratt, Henry B., 289.
 Pratt, Nathan L., 287.
 Pratt, Trimble, 146.
 Prendergast, John F., 566.
 Prizer, Granville, 455.
 Pugh, Caleb, 378.
 Pugh, Tryon J., 400.
 Pusey, Edwin, 376.
 Pusey, J. Howard, 486.
 Pusey, Joel B., 385.
 Pusey, Joshua B., 392.
 Pusey, Philip C., 373.
 Pusey, The House, 10.
 Pusey, William J., 383.
 Pyle, J. Atwood, 418.
 Pyle, Robert, 394.
 Pyle, Samuel S., 450.

 Quaril, Joseph S., 542.
 Quay, George W., 464.
 Quay, Rees J., 453.
 Quigley, Joseph L., 255.

 Ralston, H. F., 478.
 Ralston, John B., 349.
 Ramsay, James P., 522.
 Ramsey, Robert E., 407.
 Ranck, Jacob, 422.
 Rapp, Joseph P., 357.
 Rapp, U. S. Grant, 498.
 Read, Thomas B., 323.
 Rapp, William, 467.
 Reece, J. Coulson, 528.
 Remard, Jacob, 423.
 Rhoads, William, 246.
 Rice, Edmund T., 205.
 Richey, Thomas H., Jr., 534.
 Rigby, J. Lord, 125.
 Rigby, William H., 120.
 Ring, Caleb, B., 434.
 Ristine, George C., 175.
 Ritter, Samuel M., 288.
 Roach, John B., 31.
 Robb, William, 431.
 Roberts, Charles W., 475.
 Robinson, John, 397.
 Robinson, The Family, 397.
 Rogers, John T., 229.
 Rogers, Moses E., 299.
 Rogers, Sarah M., 229.
 Root, Isaac K., 345.
 Rose, David, 73.
 Rossiter, Mahlon, 592.
 Rubincam, Barclay, 410.
 Rush, George, 282.

 Savage, Hugh, 210.
 Savery, Stephen W., 382.
 Scatchard, John, 300.
 Schaffer, William I., 313.
 Schleichter, Webster, 509.

- Schofield, Harry, 249.
 Scott, Amos G., 481.
 Scott, H. H., 278.
 Scott, Israel R., 281.
 Selby, Fred, 88.
 Serrill, Joseph L., 243.
 Shafer, Lavina W., 584.
 Sharpless, Isaac, 170.
 Sharpless, John P., 491.
 Shaw, Hugh, 60.
 Shaw, John, 86.
 Sheneman, Augustus P., 435.
 Shepherd, John, Jr., 412.
 Shillingford, Annie C., 270.
 Shimer, William, 458.
 Shipley's The Misses School, 186.
 Shoch, Samuel B., 535.
 Shoemaker, Anna M., 188.
 Shoffner, Isaac N., 328.
 Shoffner, Levi, 468.
 Shortlidge, Joseph, 116.
 Shortlidge, Swithin, 581.
 Shupert, Millard F., 332.
 Siter, William, 230.
 Skelton, Lewis, 504.
 Skelton, Lewis M., 555.
 Skelton, Lydia C., 554.
 Slack, Norris B., 521.
 Smedley, Ellwood, 514.
 Smiley, George B. McC., 327.
 Smith, A. G. C., 164.
 Smith, Edward W., 225.
 Smith, John L., 464.
 Smith, John W., 66.
 Smith, R. Penn., 411.
 Smith, Robert G., 404.
 Snyder, William, 468.
 Snyder, William H., 321.
 Snyder, William H., 467.
 Snyder, William P., 469.
 Sparks, Hickman W., 449.
 Spencer, Eugene C., 296.
 Spencer, Evan, 392.
 Spencer, George W., 535.
 Spencer, Harvey, 450.
 Spencer, Penneck, 290.
 Spencer, Samuel F., 375.
 Sproul, 350.
 Sproul, William C., 351.
 Sproul, William H., 359.
 Stackhouse, Amos, 15.
 Stackhouse, The Family, 14.
 Stafford, C. E., 134.
 Starr, Charles T., 572.
 Starr, The Family, 570.
 Stauffer, Henry P., 300.
 Stauffer, John B., 508.
 Stiteler, David H., 196.
 Stoever, Henry VonH., 98.
 Strahorn, Robert, 394.
 Strickland, Joseph R., 476.
 Strickland, Nimrod, 564.
 Strieby, Jacob P., 156.
 Stubbs, Theodore K., 302.
 Syer, Stephen, 442.
 Suplee, Nathan, 399.
 Swain, Joseph, 152.
 Swarthmore College, 149.
 Swarthmore Preparatory School, 162.
 Swayne, Evan T., 514.
 Swayne, George, 219.
 Swayne, Isaac W., 487.
 Sweney, John R., 49.
 Swinehart, William, 346.
 Taylor, Bayard, 546.
 Taylor, Henry W., 547.
 Taylor, Herbert T., 331.
 Taylor, James L., 38.
 Taylor, Thomas, 427.
 Temple, Charles, 259.
 Thatcher, Thomas H., 279.
 Thomas, Albert H., 544.
 Thomas, Benjamin P., 424.
 Thomas, John H., 329.
 Thompson, John W., 408.
 Thompson, Joseph M., 361.
 Thornburg, John P., 398.
 Thornbury, Augustus M., 534.
 Timmins, James, 197.
 Tingley, Daniel L., 381.
 Titus, John H., 308.
 Tomlinson, Arthur H., 163.
 Townsend, James, Jr., 271.
 Townsend, Thomas C., 378.
 Townsend, Washington, 334.
 Trainer, Edward E., 112.
 Trainer Thomas W., 99.
 Trimble, Edward H., 462.
 Trimble, Samuel, 250.
 Tully, David, 123.
 Turner, Wright, 278.
 Tyler, Ann (Painter), 77.
 Tyson, James H., 282.
 Tyson, The Family, 282.
 Ullman, Uriah C., 588.
 Ulrich, William B., 74.
 Urian, George W., 268.
 Vahle, Henry, 191.
 Vansant, John C., 517.
 Verner, James, 261.
 Walker, Swithin C., 289.
 Wallace, John A., 540.
 Wallace, John A., 69.
 Wallace, Thomas, 291.
 Walter, Charles T., 390.
 Walter, Edward, 472.
 Walter, Joseph J., 551.
 Walton, William M., 580.
 Ward, John M. B., 98.
 Ward, William, 97.
 Warner, Charles A., 226.
 Warner, Gardiner L., 171.
 Warner, Isaac, 226.
 Washabaugh, Perry M., 42.
 Watkin, William, 260.
 Watson, J. Morris, 377.
 Watt, Samuel G., 245.
 Way, Ellen P., 447.
 Way, James W., 303.
 Way, The Family, 400.
 Way, William, 499.
 Webb, Samuel P., 318.
 Webster, Ezra J., 576.
 Webster, Howard C., 301.
 Webster, Pennell L., 122.
 Welles, Charles S., 251.
 Wells, W. Henry, 465.
 Wells, William, 572.
 West, Joseph G., 297.
 West, The Family, 10.
 Weston, Henry G., 4.
 Wetherill, Richard, 39.
 White, Henry C., 563.
 White, John T., 521.
 Wickersham, Benjamin F., 550.
 Wickersham, Caleb P., 596.
 Wickersham, Enos T., 485.
 Wickersham, Rebecca, 380.
 Wickersham, Samuel, 576.
 Wiegand, George, 103.
 Wilds, John, 203.
 Wilkinson, John M., 502.
 Willard, William, 299.
 Williams, Abram S., 569.
 Williams, Howard S., 582.
 Williamson, Charles R., 132.
 Williamson, Forrest E., 145.
 Williamson, George C., 172.
 Williamson, William E., 133.
 Willis, Christopher D., 85.
 Willis, Francis P., 285.
 Wilson, Frederick, 420.
 Wilson, John N., 99.
 Wilson, John W., 493.
 Wilson, Lewis, 513.
 Wolfenden, Jonathan, 208.
 Wollaston, Pusey P., 579.
 Wollaston, T. Elwood, 573.
 Wood, Benjamin L., 374.
 Wood, Ennor B., 389.
 Woodbridge, Jonathan E., 309.
 Woodward, George, 315.
 Woodward, Owen L., 353.
 Worrall, James M., 569.
 Worrall, John E., 552.
 Worrell, Edwin E., 145.
 Worrell, Elwood M., 474.
 Worth, Marshall, 387.
 Worth, Paschall, 397.
 Worth, Samuel F., 387.
 Worth, Thomas P., 407.
 Worthington, John, 104.
 Worthington, Wilmer, 340.
 Wright's, Miss School for Girls, 192.
 Wyers, William F., 565.
 Yarnall, Lydia, 113.
 Yarnall, Truman, 504.
 Yarnall, Ann L., 504.
 Yeatman, Arthur P., 539.
 Yeatman, John C., 538.
 Yocum, A. Duncan, 67.
 Young, Charles, 444.
 Young, Wilson B., 221.
 Yunkin, Edward, 396.
 Yunkin, The Family, 306.

CROZER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

CHESTER AND DELAWARE COUNTIES

PENNSYLVANIA

CROZER THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.
The history of this excellent institution is of peculiar interest, and affords an eloquent illustration of the value of a useful human life as a stimulus to beneficent works by others, and of the great ends which may be attained through improvement of opportunity.

The Baptists of Pennsylvania and New Jersey had long felt the great need of a school for the thorough training of their ministers, when (in 1855) the theological department of Lewisburg (now Bucknell) University was opened under the auspices of their denomination. This department was, however, without a separate endowment, and, while it sent out a considerable number of young men well equipped for the ministry, it did not fully meet the needs of Baptists, nor did it secure their heart sympathy and aid. Whether it would have ever come to fill the place which was desired for it, is now a mere matter of speculation. Opportunity came for a younger and more efficient institution, and the Crozer Theological Seminary had its birth.

In 1866 occurred the death of John P. Crozer, a sincere Christian and a liberal practical philanthropist, the story of whose life is written on other pages of this work. Suffice it here to say that he gave liberally to many religious and charitable causes, but for many years he had cherished a purpose to devote a portion of his large means to some large public benefaction which should be of permanent usefulness. He finally determined upon the creation of an educational institution—not a college, but a school of academic grade with a normal department, having chiefly in his mind what he conceived to be the needs of the poorer children of the neighborhood who could not go to a distant academy or college. Mr. Crozer accordingly selected a beautiful elevation at Upland, in the suburbs of the city of Chester, overlooking the Delaware river, and upon this he built a substantial stone edifice, which was opened in 1858. It is pathetic to note that he was disappointed in his every expectation. From the first, failure was written against his plans. At the outset, there was difficulty in finding suitable teachers, and, when a capable corps had been found, the school was disrupted by a succession of visitations of epidemic disease. But the greatest grief that came to Mr. Crozer was the fact that, while parents in comfortable circumstances availed themselves of the opportunity of securing for their children a liberal education at a nominal outlay, those whom he was most desirous of aiding, the poorer children, came to the school in meagre numbers. About the time of the opening of the Civil war the school was closed, never to be reopened under the patronage of Mr. Crozer. During the war the building was used as a military hospital, and for some time afterward private parties conducted in it a military school.

After the death of Mr. Crozer, his heirs were confronted with the question: What should be done with the academy property, and how could the heart's desire of the husband and father be most fittingly accomplished? From one of the family came the happy thought, "Why not establish a school for the training of ministers?" Had an inspiration come to the questioner from him who had passed away? While a lad, Mr. Crozer had received baptism at the hands of the Rev. Dr. William Staughton, then pastor of the First Baptist church of Philadelphia, and that eminent clergyman was he who in 1807 had begun to give private instruction, in his own house, to a number of candidates for the ministry, and later (in 1812) became tutor of a theological school opened under the auspices of the Baptist Educational Society of the Middle States. To dispose of this topic, it is to be said that in course of time Dr. Staughton's school was transferred to the Columbian University at Washington, and the Baptist young men of Pennsylvania were left without theological instruction in their own state until the opening of Lewisburg Seminary, before mentioned.

The family of Mr. Crozer were favorably disposed to the proposal made by one of their number for the founding of a theological seminary, but it was necessary to ascertain whether the plan would have the approval of the Baptists of the state, and if it could be carried out without aggrieving the friends of Lewisburg Seminary, which was yet struggling to maintain itself. To answer these questions, conferences were held with leading Baptists in and near Philadelphia, and they were found to be in hearty accord with the plans proposed, and, in course of time, when similar approval came from other influential denominational quarters the Lewisburg University took action looking to the closing of its theological department, conditioned upon the hopeful establishment of the new institution. With the way thus prepared, the family of Mr. Crozer determined to found a theological seminary, which was to bear his name in reverence of his memory. The Crozer family at this time consisted of the widow of Mr. Crozer, Sallie Knowles Crozer; his sons, Samuel A., J. Lewis, George K., and Robert H. Crozer; and his daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Griffith, Mrs. Margaret Bucknell, and Emma, now Mrs. Knowles. Accordingly, on November 2, 1866, they jointly endowed the new seminary with land, buildings and invested funds amounting in value to two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. To use the expression of the author of the "Historical Sketch of Crozer Theological Seminary; Souvenir of the Thirtieth Anniversary," "this was a princely gift; no one of the Baptist theological schools had begun its career with an endowment so large; at that time there was no Baptist seminary that owned so valuable a property." April 4, 1867, the legislature of Pennsylvania incorporated the board of trustees of the Crozer Theological Seminary, of which Mr. Samuel A. Crozer has been president to the present time. The seminary now had a legal existence, a building and beautiful campus, but was without faculty or students.

The trustees began by electing a president, and their choice fell upon Henry G. Weston, D. D., LL. D., nor could a more fortunate one have been made. He had shown his great ability as an organizer and director in both the west and the east, and his tact and skill in the management of men and his successful direction of church affairs, had made him a marked man among the pastors of the city of New York. Under his pastorate, his church there had become the leader in denominational enterprises of various kinds, and was known as "the banner church" in its contributions to home and foreign missions and other worthy objects. His gifts found full scope for their exercise in the work upon which he entered in 1868. There were many adverse things to contend with, and one of less tact than Dr. Weston would have embroiled the infant school with other Pennsylvania institutions, and made its establishment a failure from the outset. It is only when such probabilities are considered that the great value of Dr. Weston's service clearly appears, for during his presidency he has been noted for entire avoidance of antagonisms, and for so conciliating all with whom he has had to deal that, soon after his inauguration, he had brought the seminary into entire harmony with all other institutions in the state, and gained for it a warm place in the hearts of the Baptists of Pennsylvania, not to mention those of New Jersey and Delaware and of regions yet more distant. While Dr. Weston has been an active minister for more than a half century, president of the Seminary for the long period of thirty-five years, and has reached the venerable age of eighty-three years, he discharges his official duties and teaches practical theology with no abatement of interest or diminution of mental vigor. Truly a remarkable and remarkably useful career, and, as has been said by another who has been previously quoted, "there is no younger man of his years anywhere living, and there is no friend of the institution who does not devoutly pray that his life may be spared for many years to come."

With Dr. Weston as president was associated a small faculty. The Rev. G. D. B. Pepper, D. D., a graduate of Amherst, as professor of Christian Theology, took high rank as an inspiring teacher, a broad scholar and deep thinker; and the Rev. Howard Osgood, D. D., a graduate of Harvard, became professor of Hebrew and church history. With these instructors the Seminary was opened on October 2, 1868. The first annual catalogue contained the names of twenty students, the following year there were thirty-six, and at the first commencement, in June, 1870, eight students were graduated. In 1872 the Rev. Lemuel Moss, D. D., was added to the faculty as professor of interpretation of the New Testament. The four departments established by the trustees at the outset were now fully organized. In 1874 the faculty was almost entirely reorganized, only Drs. Weston and Pepper remaining. The Rev. George R. Bliss, D. D., who since 1849 had occupied the chair of Greek in the University of Lewisburg, became professor of Biblical Interpretation. Of him it is said that "to listen to his English was to take a course in rhetoric, for his diction was as chaste as his life; to hear him read the Bible was a drill in exegesis, for his artless elocution made God's word intelligible." In the autumn of 1875, the Rev. John C. Long, D. D., took the chair of church history. He was a profound scholar and a most capable teacher. The faculty consisted of the four members named until 1877, when the Rev. Barnard C. Taylor, a graduate of the preceding year, became instructor in Hebrew. In 1880 he was advanced to the assistant professorship, and in 1883 he was made professor of Old Testament Exegesis. After President Weston, he is the senior member of the present faculty. In 1882 the Rev. Elias H. Johnson, D. D., was elected to the chair of Systematic Theology to succeed Professor Pepper, who had resigned to accept the presidency of Colby University, and the Rev. James M. Stifler, D. D., was elected to fill the newly established chair of New Testament Exegesis. In 1889 the Rev. Ezekiel G. Robinson, D. D., LL. D., was appointed special lecturer in Apologetics and Evidences of Christianity, and held this position until his death, in 1894. In 1890 Dr. Bliss was transferred to the newly established chair of Biblical Theology, and a recent graduate of the Seminary, the Rev. Milton G. Evans, was appointed instructor in Hebrew. Dr. Bliss died in 1893, and Mr. Evans (who received the degree of Doctor of Divinity a year later) was advanced to the chair thus vacated. In the same year the Rev. A. W. Reynolds, Ph. D., of Yale University, became instructor in Hebrew and cognate languages, and Mr. Robert P. Bliss a son of Dr. Bliss, was appointed librarian of the Seminary. Dr. Long died in the summer of 1895, and Mr. Henry C. Vedder, senior editor of the Examiner, was appointed to the chair of church history. Dr. Reynolds withdrew from the faculty in 1899, and the Rev. John W. Davis, a graduate of the preceding year, was called to succeed him. In 1900 a new chair was established, that of interpretation of the English New Testament, and the Rev. Alvah S. Hobart, D. D., became its first incumbent. The sudden death of Dr. Stifler, in December, 1902, made another vacancy in the faculty, which was filled by the election, in June, 1903, of Eugene E. Ayres, D. D., professor of Philosophy in Georgetown College, Kentucky. At the same time, Oliver Chace Horsman, a recent graduate, was appointed instructor in Hebrew and Greek.

The course of study has been remodeled several times, and now three distinct courses are offered: The Regular course, including the study of the Scriptures in both Hebrew and Greek, and two years in Systematic Theology; the Greek course, which is identical with the Regular, except that the student substitutes English for Hebrew in the study of the Old Testament; and the English course, in which the English Bible only is studied, and a shorter course of one year in Systematic Theology is taken. While students are encouraged to come with ample educational qualifications, collegiate or academical, a diploma or its equivalent has never been required for admission to the Seminary.

The management of the institution is conducted with sagacity and dignity. The internal conduct rests entirely with the president and faculty, who alone direct the instruction and discipline. The trustees charge themselves entirely with the care of the property, and the Seminary has suffered the humiliation of having its president pose as a financial agent and solicitor for funds or pupils. The founders of the institution have at various times made substantial additions to the original endowment of $184,000, which has grown to the sum of $462,500. Included in this is the amount of fifty thousand dollars, given by her children after the death of Mrs. John Crozer, to endow in her name the chair of Preaching and Pastoral Duties. The net income amounts to about twenty-six thousand dollars.

The number of students has been steadily increased. For several years the catalogue contained about forty-six names, which were increased in 1886 to fifty-six. The increase was steadily maintained, and in 1895 one hundred and three were catalogued. The school has given instruction to about two thousand Baptist ministers, of whom some six hundred hold its diploma. Its graduates hold their place by the side of those from her four older sister institutions, and some of the most active and successful pastors in leading cities—New York, Boston, Brooklyn, Cleveland, Toledo, and others—are her sons.

The Seminary occupies a campus of twenty-five acres, and with its noble native trees, beautiful shrubbery and flower beds, its well-kept lawns and drives, its handsome buildings, is unsurpassed, if, indeed, it is equalled, among the theological schools of the United States. The main building, with its frontage of two hundred feet, is an admirable example of substantial colonial architecture, and is excellently adapted to the comfort of students. The rooms are neatly and tastily furnished, and are steam-heated. Grouped about the building are Pearl Hall, a fine hall for commencement exercises, and six residences for faculty members. Pearl Hall is a large fire-proof library building, erected by the late William Bucknell, Esq., in memory of his deceased wife. The cost was nearly thirty thousand dollars, and the donor also gave a sum of twenty-five thousand dollars for the immediate purchase of books, and an added ten thousand dollars for an invested fund. The library now contains about sixteen thousand volumes, with a great number of valuable pamphlets, selected with great care in Europe and the United States, with special reference to the wants of theological students.

In the words of an annalist of the Seminary, "no one who visits it fails to be impressed by the beauty and peacefulness of the spot, and almost every one who comes goes away with the conviction that it is an ideal place to lead the life of a scholar. Its nearness to the great city of Philadelphia—it is only a half-hour's journey by rail—keeps students and professors alike in touch with the great currents of life and thought, and they are brought into constant contact with surrounding churches, and are an integral part of the denominational life of the state. There is no cloister life at Crozer, quiet and 'far from the mad'ning crowd,' as it seems to the transient visitor to be." A single justification of this statement, of many that might be given: Missions have been begun from time to time in the surrounding towns by Crozer students, as a result of which flourishing churches have been established, which to-day own fully one hundred thousand dollars' worth of property.

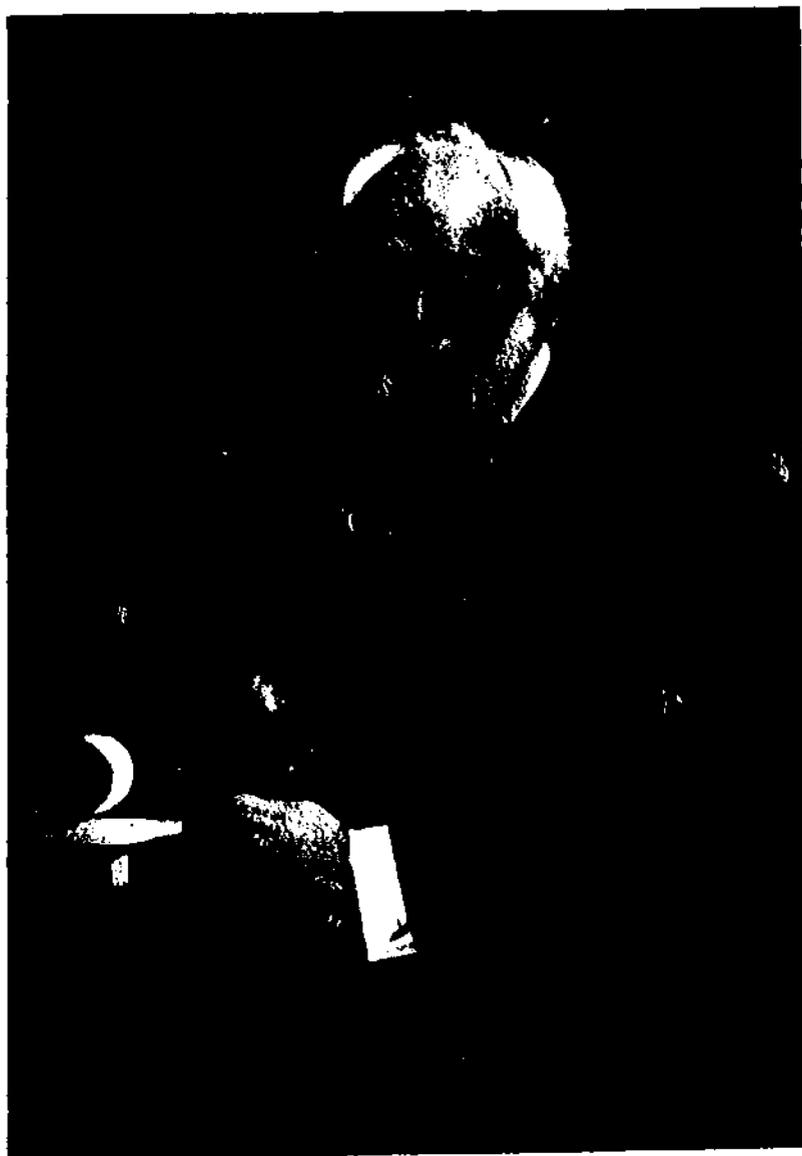

The subjoined excellent sketch of the life and services of Dr. Weston from the pen of E. H. Johnson, appeared in the "Bibliotheca Sacra" (Oberlin, Ohio), in 1900:

Henry G. Weston, D. D., LL. D., was born in Lynn, Massachusetts, September 11, 1820. His father, the Rev. John E. Weston, in partnership with Mr. Benjamin True, founded, in 1819, at Boston, the first Baptist weekly in America, The Christian Watchman, now The Watchman, and was its first editor. He was drowned when Henry was eleven years old, but he had already grounded his little son in Latin, Greek and Hebrew. Indeed, Dr. Weston can not remember when he could not recite the Greek alphabet. After preparing for college in the Lynn Academy, he entered Brown University, graduating in 1840. He passed at once to Newton Theological Institution, but ill health broke off his studies before the end of the second year. Hemorrhages from the lungs threatened him with the disorder which proved fatal to his mother and to all his brothers and sisters, but he deliberately began to spend from half an hour to an hour and a half daily in deep breathing, mostly out of doors, and to this custom, followed for forty years, and to prudent habits, he no doubt owes the extraordinary freshness and vigor of his later life. Compelled to seek a favorable climate, he was ordained at Frankfort, Kentucky, in 1843, and spent the next three years as a missionary at his own charges in Illinois. From 1846 to 1859 he was pastor of the Baptist church in Peoria, and from 1859 to 1868 pastor of the Oliver Street, later the Madison Avenue, Baptist church in New York city. His pastorates were highly successful, and from the last mentioned he was called to Crozer Theological Seminary, of which he has been president from its foundation in 1868. Here he took the chair of Preaching and Pastoral Duties; he also lectures on the Characteristics and Relations of the New Testament Writings.

Dr. Weston has been twice married, first to Miss Enda Chambers Van Meter, by whom he had two sons and two daughters; second, to Miss Mary Lovitt Peters, who died in 1894. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by the University of Rochester in 1859, and subsequently that of Doctor of Laws by four institutions—Brown, Bucknell, Denison and the Southwestern University. The latter fact intimates the fitness for college presidencies which was recognized in the Crozer president, a recognition which led to repeated and urgent calls.

Nature equipped Dr. Weston for a great preacher. Of somewhat grim countenance and impressive presence, with a voice at once powerful and sympathetic, and a bearing both familiar and earnest, his mental correspond to his bodily endowments. His horizon is wide, his observation close, his sagacity almost infallible, his emotions quick and strong, his will and his geniality alike masterful, his humor lively but reverent, his memory prompt with illustrations from experience, and, what is of supreme importance in a preacher, the real affectionateness of his spirit as much in evidence as its forceful and even formidable masculinity. These gifts of nature were developed by an experience which has brought to him a varied and deep acquaintance with both God and men. He is an insatiable reader of the best books, and crowns his learning with a study of the Bible most rare. Every month for many years he has read the New Testament through with watchful and loving attentiveness. As a result, his knowledge of the book and his breadth of sympathy keep him still in constant demand as a preacher, and he has been as valued a lecturer among the devoted people of Northfield as in theological circles or with his students at home. All the qualifications for the pulpit were as eminently serviceable in pastoral relations, and if one attempted to describe how fit he is for the chair of instruction and the responsibility of a seminary presidency, it would be hard to do more than point out what any one can see for himself, how these same characteristics, native and acquired, necessarily made him what has grown so rare, an old-time president, the dear friend of his colleagues, the revered father of his students, the trusted counsellor of his alumni, the far-seeing, tactful, informing soul of the Seminary. He has led it for more than thirty years to a place among the best schools of divinity, and now, in his eighty-fourth year, he is as bright, stimulating and instructive as ever, while his enriched spirituality makes his hold gentler but surer, and his presence more indispensable than it could appear in years less ripe. When he is present in chapel, as he almost invariably is, the room seems full, and when he is away the place seems uncomfortably void. And so his position is almost, if not quite, unique, as that of such a man in such relations must necessarily be. What it is was partly illustrated in the preparations for commencement a year ago. Some of the graduating class were asking for a change of plans, and he said: "You do not seem to be afraid of me, gentlemen." To which a member of the class had the wit and the good heart to reply: "You know, Doctor, that perfect love casteth out fear."

Henry G. Weston.

WASHINGTON HOUSE, CHESTER.

CITY HALL, CHESTER.

NOTABLE BUILDINGS. The City Hall of Chester bears an eloquent witness to the antiquity of the city. It was erected long before the foundations were laid for Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, and its history is concisely given in an inscription upon a bronze tablet on the front of the edifice, placed by Delaware County Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. The following is the inscription:

This building was erected in 1724 during the reign of George I, of England. It was the court house of Chester county, 1724-1786. The court house of Delaware county, 1789-1851. Hall of Chester borough, 1851-1866. Hall of Chester city since 1866. In 1739 England declared war against Spain, and soldiers were here enlisted for an expedition to Cuba. Here Anthony Wayne rallied and drilled his troops, January, 1776. In 1824 Lafayette, as guest of the nation, was entertained in this building.

The Washington House, originally known as the Pennsylvania Arms, was erected in 1747, built of brick brought from England, and is preserved in its original form and material, the only modernization being such as has been necessary to preserve it and make it of presentable appearance.

DELAWARE COUNTY CHAPTER DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

MARK THIS HOUSE
AS THE PLACE WHERE WASHINGTON
WROTE AT MIDNIGHT THE ONLY REPORT OF THE BATTLE OF BRANDYWINE,
SEPTEMBER 11, 1777.

HERE WASHINGTON ALSO RECEIVED THE CONGRATULATIONS OF THE PEOPLE OF CHESTER UPON HIS ELECTION AS THE FIRST PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,
APRIL 20, 1780.

The title to the property is direct from William Penn, and the original grant was made May 31, 1686. As was written in the Centennial Souvenir, published by the West Chester Daily Local News, 1899: "Among the old buildings in Chester city or Delaware county, there is none that has been as prominent as this one." It was at this house that the discussions for and against the removal of the county seat to West Chester took place, and later the organization of the county of Delaware was formed from part of Chester county. General Washington often, in passing through Chester on his way to and from Mt. Vernon to the seat of government in New York and Philadelphia, stopped at this hotel. The ancient mahogany chairs which stood in the room occupied by the first president, during these visits, are still preserved by the descendants of William Kerlin. It was in this house that William Henry Harrison, after having received the Whig nomination for the presidency, in 1840, and was returning from Washington, stopped for dinner and received the congratulations of the citizens of Chester. After dinner had been served wine, as usual on such occasions, was placed on the table. It was observed that Harrison drank water. Upon being pressed to take wine he rose and said:

"Gentlemen, I have refused twice to partake of the wine cup; that should have been sufficient. Though you press the cup to my lips, not a drop shall pass their portals. I made a resolve when I started in life that I would avoid strong drink, and I have never broken it."

CROZER FAMILY. The Crozer family in America was planted by five brothers—James, Samuel, John, Robert and Andrew,—who emigrated from the north of Ireland early in the eighteenth century. They were of Huguenot extraction and had been driven out from France by the revocation of the edict of Nantes. James Crozer, after his arrival, about 1720, married a member of the Gleave family, of English descent, residing in Springfield, Pennsylvania, and these were the parents of John Crozer.

John Crozer was a man of strong character, in attainments and purposes far in advance of the generality of the men of his day. He was a carpenter and builder by occupation, and he followed his calling in Philadelphia until after his marriage, and also built in Upland, Delaware county. Notwithstanding his humble trade, he was a man of excellent education, a good Latin scholar and familiar with the classic authors. He was not attached to any church, but he inclined to the doctrines of the Society of Friends. He married Sarah Price, a daughter of John Price, of Marcus Hook, Delaware county, of English descent. She had been brought up in the Church of England, as it was known in America until after the Revolution. She regarded a written creed as of little efficacy in the formation of character or in the government of individual life. She was, however, a firm believer in practical Christianity, and gave an exemplification of her faith in the beauty of her own character, and in the influence which she exerted by precept and conduct. The two, husband and wife, were sincerely in accord in all things, and they were true helpmeets in the rearing of their children, upon whom they impressed their own personality in marked degree. These were Elizabeth, who became the wife of John Lewis; James; Sarah, who became the wife of Samuel V. Campbell; John Price; and Samuel. During the early days of their married life, John Crozer and his wife made their home on a farm belonging to the estate of John Knowles, of which Mr. Crozer was the executor. This was not for long, however, for he soon purchased the farm at Springfield which afterward became the property of Swarthmore College. Here was born his second son and fifth child, John Price Crozer, January 13, 1793, and it is worthy of remark that in the same house was born, more than a half century before, one of the most celebrated of American painters in the person of Benjamin West.

The name of John P. Crozer will ever hold an honored place in the history of Pennsylvania, and more especially in that of Delaware county. A man of great nobility of character, he was wonderfully useful in his day. His activities were not circumscribed, but extended to every line of effort which could add to the well being of the community and of the state. A man of splendid abilities, without seeking fame, he made himself famous as a captain of industry before that now hackneyed term was known. But he was more than this: he was humanitarian and philanthropist, and he so disposed of his means as to conduce to the moral as well as the material advancement of the people, not only in his own day, but in after time, through works which do of a certainty live after him. There was that in his character which would seem to afford support to the views of those who hold to the theory of heredity. In his veins was the blood of the ruggedly framed and conscientiously minded Scotch covenanters, and also of the persistent but more elastic English. These virile streams blended more freely under the freer air of America than on the parent soil of either race, and the product comprised what was best of either.

His educational advantages were exceedingly meagre. When six years old he began attending a little stone schoolhouse nearly a mile from his home, and here were spent all his school days except during a period of three months when he attended a somewhat more pretentious school about two miles distant. But the curriculum afforded by either went little if any beyond the rudimentary branches, or, as they have been called, "the three R's—readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic." But the young student was ambitious, and he made the best possible use of such advantages as were afforded him. He had other advantages, however. His home contained a small but carefully selected stock of books, and his parents afforded him the aid of their knowledge and encouragement, and he studied at home, so that he eventually acquired a broader education than was attained by the generality of the young people of that time in that region. And so, under the tender watchcare of his parents, was young Crozer reared and in greater part educated, and so was his character formed. And, also in his boyhood, when he was but fourteen years of age, he professed religion under the ministrations of the Rev. Dr. Staughton, of Philadelphia, of whose church (the First Baptist) he became a member, and from that day throughout his life he was the sincere Christian, free from fault and exemplary in all things.

From his early boyhood he had been accustomed to perform such share of the farm labor as his strength would admit, and when he was seventeen years of age the care of its management was devolved almost entirely upon him. On his coming of age, his father, in consideration of his previous service, gave him a one-third interest in the profits. But this arrangement was not of long continuance. Two years later (in 1816) his father died, and his mother survived her bereavement only one year. Young Crozer was now twenty-four years old. He was desirous of keeping the farm, but finding this impracticable he leased it, pending the sale, and (in 1820) made a journey as far westward as Illinois, making the distance there and back, about two thousand seven hundred miles, almost entirely on horseback, and occupying a period of about seven months. On his return he found that the farm had been sold. His share amounted to about $2,400, and this, added to his savings, made him about $3,400 as his capital upon which to really begin life.

His first venture in business was operating a saw and grist mill at Leipersville, Delaware county, in partnership with its owner, Judge G. G. Leiper, who was his partner in the business. The two contributed an equal amount of capital, and Mr. Crozer set off his personal services against Mr. Leiper's rent account for the use of the mill. Somewhat later this partnership was dissolved, and he engaged in cotton manufacturing in Leiper's mill on Brown creek. At the beginning the business was small, but it developed gradually, and soon into great proportions under the masterly direction of Mr. Crozer, who now assumed its entire direction.

John P. Cozue

In 1825 Mr. Crozer bought the Mattson paper mill, on the west branch of Chester creek, which he altered and to which he removed his cotton machinery. In 1845 the noted old Chester mills, which provided foodstuffs for the patriot army during the Revolutionary war, were brought to sale in the orphans' court, and were sold to John W. Asluncad, who sold them, together with a land tract of upwards of sixty acres, to Mr. Crozer. The next year Mr. Crozer built on the Chester mills grounds the cotton mill known as No. 1, a stone structure of five stories, one hundred and thirty-eight feet long by fifty feet wide, and also a number of stone dwellings for the workmen. In 1847 the factory contained one hundred and fifty power looms, and six thousand spindles, and there were forty-six tenements on the property. In 1852 Mr. Crozer built mill No. 2, somewhat larger than No. 1, and containing one hundred and fifty looms and seven thousand spindles. In 1863 he erected mill No. 3, two hundred and twenty-two feet by fifty-two feet, four stories in height, and containing one hundred and fifty looms and six thousand spindles. These combined mills would work up ninety bales of cotton weekly, and their producing capacity was eighty-two cases of goods weekly. After the death of Mr. Crozer, in 1866, the mills were divided among his sons, Samuel A. Crozer taking No. 2, and Nos. 1 and 3 being operated by the three other brothers—J. Lewis, George K. and Robert H. Crozer—under the firm name of J. P. Crozer's Sons.

While Mr. Crozer was thus building up a gigantic industrial and mercantile establishment—a monument to his own sagacity, industry and enterprise, and a boon to his fellow men who derived their support from the employment he afforded them,—he was also extending his tireless energies into fields which were to prove as fruitful in moral and social ways as that was in material ways. And here he was to have as helpmeet a noble Christian woman animated by sentiments entirely in harmony with his own.

Mr. Crozer was married, March 12, 1825, to Miss Sallie L. Knowles, the daughter of James Knowles, who had been neighbor of his parents. She was a woman of such disposition as was his own mother, and was highly educated. Mr. and Mrs. Crozer made their home at West Branch until April 19, 1847, when they removed to the Flower estate, about two miles from Chester, which Mr. Crozer had purchased in 1845, and to which he gave the name of Upland. Here he erected a splendid mansion which became noted as a seat of culture, hospitality and benevolence. It witnessed, in all probability, in intercourse between husband and wife, the inception of each one of the many benevolent and charitable enterprises which its master instituted. Among the earlier of these was school establishment. Upland was without a school until 1849, and the children in the neighborhood were obliged to go considerable distances to the schools at Sneath's Corner, or Cartertown. In the winter season, the roads were frequently in such bad condition that children were unable to attend for days at a time. In the year named Mr. Crozer erected a school building entirely at his own expense, and this was used by the directors for a period of nine years, and until larger buildings were provided at public expense.

Mr. Crozer was founder of church as well as school at Upland. As has been stated, he was a Baptist in religion, and he provided for religious services in a building adjoining his factory. In 1851 he began the erection of a church edifice, and this was completed November 17, 1852, when it was publicly recognized as a Baptist house of worship, several prominent clergymen of that denomination taking part in the ceremonies. In 1860 an addition was built, and in 1873 a further enlargement was made at a cost of fourteen thousand dollars. In 1855 Mr. Crozer built a substantial brick parsonage. From its beginning the church performed a highly useful work, and from it has grown four other churches in the neighborhood as population has increased from time to time.

In 1857 Mr. Crozer, ever interested in education, entered upon the work of establishing a normal school, and to this end he expended forty-five thousand dollars, in the erection of what is the main building of the present Crozer Theological Seminary. In the following year it was opened as a high-grade academy, and was continued as such until the breaking out of the Civil war, which closed so many institutions of learning. But during that tremendous conflict, the academy building, as it was then known, served a most useful purpose. Intensely patriotic and tenderly humane, Mr. Crozer was among the first to urge the organization of that beneficent organization known as the Christian Commission, and he, with Mr. George H. Stuart, represented the city of Philadelphia in the meeting in New York city, on November 14, 1861, when that body had its origin. The summer of 1862 found the land deluged in blood, every train and vessel from the southern states bringing northward its burden of wounded soldiers. In this extremity Mr. Crozer tendered to the government the use of the academy building free of expense, conditioning only that the property should come back to him in as good order as when it left his control. The offer was accepted, necessary interior changes were made, and on June 18, 1862, the building was opened as a hospital. On the same day the ladies of Upland and neighborhood formed the Soldiers'

Relief Association, of which Mrs. Samuel A. Crozer was the first directress, Mrs. J. Lewis Crozer assistant secretary and Mrs. John Crozer treasurer; the lady last named was the wife of Mr. Crozer, and the two others were his daughters-in-law. The other officers were Mrs. Abby Kerlin, assistant directress, and Mrs. Samuel Arthur, secretary. For some time the hospital patients were supplied entirely by this association with those delicacies which were so well suited to their condition. The hospital contained a thousand beds, and also afforded accommodations for about three hundred nurses, attendants and guards. The patients were almost exclusively Union soldiers until after the battle of Gettysburg, in July, 1863, when the great number of wounded and sick left by General Lee made it necessary for particular provision for the Confederates, and the Chester Hospital was designated for that purpose. During the war more than six thousand patients were provided for. When peace was restored in 1865, the building was repossessed by Mr. Crozer, who leased it to Colonel Theodore Hyatt.

Mr. Crozer closed his remarkably useful and eventful life on March 11, 1866, and his death was deplored as a personal bereavement by the entire community, while throughout the state the press and associational bodies gave expression to the common grief at the passing away of one who was loved and revered as a model Christian gentleman and public benefactor. Shortly afterward his widow and children, as a memorial to the husband and father, set apart the academy land and building for a particular educational purpose, to be known as the Crozer Theological Seminary, placing it under Baptist control, and the formal dedication took place October 2, 1868. The Theological department of the Lewisburg University was removed here and added to it. Mrs. Crozer died August 3, 1882, aged eighty-two years, leaving a beautiful memory for her loveliness of character and her countless benefactions. In the year of her decease, her children devoted fifty thousand dollars to the endowment of a professorship as a memorial to her. The family name is further associated with the Seminary in the beautiful building known as Pearl Hall, founded by Mr. William Bucknell in memory of his deceased wife, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Crozer; her name was Margaret, of which Pearl is the Latin equivalent. At a later day Mr. Bucknell gave a sum of ten thousand dollars for the purchase of books for the Pearl Hall Library, conditioned upon the library being perpetually free to the young men of Delaware county.

To Mr. and Mrs. John P. Crozer were born nine children: Samuel A.; Margaret, who became the wife of Mr. William Bucknell, and who died in March, 1870; Elizabeth; J. Lewis; Sallie K., who died in August, 1852; James, who died October 25, 1838; George K.; Robert H.; and Emma Crozer.

SAMUEL ALDRICH CROZER, eldest son of John Price and Sallie L. (Knowles) Crozer, was born at West Branch, Aston township, Delaware county, December 25, 1825. There, the year before, his father had purchased the old Mattson paper mill, then dilapidated, which he had changed into a cotton mill, giving to the locality the name "West Branch," from its situation on the west branch of Chester creek, and there he laid the foundation of the enormous fortune he subsequently acquired. The son received his primary education in the country school in the neighborhood, but in his home life he was peculiarly fortunate, for his mother was a cultured, refined, gentle woman, the influence of whose teachings and example exerted an influence that has continued throughout all his well-rounded useful career as a business man and exemplary citizen. His father, although denied the advantages of a liberal education in youth, devoted much of his spare time in manhood to reading and study of carefully selected instructive books. The diary which John P. Crozer kept during a large part of his life indicates the thoroughness with which he pursued these volumes, which gave to him precision in expression, and a forceful, easy style in writing. Hence the atmosphere of Samuel A. Crozer's early life was conducive to the upbuilding and development of a well-rounded, strong character in the lad who was reared amid such environments.

When of an age to leave home, he was placed at a boarding school at Wilmington, Delaware, and later was sent to a similar institution in Philadelphia. In February, 1843, when Samuel A. Crozer was but a few weeks over seventeen, his father was thrown from a sleigh, resulting in a fracture of the thigh. In the emergency occasioned by that accident, the lad was summoned home and given charge of the financial and office department of the manufacturing business conducted by his father, which by that time had grown to enormous proportions. With such ability had the son discharged the duties so unexpectedly cast upon him that his father, after his recovery from his injuries, continued Samuel in absolute control of that branch of the business.

In August of that year occurred the great flood that will ever be remembered in this section. The elder Crozer dispatched his son to the West Branch mill to direct the operations there designed to save that establishment from total destruction, and, while that was only partially accomplished, Samuel continued at his post, even when more than half the factory had been undermined by water and had fallen into the angry flood.

In 1845 John P. Crozer purchased the noted Chester mills, near Upland, and began the erection there of a cotton factory, afterwards known as mill No. 1. When the building was completed, to his son Samuel was intrusted the entire supervision of placing the machinery, and in 1846, when the mill at Upland was started, Samuel had control and direction of this factory. Throughout the diary of John P. Crozer constant mention is made of his son, upon whose advice and assistance he frequently found he was unconsciously leaning. On January 1, 1847, when Samuel A. Crozer had attained his majority, his father admitted him into partnership in the business, and the firm remained John P. Crozer & Son until March 11, 1866, when, by the death of John P. Crozer, the partnership terminated.

On June 14, 1854, Samuel A. Crozer married Miss Abigail Cheney, at Lowell, Massachusetts. Mrs. Crozer was a native of Manchester, New Hampshire, descended from the sturdy Mayflower stock of the Bay state. Not only was she widely known for her proficiency in music, but she was an accomplished linguist. A number of her translations from German authors have been printed, among which may be mentioned Paul Heyse's "La Rabbia" in her minor works, while in 1881 she published a translation of Otto Roquette's novel "Conrad Hogen's Mistakes," which was widely read. The profits from the sale of this book, which amounted to a considerable sum, was donated by Mrs. Crozer to the "Home for Destitute Children." For many years Mrs. Crozer conducted a singing school at Upland, which, while open to all the people of the village, was for a long period a feature of the local life of the borough. Mrs. Crozer, during the war of the rebellion, was president of the Soldiers' Relief Association of Delaware county, and that organization of good women not only ministered to the needs of the wounded Union troops, but contributed to the relief of the Confederate soldiers, in numbers amounting into the thousands, who were brought to the Crozer Military Hospital, now the Crozer Theological Seminary, at Upland, during that sanguinary struggle. Mrs. Crozer died, July 21, 1890.

After the death of John P. Crozer, the three factories at Upland were divided among his sons. Samuel A. Crozer at that time began business on his own account, which he conducted until 1881, when his son, John Price Crozer, was admitted into the firm, which became Samuel

A. Crozer & Son, and still continues under that title. While Mr. Crozer is identified with the history of Delaware county as a successful cotton manufacturer, he has large interests elsewhere, for instance, the Crozer Steel and Iron Company, of Roanoke, Virginia, the Upland Coal Company, of Elkhorn, West Virginia, in all of which enterprises Samuel A. Crozer owns controlling interests. His real estate holdings are large and exceedingly valuable, and are scattered in many states, noticeably in Roanoke City, Virginia; in the business heart of Chicago; the Crozer building, on Chestnut street, Philadelphia; and in Delaware county, particularly in the borough of Upland and the city of Chester.

In the philanthropic and religious field of activity, Mr. Crozer has been exceedingly prominent. In 1863 he became the president of the National Baptist Convention for Missionary Purposes, for more than forty years he has been one of the managers of the Training School for Feeble Minded Children, at Elwyn, and for some years he has been president of the board, a position that his father held at the time of his death. He is president of the Baptist Publication Society, located in Philadelphia, and for more than forty years he has been one of the managers of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum in Philadelphia. Since the Crozer family endowed the Crozer Theological Seminary in 1868 as a school for training clergymen for the Baptist ministry, Mr. Crozer has been the president of the board of trustees. He is a manager in a number of various Baptist missionary and other organizations.

At his personal cost, Mr. Crozer erected the South Chester Baptist church, the Leipersville Baptist church, and recently built the New Emanuel Baptist church at Fifteenth and Potter streets, Chester, as a memorial to his wife. He has been a liberal contributor to the Chester Hospital, the Chester Free Library and Pennsylvania Hospital, and similar organizations, and gave Crozer Park, a tract of thirty-five acres, to the city of Chester.

While Mr. Crozer does not claim to be a public speaker, on several occasions he has delivered addresses that are valuable contributions to the local history of Delaware county, particularly his address before the Delaware County Historical Society, at Upland, June 22, 1899 (fully reported in the proceedings of the organization) on "The Early Manufactures and Manufacturers of Delaware County," and his historical address at the semi-centennial of Upland Baptist church. Mr. Crozer is also an extensive traveler, having visited almost every section of the globe, with the exception of China, Japan, and India, and in so doing has crossed the Atlantic nearly eighty times.

To the marriage of Samuel A. and Abigail

Crozer were born six children, John P. Crozer; Samuel A. Crozer, Jr., who died at Seine Port, France; Edward Crozer; Sallie K. Crozer, who married the late William H. Robinson; Margaret Crozer, who married Caleb Fox; and Mary Crozer, who married Lewis R. Page.

J. LEWIS CROZER was born at West Branch, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He was the son of John P. and Sallie L. (Knowles) Crozer.

He grew up in West Branch, attended school in Philadelphia, and when he was about twenty years of age his parents moved to Upland, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and engaged in the manufacturing business, and young Crozer learned the business with his father and continued in that business practically all his life. A few years before his death he withdrew from the business.

He was treasurer of the Crozer Seminary, and gave much to the institution and was much interested in its success. He suggested that it should be a seminary, and interested the Crozer family in it. Mr. Lewis Crozer left in his will that a hospital should be built for incurables, and five hundred thousand dollars was left by him for that purpose; also two hundred and fifty-thousand dollars for a library in Chester, Pennsylvania. He was much interested in the Baptist church, and contributed much to its support. He was a Republican, and was a public-spirited man, though very retiring in his habits.

In 1857 he married Mary A. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia, a daughter of Richard G. and Mary A. Turrey Stotesbury, both of that city. The first Stotesbury came from England about 1621. No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Crozer. Mr. Crozer died April 7, 1897.

EDWARD CROZER, son of Samuel A. and Abigail (Cheney) Crozer, obtained a good and thorough classical education at Haverford College, and after his graduation from this institution was engaged in business with his father for a short time. Since then he has devoted his attention to the breeding and raising of thoroughbred fox hounds and hunting horses. He is an acknowledged judge of these animals, especially hunters and jumpers, and his services as judge are often called into requisition at the various first-class fashionable horse shows throughout the country. In 1900 he was largely instrumental in the organization of the Upland Hunt Club, and was appointed master of the hounds. He is also a member of the Radnor Hunt Club, the Philadelphia Country Club, the Philadelphia Gun Club and many others equally prominent. Some years ago he purchased the old West property, and since that time has devoted considerable attention to its improvement, making it one of the most handsome country seats in the beautiful residential region in the neighborhood of Philadelphia.

In 1902 Mr. Crozer married Florence Robinson, the daughter of the late Mrs. John M. Robinson, of Baltimore, Maryland.

PUSEY HOUSE, UPLAND.

THE PUSEY HOUSE, on the Crozer property, at Upland, is the most ancient building in the state of Pennsylvania. It was built by Caleb Pusey, on the north side of the mill-race, to the west of the road leading to the bridge spanning Chester creek, facing south. It is about thirty feet in length, fifteen in breadth, and one story in height, crowned with a hipped roof, giving it the appearance of a story and a half building. The walls are unusually thick, and are of stone and brick. It is evident that the brick portion of the wall was set in to replace stones which had fallen out of place. The floor is of broad solid oak, and the heavy beams supporting the floor above bear the marks of the broad-axe with which they were hewn. The house has two doors and two windows in the front, and a dormer window in the roof.

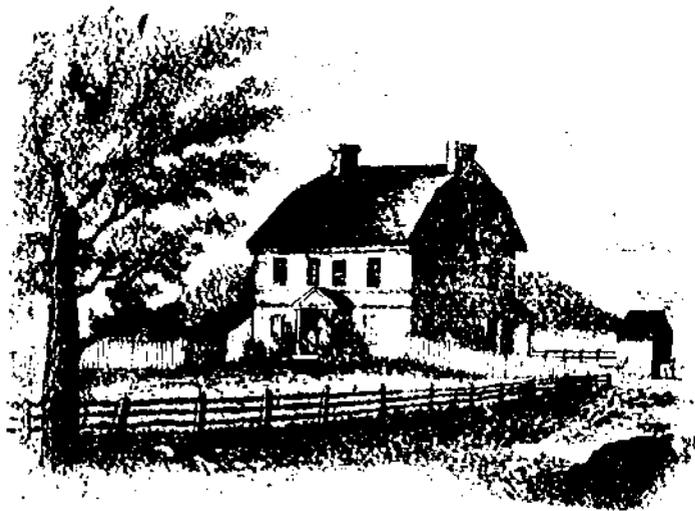

WEST FAMILY. The West family, of Pennsylvania, which has contributed notable names to the history of the commonwealth and whose members are now dispersed throughout the United States, had for its founder John West, a native of England, born in 1690. He was a son of Thomas and ^{Anna} (Gilpin) West, and was of the family of Lord Delaware.

Many valuable relics are carefully preserved by members of the family now living, among them being an ancient clock brought from England by an early ancestor; the West family seal; an engraving of Benjamin West and his family; John West, the emigrant, being one of the group; and a gold medallion portrait of Benjamin West, presented by the painter himself to his nephew, Samuel West, with the injunction that it be transmitted to sons only, in order to be always associated with the family name. It is also to be said that the old family homestead at Shepherd's Plain, built in 1696, is yet standing and is in a good state of preservation.

John West (1), named above, emigrated to America in 1715, and settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He married, about 1720, Sarah, born 2 mo., 8, 1697, a daughter of Thomas and Margery Pearson. Thomas Pearson was the confidential friend of William Penn, with whom he came in the "Welcome," and it is said it was at his suggestion that the name of Upland was changed to Chester.

To John and Sarah (Pearson) West were born four children: William, Samuel, Mary and Benjamin. John West returned to England in 1765, and he died at Marlborough, Oxfordshire, in 1776. The romantic story of his journeying to his native land as an escort to Elizabeth Shewell, who was to become the wife of his son, Benjamin, has been repeatedly told, but by none so interestingly as by Mr. H. W. O. Margery, in the following narrative:

HOUSE IN WHICH BENJAMIN WEST WAS BORN.

Drawn by John Sartain in 1837.

Benjamin West was born in Chester, Pennsylvania, in 1738. His grandfather had been an intimate friend of the celebrated John Hampton, but subsequently became a Friend and threw his lot with the early settlers of Pennsylvania. All his ancestors between his grandfather and little Benjamin were sturdy, consistent Quakers.

How the gift of drawing came to him our knowledge of the laws of heredity leaves unexplained, but rare ability showed itself at a very early age, one of the attempts being the sketch of an infant niece, whom, as a boy, he had been set to watch in its cradle. The child smiled in its sleep, and the uncle, then but seven years of age, seized by an impulse to produce the charming picture, succeeded with pen and ink in making a likeness that astonished the family and determined his future. As the boy's genius became more and more evident, it was the desire of his father and mother to fit him worthily for an artist's profession, but this involved the question whether that would be consistent with the principles of the Society of Friends, and, before deciding, the counsel of weighty Friends was requested. It is related that John Williamson, a respected minister, gave his judgment as follows: He referred to the blameless reputation of the parents, and how their children had been brought up religiously by them. In this, their youngest son, was a manifest inspiration for art, and though by the Society its utility might be questioned, it was so evidently in this case a divine gift as to render it sure there must have been some wise purpose in its bestowal, "so let us not (he said) in our ignorance attempt to cross divine counsels, but see in this evident propensity of the young man a pointing of the divine finger toward some high and beneficent end." And the Friends besought the Lord "to verify in his life the value of the gift which, despite of their prepossessions, they had acknowledged." Thus his future was settled, and the young artist rose step by step, until he became the successor of Sir Joshua Reynolds as president of the British Royal Academy, and intimate friend of the King of England. The King maintained that Benjamin West's adhesion to the principles of the Quakers was a recommendation in his favor. The King once remarked in his presence, as a reproof to a bishop who spoke slightly of the Friends, "The Quakers are a body of Christians for whom I have a high respect. I love their peaceful tenets and their benevolence one to another, and but for the obligations of birth I would be a Quaker."

Benjamin West's romantic marriage is an interesting episode in his eventful life. It can best be given by copying a letter to the secretary of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

"Elizabeth Shewell became acquainted with Benjamin West, afterward the celebrated artist, and they fell in love with each other. West, at that time, although descended from a good family, was poor and little known. Stephen Shewell wished his sister to marry another suitor, which she refused to do, in consequence of her attachment to West. The brother objected to West on account of his poverty and obscurity, and he was forbidden to come to the house. Elizabeth Shewell, however, continued to see him elsewhere, and they became engaged to be married. West then determined to go to Europe and prosecute his studies and profession there, and Elizabeth Shewell promised him that when he notified her of his ability to maintain her, and of his wish for her to come to him, she would proceed to join him in any part of Europe and marry him. Her brother was informed of her meetings with West and of their engagement. So to prevent any further intercourse between them, he confined her to her chamber and kept her under lock and key until after West's departure for Europe.

He pursued his studies and profession for some time in various places on the continent, and finally settled at London, where he soon met with sufficient patronage to justify him in calling on Elizabeth Shewell to fulfill her promise. He then made arrangements for her to come in the same vessel that conveyed his request to her, and also, that his father should accompany her on the voyage. Upon the receipt of his message, Elizabeth Shewell prepared for her departure, but her brother was apprised of her intention and again confined her to her chamber.

"Her engagement to West was well known in Philadelphia, and her brother's tyrannical treatment of her excited great indignation against him and strong sympathy for his sister. In this state of things the late Bishop White, who was my guest on his last patriarchal visit to Easton, told us that he (then about eighteen years of age) and Dr. Franklin (about fifty-nine years of age) and Francis Hopkins (twenty-nine years of age), when the vessel was ready to sail, procured a rope ladder, went to the captain, engaged him to set sail as soon as they brought a lady on board, took John West to the ship, and went at midnight to Stephen Shewell's house, attached the rope ladder to a window in Elizabeth Shewell's chamber, and got her safely out and to the vessel, which sailed a few minutes after she entered it. I observed to the Bishop that few persons who knew him now would believe that he had once been knight-errant, and liberated an imprisoned damsel. He replied that her case was a hard one, and all her friends were indignant at the treatment she had received, that he had done right, and, he added with warmth, if it were needed, he would do it again, for it was evident that God intended that they should come together, and man had no right to keep them asunder. They were married 9 mo., 2, 1765, and for fifty years their lives were joined in kind and tender companionship, neither of them ever returning to this country."

There is one more scene, the closing one, of interest to us. The Quaker artist was borne to his final resting place in St. Paul's Cathedral. Born in circumstances of extremest privacy and insignificance, he is honored with a public funeral, accompanied with all the pomp and circumstance the greatest country in the world could supply. The pall is equally borne by English nobles, foreign ambassadors and Royal Academicians. His sons and grandsons are among the great mourners. More than sixty carriages, containing the great and noble of this world, closed the splendid procession, and the mortal remains of Benjamin West lie by those of Wren, Opie, Barry and Reynolds, in St. Paul's. There are many direct descendants of the great painter still living, though none of them bear the name of West.

William West (2), eldest son of John and Sarah (Pearson) West, was born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1724, and died 12 mo., 6, 1808, in his eighty-fourth year. He learned the trade of oak cooper in Philadelphia, and continued this business until his fortieth year (in 1765), when he purchased a tract of land of more than one hundred acres in Upper Darby township, Delaware county. Farming was an entirely new occupation to him, but he proved successful and even noted as an agriculturist, many of his methods being original with himself. The Board of Agriculture of England, having learned of his superior farm management, elected him to an honorary membership. He was an exemplary member of the Society of Friends, a good and helpful neighbor, of a cheerful disposition, and he displayed considerable ability in writing verse. Without solicitation upon his part, he was elected to the state legislature, and by repeated re-elections his service in that body was extended to the period of five years. These and other facts in his life are narrated in a printed copy of a "Eulogium of William West," by James Mease, M. D., February 13, 1810.

William West was married in 1767 to Hannah Shaw, his second wife, a daughter of John and Hannah (Passmore) Shaw. Her father died on the voyage to America with his wife and their three daughters, Hannah, Ann and Mary, and his body was committed to the sea. The children of William and Hannah West were Passmore, Samuel, Hannah and Sally.

Samuel West (3), second child and son of William (2), was born in Upper Darby, 2 mo., 13, 1771, and died on the eighty-second anniversary of his birth, 2 mo., 13, 1853. Presumably he learned the miller's trade. About 1796 or earlier, his father purchased for him a farm of about three hundred acres in Chester township, naming it Shepherd's Plain, and upon this the son became a successful farmer and shepherd for the remainder of his life. He was an active member of the Society of Friends, and an elder in the local meeting. He was a man of exemplary character, an excellent neighbor and friend, and dispensed a liberal hospitality. He was married, 5 mo., 20, 1792, in London Grove Meeting house, to Mary Pusey, a daughter of Joshua and Mary (Miller) Pusey; she died 11 mo., 6, 1832. The children of this marriage were Mary, Hannah, William, Anne, Sarah Ann and Joshua.

Hannah, second child of Samuel (3) and Mary (Pusey) West, was born in Chester township, Chester county, October 31, 1796. She was married, October 6, 1819, to Dr. Robert Mendenhall Huston, who was born in Abingdon, Virginia, May 19, 1795, a son of William and Elizabeth (Mendenhall) Huston. When he was ten years of age his parents removed to Pennsylvania and settled in Chester county, where he attended the neighborhood schools. At an early age he obtained a position at a druggist's in Philadelphia, and here began reading medicine; he subsequently completed his professional studies in a medical college, and graduated with his degree of Doctor of Medicine. In 1812 he was drafted for military service, and was appointed assistant surgeon in the army, although he was but seventeen years of age. After the close of the war he located in Philadelphia, where he entered upon a successful career in the practice of his profession and also as a teacher of medicine. He became Professor of Materia Medica in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and was for some time dean, in both positions aiding greatly in the development of the institution. He was also prominent in public affairs, and served as a member of the city council and in other useful positions. He was a man of the noblest personal character, and was held in universal esteem. He continued in the practice of his profession until his death, August 3, 1864, making his life a benediction upon all who came under his professional care or within the influence of his genial personality. His widow survived him many years, dying in Philadelphia, November 18, 1893, at the remarkable age of ninety-seven years and some days. Dr. and Mrs. Huston were the parents of seven children: 1. Samuel (deceased), who married Sarah Perot, and to whom were born nine children, Robert, William P., Mary P., Charles, Samuel W., Letitia P., Alfred, James and Hannah W. 2. Charles (deceased), who was a manufacturer of steel at Coatsville; he married Isabella P. Lukens, and their seven children were: C. Anna, Clara, Abraham Francis, Alice R., Charles L., Mary W. and Samuel Edward, the last named of whom died in childhood. 3. Elizabeth, who died May 23, 1887. 4. Mary. 5. Hannah. 6. William, who married Almira Rogers, and whose nine children were Annie, Hannah, William, Frank, Clinton, Almira, Albert (died in childhood), Mabel and Charles. 7. Henry, who married Mary Henry, and whose children are Henry W. and Samuel Spencer.

William West (4), third child and eldest son of Samuel (3) and Mary (Pusey) West, was born at Shepherd's Plain, 9 mo., 12, 1798. He inherited from his father the occupation of a farmer. This was uncongenial, however, and his fondness for tools and skill in their use led him to give the greater portion of his time to the making of useful articles, although he had not learned any mechanical trade. He was educated in the Friends boarding school in Birmingham, Delaware county, and in Burlington, New Jersey. He was a birthright member of the Society of Friends, as were his ancestors. His life was quiet and uneventful. He died 2 mo., 1885, in his eighty-seventh year, in the house in which he was born, and which was his home throughout his long life. He was married, 1 mo., 1836, to his second wife, Martha Dutton, born 3 mo., 7, 1811, in Upper Chichester. She was the eldest daughter of Jonathan and Rachel Dutton, and a descendant of that John Dutton who came from Cheshire, England, and purchased five hundred acres of land in Aston township, in 1682.

The children of William (4) and Martha (Dutton) West, all of whom were born at Shepherd's Plain, are: 1. Samuel, born in 1836, died in 1883, unmarried. 2. Jonathan Dutton, born in 1838, died in infancy. 3. William Pusey, born in 1840. 4. Elias H., born in 1842. 5. Rachel P., born in 1842. 6. Kate D., born in 1842.

William Pusey West (5) was married in Philadelphia in 1866 to Margaret Pidgeon, and to them were born Louise C., wife of Joseph Swoyer; Helen Brinton, unmarried, and William Benjamin, married to Gertrude Bremer.

Elias H. West (5) was married in 1878 to Sarah J. Maddock. One child was born of this marriage, Edith Maddock West, at this date (1903) a student in Swarthmore College. Mrs. West is a lineal descendant of Henry Maddock (1), who came to America from Lune (or Loom) Hall, Cheshire county, England, in 1681. He was a Friend in religion, a man of ability, and served in the general assembly from 1684 to 1686. He and his brother-in-law, James Kennedy, purchased fifteen hundred acres of land in Springfield township. Kennedy soon died, leaving his share to Henry's son, Mordecai, who also received by deed the share of his father, who returned to England.

Mordecai Maddock (2) came to America in 1701, bringing letters from the Nottingham monthly meeting for himself and wife, who died soon after their arrival. He was active in the establishment of a meeting in Chester, and was a speaker therein. Jane Maddock, who married George Maris, was either his sister or daughter. He married in the old Concord (Delaware county) meeting house, November 8, 1733, Dorothy Roman, of Chichester. His son John (3) bought three hundred acres of land in Chichester township, and this he afterward transferred to his brother James; this was the tract upon which stood the house where Benjamin West was born. James (3) and his wife Susannah were the parents of Henry, William, Rebecca, Isaac and Jacob. William (4) was commissioned captain of a company in the Third Battalion, under Colonel Caleb Davis, May 12, 1777; he died in 1800. He married Isabella Cahoon, January 5, 1762, and their children were Thomas, Jesse, James and William. James (5), with one McIlvaine, operated a saw-mill on the creek at Leipersville. In 1817 he bought the farm on which Crum Lynne Station is now located, and part of which is still in the possession of a great-grandson. He died in 1848, in Chester, and is buried in the southwest corner of the old Episcopal burying ground there. He married, April 17, 1802, Rebecca Morton, who died, leaving a daughter Sarah. He afterwards married Mary, sister of his first wife, and their children were Mordecai, James, Mary, Israel, and William. Israel (6), who is written of in the sketch of Israel Morton Maddock, in this work, married Margaret McCoy, a daughter of Robert (2) and Mary (Deleplaine) McCoy. She was born at Cartersville, Chester township, July 16, 1817. Her grandfather, Robert McCoy, whose wife was Rachel Collett, was a private in Captain David Cowpland's company of Chester county militia in the Revolutionary war. He was afterwards a lieutenant in the Pennsylvania militia, May 1, 1789. He was a deacon in the Brandywine Baptist church, Concord township, from 1810 to 1823. He was buried near the church when it was enlarged, and the graves of himself and wife were covered by it. William, great-grandfather of Margaret (McCoy) Maddock, was a son of Robert, who died in New Castle, Delaware, prior to 1794. On the maternal side she descended from Nicholas De La Plaine, a Huguenot who came from France to New York in 1657. He married a daughter of Pierre Cresson, and they became the parents of nine children. A portrait of the father of Nicholas De La Plaine was owned by Mrs. W. H. Fisher, of New York city, as late as 1882. According to Alden's

"American Epitaphs," he died in France at the age of one hundred and five years.

Rachel P. West (5) was married at Shepherd's Plain, in 1867, to James Farquharson Leys born near Glasgow, Scotland, 12 mo., 25, 1835, a son of William and Hannah (Wilson) Leys. He was engaged in mercantile business in Philadelphia. He died 10 mo., 1867, a little less than a year after his marriage.

James Farquharson Leys, son of James Farquharson and Rachel P. (West) Leys, and in the maternal line sixth in descent from John West (1), was born 12 mo., 26, 1867. He was educated in the Friends' schools in Philadelphia, graduating from the Central school in 1884. In 1890 he received his medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania. He further pursued his professional studies in Gottingen and Vienna in 1890-91. He afterward served as interne in the Philadelphia hospital, and in the state hospital at Hazleton, Pennsylvania. In 1893 he was commissioned assistant surgeon in the United States navy. He served throughout the Spanish war as a medical officer on the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius. In due course he was promoted to full surgeon and at this date (1903) is on duty in Guam, Ladrone islands. He was married in New York city in 1897 to Gwendolayne Mary Wigley, of Spencer House, Basseterre, St. Kitts, British West Indies. Of this marriage were born two children: Katharine Mary, born in Jacksonville, Florida, 1898, and James Farquharson Leys, born in Newport, Rhode Island, in 1901.

THE STACKHOUSE FAMILY. The ancestry of the Stackhouse family is traced back in England to the year 1086, and in America to the year 1682, when Thomas Stackhouse, an uncle of Thomas Stackhouse, the pioneer ancestor of the branch of the family to which belongs Amos Stackhouse, a prominent resident of Stackhouse, North Carolina, came to this country and was a fellow passenger with William Penn aboard the ship Welcome. Thomas Stackhouse (uncle) was born at Stackhouse, a village near Settle, Yorkshire, England, about the year 1635; he and his wife, Margery (Heahurst) Stackhouse, who accompanied him from England, arrived at New Castle, Delaware, 10 mo., 27, 1682, and settled on a tract of land on the Neshaminy creek, in the section now known as Langhorne, Middletown township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania. His wife died 11 mo., 15, 1682, a short time after her arrival at their new home, and was one of the first burials at Middletown. Thomas Stackhouse married for his second wife Margaret Atkinson, widow of Christopher Atkinson, at Middletown meeting, 1 mo., 1702, and settled at Bensalem township, where he died in 1706 in his seventy-first year. His will was proved 9 mo., 2, 1706, and as he mentioned no child or children, it is presumed he left none surviving. He was a grandson of Benjamin Stackhouse, who wrote the Stackhouse Bible in 1617.

Amos Stockhouse^{sr}

Thomas Stackhouse, Jr., according to supposition, was twenty-one years of age when he arrived in this country, presumably in the year 1682. He represented Bucks county in the colonial assembly of the province in the years 1711, 1713 and 1715, and was re-elected the following year but refused to serve. Mr. Stackhouse married, 7 mo., 27, 1688, at Middletown Meeting, Grace Heaton, born 1 mo., 14, 1667, daughter of Robert and Alice Heaton. Their children were Samuel, John, Robert, Henry, Grace, Alice, Thomas, Joseph and Benjamin; the mother of these children died 8 mo., 8, 1708, and her remains were interred at Middletown. Mr. Stackhouse then married, 1 mo., 1, 1711, at Falls Meeting, Ann, widow of Edward Mayos. Their children were Isaac, Jacob, Ann, Sarah and Isaac. The mother of these children died 5 mo., 6, 1724. Mr. Stackhouse then married, 8 mo., 1725, at Wrightstown Meeting, Dorothy, widow of Zebulon Heston, who survived him. There was no issue of this marriage. Thomas Stackhouse died 4 mo., 26, 1744, and was buried at Middletown.

Robert Stackhouse, third son of Thomas and Grace (Heaton) Stackhouse, was born 9 mo., 8, 1692, married Margaret Stone, and the issue of this union were the following named children: Thomas, Joseph, James, Grace, Benjamin, Alice, William and Robert, the last named being killed by a fall from his horse in the year 1788, he being then forty-eight years of age. Robert Stackhouse, father of the above named children, removed his family to Berwick, on the Susquehanna river, Pennsylvania, where he resided up to the time of his death in 1788, at the advanced age of ninety-six years.

James Stackhouse, third son of Robert and Margaret (Stone) Stackhouse, was born 11 mo., 11, 1725 or 1726, married, 10 mo., 13, 1750, Martha Hastings, born 4 mo., 27, 1722, daughter of Samuel and Mary Hastings. Their children were Margaret, Hastings, Mary, Amos, Amos, Martha, James and William. James Stackhouse, father of these children, died 5 mo., 16, 1759, and his remains were interred at Arch Street cemetery; his wife, Martha (Hastings) Stackhouse, died 6 mo., 24, 1806. The Hastings family trace their ancestry back to the year 843, when "Hastings the First," a sea king or pirate Norman chieftain, invaded France and after plundering the provinces of the Louvre, returned to Denmark or Norway. The following year he entered the Seine, approached as far as Paris, and returned to his own country laden with the spoils. In the year 893 he appeared off the county of Kent, England, and entered the Thames, but was defeated by Alfred the Great, who made prisoners of his wife and two sons and only restored them to him upon condition that he depart the kingdom. It is claimed by the author of "Pictures of Hastings" that the town of Hastings, near the sea coast, where the battle of Hastings occurred, was named in honor of this Danish pirate. In the year 1200, Henry, Lord Hastings, married Adama, daughter of David, Earl of Huntington, and brother of William, King of Scotland, who, dying without issue, John Hastings, son of Henry Hastings, became a competitor for that crown with John Battoir and Robert Bruce. In the early records of Chester county, Pennsylvania, the name of Henry Hastings as a juror is found as early as September 13, 1681, and as the ship, John and Sarah from London, and Factor from Bristol, did not arrive until the twelfth of the fourth month following, it is supposed that the Hastings family, who owned a large tract of land on the Delaware river between Chester and Marcus Hook, were a part of the New Haven colony that settled on the Delaware about the year 1640. Joshua Hastings, supposed to be a son of Henry Hastings, resided in the neighborhood of Chester, represented the county in the colonial assembly, and removed to Philadelphia about the year 1700. Two sons survived him, John and Samuel; John married Grace Stackhouse, daughter of Robert Stackhouse, and their son Samuel Hastings married Mary Hill, who bore him a daughter, Martha, who became the wife of James Stackhouse.

a x

Amos Stackhouse, third son of James and Martha (Hastings) Stackhouse, was born 5 mo., 4, 1757, married, 1 mo., 14, 1779, Mary Powell, born 7 mo., 9, 1763, daughter of John and Susanna Powell. Their children were Susanna, Hastings, Martha, Powell, Esther, Martha, James, Samuel, Amos, Robert, Robert, Mary, and John. Amos Stackhouse, father of these children, died 4 mo., 5, 1825, and his wife, Mary (Powell) Stackhouse, died 7 mo., 15, 1841. The earliest ancestor of the Powell family of whom there is any authentic record was William Powell, who signed with John Woolston and two hundred and ten other Friends the Yearly Meetings' epistle of the 7 mo., 1692, against George Keith. Robert Powell, presumably a brother of William Powell, came in the ship Kent, 6 mo., 16, 1677 O. S., and settled near Burlington, West Jersey. Among the children born to Robert and his wife Prudence Powell was a son, John Powell, who married Elizabeth Woolston. They were the parents of six children, the youngest of whom was Isaac Powell, who married Elizabeth Purdey, and their eldest son, John Powell, by his marriage to Susanna Bryan, became the father of four children, the eldest of whom was Mary, who became the wife of Amos Stackhouse.

Powell Stackhouse, second son of Amos and Mary (Powell) Stackhouse, was born 3 mo., 21, 1785, at Mt. Holly, New Jersey, married 1 mo., 31, 1809, Edith Dilworth, daughter of Charles and Mary Dilworth. Their children were Charles D., Emlen, Joseph D., Sarah D., Amos, Susanna, Anna, Powell, Powell, Dilworth and Llewellyn. Powell Stackhouse, father of these children, died 12 mo., 27, 1863; his wife, Edith (Dilworth) Stackhouse, who was born 1 mo., 16, 1787, died 11 mo., 1, 1865. James Dilworth, the pioneer ancestor of the Dilworth family, was a minister, and accompanied by his wife, Ann (Waln) Dilworth, their son William and a servant man by the name of Stephen Sands, came from Thornley in Lancashire, England, in the ship Lamle of Liverpool, Captain John Teach, and arrived in the Delaware river in the 8 mo., 1682. He settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and his death occurred 1 mo., 3, 1698. William Dilworth, son of James and Ann Dilworth, married Sarah Webb, daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Webb, and their eldest son, James Dilworth, married Lydia Martin, daughter of George and Lydia Martin. Among the children born of this union was a son, Charles Dilworth, who married, 1 mo., 27, 1765, at Trinity Episcopal church, Oxford township, Mary Taylor, daughter of John and Sarah Taylor. Eight children were the issue of this union, one of whom, Edith Dilworth, became the wife of Powell Stackhouse.

Charles D. Stackhouse, eldest son of Powell and Edith (Dilworth) Stackhouse, was born November 1, 1809, and chose for his wife Alice Meredith, the ceremony being performed November 27, 1834, and five children were the issue of this union—Joseph M., born November 28, 1835, died January 18, 1901; Dilworth, born November 12, 1837, now residing on the old home place; Pennell, mentioned at length hereinafter; Kate M., born April 5, 1846, died April 16, 1882; Charles D., born May 6, 1850, died December 8, 1876.

Emlen Stackhouse, second son of Powell and Edith, married Catharine Meredith, and had the following children: Edith, Sarah, Martha, Alice, Meredith, Anna, Ellen, Susan, Emlen and Mary.

Joseph D. Stackhouse, third son of Powell and Edith, married Sarah Shaw, and had the following children: Powell, Rebecca and Alexander.

Sarah D. Stackhouse, daughter of Powell and Edith, married Franklin Townsend, son of David Townsend, of West Chester, Pennsylvania, and married her second husband, Abram Vandervoort, of Williamsburg, New York, and had one son, Abram.

Susan L. Stackhouse, second daughter of Powell and Edith, married Daniel J. Morrell, and had one daughter, Anna S.

Anna D. Stackhouse, third daughter of Powell and Edith, did not marry.

Powell Stackhouse, Jr., fifth son of Powell and Edith, married Emily Townsend, and had the following children: Myra, Julia W., Samuel T., Clara and Edith D.

Amos Stackhouse, fourth son of Powell and Edith (Dilworth) Stackhouse, was born March 31, 1819, in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was educated at the Friends' School, and for twelve years after the completion of his studies was in partnership with his brother in the stove and machine iron foundry, a business from which his father retired in 1840. In 1850 Amos Stackhouse removed to Richmond, Indiana, where he was successfully engaged in business pursuits for several years, later settled at Fort Recovery, Ohio, whence he removed to Jacksonville, Florida, remaining four years, and then finally settled at Stackhouse, Madison county, North Carolina, where he is at the present time (1903) conducting a lucrative lumber and milling business, the active management of which is in the hands of his two sons. He has served the village of Stackhouse in the capacity of school director and postmaster for the long period of thirty years. Throughout his long and useful life Mr. Stackhouse has been upright and honorable in all his transactions, active and zealous in advancing the welfare and material growth of the community in which he resides, and a firm adherent of the doctrines of the Society of Friends.

At Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, July 11, 1849, Amos Stackhouse married Rebecca Shaw, daughter of Alexander Shaw, and she bore him one son, Ellison, born October 19, 1845, at Philadelphia, and is now a well known druggist of that city; in 1874 he married Ella Walton, and they are the parents of Laura N., Ellison D., Mary S. and Rebecca S. Amos Stackhouse married for his second wife, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, July 25, 1849, Anna Williamson, daughter of Thomas Williamson, and the following named children were born to them: Elizabeth, born March 13, 1850, at Philadelphia; Rebecca, born July 27, 1854, at Fort Recovery, Ohio, became the wife of Henry Halderman; Anna Mary, born November 25, 1856, at Fort Recovery, Ohio; and Thomas W., born May 18, 1858, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Amos Stackhouse married for his third wife, at Jacksonville, Florida, February 2, 1871, Anna Myers, daughter of Henry Meyers. Their children are: 1. Amos, born at Warm Springs, North Carolina, February 2, 1873, educated at the College of Tennessee, married at Greenwich, Tennessee, May 6, 1894, Hester Honeycutt, daughter of James and Angelina (Gilbert) Honeycutt, and her birth occurred in North Carolina, June 19, 1877; they are the parents of two children, both of whom were born at Stackhouse, North Carolina; Amos, born November 13, 1896, and Ernest Matlack, born January 30, 1900. 2. Charles, born September 15, 1877, was educated at Asheville, North Carolina, and is unmarried. Both Amos and Charles are actively interested in the lumber and milling business established by their father at Stackhouse, North Carolina.

Pennell Stackhouse, third child of Charles D. and Alice (Meredith) Stackhouse, was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, December 17, 1839, his birthplace being on Market, below Tenth, street. He acquired his early education at the old Hancock school, which he attended until his eleventh year, when his parents removed to Delaware county, and his education was completed at the Big Edgemont school, at Howellsville, now known as Gradyville. At the age of eighteen years he went to the city of Philadelphia, where he was employed by Rowland & Ervien in their steam flour mills on Broad and Vine streets until August, 1862. On August 1st of that year, when the Union required the services of her faithful sons, Mr. Stackhouse enlisted as a private in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, Company D, under Captain Yarnall, recruited at Media, Pennsylvania, for nine months' service. During his military career he participated in the memorable battle of Antietam, September 17, 1862, also in the Chancellorsville engagement under General Kane, and served in the Army of the Potomac as a scout from General Kane's headquarters. On June 29, 1863, at Westchester, Pennsylvania, he re-enlisted as a veteran volunteer in Captain Benjamin Green's Company, and served on detached duty about three months as second sergeant. At the termination of hostilities he returned to his home and engaged in agricultural pursuits with his father in Edgemont, Delaware county, there remaining until his marriage. He removed from there to Concord, where he resumed his former employment, and during the intervening years between 1875 and 1892 successfully managed several farms. In the latter named year he purchased his present homestead from Emeline Dunn, it being formerly a portion of the old Thomas Pratt estate. The farm consists of seventy-nine acres of rich and productive soil, devoted to general farming products, and is situated in Middletown township, on the Edgemont road, in close proximity to the town of Lima. For a number of years he was the incumbent of the office of town clerk and supervisor of Edgemont township. He holds pleasant relations with his old army comrades by membership in Bradbury Post, No. 149, G. A. R. Although not a member of any church, his preference is with the Society of Friends, the religious faith of his forefathers, and his political affiliations are with the Republican party.

On March 18, 1875, Mr. Stackhouse married Emma Smedley, widow of Joseph Pennell Smedley, and daughter of John and Mary (Vander-slice) Winner. By her marriage to Joseph Pennell Smedley, who was a descendant of Samuel (5), William (4), William (3), George (2), George (1), who founded the family in Middletown township in 1682, one daughter was born, Hannah Smedley, whose birth occurred February 10, 1870; she attended Westtown Boarding School, and graduated from the Friends' Select School at Sixteenth and Race streets, Philadelphia. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stackhouse: Edward Penrose Howard, born January 18, 1876, died September 3, 1876; Alice Meredith, born August 12, 1877, educated at Darlington Seminary, West Chester, now at home with her parents; Emma Pennell, born July 16, 1880, educated at West Chester Normal School, now residing with her parents; and Charles Dilworth, born June 23, 1886, died September 11, 1886.

WILLIAM SHALER JOHNSON was born in Hoboken, New Jersey, November 23, 1836. He was the son of the Hon. Edwin Ferry Johnson, one of the earliest and most prominent railway engineers of the United States. His father was a descendant of the Woburn and Andover Johnsons of Massachusetts.

John Johnson, the first in this country, came from Hern Hill, near Canterbury, Kent county, England. He and his wife Susanna came over with Captain Edward Johnson, also of Hern Hill, in Governor Winthrop's fleet in 1630. He settled in Agawam, afterward Ipswich, in 1632, where his name appears in the list of first settlers and land proprietors. When Andover was settled he removed to that town, and there his wife died in 1683, and he probably soon after. (II) Timothy, son of John, was born in 1644, and died in 1688. In 1692 his widow was among the number of those accused of witchcraft, but acquitted. His house was raided by the Indians in 1698, and Penelope, a daughter of his brother Thomas Johnson, was killed by them at the age of nineteen. (III) Timothy, son of Timothy, was born in 1679, and died in 1771. He was a captain in the French and Indian war, nine years selectman of Andover, and three years a member of the general court of Massachusetts. His son Timothy was also an officer, and died before Louisburg in 1746. His third son Samuel was colonel of the Fourth Massachusetts Regiment during the Revolution, was present at the battle of Stillwater and the surrender of Burgoyne, was three years representative in the general court, and after the war assisted in the quelling of Shay's rebellion. Samuel, his son, was a captain in his father's regiment, and promoted to major. (IV) Asa, son of Timothy 2d, was born in 1716 and died in 1759. Of his six sons, James, Benjamin and William served in the army during the Revolution. James, with his cousins John and Joshua, were of the party of sixteen who captured a British schooner in the Mystic river in May, 1775. William was a captain. His son William (grandson of Asa) was a member of the Massachusetts legislature, both in house and senate. Benjamin served in Colonel Stickney's New Hampshire regiment, was at the battle of Bennington, and was commended by General Stark for conduct and bravery.

Nineteen Andover Johnsons served in the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars, of whom eleven were officers. The arms borne by the Johnsons of Fern Hill are, however, very peaceful emblems. They were granted to William Johnson, a bachelor of divinity, but whether a churchman or, like his namesake Samuel Johnson, a Puritan, does not appear. They are thus described: "Ar. a Chef az. betw. three pheons ru. On a chief of the second an open book representing the Holy Bible ppr., edged and sealed or, thereon inscribed Proverbs chap. 22; verse 6, betw. two crosses sory of the last. Crest—a Pheon as in the arms surmounted by a star of eight points or." Peaceful emblems enough, especially as the pheon, the only warlike sign, is reversed; but in the days of the English civil war the clergy on both sides not seldom joined actively in the strife and sometimes led their flocks to battle.

(V) Benjamin, son of Asa, was born in 1744, moved to Canterbury, New Hampshire, and then to Limerick, Maine, where he died in 1832. (VI) John Johnson, son of Benjamin, was born in 1771; married (1st) Rachel, daughter of Daniel and Eleanor Ferry, of Granby, Massachusetts, and (2d) Lurinda, daughter of Colonel Ezra and Elizabeth (Coan) Smith, of Vermont.

(The ancestors of the Ferry family were Huguenots. Three brothers came to this country sometime between 1650 and 1675, from Holland. One settled in New York, one in Connecticut and one in Massachusetts. The son of the latter, Charles Ferry, lived in or near Springfield. His son Noah settled in Granby, then South Hadley. Daniel, the second son of Noah, was born in 1742. His daughter Rachel married John Johnson as above.)

John Johnson was by trade a millwright, and became a land-surveyor and designer of bridges, dams, mills, etc. He settled first in Essex, Vermont, but removed to Burlington in 1810. He furnished the government with valuable maps and information in the war of 1812-15, and in the latter year was appointed United States commissioner for the settlement of claims growing out of the war. He was appointed a master in chancery by the judges of the supreme court of Vermont in 1813, and surveyor general of the state the same year, holding the latter position for ten years. He was selected by the commissioners under the treaty of Ghent to take charge of the survey of the northeastern boundary, on the part of the United States government, in which he was engaged from 1817 to 1819, and his final report was the basis of the treaty. He died in 1842.

(VII) Edwin Ferry Johnson, son of John and Rachel (Ferry) Johnson, was born in Essex, Vermont, May 23, 1803. He took charge of his father's business and began land surveying in 1817 at the age of fourteen; was on northeastern boundary survey with his father in 1818; aided his father in the reconstruction of the mill, and built a new dam at Hubbell's Falls, 1819; engaged with his father in furnishing large quantities of lumber to the Quebec market, took a large raft of lumber from the Missisquoi river through the St. Johns, the Chambly rapids, Lake St. Peter and the St. Lawrence, to Quebec, 1821; took charge of the mill at Hubbell's Falls, made land surveys, looked after the farm, and devoted every spare hour to study, 1822; instructor in Military Academy, Norwich, Vermont, 1823; instructor in geometry and surveying, same, 1824; in Burlington, studied practical mechanics, drilled company to act as escort to General Lafayette, made mineralogical tour of Lake Champlain, 1825; instructor in civil engineering, mathematics and tactics, Military Academy (then located at Middletown, Connecticut), 1826-1827; commandant same, 1828; engaged in survey of land lines Erie and Champlain canals, advocated the railway, outlined the course of a great western railroad (the basis of the Erie road afterward built), 1829; assistant engineer Catskill and Canajoharie railroad, 1831; resident engineer same, 1831-1832; resident engineer Chenango canal, 1833; resident engineer Utica and Schenectady railroad, 1834; chief engineer Auburn and Syracuse railroad, 1835; same New York and Erie railroad, 1837; same Ogdensburg and Champlain railroad, 1838; president Stevens Joint Stock Co., Hoboken, New Jersey, 1839; chief engineer New York and Albany railroad, 1840; same Syracuse and Oswego, 1846; same New York and Boston railroad, 1847; examined the ground and prepared and published plans for the Vermont and Canada railroad and the St. Lawrence and Champlain canal, 1848; appointed chief engineer Rock-

River Valley Union railroad (Illinois and Wisconsin), completed first practical essay on Northern Pacific railroad, 1850; chief engineer Illinois and Wisconsin railroad, 1852; published his work entitled "Railway to the Pacific, Northern Route," 1854; superintended surveys for Oswego and Troy railroad, 1854; organized, with others, the Central Bank, Middletown, Connecticut, 1851; mayor of Middletown, 1856; state senator, 1857; president and treasurer Shaler and Hall Quarry Co., 1858-1866; called to Washington to consult on plans for prosecution of war, offered rank of major general and command in Southwest, declined; offered position as assistant secretary of war, declined; requested by war department to put in writing his plan for prosecution of war and did so; (this was afterward pirated by one who had access to the files of the department; it contained the outline of the "March to the Sea"), 1862; furnished the war department with plans for coast defense, 1863; made surveys for marine railway around Niagara Falls, and was in Washington in the interest of the Panama Ship Canal, 1865-1866; chief engineer Northern Pacific railroad, 1866; consulting engineer Lake Ontario Shore railroad, 1868; consulting engineer Northern Pacific railroad, 1871, until his death in 1872. Had he lived five years longer he would have seen the metals laid upon practically his own lines from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He employed his leisure in the preparation and publication of numerous professional, scientific, philosophical and political papers and contributions to reviews and journals. He was a trustee of Norwich University from 1834 to 1846, and the degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by his alma mater and by the University of Vermont. In addition to his professional reports and works Mr. Johnson published the following: "A Treatise on Surveying;" "Journal of March of Cadets to Plattsburgh, to Washington, to Niagara;" "The Newellian Sphere;" "Land Surveys;" "A project for a Great Western Railway, New York to the Mississippi Valley," 1829; "Method of Conducting Canal Surveys;" "The Epicycloid;" "Cubical Quantities, Railroad and Canal;" "Mountains of New York;" "Tables of Quantities for Tracing Railroad Curves;" "Railroad System of New York;" "Gauge of Railways;" "Railroad to the Pacific, Northern Route, General Characteristics, Relative Merits, etc." with illustrations and approximate profile, 1850; "General Plan of Military Operations, Civil War," by request of Secretary of War; "Report on Northeastern Coast Defense," to the secretary of war; "Caesar's Bridge;" "Ship Canal and Marine Railway;" "First Meridian;" "Words for the People;" "The Reciprocity Treaty;" "Navigation of the Lakes;" "Niagara;" "Water Supply of New York;"

"Transcontinental Railways;" "Historical Sketch of Early Norse Settlements and the Newport Tower;" "Banking and Currency," etc.

He married Charlotte Shaler, daughter of Nathaniel Shaler, merchant, of New York and Middletown. Thomas Shaler came to this country from Stratford-on-Avon, England, about 1660. He was one of the first proprietors of Haddam, Connecticut, where he is mentioned in 1662 as one of a party of twenty-eight men from Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield who began a settlement there. His wife was Alice Brooks, widow of Thomas Brooks and daughter of Garrard Spencer.

(Garrard Spencer, son of Jarrard Spencer, was born in England, came to this country in 1634, and settled in Cambridge, then Newe Towne, Massachusetts. Removed to Lynn, 1636; was granted the "ferry" there, and was ensign of train bands, 1638; removed to Haddam about 1660; was deputy to the general court at Hartford, 1674, 1678, 1679, 1680 and 1683 and to the special session of same 1675; died in 1685.)

(II) Abel Shaler, son of Thomas, born 1673, died 1744. (III) Reuben Shaler, son of Abel, was born in Haddam, 1711; was a shipmaster and owner; removed to Middletown, Connecticut, in 1741; married Abigail Stow in 1741.

(John Stow came probably from Maidstone or Cranbrook, Kent county, England, with his wife and six children, in 1634, and settled in Roxbury, Massachusetts. He and his son Thomas joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts in 1638. He represented Roxbury in the general court, 1639; sold his property in Roxbury and removed to Concord in 1648, and died there. Rev. John Eliot says of Elizabeth Stow, his wife, that she was a godly matron, a blessing to her family and to the church. Thomas Stow, son of John, born in England, 1617, came to this country with his father and preceded him a few years in Concord. He moved to Middletown (Upper Houses, now Cromwell), Connecticut, 1669. Thomas Stow, son of Thomas, was born in Concord, 1650; removed with his father to Middletown, 1669; was made ensign "of the north company or train band on the south side the ferry river in the town of Middletown," 1717; commissioned lieutenant in the third company in the town of Middletown, 1723; died in 1730. He married Bethia Hopkins Stocking, granddaughter of George Stocking, a man of good family from the west of England, who came over with his family in or about 1630. Samuel Stow, son of Thomas 2d, and Bethia (Stocking) Stow, born 1681, died 1741. He was the father of Abigail Stow, who married Captain Reuben Shaler.)

The Shalers, like many other inhabitants of Haddam, were a family of sailors, "long voyage men" as they were called then and later. Thomas Shaler was a sailor, and his grandson Reuben followed the sea. Captain Shaler, as he was called in Middletown, accumulated quite a good property, for those times, before his death. He sailed on his last voyage in 1749, was spoken in the Gulf of Mexico during a hard gale, and never heard of afterwards. The house and about an acre of ground which he owned in Middletown were in the possession of the family for 127 years. The house is still standing, being now about 170 years old. Mrs. Shaler's married life was short, lasting but eight years. No certain news of her lost sailor husband ever reached her. Day after day she is said to have sat in the doorway with her spinning wheel, waiting and watching for his return. Captain Reuben Shaler left two sons—Reuben, who died in 1765, and Nathaniel, the father of Mrs. Edwin F. Johnson and grandfather of Wm. Shaler Johnson.

(IV) Nathaniel Shaler, son of Reuben, was born in 1747. "Curiously enough," as Mr. Macdonough says in his article on Mr. Shaler, "the only description we have of Mr. Shaler is left us by John Adams, second President of the United States. In June, 1771, Mr. Adams visited Middletown on his way through to New York and Washington, and stayed at the house of Mrs. Shaler, Nathaniel's mother. He mentions that she 'has an only son, and she is very fond and very proud of him. He lives with a merchant; is now twenty-five or twenty-six, and contents himself still to keep that merchant's books, without any inclination to set up for himself; is a great proficient in music, plays upon the flute, fife, harpsichord, spinet, etc.; associates with the young and the gay, and is a very fine Connecticut young gentleman.'"

In another place Mr. Adams notices the reverse of the Widow Shaler and her son. It is evident that he only saw one side of Mr. Shaler's character. Even then he had business interests of his own, and when he died he left, for those times, a fair fortune. He seems to have had military aspirations. In 1774 he was commissioned lieutenant in the Third Company, Sixth Regiment, Light Infantry of the Colony, and in May, 1776, was made captain. He was throughout his life, however, a staunch loyalist, and when his company was ordered to New York for active service against the King, flatly refused to go. For this he was arrested, taken before the general assembly, and after trial, deprived of his command, debarred from holding any civil or military position thereafter, and obliged to pay the cost of his trial. Then he gathered together his movable possessions, placed them and himself aboard a ship, and left the country, to which he did not return until after the Revolution. Of this incident he thus writes to a friend: "In the winter of 1777 I sailed in a Brigg from Brantford bound for St. Croix, but to my very great misfortune was taken and carried into St. Christopher, and my property in her lost, and I did not return to my native place, Middletown, until the fall of 1783, when I stayed but a few days, and have not from the time I left it in 1777 pretended to make it my place of residence. Until August, 1785, I hardly called on any person whatever among my numerous debtors for any kind of settlement. In that year I stayed about six weeks in Middletown on that business." From 1783 to 1790 he was in New York, where he entered into a business partnership with Jacob Sebor and Frederick W. Geysler. He married, in 1773, Hannah, daughter of Rowland Allen. She and her child died in 1775. He married (2d) Lucretia Ann, eldest daughter of William and Sarah (Hawxhurst) Denning.

(The Dennings came probably from Devonshire, England; at least there are still a number of that name in the old county. Many of them seem to have emigrated to the Island of Antigua. William Denning came from that island to New York about 1760. He seems from his coming to have taken a prominent position in the infant city in business, politics and socially. He entered the mercantile house of which Wm. Hawxhurst was the head, but in 1765 seems to have been in business for himself, as he styles himself "merchant." Mr. Macdonough says that "his well known views on the rights of the colonies and his open sympathy with the principles advocated by them caused him to be identified with the very first concerted movement in behalf of liberty." He was elected one of the committee of sixty to carry out the purpose of the association of 1774 as to non-impotation and non-consumption of all articles supplied by English markets. In 1775 he was elected a member of the committee of one hundred which superseded the former, and was active on both committees. He was a member of the New York Provincial Congress in 1775. This year the city was divided into "beats," or districts, and a military company was formed for the protection of each. Mr. Denning received a commission as second lieutenant of the 15th Beat Company of "Independents." He represented the city and county of New York in the second and third New York Provincial Congress and was a member of the committee of safety. He had acted as one of the auditors in the settlement of the accounts of New York and to make distinction between provincial and continental charges; was on the marine committee, and appointed by the Continental Congress one of the three commissioners to settle the accounts of the army under Washington in New York and New Jersey, 1776-

1777; was one of the four commissioners to meet, at the joint convention at New Haven, the commissioners from New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, to consider and regulate the industrial interests of the country, the convention having been called at the suggestion of Congress, and was appointed by Congress one of the commissioners of accounts of the board of treasury, 1778. The latter position he held until 1779, when Congress appointed him one of the commissioners of the board of treasury, which he held until September, 1781, when Mr. Morris took charge. In 1782 Mr. Denning was appointed commissioner of accounts of the quartermaster's department. These accounts had been allowed to accumulate for six years, and, with the fluctuations in the value of currency and other complications, required infinite patience and more than ordinary ability. In 1784, Mr. Morris resigning the control of the treasury, Congress re-established the board of treasury and elected Mr. Denning a member, which he declined, being at the time a member of the New York general assembly. Before the Revolution Mr. Denning resided in Wall street but at the breaking out of the war he moved his family to a house he had purchased a few miles back of Newburgh, which he called Salisburgh, and where General and Mrs. Washington, Lafayette and Alexander and Mrs. Hamilton were frequent and welcome visitors. After the war he returned to the city, residing at 341 Broadway, where in 1819 he died, and was buried in St. Paul churchyard. Mr. Denning married twice (1st) Sarah, daughter of William and Ann Hawxhurst, in 1765; and (2d) Amy, youngest sister of the above and widow of Phineas McIntosh, merchant. Lucretia Ann, the eldest child of his first wife, married Nathaniel Shaler. Another daughter married William Henderson, of New York. Of the children of his second wife, Amy married James Gillespie, merchant; Hannah married William Duer, son of Col. William Duer. In one of his letters Mr. Denning writes: "In the gloomy part of our revolution, General Washington told myself and Judge Fell that all would end well; we should beat our enemy, but God only knew how." This trust was perhaps the great secret of Washington's serene confidence in the darkest hours.)

As Mr. Shaler was a Tory and Mr. Denning a staunch Whig, it would not have been strange had the "course of true love" run a little rough, especially as the wooing took place so soon after the Revolution, when the bitter feelings engendered by the war could not have subsided to any great extent. "Mr. Shaler's estimable qualities and the fact that his sentiments had not led him to take an active part in the war, removed whatever objection there might have been on Mr. Denning's part, and his letters to his daughter after her marriage contain many expressions of respect and esteem for her husband." It may be added that these same estimable qualities affected others, and Mr. Shaler was received very kindly on his return to this country, after the war, by his old Whig friends. He had many and varied business interests in Middletown, and held much real estate at the time of his death, and, as has been said, left a fair fortune. He died in 1817, two years before his father-in-law, Mr. Denning.

Of Mr. Shaler's children, Charles, born in 1789, who graduated at Union College in 1812, moved shortly after to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he resided for over half a century. He was an eminent lawyer and jurist and a man of prominence in the State of his adoption and in national affairs. He died in 1869. Lucy, born in 1790, married Lieutenant (afterwards Commodore) McDonough, whose victory over a superior English fleet in the battle of Plattsburgh Bay, Lake Champlain, September 11, 1814, was the turning point in the war of 1812, and in its results probably the most important action of that war. October 9, 1814, Mr. William Denning wrote as follows: "Captain McDonough is probably with you at this moment. His country will bear him in respectful remembrance, and I most sincerely do. We have already been acquainted and he was on my list of modest, unassuming, worthy men. Tell him he has much to encounter in the universal applause of his country, but he must submit because he has brought it upon himself." Aside from the fact that the victory on Lake Champlain not only destroyed the British control of the lake, and checked and turned back the march of a strong and well disciplined and well provided army by the only route of invasion from Canada, it had a direct effect upon the negotiations being carried on at the time at Ghent. "England had submitted a proposition which involved the acquisition of considerable new territory, containing several strategic points. This proposition was promptly rejected by the American commission, and the negotiations came to an abrupt halt." Then came the news of the victory of McDonough. The English government wrote to the Duke of Wellington for advice, who in answer wrote "I confess that I think you have no right, from the state of the war, to demand any concession of territory from America * * * from particular circumstances, such as the want of the naval superiority on the lakes, you have not been able to carry it into the enemy's territory * * * and have not even cleared your own territory on the point of attack. You cannot then, on any principle of equality in negotiation, claim accession of territory." The government took his advice.

(James McDonough, the ancestor of the Delaware line, was the son of Thomas and Jane (Coyle) McDonough. He was born in the district known as Salmon Leap, on the river Liffey, county Kildare, Ireland, and came to this country with his brother John, about 1730. He settled in St. George's Hundred, New Castle county, Delaware, at the place then called the Trap, but to which the name McDonough was afterwards given. James was a man of considerable means and is said to have been a physician, a man of education and of importance in the county. When the Revolutionary war broke out he was sixty-four years old, but he armed his two sons, Thomas and James, and sent them to the front. James died in the service, but Thomas returned after a period of honorable service. James, the elder, died in 1792 at the age of eighty. Thomas, son of James, the father of the commodore, was born in 1747. He was educated as a physician. March 20, 1776, he was appointed major in the Delaware Battalion. He served actively until 1777, when the battalion was disbanded and he was honorably discharged. He was at once appointed colonel of the new battalion being raised, but for family and business reasons declined. He also served as one of the judges of the court of common pleas of the State of Delaware.)

Another daughter of Nathaniel Shaler married Lieutenant H. B. Sawyer, of the navy, and still another the Rev. Edward Rutledge, of South Carolina. His daughter Charlotte married the Hon. Edwin Ferry Johnson.

(VIII) William Shaler Johnson, son of Edwin Ferry and Charlotte (Shaler) Johnson, was born, as noted, in 1836. He received his early education in private schools and was fitted for college at the academy in Burlington, Vermont. He was with his father in the survey of the Middletown and Berlin Branch Railroad in 1848, and the Rock River Valley Union Railroad in Wisconsin, in 1851. He entered the University of Vermont in 1854; in the class of '58, but left at the end of his sophomore year with the intention of entering Yale, an intention which, however, he did not carry out. From 1858 to 1862 he was in the employ of the Shaler and Hall Quarry Company, of Portland, Connecticut, as clerk, bookkeeper and agent. In the latter year he made application for an appointment in the signal corps of the army, but at the time it was not a separate organization, its members being taken from the commissioned, non-commissioned and privates of the army. When it was organized as a separate corps he went to Washington and passed the necessary examinations successfully, but family reasons made his presence at home necessary and his name was withdrawn, greatly to his disappointment. He was assistant engineer on the Lake Ontario Shore Line Railroad in 1867-1868; assistant engineer Northern Pacific Railroad, 1868-1870; resident engineer Northern Pacific Railroad, 1870-1872. His father's death at this time recalled him to his home, and from that time until 1876 he was employed in land-surveying and managing his father's estate. He was a teacher from 1876 to 1878; editorial writer, "Chester Evening News," 1877-1879; editor and reporter, etc., same, 1879-1882; editor of "Hartford Herald" and other papers, 1883-1885; superintendent Chester Water Works, 1885-1889; secretary and treasurer of the Steel Castings Manufacturers' Association, 1893-1896, when it was dissolved by mutual consent; journalist, writer and accountant, 1896. He was a member of the Scientific Institute of Middletown, Connecticut, and one of the founders of the Scientific Institute of Chester, Pennsylvania; is one of the incorporators of the Chester Free Library, and a charter member of the Delaware County Historical Society. He has been a member and lay-reader of Saint Paul's church since he came to the city in 1876, and since 1888 its senior warden. He has at different times in his life been offered public position but has declined, except in the case of the board of education, of which he was a member from 1896 to 1900. He has furnished many papers of interest and value to the organizations with which he has been associated, and has written largely on scientific, historical and hygienic subjects.

In 1869, while connected with the Northern Pacific Railroad, he was detailed to assist in the general reconnaissance of the mountain passes, as geologist under Colonel W. Milnor Roberts, one of the most noted engineers of the day. At the close of the reconnaissance, September 9, 1869, Colonel Roberts wrote to him as follows: " * * * Personally, my dear sir, you will carry with you my highest esteem and a friendship which I hope will continue through life. Our agreeable intimate intercourse of several months will always remain in my memory a very pleasant series of recollections."

Mr. Johnson married, in 1876, Charlotte Goodrich, daughter of the Rev. Dr. John J. and Julia Ann (Henshaw) Robertson.

(The Robertson family, from which Mrs. Johnson is descended on her father's side, is one of the oldest in Scotland and this country. The first of the family of whom we have historical knowledge was Andrew de Atholia. W. H. Skene, in his "History of Ancient Alban." (Vol. III, p. 288) says, "The reign of Alexander II (about 1200) witnessed the termination of the line of Celtic earls of Atholl and Angus. * * *

But while the earldom (of Atholl) passed into the hands of a succession of foreign earls, a family bearing the name of de Atholia continued to possess a great part of the earldom, and were probably the descendants of the older Celtic earls. The Gaelic population of the whole of the northwestern portion of Atholl, bounded on the east by the river Garry and on the south by the Timmel, remained intact under them (the de Atholias)." Duncan, son of Andrew de Atholia and first baron of Strowan, was a loyal follower of "the Bruce" and received from him large additions to his inheritance. The clan was then called "Clan Donnochie," or sons of Duncan. Duncan was succeeded by his son Duncan, and he, in turn, by his son Robert. This Robert Duncan, 3d, Baron Strowan, was a man of courage and resolution. When King James I was murdered and a bloody civil war seemed inevitable, Robert pursued the murderers so quickly and with such vigor that he came up with them within two miles of Blair castle, the seat of the then earl of Athole, in whose favor the conspiracy had been planned, and seized not only the murderer, Robert Graham, but arrested the earl of Athole himself. The little stream near which Robert overtook and captured the conspirators is known to this day as "Graham's Burn." For this service he refused all reward except to have his large possessions confirmed to himself and his heirs. The King, however, added to Robert's armorial bearings, for crest, a dexter hand supporting an imperial crown, with the motto "Virtutis gloria merces." and below the escutcheon a man in chains in place of a compartment. So from father to son in the old Strowan MSS. the line is traced to Alexander, thirteenth baron, when the male line of the barons of Strowan ended and the lands went to the descendants of Duncan Robertson, of Drumachine, third son of Robert Robertson, tenth baron, and his wife, Agnes MacDonald, of Kippoch. Duncan Robertson, great-grandson of Duncan, of Drumachine, succeeded Alexander as fourteenth baron of Strowan. He was succeeded by his son Alexander, who died unmarried in 1822, and the lands would have passed to the descendants of Patrick, the fourth son of Duncan of Drumachine, had they not been devisable by will. Patrick Robertson, son of the Patrick named above, came to this country in 1739. His son John, born about 1760, married first Maria Sperry and second Catherine Prentiss. The eldest son of John Robertson, by his first wife, was the Rev. Dr. Robertson, who was born in 1797. He graduated at Columbia College at the age of nineteen, and after two trips abroad, during one of which he spent some time with the then Alexander of Strowan, he studied for the ministry and was ordained deacon in 1820 and priest in 1822. He was professor of languages in the University of Vermont in 1824 and in 1830 went to Greece as the first foreign missionary of the Church in the United States. In 1841 he returned to this country, where he spent the remainder of a long life, by far the larger part of which was passed in two parishes, at Fishkill and at Saugerties, on the Hudson river. The Robertsons were noted in earlier days and in the old country for their staunch loyalty. They were devoted adherents of the Stuart family, with whom indeed they were allied by marriage, and suffered severely in the civil war, and in the risings of 1715 and 1745 for that ill-fated house. The story of Margaret Robertson equals in interest and exceeds in purpose and self-sacrifice that of her cousin Flora MacDonald. In this country they have been equally loyal to the land of their adoption, were represented in both army and navy during the Revolution and one, an officer under Paul Jones, fell in the action between the "Bon Homme Richard" and the "Serapis." One branch of the family, descendants of Patrick, settled in Virginia. William Robertson, of that State, while on a visit to England and Scotland, was given one of the eleven stone cannon balls fired from Loch Leven castle at the boat in which Queen Mary was escaping, and which was found, with the others, when the lake was drained, very nearly where Walter Scott said they would be found. He presented it to the Philosophical Society of the United States at Philadelphia, and it is still in their possession or in that of the Historical Society. The arms of the Robertsons are thus described: "Gules, three wolves' heads crazed, argent, armed and langued, azure. Crest—a dexter hand holding up an imperial crown proper, with a man in chains lying extended below the escutcheon of the arms. Motto, "Virtutis gloria merces." "The chief seats were the Castle of Grath, Innerwick, Mt. Alexander and others."

On her mother's side also, Mrs. Johnson comes of an old and noted family, the Henshaws. The member of the Heronshaw, Hernshaw or Henshaw family from whom this branch of the Henshaws are descended was Thomas Henshaw, of London, England, son of Robert Henshaw, of Drees (sometimes written Dreshy, and in the printed genealogy of the Recestor written "Derby" by Thomas Dale Richmond, Herald). He was a captain in the service of James I who, for his "faithful and able service" granted him the arms which had been borne by the family before, and added a crest which is thus described in the warrant: "Upon a wreath of his Collers, Argent and Sable, a Falcone seasing on a Wing, gould with a Crown about the Neck, Gules Beake and Legs Sables, with Belles of the first." And more particularly specified in the margin

"Mantled Gules Rumbled Silver." The birds in the arms were heathcocks. Thomas died in 1639, leaving a large estate. He was succeeded by his son Thomas, who had also granted him a crest representing a griffin's head quartered on the arms of his father. Some branches of the family have the eagle, the crest of the Stanleys of Derby and Man. The Henshaws intermarried with the Stanleys and the name "Margaret Stanley" is common in the family, appearing in nearly every generation since. Sir Evan Haughton married Margaret Stanley, daughter of the earl of Derby and Charlotte de Tremouille, and their daughter, Margaret Stanley Haughton, married Sir Joshua Henshaw. Joshua Henshaw, son of Thomas Henshaw second, came to this country. His son Joshua was born in 1672. Daniel, son of Joshua second, was born in 1701 and died in 1781. Benjamin, son of Daniel, was born in 1729 and died in 1793. He settled in Middletown, Connecticut, where the old Henshaw house still stands in a good state of preservation. Daniel, son of Benjamin, was born in 1762 and died in 1825. He lived for a time in Middletown, and then removed to Middlebury, Vermont. Of his children, Sarah married Charles H. Richards, of New York, and her daughter married the artist, Daniel Huntington. Julia Ann Henshaw married the Rev. Dr. Robertson, and was the mother of Mrs. Johnson. Daniel Henshaw's oldest son was John P. K. Henshaw. He entered the ministry and became Bishop of Rhode Island.

The Henshaws were well represented in the war of the Revolution. Mrs. Johnson's great grandfather, Benjamin Henshaw, was a lieutenant colonel in the Continental army. His brother William was a colonel, and his brother David a captain. His brother Joseph was a member of a patriotic association composed of Samuel Adams, James and Joseph Warren, John Adams, Josiah Quincy, Joseph and Joshua Henshaw and William Mollineaux. Benjamin's sister married Colonel Samuel Demy, and his daughter Captain John Meigs, both of the army. All were distinguished for conduct and ability.)

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have made their home in Chester for the past twenty-eight years. They have two children, Julia Theodora, born June 27, 1878, and Charlotte Shaler, born July 4, 1884.

Much of Mr. Johnson's time has been devoted to literary work, and he has shown fair ability in this line, both in prose and verse, but he has never made it his life work, and it has rather been the recreation of leisure hours than a serious occupation.

(As journalist and magazine and newspaper contributor this work has been necessarily ephemeral. Among other publications are: "A Memoir of Edwin Ferry Johnson, Civil Engineer," "Memoir of John A. Robertson;" "History of Saint Paul's Church, Chester, Pennsylvania"; "The Old Graveyard"; "Heirlooms of Saint Paul's"; "The Nation's Centennial, 1876"; "Water Supply of Chester"; "Memoirs of John B. Hinkson, Jurist"; Bi-centennial Souvenir Saint Paul's Church," etc.).

◆◆◆◆◆

THE KENT FAMILY. The Kent family of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, are descended from Thomas Kent, who lived a life of rare usefulness and reared a most excellent family. He settled in Upper Darby township, in the portion now known as Clifton, in the year 1839. In the days when only wild woodland and large farms covered this section of the county; when the only communication with Philadelphia was one stage in twenty-four hours, and the city had not extended beyond the western banks of the Schuylkill river; at the point on the Baltimore Pike, where the six mile stone marks the distance from the Schuylkill at Market street bridge, and along the borders of Darby creek, he purchased land and established his home and the business in which he was active for nearly a half century, and which is now carried on by his children. A man whose life was dedicated to use, of high principle and lofty thinking, retiring in disposition, he was yet a leader in all he undertook; a deep student, and a great lover of home and children, he was not widely known outside of his home and business circles.

The thirteenth child of Josiah and Hannah Lightfoot Kent, he was born in Middleton, Lancashire, England, March 27, 1813. His mother's family were from Cheshire and of the Church of England, and his father was a Dissenter. His educational advantages were limited, but he acquired habits of thought and observation which afforded him an ample equipment for his future life. Industry was one of his marked traits. Taking employment in a cotton mill, he became so proficient as a weaver that when he was only sixteen years of age he was made foreman. He filled that position most acceptably for three years, when he learned the higher art of silk weaving, and was employed in that work until he emigrated to the United States.

Very early in life he became interested in religious subjects, and was made a class leader in the chapel of the village. Grouping for fuller light on Biblical texts and questions which seemed obscure, as if by an answered prayer, he became acquainted with the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, published in Latin in the later years of the eighteenth century, and translated by the Rev. John Clowes, of St. John's church, Manchester, who preached and taught in this parish for over sixty years this explanation of the internal sense of the Sacred Scriptures.

"That all religion has relation to life, and that the life of religion is to do good," was one of the truths which Mr. Kent endeavored to carry out in all relations of life. Those who knew him best can testify that in all his career, in whatever crises and trials he passed through, in a life of continuous activity, a frail body was filled with courage and ever upborne by his absolute faith in that Divine Providence which looks not to temporal ends. After becoming interested in New Church teachings, Mr. Kent walked twenty miles each Sabbath, and attended three services conducted by Rev. Dr. Bayley, a talented writer and eloquent preacher. At these services he sang in the choir, having a rich tenor voice.

After the death of his mother in 1838, his own health failing so that physicians gave him but a year to live, Mr. Kent resolved to visit his elder sister, Sarah, the wife of James Wilde, who had been for some time in America. Mr. Wilde was then engaged in manufacturing on Darby creek, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Sailing from Liverpool in August, 1839, Mr. Kent arrived in Philadelphia after a stormy voyage of six weeks, on Sunday afternoon, the last day in September. His health having greatly improved on the voyage, he soon began to look about for some occupation. He spent his first winter in America in the study of law in Philadelphia, boarding at the southwest corner of Broad and Chestnut streets. Finding himself, however, unable to endure the close confinement of student life, he looked about for other openings, always with the feeling that in whatever he undertook he must be his own master.

An opportunity now came for him to secure a mill on Darby creek, which he rented from Thomas Garrett, and he there began a business in woolen yarns. He had made a successful beginning when the great freshet of August 5, 1843, historic in the annals of Delaware county, washed away all his possessions. Undaunted by this catastrophe, he rented from Thomas Garrett in 1844, and purchased in April, 1845, the mill property on the site of the present Rockbourne mill. November 16, 1846, he purchased of James Wilde a mill on the site of the present Union mill. This he leased to his brother-in-law until Mr. Wilde's death in 1867, when it was rebuilt and added to his other plant. At the outbreak of the Civil war these mills were exclusively devoted to the making of uniform cloth for the United States army, and from that time to the present they have continued largely on government work. It is doubtful if any other mills in the country can show such a long record of unbroken activity through hard times and good.

After the death of Thomas Kent, October 5,

1887, the business was carried on by his estate until May 5, 1890, when was organized a corporation called the Thomas Kent Manufacturing Company, the stock being equally divided between his five children. In 1898 his son Samuel Leonard sold out his interest. The present owners of the business are Henry Thomas Kent, Hannah Kent Schoff, Louise Kent Keay, and Mary Augusta Kent. The business of the Thomas Kent Manufacturing Company has been greatly enlarged by its present owners. In 1899 a tract of twenty acres at the junction of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Darby creek, Clifton Heights, was purchased, and a very large brick mill erected thereon, for the manufacture of fine worsted yarns. This is considered one of the finest and most complete mills of its kind in the United States. During the war with Spain, the various mills of the company were operated day and night, and furnished the government with more than two million dollars' worth of goods. The material used is almost exclusively American-grown wool, many millions of pounds being purchased annually.

In 1845 Mr. Kent became a citizen of the United States, and never failed to take an active interest in national politics. He was an ardent lover of his adopted country and of its institutions and opportunities. Too delicate in health, and also past the age for active service during the war, he yet served the Union in many quiet ways.

Though very feeble physically, during the last year of his life, Mr. Kent continued an active supervision of his business to the day of his death. He had bidden farewell to his native land in early manhood, with the prediction that his life was to be measured by a few months at most, yet he lived to the ripe age of seventy-five years, with never an illness sufficiently serious to incapacitate him. His strong will power and faith supported him through the many difficulties and discouragements of life, and in all his dealings the true spirit of altruism was ever supreme. He enjoyed thinking of his business primarily as a power for good to others, and with great earnestness he enjoined these principles upon those who were to succeed him.

On May 13, 1852, Mr. Kent was married by the Rev. James Seddon of Frankford, Pennsylvania, to Fanny Leonard, the daughter of Simeon and Boadicea (Thompson) Leonard, of Bridgewater, Massachusetts. Fanny Leonard was born March 19, 1821, on the original grant of land owned by her ancestor, Solomon Leonard, who was one of fifty men, including Miles Standish, who purchased the town of Bridgewater from Massasoit in 1647. The Leonard family owned all the property along the main street and the Taunton river, in what is now the central portion of the town. From one of the family, a prominent merchant, Leonard street in New York received its name and numerous others have filled positions of national importance, in public affairs, in industries of various sorts and in literature. Conspicuous among these is our present secretary of state, Hon. John Hay, who has accomplished so much for the advancement of American interests, at home and abroad.

The English history of the Leonards, in possession of the family, dates back to William the Conqueror. Mrs. Kent was a lineal descendant of five of the Mayflower passengers who settled Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1620,—namely, Edward Winslow, governor of the province, Susanna Fuller, Isaac Allerton, Remember Allerton and Francis Cooke, and was also of lineal descent from many of the best families of the Massachusetts Bay colony who came to Boston from 1630 to 1635, and settled at Cambridge, Watertown and Lexington. Many of these pioneers distinguished themselves in church and state, notably the Shepards, Parkers, Stearns, Stones and Hosmers. Ancestors of Mrs. Kent served during King Philip's war in 1675, and were at the siege of Louisburg in 1745, and her two grandfathers and great-grandfathers fought at Lexington, Bunker Hill, and throughout the Revolutionary war.

Mrs. Kent entered the first class of the first normal school in the country, established and fostered by Horace Mann. Even while so young she showed great talent and intellectual ability, and throughout her life was conspicuously active and earnest in the cause of education. In later years, in her adopted home, she wrote and strove continually toward greater perfection in the school system and the more intelligent training of children. She was brought up in the New Church, of which her parents were members, and was a woman of strong character and most capable in all ways. She died at her home in Clifton Heights, July 29, 1901. The children of Thomas and Fanny Kent, all born in Upper Darby, Pennsylvania, were: 1. Hannah, born June 3, 1853; 2. Henry Thomas, born November 4, 1854; 3. Louise, born April 13, 1856; 4. Frances Leonard, born August 1, 1858, died March 1, 1859; 5. Samuel Leonard, born August 24, 1859; 6. Mary Augusta, born June 22, 1861.

Hannah Kent married Frederic Schoff of Massachusetts, October 23, 1873. Their home since 1877 has been in Philadelphia, where Mr. Schoff has carried on a successful business. Mr. Schoff has been active in educational and progressive work, and is president of the National Congress of Mothers, and took a leading part in interesting the Pennsylvania legislature in the juvenile court bill recently passed. The children of Frederic and Hannah (Kent) Schoff were. Wilfred Harvey, born November 27, 1874, married June 20, 1899, Ethelwyn McGeorge, and there children are: Muriel and Wilmot; Edith Gertrude, born May 15, 1877; Louise, born December 19, 1880; Leonard Hastings, born November 7, 1884; Harold Kent, born September 13, 1886; Eunice Margaret, born June 27, 1890; Albert Lawrence, born March 18, 1894.

Henry Thomas Kent, president and treasurer of the Thomas Kent Manufacturing Company, was educated in private schools of Philadelphia and at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank, of Clifton Heights, and its president. He is a member of the Union League of Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Historical Society, the New England Society of Pennsylvania, the Sons of the Revolution and the Society of Mayflower descendants. October 1, 1885, he married Louise Leonard, daughter of Captain Nahum and Phebe Jane (Cowing) Leonard, of Massachusetts. Her father, an attorney at law, was a Civil war veteran, who was a captain in the Fifty-eighth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, and served throughout the war, and afterwards represented Plymouth county in the Massachusetts legislature. Mrs. Kent is a direct descendant of John and Priscilla (Mullens) Alden, the Pilgrims of Plymouth, Massachusetts. She is a member of the Daughters of the Revolution, and the Society of Mayflower descendants. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Kent, all born in Upper Darby, Pennsylvania, are: Henry Thomas, born July 16, 1887; Everett Leonard, born June 25, 1889; Russell Hathaway, born August 31, 1891; Evelyn, born November 9, 1892; Warren Thompson, born May 19, 1894; Rosamond Kingman, born March 29, 1901.

Louise Kent became the wife of Nathaniel Seaver Keay, of Bridgewater, Massachusetts, on November 23, 1887. Mr. Keay was born in Springvale, Maine, May 4, 1847, and came to Pennsylvania in 1889. His parents were Nathaniel Washburn and Susan Woodworth (Seaver) Keay. The Keay family was of English origin, and members of it were among the first settlers of Maine, the "Keay Garrison" near Berwick being famous during the French and Indian war, and also during the Revolution. The Seavers came to Boston in 1630, and the original homestead on Seaver street, Roxbury, is still in possession of the family. The name Nathaniel Seaver has been handed down for many generations. Mr. Keay's grandfather, Dr. Nathaniel Seaver, was a prominent physician in Maine. His great-grandfather, Captain Nathaniel Seaver, served in the Revolutionary war, and another ancestor of the name was a captain in King Philip's war, and was killed in the Sudbury fight. Mr. Keay's mother died in his early childhood, His father being called to South America on business, he left his two sons with relatives, expecting that at the completion of their education they would join him in Bolivia and assist in his large interests in the development of the country. This consisted of irrigation, road-building and cultivation of the land. It is said that in his lifetime he accomplished more for the development of Bolivia than any other man. He died suddenly in Cocha Bamba, Bolivia, in 1881. Mr. Keay is secretary of the Thomas Kent Manufacturing Company, and a member of the Sons of the Revolution and the New England Society.

The children of Nathaniel Seaver and Louise (Kent) Keay are: Alan Kent, born May 25, 1889; Gladys, born April 17, 1891; Louise Nathalie, born March 11, 1893; Carol Seaver, born October 28, 1895; Louis Kent, born December 19, 1897; Edythe Leonard, born October 10, 1902.

Mrs. Keay has served as regent of the Pennsylvania Society, Daughters of the Revolution, since its organization in 1894, and also as vice-president and director of the National Society for a number of years. She was chairman and treasurer of the Valley Forge Memorial Committee, of the Daughters of the Revolution, who erected at Valley Forge the first monument to the memory of Washington and his army. She is a member of various historical and colonial societies, and is active in club work. She owns and occupies the homestead on Baltimore avenue, Clifton Heights, which was built by her father in 1860.

Samuel Leonard Kent married Annie Josephine Ahrens, May 21, 1885, and they reside at Lansdowne, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Frances, born March 7, 1886; Eleanor, born January 16, 1888; Samuel Leonard, born February 16, 1890; Donald, born July 25, 1893; Margaret, born March 26, 1898. Mr. Kent is a member of the Union League, of Philadelphia, the Sons of the Revolution, the Corinthian Yacht Club, etc.

Mary Augusta Kent lives at Clifton Heights, Pennsylvania, where she has erected a beautiful home on a portion of her father's estate. Her executive ability and services have been sought by many of the societies of which she is a member. She has been an officer of the Pennsylvania Society of the Daughters of the Revolution since its organization, and has also been an officer and member of the board of the National Society for a number of years. She holds membership in other historical and colonial societies.

BONSALL. Richard Bonsall, from Mouldridge, in the county of Derby, England, was among those who settled in Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in the year 1683. He produced the following certificate from Friends in his native place:

This is to Certifie all whom itt May Concern, That Richard Bonsall, the bearer hereof, Is and hath Been since he Came amongst friends, of Honest Life and Conversation and In vnity with friends and doth now Remove Himselfe Into America with his whole family with ye Consent of friends, Being Clear from Debts and other things in Relation to his Testimony in the world.

From our Monthly Meeting att Ashford
The 22th Day of ye 12th Month, 1682.

John Sikes	Bridgett Johnson
John Gratton	Mary fallowes
Jervase Gent	Alice Woodward
William Bunting	Mary Stevenson
Anthony Woodward	John Sikes
Francis Bently	Edward Booth
Jonathan fisher	John Bunting
Samuel Johnson	Francis fallowes

His wife Mary was the daughter of George and Hannah Wood, who had come from Bonsall in the county of Derby in the preceding year. He became the owner of two hundred acres of land on the east side of Darby creek, including the present Kellyville, in Upper Darby. His wife died 6 mo., 24, 1698, and he on 7 mo., 13, 1699.

Obediah Bonsall, also a settler in Darby, was a brother to Richard Bonsall, and his mother, a sister to Richard's wife, was the Elizabeth Bonsall who became the second wife of James Hunt, of Kingessing, at a meeting at the house of John Blunston, in Darby, 9 mo. (Nov.) 10, 1686. Obediah was married 1 mo., 26, 1702, at Darby Meeting, to Sarah Bethel, daughter of John and Frances Bethel, of Darby. He died 10 mo., 5, 1732, and his wife, 7 mo., 7, 1743. They had ten children: Joseph, born 3 mo., 25, 1703, died 12 mo., 13, 1763, married Hannah Lea; Elizabeth, born 7 mo., 2, 1705; Mary, born 12 mo., 21, 1707-8, died 8 mo., 10, 1777, married Jacob Lightfoot; Obediah, born 12 mo., 12, 1709-10, died 1795, married Rebecca Scott; Hannah, born 7 mo., 9, 1712, married Obadiah Elliot; Rose, born 10 mo., 7, 1714, died 3 mo., 6, 1793, married Thomas Pilkinton; Sarah, born 9 mo., 25, 1717, died 1 mo., 30, 1727, unmarried; Vincent, born 6 mo., 23, 1720, died 1 mo., 10, 1796, married Grace and Sarah (Vernon) Yarnall; Samuel, born 10 mo., 25, 1722, died 10 mo., 1725; Rebeckah, born 1 mo., 30, 1725-6.

The children of Richard and Mary Bonsall, so far as known, were these: 1. Rachel, married 8 mo. (Oct.), 6, 1697, Daniel Hibberd. 2. Abigail, married 8 mo., 1702, Joseph Rhoads. 3. Ann, married 9 mo. (Nov.), 9, 1702, Josiah Hibberd. 4. Jacob, born 10 mo., 9, 1684, died 5 mo., 10, 1739, married Martha Hood. 5. Benjamin, born 11 mo., 3, 1687, died 1 mo., 6, 1752, married Martha Fisher. 6. Enoch, born 11 mo., 2, 1692, died 5 mo., 6, 1769, married Ann Hood. 7. Eleanor, born 9 mo., 8, 1694, married 6 mo., 23, 1718, Isaac James.

Jacob Bonsall (4) was married 3 mo., 16, 1716, at Darby Meeting, to Martha Hood, born 10 mo., 29, 1699, died 6 mo., 13, 1735, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Blankley) Hood, of Darby. He lived at the homestead in Darby, where he owned two hundred and forty-five acres of land beside some meadow in Kingsessing; all which he divided between his sons by will. His children were these: 8. Abraham, born 3 mo., 29, 1717, died 5 mo., 30, 1784, married Sarah Lewis and Mary Hinde. 9. Mary, born 6 mo., 13, 1719, married John Rudolph. 10. Thomas, born 10 mo., 16, 1722, died 1745, married Esther Lewis. 11. Jacob, born 2 mo., 15, 1724, died 5 mo., 9, 1739. 12. Moses, born 3 mo., 15, 1726, died in his minority, 9 mo., 18, 1745. 13. Martha, born 11 mo., 17, 1728, died 1 mo., 12, 1734. 14. Jesse, born 1 mo., 2, 1730-31, died 1 mo., 6, 1785, married Ruth Fordham. 15. Lydia, married December 7, 1758, her cousin Joseph Bonsall (30).

Benjamin Bonsall (5) was married by Friend ceremony, before William Carter, Esq., at the house of the said Benjamin Bonsall, in Kingsessing, to Martha Fisher, daughter of John Fisher, blacksmith, 9 mo., 27, 1712. They made an acknowledgment for their marriage out of meeting and continued in membership. He was married a second time, 4 mo., 8, 1737, at Darby Meeting, to Elizabeth Horn, of Darby. By both wives he had eight children: 16. Richard, born 5 mo., 13, 1714, married 7 mo., 14, 1737, Sarah Horn. 17. John, born 8 mo., 28, 1716, married Phebe Wilcox, 10 mo., 23, 1753. 18. Sarah, born 1 mo., 9, 1720, married 5 mo., 16, 1753, Peter Elliot. 19. James, born 6 mo., 18, 1725, died 3 mo., 1765. 20. Benjamin, born 2 mo., 4, 1728, married 12 mo., 17, 1755, Mary Bartram. 21. Hannah, born 11 mo., 18, 1730, married 5 mo., 13, 1752, Philip Price. 22. Martha, born 6 mo., 2, 1733. 23. Nathan, born 1 mo., 12, 1739, died 1807.

Enoch Bonsall (6) was married 4 mo., 26, 1717, at Darby Meeting, to Ann Hood, born 10 mo., 30, 1695, died 10 mo., 20, 1759, daughter of Thomas and Sarah Hood, of Darby. They resided in Darby township and had eleven children: 24. Isaac, born 2 mo., 3, 1718, died 8 mo., 6, 1766, married Hannah Powell. 25. Sarah, born 2 mo., 10, 1720, died after 1790, unmarried. 26. William, born 3 mo., 25, 1722, died 9 mo., 10, 1742. 27. Benjamin, born 1 mo., 31, 1724, died 12 mo., 24, 1807. 28. Hannah, born 12 mo., 7, 1725, died 9 mo., 2, 1790, unmarried. 29. Enoch, born 1 mo., 5, 1727-28, died 8 mo., 18, 1785, married Rachel Coulton. 30. Joseph, born 12 mo., 23, 1729-30, died 1803, married Lydia Bonsall (15). 31. Joshua, born 6 mo., 9, 1732, died 9 mo., 1, 1784, married Margaret Hall.

32. Jonathan, born 3 mo., 7, 1734, died 12 mo., 14, 1736-7. 33. David, born 3 mo., 11, 1736, died 2 mo., 5, 1778, unmarried. 34. Jonathan, born 9 mo., 3, 1738, died 4 mo., 1814, married Elizabeth Evans and Margaret Crozier.

Benjamin Bonsall (27), son of Enoch and Ann (Hood) Bonsall, married Elizabeth Hibberd, and to them were born six children: Thomas, born 5 mo., 31, 1750; Esther, born 2 mo., 9, 1751, died 9 mo., 28, 1835; Hannah, born 10 mo., 13, 1754, died 2 mo., 27, 1775; Elizabeth, born 5 mo., 21, 1757, died 1 mo., 5, 1777; Ann, born 12 mo., 5, 1759; Benjamin, born 8 mo., 14, 1764, died 10 mo., 23, 1835.

Benjamin Bonsall, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Hibberd) Bonsall married Elizabeth Cripps, of Manningtonville, Salem county, New Jersey, in 1800, and their son Benjamin C., born 8 mo., 2, 1805, was killed by lightning, 5 mo., 3, 1828. The mother died 10 mo., 25, 1814, and Benjamin Bonsall married (second) Annie Heacock, of Haverford township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Jonathan and Hannah (Davis) Heacock, and their children were Elizabeth H., born 8 mo., 7, 1819, died 6 mo., 17, 1829; Joseph H., born 1 mo., 12, 1822, died 10 mo., 13, 1826; Jesse Davis, born 4 mo., 29, 1826, died 1 mo., 19, 1842; Amos, born 1 mo., 21, 1830.

Amos Bonsall, son of Benjamin and Annie (Heacock) Bonsall, was born in the old Bonsall homestead near Fernwood, in Upper Darby. He began his education in the common schools, and attended the school of Joseph Fell, at Buckingham, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and when fifteen years of age entered Anthony Bolmar's school in West Chester, Pennsylvania, and at the age of eighteen entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, but after studying there for a year was obliged to withdraw on account of failing eyesight. At the age of twenty he received a warrant as master's mate in the United States navy, and three years later was appointed second officer on a vessel of Dr. Elisha Kane's Arctic expedition, which was of two years' duration and during which he participated in the notable boat journey made by Dr. Isaac I. Hayes. He married, in Upper Darby, December 4, 1856, Anna W. Wagner, daughter of Ferdinand and Sarah (Woodward) Wagner, of Easton, Pennsylvania. Four children were born of this union—Ethel, Sarah W., Elizabeth F. and Mary W. The mother of this family died April 11, 1900.

In 1863 Mr. Bonsall was commissioned captain of Company K, Seventeenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, Colonel Joseph Wilcox, and bore an honorable part in defeating the invading rebel army of General Robert E. Lee. In 1868 Mr. Bonsall was made director of the Pennsylvania School for Feeble-minded Children at Elwyn, and in 1878 a director of the Philadelphia House of Refuge for Boys. He is president of the Fernwood Cemetery Association of Upper Darby, Delaware county.

Enoch Bonsall (29) was married 5 mo., 24, 1758, at Darby Meeting, to Rachel Coulton, daughter of William Coulton, of Blockley township, Philadelphia. They had six children: 35. William, born 2 mo., 25, 1759. 36. Ann, born 9 mo., 24, 1760. 37. Enoch, born 1 mo., 2, 1763 (see below). 38. Moses, born 11 mo., 26, 1765, married Mary Fowler (see forward). 39. Rachel, born 9 mo., 6, 1768. 40. Samuel, born 10 mo., 19, 1772, married Elizabeth Fowler.

Enoch Bonsall (37) married Susan Crozer, by whom he had children, Betsy, Enoch, Thomas, Rachel and William. The last named married Phebe Peck. She died in Upper Darby about 1890, aged about ninety years. He resided in Upper Darby, where he was the victim of a most wanton murder, May 22, 1824. Four men having obtained admission to the dwelling in the evening, under pretense of being acquaintances, bound him to a chair, and having ransacked the house, one of their number, without provocation, stabbed him in the abdomen, from which death ensued the following morning. The villains were subsequently arrested and one of them was executed for the murder. William Bonsall left a son, Charles, who was born in Upper Darby, August 19, 1822.

Charles Bonsall received his early education in the public schools of his native township. About the age of seventeen he went to Pashall, where he served a long and faithful apprenticeship to a carpenter, and gained a thorough knowledge of every department of the building trade. On attaining his majority he set out as a journeyman, and finally located in Darby, where he entered upon a business as contract builder on his own account. Having developed excellent business qualifications, he was not only successful in his personal affairs, but he rendered a most useful service to the community in building up its material interests. At the same time he commanded the confidence of the people to such a degree that he was called to various positions of honor and trust. Active in borough affairs, he was many years a representative in the council, and for five years he was a justice of the peace. In 1887, having reached the age of sixty-five years, after an industrious business career of nearly fifty years, he retired from active concerns and took up his residence in a beautiful home of his own building at Sharon Hill.

March 29, 1849, Mr. Bonsall was married to Miss Susan Shaw, a daughter of John and Elizabeth Shaw, of Darby township. She was a woman of noble character and her death (in 1893) was sincerely deplored by all who knew her. On March 19, 1900, Mr. Bonsall was married to Mary Jane Davis, widow of Morris Davis, deceased, and a daughter of William and Blanche (Russell) Peters. Her father was a prominent and highly respected citizen of Philadelphia, who took an active interest in public affairs and was for many years a justice of the peace. His ancestors were of leading families in England and Wales. Mrs. Bonsall was liberally educated in Philadelphia and came to Sharon Hill in girlhood. She is possessed of all womanly attributes, and in her home dispenses a gracious hospitality to large circles of appreciative friends.

Moses Bonsall (38) married Mary Fowler, daughter of Maurice and Catharine Fowler, and had children, Samuel, born 1792; David, born 1794; Benjamin, born 1 mo., 8, 1796; Mary, born 1799; Rachel, born 1801.

Benjamin Bonsall, son of Moses and Mary (Fowler) Bonsall, married Sarah Watkins, born 2 mo., 12, 1806, died 9 mo., 15, 1895, daughter of Enoch and Hannah Watkin. They had twelve children, Elmira, born 6 mo., 21, 1825, living with her brother Moses; Moses, born 12 mo., 3, 1826; Mary Ann, born 11 mo., 9, 1828; Lewis Knoll, born 5 mo., 30, 1830; William, born 8 mo., 13, 1832; Enoch, born 1 mo., 6, 1835; Hannah Watkin, born 9 mo., 25, 1836; Benjamin Warner, born 5 mo., 23, 1839; Charles, born 12 mo., 16, 1841; Henry, born 7 mo., 24, 1843; Sarah Knoll, born 8 mo., 29, 1845; Rachel Elizabeth, born 9 mo., 20, 1847. Of these Hannah married Mordecai Shaw; Rachel married Humphrey Marshall, and Sarah married Frank Malin.

Moses Bonsall, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Watkin) Bonsall, was born at Yeadon, Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, December 3, 1826. He was educated in the public schools of his native township, and after leaving school became apprenticed to a stonemason. After the expiration of his term of service he engaged in bricklaying, and he followed that employment industriously during the greater part of his life, and bore a full share in the upbuilding of the village and surrounding country. He retired in 1895 to enjoy the rest and quietude well earned by a life of active labor. He was reared in the faith of his fathers, and was averse to all connection with public affairs. He has ever been highly regarded in the community for his excellence of character and for the family whom he has reared.

Mr. Bonsall married Anna Maria, a daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth (Wise) Bonsall, who were for many years residents of Yeadon. Born of this marriage were the following children: Ellen, who married Theodore Patterson, and who resides near Clifton, Delaware county; and Ida, who married Samuel C. Malin, of Delaware county. The mother of these children died, and Mr. Bonsall married Margaret E., a daughter of Joseph C. and Lydia (Carr) Bonsall, and of this marriage were born the following children: Louis C., who married Mary Boyd, of Delaware county; Laura, who is living at home, and Jacob and Anna Maria, who both died young.

Samuel Bonsall (40) married Elizabeth Fowler, daughter of Maurice and Catharine Fowler, and had children: Martha, born 7 mo., 14, 1795; Ann, born 9 mo., 7, 1797; Joseph Coulton, born 5 mo., 30, 1800; Maurice Fowler, born 10 mo., 11, 1802; Phebe, born 4 mo., 30, 1805; Jacob Warner, born 8 mo., 3, 1807; Joshua, born 2 mo., 6, 1810; Hannah Fowler, born 8 mo., 30, 1813; Samuel, born 6 mo., 29, 1816; Elizabeth E., born 12 mo., 26, 1818. Of these, Joseph C. married Lydia Carr, and Joshua married Elizabeth Wise.

The children of Joseph and Lydia Bonsall (30 and 15) were Margaret, Martha, married to Moses Wells, James, Susannah, Lydia, married to Aaron Palmer, Sarah, married to John Marshall, and Joseph. The sons left no descendants. Moses and Martha Wells had a daughter Martha, who became the mother of Lydia Carr, wife of Joseph C. Bonsall.

Jonathan Bonsall (34), son of Enoch and Ann, of Darby, was married 3 mo., 9, 1763, at Merion Meeting, to Elizabeth Evans, daughter of John Evans, late of Merion. By her he had eight children; Caleb, born 2 mo., 25, 1764, died 4 mo., 2, 1833; John, born 10 mo., 19, 1765; Levi, born 11 mo., 5, 1767; Isaac, born 9 mo., 29, 1769; Jonathan, born 12 mo., 30, 1770; Evan, born 10 mo., 5, 1772; Reuben, born 6 mo., 10, 1774, died 4 mo., 1847, and Jesse, born 2 mo., 25, 1776. Jonathan married for his second wife Margaret Crozier, who bore children, Charles (1) and Charles (2), and daughters, Elizabeth, born 6 mo., 27, 1781, died same year, and Ann, born 7 mo., 2, 1786, died 7 mo., 1816.

Caleb Bonsall, eldest son of Jonathan, was married 6 mo., 16, 1788, to Mary Noblitt, daughter of John and Elizabeth Noblitt. Her death occurred 4 mo., 13, 1829. Their children were John; Israel, born 11 mo., 28, 1790; Jonathan S., Mary Ann, Elizabeth, Caleb, born 2 mo., 7, 1799; Mary, born 2 mo., 14, 1801; Amy, born 2 mo., 10, 1803; and Reuben, born 1 mo., 28, 1805.

Caleb Bonsall, Jr., born 2 mo., 7, 1799, was married 6 mo., 5, 1822, to Margaret Waddell, born 10 mo., 8, 1799, died 12 mo., 19, 1877, daughter of John and Hannah Waddell. To them were born the following children: John W., born 7 mo., 25, 1823, died unmarried; Reuben F., born 10 mo., 17, 1824, married Elizabeth Bonsall; Job T., born 9 mo., 11, 1827, married Hannah Waddell and Elizabeth Bullock; Caleb B., see below; Mary Ann, born 2 mo., 24, 1832, married Joseph Wells, of Concord; William B., born 4 mo., 3, 1834, married Katherine Connell; Harlan T., born 4 mo., 6, 1836; Ann Eliza, born 3 mo., 5, 1838.

Caleb B. Bonsall, fourth child in the family last named, was born in Ridley township, Delaware county, 12 mo., 18, 1829, and received his education in the public schools of the neighborhood. He engaged with his father on the homestead farm until his marriage, when he removed to his present place of residence, in Yeadon. Successful in his calling, he was at the same time a public-spirited citizen, and bore a full share in community affairs. He was a leader in promoting all public enterprises, and was particularly active in promoting the construction and maintenance of good roads, his efforts in this direction dating from a time when comparatively little attention was given to this important subject, and when progress was dependent upon unceasing agitation. He was for many years a prominent member of Orphans' Rest Lodge, No. 132, I. O. O. F., at Darby, and he was one of but a few whose services in behalf of the lodge were so conspicuously useful as to merit the reward of a gold medal. For some years past, Mr. Bonsall has been living in comparative retirement, resting after a life of arduous labor in the enjoyment of a delightful home and secure in the affection of a host of friends who hold him in regard for his genialty of disposition and his neighborly sympathy.

Mr. Bonsall married Sarah Bonsall, a daughter of Joseph C. and Lydia (Carr) Bonsall, old and highly respected citizens of Delaware county. The children born to this marriage were: 1. Emma Josephine; 2. James Harvey, who married Ellen Boyd; 3. Reuben F., who married Mary Smith, of Delaware county; 4. John Lawrence, who married Fanny Jones; 5. Margaret E., who married Arlington C. Frasier, of Petersburg, Kent county, Delaware.

HON. SAMUEL EDWARDS. The following account of the life of this distinguished man is taken from an address delivered by Hon. John B. Hinkson before the Delaware County Historical Society, at a meeting held in Media, September 26, 1898.

Samuel Edwards was born in Delaware county on March 12, 1785. He died in the city (then borough) of Chester, on November 21, 1850.

He was of Welsh descent. His father's name was Abner. He read law with William Graham, at Chester, and was admitted to the bar of Delaware county on April 30, 1806. He devoted his time to his profession, but did not neglect those duties which every citizen owes to his fellows. He was not a politician by profession, nor did he make public preferment his chief aim, but when entering into public affairs seemed to be his duty he was not disobedient to the people's call and gave to the community the benefit of those sterling qualities which he evidenced in his profession and in his private life. Though he was opposed to the beginning of the war of 1812, yet, when the war was begun, his love of country induced him not only to support the government by his words, but constrained him to enter into the contest personally. And in this he evinced that character of retirement and modesty which was noticeable in him all through his life. Seeking no prominence, but only desiring to perform his duty, he became a private in the Sixteenth Company, of Mifflin Guards, of which Samuel Anderson was captain, and was in active service during the latter part of 1814.

John P. Roach

In politics he was a Democrat and was elected to the state legislature in 1814, while he was away in the military service. He served during the sessions of 1814 and 1815 and was re-elected for the sessions of 1815 and 1816. He was a member of Congress from Delaware county during the term 1819-1821 and again during the term 1825-1827. His services in Congress were of such a character as to bring him into much public notice, and his advice and counsel on public affairs were thereafter much sought and he was credited with having great influence with several subsequent administrations. Prominent men in National affairs were visitors to his home in Chester. He was one of the committee appointed to receive General Lafayette on his visit here in 1825. In 1831 he was chief Burgess of Chester. From 1838 until his death Mr. Edwards was a director of the Bank of Delaware County; he was also a director of the Delaware County Mutual Insurance Company. From 1838 to 1842 he was inspector of customs at Chester.

The Chester Republican, in commenting upon the death of Mr. Edwards, said: "Few men living possessed in so eminent degree the exalted and ennobling qualities of the soul. Whether looked upon as a private or a public citizen, or as a professional gentleman, equability of temperament, ingenuousness, sincerity and strict integrity distinguished his earthly pathway." A writer of the time in speaking of Mr. Edwards says: "The temperament of Mr. Edwards was such that he could not attain a position amongst his fellow men which he did not deserve. Unassuming, indisposed to push himself forward, shrinking from personal conflict with those around him, he was rather of those who live and died in the bosom of their families, and, unless possessed of more than ordinary talents, are little known beyond the domestic circle. The attainment of position by such men is a sure proof of ability.

3 x

They are never overrated." Speaking of his younger days the same writer says, "Those who knew him at that age describe him as a young man of good abilities and attainments, but diffident to a fault; so much so, that for a long while he was unable to appear as an advocate. Perseverance and a consciousness of his powers of mind, however, soon enabled him to take a stand amongst his professional competitors, second to few. This was one of his marked characteristics through life." And again, he says, "As a counsellor, Mr. Edwards was prudent and cautious. In addressing a jury, his language was chaste and unaffected. He was not eloquent, he used no redundancy of expression, made no effort at display; but by the simplicity and aptness of his remarks, by his strict regard for truth, which he never lost sight of even in the most exciting contents, he exercised an influence over those who heard him, which many a more eloquent man would have been glad to attain." "To his fellow-members of the bar, most of whom had been his students, his behavior was uniformly kind and courteous. In the most warmly contested causes he never suffered a harsh word to escape him. He was a man of amiable manners, of strict integrity, faithful to the numerous trusts reposed in him, and one whose place in the community will not be easily filled."

JOHN B. ROACH. When the annals of the American republic come to be fully written, the achievements of the great captains of industry who have organized and conducted the mighty manufacturing establishments which have been the most pronounced development of the last century will come in for a large share of attention. The men who by their skill and ability have paved the way for the great material wealth of the nation and the pre-eminence of American industrial activity, will come to be reckoned as the peers of the statesmen and warriors and scholars of the times in the records of the American people.

The name of Roach is so essentially connected with ship-building in the United States that no history of this important industry could well be written without recounting the work of the father and son who have had so much to do with the inception and construction of the American navy and merchant marine. Indeed, for more than a third of a century, the record of ship construction on this side of the Atlantic has been largely the history of the Roach firm.

The story of the life of the elder Roach, reading like a chapter from fiction, is widely known. The history of the Irish lad, who came here seeking for work, and, little by little, accumulated experience, wealth and reputation until at the time he was stricken down, the victim of a persecution inspired by political malice, he was the leading shipbuilder and one of the largest employers of labor on this continent, has been told by nearly every writer upon the men of achievement of the nineteenth century, and has furnished a favorite topic for those who would point out the marvelous possibilities of our land. John Roach's fame as a great organizer and executive, as a thinker and writer upon subjects relating to his business and the economics of trade and transportation, with especial relation to shipping and the maintenance of navies, is secure. History also gives him credit for the manly qualities of mind and heart which made him a faithful friend and an exemplary employer as well as a citizen of the highest value. John B. Roach, the son, has followed in his father's footsteps, and the honor which surrounds the family name has been augmented and maintained by the efforts of the son who, trained in his father's policies, has worthily carried on his work.

John Baker Roach was born in the city of New York on December 7, 1839. He was second in a family of seven sons and two daughters. His father, born in 1813, on Christmas day, had come to the United States from his home in Mitchelstown, county Cork, Ireland, in 1831, and while a workman at the Allaire Works, Howell, New Jersey, had married Emeline Johnson, the daughter of a worthy family in Monmouth county. The Roche family was a prominent one in Ireland, for the name is, correctly, Roche, and the elder Roach was the son of a merchant, his people being well-to-do for the time and locality.

John B. Roach's boyhood was spent in and about New York. His father, already in succession an employing founder, an engine builder and a contractor for large engineering projects, gave him the advantages of education which were at the time readily accessible, and after a course at a good academic institution in Green county, New York, the young man went into the office of a merchant to get business experience. His health failing, he was obliged, about the time he became of age, to leave the city, and several of the best years of his life were spent on a farm in Dutchess county, New York. He was married in 1861 to Mary Caroline Wallace, the daughter of David and Gertrude Wallace, of Staatsburg, New York, and then was begun a happy association which has done much, undoubtedly, to round out symmetrically John B. Roach's useful life.

The business of the firm of John Roach & Son, which had absorbed several old-established foundry and machine concerns in New York, had grown in 1868 to such an extent that the Morgan Iron Works, at the foot of East Ninth street, in New York city, had been added. This was one of the largest and most complete plants of the kind in the business at the time, and its acquisition placed the Roach firm in the front ranks of engineering contractors. John B. Roach, always his father's confidential associate, had kept in close touch with the affairs of the firm, and when, in 1871, the shipyard at Chester, Pennsylvania, was purchased, and the preparations were under way to establish the business which has made the Roach name most famous, it was decided that the younger Mr. Roach should assume the active direction of matters at the works. So, in the fall of 1871, John B. Roach moved his family to Chester, and there, in the old city on the Delaware, which he has seen grow by leaps and bounds from a sleepy river town to one of the most noted industrial centers in the country, he has done his life's work.

The Reaney, Son & Archbold shipyard at Chester, which had been purchased by the firm of John Roach & Son, was reorganized into the Delaware River Iron Shipbuilding and Engine Works, with John Roach as president and John B. Roach as secretary of the corporation and the personal representative of his father, the owner, upon the ground. John Roach rarely came to Chester more frequently than once a week, so that the active direction of matters at the shipbuilding plant at once devolved upon the son.

The Chester yard was already a fairly well equipped shipyard, having been founded in 1860 as a building and repair yard, and a number of vessels had been constructed there, including several monitors and other ships for the government. The yard has a river frontage of about a quarter of a mile on the widest and deepest portion of the Delaware river channel, and is one of the finest natural sites for a shipyard that is to be found in the world. Immediately upon the purchase of the property, the Roach firm set out to build iron steamships upon a scale theretofore unheard of in the United States. New steamship lines were established and the old ones encouraged to add to their fleets the new iron ships which the old shipmasters, wedded to their bulky wooden hulls, were wont to sneeringly speak of as "tin boats." One after another almost all of the steamship companies operating under the American flag placed orders for Roach ships, and in three years the force of workmen had increased to nearly two thousand, while in the New York works and the affiliated industries engaged in supplying materials for the operations of the shipyard, as many more were engaged.

Here, for a third of a century, the foundries, forges and shops have turned out iron and steel steamships which have included among their number many of the most noted vessels which have flown the American flag. At the time the business was started under the Roach name, the number of American-built iron vessels could almost be counted upon the fingers of the hands, so that in building up its business the Roach yard had to blaze the way in an almost unknown direction. During the past thirty-two years, however, no fewer than 104 first-class steamships for merchant service, ten vessels for the United States navy and forty-seven other craft, including steamboats, ferry-boats, yachts and other vessels for various purposes have been contracted for and completed by the Roach Company. The aggregate value of this work is in the neighborhood of fifty millions of dollars, and about half of this immense sum has been distributed in wages in Chester as a result of the shipyard operations. The great works have educated one of the finest bodies of mechanics to be found in any industry in the world, and Chester's ship artisans are to be found in every shipyard on this continent, in leading positions of trust and skill. During all these years, too, although outside agitators have often endeavored to spread dissatisfaction among the workmen, the plant has never been closed by a strike, it having been Mr. Roach's policy to deal with his operatives directly and to listen in person to every legitimate complaint.

John B. Roach has been personally familiar with the details of the construction of every vessel which has been laid down in the yard, and few men in any business have the grasp of a complicated industry that he has of the shipyard, with its score of trades so different in their natures. The benders and punchers and fitters-up and riveters and chippers and caulkers who erect the steel body of the ship; the boilermakers, blacksmiths, molders, machinists, engineers, coppersmiths, sheet-iron workers and pipe-fitters, who fashion and install the power and machinery; the ship-carpenters who prepare the ship's berth and lay her decks and rails and finally send her down the ways into the element that is to be her home; the carpenters and joiners and carvers and polishers and painters and decorators and upholsters who build the cabins and finish them for palatial occupation, the riggers who fit out the ship with her equipment ready for sea, with their other affiliated trades, all of which are carried on in this big establishment, recognize Mr. Roach as a critical judge of their handiwork and respect his knowledge of all their intricate duties. And one of the best evidences that he knows and requires good workmanship is the record of the Roach ships, and the fact that whole lines of vessels have been built by him, the owners returning for new vessels, as needed, to the builders of their earlier ships. The first ship undertaken by the Roach firm was the "City of San Antonio," a small vessel, which, after thirty-one years of service, is still in good condition, staunch and seaworthy. This vessel was for the Mallory line, or the New York and Texas Steamship Company, and at this writing the "San Jacinto," a magnificent twin-screw steamship of nearly 6,000 tons, the finest coasting steamer ever constructed, is being completed for the same line.

During its more than three decades of work, the Roach shipyard has, in hewing out the way for the progress of American shipbuilding, built the first large iron steamship ever turned out in the United States, which was the Pacific Mail Steamship "City of Peking," launched March 18, 1874, and which was at the time of her completion, the largest ship in the world, with the sole exception of the misfit "Great Eastern." The "City of Peking" now, after twenty-eight years of continuous service, during which time she has made scores of roundtrips across the Pacific Ocean, is still a leading ship of her line, and her machinery is as good as the day it was installed. The Roach yard built the first compound engines ever built in this country, the first iron sailing ship and the first steel vessels, the splendid "Chicago," "Boston," "Atlanta" and "Dolphin," the beginning of our new navy. The largest steamboat, the splendid "Priscilla," of the Fall River Line, is also a Roach product, while the noble ships of the Mallory Line, the New York and Cuba Mail, the Panama Line, the Pacific Mail, the American-Hawaiian, the Maine Steamship Company, the Savannah Line, the Old Dominion Line, the Pacific Coast Steamship Company and numerous other corporations have been built in the Chester yard. The work is being vigorously pushed forward now, and it looks as though John B. Roach might complete an even greater number and tonnage of ships during his presidency of the company than were built during the time that his father was in supreme command. Upon the death of John Roach, in 1887, John B. Roach was elected president of the Delaware River Iron Shipbuilding and Engine Works, and he has since had complete charge of the entire business.

Although his work in connection with the shipyard occupies him very completely, John B. Roach finds time to cultivate the social side of life. He is, however, very domestic in his tastes, and the family home at Eighth and Kerlin streets, in Chester, seldom misses him after nightfall. Mr. Roach is a member of the Union League, of Philadelphia, the Engineers' Club, of New York, and the Penn Club, of Chester, but his principal pleasure and relaxation is in his home. He is also a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce, and is a director in the Seaboard Steel Casting Company, the Chester National Bank and the Cambridge Trust Company, besides being identified with various other corporations in different lines of business.

Mr. and Mrs. Roach have had eleven children, five of whom grew to maturity. The eldest, Sarah E., became the wife of Charles E. Schuyler, of New York, but died in 1893, leaving no surviving child; the second, Emeline Wallace, married, in 1892, William C. Sproul, of Chester, now president of the senate of Pennsylvania, and has two children, Dorothy Wallace Sproul and John Roach Sproul; the third, Mary Garretta, married, in 1893, Dr. Frederick Farwell Long, of Chester, and has two children, Sarah Schuyler Long and Frederick Farwell Long, Jr.; the fourth, John, married, in 1899, Hortense Moller, of Hoboken, New Jersey, and resides in New York; and the fifth, William McPherson, is unmarried and resides at home.

ISRAEL MORTON MADDOCK, deceased, for many years a prominent factor in the agricultural interests of Chester township, was born December 12, 1811, in Ridley township, near where Eddystone is now located. He is a descendant of Henry Maddock, who came to this country from Cheshire, England, in 1681. He and his brother-in-law, James Kenerly, purchased fifteen hundred acres of land in Springfield township. He was elected a member of the assembly and served from 1684 to 1686, and in 1690 Mr. Maddock returned to England. In 1701 his son, Mordecai Maddock, settled in Pennsylvania and became a resident of the town of Springfield. He brought with him from Great Britain letters from the Nottingham Monthly Meeting for himself and wife Sarah; she died soon after their arrival here. He was one of the speakers in the Friends' meeting and was active in having the meeting established in Chester, his name being associated with Caleb Pusey in some business transactions concerning it. There is no record of his death. His sister or his daughter Jane, married George Maris, and his son Mordecai married, November 8, 1733, at Concord, Dorothy Roman, of Chichester, and the witnesses to the ceremony were Henry, John, Benjamin, James and Elizabeth Maddock. Both he and his father were members of the Friends' meeting.

Another son, John Maddock, bought three hundred acres of land in Springfield township, September 28, 1733. This is the land on which the old West house was built in 1725. It was afterwards transferred to his brother James, whose wife was Susanna; they were the parents of Henry, who died in 1765 unmarried; William; Rebecca; Isaac; Jacob and Jesse.

William Maddock, grandfather of Israel Mor-

FIRST MEETING HOUSE AT CHESTER, BUILT 1693.

This, the first meeting house in Chester, was doubtless completed in 1693. The picture is taken from Dr. Smith's "History of Delaware County." In 1736 a larger meeting house was built on another lot, and this property was sold to Edward Russell, who probably added an attic story and the back building of brick, in order to adapt it to use as a dwelling house.

ton Maddock, served in the capacity of captain during the progress of the Revolutionary war, and was the owner of the old West property in Swarthmore, Delaware county, where Swarthmore College is now situated, and the original deeds and transfer have been presented to the college. The main document is a grant by William Penn to Henry Maddock and James Kenerly of fifteen hundred acres of land located in the province of Pennsylvania. It bears the date of 1681 and the signature of the founder of the state; it was recorded at the "Rolls Office," of Philadelphia, on the fourth day of ninth month, 1687. The second document is a transfer by Henry Maddock of his interest in the grant to his son, and is dated August 29, 1701; it mentions as a consideration the sum of twenty shillings, good and lawful money of England. William Maddock married Isabella Cahoon, January 5, 1762, in Springfield. On August 26, 1774, he executed a mortgage on ninety-seven acres of ground in Springfield to James Crozer, which he afterward sold to him. Henry conveyed his property in 1765 to William. William was commissioned on May 12, 1777, captain of a company in the Third Battalion under Colonel Caleb Davis. He died intestate, and letters of administration were granted to his son Thomas, March 18, 1800. His children were Thomas, Jesse, James and William. His brother married Eunice Worrell July 5, 1786, and he died in 1821. His son Jesse married a Miss Lewis and lived in Springfield. He had one daughter, Sally Shearer; she had two daughters, but no grandchildren. Thomas and William settled in Philadelphia. Thomas had one daughter, Anne, who married Caleb Dobbins, and had several sons. William left one daughter, Isabella, who married Randolph Eyre.

James Maddock, son of William Maddock, was born in Springfield, Pennsylvania, and acquired his education in the common schools of the district. He married Rebecca Morton, who died leaving one daughter, Sarah, who married Daniel Worrell, and had two daughters, Sarah and Rebecca, who married the Jefferis brothers. Sarah was born May 4, 1797, and is the grandmother of Dr. D. W. Jefferis, ex-mayor of Chester, and his cousin, State Senator Phanner E. Jefferis, of West Chester. His second wife was Mary Morton, whom he married April 17, 1802, in Philadelphia. She was a sister of his first wife and a daughter of Israel Morton, whose son, Israel Morton, served in the war of 1812 and died shortly after, unmarried. Israel Morton, first named, was a son of Tobias Morton, a first cousin of John Morton, the signer of the Declaration of Independence. Tobias Morton was a son of Lawrence (died 1718) and Bregeta Morton; he lived on King's Highway, in what is now Sharon borough; he died in 1769.

James Maddock first located where Eddy-stone is now located. He and Mr. McIlvaine had a sawmill on Ridley creek, where the mill now stands at Leipersville. In 1817 he purchased the farm, on a part of which the station of Crum Lynne is now situated, and a part is now in the possession of a great-grandson. He and a number of others were instrumental in having a stone school-house built there, there being no schools in that vicinity, and he was a trustee up to the time of his death. Before his death he divided his property and gave it to his children, and built for himself the frame house on the ridge between Crum Lynne and Leipersville, which he left to his son Thomas and where he died October 7, 1848. He is buried in the old Episcopal graveyard in Chester. His children were Mordecai, James, Mary, Israel, William and Thomas. James and Mary died young. Mordecai married Catherine Longacre; both are buried in Baltimore. William married Hanna Lownes, and built the stone house in Crum Lynne, on the property left by his father in 1844, and died February 29, 1884; he is buried in the Media cemetery. His wife died May, 1896, and left one son, Lownes.

Israel M. Maddock, son of James and Mary Maddock, attended the common schools of the neighborhood, and later was a pupil in the schools of Chester. Early in life he evinced a fondness for reading good literature, which was stimulated and encouraged by one of his teachers, Samuel Lytle, who collected a primitive circulating library by having each scholar contribute a book. A few years before marriage his father settled him on the Stone Creek farm, just opposite Swarthmore avenue, Ridley Park. After marriage they lived on the farm until February, 1865, when he purchased the homestead farm and one hundred acres of land from Robert McCay, his father-in-law. In February, 1865, he removed to Carterville, where for many years he devoted his attention to the duties that devolved upon him in the successful management of his farm; he also took an active interest in politics, having served one term as school director and one as supervisor of Chester township. In 1871 he had a severe illness which left him an invalid, but although he regained his strength in a measure he never again resumed active pursuits.

October 31, 1839, Mr. Maddock married Miss Margaret McCay, daughter of Robert McCay, of Carterville, Pennsylvania. She was born in Carterville, Chester township, July 16, 1817. Her grandfather, Robert McCay (son of William), whose wife was Rachel Collett, was born July 14, 1753. He was a private in Captain David Cowpland's company of Chester county militia in the Revolutionary war. (See Pennsylvania archives, second series, X, 14, 72.) After the war (May 1, 1789) he was commissioned a lieutenant in the Pennsylvania military, his commission signed by Governor Thomas Mifflin. He was a deacon in the Brandywine Baptist church, Concord township, from 1810 to 1823. He was buried so near the church that when it was enlarged the graves of himself and wife were covered by it. His children were William, James, Robert (2d), Margaret, Rachel, Rebecca and Eliza. Robert (2d), born July 10, 1783, married Mary Delaplaine June 11, 1807, and died July 24, 1864. Their children were Rachel, James, Mary, Robert, Margaret, Rebecca, Jane, William and John.

William, great-grandfather of Margaret (McCay) Maddock, was a son of Robert, who died in New Castle, Delaware, prior to 1794. William was enrolled as a private in the Fourth Company, Pennsylvania Regiment, Continental Infantry, as may be seen by reference to volume 1, page 387. Pennsylvania archives, edition of 1895. On the maternal side Margaret McCay was a descendant of Nicholas De la Plaine, a Huguenot, who came in 1657 from France to New York, married a daughter of Pierre Cresson, and they were the parents of nine children. Pierre Cresson built his residence in what is now the Bowery, New York, and raised many beautiful flowers in his yard, to such an extent that his neighbors emulated his example and the street was known as the "Bower" and later called the Bowery. A portrait of the father of Nicholas De la Plaine was in the possession of Mrs. H. W. Fisher, of New York city, as late as 1882. According to Alden's "American Epitaphs" he died in France at the extreme age of one hundred and five years. James De la Plaine, son of Nicolas De la Plaine, lived in Germantown, Pennsylvania, and his wife was Hanna. Their son James was born in New Castle in 1695, and married Ann Jones in 1737. Their son Nehemiah was an officer in the Revolutionary war, and there is in the record and pension office in Washington the name of Captain Delaplaine, First Battalion Delaware Troops, New Castle Company, Revolution. Nehemiah De la Plaine married Mary Marshall at Old Swedes church, Philadelphia, October 14, 1755, and settled at Newport, Delaware, and he survived his two sons, dying in 1802. His sons were James and Samuel. James, born July 19, 1756, married Mary Kirk and they were the parents of Mary Delaplaine McCay.

The children of Israel M. and Margaret (McCay) Maddock are: 1. Mary C.; 2. Sarah Jane, wife of Elias H. West; they were married December 19, 1878, by Friends' ceremony at home in Chester township, and are the parents of one child, Edith N. West; 3. James D., who is a farmer in Middletown township; he married Sarah Wooley, of West Chester, March 23, 1886, in West Chester, by Friends' ceremony, and the following named children were born to them—Roland, Frank, deceased, and Norman Maddock; 4. Robert M., who died at the age of eight years; 5. Margaret Anne, wife of James Gamble, of Chester, married December 28, 1871, at the home by Dr. James M. Pendleton, and their children are Ella, Anna and John Gamble; 6. Caroline H.; 7. Kate L., wife of Horace W. Fairlamb, married September 15, 1875, at home, by Dr. James M. Pendleton, and they are the parents of four children—Walter, deceased, Caroline, Margaret and Horace Fairlamb; 8. Alfred M., who is a hardware merchant, a member of the firm of Powell & Maddock, of Philadelphia; he married, October 26, 1882, Eliza Garrett, of West Philadelphia, and their children are Henry and Percy Maddock; 9. William W., who is a druggist.

On October 31, 1889, Mr. Maddock and his wife celebrated their golden wedding, in the presence of seventy-five guests, in the same room in which they were married, and in the same house in which his wife was born and which her father built in 1817. Seven years later they celebrated their fifty-seventh anniversary in the same place. Mr. Maddock died January 7, 1898, and was interred in the Chester Rural cemetery. He was the last trustee of the old school at Crum Lynne. He was survived by his widow, who is still living and very active, and although now (1903) in her eighty-fifth year, she manages the farm of one hundred acres very successfully. By his will Mr. Maddock left all his property to his wife as long as she should live.

Thomas H. Maddock, deceased, a brother of Israel M. Maddock, was a worthy descendant of an old and honored English ancestry. He was born May 15, 1820, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His preliminary education was acquired in the district school, after which he pursued a course of study in the profession of law at Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where in 1855 he was chosen to represent the town in the state legislature.

April 18, 1850, Mr. Maddock married Miss Rebecca T. Perce, a daughter of John and Rebecca Morton Perce, and a great-granddaughter of John S. Morton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Their children are: Henry, born June 3, 1851, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, married March 16, 1881, Anne Catherinae Loag, and they have three children; William W., born January 5, 1853, in Delaware county, died in October, 1854, aged twenty-one months; Charlton, born in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, March 10, 1855; and Thomas Edgar, born in Delaware county, May 25, 1864. The father of these children died December 15, 1883, in Osborn county, Kansas, where he is buried.

◆◆◆◆◆

GARNETT PENDLETON. The Pendletons were originally from Manchester, England, where the name was well known, some of them being in public life as early as the reign of Henry VIII.

Philip Pendleton, the progenitor of the Virginia family, was born in Norwich in 1650, and settled in the colony in 1674. While of Cavalier extraction, the family espoused the patriot cause in the Revolution. Edmund Pendleton, the most distinguished of the name, was a member of the first continental congress and attended the sessions of that body in company with Washington, Peyton Randolph, Patrick Henry, Benjamin Harrison and Richard Henry Lee. He presided over the Virginia convention which ratified the constitution of the United States in 1788, and his masterly advocacy of the document gained him the encomium from Jefferson, "Taken all in all, he was the ablest man in debate that I ever met with."

In July of 1774, Henry Pendleton, the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was chairman of a meeting of the freeholders of Cluiper county which condemned the imposition of a tea tax upon the colonies by parliament, and extended sympathy to the sister colony of Massachusetts Bay. Henry Pendleton was a patriot soldier in the Revolutionary war, and was with General Greene in his campaigns in Georgia and the Carolinas.

John Pendleton, son of Henry, having married Frances J. Thompson (afterward aunt of Richard W. Thompson, secretary of the navy under President Hayes), emigrated to Kentucky in 1812. He was for several terms a member of the Kentucky legislature, as was Richard Garnett, whose daughter, Catharine Stockton, was married to James M. Pendleton (son of John) in 1838. Robert Stockton, the grandfather of Catharine Garnett, was also in the patriot army and fought at the battle of the Brandywine. Prior to the Revolution he went from New Jersey to Virginia, and was one of the Baptist ministers imprisoned for preaching without having taken Episcopal orders.

Dr. James M. Pendleton was for sixty years a prominent Baptist minister, filling pastorates in Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio and Pennsylvania. He was driven north in 1862 because of his uncompromising Union principles. He was the author of numerous treatises on theological topics, and was a frequent contributor to the denominational press.

Garnett Pendleton, son of the Rev. James M. and Catharine (Garnett) Pendleton, was born May 24, 1855, at Bowling Green, Kentucky. When he was two years of age his parents removed to Murfreesboro, Tennessee, and five years later they went to Ohio, whence they removed in 1865 to Upland, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, which was thenceforward their home. Until he was fifteen years old young Pendleton was instructed by his parents. He then entered Mt. Holly (New Jersey) Academy, where he passed a year in preparatory studies, and was then admitted to the Rochester (New York) University, from which he was graduated in 1875 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and from which he received the degree of Master of Arts in 1878. For three years beginning in the fall of 1875, he read law in the office of E. Coppee Mitchell (Philadelphia), dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania, and afterward served one year as clerk. In June, 1878, he received the degree of Bachelor of Laws from the University of Pennsylvania, and the same month was admitted to the bar of Philadelphia county. In July, 1879, he was admitted to the bar of Delaware county, and in 1881 entered upon practice in the city of Chester. His tastes and acquirements have led him into civil law practice almost altogether, although at times he has appeared in a criminal case, as in the notable Pfitzenmeyer homicide trial, in which he was one of the counsel for the defense. He made the opening address in the habeas corpus proceedings, and his clear and forcible presentation of the case won the commendation of both bench and bar. His plea before the jury in the trial which followed was characterized by a capable critic as the most logical and finished argument of that exceptionally able and brilliant defense. Mr. Pendleton has, however, given his principal attention to proceedings in the civil courts, and to equity, real estate and orphans' court business. His methodical habits, close accuracy and deep conscientiousness have brought him a reputation which has, in turn, increased his practice in these lines to great proportions. For many years he served as solicitor of the borough of Upland. He made various valuable contributions to the literature of the profession, the most important being a volume of great value, "Debtor's Exemption in Pennsylvania," published in 1886, which is a recognized text-book in general use by the bench and bar of the state.

Mr. Pendleton has been a consistent and useful member of the Upland Baptist church since 1869. His activities extend to various lines of religious and charitable work. His political affiliations have always been with the Republican party, and he has long been recognized as a leader in political affairs. He has frequently served as a member of the Republican county committee; has often appeared as a delegate in county conventions and has frequently taken the stump in advocacy of the principles of the party. He is an orator of fine ability, forceful and eloquent, with excellent command of language, and an intense earnestness that carries full assurance of his sincerity and fair-mindedness. A careful and discriminating reader, he is a man of broad information and well trained literary tastes, and he has appeared to excellent advantage on the lecture platform and as a writer on literary topics. The most notable of his recent addresses are "The Present, the Child of the Past," and "The War of 1812," delivered before the Historical Society of Delaware county, and "The Landing of William Penn," before the Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Dames.

Mr. Pendleton was married, December 30, 1879, to Miss Helena Ward, daughter of Dr. William Ward, missionary to Assam.

He is president of the Cambridge Trust Company of Chester; and is a charter and prominent member of the Penn Club, a social organization comprising the leading professional and business men of the community.

JAMES IRVIN TAYLOR. The Taylor family, from which is descended James Irvin Taylor, of Chester, Pennsylvania, was planted in America by Robert Taylor, who came to this country from Little Leigh, Cheshire, England. On March 3, 1681, he purchased one thousand acres of land in Chester county, Pennsylvania, of which six hundred were in the neighborhood of the present village of Broomall, and four hundred were south of the Springfield water basin, and all was conveyed to him under an original grant from William Penn, on March 3, 1681, and he had a survey made of the ground on November 11, 1682. He was a member of the Friends, or Quakers. He reared a large family of children, and from his first son descended the delightful author and poet, Bayard Taylor, while his seventh son became the progenitor of the branch to which James Irvin Taylor belongs.

The line of descent from Robert Taylor is as follows: Thomas Taylor, who married Mary Howell, and his first son, Thomas Taylor, Jr., married Mary Adams, and his first son, Robert Taylor married for his first wife Mrs. Mary Huelings, nee Empson, and later married Catherine McCloskey, and their first son, Robert Taylor, married Catherine Cummings, of Scotch descent, and their second son, William Taylor, married Jane Boyd, and their second son, Robert Taylor, married Lydia E. Howard, and their first son is James Irvin Taylor. Robert Taylor, great-great-grandfather of James Irvin Taylor, participated in the Revolutionary war, also James Cummings, who was the father of Catherine (Cummings) Taylor, wife of Robert Taylor.

William Taylor, grandfather of J. Irvin Taylor, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 1, 1815. He was a Methodist in religion, and a Republican in politics until his later years, when he became a zealous Prohibitionist. In 1836 he married Jane Boyd, and the pair celebrated their golden wedding fifty years later, surrounded by a large number of their children and grandchildren. They were the parents of seven children: the first three were sons, James W., Robert and Henry, and the others were daughters, Eliza, Mary, Kate and Hannah.

Robert Taylor, father of James Irvin Taylor, was born in 1838, in New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He received an ordinary English education in Delaware county. For some years he was engaged in farming, and he subsequently took up contracting and building. In 1884 he removed to the city of Chester, where he continued in the latter pursuit industriously and successfully, erecting in the one year prior to his demise buildings to the value of nearly one hundred thousand dollars. A man of excellent business qualifications, he was also highly esteemed for his moral worth. A member of the Methodist church from his sixteenth year, he was throughout his life a devout Christian and a most active supporter of the church and its allied institutions. He was for many years a trustee of Trinity church, in Chester, and superintendent of its Sunday-school. He was a strong advocate of temperance, and adhered to the Prohibition party. He was deeply interested in education, and rendered excellent service as a school director in Aston township. He was a member of Benevolent Lodge, No. 50, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, but would never accept from it the pecuniary benefits to which he was entitled at various times.

In 1862 Mr. Taylor was married to Lydia E. Howard, of English descent, a daughter of Benjamin and Henrietta (Miller) Howard; Mrs. Howard was a daughter of Daniel Miller, and he was a son of Daniel Miller, who participated in the Revolutionary war. To them were born five children: James Irvin, William H., Howard D., Ruth W. and Charles W. Taylor, all of whom are living. The father of these children died in March, 1891, deeply regretted by all classes of the community, and particularly so by his church, which adopted resolutions expressive of their deep respect and tender affection for him as a man, a neighbor and a Christian. His widow is yet living (1902) at the age of sixty-two years.

James Irvin Taylor, eldest son of Robert and Lydia E. Taylor, was born August 6, 1863, in Middletown township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He began his education in the public school, and subsequently took instruction for one term in the West Chester State Normal School. He learned the trade of a carpenter, and after his three years' apprenticeship he worked in the residential districts of Philadelphia until his father had established himself in the building business in Chester, when the two became associated. In 1890 he engaged in contracting on his own account. After the death of his father he formed a partnership with his younger brother, Howard D. Taylor, under the firm name of J. I. Taylor & Brother, and they erected twenty-two edifices during the first year. He then resumed business on his own account, and has prosecuted contracting and building with great success to the present time, having during his career been the builder of over four hundred houses; one hundred and sixty-one of these Mr. Taylor erected for himself, and up to the present time (1902) he has disposed of ninety-nine of them. Many of these buildings were for business and public purposes, and a great number were beautiful residences. He was also a contractor for the large car barn of the Union Traction Company in Chester, Pennsylvania. His working force usually numbered about fourteen skilled workmen, and a number of ordinary laborers.

Rich Wehner

While he has been thus active in the building up of the city in the lines of his calling, he has rendered valued service to the community in a public capacity, having served for four years as a member of the city council, and he is now a member of the school board. Mr. Taylor has been instrumental in having the Ninth Street bridge built over Chester creek, and in the building up of West Ninth street, Spruce street, Dupont street, Barclay street, Penn street, Fifth street, and Taylor Terrace, and on the latter named street he is the owner of forty houses. He is a member of the Madison Street Methodist Episcopal church, and in politics is a Republican, casting his votes for such candidates as he deems most worthy of confidence. Mr. Taylor is a member of Leipersville Lodge, No. 263, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a member of Chester Lodge, No. 236, Free and Accepted Masons, of Chester Chapter, No. 258, Royal Arch Masons, of Chester Commandery, No. 66, Knights Templar, Lulu Shrine of Philadelphia, and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, No. 488. Mr. Taylor is a man of broad intelligence, and has kept well abreast of the times in the fields of literature and investigation. In his early manhood he became interested in the science of phrenology, and in 1886 he took a course in the American Institute of Phrenology in New York city, from which he received a diploma as a graduate. He has never cared to utilize his knowledge by professional use of it, preferring to devote his attention to his business, but he has kept himself well read in all advancements of the science and has derived much pleasure from the exercise of his fine talents as a practical amateur phrenologist. In all the relations of life he enjoys the esteem of the community, among whom he is accounted as one of the most worthy and useful of its members.

On October 5, 1887, Mr. Taylor married Emma Beaumont, at the Calvary Episcopal church, at Rockdale, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. James Walker. Mrs. Taylor is a daughter of Richard and Hannah (Mills) Beaumont, both of whom were born in Huddersfield, Yorkshire, England. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are: Robert Leslie, Helen Beaumont, Paul L., deceased, Emma Marguerite, Charles, James Irvin, Frank Howard and Frederick Chester Taylor.

RICHARD WETHERILL. But few persons in the United States can claim family association with a particular locality to the like extent as that which is presented in the instance of Richard Wetherill. In the ninth generation he is a descendant of Joran Kyn (George Keen) to whom the Swedish crown, in 1644, patented the territory upon which the colonial part of the present city of Chester is situated, and whose history has its beginning in that grant to Richard Wetherill's ancestor, the handsome guardsman to Governor Printz. In the same degree he is a lineal descendant from Christopher Taylor, who two centuries and a half ago suffered in the cause of freedom of speech and religious toleration in the mother country. A man of letters and refinement, who, before Penn's coming, sought that liberty of act and thought that were denied to him in the country of his birth; a man whom Proud, the historian, terms "one of the first and principal settlers in the province under William Penn;" who served as a member of the first legislative assembly in the colony, and was a member of Penn's first council, the advisory body to the proprietary in government affairs. Christopher Taylor owned and resided at Tinicum Island, now Tinicum township, Delaware county. In the eighth generation he is descended from James Sandelands, a cadet of the proud Scottish family of Sandelands. It was in his house where the first assembly convened at Chester, in 1682. His many personal acts are interwoven and enter into the story of English colonization on the Delaware, or South, river. In the sixth generation he traces descent from Anthony Sharp, of Dublin, a man of large means, who has made a lasting impression upon the annals of his adopted city, for he was of English birth, and who, as one of the owners of West New Jersey, enters largely into the colonial history of that commonwealth in whose early settlement he played no inconsiderable part.

In the maternal line he traces descent from the West family of Long Crendon, Buckinghamshire, England, to which the title Lord De la Ware appertains, and is a scion of the Delanys of Bally Fine, Queen's county, Ireland. His great-grandfather, Dr. William Delany, served in the Revolutionary army for seven years, while his great-great-uncle, Colonel Sharp Delany, who took part in that struggle, was a personal friend of Washington and a constant associate of "Mad Anthony" Wayne, who made Colonel Delany one of the executors of his will. In the Price line he comes from a sturdy Welsh race who settled in what is now Delaware county two centuries ago. His great-grandfather, John Price, was a soldier in the Pennsylvania Continental Line, whose health yielded to the severe privations to which he was subject in his several years of active mil-its infancy. For two and a half centuries Richard Wetherill, the subject of this sketch, and his ancestors, have been prominently identified with the county of Delaware, which has been the theater of his active business career.

Richard Wetherill, the third son of Robert and Phoebe Ann (Delany) Wetherill, was born in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, September 28, 1850. His father at that time owned and operated the three Wetherill woolen mills, at Manayunk, which, prior to the disastrous panic, were among the first successful woolen manufacturing enterprises in the commonwealth. The boy attended the public schools in Philadelphia, but on the death of his father in the late summer of 1861 the mother removed with her family to Delaware county, and Richard Wetherill became a student at the Chester Academy. At an early age he became a junior clerk in a drug store, but subsequently secured a clerical position with the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railway Company, and part of the time while in that employment he was stationed at Wilmington, Delaware. Soon after attaining his majority, on January 1, 1872, he entered into partnership with his brother, Robert Wetherill, in the building of Corliss engines and boilers and the foundry business, and young as he was, in the allotment of the duties devolving upon the partners, to Richard Wetherill fell the management of the financial affairs of the firm. This distribution of responsibilities in the conduct of the business of the firm of Robert Wetherill & Company, culminated in the most satisfactory results, until from small beginnings and the command of meager capital the works under such direction have become one of the leading industries in the United States, whose product has been distributed in every state and territory in this country, and found sales in Canada, Cuba, Mexico and in far-away China. Richard Wetherill was one of the organizers of the Chester National Bank and was chosen a member of its first board of directors, a position to ity life, and whose death in 1783 was the result of his devotion to the cause of American independence. His great-grandfather, Richard Wetherill, born in 1788, at Rich Hill, county Armagh, was the child of English parents who had removed from Yorkshire to Ireland. That Richard Wetherill, hardly beyond his majority, in 1810 embarked in the manufacture of woolen fabrics in Concord township, Delaware county, when the industrial development of the section was in factory results, until from small beginnings and the command of meager capital the works under such direction have become one of the leading industries in the United States, whose product has been distributed in every state and territory in this country, and found sales in Canada, Cuba, Mexico and in far-away China.

SANDELAND'S RUINS

D. J. Houston

which he has since been annually re-elected. He is a director of the Chester Street Railway Company of Chester, was treasurer and vice-president of the Standard Steel Casting Company, and was president of the Chester Gas Company until the Philadelphia Suburban Gas Company secured ownership of that plant. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Pennsylvania Military College, and director in several of the successful textile industries of Chester. He and his brother Robert are interested in a number of electric railways and industrial enterprises in other localities, all of which are dividend-paying investments. The residences of Richard and Robert Wetherill are among the finest private dwellings in this section of the state.

On December 3, 1878, Richard Wetherill married Ella Larkin, youngest daughter of the late Hon. John Larkin, the first mayor of Chester, and one of the men to whom that city owes its great growth and development. Mrs. Wetherill, as in the case of her husband, traces descent from many of the early settlers of this part of Pennsylvania, who were active in their day and generation. Through several of these Mrs. Wetherill has entered the Society of Colonial Dames of America. To this marriage were born two sons and two daughters.

NOTE.—The Sandelands house was described as follows in a paper read by Mr. H. G. Ashmead before the Delaware County Historical Society, at Media, September 26, 1901:

In the early part of the eighteenth century on the west side of Edgmont avenue below Third street, in the city of Chester, could be seen the foundations of an old building, which, in the period associated with Penn, was known as James Sandeland's double house. It was the most imposing building in Upland and therein Penn convened the first general assembly that ever sat in the province of Pennsylvania. The house had been built with mortar made of oyster shell lime, which proved so utterly worthless, probably because of defective burning, that in the course of twenty odd years the structure showed such signs of decay that it became untenable, fell into ruins, and gradually the materials used in its construction were removed. Shortly after 1800, even the foundations were buried in the accumulation of soil that has taken place during a century. In time its very existence was forgotten, hence tradition for many years gave credit to the Friends' old meeting house which stood on the adjoining lot as the place where the first assembly met.

On July 14, 1893, while excavations were being made for the cellars of a row of commission stores, the foundations of Sandeland's double house were unearthed. An accurate survey of them was made by Walter Wood, assistant city engineer, giving the precise size of the old structure and the distance from the intersection of Third and Edgmont streets. William B. Broomall, Esq., had Mr. Nymetz take a photograph of the unearthed walls for which act he will receive the thanks of coming generations.

In this double house in its pristine glory James Sandelands kept tavern, for the pretentious word hotel had not then found its way into the English language.

CAPTAIN THOMAS J. HOUSTON, deceased, of Chester, Pennsylvania, came from Scotch-Irish ancestry, and had for a remote progenitor Sir Hugh Padvinon, who removed from Scotland to the north of Ireland, where he built upon his estate a village, to which he gave the name of Hughstown and this appellation was changed in time to the form of Houston and was adopted by his descendants. From this ancestor came John Houston, who was born and reared in the north of Ireland. His parents were people of culture and means, and they afforded him an excellent practical education. In his young manhood he made a visit to the United States, where he remained for some years, thence returning to his native land. There he married Elizabeth Boone, also of Scotch-Irish parentage, and a woman of education and deeply religious character, and member of the United Presbyterian church. In 1834 John Houston and his wife, with four children, came to the United States and settled in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, which was destined to be their permanent home. Mr. Houston gave his attention to farming and stock dealing and accumulated large means. He was a man of most exemplary character, and an earnest member of the United Presbyterian church. He was originally a Democrat in politics, but his conscience rebelled against the position of that party with regard to human slavery, and he attached himself to the Republican party in the year of its formation. He died in 1877, at the home of his son, Dr. John Houston, in Philadelphia, surviving his wife, who had died in 1868.

Thomas J. Houston, the first child of John and Elizabeth (Boone) Houston, was born in the United States, his birth occurring January 25, 1836, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He was reared upon the parental farm, and began his education in the public schools, supplementing this instruction with an advanced course in the State Normal School at Millersville. At the age of fifteen he entered a foundry and learned iron moulding, but a year after completing his apprenticeship was obliged to relinquish that severe employment on account of his health. For a time he served as clerk in a blast furnace in Robesonia, but his feelings of patriotism moved him to resign and enter the service of his country when in 1863 the rebel general Lee was preparing to invade the state. Recruiting a company for the Forty-seventh Pennsylvania Emergency Regiment, he was commissioned captain, and commanded it during its term of service, nearly a year, serving in the operations which culminated in the battle of Gettysburg, and in the subsequent pursuit of the rebel army. After being honorably discharged from the army Captain Houston entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, but resigned after a few months to take charge of a blast furnace in Columbia, Pennsylvania. From 1865 to 1869 he had charge of a furnace and ore mines in Dutchess county, New York. In the latter year he was given leave of absence to erect a steam bloomery furnace for Philadelphia capitalists at Greensboro, North Carolina. Upon the successful completion of this task he resumed his former position in Dutchess county, New York, in which he remained until early in 1873. In that year, in the capacity of general manager, he took charge of the works and property of the Iron Cliffs Company, at Negaunee, Michigan, comprising fifty-five thousand acres of land, three blast furnaces and extensive ore mines on Lake Superior. He remained in charge until 1880, when he removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, and became interested with his brother, Charles B. Houston, in the Chester Rolling Mill, and was general manager of the works until they were sold in 1891. In 1889 Captain Houston was called to Roanoke, Virginia, to take charge of the affairs of the Crozer Iron & Steel Company, in which he was a stockholder and director. He remained in charge of the business until December 1st of the same year, when illness obliged him to relinquish his tasks and return home. There he lived a practically retired life in his elegant home at Eighth and Kerlin streets, in Chester, but maintaining oversight of his large mining and other enterprises in various portions of the country. Notwithstanding the large business affairs which demanded his unremitting attention, Captain Houston found time to perform the full duty of a public spirited citizen in community affairs and in forwarding enterprises for the common good. While a resident of Negaunee, Michigan, he served a term as mayor. For six years he was a member of the city council of Chester, Pennsylvania, and was president of that body for three years of the time. He was chairman of the building committee charged with the erection of the Chester Hospital in 1893. In religious faith he was a Quaker and an admirable representative of the body to which he adhered. His political affiliations were with the Republican party, and he was an earnest and enthusiastic advocate of its principles, being frequently a delegate to its state and national conventions.

Captain Houston was married, September 26, 1866, to Miss Susan Slokom, a lady of excellent education and beautiful character, who endeared herself to the community in which she and her husband lived so long through her kindness of disposition and many benefactions. She was a daughter of Samuel Slokom, who was a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and was born in 1817 and died in 1889. He was of English extraction, and a member of the Society of Friends. For nearly thirty years he was justice of the peace, and he also served as county commissioner. He was a man of very large means, and was for many years president of the Christiana Bank.

Captain Houston died September 2, 1895. His death occasioned deep sorrow throughout the entire community, and upon the occasion of his funeral business was practically suspended, all the principal men of affairs halting to pay the last tribute of affectionate regard to one who had been endeared to them through the practice of all those virtues which mark the model Christian neighbor and friend. Mrs. Houston yet survives him.

COLONEL PERRY M. WASHABAUGH, a leading member of the Chester bar and a gentleman of excellent literary attainments, was born in the town of Bedford, Pennsylvania, July 4, 1847, a descendant on the paternal side from German ancestry who settled in the state of Pennsylvania prior to the Revolutionary war, in which they participated, and they have always evinced a military and patriotic spirit. Henry Washabaugh, great-grandfather of Perry M. Washabaugh, came from Germany to this country about the year 1760, and settled in that part of Pennsylvania now known as Franklin county, where he purchased a large tract of land. He served as a captain of volunteers in the Continental army during the struggle for independence, and after the termination of the war returned to his agricultural pursuits.

David Washabaugh, grandfather of Perry M. Washabaugh, was born on the ancestral farm in 1770, and after acquiring his education in the district school he also followed the occupation of farming, becoming in time the owner of one of the best cultivated farms in the county, adjoining the town of Chambersburg. He was elected to fill the position of high sheriff of the county when that office was considered one of the most dignified and important positions a citizen could hold, and he was also entrusted with other offices of trust and responsibility. Mr. Washabaugh was among the first to organize troops for the defense of the country during the war of 1812.

Daniel Washabaugh, father of Perry M. Washabaugh, was born October 17, 1803, and his educational advantages were obtained at Chambersburg, a town always noted for its excellent schools. Wishing to lead a military life, Mr. Washabaugh secured through his own efforts an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point, but as his father required his services on the farm he was unable to enter until he became of age. During the Mexican war of 1847 and 1848 and for years afterward, he held the office of brigade inspector of the military district consisting of five adjoining counties, with the rank of major. Being a strict disciplinarian, a handsome man of pleasing address, passionately fond of good horses and always superbly mounted and equipped, he was considered one of the finest officers in the state. Although Major Washabaugh was quite advanced in years during the war of the rebellion he was offered and accepted the colonelcy of a fine regiment of volunteers, but before his departure for the scene of battle he was induced by his old friend, Governor Andrew G. Curtin, to accept the position of assistant adjutant-general on his staff. This position he filled acceptably during the whole eight years of the old war governor's administration, and it was under his personal supervision that nearly all the vast army of Pennsylvania volunteers were organized, armed and equipped.

In September, 1826, Major Washabaugh married Sarah McLaughlin, daughter of Henry McLaughlin, a wealthy planter and slave-owner whose extensive plantation was situated at State Line, Washington county, Maryland. There were twelve children born to them, three of whom died in early childhood, and the other eight children, six girls and two boys, are all residents of different sections in the United States. Both Major Washabaugh and his wife were active and consistent members of the Presbyterian church at Bedford from the time they came to the town and after their marriage, and he served in the capacity of ruling elder for over half a century. In September, 1876, they celebrated their golden wedding, surrounded by forty-four children and grandchildren, and ten years later the sixtieth anniversary was celebrated at the home of their youngest daughter, Mrs. W. P. Barndollar, in the city of Baltimore. Mrs. Washabaugh died October 31, 1889, at the advanced age of eighty-three years, survived by her husband and children.

Perry M. Washabaugh, second son of Major and Mrs. Washabaugh, commenced his studies in 1858 in the schools of Baltimore, where he remained until the war broke out, when he was sent home. He remained in Bedford, attending school at intervals, when not campaigning with the volunteer troops in that part of the country. After the battle of Gettysburg his father found him with the First New York Cavalry Regiment in the town of Chambersburg; he immediately placed him in charge of Colonel Theodore Hyatt, president of the Pennsylvania Military Academy, and after pursuing the regular course in that institution he graduated with honors in 1865. During the same year the academy was removed from West Chester to Chester, when he was appointed an instructor and remained there until 1869. While engaged in this occupation he studied law under the Hon. John B. Hinkson, a leading and eminent practitioner at the bar. In June, 1869, he appeared before the board of examiners, consisting of the Hon. William Ward, John Hibbert and R. E. Hannum, and although not having attained his majority he passed a very creditable examination, but was unable to be sworn in until the next term of court. He then located at Parker City, Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, where he enjoyed a large and profitable practice. He was a resident of that city during the time when oil was first discovered there, and in the fall of 1873, when all the excitement was over, he returned to Chester, where he has since been actively engaged in the practice of his profession in the orphans' and common pleas court. In 1891 he was private counsel for the defense in the celebrated Fitzmeyer murder case; he attended all the preliminary hearings and managed and arranged every detail for the defense, though he took no active part in the trial in court. There were two lives at stake on the issue, and Colonel Washabaugh, by his untiring energy and able management of the case, with his very able and learned associates at the trial in court, cleared his clients and established a reputation for himself as an expert criminal lawyer second only to his previous standing as a civil practitioner. In 1885 Colonel Washabaugh associated Garnett Pendleton in partnership with himself, under the style of Washabaugh & Pendleton, and during the years of their association they demonstrated their ability to cope successfully with the intricate problems of jurisprudence. In June, 1892, Colonel Washabaugh was sent to England to settle a large estate, and after successfully attending to that business he spent several months traveling through England and on the continent; this was his second trip to Europe, he having visited the Paris Exposition in 1889.

Colonel Washabaugh, ever since his early youth, has always taken a deep interest in military matters, and in May, 1876, was elected captain of Company B, Eleventh Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Pennsylvania; the following year was elected major, and served with his regiment during the Pittsburg labor riots of that year. In 1881 he was elected lieutenant-colonel of the Sixth Regiment Infantry, and was re-elected in 1886 and again in 1891, and on the 23d day of June, 1894, was elected colonel of the Sixth Regiment Infantry, which during his command reached the highest state of efficiency it has ever attained. He resigned that office May 13, 1898. The same year he organized the Cambridge Savings Bank, which proved so successful that out of it, and through the management of Colonel Washabaugh, the present Cambridge Trust Company, one of the most flourishing and successful financial institutions of the city, was organized. He was elected third vice-president, treasurer and trust officer, which position he now occupies.

In politics Major Washabaugh is an ardent Republican, always taking an active interest, and for years he has served as a member of the council, besides holding other positions of trust and responsibility in the community. Fraternaly he is a member and past master of L. H. Scott Lodge, No. 352, Free and Accepted Masons, and of Chester Holy Royal Arch Chapter, No. 258. In religious faith he is a Presbyterian, having been a member since 1864, and a ruling elder in the First Presbyterian church of Chester since 1885.

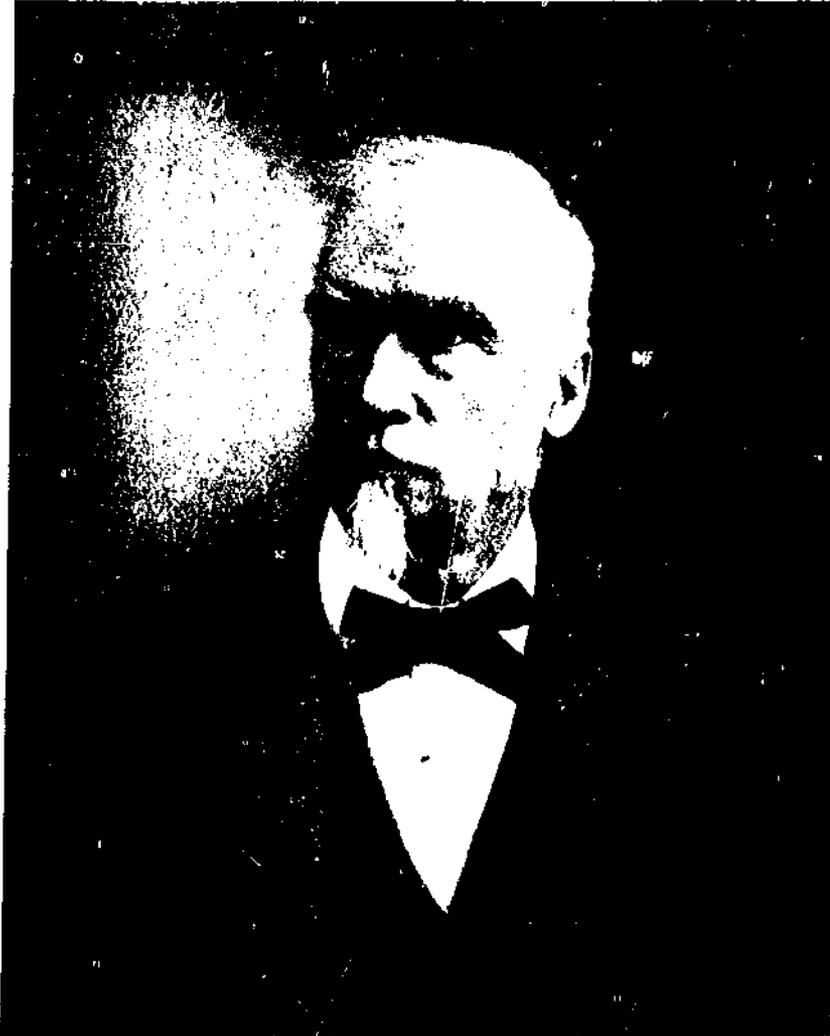

On November 29, 1869, Colonel Washabaugh married Miss Laura H. Walter, daughter of the Hon. Y. S. Walter, of Chester. To them have been born four children: Walter, a graduate of the Pennsylvania Military Academy in the class of 1889, and major of the Sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guards; Fannie, a graduate from Wilson College, Chambersburg; and Frank and Albert Washabaugh.

HON. THOMAS V. COOPER, of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, a veteran journalist, Civil war soldier and one who has rendered useful service to his state and to the nation in various elective and appointive positions of honor and trust during the past third of a century, is a descendant of a splendid New England ancestry. The family was founded in America by William Cooper, who came from England and was identified with the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He took part in King Philip's war, and for his service received a large land grant in New Jersey, upon a part of which now stands the city of Camden. His seven sons settled in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Georgia, and among them was the grandfather of the novelist, James Fenimore Cooper. Hon. Thomas V. Cooper's great-grandfather, settled at Fort Duquesne (Pittsburg), where his son James was born. He served as an orderly under Washington, was subsequently promoted to lieutenant, and it was his distinction to be the oldest Revolutionary soldier present at the welcome given to Lafayette when that distinguished soldier visited Pittsburg in 1824. James Cooper lived to the phenomenal age of ninety-nine years. His eldest son, Major Samuel Cooper, almost equalled him in longevity, living to the age of ninety-seven years, and entering the military service of the country during the Civil war period when seventy-seven years old. Major Cooper was the author of the Scott-Cooper military drill known by his name, and long in vogue in the United States army.

Dr. J. W. Cooper, a son of James Cooper, was born in Pennsylvania. He was a physician, and resided at different times in York, Philadelphia and West Chester, and in the place last named for more than a half century. He was for a brief period a dweller in Ohio, where Thomas V. Cooper was born. The Doctor was captain commanding a company of militia, the Pennsylvania Blues, which took an active part in suppressing the anti-Catholic riots in Philadelphia in 1844. He married Henrietta Fields, of Hagerstown, Maryland, and to them were born seven children.

Thomas V. Cooper, son of Dr. J. W. and Henrietta Cooper, was born in Cadiz, Ohio, January 16, 1835. Having learned the art of printing, in 1855, when twenty years of age, he became associated with Dr. D. A. Vernon in the founding of the "Media Advertiser," which in 1856 became the "Media Advertiser and Delaware County America," and in 1861 the "Delaware County American," its present title, and of this Mr. Cooper has been one of the editors from the initial issue of the parent journal to the present time, the Civil war period excepted. He is one of the very few editors in the state if, indeed, there be another, who with his pen and types aided in the first campaign of the Republican party, in 1856, and who has continued to support its principles and candidates, practically without cessation, to the present time. He was alternate delegate in the national Republican convention in Chicago in 1860, and carried the delegates from his congressional district for Abraham Lincoln. When that sterling character, General Cameron, went out of the contest all of his votes were thrown to Mr. Lincoln and in this way he was nominated. Mr. Cooper was now fully prepared to uphold as a soldier the cause which he had advocated as a journalist. April 19, 1861, the Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania Regiment, while proceeding to the relief of the national capital, was assaulted by a mob in the streets of Baltimore. Shortly afterward Mr. Cooper enlisted in Company C of this regiment, and with it performed the full duty of a soldier for a term of three years and in 41 it was mustered out of service, June 18, 1864, in front of Independence Hall, Philadelphia. During its term of enlistment this noble regiment participated in the siege of Yorktown and the battles of Williamsburg, Seven Pines, Savage Station, White Oak Swamp, Malvern Hill, Second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania Court House. It lost one hundred men at Chancellorsville, and two hundred and sixteen at Gettysburg, where it withstood a desperate rebel charge, and it captured two pieces of artillery at Spottsylvania.

*Very truly yours,
Mrs. C. Cooper*

After the disbandment of his regiment Mr. Cooper repurchased his former interest in the "American," and from that day has directed its editorial management. As his sons came of age, respectively, they became associated with him, and the business is now conducted under the firm name of T. V. Cooper & Sons. The "American" is recognized as the largest and mechanically the most perfect county weekly in the state, and it enjoys a phenomenal patronage, entering nearly every home in one of the richest counties bordering Philadelphia. From early after the close of the Civil war down to the present time Mr. Cooper has been almost continuously in the public service of the state or nation. In 1869 he was elected to the Pennsylvania house of assembly, was defeated in 1871 and was re-elected in 1872. In 1873 he was elected to the state senate, to which body he was returned at each election until 1889, and in 1878 he was president. His conduct as a legislator was characterized by a broad intelligence and a lofty spirit of devotion to public interests, and as a presiding officer he won the admiration of the entire body over which he sat. On retiring from the senate in 1889, Mr. Cooper was appointed by President Harrison to the post of collector of the port of Philadelphia. His service covered a period of four and one-half years, six months beyond the term for which he was commissioned, and he collected for the government, without the loss of a single dollar, the immense sum of eighty million dollars. In 1900 he was again elected to the house of assembly, was re-elected in 1902, and during the ensuing session served upon various important committees. Mr. Cooper has exerted a broad personal influence in political affairs, and has been for many years a strong figure in the conventions of his party. From 1881 to 1889 he was chairman of the Republican state central committee, and in 1902 was treasurer of that body. In religion he inclines to Methodism, and his family to Episcopalianism. He is a member of George W. Bartram Lodge, F. A. M., and of Bradbury Post, G. A. R.

Mr. Cooper was married, in 1858, to Miss Ada F. Turner, a daughter of Mr. Frederick Turner, a well known publisher of Philadelphia. She died in 1901, leaving six children—Frederick T., Thomas V., Percival V., Ada S., who is the wife of Dr. William T. Dickenson, of Media; Nina A., who is the wife of William Ashmead Dyer; and Susan Cooper.

◆◆◆◆◆

DAVID MARSHALL JOHNSON, of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born June 4, 1841, on the old Johnson homestead, at Trainer, which was erected in 1766. He is the youngest son of Benjamin Ford and Mary Ann (Entriken) Johnson. The father was born in the same dwelling, October 31, 1792, and during his entire manhood was prominent in the southeastern section of Delaware county. He had hardly attained majority when he was commissioned captain of a company of Pennsylvania militia, called into service of the United States during the war of 1812. Subsequently he held rank of major and lieutenant-colonel in the military organization of the state. Originally a Federalist, then a Whig and a Republican, he was first commissioned by a Democratic governor as justice of the peace for Lower Chichester, and by re-appointment and election held that office continuously for a period of forty-five years, when on account of advancing years he declined longer to serve in this capacity. In 1845 he was elected county treasurer, and for many years held various township offices which were wholly unsolicited by him. He died November 9, 1871. He was prominently identified with St. Martin's Episcopal church, Marcus Hook, and was one of its vestrymen for nearly sixty years. His remains lie with those of a long line of ancestry in the churchyard of the venerable parish. Mrs. Mary Ann Johnson, who traced her ancestry to the Grubb family, the Swedish family of Coek, Marshall and Entriken, all prominent as early settlers of Delaware county, was a well educated, cultured lady who devoted largely of her time to the intellectual training of her sons and daughters. Of the children born to Benjamin F. and Mary A. Johnson, R. Morgan Johnson became an accomplished scholar and a writer of ability, many of his lyric effusions finding place in standard collections of poetry. Mary E. Johnson is the author of "T'other Day Papers," which attracted wide attention when published from time to time, while her historical articles show research, correctness of statement and lucidity of style. Benjamin D. Johnson made special study of historical and geographical subjects, and in this line was a recognized authority. He was a musician of rare merit.

David M. Johnson attended the public schools of Lower Chichester, and was later a student at the Chester Academy, of which the Rev. Isaac Gray was principal. At eighteen he entered the office of Hon. John M. Broomall, and was admitted to the bar of Delaware county, on June 23, 1862. He remained with his preceptor for four years, until in 1867 he became a member of the law firm of William Ward & Company, composed of William Ward, David M. Johnson and William B. Broomall. The following year Mr. Johnson severed his connection with the firm. In 1872 he was nominated by the Republican party as district attorney, and, the Democrats having made no nomination, he was elected without opposition. He served in that office for three years and was not a candidate to succeed himself. In 1881 he was elected a member of the council of the city of Chester, and was twice re-elected, serving for a period of eight years, when he declined re-nomination. As chairman of the ways and means committee of the council he disposed of four per cent city bonds at a premium, the first time in the history of Chester when the credit of the city reached this standard. The year before, bonds of this character were disposed of at a discount of three per cent. Mr. Johnson's practice has been largely of an advisory character, in the direction of estates, examinations of title to realty, and in the conduct of building associations. In the latter branch of legal knowledge Mr. Johnson is recognized as of distinguished authority, not only in Pennsylvania but in other states. He was counsel in the Pennell Street Bridge case, in which Mr. Johnson appeared for the city, basing his arguments upon general principles of law and the fundamental doctrine that a preceding council cannot by agreement tie the hands of a subsequent council on the question of establishing or changing the grade of a street. O. B. Dickinson, the master, and subsequently Judge Clayton sustained Mr. Johnson's views, but the supreme court on appeal overrode the general principle and held that a special act making such agreements between municipalities and railroads binding for all time was conclusive against such municipalities. Mr. Johnson was one of the counsel in the application for an injunction to restrain the New Chester Water Company from interfering with the work of the South Ward Water Works. The preliminary injunction was refused by the court below, and on appeal the supreme court sustained the decision of the inferior court. When in the first instance the application for the preliminary injunction was presented to Judge Clayton at Chambers, as the meeting is related by Mr. Johnson, the judge looked the bill over and said,

"Oh, gentlemen, I can't do this. There is no sufficient ground here upon which an injunction can be granted." "All right, Judge," they said, "We will present the bill to you, and you cannot do more than refuse it." "Well," replied the Judge, while the bright light of the shrewd lawyer gleamed in his eye, "You may give them a black eye." That was enough. From that moment they fought to give them the black eye, and did it so well that the people of the south ward, now sixth, seventh and eighth wards, came off better than if the South Ward Water Company had never been interfered with by the new company. By the compromise the new company purchased the franchises and property of the old company for three hundred and thirty thousand dollars, representing the outstanding indebtedness of the old company, and relieved the people of the south ward from the cost of the main water pipes in front of their properties, and from liability to be taxed to pay the debt of three hundred and thirty thousand dollars. Mr. Johnson was also one of the counsel in Ewings' appeal, which settled the law in Pennsylvania that a man may prefer any creditor in a judgment, and that such a judgment is in no sense an assignment for the benefit of creditors.

When Lee invaded Maryland in 1862, Mr. Johnson served in the militia called into service by the state of Pennsylvania, and in 1863, when Lee invaded Pennsylvania to meet defeat at Gettysburg, Mr. Johnson served as a corporal in Captain William Fricks' Company, Thirty-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Emergency Militia. Mr. Johnson is a member of Wilde Post No. 25, G. A. R.

For a number of years he has been a liberal contributor to the local press and to the columns of the leading daily newspapers of New York and Philadelphia. He occasionally tempts the poetic muse, his best known efforts being a poem "To Thomas Moore's Seventieth Birthday," one on ex-Mayor Larkin's ninety-first birthday, and an ode to Admiral Schley. In an article that appeared in the "Delaware County Advocate," July 4, 1897, he foretold some of the future events of the coming Spanish-American war, declaring that Cuba, Hawaii and the uttermost isles of the sea are holding out their hands to America, and at a time when few had accurate knowledge of even the location of the Philippine Islands. Among valuable permanent contributions to our local annals, Mr. Johnson prepared a sketch of Judge Frederick J. Hinkson, biographical and genealogical, which is published in the proceedings of the Delaware County Historical Society, in which organization Mr. Johnson holds office as its second vice-president. He has also prepared a succinct history of the bench and bar of Delaware county which will appear in the forthcoming history of the "Bench and Bar of Pennsylvania," in course of publication by H. C. Cooper, Brother & Company, of Chicago.

H. M. Hinison

May 16, 1871, David M. Johnson married Margaret Woodland Brown, daughter of the Rev. Henry and Margaret Brown. Mrs. Johnson's father was rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church at Chester for a period of thirty years, and for over five years was its rector emeritus. The large, beautiful stained glass window in the chancel, representing the conversion of St. Paul, was placed by the congregation in the chancel of St. Paul's church in 1903 as a memorial to Mr. Brown. The children now living born to David M. and Margaret W. Johnson are May Johnson, who on January 31, 1894, became the wife of Herbert Groby Catrow; David Marshall Johnson, Jr., a successful practitioner at the bar of Delaware county, who on April 20, 1903, married Beatrice Roberts Tyson; and Anna Elizabeth Johnson.

HENRY M. HINKSON. For a century and a half the Hinkson family have been an important and influential factor in the history of the southern section of the territory now comprising Delaware county. Tradition asserts that early in the Seventeenth century several brothers named Hansen emigrated from Hanover, in the north of Germany, to county Cavan, in the north of Ireland, where the name underwent a change, taking the present form of Hinkson, which is wholly of Saxon-English origin.

Prior to 1750, John and Jane (Morrow) Hinkson, with an infant son, Thomas, emigrated from county Cavan to the province of Pennsylvania. During the voyage to their new home in the colonies was born at sea to the young couple an infant son who was called John, after the father. The emigrant ancestor settled in Upper Providence, where he prospered. As early as 1770, John, the son mentioned, was operating a saw mill in Nether Providence, on Vernon's run. James Hinkson, the third son born in the colony, and the great-uncle of Henry M. Hinkson, prior to 1790 purchased several tracts of land in Nether Providence, where the Providence great road and the Wallingford road cross each other. The eldest son, Thomas, acquired other lands, abutting upon the road, hence that locality, in a descriptive sense, was known as "Hinkson's Corners," a name which is still applied to it.

John Hinkson, third, second son of John and Abigail (Engle) Hinkson, was born in Nether Providence, July 27, 1792. He received an ordinary education of a well-to-do farmer's son of those times, particular care being given to penmanship, in which the boy displayed aptitude, and in after life he was noted for his handwriting, which has been likened to copper-plate. Until twenty-two John Hinkson had remained on the ancestral farm, but when, in the summer of 1814, the militia of the state was called into service to repel the threatened attack by Admiral Cockburn's fleet and the British army under General Ross, he held rank as sergeant in the Delaware County Troop of Horse, and in 1820, when the troop was reorganized, he became its captain. In 1816 he married Jemima Worrell, a daughter of Joseph Worrell, of Upper Providence, and the couple resided at the court house, the young husband having received the appointment of steward. There, the following year, their eldest child, Joseph H. Hinkson, was born, hence the latter was wont to declare that he "was born in the work house and brought up in the jail," for in 1825 his father was elected sheriff, and the office required that the incumbent should reside in the borough of Chester in the dwelling part of the jail. In 1834 John Hinkson was elected prothonotary, clerk of the orphans' court, recorder of deeds and register of wills. In 1836 or 1837 he represented Delaware county in the legislature, a position he filled with credit to his constituency and himself, but he declined a re-nomination. Although still active in public affairs, Mr. Hinkson retired to his farm in Chester township, where his health gradually failing, he died, on July 30, 1844, aged fifty-two. To his first marriage were born two sons and one daughter. He married, second, Orpha, daughter of Joseph and Alice Neide, to which union were born three sons and one daughter. The latter, Sarah, became the wife of Ellis Smedley. The other children were Henry M., the subject of this sketch; William, who married Annie, daughter of Edward Engle, to which marriage were born four sons and four daughters, and his second wife was Susan, daughter of Samuel Black, of Chester; Frederick Hinkson married Annie Hansell, and to the union were born two sons and five daughters.

Henry M. Hinkson, eldest son, was born June 14, 1829, at the old Hinkson homestead, near Sneath's corner, Chester township. The lad, who was fifteen when his father died, attended the schools in the neighborhood and in the borough of Chester. In his eighteenth year he entered the store of George Baker, a cousin, who then conducted in Chester a large general mercantile business. For one year he continued in that employment, when he decided to take up higher branches of classical and mathematical studies than those in which he had been instructed, and with that end in view became a student in a noted academy in Norristown, where he remained for several years. On his return home he managed with profit one of the ancestral farms. By this time Chester had begun to develop rapidly, and much ground which had been used in grazing was laid out with streets and avenues. Mr. Hinkson, who was possessed of considerable means, purchased lots in growing localities and engaged in real estate enterprises, in association with his nephew, the late Hon. John B. Hinkson. While not a speculator, he was quick to see and appreciate the causes which would lead to enhancing of values of lots in certain localities, and subsequent events proved the accuracy of his judgment. Mr. Hinkson was a man of striking appearance, cultured in address and bearing. So natural was this that he was popularly known as "Gentleman Harry." Although frequently solicited to accept nominations for city and county offices, he refused except in one instance, in 1867, when he was elected alderman of the middle ward, a position he held for five years, making a record as one of the best administrators in the history of the office. In 1888 the Penn street planing mills, which he owned, became vacant, and as no tenant applied for the plant he successfully conducted the business until his death, although he had no practical experience theretofore in that branch of industrial activity.

Mr. Hinkson died at Chester, May 17, 1890, aged sixty. Midway of the east transept of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church in Chester is a three panelled stained glass window, rich in colorings and beautiful in detail, representing the Crucifixion, which is in loving memory of him. October 10, 1872, Mr. Hinkson married Katherine R. Taylor, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Berlett) Taylor, who are probably in the Taylor line descendants of Christopher Taylor, one of William Penn's provincial council and president judge of the court of Chester in 1684. Mrs. Hinkson's grandfather on the paternal side was Israel Taylor, of Aston, who married Ann Malin, of Upper Providence, where her father was born. The young couple shortly afterwards removed to the ancestral estates in Aston. Her maternal grandfather was Joseph Taylor, of Upper Providence, a soldier of the Revolution, who was captured by the British, and with other prisoners of war was transported to St. Johns, New Brunswick, where he was held awaiting exchange until the close of the war brought him release. He married Esther Hewes, of St. Johns, whose father, Joseph Taylor, was a noted surveyor and mathematician. In 1844 he was elected prothonotary, recorder and register of Delaware county, which necessitated his removal to Chester, then the county seat. On the expiration of his official term he resumed the practice of his profession. For the late Hon. John Locker, Jr., he platted most of the present second, fourth and fifth wards, and when the city was incorporated he became the first surveyor, an office he held for a number of years. He was also surveyor for the county of Delaware and the borough of Darby, and laid out the Chester Rural Cemetery, of which he was one of the projectors. Joseph Taylor died February 27, 1884, in his eighty-second year. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Hinkson, Alice N., who died in infancy. Mrs. Henry M. Hinkson is an active member of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, treasurer of its Dorcas Society, and a director of the J. Lewis Crozer Home for Incurables. She is also active in Charitable work, and is one of the early members of the New Century Club of Chester.

GEORGE BROOKE LINDSAY, a leading lawyer and influential citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a representative of a Scottish family, which has been for a century and a half resident in that state. John Lindsay, great-grandfather of George Brooke Lindsay, was born in Scotland and was a member of the Clan Lindsay. He emigrated to America before the Revolutionary war, and settled in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. John Lindsay, son of John Lindsay, founder of the American branch of the family, was born in Haverford, Delaware county, and married Sarah Brooke, a daughter of General William Brooke, an officer in the patriot army of the Revolution. For many years John Lindsay was a leading and prosperous farmer, and was also active in the political affairs of the community, being what is known as an old-line Whig. In 1830 and 1831 he represented Delaware county in the state legislature. He was active in the Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay were the parents of seven children. The Brooke family, to which Mrs. Lindsay belonged, came from England early in the seventeenth century. Mr. Lindsay died in Haverford in 1860, at the advanced age of eighty-eight.

John C. Lindsay, son of John and Sarah (Brooke) Lindsay, was born in 1817, on the old homestead in Haverford. Like his father, he followed for many years the occupation of a farmer, residing from 1863 to 1885 in Nether Providence township, and subsequently, on his retirement from active business, removing to Chester. He was a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Lindsay married Catherine A., daughter of William V. Black, of Delaware county, a prominent citizen, and one of the original directors of the First National Bank of Media. He died in 1883, at the age of eighty-two. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay consisted of six children: William R., now engaged in gold-mining in Idaho; John, who is a resident of Chester, Pennsylvania; George Brooke, mentioned at length hereinafter; J. Walter; Laura, who became the wife of Captain Charles W. Kedzie, of Washington, District of Columbia; and Maria B., deceased. Mr. Lindsay died in 1898, and his wife survives him, being now eighty-three years of age.

George Brooke Lindsay, son of John C. and Catherine A. (Black) Lindsay, was born August 5, 1852, in Haverford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and received his primary education in the local schools, later attending the Chester Academy, and studying in a private school taught by the Rev. James W. Dale, in Media, Pennsylvania. He studied law in the office of Ward & Broomall, and in 1874 was admitted to the bar of Delaware county. He remained with the firm of Ward & Broomall until 1878, when he was admitted to practice in the supreme court of Pennsylvania. Since that time he has engaged in the practice of his profession on his own account, having been admitted in 1880 to all the courts of Philadelphia and of Chester county. He has an extensive general practice, representing many large corporations, and has conducted a number of important cases. He enjoys in a high degree the esteem and confidence of his clients and of the community in general, convincing evidence of this being found in the fact that he has acted as trustee for many large estates, has held a number of offices of a fiduciary nature, and is attorney for several leading corporations in other states. In 1886 Mr. Lindsay tried a case before a jury of expert mechanical engineers in Cincinnati, Ohio, their award to be final, in which he secured a verdict against that city for over fifty thousand dollars. His activities are not limited by the sphere of his profession, but he takes a practical interest in everything pertaining to the welfare and advancement of the city in which he resides, having filled for four years the office of president of the Chester Street Railroad Company, and is at the present time treasurer of the Delaware County Law Library Association, and president of the Chester Free Library.

In politics Mr. Lindsay is an active member of the Republican party, having served for twenty years continuously as solicitor for the borough of South Chester, was also solicitor for the borough of North Chester, and president of the Veteran Republican Club of the city of Chester. His gifts as a public speaker are exercised for the benefit of his party during political campaigns. Mr. Lindsay is one of the directors of the Chester National Bank, and also of the Chester Street Railway Company and the Chester & Media Electric Railway Company. Mr. Lindsay possesses a cultivated taste for art, and is prominent in the social circles of Chester and Philadelphia. He is a member of the Union League Club and of the Art Club, both of the last named city, and also belongs to the Penn Club, of Chester. He is also a member of Clan Lindsay Society of Scotland, and his country place near Chester is called Edzell, after the name of the old Castle of the family in Forfarshire, Scotland.

PROF. JOHN R. SWENEY. The Sweney family of Pennsylvania is descended from Scotch-Irish ancestors who came to America in the early part of the last century, settling in Pennsylvania. The traits of the virile race from which it sprung found transmission in the succeeding generations on American soil, and two of the name, father and son, came to be conspicuous, the one in music and the other in arms. John H. Sweney, the father of Professor John R. Sweney, passed the greater part of his life in West Chester, Pennsylvania, where he was successfully engaged in the grocery business. He was a man of most exemplary character and a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died in 1883, at the advanced age of seventy-eight years.

John R. Sweney, son of John H. Sweney, was born in 1837, in West Chester, where he was reared and educated. From his earliest youth he gave evidence of an ardent love for music, and delighted his parents and friends with his childhood songs, veritable heart notes, as natural as the strain of the lark. He was soon placed under such instructors as the village could command, and made such advancement that his talents found appreciation in the estimation of his fellow pupils, to whom he became a most capable teacher. He subsequently studied under two celebrated professors, Theodore Bauer and Professor Barilli, the latter named of whom was also the instructor of that queen of song, Mme. Patti. In time Professor Sweney's abilities as a teacher and composer found high recognition, and he received in turn the degrees of Bachelor of Music and Doctor of Music.

Having entered upon music as his life work, Professor Sweney was teaching in Dover, Delaware, when the Civil war opened, and he at once went to the front as the leader of the band of the Third Regiment of Delaware Volunteers, and while in service he made his band one of the most famous musical bodies in all the great Army of the Potomac. On many review occasions it was the most proficient on the ground, and received warm praise from General McClellan and many of his subordinate generals. On one occasion, at least, he led his band when the great war president, Lincoln, saw the troops pass before him. After the war Professor Sweney became professor of music in the Pennsylvania Military Academy at West Chester, and he maintained his connection with that institution during the remainder of his life. Besides possessing all the qualifications of the highly trained teacher, he had a special aptitude for leading large bodies of singers, and his vacations were habitually devoted to conducting the music at some of the most famous summer gatherings in the country—at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, at Round Lake, New York, at Old Orchard, Maine, at the Thousand Islands, at Lake Bluff, Illinois, and at New Albany, Indiana. On all such occasions a delightful feature of these great events was his own solo singing, and he won national fame for those of his own composition. He was an industrious author, and during his career wrote a score of books of songs and three volumes of anthems for choir use. His titles contained in these, with others given in sheet form, numbered about one thousand. All were characterized by the loftiest tone in sentiment as well as musically in song, which appealed to or expressed the sentiments of the heart. Many of these, such as "Bentah Land" and "The New Song" have long been known the world over, and are destined to live to delight the children and grandchildren of those who first learned them.

It is impossible to trace the wide-spread influence of this gifted man, whose high talents were throughout his life consecrated to the service of the Master and to the happiness of his fellows by inspiring them to the good and beautiful. His career was unblemished by a fault. His life was in his music, and was music in itself—melodious and harmonious—the constant expression of a devotional heart filled with reverence for his God and affection for all humanity. Professor Swency was a Presbyterian in religion, and one of the most active members of his church. In politics he was a Republican. His death occurred April 10, 1899. He left to survive him his widow, who was Miss Lizzie E. Hinkson, a daughter of Joseph H. Hinkson, and a daughter by her, Miss Josephine Hinkson Swency, and two sons, Frank G. and B. Hillard Swency.

Frank G. Swency, the eldest son, a resident of Chester, is a civil engineer by profession, and has long been prominently identified with real estate, insurance and electric light and power affairs. He has also been long connected with the National Guard of Pennsylvania, and has held various important positions, among them that of inspector on the staff of Generals Robert P. Deckert and John W. Scholl, and inspector general on the staff of Governors Hastings, Stone and Pennypacker.

HON. ROBERT CHADWICK. Hon. Robert Chadwick, recently deceased, whose virile energies were devoted to the interests of the city of Chester and the county of Delaware for upwards of one-third of a century, came from an English family which was of French origin.

His remote ancestors migrated more than three centuries ago from France to England. Of a recent generation was Thomas Chadwick, who was born in England, where he conducted a mercantile business until 1847, when he came to the United States, bringing with him his little family, his wife having been in maidenhood Miss Sarah Crabtree. He settled in Upland, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where his wife died August 8, 1852, and eight days later he himself came to his death by accidental drowning in Chester creek. He was a man of excellent character and great industry.

Robert Chadwick, one of the four children born to Thomas and Sarah (Crabtree) Chadwick, was born at Rochdale, England, November 23, 1833. He was fourteen years of age when his parents came to Upland, and there he obtained his education in the public schools. When seventeen years old he went to Frankford, Philadelphia county, where he learned wheelwrighting, and he there followed his trade until the outbreak of the Civil war. Foreign born though he was, he was altogether American in sentiment and principle, and his patriotic spirit moved him to devote his services to his adopted country. Enlisting in the One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, known as the Collis Zouaves, he participated with that command in all the arduous campaigns and many of the most desperate battles of the Army of the Potomac from the summer of 1862 until peace was restored in 1865, a period of three years.

After the war Mr. Chadwick took up his residence in Chester, Pennsylvania, where he opened a wagon factory and blacksmith shop. Industry and ability brought their reward, and he built up an extensive business which he prosecuted most successfully during the remainder of his life. Mr. Chadwick's interests in community affairs, and his intense devotion to Republican principles, soon brought him into public life in positions which he adorned with signal ability and unassailable integrity. He was twice elected to the city council, and served six years in that body. In 1880 he was elected to the state assembly, and his services were of such conspicuous usefulness that by successive re-elections his term was extended to the unusual period of eight years, during which time he served upon a number of the most important committees, and aided in the formulation and enactment of many salutary measures. For two years he was a member of the board of trustees of the Soldiers' Home at Erie, Pennsylvania, by legislative appointment. In December, 1889, he was appointed postmaster at Chester by President Harrison, and during his four years' term discharged the duties of the office with a degree of ability which greatly promoted its efficiency, winning the cordial approval of the community, without regard to party, and the commendation of the departmental authorities at Washington.

Mr. Chadwick was one of the earliest members of the Grany Army of the Republic, having become a member of Wilde Post, No. 25, in 1866, the year of the foundation of the order, and he served in various post stations, and has been a representative in state and national encampments. In Masonry he was a past master in Chester Lodge, No. 236, F. and A. M., and a member of Chester Chapter, No. 258, R. A. M., and St. John's Commandery, No. 4, K. T., of Philadelphia. He was also an Odd Fellow, and a member of the American Veteran Legion.

Mr. Chadwick was married September 9, 1857, to Miss Louisa J. Gardner, a native of Jersey City, and a daughter of Henry M. Gardner of London, England. Of this marriage were born six children, of whom four are living, named as follows: Henry G., who was reared in the business founded by his father, and succeeded to it at his death. He married Miss Annie Kirk, and to them were born seven children, (1) Robert; (2) Hattie, who is dead; (3) Walter, (4) Louise; (5) Anna; (6) Helen; (7) Madeline. 2. Susie C. became the wife of Charles S. Worrell, of Chester, and to whom were born two children, Henry Chadwick and Robert C. Worrell. 3. Sarah Louise became the wife of John Kirk, of Chester, and has one child, Huldah J. 4. John, M. D., of Buffalo, New York, married Kathryn Cutler, and has one child, Doris.

Mr. Chadwick died April 21, 1902. The sad event was sincerely deplored by the entire community and the people, with large numbers of prominent men from all portions of the state, assembled on the day of the funeral to pay the last tribute of respect to one whom they had long known as a model citizen, faithful public official and gallant soldier. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. M. T. Chikrey, pastor of the First Baptist church, with which the deceased and his family were connected, and the remains were committed to the grave with the beautiful and impressive ceremonies prescribed in the ritual of the Masonic brotherhood.

◆◆◆◆◆

WILLIAM H. GREEN, Sr., founder of the Vulcan Works of Chester, and a pioneer in the industrial development of South Chester, who by his wonderful ability, clear foresight and indomitable energy created the first great industry of that borough and guided it to assured success, was born at Stockport, Cheshire, England, August 3, 1831, eldest son of Moses and Jane (Campbell) Green. The family from which he was descended is of English lineage. His paternal grandfather, George Green, was a native and a life-long resident of Stockport, England, and a well known professor and teacher of music. Of his twelve children, Moses Green, father, was born at Stockport in 1805, and after attaining manhood married Jane Campbell, whose parents were Joseph and Mary Campbell, of the same town. The children of Moses and Jane Green were: William H., Sarah, John, James, Jane, Mary, Sarah (2), Moses and Henry. Moses Green came with his family to America in 1847, and followed his trade of engineering in this country until his death, which occurred in October, 1879, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. William H. Green, Sr., received a good common-school education, and at the age of sixteen years went to Manchester, where he learned the trade of machinist and engineer. In that city he remained working at his trade until 1850, when he bade farewell to his native land and sailed for America. Arriving in this country he settled first at Philadelphia, where he remained three years, and then removed to Richmond, Virginia, to assume the management of the engine department of the Tredegar Iron Works of that city. In 1857 he resigned that position to become superintendent of construction and repairs on machinery used in fitting out steam vessels for the government at Boston, Massachusetts. In 1861 he was commissioned by the government as chief engineer at Boston navy yard, but resigned that place in 1863 to assume charge of the Globe Iron Works in that city, which were then principally engaged in turning out machinery for the United States government, and there Mr. Green had ample opportunity to demonstrate his thoroughness as a practical machinist and his fine ability as an engineer.

In 1864 he came to Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and at once perceiving the opportunities which South Chester presented as a manufacturing locality, he purchased land on Delaware avenue and Reaney street and directed the Vulcan works. This was six years before public attention was drawn to the availability of that borough as a superior seat for manufacturing enterprises, and to Mr. Green belongs the credit of paving the way for that industrial growth which has transformed the quiet village into a manufacturing center of great importance during the last twenty years, and filled the streets of the town with the hum of increasing activity. The Vulcan works began operation in a building forty by one hundred and twenty feet in dimensions, which was afterward enlarged to a handsome brick structure one hundred and forty by two hundred and fifty feet. The output of the works consisted of manufactured articles of brass, steel and iron, and Mr. Green made a specialty of brass valves and cocks. In 1883 he manufactured several six-ton valves for the water department of the city of Philadelphia, which are believed to be the largest valves ever made in the world. The Vulcan works owed their inception and success primarily to the energy and good management of Mr. Green, and not to any combination of capital and associated interests. In the conspicuous success which was achieved by him, he fully illustrated what may be accomplished by first thoroughly mastering a business and then intelligently using the knowledge thus obtained.

In his political sentiments Mr. Green was a conservative Democrat, voting for men of ability and who understood the business necessities of the country rather than for theorists or politicians. He was elected and served as the first Burgess of South Chester, and later was for several years a member of the borough council and of the school board, over which he presided for a time. He was a Knight Templar in Masonry, and a member and warden of St. Luke's Episcopal church of the city of Chester. In every relation of life he faithfully discharged the duties incumbent upon him, and won the regard of all who knew him. Eminently successful in business, he made good use of the means thus acquired, and in many ways assisted those less fortunate than himself, providing employment for large numbers of men and answering the calls of charity with a liberal hand up to the time of his death, which occurred at his home in Chester, May 1, 1893.

In 1857 Mr. Green was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Chalmers McKenzie, a daughter of John McKenzie, of Edinburgh, Scotland, and to them were born seven children: William H. Jr., Margaret Jane, Mary Campbell, Alfred Tennyson, Laura Christina, Lillie Christina and Thomas R. List Green.

WILLIAM H. GREEN, JR., a leading man of affairs of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family of English origin which for two generations has been prominent in Delaware county. George Green, great-grandfather of William H. Green, Jr., was born in Stockport, Cheshire, England, and throughout his life was a resident of his birthplace, where he was a well known professor and teacher of music. The name of his wife is not stated. He was the father of a family of twelve children. Moses Green, son of George Green, was born at Stockport, in 1805. He married Jane, daughter of Joseph and Mary Campbell, of Stockport, and had the following children: William H., Sr., Sarah, John, James, Jane, Mary, Sarah (second), Moses and Henry. In 1847 Mr. Green, with his whole family, emigrated to the United States, where he followed the calling of an engineer, which had been his occupation in England. Mr. Green continued in active business life until his death, which took place in October, 1879.

William H. Green, Sr., son of Moses and Jane (Campbell) Green, was born at Stockport, Cheshire, England, August 3, 1831, and after receiving a good common school education went at the age of sixteen to Manchester, where he learned the trade of machinist and engineer. It was at the time of his leaving home that his father emigrated to the United States, this one son alone remaining behind. In 1850 Mr. Green came to this country and settled in Philadelphia, where for three years he pursued his trade, removing at the end of that time to Richmond, Virginia, where he filled the position of superintendent of the machine and engine department of the Tredegar Iron works of that city. Mr. Green's marked ability as a machinist and engineer could not fail of recognition, and in 1857 he was assigned by the bureau of steam engineering at Washington, to the Boston navy yard, where he acted as superintendent of the construction and repairing of the machinery used in the fitting out of all government steam vessels at that port. He was commissioned in 1861 as chief engineer of the Boston navy yard, which position he resigned in 1863 in order to assume charge of the Globe Iron Works in that city. In this position Mr. Green enjoyed the advantage of a wide and conspicuous field for the exercise of his abilities, the works being mainly occupied at that time in working for the United States government, and during his short stay there he fully demonstrated his exceptional thoroughness and skill.

In 1864 Mr. Green removed to Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he at once perceived the remarkable facilities offered by South Chester for the development of manufacturing interests. He purchased land on Delaware avenue and Reaney street, where he erected the now celebrated Vulcan Works, and established an extensive business in brass and iron, valves and cocks of the former material being a specialty. In 1883 Mr. Green manufactured for the water department of Philadelphia several six-ton valves, which are believed to be the largest ever made in the world. In establishing the Vulcan Works Mr. Green played the part of a pioneer, being the first to realize the availability of the borough for manufacturing enterprises, and to the fact that he led the way in this direction may be largely attributed the transformation of the place from a quiet village into a manufacturing center. The original buildings of the works were subsequently enlarged into a fine brick structure, one hundred and forty by two hundred and fifty feet. Mr. Green took an active interest in all the affairs of the community, in politics being a conservative Democrat, and voting for men of ability and character irrespective of party.

W. H. Green Jr

He was elected the first burges of the borough of South Chester, and also served as a member of the council. His best efforts were devoted to advancing the cause of education, in the interests of which he consented to serve as a member of the board of education and to act for a time as president of that body. Mr. Green was active in Masonic circles, holding the rank of Knight Templar. He was a member of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal church, in which he served as warden.

Mr. Green married, in 1857, Elizabeth Chalmers McKenzie, daughter of John McKenzie, of Edinburgh, Scotland, and was the father of seven children: William H., Jr., Margaret Jane, Mary Campbell, Alfred Tennyson, Laura Christina, Lillie Christina and Thomas R. List. Mr. Green died at his home in Chester, May 1, 1893, leaving behind him the reputation of a man faithful to every duty, who had turned to the best account the success which this fidelity to obligation, joined to his fine abilities, had brought him, and who was ever ready to extend a helping hand to those less favored than himself.

William H. Green, Jr., son of William H. Sr., and Elizabeth Chalmers (McKenzie) Green, was born January 29, 1859, at Charlestown, Massachusetts. When he was five years old his father removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, and there Mr. Green received his primary education in the public schools of that place, later attending the old Chester Academy, after which he took a commercial course at Pierce's Business College. At the age of fifteen he began his business career by assisting his father in the capacity of a clerk, and also superintending outside transactions, becoming in the course of years more intimately identified with the management of the works. In November, 1892, the Vulcan Works were incorporated as a joint stock company, of which William H. Green, Sr., was elected president, the junior bearer of the name becoming vice-president, who, upon the death of his father, became president. Mr. Green possesses all the assiduity and ability as a business man which distinguished his father, and under his skillful and far-sighted management the Vulcan Works have maintained a course of uninterrupted prosperity. This establishment enjoys the distinction of being the only manufacturing business in South Chester which has never, since it was founded, shut down for a single day. Like his father, Mr. Green is a Democrat in politics, acting with his party on national and state issues, but in local matters inclining toward independence. Owing to the absorbing nature of his duties as a leading man of affairs, he has had little time for active participation in political contests. He is a member of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal church, and for twenty years acted as librarian of the Sunday school. He holds membership in the society of the Sons of St. George, of Philadelphia, a very ancient organization, having been founded one hundred and thirty-six years ago.

Mr. Green married, November 5, 1882, Emma Hamor Taylor, daughter of William Taylor, then cashier of the First National Bank of Chester. Mr. and Mrs. Green became the parents of five children: Ellwood Garrett; Margaret H.; William H., who died February 7, 1901; Harry B., deceased; and Malcolm McKenzie.

WALTER J. ARNOLD, who for the past nineteen years has been connected with the First National Bank of Chester, Pennsylvania, in the capacity of bookkeeper, was born in Bedford, Pennsylvania, January 29, 1832, a grandson of John Arnold, a native of Germany, and a large land owner in Bedford, Pennsylvania.

Captain John Arnold, father of Walter J. Arnold, was a prosperous and well known builder and contractor of Bedford, where he took a prominent part in political, military and social matters, being the commander for a number of years of a company of militia. He married Miss Julia Margaret Walter, daughter of Captain Peter Walter, of New York, a soldier of the Revolution, who was formerly a shipping merchant of Philadelphia. He and his wife were taken prisoners by pirates during one of his cruises. He lost nearly all by French spoliation, three of his vessels having been captured by that nation. He was an active participant in the war of 1812, and was the first man in America to suggest the enlistment of colored soldiers during that struggle. His remains are interred in Trinity cemetery, New York. The following children were born to Captain and Mrs. Arnold: Abraham K., who received a military education at West Point, New York, participated in the Spanish-American war in the capacity of brigadier-general, after which he was retired, his death occurred shortly after. Humphrey enlisted as a drummer boy during the progress of the Civil war, having run away from home twice in order to join the troops; Elizabeth C.; Julia W.; and Walter J. Arnold. The father of these children died in 1882, and his wife passed away in 1896.

Walter J. Arnold spent the early years of his life in Bedford, where an excellent education was offered him by attending the common schools of the town. In 1845, having attained the age of thirteen years, he located in the city of Chester, and was employed by his uncle, Y. S. Walter, in the printing office of the Delaware county "Republican." In 1861 Mr. Arnold joined the Chester Independent Company of the Pennsylvania militia, was ordered to Chambersburg and later was appointed to the rank of brigade inspector; subsequently he was removed to Baltimore, where he was placed in charge of the transportation facilities on the Northern Central Railroad, and for three years he gave transportation to the United States troops. Later he was located in Washington, D. C., where he was engaged in the capacity of passenger agent on the Northern Central & Pennsylvania Railroad for three years, and the following five years he was an employe of the Custom House in Philadelphia. He then became actively interested in the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, which position he retained for two years, and then for a short period of time he was the editor of "Life," a Philadelphia newspaper. Nineteen years ago he accepted the position of bookkeeper for the First National Bank of Chester, Pennsylvania, and has ever since faithfully and conscientiously performed the duties attached to the office.

Mr. Arnold married Miss Margaret Lane, daughter of F. A. Lane, and four children were born to them, three of whom are living: Walter C., John O. D. and Fred L., the last named a member of Company C, Sixth Pennsylvania Infantry.

JAMES WATTS MERCUR, of Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is descended from a family which has long been represented in the Keystone state, and in each generation has given useful and valued citizens to the community.

The family tradition is that a Mercur died at Klagenfurth, Austria, about 1775, leaving considerable property, both real and personal, and two sons, Hugh and Henry. The former married a Protestant and the latter a Catholic. This caused some feeling between the wives, although the brothers remained friendly, and Henry suggested that Hugh take the personal property and go to America, while he would remain at home. Hugh, agreeing to this, came to the United States about the end of the Revolutionary war, and settled in Salisbury township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, where a son was born September 20, 1786, and named after his uncle Henry, in Austria. In 1799 Henry Mercur was sent to Vienna, to be educated at the university there, and remained eight years, returning home in 1807. He witnessed the entry of Napoleon's army into Vienna in 1805. Upon his return home he found his father and mother both dead, not having heard from them for two years. He gathered up what little remained of their estate, and having no acquaintance among his neighbors nor any tastes in common with them, commenced traveling over the United States. He subsequently learned the hatter's trade, and in 1809 settled in what is now Towanda, Pennsylvania, where he was interested in lands, and also carried on the hatter's business, until about 1845, when he sold his interests there and moved to Illinois, where he took up large tracts of land and remained until about 1865, when he returned to Towanda. Henry Mercur had one brother and one sister, both of whom died in infancy. He was highly educated, and the "History of Towanda" says that when he went to that section of the state he was probably the most highly educated man there: "He was not only a scientific scholar, but a linguist, and knew considerable of the Arabic and Sanscrit." "Indeed," said one capable of judging, "he was the only thoroughly educated man I ever knew." From the character of his education it is thought that he was intended for the church, but concluding not to become a priest, became estranged from his relatives in Austria, for he was never known by his children to have any correspondence with them, and always manifested a strong prejudice against Catholics. It is thought that his father came to America either with or through Frederick Eugene, Baron de Beelen Bertholff, the first Austrian minister to this country, for the reason that, at the time the former settled in Lancaster county, Baron de Beelen Bertholff took up large tracts of land in the same township, and the Austrians who came to this country at that time were few. It does not appear by the records that any one by the name of Mercur ever owned lands in Lancaster county, but the father must have been a man of education and means, for the reason that he said, "the schools here were poor, and not the place to educate a gentleman's son," and so sent Henry to Vienna to be educated.

Henry Mercur married, first, September 10, 1810, Mary Watts, resided at what is now Towanda, Pennsylvania, and died there, September 6, 1868. As the name of Hugh Mercur's wife is not known, and as all the Mercurs in the United States are descended from Henry Mercur, he may be said to be the founder of the family in the United States. Mary Watts, mentioned above as the wife of Henry Mercur, was born in 1790, at what is now Towanda, Pennsylvania, and died December 14, 1839. She was the daughter of Francis and Jane (Means) Watts. The former was a private in the Fourth Regiment of the Light Dragoons, Colonel Stephen Moylan, Continental army; second lieutenant in Colonel Arthur Buchanan's Battalion, Cumberland County Pennsylvania Militia, 1777; captured by the Indians in their attack upon Fort Freeland, July 28, 1779, but escaped the same day. Francis Watts went from Cumberland to Northumberland county, and then to what is now Towanda, Pennsylvania, about the end of the Revolutionary war. He married Jane Means there, and died about 1808. He was the son of James and Ann (Walker) Watts. The former was sergeant in the Second Company, Captain Arthur Taggart's Second Battalion, Colonel James M. Murray's Northumberland County (Pennsylvania) Militia, May 3, 1878; tomahawked and put to death by the Indians in their attack upon Fort Freeland, July 28, 1779. James Watts was undoubtedly a brother of General Frederick Watts, of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, who was prominent in the Revolutionary war, for the reason that James went from Cumberland county to Northumberland county, and the Watts family of Carlisle, or those of Cumberland county and those of Bradford county, in which Towanda is situated, always claimed relationship one with the other. James was probably the elder, and presumably came to this country with his brother Frederick in 1760.

Jane Means, mentioned above as the wife of Francis Watts, was the daughter of Samuel Means. The latter, a soldier of the Revolution, and supposed to have been killed in the Wyoming Massacre, was the son of Samuel and Grizzle (Stephen) Means. This last-named Samuel was Scotch-Irish, and settled at Paxtang, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, as early as 1722. He died there, February, 1746-7, and his wife, who was the daughter of Andrew Stephen, Sr., died in November of the same year. Mary Watts, daughter of Francis and Jane (Means) Watts, and wife of Henry Mercur, was descended from William Clark, a member of Penn's first council, and chief justice of the Lower Counties.

Ulysses Mercur, son of Henry and Mary (Watts) Mercur, was born at Towanda, Pennsylvania, August 18, 1818, and in 1848 graduated with honors from Jefferson College. He studied law and practiced his profession at Towanda, Pennsylvania, until 1861, when, in the place of Judge David Wilmot, who resigned in order to take his seat in Congress, where he became famous as the author of the Wilmot Proviso, he was appointed president judge of the thirteenth judicial district. He retained this position till 1864, when he resigned and accepted a unanimous nomination for Congress in order to harmonize jarring party interests. He was elected as a Republican, and continued in Congress till 1872, when he resigned, having been elected to the supreme bench of Pennsylvania in that year, to succeed Chief Justice Thompson. On January 1, 1883, by seniority of commission, he became chief justice, and held this office at the time of his death. Prior to his going to the bench he was an active Republican, and was a member of the first Republican convention held in Pittsburg, in 1856. During his eight years in Congress, at a very important and critical period of the nation's history, he was recognized as a useful and influential member of that body. He was a member of the Episcopal church, and every Sunday was to be found attending service.

As to his position upon the supreme bench, at a bar meeting held in Pittsburg in his memory, one of the speakers said: "In connection with this office nothing can be said of him that is not to his honor. There is no taint on the purity of his ermine, the hot breath of calumny has never touched him and no question was ever made of the integrity of his life. His daily walk and conversation were pure and without reproach. He was distinguished by a saving common sense. His opinions have been accepted by the judgment of the profession as sound. They are clearly expressed, without meretricious ornament or affectation. They are consistent with the character of the man, showing his industry, his uprightness, his straightforwardness, his ambition to do right, and are expressed in clear, simple, pure English. They will remain while the commonwealth lasts, an enduring monument to his honor."

Chief Justice Mercur married, June 12, 1850, at Davisville, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, Sarah Simpson Davis. His death took place June 6, 1887, at the residence of his son, James Watts Mercur, at Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His wife, who was born November 10, 1822, at Davisville, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, died April 20, 1896, at Towanda, Pennsylvania. Sarah Simpson Davis was the daughter of General John Davis, of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, born August 7, 1788, died April 1, 1878, and Amy Hart, his wife, born June 20, 1784, died August 17, 1847. They were married March 23, 1813. General John Davis was the son of John Davis, born September 6, 1760, died January 25, 1832, and Ann Simpson, his wife, born December 24, 1764, died June, 1851. They were married June 6, 1783. General John Davis was in the war of 1812, being ensign of Captain Purdy's company, which was the Ninth Company of the First Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Riflemen, commanded by Colonel Thomas Humphrey. This regiment formed part of the advance light brigade, commanded by Brigadier-General Thomas Cadwallader. His experience in the war developed a strong taste for military affairs, and he shortly after entered the volunteer militia, became active therein, and was in constant commission thirty-four years. During that period he held in succession the commissions of captain, brigade inspector, colonel and was three times elected major-general of the divisions composed of the counties of Bucks and Montgomery. When a colonel, in 1824, it was arranged that his regiment should meet General Lafayette, then on a visit to this country, at Morrisville, and escort him through Bucks county to Philadelphia. When Colonel Davis was presented to the General, he reminded him that his father, a soldier in the Pennsylvania Line, had assisted in carrying the General to a place of safety on the field of Brandywine. General Lafayette remembered the circumstances, and embraced the Colonel, saying, "The two soldiers handled me like a child." In 1833 Governor Wolf appointed General Davis a member of the board of appraisers for the public works, an office which he held for three years. He was elected to the twenty-sixth Congress as a Democrat, and served one term. He was twice renominated for Congress, but defeated at the polls by a small majority, because of some disaffection in the Democratic ranks. He was active in county, state and federal politics and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of President Van Buren, John C. Calhoun, Thomas H. Benton, James Buchanan and others. He was active in securing the election of President Polk, and was appointed by him, in 1845, surveyor of the port of Philadelphia, which office he held for four years, discharging the duties in the most satisfactory manner. While surveyor he made John W. Forney his deputy. Up to the time of his death he continued to be a staunch and active Democrat, though he strongly upheld the Civil war and was always interested in a political discussion. He had a strong constitution, and until one year before his death he made it a rule to walk one mile from his house, two miles in all, in both summer and winter, before sunrise. He was a strong Baptist, and was always active and prominent in the affairs of that church.

Ann Simpson, the mother of General John Davis, was the daughter of William Simpson, Sr., and Nancy Hines. The former, who was born in 1732, came to this country about 1748, and died in 1816. He, also, was a Revolutionary soldier, being a private in a Buckingham township company. Captain John Lacey, Second Battalion, Colonel Dr. John Beatty, Bucks County (Pennsylvania) Associators, 1775. John Davis, father of General John Davis, was the son of William Davis, who came to America about 1740, died about 1799, and Sarah Burley, born 1735, died May 10, 1819, daughter of John Burley, of Makefield township, who died in 1748. They were married in 1756. John Davis, born 1760, was a private in Captain William Hart's Company, Bucks County (Pennsylvania) Battalion of the "Flying Camp," Colonel Joseph Hart, 1776; private in Captain Thomas Butler's Company, Third Regiment, 1777; transferred to Captain Joseph McClellan's Company, Ninth Regiment, 1780; transferred to the Second Regiment, 1781, Pennsylvania Line; ensign, Second Battalion, Bucks County (Pennsylvania) Militia; at Trenton, Paoli, Brandywine, Germantown, Valley Forge, Monmouth, Stony Point and Yorktown; wounded at the Block House, New Jersey, July 21, 1780. This is a record of which any one may well be proud, considering that John Davis went into the army at sixteen years of age. He was one of the two soldiers who carried General Lafayette off the field of Brandywine, and also one of the guard around Andre when that officer was hanged. In speaking of the latter event he said, "It made me shed tears to see so handsome a man cut down in his youth." William Davis, the father, was also a Revolutionary soldier, being a private in an Upper Makefield township company, Second Battalion, Colonel Dr. John Beatty, Bucks County (Pennsylvania) Associators, 1775.

Amy Hart, wife of General John Davis, was the daughter of Colonel Josiah Hart, born July 17, 1749, died December 25, 1800, and Ann Watts, his wife, born October 5, 1759, died March 2, 1815. They were married January 11, 1776. Colonel Josiah Hart was captain of the Philadelphia County Pennsylvania Associators; colonel of the Second Battalion of Philadelphia County Pennsylvania Associators, 1776; delegate to the military convention held at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, July 4, 1776, to choose brigadier-generals for the Associated Battalions of Pennsylvania; captain of the Second Company, Fourth Battalion, Colonel William Dean, Philadelphia County Pennsylvania Militia, 1777. Colonel Josiah Hart was the son of Colonel Joseph Hart, born September 1, 1715, died February 25, 1788, and Elizabeth Collet, born May 14, 1714, died February 19, 1788. They were first cousins, and were married October 9, 1740. Colonel Joseph Hart was chairman of the committee of safety and correspondence, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 1774-1776; delegate to the conference held in Carpenters' Hall, July 15, 1774, and chairman of the committee which recommended that "a Congress of deputies from the several colonies be immediately assembled to consult together;" vice-president of the provincial conference of Pennsylvania, held in Carpenters' Hall, June 18, 1776; delegate to the Pennsylvania constitutional convention of 1776; member of the supreme executive council of Pennsylvania, July 23, 1777; member of the council of safety of Pennsylvania, 1777; colonel of the Bucks County Pennsylvania Battalion of the "Flying Camp," July 9, 1776; lieutenant of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, March 26, 1780; member of the council of censors, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, October 30, 1783. Besides the above Revolutionary record, Joseph Hart was commissioned by Governor Hamilton, in 1749, sheriff of Bucks county; again commissioned in 1750 and 1751; was appointed justice of the peace in 1747, and in 1764 was commissioned justice of the quarter sessions and common pleas. He was always active in military affairs, and in 1747 was chosen ensign of Captain Kroesen's company of "Associators of Bucks County," in the regiment commanded by Colonel Alexander Grayden. After the defeat of General Braddock, in 1755, the assembly of Pennsylvania passed an act for the "better ordering and regulating" the militia of the province, under which law the Governor commissioned Joseph Hart a captain. Afterward, when in 1756 the militia of Pennsylvania were embodied for the defense of the province, he was again commissioned captain of the Bucks county company.

Ann Watts, the wife of Colonel Josiah Hart, was the daughter of Arthur Watts, born October 29, 1733, died October 19, 1809, and Sarah Folwell, his wife, born January 14, 1734, died February 3, 1798. They were married December 24, 1758. Arthur Watts was also a Revolutionary soldier. He was a private in the company of his brother-in-law, Captain John Folwell, First Battalion, Colonel Joseph Kirkbride, Bucks County (Pennsylvania) Associators, August 19, 1775. He was a member of the committee of safety and correspondence, of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 1775-1776, and delegate to the military convention held at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, July 4, 1776, to choose brigadier-generals for the Associated Battalions of Pennsylvania. He was the son of Stephen Watts, born December 6, 1700-1, died 1783, and Elizabeth Melchior, his wife, born 1707, died March 16, 1794, and grandson of the Rev. John Watts, born in Leeds, England, November 3, 1661, died August 27, 1702, and Sarah Eaton, his wife, born 1655, died June 27, 1723. They were married February 23, 1687. The Rev. John Watts was the rector of the Pennypack Baptist church in Philadelphia, from 1686 till the time of his death. He was descended from Sir John Watts, high sheriff of London in 1596, and Lord Mayor in 1604. He was a member of the Clothworkers' Guild. Sarah Folwell, the wife of Arthur Watts, was the daughter of William Folwell, born at Burlington, New Jersey, 1704, died June 4, 1776, and Anne Potts, his wife, born August, 1707, died February 20, 1788. They were married December 6, 1727. William Folwell was the son of Nathan Folwell, who died at Burlington, New Jersey, 1710, and his wife Hope.

Colonel Joseph Hart was the son of John Hart, born July 15, 1684, died March 23, 1763, and Eleanor Crispin, his wife, born July 11, 1687, died October 29, 1754. They were married November 23, 1708. John Hart was a man of wealth for the times, and occupied a corresponding position of influence among his fellow citizens in Bucks county. He was one of the two justices returned for sheriff of the county as early as 1726; and was afterward returned in the years 1731, '32, '33, '35 and '37, but he was not commissioned until 1738, and afterward in 1739, '40, '44, '45, '48 and '49. He was commissioned coroner on the 12th of October, 1741, and again in 1742. He was repeatedly appointed and commissioned Justice of the peace, and was still on the list in 1757, having been commissioned the last time the 9th of June, 1752. John Hart, born 1684, was the son of John Hart, born in Whitney, Oxfordshire, England, November 16, 1651, came to America in 1682, died September, 1714, and Susannah Rush, his wife, born December 26, 1656, died February 27, 1725. They were married in England in 1681. John Hart, who was born in Whitney, and came to this country with his wife in 1682, was the son of Christopher and Mary Hart. The family was one of note, education and considerable wealth. They were members of the Society of Friends. On the 11th day of July, 1681, John Hart, with others, entered into an agreement with William Penn to purchase lands of him, situate in the colony, afterward called Pennsylvania. On the 12th of October following, William Penn conveyed to him one thousand acres. John Hart and his wife came over either with William Penn or earlier, with Captain Thomas Holme. He was a member of the first grand jury in the state, for the court held at Upland, September 12, 1682. He settled in Byberry, Philadelphia county, by the close of the year, for he was chosen a member of the assembly for that county, about the latter part of December or the beginning of January, which is shown by the fact that he took his seat in that body at its first session. His name is attached to the first charter of the government, dated at Philadelphia, the 2d of February, 1683. John Hart was also a member of the assembly in 1684. He was a prominent Friend, and the first meeting of the Society in Byberry was held at his house. The meetings were frequently held there in 1683, '84, '85 and '86. He was active as a member and minister of the Society of Friends until about 1691, when the unfortunate schism of George Keith rent the society asunder, and he went off with Keith and preached to a society of Keithians till 1702, when he joined the Pennepack Baptist church. He was then appointed assistant minister at Pennepack, and continued as such till his death in 1714. He was never ordained, but was considered a pious man and esteemed as a good preacher. In Proud's "History of Pennsylvania" he is described as a man "of rank, character and reputation" and a "great preacher."

Elizabeth Collet, the wife of Colonel Joseph Hart, was the daughter of John Collet, who died 1725, and Mary Crispin, his wife, born August, 1686, died 1762. Her paternal grandparents were Richard, who died 1717, and Elizabeth Rush, born July 16, 1649, died 1717. They were married May 27, 1680. Her grandparents on the maternal side were Silas Crispin, who died May 31, 1711, and Hester Holme, who died April 17, 1696. They were married in 1683.

Eleanor Crispin, the mother of Colonel Joseph Hart, and the wife of John Hart, born 1684, was the daughter of Silas Crispin and Hester Holme. The maternal grandmother of Colonel Joseph Hart, Susannah Rush, was the sister of Elizabeth Rush, above. Joseph Hart and his wife Elizabeth Collet, were, therefore, not only first cousins through their mothers, but were first cousins once removed, through their fathers. Elizabeth and Susannah Rush were the daughters of Captain John Rush and Susannah Lucas. The former was an officer of the Parliamentary army in England, commanding a troop of horse. He married Susannah Lucas at Harton, Oxfordshire, June 8, 1648, came to this country in 1683, and had a plantation in Byberry, Philadelphia county.

The father of Hester Holme was Thomas Holme, born in 1624. He was a captain under Cromwell, and later an officer in the Hispaniola expedition in 1654, either under Admiral Penn or General Venables. On April 18, 1682, he was appointed by William Penn, surveyor general of the province, and sailed for Pennsylvania in the "Amity," which left the Downs on April 23, 1682. He was a member of the Free Society of Traders, and one of that society's committee of twelve to reside in Pennsylvania. It is said that he was appointed one of the committee for settling the colony, in place of William Crispin, deceased; and while no commission to him as such is extant to prove the statement, the fact remains that he acted with the other commissioners in forwarding the settlement. As surveyor general he laid out the city of Philadelphia. Thomas Holme was present at the making of most of the Indian treaties, and had an important part in some of them. He was a member of the first assembly of the province, which began its sessions at Upland, December 4, 1682, Penn presiding. He was elected to represent Philadelphia county in the provincial council for one term of three years, 1683, 1684 and 1685, and took a prominent part in its transactions, serving on several important committees. In January, 1683, he was a member of a joint committee of the council and assembly to draw up the new charter or frame of government, which was passed and signed on February 2. In 1683 Penn appointed him, with others, commissioners in his name, as governors, etc., to treat with the governor and council of West Jersey, concerning the satisfaction he demanded of them, for wrongs and injustice done him and his province by some of the inhabitants of their colony. In 1684 he was appointed with Lloyd and William Welch, a committee, by Penn, to look into the actions of Lord Baltimore. In the last year of his term, 1685, the president of the council was absent a large part of the time, and Holme was elected to act as president in his place, which he did at twenty-seven of the fifty meetings held that year, and by so doing acted at those times as governor of the colony. During this time he was also surveyor general. On October 14, 1688, Penn issued to him a new commission as surveyor general of Pennsylvania, and the annexed counties, New Castle, Kent and Sussex, for life, his office in Philadelphia to be an office of record. He continued to be selected when it was necessary to treat with the Indians. In 1694 he was appointed one of the commissioners of property, which position he held until his death in the following year. He was a prominent Friend, and was one of the committee of three appointed to select a site for the first meeting-house.

Silas Crispin, the father of Mary and Eleanor Crispin, was first cousin to William Penn, his mother being Anne Jasper, daughter of John Jasper, a merchant of Rotterdam, Holland, and sister of Margaret Jasper, the mother of William Penn. He came to Pennsylvania with Captain Thomas Holme, and subsequently married his daughter Hester. He was the son of Captain William Crispin, who was born in England, about 1610, and died at sea, on his way to America, in 1681. The latter was the first named of the three commissioners appointed by Penn to settle the province of Pennsylvania, and was also appointed by Penn chief justice. He was rear admiral in the British navy, and served in command of the frigate "Assistance," one hundred and eighty men and forty guns, with Sir William Penn in the first Dutch war. He also served in command of the frigate "Latrel," one hundred and sixty men, thirty soldiers, forty guns, with Sir William Penn in the expedition against the Spanish possessions in the West Indies. Silas Crispin was a member of the Free Society of Traders in Pennsylvania. The Crispins were Normans and came to England with William the Conqueror, one of them serving as an officer under his command in the battle of Hastings, 1066.

James Watts Mercur, son of Ulysses and Sarah Simpson (Davis) Mercur, was born in Towanda, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, December 3, 1856, and attended private schools at his birthplace until reaching the age of fourteen, when he went to Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, New Hampshire. There and at Andover, where he remained for a short time, he was prepared for Harvard University, which he entered in 1874, graduating in 1878 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He was a student at Harvard contemporaneously with President Roosevelt, though not in the same class. Upon graduation he entered the law office of his brother, Rodney A. Mercur, Esq., at Towanda, Pennsylvania, and commenced the study of law. As he had devoted some time while in college to this study, he was admitted to the bar of Bradford county, December 2, 1879. The same month he was admitted to the several courts of Philadelphia county, and practiced law in that city for about twenty years. He was admitted to the Delaware county bar about 1886. For the last two years he has had his office at Media.

Mr. Mercur belongs to no secret societies, but is a member of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, the Pennsylvania Genealogical Society, the Society of Colonial Wars, the Sons of the Revolution, and the Society of the War of 1812, being a member of the executive committee of the last named. He is also a member of the Delaware County Historical Society. Politically he is Republican, and has always been active and interested in that party. He has never held office, but has several times been a delegate to the Republican state convention, and often to the county conventions. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, and was a vestryman of Christ's church, Media, Pennsylvania, for some ten years, having been rector's warden for about six years, but has recently resigned from the vestry.

Mr. Mercur married, March 1, 1881, Marietta Elizabeth Honore Denis. The ceremony was performed in Holy Trinity church, Philadelphia, by the Rt. Rev. William Bacon Stevens, Bishop of Pennsylvania, the Rev. W. Nelson McVickar, now Bishop of Rhode Island, assisting. They have four children: Marie Denis, born January 11, 1882, in Philadelphia; Sarah Davis, born September 2, 1886, at Wallingford, Pennsylvania, as were the two younger children; James Watts, Jr., born July 8, 1891; and Denise Honore, born June 1, 1897. Marie Denis, the eldest of these children, married, July 29, 1902, Thomas Cahall, only child of Dr. Thomas Vickery Cahall and Ella West, his wife, of Frederica, Delaware. Thomas Cahall graduated at Swarthmore College and the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, and is a practicing attorney in the city of Philadelphia, residing at Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Mercur belongs to the New Century Club and the Daughters of the Revolution. She was the founder and the first regent of the Delaware County Chapter of this society.

Marietta Elizabeth Honore Denis, wife of James Watts Mercur, was educated at the Moravian Seminary, South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, Brooke Hall, Media, Pennsylvania, and at Miss Anna Mary Longstreth's school in Philadelphia. Her father was Narcisse Francois Honore Denis, born at Guiprez, France, February 9, 1799, son of Pierre Geffroy Denis, born in 1757, died April 4, 1829, and Henriette Jeanne Georgine Maubec. His paternal grandparents were Geffroy Denis and Anne Guichard. His maternal grandmother was an Honore. He was educated for a surgeon, but was unable to stand the sight of blood, and so took up the study of chemistry and became very expert. For some years he was with one of the largest chemists in Paris, namely, the firm of Duval & Robiquet. He came to Philadelphia about 1832, at once began the manufacture of chemicals and in 1834 formed a partnership with George D. Rosengarten for the manufacture of chemicals and drugs. In 1856 he retired from business, having accumulated a competence. He is described in Scharf & Westcott's "History of Philadelphia" as a "chemist of great ability."

The mother of Marietta Elizabeth Honore Denis was Marietta Randolph, born November 24, 1815, died July 2, 1901. Her maternal grandfather was William Randolph, born July 3, 1794, died in 1861. He was in the war of 1812. The two maternal great-grandfathers were Samuel F. Randolph, born May 2, 1762, died about 1800, and Peter Tharp, born in 1757, died in 1823. They were both in the Revolutionary war, the former being a minute man of New Jersey and belonging to that class of the militia which was called out at various times during the war for tour of duty and was assigned to any company or regiment that needed a complement. Peter Tharp enlisted June 20, 1777, and served as a private in Captain William Gordon's company, Colonel Elias Dayton's Third New Jersey Regiment. Shortly after the surrender at Yorktown he was transferred to Captain Mitchell's company of the same regiment, having rendered about two years' actual service.

Mrs. Mercur, through her mother, is descended from Adam Berkhoven, who came from Cologne to New Amsterdam in 1642; he married, March 19, 1645, in New Amsterdam, Magdalena Jacobs Verdan; his will is dated January 22, 1691-2, probated March 21, 1692, and from Edward Fitz Randolph and Elizabeth Blossom, of Barnstable, Massachusetts, who were married May 10, 1637.

William Simpson, Sr., the grandfather of General John Davis, was an ancestor of President Ulysses Simpson Grant. It will be noticed that President Grant's christian name was the same as that of Chief Justice Mercur, and his middle name that of Mrs. Mercur. President Grant, on several occasions spoke of this fact. It is thought that Jefferson Davis, the president of the Confederacy, was descended from a brother of William Davis, above, who came here about 1740. He, Jefferson Davis, in conversation with General W. W. H. Davis, a son of General John Davis, in 1856, said that he had no doubt of the fact. William Davis had a brother who went south when he came to Pennsylvania. As an interesting fact to show the change of names, Adam Berkhoven was a brewer, and he frequently signed his name "Adam Berkhoven, Brouwer." His son Nicholas, born 1682, after a while dropped out the name "Berkhoven" and signed his name "Nicholas Brouwer." Most or many of the latter name in this country, and also of the name of "Brewer" are descended from Adam Berkhoven.

HUGH SHAW, who was for many years numbered among the leading manufacturers and most highly respected citizens of Chester, Pennsylvania, belonged to a family which had been mill workers for at least two generations. The home of the paternal grandfather of Hugh Shaw was at Grotten Head, Yorkshire, England; where he followed very successfully the trade of a weaver. His children were James, Alice, Betty and Ann.

James Shaw, father of Hugh Shaw, was born at Saddleworth, Yorkshire, England, in the year 1800, and learned the trade of a spinner, at which he worked during the greater part of his life. He married Betty, daughter of Daniel Andrew, of Shelderslow, Saddleworth, Yorkshire, and was the father of the following named children: Samuel, Hugh, William, John, Andrew, James and Elizabeth.

Hugh Shaw, son of James and Betty (Andrew) Shaw, was born December 2, 1823, in Lees, near Oldham, Lancashire, England. At the age of seven he went to work in the mills. It might be supposed that under these circumstances the very little learning acquired in his early childhood would mark the limit of his educational attainments, but such was his ambition that, although working in the mills during the day, he attended school at night, and by this means, joined to habits of close observation and diligent investigation, became possessed of a generous fund of information. He followed the occupation of a spinner until 1843, when he emigrated to the United States, where he was employed by William T. Crooks at what was known as Crooksville, and later Todmorton. After the failure of Mr. Crooks he went to farming. In 1863 Mr. Shaw entered into partnership with David Reese Esrey, rented the mills belonging to Patrick Kelly, at Bridgewater, and there they began the manufacture of cotton and woolen jeans. In 1866 land was purchased at Powhatan, near Chester, on which the firm erected a building with new machinery, changing the name of the works from the Pennellton mills to the Powhatan mills. In 1871 the increase of business warranted the building of another mill, and in 1877 a third was erected, to be used exclusively for the manufacture of a finer class of goods. In January, 1878, the firm of Shaw & Esrey was changed by act of assembly to a limited company, of which Mr. Shaw was one of the most prominent and influential members. The mills were in every respect perfectly equipped for the purpose for which they were designed, the spacious and commodious buildings being provided with every appointment which could in any way facilitate labor and insure safety in case of fire. Employment was provided for three hundred hands, in the welfare of whom the firm manifested a benevolent interest, having erected in connection with the mills comfortable dwelling houses, many of which came in time to be owned by the operatives, the company always lending their aid and encouragement to that end. Mr. Shaw's business record was not only that of a successful manufacturer but of a practical philanthropist. In addition to the labors involved in the proprietorship of these mills, Mr. Shaw was a stockholder in the Glenmore Worsted Mills of Philadelphia, vice-president of the Lincoln Manufactory of Chester, a director of the Chester National Bank, and also vice-president of the Chester Street Railroad Company.

Mr. Shaw was always greatly interested in public affairs, affiliating with the Republican party. He was a burgess of North Chester, and a member of the first select council of the city. He was active in the Masonic order, in which he was a member of high degree, holding the rank of Knight Templar. He was a trustee of the First Presbyterian church and was especially active in helping to raise the debt of the church, also was liberal in aiding hospitals and charitable organizations.

Mr. Shaw married early in life, Hannah Sykes, of Lancashire, England. Of their children only one is now living, Elizabeth, who became the wife of Samuel Crowther, of Chester, in 1866, and was the mother of six children, only one of whom, a daughter named Bessie, is now living. After the death of his wife Mr. Shaw married, in 1853, Ann, daughter of James Boaz, of Moxley, England. His second family consisted of three children: William H., deceased; Mary B., a director of the New Century Club and of Chester Hospital; and Hannah C., who is the wife of J. Max Bernard, of Chester. Mrs. Shaw died in 1891. Throughout his life Mr. Shaw continued in business, maintaining the various activities in which he had taken a prominent part for so many years. His death occurred August 30, 1894, in the seventy-first year of his age, and was felt to be a loss not only to his family and near friends, but to the community in which for more than a quarter of a century he had faithfully discharged the duties of an able and energetic business man and a public-spirited citizen. Amid all his great and deserved prosperity, he had always preserved his simplicity of character and manners, always remained emphatically a man of the people, manifesting a true spirit of benevolence, ever ready to extend a helping hand to those less fortunate than himself.

Hugh Shaw

Hugh Shaw

FREDERICK AYDELOTTE AND WILLIAM E. HOWARD. These two brothers, leading business men of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, are representatives of one of the oldest families in the state of Delaware, being descended from one of two brothers who emigrated from England in the early part of the seventeenth century. The ancestor of the Delaware branch of the Howards received from the proprietary a large land grant in Sussex county, which was the homestead of his descendants for two centuries. Prominent among the names of those members of the family who have figured largely in the colonial and national history of the state is that of John Eager Howard, conspicuous in the annals of the Revolution.

William Howard, son of Neemiah Howard, and grandfather of Frederick Aydelotte and William E. Howard, was born in Baltimore Hundred, Sussex county, Delaware, where he was a large planter and the owner of many slaves. He belonged to the Democratic party and was a man of great political influence. He is entitled to the distinction of being classed among the pioneers in the anti slavery cause, having become during the latter part of his life so profoundly convinced of the error of the system that before his death he emancipated all his slaves. Mr. Howard was three times married, and was the father of ten children. His first wife was Rhoda Wharton, nee Aydelotte, widow of Anton Wharton. Mr. Howard died in 1831, at the age of sixty five, and his wife survived him thirty-five years, dying in her eightieth year.

George Washington Howard, son of William and Rhoda Aydelotte (Wharton) Howard, was born on the homestead, February 20, 1818. After a common-school education he settled as a farmer on one of the plantations included in his ancestral acres, where he remained for a number of years, removing in 1862 to Berlin, Worcester county, Maryland, in order that his children might enjoy greater facilities for education. In his new home he engaged in wagon-building and in the manufacture of agricultural implements. In 1869 he removed to Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he established himself in the grocery business. In politics Mr. Howard was an old-line Whig, identifying himself in after years with the Republican party. It is recorded to his honor that at the outbreak of the Civil war he was one of the only five men in Berlin, Maryland, who adhered to the Federal cause, and who had the courage to raise the national flag at that initial period. This incident in his life, though conspicuously notable, is not exceptional in character, being simply in accordance with the unflinching fidelity to principle which he displayed throughout his career in all matters, great and small. Mr. Howard married Leah Cannon, daughter of Gilbert Tennent Poole, of Milton, Delaware, principal of one of the leading academies of that state. The family of the Pooles is nearly related to those of the Cannons and Waples, both prominent in Delaware from an early period, the latter family dating its American origin from 1640. Mr. and Mrs. Howard were the parents of six children: Clara Tennent, who became the wife of W. V. Harper, of Philadelphia; Mary Anne; George Washington, Jr.; Frederick Aydelotte, mentioned at length hereinafter; Rhoda Ester, who married Dr. George D. Cross, of Chester; and William Edward, also mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Howard died in Chester, in 1881, at the age of sixty-three. His wife survives him, being still a resident of the city which has been her home for so many years.

Frederick Aydelotte Howard, son of George Washington and Leah Cannon (Poole) Howard, was born October 20, 1855, in Baltimore Hundred, Sussex county, Delaware, and received his primary education in the academy at Berlin, Maryland, afterward taking a limited course in the grammar school at Chester, Pennsylvania, and at the age of sixteen becoming a student in Bryant & Stratton's business college in Philadelphia. On finally leaving school, he served for a time as clerk in the post office at Chester, Pennsylvania, and at the age of eighteen engaged in the retail grocery and commission business with his father and brother, under the firm name of G. W. Howard & Sons. The business not meeting with a full measure of success, the partnership was dissolved in 1876, and Mr. Howard spent some time in traveling in the southwest, hunting, fishing and camping out, after which, in conjunction with a Canadian friend, he purchased a boat, in which they floated twelve hundred miles down the Red river, to Shreveport, Louisiana, thence by steamer to New Orleans, whence they proceeded by boat to Cincinnati, Ohio. After this extended trip Mr. Howard returned home in 1877, and engaged in business with his brother, George Washington Howard, under the firm name of Howard Brothers. As commission merchants and wholesale grocers the firm was successful from the first, conducting business in a store which they erected on the site of their present building, on the northwest corner of Sixth and Welsh streets. To the firm of Howard Brothers belongs the distinction of having been the founders of the commission business in Chester, where they were also pioneers in the wholesale trade. In 1889 George Washington Howard withdrew from the firm for the purpose of engaging in another line of business, his place being filled by the youngest brother, William Edward Howard, who has ever since maintained his connection with the firm as an equal partner. The business has been gradually enlarged and extended, having connections in Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, where six commercial travelers are kept constantly on the road. The two-story brick building which stands on the site of their old store is forty by one hundred and fifty feet in dimensions, with a commodious store room in the basement, and an addition of fifty by fifty feet in size. The establishment in all its appointments is arranged with a view to the complete and satisfactory conduct of the business, and gives employment to a force of twelve assistants. The firm of Howard Brothers is to-day doing the largest wholesale grocery business of any wholesale house, with one exception, between Philadelphia and Baltimore. This success has been achieved no less by the reputation which the firm has established for honorable dealing than by their executive ability and application to business. In addition to the revenues derived from their wholesale grocery business, Howard Brothers are the possessors of valuable lands included within the city limits of Chester.

Frederick A. Howard is a member of the Republican party, with which he has been identified from his early youth, and takes an earnest interest in the advancement of measures advocated by his political organization, but without any trace of partisanship. He is and has been president of the board of park commissioners since its inception and is a director in the First National Bank of Chester.

Mr. Howard married, June 1, 1882, Besse Dunn, daughter of the Rev. John J. Pearce, a member of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. and Mrs. Howard have a family of five children: John Pearce; Mary Anna; Frederick A., Jr.; William E. and Besse Dunn. Mrs. Howard is a lineal descendant in the sixth generation of John Alden, of Mayflower fame. Her father, the Rev. Mr. Pearce, was a representative from the Lock Haven district in Congress, just before the outbreak of the Civil war, and, with one exception, was the youngest member of that Congress, being only twenty-nine years of age. Mrs. Howard's uncle, the Hon. Stewart Pearce, was the historian of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania.

William Edward Howard, son of George Washington and Leah Cannon (Poole) Howard, is the junior member of the firm of Howard Brothers, and is also associated with his brother, Frederick Aydelotte Howard, in his real-estate interests, being known as one of the most enterprising, honorable and successful business men in the community. William E. Howard was elected sheriff of Delaware county in October, 1902, and is now serving in that office. Since he became sheriff the first hanging in fifty-three years has taken place, and three more are to be performed. True to the traditions of his family for two generations, he is a Republican, and has taken an active part in politics ever since he became of age. He is a member of thirteen Republican clubs, including all of that party in Delaware county, and wields a potent influence.

June 23, 1903, Mr. Howard married Miss Margaret Fulton Walker, of Ambler, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Mrs. Phoebe Walker. Mr. and Mrs. Howard reside in their beautiful home at Park Place, Chester.

BENJAMIN GARTSIDE. Benjamin Gartside, a leading man of affairs of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a representative of a family of noted manufacturers, the founder of the race in America having been the pioneer in the woolen industries of Chester. Benjamin Gartside, grandfather of the present bearer of the name, was born May 26, 1794, in Rochdale, Lancashire, England, and after a limited education learned the trade of hand-loom weaving, which he pursued until his emigration to the United States in 1831. Choosing Philadelphia as his place of abode, he found work at the Blockley Mills, where he remained until 1833, when he removed to Manayunk and entered the employ of Joseph Ripka. In 1838 his circumstances were such as to justify him in engaging in business on his own account, in which enterprise he used at first but one hand-loom, but afterward, as he prospered, introduced four power-looms. In 1840, having rented a mill on the Wissahickon creek, he fitted it with suitable machinery and power-looms, and conducted the business successfully until 1843, when he removed to Cardington, Delaware county, and there leased a mill for nine years. Here, having introduced a new and complete set of machinery, before long he found himself at the head of a flourishing business, and removed at the expiration of his lease to Chester, where in 1852 he built a factory, which was at the time one of the most complete establishments in the country. This factory, now known as the Keokuk Mills, is situated at the foot of Fulton street, having been enlarged since its establishment by the purchase of additional land and the erection of more buildings. The works cover over two acres of ground, comprising the square between Front street and the Delaware river and Parker and Fulton streets, and the mill is equipped with all the latest improved machinery. January 1, 1857, the firm name became B. Gartside & Sons. Mr. Gartside was closely identified with every movement for advancing the growth and prosperity of the city in which he resided, serving for many years as councilman of the borough, and filling various other positions of trust. He was the originator of the First National Bank of Chester, and was one of the directors of the Chester Mutual Insurance Company. He took a prominent part in the projection of the Chester Rural Cemetery. During the early period of his residence in this country Mr. Gartside was an old-line Whig, but later became a Republican. In religious belief he affiliated with the Baptists, being one of the oldest deacons in period of service in the church of which he was a member. In 1815 Mr. Gartside married Miss Elizabeth Kershaw, of Rochdale, England, and was the father of eight children: Enoch; Robert; Mary, who became the wife of John Kershaw; John; James; Ann, who married Jonathan Grant; Amos, and Joseph. In 1857 James and Amos Gartside were taken into partnership by their father.

John Gartside, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Kershaw) Gartside, was born October 25, 1821, in Rochdale, Lancashire, England, and after a brief period at school was apprenticed to the "piecing" business. In 1831 he accompanied his parents to the United States, and at once found employment in the Blockley Mills in Philadelphia; where he remained until 1835, when the family removed to Manayunk. In 1838 he became an employe in his father's mills, where he remained until 1850, when he removed to Chester and formed a co-partnership with Samuel Cliff, under the firm name of Cliff & Gartside, engaging in the dyeing business. In 1852, his father having erected the Keokuk Mills, he rented a room in the building in order that he might follow his legitimate trade. During the Civil war Mr. Gartside served as one of the emergency recruits in the Gettysburg campaign, returning to business at the expiration of his period of service. He died in June, 1887. Mr. Gartside was for many years one of the directors of the First National Bank of Chester, and occupied a prominent position in commercial circles. He married, in 1846, Margaret, daughter of Joseph Smith, of Blockley. His family consisted of five children: Enoch, deceased; Benjamin, mentioned at length hereinafter; Eliza, deceased; Laura; and Joseph, deceased.

8 x

Benjamin Gartside, son of John and Margaret (Smith) Gartside, was born February 4, 1855, in Chester, Pennsylvania, where he received his education in the local schools, after which he assisted his father in the mill until 1895, when he became secretary to the Johnston Railroad Frog & Switch Company.

Mr. Gartside married, February 2, 1876, Mary, daughter of Miller Cox, and has four children: George, Margaret, Ida and Mary. Mrs. Gartside died in 1898. Mr. Gartside has in all respects played the part of a useful and honorable citizen, showing the same traits of character which insured to the former generations of his family their remarkable success.

JAMES GARTSIDE, deceased, of Chester, Pennsylvania, for many years an active partner in the firm of B. Gartside & Sons, was born in Rochdale, England, October 20, 1823, a son of Benjamin and Elizabeth K. Gartside. Benjamin Gartside was born in Rochdale, Lancashire, England, May 26, 1794, and after acquiring a limited education in the public schools of his native county he learned the trade of hand-loom weaving. This occupation he followed in England until 1831, when he came to this country and settled in Philadelphia, securing employment in the Blockley Mills, where he remained for two years. Mr. Gartside then removed to Manayunk, where for a number of years Joseph Ripka was his employer. In 1838 he engaged in business on his own account, first using but one hand-loom, but as his business prospered he increased his facilities, and in 1840 rented a mill on the Wissahickon creek, furnished it with suitable machinery and power-looms, and conducted the business until 1843, when he removed to Cardington, Delaware county, and there leased a mill for nine years. He was very successful in his management of this enterprise, owing to the fact that he introduced a new and complete set of machinery, making it in every way adapted to his business. In 1852 he built a factory in Chester, whither he removed, and through his technical knowledge of the business, together with great industry and strict integrity, he enjoyed a career of remarkable prosperity.

On January 1, 1857, Mr. Gartside admitted his sons, Amos and James, into partnership, under the style of Benjamin Gartside & Sons, and during his residence in Chester Mr. Benjamin Gartside was actively identified with its growth and prosperity. He was formerly an old-line Whig in politics, but on the formation of the Republican party joined its ranks and was elected to fill the office of councilman of the borough. Mr. Gartside was the originator of the First National Bank of Chester, director of the Chester Mutual Insurance Company, and a projector of the Chester Rural cemetery. In his religion he was a Baptist, and one of the oldest deacons in period of service in the church of which he was a member. In 1815 Mr. Gartside was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Kershaw, of Rochdale, England, and their children were: Enoch, Robert, Mary, John, James, Ann, Amos and Joseph Gartside.

James Gartside, fourth son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Gartside, acquired a very limited education in the public schools of his native country, from which he emigrated in company with his parents in 1831, being then only eight years of age. Shortly after his parents settled in Philadelphia young James entered the mill conducted by his uncle, James Kershaw, where he learned the trade of a spinner upon throstles, and after his removal to Manayunk he continued in the same line of trade, being employed by Joseph Ripley. His father having started a milling business at Blockley, Mr. Gartside resigned from his position and entered the mill, where he thoroughly familiarized himself with all the details and took such an interest in the work that he was admitted into partnership in 1857. He continued his connection with the firm until the time of his decease, only being absent from his business for a short time when he participated in the battle of Gettysburg, having previously joined the emergency recruits. In his political affiliations Mr. Gartside was a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, but never sought or desired public office.

On August 17, 1851, Mr. Gartside married Miss Elizabeth Smith, a daughter of Joseph T. and Susannah Smith, of Blockley, now a part of the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gartside were consistent attendants of the Baptist church of Chester.

THE DESHONG FAMILY. For three generations the name of Deshong has been prominent in Delaware county, while in the maternal line the present family trace descent from Joran Kyn (George Keen) the original Swedish settler who located on the site of the present city of Chester, two hundred and sixty years ago.

Peter Deshong, originally Peire De Shaw, the great-grandfather of the present Deshong family of Chester, was of Huguenot descent, who as a young man located in Philadelphia several years prior to the Revolution, and on December 15, 1774, married Susanna Gilman. Their son, Peter Deshong, was born in Philadelphia in 1781, and when a young man came to Chester, where he engaged in merchandising and became one of the leaders in the affairs of the borough. For twenty years he was one of the vestrymen of St. Paul's Episcopal church, and was one of the organizers of the Delaware (National) Bank, one of its first directors, and continued on its board until his death, December 26, 1827. His widow, Mary Odenheimer Deshong, was appointed post-mistress of Chester, a position she held for eight years, when she refused to accept a reappointment to the office. She died in December, 1869, in her ninetyeth year. She was a daughter of John Odenheimer, born at Mayence-on-the-Rhine, in 1723, came to Philadelphia prior to the middle of the eighteenth century, where, being possessed of considerable means, he became a leading dealer and shipper of flour, in which occupation he was very successful. September 17, 1761, John Odenheimer married Mary, daughter of John Henry Kippele, whose descendants intermarried with the Biddells and the Merrideths. Hon. William M. Merrideth, secretary of the treasury, traces descent in that line. In 1771 John Odenheimer purchased a farm in Chester township, lying along Ridley creek, and after 1793 resided there permanently until his death in 1807. He and his son John, twice sheriff of Delaware county, lived in the style the family had been accustomed to maintain in the fatherland. Hock wines of their own importation were in daily use, and a large silver punch bowl, filled to the brim, goblets and ladle ever handy, stood constantly on a table in the hall, to regale those friends who chanced to drop in for a brief call. To the marriage of John and Mary (Odenheimer) Deshong were born two sons and one daughter—John Odenheimer Deshong, of whom more hereafter; Maurice W. Deshong, born December 14, 1808, and died in Philadelphia, October 9, 1876; and Louisa Deshong, born in 1815, and died in 1884.

John Odenheimer Deshong, Sr., was born in Chester, September 6, 1807. He was educated in the private school in that borough, and in 1828, when he attained his majority, he embarked in a general merchandising business in Chester, by which he accumulated wealth rapidly. In 1843 he engaged in the lumber trade, and with such success that in six years he retired from active business. Possessed of abundant means, he devoted his attention to financial affairs, dealing largely in commercial paper, an occupation in which his confidence in his own opinions, decision, insight as to the motives and capacity of men, together with his clear judgment and ability to weigh the possibilities of success in a business venture, served him well. In 1843 he was elected a director of the Bank of Delaware County, a position he held in the Delaware County National Bank until his death, covering a period of nearly forty years. He was for a quarter of a century a director of the Chester Gas Company. Although often solicited, he would never accept political place, although his opinions were frequently sought in the management of campaigns in which public feeling was excited. He died May 28, 1881. He married, December 6, 1836, Emmaline L., daughter of Dr. Job H. Terrill. Her father was born near New Brunswick, New Jersey, November 18, 1785, and graduated in medicine at the college in his native place. Chance led him to Chester, where he located and soon acquired a lucrative practice. He died June 20, 1844. In 1806 he married Margaret Smith, daughter of Thomas Smith and granddaughter of William Smith, who married Rachel Sandilands, the granddaughter of James Sandilands and great-great-granddaughter of Joran Kyn, the original settler of Upland, now Chester. Mrs. Deshong was born September 20, 1810, and died April 26, 1897, in her eighty-seventh year. To this union were born seven children, five of whom attained adult age. The eldest, Alfred Odenhelmer Deshong, was born September 30, 1837. He was educated in the schools of his native place. In 1865 he and his brother, John O. Deshong, Jr., entered into copartnership in working what was known as the Deshong quarries in Ridley township. For more than thirty years the copartnership existed, terminated only on the death of John O. Deshong, Jr., when Alfred O. Deshong abandoned the business, his multifarious interests forbidding him to give it that attention which he had heretofore done. Mr. Deshong, in 1895, was elected a director of the Delaware County National Bank, a position he is still filling.

John O. Deshong, Jr., born April 30, 1841, and died November 1, 1895, aged fifty-four years, was educated partly in the schools at Chester, graduating from the Central High School, Philadelphia. A gentleman of fine address, varied accomplishments and a conversationalist of rare ability, he soon became noted in the financial world for his excellent judgment in monetary affairs. In 1865 he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Chester Gas Company, a position he retained until 1892, when he declined re-election. In 1881 he was elected a director of the Delaware County National Bank, and was a member of the board until his death in 1895. In 1868 he was elected a member of the council of the city of Chester, representing the old north ward, comprising the present fourth, fifth, and part of the second wards. He was re-elected in 1872 and again in 1875, covering a period of ten years' service, when he declined the re-election which was tendered him.

Louise Deshong born in February, 1848, became the wife of Jonathan Edwards Woodbridge, May 21, 1876.

Clarence Deshong, the youngest son, was born in Chester, December 25, 1850. He was the owner of "The Island Farm" in Ridley township, which he has made, in its various appointments, as commodious buildings, its fine grade of stock and high bred harness driving horses, noted in eastern Pennsylvania as a model in all that has relation to the objects to which it is devoted. In that respect Clarence Deshong is regarded as an authority, as his brother Alfred O. Deshong is in reference to art.

The two brothers reside in the spacious mansion erected by John O. Deshong, Sr., in 1850, located on Edgemont avenue, Chester, the plat extending from Ninth to Twelfth streets, containing twenty-two acres, shade and forest trees, in the heart of the busy city. Within the mansion are gathered paintings, many of which have been prize winners in the Paris salon and other art centers, and each one the finest production of the artist's brush, for that is the standard which alone will secure for them admission to the Deshong collection. The articles of bronze, each with its history, have been the medal winners at some of the great world's fairs during the last quarter of a century, while some are peerless in their class. The ivory carvings are inimitable; many are reputed to be unequalled in the world, while in cloisonne, enamel and lacquer examples the collection is not surpassed in this country. The furnishings, rugs, drapery, and all the accessories which go to make "the house beautiful," are found in the Deshong mansion, where open handed hospitality reigns. Few private residences in eastern Pennsylvania have received as guests so many distinguished men of the army and navy, in public life, in literature, in art, financial and professional circles, as has the Deshong mansion. In a like way, all worthy public charities have ever received due consideration at the hands of these gentlemen. Recently one of the wards of the Chester Hospital, involving the expenditure of a large sum of money, was erected and outfitted at the personal cost of Alfred O. Deshong.

EDWARD SHIMER HICKMAN was born in Thornbury, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, June 24, 1856. His parents were Jesse J. and Annie M. (Shimer) Hickman. His father, Jesse J., was born at Thornbury, June 12, 1832, and his parents were Benjamin and Susan (James) Hickman. The father of Benjamin was Thomas Hickman, who was also born on the old homestead.

Edward S. Hickman lived at his father's home in Thornbury until 1873, and when seventeen years old he went to Media, Delaware county, and became an apprentice to Thomas V. Cooper in the Delaware County American printing office, where he spent four years in mastering the printer's trade. At the end of that time he returned to the farm for five years, and during the following five years lived in Warren county, Pennsylvania. For a short period of time he resided in Edgmont, Delaware county, and in 1888 removed to Cheyney, and succeeded George S. Cheyney in a mercantile business, in which he is still engaged. Although his early education was not directly in that line, he has shown business talent, and is considered an expert in financial matters. He is conversant with politics, and is up to date in all current events. He is a Republican, and stands well in the estimation of his fellow townsmen, as is evinced by their united support in electing him to various public offices. For many years he was collector of taxes, and has been the county treasurer since 1899. Mr. Hickman was married September 22, 1882, to Miss Belle D. Larkin, a daughter of John Larkin, of Bethel, Delaware county. They have four children, Jesse J., Edward S., Helen and Margaret Hickman.

JOHN W. SMITH, a leading business man of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to an English family which possesses large landed estates in Great Britain. John W. Smith was born in Manchester, England, and received his education at the Queen Elizabeth grammar school at Mansfield, near Nottingham. In 1888, being then in the employ of T. I. Birkin & Company, Mr. Smith came to the United States as the representative of the firm in their New York office. He remained in that city until 1896, when the firm opened a manufactory in Philadelphia. The entire charge of this establishment was placed in the hands of Mr. Smith, and when in 1898 they removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, he was continued in the same position which he still holds. His business activities, great as they are, do not occupy his time and thoughts to the exclusion of other interests. He is prominent in Masonic circles, being a member of high degree, is on the board of management of the Chester Hospital and takes an active part in social organizations, holding membership in the Keystone Club and filling the office of president in the Highland Club, of which he was one of the organizers.

Mr. Smith married, in 1888, Julia, daughter of A. Collier, of England, and has four children: Edith Melanie, Charles Adolph, William Alfred Hall and Frank Stanley.

JOHN L. HAWTHORNE, deputy collector of customs of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of John Hawthorne, who was born in England and lived in the north of Ireland for a few years before coming to this country, about 1740. His sons William and Thomas participated in the war of 1812, where they displayed marked ability and heroism on the field of battle.

William Hawthorne, grandfather of J. L. Hawthorne, was born in Newcastle, Delaware, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits all his life. His wife was a member of a highly respected Scotch family who came to this country before the arrival of William Penn. The celebrated author Nathaniel Hawthorne, was a member of this family, born at Salem, Massachusetts, in 1804. He wrote a number of stories for the journals, which he afterward collected in 1837, and published under the title of "Twice-told Tales," a second volume of which appeared in 1851. In 1842 he published "The Liberty Tree," and in 1845 "The Journal of an African Cruiser;" "The Scarlet Letter" appeared in 1851, and was received with universal approbation, as was also "The House of the Seven Gables" and "Mosses from an Old Manse." He was also the author of "Blithedale Romance" and "The Marble Faun," which is regarded by some as the best of his works. His death occurred at Plymouth, New Hampshire, in 1864.

William M. Hawthorne, the father of John L. Hawthorne, was born March 3, 1833, in Newcastle, Delaware, where he obtained a common-school education. He chose the occupation of farming for his vocation in life, which he pursued in his native town for a number of years. In 1881 he removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, where he devoted his time and attention to the same line of trade. He is a consistent member of the Third Presbyterian church, of which he has been for many years and is still an elder. He was united in marriage to Miss Emma B. Short, daughter of James Short, of Delaware, who was a descendant on both the paternal and maternal sides from noted and wealthy families of Delaware. Eight children were born of this union, two of whom are living at the present time: Lizzie D. and J. L. Hawthorne. Mrs. William M. Hawthorne died January 17, 1878.

John L. Hawthorne was born in Newcastle county, Delaware, March 4, 1861, and acquired his education at the academy in Newark, Delaware, and later was a student in the Delaware college. Shortly after his graduation he removed with his parents to Chester, Pennsylvania, where he was engaged as a clerk in a store until 1883. He then entered the wholesale commission business, and the success he attained in this line of trade is indeed creditable, as it was acquired through persistent, honorable effort and splendid business ability. He also devoted some of his time to the reading of law, and having prepared himself for that profession on June 1, 1893, he retired from the commission business.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Hawthorne was an ardent advocate of Republican measures, and in 1887 joined the Young Men's Republican Club, being its president in 1890. In 1889 he was appointed a delegate to the League of Republican Clubs. In 1892 he was a candidate for the legislature, but withdrew two weeks before the convention; in 1893 he was appointed a member of the state committee, and was also a candidate for the office of city comptroller. He was elected by the city council to fill an unexpired term, and in 1893 was re-elected comptroller, which position he filled for six years altogether. In 1894 he was a candidate for the office of recorder of deeds; he was one of six candidates for the office, and in the election came next to the successful contestant. In 1896 he was re-elected to the office of city comptroller, and the following year was a candidate for the position of postmaster of the city of Chester. In 1899 Mr. Hawthorne was appointed deputy collector of customs, his continuance in the office standing in evidence of his fidelity to his obligations. Mr. Hawthorne has been appointed a delegate to state and county conventions, was chairman of the city committee, and a prominent member of the Media Republican Club. He is also one of the charter members of the Elks, and he holds membership in many other orders. He was one of the first trustees of the Cambridge Savings Trust Company.

John W. Smith.

On December 29, 1883, Mr. Hawthorne married Miss Eva A. Perkins, daughter of William Perkins, a member of an old and honored family of Maryland. Six children were born to them, five of whom are now living, Nellie Grant, Bessie D., William M., Ethel M., Marion E. and John L. Hawthorne, Jr. The family are earnest and faithful members of the Madison Street Methodist Episcopal church, of which Mr. Hawthorne is a trustee.

A. DUNCAN YOCUM, M. D. The name of Dr. A. Duncan Yocum, superintendent of public schools of Chester, Pennsylvania, is well known in educational circles, and although a comparatively young man, he is recognized as one of the most able educators of the state. He is a descendant on the paternal side of one of the first families of Swedes that settled in Pennsylvania in 1638, the earliest settler of the name being entered in Penn's census as "Peter Yocum, Gentleman," and recorded as a member of the first jury empaneled in the colony. On his mother's side he is directly descended from Jonathan Gere of Heavytree, Derbyshire, whose two sons, one of whom, George, being the immigrant ancestor, were kidnapped in 1632 by their guardian, an uncle, put on board a ship bound for Boston, and left to shift for themselves at the tender ages of eleven and nine. The Revolution put a stop to the litigation by which their descendants were endeavoring to regain the property from which they had been thus defrauded. James Gere, great-grandson of George, and great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was high sheriff of Massachusetts under George III. His son married a sister of Ethan Allen, and his grandson, a niece of Jane McCray.

Rev. A. Duncan Yocum, father of Dr. Yocum, was born in York, Pennsylvania, in 1832. His maternal grandfather, Andrew Duncan, was sheriff of York county, a general of militia, and later one of the first settlers of Ohio. He was educated at York Academy and Westminster College. At the outbreak of the Civil war he served in the quartermaster's department, and later as lieutenant of volunteers. Through one of the family divisions common to the period, his uncles, General J. K. and Colonel Patterson Duncan, cast their fortunes with the south, the former being in command of Forts Jackson and St. Philip when Farragut forced the defenses of New Orleans. At the close of the war, he pursued a theological course and became a prominent minister of the Central Presbyterian conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1868 he married Laura M. Gere, daughter of the Rev. Dr. John A. and Sarah (Neal) Gere, the latter a sister of the mother of Grover Cleveland. Three children were born of this union, Albert Duncan, Sarah Gere and Alverda M. (Mrs. George E. Barton). Rev. Mr. Yocum died in 1889, but his wife is still living.

Dr. A. Duncan Yocum was born in York, Pennsylvania, July 22, 1869. He graduated from Dickinson College in 1889, before he had completed his nineteenth year. While in college he was editor of the "Dickinsonian," president of the Belles Lettres Literary Society, president of the Athletic Association, class historian and a member of the Beta Theta Psi fraternity. From 1889 to 1890 he was an instructor in the Chester high school; 1890-1895, supervising principal of public schools in Smyrna, Delaware; and from 1895 to 1900, superintendent of schools in Millville, New Jersey. While a resident of the state of Delaware he was one of the founders and the first president of the State Principals' Association, and a main organizer of the summer schools for teachers, which have done so much to raise the standard of education in that state. In 1900 he received the degree of Ph. D. from the University of Pennsylvania, after four years of resident work as a graduate student, carried on while he was in charge of Millville schools. Later in the same year he was appointed to his present position, as superintendent of schools in Chester, Pennsylvania. Dr. Yocum's thesis,

"An Inquiry into the Teaching of Addition and Subtraction," published for the University of Pennsylvania, has attracted much favorable attention from school men and received high praise from the educational press. Besides being a frequent contributor to professional periodicals, and a prominent worker in educational associations and societies, he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Penn Club of Chester and various beneficial societies.

In 1891 Dr. Yocum married Miss May Turner, daughter of Richard E. Turner, of Chester, Pennsylvania. They have one child, Arnott Duncan Yocum, born in Smyrna, Delaware, May 3, 1892.

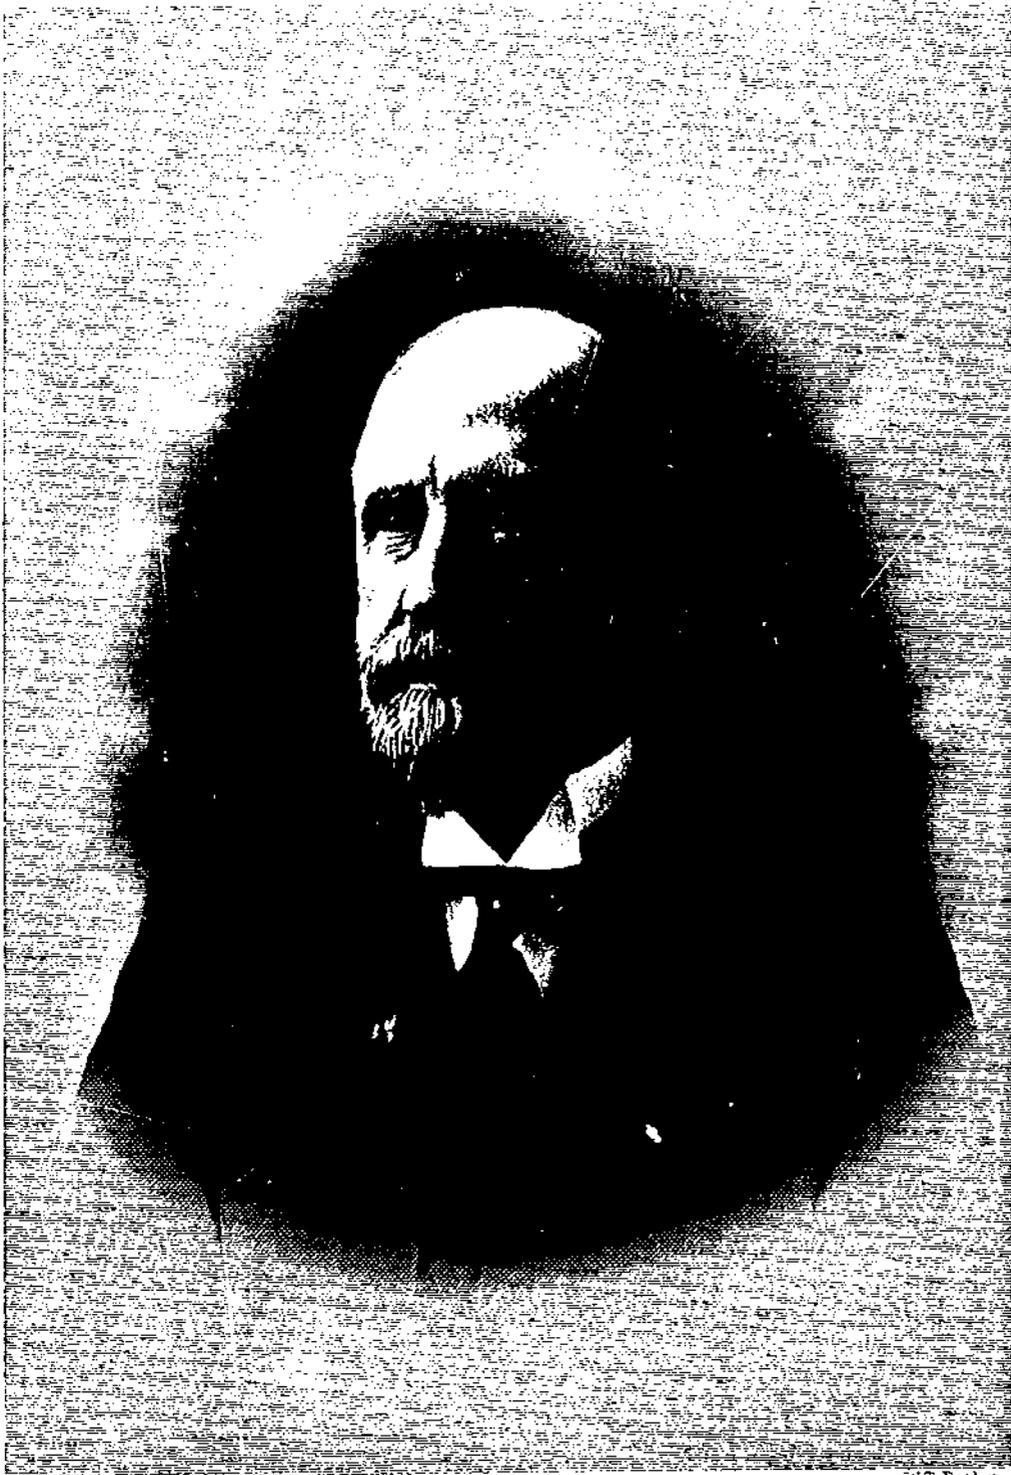

J. FRANK BLACK, president of the Chester National Bank, of Chester, Pennsylvania, is descended from Scotch-Irish ancestors who were among the early settlers of Pennsylvania. Samuel Black, his paternal grandfather, was a pioneer settler in Marple township, Delaware county. There he married Catherine Van Leer, and they became the parents of six children—Joseph, Samuel, William V., Ann, Catherine V. and John. William V., third child in this family, was born at the family homestead, August 22, 1796. In his early life he was a farmer and accumulated considerable means, to which he added while following a mercantile career. His later years were passed in the city of Chester, where he died November 24, 1883, at the venerable age of eighty-seven years. His wife was Maria Cochran, a daughter of Isaac Cochran, of Delaware county, and of this marriage were born nine children—Catherine J., who became the wife of J. C. Lindsay; Isaac C., Samuel G., Elizabeth Jane, William, Hannah Maria, Susannah, Henry B. and J. Frank Black.

J. Frank Black, youngest child in the family last named, was born October 16, 1839, in Upper Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He began his education in the public schools at Haverford, and took an advanced course in Galey's Academy at Media, to which village his parents removed when he was fourteen years of age. After leaving school he entered his father's general store, where he was engaged as salesman and clerk until he attained his majority, when he formed a partnership with his elder brother, Henry B. Black, and the two succeeded to the business which their parent had conducted. In 1862 J. Frank Black, impelled by patriotic feeling, enlisted in Company D, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was at once appointed to a sergeantcy. The term of the regiment was for nine months, but the exigencies of the times protracted its service to ten months, during which time it was engaged in one of the most eventful campaigns of the Army of the Potomac and bore a gallant part in the desperate and bloody battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville and a number of minor engagements.

Honorably discharged from the army, Mr. Black returned to Media and resumed the business which he had temporarily abandoned. In 1865 he located in Chester, where he engaged in lumber, coal, saw and planing-mill business in association with his father-in-law, C. P. Morton, under the firm name of Morton & Black. Six months later, Henry B. Black was admitted to the firm, which now became Morton, Black & Brother; in 1879 Henry B. Black retired, and the firm resumed its former title of Morton & Black. Later, Crosby M. Black, son of J. Frank Black, was admitted to the firm, which now was styled Morton, Black & Son, a name which was afterward changed to that of J. Frank Black & Son. In 1891 the firm was merged into the Chester Lumber & Coal Company, with J. Frank Black as president and Crosby M. Black as treasurer and general manager, and the corporation has long been known as one of the most important of its class in the state.

A man of great energy and boundless enterprise, Mr. Black has also given his service to many other financial and business concerns in the capacity of stockholder and director. He is president of the Thacker Coal & Coke Company of Virginia. For eighteen years he has been connected with the Chester Freight Line, operating steamboats between Chester and Philadelphia, and for sixteen years of this time he has been the president of the company. His principal personal interests, however, are with the Chester National Bank, with which he has been connected since its founding, in which he aided, and in which he was one of the original directors. In April, 1893, he was elected president, and he has continued in that position to the present time. It is not too much to say that the splendid development of this substantial institution has been largely due to his tireless energy and masterly management. In 1899 the directorate erected a new bank building, which is a beautiful ornament to the city—a detached stone, one-story edifice of composite architecture, somewhat after the Egyptian type, with a deep portal, arch-crowned and displaying two massive Corinthian columns on either side. The interior, with its connecting room, directors' room and safe deposit vault, in beauty and utility would easily disparage the great majority of banking houses in the country, even in the metropolis itself. The cost of building was seventy-five thousand dollars, and expert builders aver that it could not be duplicated at the present time for less than one hundred thousand dollars. The extent to which the bank contributes to the business of Chester may be discerned from the fact that on September 15, 1902, its resources amounted to $1,761,559.91, an increase of $478,479.35 over February 4, 1899. The capital stock is $300,000, and the outstanding issue is $146,500. The directorate comprises some of the largest men of affairs in the city—John B. Roach, Richard Wetherill, Charles B. Houston, H. B. Black, William S. Blakely, Joseph Deering, George C. Hetzel, George B. Lindsay and J. Frank Black.

Mr. Lewis Publishing Co.

W. T. Bather

J. Mawer Black

Mr. Black has performed valuable service in the city council, of which he was a member for six terms, and during two of which he was president of the select council. In religious faith he is a Presbyterian, and for a number of years he has served as ruling elder in the Third church. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, and he has frequently been a delegate to county and state conventions.

Mr. Black was married, February 16, 1865, to Miss Sue C. Morton, only child of Crosby P. Morton, of Chester, formerly a resident of Philadelphia. She was of splendid Revolutionary stock. Her great-grandfather was John Morton, of Pennsylvania, who occupied many important positions under the colonial government and was judge of the provincial supreme court. He was a member of the First Stamp Act Congress in 1765, and of the First and Second Continental Congresses. It is narrated of him that, in order to attend the last named body, which was to take action upon the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, he took his horse out of the plow to set out on his journey. He was the first of the signers of the Declaration who died, and on one side of the monument erected to him in St. Paul's burying ground at Chester is the following inscription: "In voting by states upon the question of the Independence of the American Colonies, there was a tie until the vote of Pennsylvania was given, two members of which voted in the affirmative, and two in the negative. The tie continued until the vote of the last member, John Morton, decided the promulgation of the glorious Diploma of American Freedom." Mrs. Black is a cultured and highly educated woman, and her life has abounded in deeds which have endeared her to the community. She is active in church work and in aid of the enterprises of the Young Men's Christian Association. Her most conspicuous effort has been in connection with the Chester Hospital, of which she is president, and for which she has erected a very complete building for nurses. Of her marriage with Mr. Black have been born three children, of whom two survive—Crosby M., who married Mary E. Chambers, and to whom were born two children, Sue M. and J. Frank; and Sarah C., who resides with her parents.

JOHN A. WALLACE. A well merited success has crowned the capably directed business efforts of John A. Wallace, whose advancement financially is due entirely to his own resources and ability. The family of which John A. Wallace is a member is of Scotch origin, and is one of the oldest and most respected in New York, as some of the ancestors settled there at an early day. John Wallace, grandfather of John A. Wallace, was a native of Dutchess county, New York, where he passed his entire life engaged in the occupation of farming. His death occurred about the year 1842.

David Wallace, father of John A. Wallace, was born in 1810, on the old homestead in Dutchess county, New York. He followed shipbuilding and contracting in New York city during most of his active life, and having secured a comfortable competency he retired from the active duties of a business career, for a number of years enjoying the peace and quiet of his home farm in Dutchess county. Politically he was a member of the Whig party until 1856, when he joined the ranks of the Republicans and ever since supported the men and measures of that party. In 1838 Mr. Wallace married Miss Gertrude Paulding, a daughter of Levi Paulding, a native of Dutchess county, who was of German descent, and a brother of Major John Paulding, of Revolutionary fame; he was also connected with the Paulding family of which Major Paulding was a member, who with two other Continental soldiers, captured Major Andre upon his attempt to regain the British lines after his interview with Benedict Arnold. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace, a son, John A., and three daughters.

John A. Wallace, only son of David and Gertrude Wallace, was born in Hyde Park, Dutchess county, New York, February 11, 1842. He acquired his elementary education in the public schools of New York city, after which he entered the Stratford (Connecticut) Academy, and at the age of eighteen years became a student of Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts, where he pursued the collegiate course until the breaking out of the Civil war. He then severed his connection with the college and enlisted as a private in the One Hundred and Fiftieth Regiment, New York Infantry, and later served with the Sixty-sixth Regiment, New York Veteran Volunteers. After his return from the war he was engaged in teaching for two years in Dutchess county, and then removed to New York city, where he had been offered a position in the county clerk's office. After serving in this capacity for a short period he was offered a more lucrative appointment in the chief engineer's office at the Brooklyn navy yard, where he was soon afterward promoted to the post of chief clerk. In 1873 he resigned this position and removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, to accept a responsible position in the ship-yard of John Roach, the eminent ship-builder who constructed many of the war vessels for the United States government.

Mr. Wallace became interested in journalism in 1882, when he organized the Chester Times Publishing Company, being elected secretary and treasurer of the company and editor of the paper. After various changes in the organization Mr. Wallace purchased the entire business, and successfully conducted "The Times" alone until 1892, when, on account of failing health, superinduced by too close application to business, he disposed of one-half of the establishment to William C. Sproul, with whom he has ever since been associated in the ownership and management of the Chester Times. Their newspaper plant is located in one of the finest buildings devoted to the publishing business in this country, and it is equipped with the most modern machinery. His ability as an editor is recognized by the newspaper fraternity throughout the state, and "The Times" is universally conceded to be one of the brightest, newsiest and best papers printed in America. In its editorials he has always been outspoken and fearless, ready to give credit where it is due and also ready to denounce the wrong, whether in social or political affairs. Mr. Wallace was appointed postmaster of the city of Chester by President Arthur, and served as such until removed by President Cleveland in 1885; in July, 1902, he was again appointed postmaster and is serving in that capacity at the present time. He is president of the Board of Trade of Chester, Pennsylvania, and also a director in the Cambridge Trust Company of Chester. He is a prominent member of Chester Lodge, No. 236, Free and Accepted Masons; Chester Chapter, No. 258, Royal Arch Masons; Chester Commandery, No. 66, Knights Templar; Wilde Post, No. 25, G. A. R.; and Chester Lodge, No. 92, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He also holds membership in the Chi Psi fraternity of Williams College.

For more than a quarter of a century Mr. Wallace has been a prominent and consistent member of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Chester, and for many years has been the president of its board of trustees. He is also superintendent of the Sunday-school connected with the church. He is now vice-president of the Chester Heights Camp Meeting Association, and also a trustee in the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

On May 20, 1864, Mr. Wallace married Miss Emma Coyle, a daughter of Cornelius Coyle, of Rhinebeck, New York. Five of their children are still living: Frank, who is foreman in the government printing office at Washington; Kate, wife of J. Frank Kitts, of the Merchants' National Bank of Philadelphia; Robert, Sarah Gertrude and Anna Wallace.

DAVID REESE ESREY, deceased, was numbered among the most successful and highly esteemed residents of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where his life industry and usefulness and his record for integrity gave him a firm hold upon the regard and confidence of the community.

Joseph Esrey, grandfather of David R. Esrey, was a descendant of an old English ancestry. He was a prominent resident of Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, being actively interested in the industrial, political and social affairs. He married Miss Hannah Haley, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and the following named children were born to them: John, William, Joseph, Jonathan, Richard, Margaret, Elizabeth, Mary, Ann and Sydney Esrey. Jonathan Esrey, father of David R. Esrey, was born in Delaware county Pennsylvania, in 1791, and resided in that neighborhood all his life. He was prominently identified with the commercial and political life of the county, being chosen by his fellow citizens to serve in the capacity of sheriff, and he was the incumbent of that office at the time of his death, which occurred in 1851. Mr. Esrey was twice married, his first wife having been Margaret Newlin, and by this marriage one son was born, Edmund Esrey. His second wife was Jane Hawkins, a daughter of William and Sarah Hawkins, and their children were: Sarah, Eliza Ann, George W., David R., Lydia, Henry F., Mary E., William, Jonathan, Jane and Sydney Esrey.

David R. Esrey, son of Jonathan and Jane Esrey, was born December 4, 1825, in Ridley township, Pennsylvania, and at an early age removed to Wallingford, Nether Providence, where his youth was occupied in various industrious pursuits or in attendance at the village school. In 1844, having attained the age of eighteen years, he entered upon his business career in the capacity of clerk in a store at Brook Haven, Chester township, which position he retained for six years. He then purchased the stock of the owner, and for sixteen years successfully conducted the business. In December, 1863, discerning a profitable field in the business of a manufacturer, he entered into partnership with Mr. Hugh Shaw, and purchased of Patrick Kelly, Esq., of Aston township, his interest in the Pennellton Mills, with the right to manufacture Powlhattan jeans. The firm was known as Shaw & Esrey, and in 1865 they purchased a plot of ground on Green street, Chester, with the intention of erecting a mill thereon, but early in the spring of 1866 Mr. Esrey purchased six acres of ground and the mansion on the Engle property at Powhattan, near Chester, after which the firm purchased three acres more. On this plot they erected Powhattan Mill No. 1, to which they removed the machinery of the old mill and added a new set of woolen machinery; they also erected four tenement houses for the use of their employes. In 1871 the business had so increased that, to keep pace with the demand for their goods, another lot of ground was purchased and Mill No. 2 was erected. In the spring of 1877 they decided to erect a third mill to be used exclusively for the manufacture of a finer class of goods. In January, 1878, the firm of Shaw & Esrey was changed under the act of assembly to a limited company, which consisted of Hugh Shaw, David Reese Esrey, John Shaw, H. C. Esrey and William H. Shaw; the following year the stock of H. C. Esrey, deceased, was transferred to C. S. Esrey, and he was admitted to the company. At that time the property owned by the company consisted of three mills, out-building and machinery, fourteen dwelling houses, and a tract of land, with a capital of three hundred thousand dollars. The goods manufactured in these mills were known in the market as Powhattans, Covingtons, Provident, and all wool jeans. In addition to the numerous duties which devolved upon him as a member of this company, Mr. Esrey served as a director of the Delaware County National Bank. In his political affiliations he was formerly an old-line Whig, but later joined the Republican party, being elected on that ticket to serve in various township offices.

Engraving

D. R. Esney

On April 25, 1850, Mr. Esrey married Margaret Marker, daughter of Jonathan M. Marker, of Upper Darby. Their children were: Jonathan, deceased; Henry C., deceased; Charles S.; William H.; and Mary Ella, who died in infancy. Mrs. Esrey died in 1886. Subsequently Mr. Esrey married Sarah E. Blakely, a daughter of Abraham Blakely, a noted manufacturer of Chester. Mr. Esrey was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Chester and president of its board of trustees up to the time of his death, which occurred April 11, 1897. Mrs. Esrey is actively interested in the work of the various societies connected with the Madison Methodist Episcopal church, and also serves as one of the managers of the Chester Hospital.

CHARLES PALMER. Among the members of the legal profession in the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, who have demonstrated their ability to cope successfully with the intricate problems of jurisprudence and whose futures are bright with promise, is Charles Palmer, descendant of John Palmer, who in 1688 purchased one hundred acres of land in Concord township, part of which has remained in the possession of his descendants to the present time. John Palmer was united in marriage to Mary Southery, and the line of descent is as follows: John Palmer, son of John and Mary Palmer, married Martha Yearsley; their son Moses Palmer married Abigail Newlin, whose son, John, born in 1745, married Hannah Martin, daughter of Abram Martin, of Aston, and ten children were born to them, among whom was John, born in 1788, who married Beulah Walter, a daughter of William Walter, of Centreville, Delaware, and their children were: Lewis, William W., John, Rachel, Charles, Hannah, Lydia and Beulah Palmer.

Charles Palmer, grandfather of Charles Palmer, was born September 16, 1811, in Concord township, and the early years of his life were spent in that vicinity. At the age of sixteen years he removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where he was engaged as a clerk for a number of years in a mercantile establishment. He then located in Chester, Pennsylvania, and acted in the same capacity for J. P. & William Eyre until 1833, when he engaged in mercantile pursuits at Beaver Valley, Delaware, but finding that no trade could there be successfully conducted without the sale of liquor, he abandoned this enterprise and engaged in agricultural pursuits. In politics he was formerly a Whig, but later an adherent of the Republican party, and in 1842 was appointed steward of the Delaware county alms-house, which position he held for twelve years, and he was also supervisor for a term of years, being largely instrumental in the improvement of the roads of the township. He was one of the directors of the First National Bank of Media for several years, and of the Delaware County Mutual Insurance Company from its organization. Mr. Palmer was a member of the Society of Friends, and a regular attendant of the Friends' Meeting at Concordville. He married Deborah Pitman, a daughter of Benjamin and Mary Pitman, of Monmouth county, New Jersey, and their children were: Mary F., Lewis, James, Edwin H. and Hannah Ann. The mother of these children died November 1, 1870, and four years later Mr. Palmer married Anna Stoll, of Concord. His death occurred April 12, 1876, in the sixty-fourth year of his age.

Lewis Palmer, father of Charles Palmer, was born October 2, 1837, in Concord township, and in early life removed to the present site of the borough of Media, where he remained until he was sixteen years old. The greater part of his education was acquired at the school of S. M. Janney, of Loudoun county, Virginia, and in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and upon completing his studies he returned to the farm and cultivated the land on shares for his father. At the death of his father he inherited the paternal estate and devoted his attention principally to the manufacture of butter for the Chester market, in which occupation he met with a large degree of success. In his political affiliations Mr. Palmer formerly lent his support to the men and measures of the Republican party but later became identified with the Prohibition party. He was elected to the office of school director for two terms, and was a prominent factor in the erection of commodious school buildings in Concord township. He has always been an earnest advocate of the cause of temperance in all its phases. In religion he is a member of the Society of Friends, but his views on the subject are liberal; and he is an acknowledged minister of the Concord meeting. Mr. Palmer served as member of the Delaware County Institute of Science, corresponding member of the Historical Society of the State of Delaware, and also president and director of the Farmers' Market of Chester, for which he now acts in the capacity of superintendent. In 1862 Mr. Palmer married Hannah H. Pancoast, daughter of Joseph and Susan Pancoast, of Salem county, New Jersey, and their children are: Charles, Joseph P., Mary D., Anna T., Edwin L. and Samuel C. Palmer. Mary D. and Anna T. are now deceased.

Charles Palmer, eldest son of Lewis and Hannah H. Palmer, was born in Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, July 9, 1863. His preliminary education was obtained in the local schools, after which he pursued a course of study at Swarthmore College, from which he was graduated with honor in 1882. During the following five years he was engaged in teaching school in Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland. In 1887 he located in Chester, Pennsylvania, and took up the study of law with Edmund Jones and was admitted to the Delaware county bar April 7, 1890, and has since been admitted to practice in the supreme court of Pennsylvania and the United States district court. He has now a large general practice, and has won and maintains a position of prestige as a representative of the legal profession. He takes great interest in building associations, and holds positions as secretary of the Pennsylvania Savings, Loan and Building Association, solicitor of the Franklin Building and Loan Association, and director of the Industrial Building and Loan Association. Mr. Palmer is also collector of Chester Council, Royal Arcanum, and clerk of Chester Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends, of which organization he is an earnest member, and he is a charter member of the Delaware County Historical Society. Mr. Palmer has always been actively connected with the Prohibition party, has been several times appointed chairman of the county convention, and in 1894 was a candidate on the State Prohibition ticket for auditor general.

On June 24, 1897, Mr. Palmer married Arletta Cutler, a daughter of David and Caroline V. Cutler, of Ontario, Canada, and their children are: Edgar Z., C. Mervin, and Thompson Palmer.

RUFUS W. GOUGH, a prominent man of affairs of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family which has been for generations identified with manufacturing interests both in England and America.

John B. Gough, father of Rufus W. Gough, was born in Manchester, England, where his family were leading manufacturers. At six years of age he was brought to the United States, where after reaching manhood he followed his hereditary occupation. In Philadelphia he engaged in the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods, being for many years the proprietor of a large and flourishing business. He married Sarah Elizabeth Brown, and was the father of four children. Mrs. Gough died in 1879, and the death of Mr. Gough took place in 1902, when he had attained the age of eighty-three.

Rufus W. Gough, son of John B. and Sarah Elizabeth (Brown) Gough, was born in Philadelphia, where he received his education in the local schools. At an early age he went to work in a mill, advancing by dint of ability and industry until in 1876 he went to Louisville, Kentucky, in order to assume the position of manager of a mill in that city. After remaining twenty years in business in Louisville, in 1896 Mr. Gough went to Chester, where he filled the position of president and general manager of the Delaware County Telephone Company, which he organized. After disposing of his interest in this concern, Mr. Gough engaged in real estate enterprises, also formed connections with life, fire and accident insurance companies, and established offices in the Cambridge building in May, 1901. In 1891 he organized the Cambridge Mutual Benefit Association, of which he became president, an office which he still holds. Under his leadership, enforced by the labors of his able coadjutors, the enterprise has been extremely successful, the exceptional advantages offered by the association to its members having met with the fullest appreciation. Both in the real estate field and in the insurance business Mr. Gough is recognized as a leader and an authority.

Although an earnest member of the Republican party, the engrossing nature of Mr. Gough's large commercial and financial interests prevents him from taking an active part in politics. He is a Mason of thirty-five years' standing, and also belongs to the order of Elks. He is a member of the Providence Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, in which he fills the positions of president of the board of trustees and superintendent of the Sunday-school.

R. W. Wright

Mr. Gough married, in November, 1865, Emma, daughter of James Jackson. Their family consists of two children: Sylvania B., and Rufus J., who is superintendent of a mill in Louisville, Kentucky.

DR. DAVID ROSE, deceased, for many years a prominent and eminent physician of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born at Brandywine Hundred, October 7, 1821, a descendant of a family who came to this country from England in company with William Penn. He was a grandson of David Rose, who acted in the capacity of quarantine officer for the government, and who by faithfully performing all the duties attached to the office retained the position for many years; he was also vestryman of St. Paul's Episcopal church for a number of years. David Rose, father of Dr. David Rose, possessed an excellent literary education and was well qualified both by natural aptitude and careful preparation for the position of school teacher, which occupation he followed for many years, while later he was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Dr. David Rose acquired a good common school education in the local schools of his native town and Philadelphia, and after completing his literary education he decided to enter upon a professional career. He commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Griffith, of Ridley township, Delaware county, as preceptor, and after completing the regular course of instruction at Pennsylvania College, graduating in 1848, he was well qualified to practice his profession. In 1848 he opened an office in Rockdale, where he rapidly built up a large general practice. He possessed many of the leading characteristics of the ideal physician, and in the success which he attained he fully demonstrated the value of his careful preparation. During the Civil war Dr. Rose did not accept any remuneration for his services from the families of the soldiers who participated in that great struggle. Fraternaly Dr. Rose was a prominent member of the order of Odd Fellows, and was a vestryman of the Protestant Episcopal church.

On November 1, 1849, Dr. Rose was united in marriage to miss Sarah Ovenshine Rutter, daughter of Dr. Thomas Rutter, of Pottstown, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and a first cousin of Major General Brooke. Her ancestors were largely interested in the iron business, and during the Revolutionary war they supplied the Continental army with cannons and balls. Four children were born of this union, one of whom is now living, David F. Rose. Dr. Rose died December 9, 1891, survived by his widow, who is still enjoying excellent health, although she has attained her seventy-first year.

David F. Rose, only surviving child of Dr. David and Sarah Rose, was born in Rockdale, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1850, and his preliminary education was obtained at home. This was supplemented by a thorough course in Haverford College, after which he entered the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1874. He at once entered upon a general practice, in which he became useful and successful, winning well deserved recognition as a capable and conscientious practitioner, and after more than a quarter of a century of active employment he is yet engaged in professional labor in Chester, Pennsylvania. In his political affiliations he is a firm and staunch Republican, has served as a member of the school board for four years and is secretary of that body.

In January, 1892, Mr. Rose married Miss Florence Worrell, a daughter of Edward S. Worrell, of Chester, and the following named children were born to them: Sarah R., David, Florence and Rebecca Rose.

DR. SAMUEL R. CROTHERS, actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of two of the oldest families of Cecil county, Maryland, both of whom were planted there in the early pioneer days of that section, taking up land when it was yet free to all comers. The paternal grandfather of Dr. Crothers was an extensive farmer of that county, and was an active participant in the war of 1812.

Jonathan L. Crothers, father of Dr. Samuel R. Crothers, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, and after finishing his education he learned the trade of contracting and building, to which occupation he devoted a number of years. Subsequently he purchased a large and finely improved farm, where he conducted agricultural pursuits on an extensive scale. In his political affiliations he was an ardent supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Mearns, a daughter of Andrew Mearns, one of the leading farmers of Cecil county, and a descendant of an old pioneer family. Both Mr. and Mrs. Crothers were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Cecil county. Mr. Crothers died in 1898.

Dr. Samuel R. Crothers, son of Jonathan and Margaret Crothers, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, February 29, 1864, and his boyhood days were spent on his father's farm. His education was acquired in the public schools and at Churchside Seminary, in Cecil county, Maryland, after which he learned the drug business with Joseph M. Fulton, of New London, Pennsylvania, and later entering the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, from which institution he was graduated in the spring of 1885. Shortly after his graduation he accepted a position in a large drug store in Philadelphia, where he remained for two years, and during this period of time he read medicine under the supervision of Dr. J. Howard Beck, of that city. He then matriculated in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, where he pursued a full course of reading in medicine and was duly graduated in 1889, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He immediately secured the position of assistant physician in St. Joseph's Hospital, Reading, Pennsylvania, where he remained one year, after which, in 1890, he located in the city of Chester for the regular practice of his profession. Dr. Crothers met with appreciation and encouragement from the beginning, and his practice has increased as the years have gone by, until now it ranks with the most important in the city of Chester. He is inclined to make a specialty of surgery, in which he is very successful and to which he gives much attention, having been chosen to fill the position of surgeon of the Chester City Hospital. He is a member of the Delaware County Medical Society, of the American Medical Society, the state and county medical societies, and he is also a member of Chester Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons; Ledger Lodge, and Knights of Pythias. Politically Dr. Crothers is an ardent Republican, and has served the borough of South Chester in the capacity of assistant burgess.

On October 24, 1894, he married Mary D. Jones, of Philadelphia, and a child, William J., was born September 21, 1898, to them.

DR. WILLIAM BAGGS ULRICH, of Chester, Pennsylvania, who for more than one-half of a century, has been recognized as a skillful and progressive physician and a leading and influential citizen, belongs to a German family which for three generations has been represented in Pennsylvania. John Ulrich, grandfather of William Baggs Ulrich, was born in Germany during the latter half of the eighteenth century, and at the age of twenty-five came to America and settled in Philadelphia, where he married Mary Kline.

Samuel Ulrich, son of John Ulrich, was born in 1802, in Philadelphia, where he received his education and passed the years of his early manhood, removing in 1834 to Chester, Delaware county. He enjoyed in a high degree the esteem and confidence of his neighbors, filling for many years the office of justice of the peace, a position for which he was peculiarly fitted both by his knowledge of law and his natural fairmindedness. For a long time he acted as notary public, and his friends and neighbors were in the habit of resorting to him not only for the services usually rendered by such an official, but for advice on various questions of law. In youth Mr. Ulrich was an admirer and political follower of Andrew Jackson, but in after years experienced a change of convictions, becoming a Whig, and finally a Republican. Mr. Ulrich married, in 1828, Catharine H., daughter of William and Rachel Baggs, of Chester, and was the father of nine children. Mr. Ulrich died at his home in Chester, December 6, 1871. His wife, who was a woman of remarkable intelligence and great kindness of heart, survived him a number of years, dying at Chester December 1, 1885, at the age of seventy-eight.

William Baggs Ulrich, son of Samuel and Catharine H. (Baggs) Ulrich, was born May 4, 1829, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and was taken by his parents to Chester when five years of age. He received his elementary education in the public schools of that city, afterwards becoming a student at Jonathan Gause's boarding-school, at Unionville, Chester county, and on leaving school filled the position of clerk in a drug store in Philadelphia. Dr. Ulrich's spirit of thoroughness and investigation were not satisfied with the degree of knowledge necessary for the discharge of his duties, but while serving in the store he attended the college of pharmacy, and thus became complete master of the business. In 1845 he matriculated at the Philadelphia College of Medicine, although obliged to divide his time between attending lectures and his duties as a druggist. Under these circumstances, which might have shaken the resolution of any one not possessed of the strong determination and professional enthusiasm which then as in after years were characteristic of Dr. Ulrich, he pursued his studies, and in 1850 was duly graduated. In the autumn of that year, in response to an advantageous offer from a firm at Natchez, Mississippi, requesting him to take charge of a drug store in that city, he removed to Mississippi, making the journey in the style of more than half a century ago, namely, going by rail to the foot of the Alleghenies, and then traveling by stage over the mountains to Brownsville, by boat to Pittsburg and thence to Natchez. Dr. Ulrich was not disappointed in his hope that the south would afford a good field for the practice of his profession, and after one year in the drug store he removed to Concordia parish, Louisiana, where in a short time he built up a large and profitable practice. During his residence in the south, Dr. Ulrich witnessed four epidemics of yellow fever, and in consequence of this experience he became peculiarly skillful in the management of the disease. In 1865 Dr. Ulrich took a special post-graduate course in the New Orleans School of Medicine, graduating in 1866. During a visit which he made to Chester in 1870, the yellow fever made its appearance at the Lazaretta quarantine, in Delaware county. When in spite of all efforts the disease appeared outside that institution, Dr. Ulrich was summoned as an expert to take charge of the cases, three of which had occurred in Chester. In recognition of his successful treatment of these cases, and of his efforts in protecting the city from the disease, the city council of Chester tendered him a unanimous vote of thanks. About this time, in consequence of some criticisms on the management of the Philadelphia board of health, Dr. Ulrich was involved in an animated newspaper controversy, in which he showed himself as thorough an expert in wielding the pen as in controlling the ravages of disease. Influenced in part by the fact that his father was in failing health and in part by the urgency of friends, Dr. Ulrich decided to remain in Chester, where he soon had a large and growing practice. He is frequently called in consultation to distant points, the reputation of his skill being wide-spread. He is also much interested in stock-raising, being the possessor of a stock farm at Newark, Delaware, on which are to be found some fine specimens of standard bred trotters.

Mr. B. Meiner M. D.

In 1872 Dr. Ulrich was appointed surgeon for the Pennsylvania Military College at Chester, which he resigned two years ago, having served twenty-eight years. In the same year he became lecturer on hygiene in the same institution. The same year he received the appointment of official surgeon of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad, now the Philadelphia, Baltimore & Wilmington Railroad, a part of the Pennsylvania system, with which he still maintains his connection. He is a member of the Delaware County Medical Society, of which he has been several times president; the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, in which he has filled the office of first vice-president, and in 1903 was elected its president; and the American Medical Association, of whose judicial council he was for several years a member. He is an honorary member of the Delaware State Medical Society, and has served as a delegate to many of the state medical conventions of Pennsylvania and other states, and also as a delegate from the American Medical Association to the Medical Association of Canada. By reason of the fact that Dr. Ulrich is a forcible speaker as well as a learned physician, he has always taken a leading part in the discussions which have occurred at the meetings of these societies, on whose official action he has exerted great influence.

Dr. Ulrich is an ardent member of the Democratic party, and has exercised his eloquence and influence with scarcely less warmth and earnestness in behalf of his political organization than in defense of his professional opinions. Such is his popularity that without the slightest effort on his own part he was nominated by the Democrats of Chester for the state senate, although, of course, unable to contend at the polls with the large majority of his political opponents. He has always taken a great interest in educational matters, having served for many years on the school board in Louisiana, and having for several years filled a similar position in Chester.

Dr. Ulrich married, May 4, 1854, Eliza L., daughter of David F. Miller, a large cotton planter of Louisiana, and is the father of three sons: Samuel B., William R., David M., and one daughter, Mary. During his residence in Chester, by the able and conscientious discharge of his duties as a physician and a citizen, Dr. Ulrich has earned the respect and gratitude of the community, while his kindness of heart and genial manners have endeared him to a large circle of patrons and friends.

ARCHIBALD A. COCHRAN, a respected and well-known lawyer and influential citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a Scotch-Irish family which for three generations has been numbered among the useful and honored citizens of Delaware county. John Cochran, grandfather of Archibald A. Cochran, was born in the north of Ireland, and in early manhood emigrated to the United States and settled in Delaware county, where he purchased a large tract of land, a part of which is now included in the city limits of Chester. On this estate he resided until his death, which took place at an advanced age. He married Abigail Engle, and had by her three children,—John, Elizabeth and Margaret.

John Cochran, eldest child of John and Abigail (Engle) Cochran, was born in 1825, in Delaware county. He resides in Chester, and was until 1902 engaged in the real estate and mortgage brokerage business in Philadelphia, but is now retired. He is a staunch member of the Republican party, and takes an active part in public affairs. He is a devoted member of the Presbyterian church, and is much interested in religious matters. Mr. Cochran married, in 1849, Catharine Johnson, daughter of Samuel Johnson, and granddaughter of the famous astronomer of the same name. Mr. and Mrs. Cochran were the parents of ten children, seven of whom are living:

I. Engle Cochran, Jr.; Samuel J. Cochran; Nellie, who became the wife of Frank S. Martin; Mary J. Cochran, M. D.; Anna Cochran; J. Howard Cochran; and Archibald A., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mrs. Cochran, who was a member of the Presbyterian church, died in 1875, at the age of forty-six.

Archibald A. Cochran, youngest child of John and Catharine (Johnson) Cochran, was born November 21, 1865, in Chester, Pennsylvania, where he was educated in the public schools and Gilbert's Academy, after which he entered the law office of O. B. Dickinson and pursued a course of legal study. After passing his examination with honor he was admitted to the bar, May 2, 1887, and began the practice of his profession in his native city, where he has built up a large and constantly increasing practice. In addition to his professional duties Mr. Cochran is secretary of the Franklin Building and Loan Association of Chester. Mr. Cochran takes an active interest in all public affairs, and from September 14, 1892, until May 1, 1894, served as assistant city solicitor of Chester, while from that date to the present has been city solicitor.

Mr. Cochran is a Republican by conviction, thoroughly informed as to the principles of the party, and staunch in his adherence to them. He is a member and trustee of the First Presbyterian church.

Mr. Cochran married, May 31, 1893, Jennie, youngest daughter of E. T. Robb, of Chester, and has two children, Archibald Robb and Donald Robb. He is regarded as a man of much business aptitude and marked ability in his profession, in the ranks of which he has already earned for himself an honorable place.

WALLACE B. JOHNSTON, who is secretary and treasurer of the Tidewater Steel Company of Chester, Pennsylvania, and was for many years prominently identified with railroad interests in different sections of the United States, was born in North Amherst, Ohio, December 15, 1865. F. H. Johnston, father of W. B. Johnston, was also a native of the state of Ohio, and he received a practical education in the schools of his native town. Later he was engaged in a stone quarry, and by displaying great industry, energy and perseverance won his employer's confidence and respect and was finally appointed superintendent of the works. He was very conscientious and just in his dealings with the men under his charge, and was always ready to encourage and aid those who wished to secure advancement through fidelity to duty. He was united in marriage to Miss Edna Shattuc, daughter of S. M. Shattuc, of New York state and three children were born to them:

Charles E., Wallace B. and Nina. Mr. Johnston met with a very untimely death, being killed in the year 1895.

Wallace B. Johnston was indebted to the public schools and colleges of Oberlin, Ohio, for his literary education. In 1883, after completing his studies, he removed to Youngstown, Ohio, and was engaged as clerk in the freight office of the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio Railroad, remaining in their employ for six years and serving in various capacities. At the expiration of that period of time he was appointed agent of the Erie Express at Youngstown, Ohio. The following year he located in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he was retained as agent for the Wells, Fargo Express Company, which purchased the Erie Express business and moved to Pittsburg. This position he retained until 1893, when the Pittsburg office was abandoned and he accepted the position of secretary to the general superintendent of the Illinois Steel Company. Later he acted in the same capacity to the general manager, and subsequently was appointed secretary to the first vice-president of the corporation. Thus for eight consecutive years he filled the office of secretary, discharging his duties with marked aptitude and faithfulness and giving the fullest satisfaction to his employers. In 1902 Mr. Johnston removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, and assumed the position of assistant to the president of the Tidewater Steel Company of that city, and in October of 1892 was elected secretary and treasurer of that concern.

On February 23, 1887, Mr. Johnston married Miss Anna Waugh Morton, daughter of James A. Morton, of Mercer county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Gladys M. and Wallace DeWitt Johnston.

DANIEL PARISH MADDUX, M. D., of Chester Pennsylvania, is of Welsh origin, and his ancestors came to America about two hundred years ago, settling in Maryland, whence their descendants spread into Pennsylvania. Of a comparatively recent generation was the Rev. John B. Maddux, who was pastor of the Madison Street Methodist Episcopal church when the building of its splendid new edifice was begun, 1872-1874, which replaced the historic old structure erected in 1830. He married Mary C. Parish, a daughter of the Rev. Daniel Parish, who was also a native of Maryland and a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Maddux died in 1881.

Daniel Parish Maddux, son of the Rev. John B. and Mary C. (Parish) Maddux, was born April 26, 1862, in the city of Columbia, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He acquired his elementary education in the public schools and in Pennington Seminary, New Jersey, and subsequently entered Dickinson College. He pursued his professional studies in the Hahnemann College of Philadelphia, and was graduated from that institution in 1883, the year of attaining his majority. For two years he was engaged in hospital positions in New York city, being connected with the staff of the Ward's Island Hospital, and with the Cumberland Street Hospital in Brooklyn. This period was most profitably employed, affording him a broader field of observation than is open to the practitioner in a smaller place.

In 1885 Dr. Maddux located in Chester, Pennsylvania, where he has since been usefully and profitably employed in general medical and surgical practice, his patrons comprising a large part of the best element of the community. He is a member of various leading medical associations, and has been connected with important hospitals in the state. He is a member of the Homœopathic Medical Society of Delaware County, of the American Institute of Homœopathy, of the Homœopathic Medical Society of Chester, Delaware and Montgomery Counties, of the Homœopathic Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania, member and treasurer of the Surgical and Gynecological Society, and a member of the American Institute of Homœopathy. He is senior surgeon to the J. Lewis Crozer Hospital, and president of the Alumni Association of Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia. He was also one of the organizers of the Organon Medical Club of Chester, and has been its secretary since its establishment in 1887. A significant evidence of his character and high professional standing is found in the fact that in 1896 he was appointed by President McKinley to membership on the Chester Board of United States Pension Examiners and in 1903 by Governor Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, as a member of the State Board of Medical Examiners.

ANN (PAINTER) TYLER. This name will recall to old residents of Delaware county a flood of interesting recollections. The lady who bears it is the last of one of the most noted families of the county, and her residence is a kind of mecca for all who take an interest in historic relics and antique reminders of the distant past. At the hospitable home of Mrs. Tyler may be found furniture which dates back to the seventeenth century and which is carefully and tenderly cared for by the owner as reminders of her happy childhood and fond memories of dear ones who have long since passed away. Something may be seen here seldom found in this country of rapid and restless changes. There has been no public sale of furniture at this ancestral home since 1682, all of it having been handed down by inheritance from generation to generation until it reached the possession of the lady who now cherishes it with such loving care. There are articles here manufactured when the house of Stewart was still reigning in England; before William Penn set foot on the soil of Pennsylvania; long before George Washington was born and when the American colonies had scarcely yet begun to exist much less to dream of freedom. Hard by the residence where Mrs. Taylor dispenses such kindly hospitality were to be seen in the early decades of the nineteenth century the last survivors of the most interesting of our aboriginal races. Two solitary members of the Lenni Lenape tribe, described with such splendor and pathos by Cooper in his famous story "The Last of the Mohicans," still lingered in a cave on the Tyler homestead and were allowed to eke out their existence undisturbed by hunting and fishing on the place. But all are now gone, the Indians and all the original owners and residents of this historic homestead, all save the present occupant alone, and it is now a pleasant duty to tell the reader something more definite about this lady and her long line of patriotic ancestry.

Samuel Painter, the emigrant founder of the American branch of his name, came from England to Pennsylvania prior to 1700 and settled in Birmingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was one of a numerous progeny who figured with more or less prominence in the formative period of the colony and state, but for the purposes of this sketch the family history will only be traced from Enos Painter, a direct descendant of Samuel, who was born during the latter half of the eighteenth century and followed the trade of a hatter in connection with farming. At that time there lived in Middletown a family named Minshall, who were people of importance and wealth with an interesting history. Thomas Minshall, the emigrant founder, came from Cheshire, England, in 1682 with other Quakers, and bought from William Penn eight hundred acres of land in Middletown township. About 1700 a son of Thomas built a home on the eastern end of this land, near Sycamore Mills, which is still standing in a good state of preservation. According to the custom of those days, brought over by the emigrants from Great Britain and still prevalent in Cheshire, the first floor was made of stone slabs laid on the earth. About 1740 a grandson of the original emigrant erected the stone house on the western end of this tract of land which is now occupied by Mrs. Ann Tyler, and is the residence alluded to in the introductory remarks as of such historic interest. In addition to this land in Middletown, Thomas Minshall bought one thousand acres in Providence, where Wallingford is now located, but this he sold at a later period. About the time that Enos Painter reached his majority, which was in 1800, he fell in love with and married Hannah Minshall, great-granddaughter of Thomas, the emigrant. As Hannah was the only child of her parents she inherited a large part of the eight hundred acres granted to her forefathers in Middletown, and in the ancestral homestead on this tract she and her husband took up their abode immediately after marriage. They became the parents of seven children, three sons and four daughters, several of whom displayed varied talents along high lines in after life. Minshall Painter, the eldest, was born in 1801, and lived unmarried, but before his death in 1873 had done much to make his family name conspicuous. His tastes led him into scientific reading and research, and he became quite prominent in the circles devoted to this line of learning. He excelled in knowledge of the local history of Delaware county and was a recognized authority on all matters relating to this subject. Especially fond also of botany, he developed this taste both theoretically and practically with such effect that the old Minshall homestead where he lived was converted into a veritable botanical garden. He was active in securing the removal of the county seat of Delaware from Chester to Media, and he it was who suggested this classical name for the new capital. He was a member of the American Scientific Association, and one of the founders of the Delaware Institute at Media.

James Painter, the second son, became the owner of the tract of land in Birmingham, Chester county, now in the possession of Charles Mathers. He married Betsy Thatcher, and had five children. Jacob Painter, the third son of this interesting family, was also a man of fine tastes and talents, but of somewhat eccentric turn of mind. He lived with his brother Minshall, whose tastes for scientific pursuits he shared, and in addition possessed literary talents of a high degree. He wrote with remarkable facility both in prose and poetry, and good judges pronounced some of his metrical compositions equal to the best of Whittier. But the writer made no effort to publish his effusions, being seemingly oblivious to all desire for fame, and so "many a gem of purest ray serene" was allowed to remain in the darkness of his desk. He died in 1876, unmarried, but long before the final summons had carefully designed his own tomb. He also composed his own epitaph in poetry and this, cut on each panel, may now be read on the mortuary marble as it stands in Cumberland cemetery. Sarah Painter, eldest daughter in this family galaxy, married Eusebias Barnard, a farmer of Pocopson, but both have passed away. Hannah, the second daughter, married John Barnard, of Doe Run, Chester county, but they too are dead. Sidney, the third daughter, married John Sharpless, a farmer of Concord, and had a large family, but both parents are deceased.

Ann Painter, fourth daughter and youngest child, was born in 1818, on the old homestead in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, which as previously stated, has been in the possession of her maternal ancestry for over two centuries and is now owned by herself. She spent her early life amid the delightful surroundings of this lovely home, where she acquired a love for flowers and all other beautiful things associated with her talented brothers. Her education was received at the Western Friends Boarding School and the Kimberton Academy, and after completing her studies was given the benefit of an extensive trip, which proved highly instructive as well as enjoyable. Her journey took her through the boundless west when traveling was quite a different thing from what it is to-day, and among other noted localities visited was Nauvoo, the famous birthplace of Mormonism. In 1847 she married William Tyler, a leather merchant and manufacturer of Philadelphia, whose family history deserves more than a passing notice. Among the peaceful Quakers who had to undergo unjust persecution in England during the bad days at the close of the seventeenth century was William Tyler, of Walton, in Somersetshire. His brother Philip had been imprisoned and fined and himself and others so badly abused that he determined to abandon forever this abode of bigots and seek a refuge in the wilds of the new world. So he crossed the ocean, bought two thousand acres of fine meadow land on Alloways creek in Salem county, New Jersey, imported English brick and built what was then quite a handsome residence and which is still in a good state of preservation. William Tyler was interested in tanning leather, and this industry, coupled with farming, has afforded occupation to four generations of his descendants. By her marriage to a descendant of the old New Jersey Quaker emigrant, Mrs Ann (Painter) Tyler had two children, both sons. William, the eldest, died in 1873, when twenty-five years old. John J. Tyler, the second child, has had the management of the home farm since his father's death, and from all accounts is such a son as such a mother deserves to have. Mrs. Tyler has outlived her husband, her parents and her six brothers and sisters, and now, with her son, as stated above, is the sole occupant of the historic old homestead. Born and bred a Quaker, she has remained a steadfast adherent of this simple faith, her membership being at present with the Philadelphia meeting at Fifteenth and Race streets. It is needless to add that Mrs. Tyler is much attached to her home, and expends much time in caring for its treasures, both within and without. The ancient furniture needs much repairing to preserve it from the remorseless hand of time, and the other rare antiques, some of which are of priceless value as relics, deserve every effort to avoid loss or injury. One of the chief pleasures of the owner is to greet her acquaintances and relatives in her ancestral halls and recall the pleasures of the past while inspecting the ancient curiosities with which she is surrounded. Among other things exhibited are baskets made by the Lenni Lenapes before the last of these poor Indians departed for their "Happy Hunting Grounds," leaving these sole and mournful reminders of the once proud and mighty tribe of the Delawares. Mrs. Tyler's place is surrounded and its beauty greatly enhanced by an arboretum containing all varieties of shrubs and trees indigenous to this climate. It represents the botanical collection made during his life time by her talented brother Minshall, from whom she inherited the property, and at one time contained six thousand specimens. But enough has been said to make every reader of this memoir desire to visit the ancestral home of the Painters and Minshalls and enjoy the acquaintance and hospitality of its latest but not least worthy occupant.

Edw. Blaine

EDWARD BLAINE, one of the prominent citizens of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Philadelphia April 13, 1839. In consequence of the early death of both his parents he was taken to Delaware county, where he was brought up by a farmer in Middletown township. At the age of fourteen he went to work in Samuel Riddle's mill, at Glen Riddle, where he remained until he was seventeen, when he apprenticed himself to learn the plasterer's trade, at which he worked in Media and Philadelphia. In 1861 he was in charge of the plastering in the Pennsylvania Training School for Feeble Minded Children, near Elwyn, in Delaware county, but on the outbreak of the Civil war abandoned his trade in order to respond to the call to arms. June 4, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, First Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserves, for a term of three years. At the battle of Antietam he was seriously injured by a minie ball which passed through his left leg, inflicting a wound which compelled him to remain in the military hospital for three months. At the close of his term of service he was mustered out in the city of Philadelphia, after which he settled in Chester and engaged in business as a plasterer, in which he was very successful, employing many men. He combined with the occupation of plasterer that of builder, taking large contracts and erecting a number of buildings and he has been director in many building associations. In 1880 Mr. Blaine was elected by the Republican party recorder of deeds for Delaware county, and entered upon the discharge of his official duties January 1, 1881. For a period of nine years he served acceptably in this office, being three times re-elected to succeed himself. In 1890 he retired from office with the well-earned reputation of having been one of the most efficient and capable recorders the county has ever had. From 1890 to 1896 Mr. Blaine filled the office of county commissioner with such marked ability and sound judgment that the debt of the county, which had amounted to four hundred thousand dollars, was through his efforts refunded, he having established a sinking fund for that purpose. During recent years Mr. Blaine has devoted his attention mainly to the building of houses and to dealing in real estate.

6 x

In politics Mr. Blaine is a staunch Republican, having taken an active interest in political affairs ever since the war. He has served many times as a delegate to state and county conventions, and as a member of the Republican executive committee of Delaware county. He is a member of Wilde Post, No. 25, G. A. R., which he represented in the national encampment at Columbus, Ohio, in 1888. He belongs to Chester Lodge, No. 236, F. and A. M.; Larkin Lodge, No. 78, Knights of Pythias; and the Improved Order of Red Men.

Mr. Blaine married, April 11, 1863, Elizabeth Duncan, daughter of Samuel and Jeannette V. Duncan, of Middletown, Delaware county. Mr. Blaine regularly attends and liberally contributes to the Protestant Episcopal church, of which his wife has been for over eighteen years an active member. They reside in one of the houses built by Mr. Blaine soon after his coming to Chester. Their family consists of four children, three of whom are living: Jeannette V., wife of Dr. George B. Wix, died August 15, 1897; May M.; Roselyn W.; Bessie B., who married Dr. Harry E. Taylor, of Chester.

For a considerable period Mr. Blaine's health has been so much impaired as to cause him to lay aside the many duties and interests in which he has been so long and so usefully employed. In his retirement, however, he can look back on a well-spent life, a life devoted to his family, his friends, his country, and the best interests of the community in which he resides. Although retired from active service, he is reaping the reward of his many labors and sacrifices in the service of his country and his fellow citizens, in the respect, affection and gratitude inspired by his fearless devotion to principle, his unquestioned integrity, and his kindly and benevolent disposition.

SAMUEL H. NEAL, M. D., a practicing physician of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family which has been for three generations resident in Delaware county. John Neal, his paternal grandfather, was a native of Ireland, whence he emigrated early in life to the United States. He followed the profession of teaching, and was for many years a resident of Chester. John B. Neal, son of John Neal, came to Chester in 1884, where he engaged in the grocery business and was for a time employed in the custom house. He married Amelia Gillet, and was the father of three children: Samuel H., mentioned at length hereinafter, Alice and Annie. Mrs. Neal died in 1886, and Mr. Neal is still living, at the age of fifty-five.

Samuel H. Neal, son of John B. and Amelia (Gillet) Neal, was born April 13, 1871, in Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and received his education in the South Chester high school. Having selected for his life work the practice of medicine, he matriculated in the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, from which institution he graduated in the class of 1895. By his assiduous devotion to his professional duties he has attracted a desirable patronage, and earned for himself a good position in the ranks of the medical profession. Dr. Neal is active in the duties of a citizen, as well as in those of a medical practitioner, and for three years filled the position of clerk of council of South Chester. He now holds the office of oil inspector for Delaware county, being charged with the inspection of the product of several refineries, and is a member of the staff of Chester Hospital. He is an active member of the Republican party. He belongs to the Delaware County Medical Association, and also affiliates with fraternal orders, being a member of the Association of American Mechanics, the Masonic order, the Foresters of America and the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

B. T. HALL, cashier of the Delaware County National Bank of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Delaware county, in 1845, a son of Stephen Hall, who was in turn a son of George Hall, a native of the same county. Stephen Hall was born in Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where after securing an excellent education in the district schools he learned the trade of shoemaker, which occupation he successfully followed for many years at Village Green. In politics he was a firm adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and in religion was active in the work connected with the Methodist Episcopal church. He was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Cloud and five children were born to them.

B. T. Hall, son of Stephen and Sarah Hall, acquired his literary education in the public schools of Delaware county, and when ready to enter upon a business career obtained employment in the Midvale Steel Works at Philadelphia, in the capacity of clerk. He retained this position until 1873, when he settled in Chester and occupied a similar position in the Delaware County National Bank, and by his systematic and thorough method of work and his reputation for honesty and integrity he was promoted from a clerkship to the responsible duties of cashier. Since his connection with the bank the business has increased wonderfully, and it is now conducting double the amount of work. The Delaware County Bank was chartered under the act of March 21, 1814, then popularly known as the "Omnibus Bank Act," and is one of the most substantial and trusted organizations in the state of Pennsylvania. Mr. Hall is prominently affiliated with the Masonic and Odd Fellows orders, in which he takes a deep and active interest.

Mr. Hall was united in marriage to Miss Jennie C. McCall, a daughter of George McCall, of Chester, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Hall is a consistent member of the Presbyterian church of Chester, and takes an active interest in all the societies connected with it. Personally Mr. Hall is a man of strong friendships and true manhood, quick to respond to any demands upon his means or attention that promise to redound to the benefit of the community and is devotedly attached to his home.

MRS. HARRIET PARKER (FELTON) PETERS, daughter of Samuel Morse and Maria Low (Lippitt) Felton, was born in Philadelphia, August 16, 1851. Her girlhood days were passed at the Felton homestead, Chester, near what is now Felton Station, on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. She was educated at a female academy conducted by the Rev. George Hood, in Chester, and later was a student at Brooke Hall, Media, Pennsylvania, where she was a classmate of Miss Mary Saxton, who was a younger sister of the wife of William McKinley, afterward the President of the United States.

On June 30, 1874, she was married to Richard Peters, Jr., of Atlanta, Georgia, and accompanied her husband south, where the young couple resided upon a large plantation owned by the groom's father, which was then used as the largest fine-grade stock farm in the Southern Atlantic and Gulf states. In 1881 the family returned north, when Mr. Peters identified himself with many public projects which have culminated in rapid trolley transportation, electric lighting, and other benefits to the city of Chester. Mrs. Peters is well known in the higher social circles of Philadelphia, where the family reside in the winter season. She is a member of the Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Dames, and is a member of its board of directors, a member of the New Century Club of Philadelphia, a member of the Alumni Association of Brooke Hall, and is also a member of the Pennsylvania Society of New England Women. In 1902 she held the vice-presidency of the Associate Committee of Women of Industrial Art, and is now vice-president and for many years has been regent of the Delaware County Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. During her administration in one year the Chapter marked two historical buildings in Chester with handsome bronze tablets, a record which exceeds that of any other Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the United States.

S. M. Feltus

Few persons in the United States trace ancestry in so many lines to remote progenitors as Mrs. Peters. In Germany it is held that ten generations are required to sustain a claim to gentle birth. In the paternal line she is entitled to enrollment in the Colonial Dames in three descents, while in the maternal, Lippitt line, she traces thirty-two ancestors, giving her the right of admission to the Society. Much of the history of her family in its various ramifications has been traced to England for a period of well nigh four hundred years, while many of her forefathers were among those sturdy men and women who planted Anglo-Saxon civilization in New England, planting the seeds of liberty which, in development, has advanced the United States to the forefront of all nations. Among her ancestry is found John Perkins, who in 1631 came to Boston a passenger in the "Lyons," whose daughter Mary, born in England, the wife of Thomas Bradbury, when a woman of seventy odd years, in 1692, was condemned as a witch during the Salem persecution, but was not executed. Lucy Cromwell, one of Mrs. Peters' great-grandmothers, was of the Cromwell family which produced the greatest of England's rulers, for the name Crowell was adopted by the family to avoid the persecution instituted by the loyalists after the restoration of the Stewarts. In the tenth generation she is a descendant from Roger Williams, who in 1636, founded the colony of Rhode Island. In the eleventh generation she is a descendant of John Felton, who was thrice bailiff of Great Britain, and represented the borough in the Parliament of 344 (1592) at the 38th Elizabeth (1596), and whose son Nicholas, Bishop of Ely, was one of the translators of the King James Bible, 1604-1611.

Samuel Morse Felton, Mrs. Peters' father, was born in West Newbury, July 17, 1809, graduated in the class of 1833 from Harvard College and subsequently became a noted civil engineer. In 1841 he built a railroad from Boston to Cambridge, and in 1845 was appointed superintendent of the Fitchburg Railroad, where his executive ability attracted wide attention. The stock of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railway was largely controlled by Boston capitalists, who, dissatisfied with its management, in 1851 elected Mr. Felton to the presidency of the company. Under his administration the track, rolling stock and real estate of the road were relaid, increased and improved, while the debt was practically extinguished. The road was conceded to be the best conducted in the United States. The stock rose in value rapidly, and when the death of the owner threw some shares on the market they found ready purchasers at a premium. In 1861, when it was apprehended that a plot existed to assassinate Lincoln while enroute to the capital, Mr. Felton gave his personal charge to the transportation of the President to Washington. The great responsibility of transporting millions of soldiers and enormous freights over the line during the Civil war, taxed Mr. Felton physically to such an extent that he was obliged to relinquish all active business, and with that in view he resigned the presidency of the P. W. & B. Railroad in 1865. As a testimonial of the great service he had rendered the company he was presented with a working model in gold and silver of an engine and tender, complete in all its parts, valued at several thousand dollars, also a silver service. A few months of rest completely restored Mr. Felton's health, when he accepted the presidency of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, a position he filled until his death in Philadelphia, January 24, 1889. In 1869 President Grant appointed Mr. Felton, representing the United States, as inspector of the Union Pacific Railroad. He was also a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and a member of the board of finance of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. Mr. Felton was twice married, his first wife being Eleanor Stetson, and the second Maria Low Lippitt.

Richard Peters, born at Atlanta, Georgia, November 2, 1848, is a son of Richard and Mary Jane (Thompson) Peters. In the latter part of 1864, when he had scarcely reached his sixteenth year, he ran the blockade from Wilmington, North Carolina, safely reaching England, where he attended school for a period of two years. Returning to the United States at the conclusion of the Civil war, he was employed as a rodman and levelman in the engineering corps of the Lehigh Valley Railroad from 1868 to 1869, when he entered the Polytechnic Institute at Troy, New York. In 1869 he returned south, where he practiced engineering on several new lines of railroads, in charge of construction work as well as locating, until 1874. He took charge of a large stock farm owned by his father, a wealthy railroad magnate, who bred superior Jersey cattle, horses and Angora goats, designed to introduce in the south a better line of live stock than was raised in that section prior to the war. In 1875 he was appointed by President U. S. Grant as commissioner from Georgia to the Centennial Exposition of 1876. In 1881 Richard Peters removed to the Felton homestead in Chester, near the present Felton Station on the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, and took an active interest in the affairs of the city. When the Felton Fire Company No. 3—named for Samuel M. Felton—was incorporated, December 27, 1882, Mr. Peters was one of its charter members and its first president. The prize billiard table owned by the company was the gift of Samuel M. Felton. Richard Peters was one of the organizers of the Chester Traction Company and its first president, an organizer of the Chester Electric Light Company and its first president, a director of the Chester Creek Railroad Company, and a director of the First National Bank, positions he still fills on the board of the last named corporation. He was secretary of the Chester Rolling Mills, which subsequently became the Wellman Iron & Steel Company and is now the Tide Water Steel Company. For a number of years he has been the Philadelphia sales agent of the Pennsylvania Steel Company.

His father, Richard Peters, Sr., died at Atlanta, Georgia, February 6, 1889. He was the eldest son of Ralph Peters, born at Belmont Mansion, Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, November 28, 1777, and died in Columbia county November 11, 1842. His great-grandfather was Richard Peters, who was born in Blockley township, Philadelphia, June 22, 1744, was a celebrated wit of his day and an active man in the Revolutionary struggle, commanding a company of foot in 1775; secretary of the Continental board of war and ordnance in 1776; member of the board of war, 1777; secretary of war of the United States, 1781; member from Pennsylvania to the Continental Congress of 1782-1783; member of the Presbyterian assembly, 1789-90, and twice speaker of the house. In 1792 he was appointed by President Washington to be judge of the district court of the United States for Pennsylvania, a position he retained until his death, August 22, 1828. Judge Peters' wife was Sarah Robinson, a noted beauty, a daughter of Thomas Robinson, a wealthy shipping merchant of colonial Philadelphia, and one of the signers of the non-importation resolution of October 25, 1765. Her father was the owner of large estates upon the ridge back of Marcus Hook, in Lower Chichester, Delaware county, and her brother Thomas was lieutenant-colonel of the Fifth Pennsylvania Line, serving through the war of the Revolution. Judge Peters was the son of William Peters, born in England, where his father, Ralph Peters, was town clerk to the borough of Liverpool. William Peters emigrated to Pennsylvania prior to 1735; in 1755 was secretary of the provincial council, in 1756 military secretary to Governor Morris; in 1757 took part in the Indian treaty at Easton, Pennsylvania; in 1750 was secretary of council; and in 1761 was appointed to administer the oath of office to all civil and military in Philadelphia. Richard Peters' grandmother in the paternal line was a daughter of David Hayfield Conyngham, who served as a private in the noted Philadelphia Troop of Horse from 1779 to 1781.

Richard Peters is a member of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, through the services of his great-grandfathers, Richard Peters and David Hayfield Conyngham, and a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, through the services of his great-great-grandfather, William Peters, and also through Judge Richard Peters.

To Richard Peters and Harriet Parker Felton were born two sons and three daughters: Edith MacCausland Peters, Ethel Conyngham, Richard Peters, Jr., Samuel Morris Felton and Hope Peters.

LEVI G. JAMES. For over half a century Levi G. James has been a prominent figure in commercial circles in the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, where he is known as a progressive and thoroughly reliable business man. The progenitor of the American branch of the James family was Aaron James, a native of England, who came to this country in company with William Penn on his second visit to his colony on the banks of the Delaware. Aaron James located in Westtown township, in Chester county, where he purchased from William Penn a tract of land consisting of six hundred acres which was devoted to general farming. Mr. James had thirteen children, twelve sons and one daughter. One of his sons located in Vermont, two in North Carolina, several removed to other states and the remainder stayed in Chester county, and retained the homestead for many years.

Caleb James, great-grandfather of Levi G. James, was born and reared on the old homestead and his entire life was devoted to farming interests. In politics he was an old-line Whig, and in his religion was a member of the Society of Friends. He married and reared a family of four children: Caleb, Jr., Joseph, Lydia and Aaron James. The father of these children died in 1835 at the old homestead where he had resided all his life; he had attained the extreme old age of one hundred years. Caleb James, grandfather of Levi G. James, was also born on the old homestead, where he remained and engaged in the cultivation of a general line of garden produce. In his political affiliations he was a Whig, and in his religious faith was a Quaker. He was united in marriage to Miss Mary Yearsley, and the following named children were born to them: Susanna, Eber, Esther, Asenath, wife of Sharpless Lewis, and Mary James. Mr. James died in the year 1816, at the age of forty years.

Levi, G. James

Eber James, father of Levi G. James, was reared on his father's farm, and after his education was completed at the district school he learned the trade of potter at Westtown, Chester county, which he followed in his native township until April, 1830, when he removed to Radnor township, Delaware county, and continued in the same line of trade there. He was a Whig politically, was elected to a number of township offices and always took an active interest in political affairs. He was a Quaker in religion. Mr. James married Miss Sarah Garrett, a daughter of Levi Garrett, of Willistown, Chester county. To them were born twelve children: Caleb, Garrett, Levi G., Emeline, Mary A., Baldwin, Edwin, Elizabeth Hughes, Eber, Wilmer, Sarah Lear and Marshall James. Mr. James' death occurred in 1846, when he was in the forty-sixth year of his age; his wife lived to be sixty-six years old, dying in 1871.

Levi G. James, third son of Eber and Sarah James, was born at Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 5, 1827. Although a native of Chester county yet his early youth was spent in Delaware county, where he received his education in the common schools and the well known Castleton Academy of Vermont. Upon the completion of his academical course he engaged in the pottery business in Radnor township, but soon abandoned that line of work to engage in merchandising, which he followed successfully in various parts of the state for nineteen years. In 1871 he located in Chester, where he purchased a lot and erected the postoffice building on Fifth and Edgemont avenue, and also built extensive livery stables, where he conducts a large sale and exchange business in horses. During the intervening years his success has been phenomenal, owing to the fact that he displays judgment, prudence, honesty and foresight in the conduct of his business.

Mr. James was a member of the school board at Upper Providence, Pennsylvania, for eleven years, and district superintendent of the same for about nine years. He was also school director in Chester, Pennsylvania, for six years, and a member of the board of revision of taxes for four years.

In 1848 Mr. James married Miss Sarah Worral, daughter of Elisha and Mary Marshall Worral, of Delaware county. Their children are:

Anna Delia Tritt; Calista Sharp; Emerett, wife of W. H. Farley; Carleton, who married Laura Larkin; and Razell, who married Nellie Birtwell, and was engaged in business with his father under the style of L. G. James & Son. The mother of these children died in 1883, and three years later Mr. James married Miss Mary Curn, of Chester, Pennsylvania.

EDMUND OLIVER was born in Donegal county, Ireland, May 1, 1859. He was a son of Edmund and Mary (Davis) Oliver, both of Irish extraction. Edmund Oliver, Sr., was born in Ireland in 1813. He brought his family to America in 1865, at the beginning of the reconstruction period that followed the close of the Civil war. He made a home in Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and began the life of an American business man as a contractor and stone mason. He was an adept in his trade, and his skillful workmanship soon brought him profitable custom. He built many public buildings and private dwellings in the vicinity of Chester, and many of these structures still attest to the permanency and thoroughness of his work. He died in 1879, leaving a family of nine children: Henry, John, Thomas, Fanny, Joseph, Mary Jane, Annie, Hannah, Elizabeth, (who died in infancy) and Edmund.

Edmund Oliver was brought to America by his parents when but six years of age, and received all his education in this country. In 1867 the department of education became a separate part of the state government in Pennsylvania. The state was divided into districts, each of which maintained a normal school where young men and women were fitted to teach in the public schools, and young Oliver obtained all the advantages accruing from a well organized public school system. After he left the Chester high school, he and his brothers succeeded to their father's business, establishing the firm of Oliver Brothers, which has sustained its early reputation, and is well and favorably known in that part of the state. Among the most important edifices constructed by them are the Hospital and Crozer House for Incurables, and the building for the Pennsylvania Steel Casting Company.

Mr. Oliver has been prominent in the city government of Chester, and was a member of the council for a year. He was appointed commissioner of highways by Mayor Black, and held the position for three years. In 1900 he was elected sheriff of Delaware county by the Republicans, and served until 1903. He is a member of the Masonic order, affiliated with the Blue Lodge, with Chester Chapter, R. A. M., and Chester Commandery, K. T., and is a Noble of the Mystic Shrine of Philadelphia, also a member of Chester Lodge of Elks, No. 88, and of the Order of Odd Fellows, Red Men and Knights of the Golden Eagle. He is an active and popular member of the various political clubs which advocate Republican Measures, and he is a loyal supporter of the Republican party. He has spent much thought on the questions relative to labor and capital, and is a fair and impartial judge where the rights of the working man are concerned, as he proved by becoming one of the founders of the International Bricklayers' Union of Chester. He is now the proprietor of the Pennsylvania Hotel at Penn avenue and Market street, Chester.

Mr. Oliver was married in 1886 to Miss Rose F. Biggins, a daughter of the late Michael Biggins, a merchant tailor of Chester. They have three children: Maud D., Edmund H. and Elizabeth B. The family attends the Episcopal church.

THOMAS F. BATTIN, for fifteen years actively connected with the business interests of the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, and who has attained a high degree of success during that period, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 7, 1864, a descendant of ancestors who having resided in that county for many generations and whose names have been prominent identified with every effort that has been made to improve and advance its interests. He is a son of Isaac T. Battin, who was a millwright by trade; during the progress of the Civil war he enlisted as a private, and in the discharge of his duties he contracted a sickness from the effects of which his death occurred on August 12, 1869. He was survived by his widow, who is still living; her maiden name was Catherine Lilly.

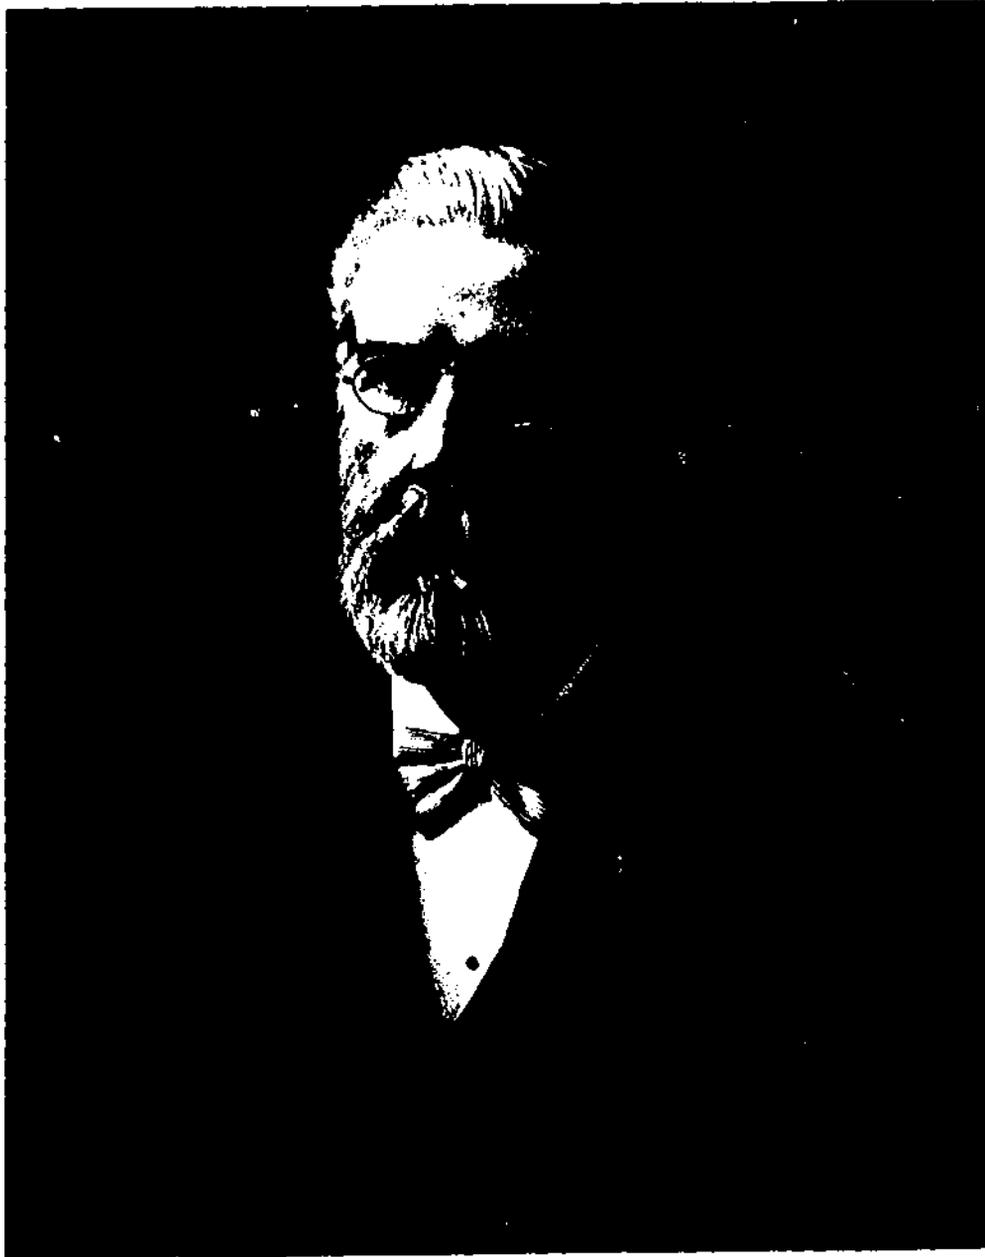

In 1874 Thomas F. Battin took up his residence in Chester, where for a number of years he was a pupil in the public schools. Upon the completion of his studies he learned the trade of butcher, which occupation he followed until 1887, when he went into business on his own account in the same line of trade. By strict attention to business and just regards for the wants and wishes of his customers he soon built up a large and remunerative trade which claims not only his own attention, but also that of four employes who are constantly employed in the business. Thus by honesty and upright dealings he has wrought out financial success for himself, and has won a place among the leading business men of the city. In politics Mr. Battin is a stalwart Republican, but has never sought the honors or emoluments of public office, and in his fraternal affiliations he is a member of the Masonic order.

On February 7, 1889, Mr. Battin married

Miss Anna M. Pyle, a daughter of Henry Pyle, and the following named children were born to them: Harry H., Ruth A. and Helen P. Battin.

HENRY A. EISENBISE, a highly esteemed citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, is descended on his father's side from German ancestors, who emigrated to America at a comparatively early period, his paternal grandfather, Alexander Eisenbise, having served in the Revolutionary army. Henry Eisenbise, son of Alexander Eisenbise, was by trade a cabinet-maker. The fact that he filled the office of justice of the peace shows that he was a man of some standing in the community, and enjoyed the respect and esteem of his neighbors. He married Jane Eliza McCarty, whose father, Edward McCarty, had served as sheriff of the county, and who held a commission as captain in the war of 1812. In 1846 Mr. Eisenbise was bereaved of his wife, by death, and in 1848 he also passed away.

Henry A. Eisenbise, son of Henry and Jane Eliza (McCarty) Eisenbise, was born January 31, 1833, in Lewistown, Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the public schools of the town, after which he learned the trade of a tinsmith. At the outbreak of the Civil war Mr. Eisenbise enlisted at Lewistown, April 16, 1861, in the Logan Guards, called "The First Defenders," with the rank of third sergeant. The company was assigned as Company E to the Twenty-fifth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He was mustered into service April 18, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and the same day moved to Washington, the Logan Guards being one of the first five companies to march to the relief of the capital. He was promoted May 28, 1861, to the rank of second lieutenant, and was mustered out at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, August 1, 1861, at the expiration of his term of service. September 2, 1861, he re-enlisted, with the rank of first lieutenant, in Company A, Forty-sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, was made captain September 27, 1861, and served in Gordon's Brigade, Banks' Division, Army of the Potomac, until April, 1862, from which time he served in Crawford's Brigade, Williams's Division, Department of the Shenandoah, until June, 1862. During the period of service above outlined, Captain Eisenbise did duty in various parts of the state of Virginia. From October, 1861, to March, 1862, on the upper Potomac; in the Shenandoah Valley from March 29 to June 27, 1862; took part in a skirmish on the Harrisonburg road, April 26, 1862; during Banks's retreat, on May 21 and 25, was at Newtown on the former date, and also on the Bartonsville road; on the latter

Henry A. Eisenbise

date he participated in the battle of Winchester; assisted in reconnoitering for the purpose of surveying the valley, from June 19 to June 30; from that time served in First Brigade, First Division, Second Army Corps, Army of Virginia, until August 9, 1862, when at the battle of Cedar Mountain he was wounded and captured, and remained in Libby prison until released on parole, November 10, 1862. In December, 1862, Captain Eisenbise returned to his regiment and served in the First Brigade, First Division, Twelfth Army Corps, being one of those who participated in Burnside's "muddy march." February 11, 1863, Captain Eisenbise resigned and was honorably discharged. June 29, 1863, he re-enlisted, with the rank of captain, in Company A, Thirty-sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was mustered out at Harrisburg, August 11, 1863, at the expiration of his term of service. Nothing daunted by the hardships which had hitherto fallen to his lot, Captain Eisenbise once more re-enlisted, September 11, 1863, as a veteran volunteer in Company G, Fifty-fifth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, Third Brigade, Third Division, Tenth Army Corps, in which he served until April, 1864, and after that in the First Brigade, Second Division, Eighteenth Army Corps, Army of the James. Captain Eisenbise was in action at Swift's Creek, Virginia, May 9 and 10, and at Proctor's Creek, May 13 and 15, 1864, the following day participating in the battle of Drury's Bluff. From the 1st to the 12th of June, Captain Eisenbise was engaged in the battle of Cold Harbor, and on June 15 took part in the assault on Baylor's Farm, after which he was present at the siege of Petersburg from the 16th to the 27th of June, and at the assault upon Harrison's Creek, June 18. On July 1, Captain Eisenbise was made sergeant, and on the 30th of that month he was with the reserve force at the explosion of the great fort near Petersburg. He participated in the battle of Chapin's Farm, September 29, where he was again wounded and captured, and passed several months in the prisons of Libby, Belle Island and Salisbury. March 1, 1865, he was released on parole, and after six weeks' absence returned to his company at Richmond. May 1, 1865, Captain Eisenbise was made first sergeant, and on June 1 he was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant. He was assigned to duty as assistant commissary, at Amelia Court House, Virginia, in which capacity he served until August, 1865, when the regiment was sent to Harrisburg and was mustered out by reason of the close of the war, his services being no longer needed. He re-enlisted September 21, 1865, as a private in the United States army and was assigned to the permanent party on Governor's Island. He was afterward transferred to Company G, Nineteenth United States Infantry, and was sent to Indian Territory, where, as well as in Arkansas, he did duty against Indians and outlaws, being on one occasion captured by a band of desperadoes led by Clynch West, a noted outlaw. Captain Eisenbise's services were also called into requisition in Arkansas during the time of agitation and transition known as the reconstruction period. During this term of service in the West, Captain Eisenbise's rank was that of sergeant. September 21, 1868, he was mustered out at Fort Smith, Arkansas, by reason of the expiration of his term of service. This account of Captain Eisenbise's long and faithful military service is necessarily fragmentary and unsatisfactory, the full details of this eventful and interesting period of his life being sufficient to fill a volume.

On his return to civil life, Captain Eisenbise settled in Chester, where he engaged in business as a tinsmith, and also opened a hardware store, and has proved as assiduous in the calling of a business man as he was in the discharge of his duties as a soldier. He has repeatedly served as delegate to the department encampments and has served as an aid on the department staff of the G. A. R. He is also a companion in the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

Captain Eisenbise married, in 1872, Anna Rittenhouse, daughter of Lorenzo Dewey, of Erie, Pennsylvania, a connection of the well known Dewey family. Mrs. Eisenbise's great-grandfather served seven years on land and sea in the Revolutionary war, her grandfather served in the war of 1812, and her uncles served in the Civil war. She is also descended from Revolutionary stock on the maternal side. Captain and Mrs. Eisenbise have no children.

CHRISTOPHER D. WILLIS, president of the common council of Chester, Pennsylvania, and also one of the prominent manufacturers of the town, was born February 14, 1856, in Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

James M. Willis, father of Christopher D. Willis, was born on the eastern shore of Maryland, and after acquiring the education afforded by the district schools of his neighborhood he began his business career by driving a stage coach, being one of the earliest stage drivers of Delaware county. When the Civil war broke out, Mr. Willis enlisted in the Third Regiment, Pennsylvania Cavalry, and for three years and six months he was an active participant in that terrible struggle, and was captured and confined in the notorious Libby prison for nine months. Mr. Willis was united in marriage to Miss Alice Dobson, daughter of Christopher Dobson, of England. Mr. Willis died in July, 1877, survived by his widow, who is now in her seventy-fifth year.

Christopher D. Willis grew to manhood under the parental roof. He acquired a good education in the common branches, which he reinforced in after years by broad reading and deep thinking. At the age of ten, in 1866, he removed to Chester, where he attended school and later learned the trade of wheelwright. In 1881 he established a business on his own account, and meeting with a fair amount of success in the beginning he has continued in it until the present time, when he now enjoys a wide reputation and an extensive trade. Mr. Willis is a Republican in politics, and was elected to serve as a member of the common council in 1888; he filled this office for three years and was re-elected in 1897, serving at the present time as president of the common council, having been elected to that office in April, 1892. Mr. Willis takes a deep interest in every movement that tends to improve and beautify the city of Chester, and it was largely through his instrumentality that the streets have been paved and put in such excellent condition. He is prominently affiliated with the Masonic order, being a member of the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery of Knights Templar, and also of Lu Lu Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Philadelphia. He is also a member of the Young Men's Republican Club, and has served twice in the capacity of president.

On November 6, 1882, Mr. Willis married Miss Eva D. Ellis, of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, daughter of Charles B. Ellis, who was one of the early settlers of that city, who died when he had attained the extreme old age of ninety-four years. Mr. and Mrs. Willis are the parents of one child, Ross Ellis Willis.

WILLIAM M. POWEL, a leading business man of Chester, Pennsylvania, is descended from English ancestors who settled first in New York, and subsequently removed to Philadelphia.

Franklin Powel, father of William M. Powel, adopted for his calling the practice of medicine, and in 1884 became a citizen of Chester, where he has been for many years in the enjoyment of a large and lucrative practice. Dr. Powel is a member of the Masonic order and is active in the First Presbyterian church, in which he holds the office of trustee. He married Ella, daughter of William C. Muzzey.

William M. Powel, son of Franklin and Ella (Muzzey) Powel, was born March 29, 1876, in Philadelphia, where he received his primary education in the local schools, afterward becoming a student at Princeton University. In 1897 he established himself in the grain business at Port Kennedy, and for two years was in possession of a flourishing trade. In 1899 he moved the business to Chester, where he has very extensive connections. He is the owner of flour mills at Knowlton, Pennsylvania, and now is secretary and treasurer of the Chester Milling Company of Chester, Pennsylvania.

Like his father, Mr. Powel is a member of the Masonic order. He is prominent in fraternal circles, affiliating likewise with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

Mr. Powel married, February 17, 1897, Bessie, daughter of H. B. Black. Their family of two children are Catherine and William, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Powel are active in the social circles of Chester, where they are both extremely popular.

JOHN SHAW. After an honorable and active business career, Mr. Shaw is now resting from his labors and is regarded as one of the most highly respected citizens of Chester, Pennsylvania. He is a descendant of an old and honorable English ancestry. His paternal grandfather was a resident of Grotten Head, Yorkshire, England, where he was successfully engaged in the occupation of weaving. His children were James, Alice, Betty and Ann Shaw.

James Shaw, father of John Shaw, was born in the year 1800, in Saddleworth, Yorkshire, England, and learned the trade of spinner, which he followed for many years in England and this country, whither he removed in 1866. He was united in marriage to Miss Betty Andrew, daughter of Daniel Andrew, of Shelderslow, Saddleworth, Yorkshire, and the following named children were born to them: Samuel, Hugh, William, John, Andrew, James and Elizabeth Shaw. The father of these children died in the year 1868. His wife died in 1865.

John Shaw, fourth son of James and Betty Shaw, was born in Lancastershire, England, October 26, 1827, and his educational advantages were necessarily limited, owing to the fact that he educated himself, not having the privilege to attend any school. At a very early age he entered a mill where he learned the trade of cotton spinner, and was engaged in this occupation until May 12, 1865, when he came to this country and settled in Chester, Pennsylvania. He was then employed by his brother Hugh Shaw, who was a member of the firm of Shaw & Esrey, which was established in the year 1863. They were manufacturers of cotton and woolen jeans and all wool jeans, and in 1871 the business had so increased that to keep pace with the demand for their goods it was found necessary to build a second mill, of which Mr. John Shaw was made manager. This mill was one hundred and fifteen feet in length by fifty-eight feet in width, three stories in height.

To it are attached an engine, boiler, dry and dye houses, forming a wing one hundred and fifty by thirty-three feet, and directly at the other end of the building is a weave shed, one hundred and sixteen by forty feet, one story in height. The goods manufactured in these mills were known in the market as Powhattans, Covington, Provident and all-wool jeans. In the spring of 1877 the firm decided to erect a third mill to be used exclusively for the manufacture of a finer class of goods, and Mr. John Shaw was given complete control of the three mills, which position he retained until the death of Mr. Esrey, when the firm was incorporated in January, 1878, under the Act of Assembly, to a limited company. Mr. Shaw was an expert workman, as well as an upright conscientious business man and in the sixty years of his active career he was always at his post of duty in the mill at seven o'clock in the morning.

In 1851 Mr. Shaw married Miss Mary Buckley, daughter of Thomas and Hannah Buckley, and eight children were born to them, six of whom are living at the present time (1902): Sarah Jane, wife of Nathaniel Hardy, deceased; Hannah, wife of Charles W. Andrews; Thomas B.; Elizabeth, wife of O. P. Hooper; James; Ann, wife of Milton M. Allen; Nellie, wife of E. E. Price; and an infant, who died in England.

EDWARD STANTON FRY, a well known business man and enterprising citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, is the bearer of the name which has long been a familiar one to residents of that city. His father, Franklin Fry, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and went to Chester in 1876. His occupation was that of an ironworker. He married Harriet Kutz. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fry are living, the former having reached the age of sixty-eight years.

Edward Stanton Fry, son of Franklin and Harriet (Kutz) Fry, was born February 11, 1872, in Reading, Pennsylvania. He was educated in the public schools, and at the age of sixteen began working in a roller mill. In 1892 he began to learn the undertaking business in Chester, Pennsylvania, in which he has been extremely successful. He began business at 214 Morton street, and having succeeded to an extent he located at 2211 Third street, for one year, and in June, 1901, he purchased the ground and built his present beautiful brick block at 2121 Third street. Mr. Fry started without any means and to-day has fine property and a fine business. His establishment, in its accommodations and equipments, is first-class, the business being conducted according to the latest improved methods. He is the owner of a hearse which took first prize at the World's Fair.

Mr. Fry is active in politics. He was elected to the office of coroner, and at the expiration of his term was re-elected by a large majority, being the only coroner in twenty years who has served two terms. He is well known in fraternal orders, affiliating with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Independent Order of Red Men. He further manifests his public spirit as a citizen by his connection with the Felton Fire Company. He belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Fry married, September 3, 1891, Emma, daughter of Thomas Mitchell. Their family consists of four children, three of whom are living: Ethel, Emma and Dorothy.

JOHN HAMILTON, a prominent manufacturer of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a native of Ireland, born in Ulster, Tyrone county, November 21, 1832. The father, Thomas Hamilton, was a native of England, a farmer by occupation, and his death occurred in 1861. The mother was born in Scotland. Both were of strong character, industrious and frugal, and gave careful rearing to their family.

John Hamilton was nearly twenty-one years of age when he came to the United States. He possessed a fair English education, sufficient to enable him to acquit himself creditably in all the duties of life. In 1853 he located in Philadelphia, where he learned box making, and where, after mastering his trade, he conducted a business on his own account. In 1874 he removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, which has since been his place of residence and the scene of his busy effort. He began by making boxes for the mills, having at the outset a modest plant where for the first few months he did all the work himself, and which for some time thereafter required the labor of but three men—himself, his son and another workman. Through unflagging industry and application, Mr. Hamilton steadily increased his business to considerable dimensions, and for some years past he has been a manufacturer of doors and blinds, as well as of boxes, and has a completely equipped steam plant employing some thirty workmen, the product of whose labor reaches the principal industrial centers of the state. To this business Mr. Hamilton has given his close personal attention, and it stands as a monument to his industry and perseverance. In the summer of 1902 he experienced an accident which has necessitated the development of a portion of the management upon a son. In all the relations of life, as man of affairs, citizen and neighbor, Mr. Hamilton has ever enjoyed the esteem and fullest confidence of the community whose interests have ever been promoted through his effort.

Mr. Hamilton was married, April 11, 1855, to Miss Margaret Armstrong, a native of the north of Ireland. Born of this marriage were six children—Alexander R., of Norfolk, Virginia, who died May 11, 1903; Thomas M., engaged in the Delaware County National Bank; James M., who is associated with his father in business; Elizabeth J., who became the wife of Charles T. Vance, of Chester; Sarah, who is engaged as a teacher; and Margaret C., who is the wife of John M. Broomall (3d), a leading lawyer of Media, Pennsylvania.

FRED SELBY. One of the important industrial interests of Chester, Pennsylvania, is the Keystone Plaster Company, of which Mr. Selby has acted in the capacity of superintendent for the past fifteen years. He was born in England in 1850, a son of Richard Selby, who came to this country in 1865 and for many years was a prominent figure in the commercial circles of New York, where he was engaged in the occupation of provision merchant; his decease occurred in the year 1892.

Mr. Fred Selby acquired his literary education in the public schools of England, after which he was employed for a short period of time in an architect's office, but not finding this work congenial to his tastes or inclinations he learned the electric business, which he successfully followed for a number of years. In 1888 Mr. Selby accepted the position of superintendent of the Keystone Plaster Company, the plant at that time being in Philadelphia; some years later the company removed to Chester and Mr. Selby then took up his residence in that city and still retained his connection with the corporation. He is a man of indefatigable industry, enterprise and fertility of resource, and he also possesses a native sagacity, a far-seeing judgment and a fidelity of purpose that commands the respect of the employes who are placed under his charge. Mr. Selby is a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, and an active and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Chester, of which he acts in the capacity of trustee.

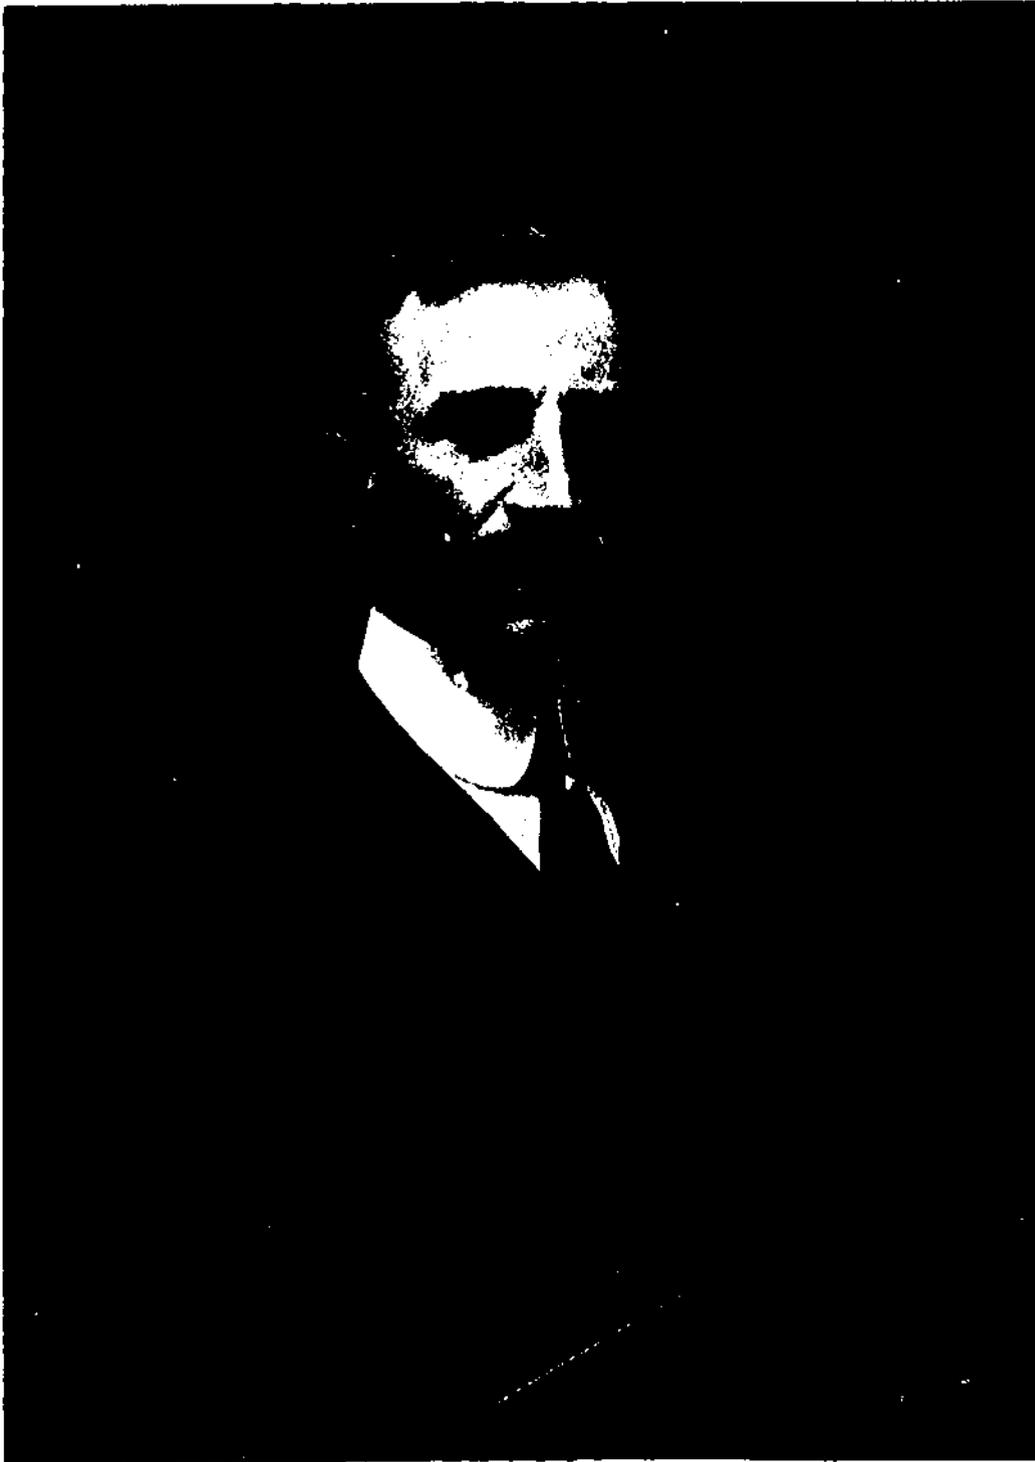

On September 19, 1882, Mr. Selby was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. MacArthur, a daughter of James MacArthur, and eight children were born to them, four of whom are living at the present time (1902): George W., Ada F., Fred C., and William Selby.

GEORGE C. HETZEL, the founder and present head of the extensive manufacturing corporation, the "George C. Hetzel Company," of Chester, Pennsylvania, is familiarly known in all parts of the United States in connection with the manufacture of worsted and woolen goods for men's wear. He was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, January 3, 1858, the eldest son of John G. and Caroline Hetzel. His father was born in 1830, in the town of Wurtemberg, Germany, where he was reared and acquired a common-school education. Upon attaining young manhood he came to this country and settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he continued to reside for the remainder of his life. Politically he was a firm adherent of the Democratic party, and in his religious views was a loyal supporter of the tenets of the Lutheran church. In 1856 he married Miss Caroline Naegele, a native of Germany, and four sons and two daughters were born to them. Mr. Hetzel's death occurred in the forty-sixth year of his age.

George C. Hetzel attended the public schools of Philadelphia, where he obtained a good practical education. Upon reaching the age of sixteen years he left school in order to accept a clerkship in the office of the United States Plate Glass Insurance Company at Philadelphia, and he remained an employe of that corporation for five years. In 1879 he entered into partnership with B. W. Greer in his present manufacturing business, under the style of B. W. Greer & Hetzel, and the plant, which consisted of thirty-two Bridesburg looms on which ginghams and shirting chevots were woven, was located at Sixteenth and Reed streets, Philadelphia. Their business increased so rapidly that in 1881 it was found necessary to increase their facilities, and they removed to Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, added extra looms, and began the manufacture of the finest shirtings and madras cloth at that time made in this country. This branch of the business proving very remunerative, it was again found necessary to increase the size of their plant, and in 1883 they removed their equipment to the new mill just then completed by William Arrott, at Thirteenth and Carpenter streets, and purchased more machinery, making in all one hundred and thirty-two looms. After a varied experience in producing all kinds of cotton goods the business was gradually changed to the manufacture of men's wear, worsteds and woolens. In order to manufacture these articles they had to dispose of their old machinery, and purchased Knowles' fancy looms, to which were added the necessary finishing and dyeing machinery.

In 1888 Mr. Hetzel purchased his partner's share of the business, and shortly afterward admitted Job Smith and George W. Atherholt into partnership, under the firm name of George C. Hetzel & Co. Both the new partners had been employes of the old firm, and under the new arrangement Mr. Smith superintended the work-and Mr. Atherholt acted in the capacity of book-keeper. In 1890 Charles G. Hetzel and a few years later William E. Hetzel were admitted to the firm. In 1890 the firm removed their plant to the new mills erected for them at the corner of Front and Broomall streets, in the city of Chester, where they occupy an entire square. The main building, which is three stories high, fifty by one hundred and ninety-two feet, contains the warp dressing, designing, winding, spooling and finishing departments, the offices and packing rooms; they have also dye houses one hundred and thirty-two by fifty-three feet and sixty-four by fifty-three feet; boiler and engine houses, fifty-four by sixty feet; machine shop, seventeen by seventeen feet; dryer house, sixteen by sixty-two feet; a drug house, eighteen by thirty-six feet, and a one story weave shed, one hundred and eighty-six by one hundred and eight feet in dimensions, with a glass roof. These buildings are built of brick, furnished throughout with automatic sprinklers, electric lighting, water filters, and supplied with all the requisite modern improvements. The power for running the machinery is supplied by a two hundred and fifty horse power Green automatic cut-off engine and four one hundred horse power horizontal boilers, and one two hundred and fifty horse power Berry upright boiler. The goods manufactured by the present firm in 1879 aggregated twenty thousand dollars in value, but under their efficient management and their upright and conscientious business dealings, the yearly product of their mills has steadily increased until it now amounts to over one million dollars annually. The mills are in constant operation, and give employment to between three and four hundred people in the manufacture of fancy worsted men's suitings and trouserings and women's suitings and cloakings. In February, 1901, the business was incorporated under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania as the "George C. Hetzel Company."

Gen. Heibel

In addition to this extensive manufacturing business Mr. Hetzel is also actively interested in many other enterprises both in the city and elsewhere. He is a director of the Chester National Bank, and a member of the council of the borough of Ridley Park, and was chief burgess for three years ended March 1, 1903. He was one of the incorporators and served as director in the Philadelphia Bourse, and he is a member of the Union League Club and the Art Club of Philadelphia. In his politics he is a staunch adherent of the policy of the Republican party, and in his religion he adheres to the doctrines of the Presbyterian church, being a member of the board of trustees of the church of that denomination in Ridley Park, where he has made his home for many years.

SAMUEL R. BELL, of Chester, Pennsylvania, where he is one of the recognized leaders in the building business, belongs to a family which has been for three generations represented in Delaware county. His grandfather, Robert Bell, was a native of the north of Ireland, but emigrated to the United States nearly a century ago, and served in the army during the war of 1812. He was a well-known resident of Delaware county, where he took an active part in local affairs, filling for some time the office of supervisor.

Samuel Bell, son of Robert Bell, is a native of Delaware county. He followed the occupation of a builder, in which, for more than half a century, he has been prominent in the county. Since 1845 he has been a resident of Upland, and since 1850 he has been employed by the Crozer firm as their builder. Mr. Bell, at the age of seventy-two years, is still actively engaged in business.

Samuel R. Bell, son of Samuel Bell, was born September 7, 1863, in Upland, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he received his education in the local schools, after which he learned the building business under the direction of his father. In 1888 he engaged in business for himself, succeeding his father as proprietor of the establishment. His contracts have been very large. In 1902 he purchased North Chester Borough Hall, and tore it down and built twelve modern houses on the site, as well as thirty-one houses in Fifth and Parker streets and Fifth and Fulton streets. In 1903 he purchased the old Stotesburg mill and tore it down and erected twenty-five houses on the site. Mr. Bell's contracts have not been limited to the erection of buildings, but in some instances he has also been employed in the purchase of the ground on which they were to be erected. He has recently finished the building of a handsome residence for Edward Crozer. In addition to the care of his extensive building interests, Mr. Bell acts as agent for Mrs. M. S. Crozer. In 1902 he was elected to the board of revision of taxes.

Mr. Bell is ever ready to aid to the utmost of his power any cause having for its object the advancement of the public good, and gives a due portion of his attention, notwithstanding the engrossing nature of his occupations, to the duties of a citizen. He is a member of the Baptist church.

Mr. Bell married, December 17, 1896, Belle H., daughter of John Hanna, and is the father of three children; Emma H. and Samuel R., Jr., and Hannah D. Bell.

DAVID APPLEBY, now living a retired life in the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a man who in early years with full strength, purpose, ambition and hope, prepared for work, in the mature power of his manhood carried forward the enterprises with which he had become associated, and by improving his opportunities and exercising judgment in the selection of his vocation won a sufficient competence to enable him to put aside the arduous cares and responsibilities of business life and enjoy a well earned rest.

William Appleby, father of David Appleby, was born in Hull, England, and when he had attained young manhood came to this country. In 1830 he located in Delaware and for a number of years was engaged in the occupation of farming. Subsequently he purchased a hotel at Marcus Hook, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and being an enterprising and energetic business man who possessed a genial and hospitable disposition, the success of his enterprise was an assured fact from the beginning. He was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Wilson, also a native of England, and six children were born to them, two of whom are living at the present time (1902), namely: David, and Mary Appleby. Mrs. Appleby passed away in the year 1886, at the age of forty-five years.

David Appleby was born in the state of Delaware August 5, 1839, and acquired his literary education in the local schools. Upon the completion of his studies he commenced his business career in a store in his native town, and faithfully discharged his duties for four years. Later he entered into partnership with his brother, Thomas Appleby, and for many years they conducted a large hotel in Chester, where the Cambridge Office Building now stands. They were very successful in their conduct of the hotel, and it became a favorite resort with the traveling public on account of the excellent treatment which they received there. The hosts were always jovial and obliging, and well deserved the large patronage accorded them. In 1863 Mr. Appleby enlisted as a private in the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Pennsylvania Regiment, and served in defense of his country for three months. He retired from the active duties of a business career in 1882, and since then he has enjoyed the fruits of his long life of toil.

Thomas Appleby, a brother of David Appleby, acted in the capacity of city treasurer, a position which he filled for four terms, and he was also for many years a director of the Delaware County National Bank, which was chartered under the act of March 21, 1814, it being then known as the Delaware County Bank. His death occurred September 3, 1891.

William Appleby, another brother of David Appleby, was a prominent director of the Chester National Bank, which was chartered as a national bank on March 1, 1884. The banking house is located on West Third street near Market Square, a handsome granite building, which was erected by Samuel A. Dyer and William Appleby in 1873, to which afterward large additions and improvements were made. In 1875 William Appleby retired from the firm, and the business was continued by Colonel Dyer until it was finally merged into the Chester National Bank. He died December 10, 1897.

THOMAS WOODWARD TRAINER, treasurer and general manager of the Standard Spinning Company of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of a sturdy old English ancestry which crossed the Atlantic and settled in what is now known as the state of Pennsylvania, two years before the coming of William Penn.

The progenitor of the American branch of the family was David Trainer, an English Quaker who left his native land in order to escape from the religious persecution which they suffered in those days. In 1771 he settled on what is now known as Ridley Park, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he received a large tract of land, and the various branches of the family have resided in that vicinity for many generations. He was the father of four sons and three daughters.

David Trainer, eldest son of David Trainer, and great-grandfather of Thomas Woodward Trainer, was a prominent resident of Ridley Park. He married Mrs. Sarah Smith, nee Newlin, who was noted for her remarkable beauty and refinement of character, and who was honored by being selected as one of the bridesmaids to Dolly Madison when she was married to President James Madison. Mrs. Trainer was a Quakeress of the olden type, and a very accomplished and estimable lady. Five children were born to them, namely: Sarah M. Walker, William, Josiah B., Mary Smith, and David Trainer. After the death of his wife Mr. Trainer was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary Balfour, nee Leiper, who was a descendant of good old Revolutionary stock, a leader in woman's work for the betterment of humanity, and a liberal and earnest worker in the church. Mr. Trainer died February 29, 1846, at the age of seventy years.

David Trainer, youngest son of David and Sarah Trainer, and grandfather of Thomas Woodward Trainer, was born July 9, 1814, in Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he acquired a good practical education in the common schools. After attaining his majority he became one of the pioneer cotton manufacturers of Delaware county, and it was largely through his instrumentality that the industrial interests of the town progressed so rapidly. For forty years he was engaged in the manufacture of cotton fabrics at Linwood, later known as Trainer, in Delaware county, and during this time he improved the methods in use and the character of the finished product. Later he admitted his son into partnership, under the firm name of D. Trainer & Son, and this was afterward changed to D. Trainer & Sons Manufacturing Company, of which organization he was made president, and continued to serve as such for the remainder of his life. He was also the organizer of the three large cotton factories known as the Trainer Mills, situated at Trainer Station, and the Patterson Cotton Mills, now operated by the Patterson Mills Company, and numerous other enterprises. Politically he was a Whig and afterwards a Republican, and in his religion he was a consistent member of the Episcopal church. Mr. Trainer married Miss Ellen Eyre, a daughter of William Eyre, of Chester, and the following named children were born to them: Sarah, Susan, Annie E., wife of Thomas M. Kerr, J. Newlin, Catherine N., wife of Mahlon D. Marshall, and Edward E. Trainer. The father of these children died April 7, 1890, in the seventy-sixth year of his age, and his wife passed away in March, 1872.

Thomas Woodward Trainer, son of Edward E. Trainer, was born at Trainer, Pennsylvania, March 7, 1878, and acquired an excellent education in the public schools of his native village and in Philadelphia. After completing his studies he was employed in a mill operated by his father at Trainer, Pennsylvania, where he thoroughly learned all the details of the business and familiarized himself with the work in general, so that in 1896 he was fully competent to accept the proffered position of assistant to the manager of the cotton mills in Birmingham, Alabama. He remained in this position until the breaking out of the war with Spain, when he went out into the mountains of Alabama and recruited fifty-eight men whom he brought in, and they formed part of the Fifth United States Regiment of Immunes. On July 14, 1898, he was appointed second lieutenant, and on August 6, 1898, the regiment was ordered to Savannah, Georgia, and later was sent to Santlago, Cuba. For three months he was in command of forty-two men who were sent to man the Socoppia battery across from Moro Castle. The regiment had no physician or chaplain, five men died from homesickness, and Mr. Trainer lost twenty-two pounds in weight in the ten days he remained in Santiago.

After the termination of hostilities between the United States and Spain, Mr. Trainer returned to Chester, where he remained until February 19, 1900, when he removed to Chattanooga, Tennessee, and for a short period of time was engaged in mercantile pursuits there. He then returned to the city of Chester and assumed the general management of the Standard Spinning Company, for which he also acts in the capacity of treasurer. Mr. Trainer is also the owner of the entire estate known as the D. Trainer & Sons Manufacturing Company at Trainer, Pennsylvania, which he purchased March 6, 1902. He was one of the organizers of Camp Henry W. Lawton, Spanish American War Veterans, and served as their first commander; he is also the Inspector General of the State National Association. He is a member of Lucius H. Scott Lodge No. 352, F. and A. M., of Chester.

On December 11, 1901, Mr. Trainer married Miss Mary Gray Wetherill, eldest daughter of Robert Wetherill, a native of the city of Chester, and they are the parents of a daughter, Lena Woodward Trainer, born October 13, 1902. Both Mr. Trainer and his wife are members of the Protestant Episcopal church of Chester, Pennsylvania.

HORACE W. FAIRLAMB, for many years actively associated with the business and political interests of the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, November 14, 1853.

Nathaniel W. Fairlamb, father of Horace W. Fairlamb, was also born in Middletown, where he was reared to manhood and acquired a practical education in the district schools. In 1852 he established the undertaking business in his native town, but two years later he removed to Chester, where he continued in the same line of trade for the remainder of his life. He filled the office of burgess of Chester, and he was also a member of the city council for many years. Although elected on the Democratic ticket, his moderation and ability commended him so warmly to the general public that he frequently received the undivided Republican support also. In his religion Mr. Fairlamb was a member of the Society of Friends, and in his fraternal relations he was a member of the Masonic Order. He was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Marshall, a daughter of Thomas Marshall, of Upper Chichester. Four children were born to them, three of whom are still living. Mr. Fairlamb died December 18, 1891, survived by his widow. Mrs. Fairlamb died June 25, 1903.

Horace W. Fairlamb pursued a thorough course of literary instruction in the Chester Academy, and upon reaching his majority, in 1874, he was admitted into partnership with his father in the undertaking business, and after the death of the latter he continued the business on his own account. The success which has attended his efforts is the result of industry, perseverance and close attention to business, which characteristics are important features in his nature and have descended to him from an honorable ancestry. Politically Mr. Fairlamb is a firm adherent to the Republican party, and he has served in the capacity of coroner of Delaware county for three terms, or a period of nine years. He is prominently affiliated with the Masonic and Odd Fellows Orders, having attained to high positions in both organizations.

On September 15, 1875, Mr. Fairlamb married Miss Kate L. Maddock, daughter of Israel Maddock, a descendant of an old Delaware county family. Five children were born of this union, three of whom are still living: Carrie M., Margaret H. and Horace W., Jr.

FREDERICK BALDT, a prominent man of affairs of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, comes of German stock, being descended through both his parents from ancestors who emigrated from the fatherland during the latter part of the eighteenth century. Frederick Baldt, grandfather of the present bearer of the name, was born in Germany and there received his education, coming to America while yet a young man. He settled in Philadelphia, where he followed the occupation of a market gardener, in which he was remarkably successful, becoming the owner of a considerable amount of property. He gave to the country of his adoption a devoted allegiance, serving in the army during the war of 1812. He married Christian Wolfe, and was the father of nine children. His death took place in his home in Philadelphia, about the year 1857, when he was eighty-eight years of age.

William Baldt, son of Frederick and Christian (Wolfe) Baldt, was born in Philadelphia, where he learned the trade of house carpenter, which he followed with great success during the most of his life. In politics he was a Democrat. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Peter Painter, of Philadelphia. Mr. Painter was a native of Germany, whose arrival in the United States had been contemporaneous with that of Frederick Baldt, with whose career his own had possessed points of resemblance, he having also engaged in market gardening, and served as a soldier during the war of 1812. Mr. and Mrs. Baldt were the parents of seven children: Christian, William, Henry, Mary, Anna, John and Frederick, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mrs. Baldt died in 1866 of cholera, in the seventy-first year of her age, and Mr. Baldt in 1883, at the age of eighty-two, both expiring in their native city of Philadelphia.

Frederick Baldt, son of William and Elizabeth (Painter) Baldt, was born June 17, 1841, in Philadelphia, and received his education in the public schools of that city, where, on leaving school, he was apprenticed to the trade of a molder in the Penn works of Reaney, Neafie & Levy. Mr. Baldt acquired his trade with thoroughness and rapidity, bringing to it, as he did, previous preference and natural aptitude, enforced by intelligence and application. His knowledge of the business, which was theoretical as well as practical, was such that in 1864 he was intrusted with the management of the foundry which had then been recently established in Chester by Reaney, Son & Archibald. He remained in this position until 1870, when the foundry was sold to the late John Roach, the famous shipbuilder, for whom he acted for a brief period as manager, returning to Philadelphia in October, 1870, for the purpose of taking charge of the People's Foundry. There he remained until January, 1871, when he again became a resident of Chester, being placed in charge of the works of the Chester Steel Casting Company. These works had hitherto been unsuccessful in the manufacture of steel castings, but Mr. Baldt was speedily successful in developing their possibilities in this direction, causing them to produce standard steel, and rendering them financially flourishing. In 1875 Mr. Baldt organized the Eureka Cast Steel Company of Chester, of which he was elected general manager, in which position he remained until March, 1886, during which time the company became one of the most prosperous and scientifically conducted establishments of the kind in the state. By this time Mr. Baldt's abilities in his chosen calling were so well known and so universally recognized that when the Standard Steel Casting Company of Thurlow, Delaware, failed in the manufacture of steel castings, he was solicited by the president of the company, Mr. Robert Wetherill, to take charge of its plant. This position he assumed in March, 1886, and it was not long before the works had earned a national reputation by reason of the high-class character of their manufactures. During his connection with this company Mr. Baldt made for the United States government the first six-inch high pressure rifled cannon which had ever stood the required test, and these works also manufactured the castings for the government cruisers, including the hull and engine castings for the steamships Baltimore, Philadelphia, Newark, Petrel, Vesuvius, Maine, Texas, Birmingham and Concord, as well as part of the castings of the New York. The superiority of these castings to anything of the kind hitherto manufactured was universally acknowledged both in this country and in Europe. In January, 1891, Mr. Baldt resigned his position, and passed a year in Maryland, on a farm which he possessed in that state. In 1892 he returned to Chester, where he was instrumental in organizing the Penn Steel Casting and Machine Company, of which he was made general manager. The company is now in possession of one of the largest works of this kind in Pennsylvania, having bought the plant of the old Chester Foundry and Machine Company, at the corner

The Lewis Publishing Co

W. J. H. S. W.

Fred^h Baldt

of Front and Penn streets, which they have so enlarged and improved that in its accommodations and equipments it is without a rival, possessing a capacity for producing the largest steel castings ever made or used in the world, the superiority of its manufactures being admitted on both continents. In his business career Mr. Baldt has achieved a series of triumphs, and has earned for himself a place in the very highest rank of his profession, wherever, the world over, the possibilities of steel machinery are recognized.

In the sphere of politics Mr. Baldt, like his father, has always been connected with the Democratic party. He is a Mason of long standing, affiliating with Chester Lodge, No. 236, F. and A. M.

COL. JAMES A. G. CAMPBELL. The high rank among representative men of Delaware county, which is accorded to Colonel James A. G. Campbell, president of the Delaware County Trust, Safe Deposit and Title Insurance Company, is the outgrowth of his own personal activity, business forethought and executive ability. His career emphasizes the declarative of Sallust, that "every man is the architect of his own fortune." While in the paternal line he is the grandson of Joseph and Mary (Dodge) Campbell, of Stockport, England, and on the maternal side is a grandson of John and Mary (Turner) Garsed, of Swift Place Mills, Yorkshire, England, a family whose name is conspicuously associated with the history of cotton manufacture in Great Britain and this country. Colonel Campbell was compelled to rely wholly upon his individual capacities to make his way and win honors in the battle of life in which all men must take part.

James A. G. Campbell is the youngest son of James and Angelina (Garsed) Campbell. His father, James Campbell, a native of Stockport, England, as a young man came to the United States, locating in Delaware county, where he subsequently won a lasting place in the industrial history of this section. To him above all other men is due the credit of establishing the first cotton mill in the borough, now city of Chester, appropriately called the "Pioneer Mills." It was through his personal endeavors that other enterprises were located in the town, making the beginning of that industrial development which has advanced Chester to one of the busy centers of manufacturing activity in the United States. While James Campbell, by reason of the failure of firm and individuals with whom he had business relations, was himself financially ruined during the panic of 1857, his name will retain prominence in the annals of the city, because it was through his endeavors that Chester first attracted consideration as a place of manufacturing importance.

James A. G. Campbell was born February 19, 1858, in Chester, Pennsylvania, and with the exception of six weeks devoted to special study at the Chester Academy was educated in the public schools of his native city. Leaving school at the age of sixteen years, he immediately entered the express office of Headley & Mahon, where he was employed in the capacity of clerk until the spring of 1876; for several months in the latter part of the same year he was express manager between Chester and Philadelphia; then a clerk in the real estate office of John Cochran in the latter city. He resigned from this position in order to accept that of book-keeper for Dutton & Anderson, lumber and coal merchants of Chester, and subsequently held a similar position in the planing mills of John H. Stroud & Co. On November 10, 1879, Mr. Campbell was engaged in the banking and brokerage house of Elliott, Sons & Co., where he remained until 1884, when, after the death of the senior members, he became book-keeper for L. H. Taylor & Co., a stock brokerage firm. He retained this position until the organization of the Chester Bank and Saving Fund, of which he was chosen receiving teller, and secretary of the Delaware County Trust, Safe Deposit and Title Insurance Company. These institutions began business August 26, 1885. On February 23, 1886, when only twenty-eight years of age, he was elected cashier of the bank, and when the two organizations were consolidated May 17, 1889, he was elected treasurer; on May 20, 1892, vice-president, and on June 8, 1899, was elected president of the Delaware County Trust, Safe Deposit and Title Insurance Company, a position he still holds. On May 17, 1893, he organized and started the clearing house for the banks of the city of Chester and was appointed its first manager. For two years from 1890 to 1892 he acted in the capacity of secretary and treasurer of the Standard Spinning Company, manufacturers of spinning yarns in Chester.

Mr. Campbell was one of the original members of Company B, Eleventh Regiment, now the Sixth National Guard of Pennsylvania, enlisting as a private on March 30, 1881. He was appointed June 6, 1881, second sergeant; July 29, 1881, first sergeant; elected first lieutenant January 8, 1883, a position he resigned March 30, 1886. He was appointed May 11, 1887, by Colonel John W. Schall, first lieutenant and inspector of rifle practice for his old regiment, the Sixth. On July 20 of the same year he was appointed aide-de-camp by Brigadier General George R. Snowden, with the rank of captain, on the staff of the first brigade, and he acted as assistant adjutant general of that brigade from June 4, 1890, until November 11, 1890. After the death of General Hartranft, General Snowden became major-general. The latter appointed Captain Campbell aide-de-camp with the rank of major, thus elevating him to the division staff, and subsequently he was promoted to division inspector with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. During his military career Colonel Campbell participated in the inaugural parades of President Cleveland in 1885, of President Harrison in 1889, and in that of President Cleveland in 1893, as also in the Constitutional Centennial parade in Philadelphia in 1888, the Presidential Centennial in New York in 1889, and the Columbian Dedicatory parade in Chicago in 1892. He was on duty with General Snowden at Homestead during the exciting riots at that place in the summer of 1892. When Congress, on April 19, 1898, declared that Cuba was an independent nation and authorized President McKinley forcibly to intervene to relieve the people of the island from Spanish misrule, the authorities of Pennsylvania, for several weeks after the President had made requisition for troops, strove to have the United States accept the uniformed National Guard of the state as a whole, with Major General Snowden in command. Had the proposition been accepted, Col. Campbell would have retained his position in the military family of General Snowden. When it became evident that the national government would not accede to that suggestion, Colonel Campbell tendered his resignation as a staff officer and was appointed to the adjutancy of the Second Battalion of the Second Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry, with the rank of second lieutenant, being enrolled May 12, 1898, and the following day was mustered into the military service of the United States. The patriotic action on the part of Colonel Campbell in resigning high rank to accept the commission of a second lieutenant in a volunteer regiment which at the time expected to be ordered immediately to the front, was made a feature in General Snowden's annual report of 1898, in which he officially commended Colonel Campbell for his act. At that time grave fears were entertained that a plan existed among Spanish hirelings to cripple the United States by the destruction of the powder mills in this country. To frustrate that design the War Department ordered that such establishments should be placed under military guard and for that purpose the Second Battalion of the Second Pennsylvania Regiment was ordered to Pompton Lake, New Jersey and subsequently to Pennsgrove, New Jersey, where large mills were actively engaged in furnishing powder to the Federal government. The brief period covered by active hostilities rendered the forwarding of additional troops to Cuba unnecessary, hence, under the general orders of the President, Adjutant Campbell was honorably discharged on October 25, 1898, when the regiment was mustered out of the service of the United States. Colonel Campbell is a member of the Society of Veterans of the Spanish American War.

In his political affiliations Colonel Campbell is a firm supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and during the Cleveland and Harrison campaign of 1888 was in command of a battalion of four companies of young men of that party formed to take part in parades; during the municipal contest of 1893 he was a member of the Citizens' Committee of fifty which aided materially in the election of John B. Hinkson, the Democratic candidate, for mayor of Chester. In 1896 Colonel Campbell was appointed by Mayor Black a member of the first board of park commissioners; when that body was organized, he was elected its first secretary, an official position he still retains. He was elected April 18, 1892, a vestryman of St. Paul's Episcopal church. He was a member and treasurer of the building committee under whose supervision the recent church edifice at Broad and Madison streets was erected.

On November 26, 1889, Colonel Campbell married Miss Elizabeth Hubley Mowry, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Phillip H. and the late Katharine (Richardson) Mowry. They have two children, a daughter, Margaret Mowry Campbell, and a son, James A. G. Campbell, Jr.

JACOB CRAIG, Jr., treasurer of the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a son of Jacob and Esther (Lamborn) Craig and was born near Hockessin, New Castle county, Delaware, July 13, 1851. His parents on his paternal side are of Scotch descent, John Craig, with his parents, emigrating from Scotland in 1687 and located in Chester county, near what is now Fairville. The direct descendants of John Craig who was the first of the family to marry in this country were Walter, whose son Jacob, whose son William was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch. Jacob, above referred to, married Mary West, a close relative to Benjamin West, the famous painter, and their son John was a colonel of a Pennsylvania regiment in the war for independence and was taken prisoner at the battle of Brandywine. William Craig married Hannah Nethery, his first cousin, whose father, Robert Nethery, was also an emigrant from Scotland and located near what is now Hammetton, Chester county, and to this union was born seven children: Walter, Mary (Stern), Ann, Jacob, Obediah, Nelson and Hannah J. (Sharpless).

Jacob Craig, fourth son of William and Hannah (Nethery) Craig, was born near Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 28, 1820. He learned the trade of shoemaker, and followed this occupation most of his life. He located at Hockessin, Delaware, served in the war of the Rebellion in the Fifth Delaware Regiment, was for three terms a school director, and was a man of considerable ability. He married Esther Lamborn, a member of Hockessin Friends Meeting, in 1842. Esther Lamborn Craig was a direct descendant of George and Jane Chandler, who came from England in 1687. In 1887 more than fifteen hundred of their descendants, from all parts of the country, held a bi-centennial anniversary celebration of the settlement made by their ancestors on the original family home tract, at Chadd's Ford, in Delaware county. She was the daughter of Levis and Phoebe (Chandler) Lamborn, a descendant of Robert Lamborn, a native of Berkshire, England, who, in 1713, when a young man left his Hempstead home in quest of his sweetheart, Sarah Swayne, who had sailed, with her father, Francis Swayne, for America two years before. Robert did not know where the Swayne family had located, but fortunately upon reaching Philadelphia, he accidentally met Mr. Swayne on the street and he was gladly escorted to the Swayne home, near what is now London Grove, Chester county, where soon after he married the lady he had traveled so far to make his wife. Jacob Craig died July 14, 1878, aged fifty-eight years, long surviving his wife, who died April 2, 1853, aged thirty-six years. They were the parents of six children: Lamborn, Dewesse, Levis, Wilson, Jacob, Jr. and Chandler.

J. Craig, Jr., of the family last named began his education in the schools of his native village, and then entered the Delaware State Normal Academy at Wilmington, Delaware, from which he was graduated in 1871. He taught for a time in the common schools of Delaware, and then in the Academy of which he was a graduate, for three years, when he resigned to enter upon the principalship of Felton Seminary, in Kent county, Delaware. He proved successful as a teacher, but he felt inclined to journalism, and after a year he went to Wilmington to enter upon a reportorial engagement on the Morning News. In 1876 he removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, to enter upon similar work on the Chester Times, which he afterward purchased, but soon sold. He continued on the reportorial staff of the Times and the Advocate from 1877 to 1886, when he was elected superintendent of the Chester Freight Line, now Chester Shipping Company, a position which he continues to occupy and in which he has developed genuine managerial ability. He is also interested in other enterprises which form an important part of the commercial life of Chester—the Delaware County Subway Company, of which he is president; and a director of the Cambridge Trust Company, the Delaware County Building Association and president of the Chester Ice Company, also a member of the executive committee of the Philadelphia Steam Vessel Owners' Association. His activities extend to all movements conducive to the prosperity and prestige of his city, and he has devoted much time to public concerns. In 1890 he was elected to the select council from the Fourth ward, and at the expiration of his term he was re-elected. In 1896 he was elected city treasurer for a term of three years, and he was twice re-elected without opposition—an eloquent attestation of his ability and integrity. He entered upon the office to find its affairs in confusion, and he established an adequate system, and instituted reform by the curtailment of expenditures, which soon bore its fruit in improving the public credit, and bringing the municipal bonds to a premium. In 1882 Mr. Craig was secretary of the Bi-Centennial Committee of Chester, formed to commemorate the landing of William Penn in Pennsylvania. This was one of the most memorable celebrations in the history of the state, and in its inception and conduct Mr. Craig was a principal agent.

Mr. Craig is a Republican in politics, and a leader in the counsels of the party. He has served as president of the Chester Republican Club, and at various times he has been a delegate in local and state conventions of the party. He is a member of various fraternal and social bodies—L. H. Scott Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, Chester Lodge of Benevolent Order of Elks, the Royal Arcanum, the Supreme Conclave of the Improved Order of Heptasophs, and the State and National Councils of the Junior Order of American Mechanics.

Mr. Craig was married December 28, 1875, to Miss Amelia Hibshman, daughter of John and Magdalene (Adkins) Hibshman, of Ephrata, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania; her parents were natives of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, among the oldest and most thrifty of the locality, and were of German extraction. Three children were born of this marriage: Walter H., John Percy and Norman Chandler Craig. Walter H. Craig married Etta James, of an old Delaware county family, on June 5, 1902.

Throughout his career, Mr. Craig has developed ability for affairs of constantly increasing importance, and his success has been attained solely through his own ability and force of character.

WILLIAM H. BERRY. Two residents of Chester, Pennsylvania, father and son, in the persons of B. D. and W. H. Berry, have achieved well deserved reputation for inventions of great usefulness.

B. D. Berry was a native of Illinois, residing in Edwardsville, a short distance from the city of St. Louis. He was a carriage maker by trade, but his attention was directed to brick making, and he devised a machine for making brick from the dry clay, and upon this basis has been established a large brick making industry, while other large manufacturing establishments have sprung up about it. Mr. Berry is yet living, at the advanced age of eighty-four years, and has but recently received a patent covering a unique window fixture of his invention.

William H. Berry, son of B. D. Berry, was born in Edwardsville, Illinois, September 9, 1852. He received a thorough common school education, and developed a fondness for learning which would doubtless have led him to a professional life had not his tastes for mechanics, inherited from his father, predominated and led him into another career. He learned the trade of a machinist in one of the mammoth establishments of Buffalo, New York, and he subsequently took a scientific mechanical course in the Mechanics' Institute in the same city. In 1873, on attaining his majority, he removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, where he had charge of the brick yard of the Eddystone Manufacturing Company. At a later period he was appointed master mechanic for the company, and he held this position for the long term of seventeen years.

During all his active life Mr. Berry has been busied in the field of invention, and he has contributed to mechanics and agriculture numerous labor-saving devices of the highest utility. One of the most ingenious and mechanically perfect of his inventions was his device for a harvester, which substituted straw for twine in binding the bundles. This achieved a high degree of excellence, but was financially unprofitable. Another of Mr. Berry's inventions, the steam boiler known by his name, has been termed, by competent machinists, the best in use. His inventive faculty is continually active, and he is now superintending the manufacture of about a dozen of his inventions from which he reaps substantial royalties. In 1903 Mr. Berry established a factory in Chester, called the Berry Engineering Company, which manufactures steam appliances of his own invention and which is now in operation.

Mr. Berry is not devoted solely to mechanics, but maintains a deep interest in religious, political and social affairs, and makes his influence deeply felt along all these lines. He has been a member of the Madison Street Methodist Episcopal church since 1876, and is a local preacher in his denomination. In politics he is a Democrat and a radical bimetalist, contending that industrial freedom is impossible from the scant supply of money obtained from gold alone. He has vigorously defended this theory in this and other states of the union. Mr. Berry considers this the best work of his life. He was twice a candidate for congress. He is an ardent Prohibitionist, and was a candidate for state treasurer on the ticket of that party.

Mr. Berry was married in 1879, to Miss Susie Scofield, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and four children have been born of this union—Benjamin, William Jr., Paul and Homer Berry.

DAVID S. BUNTING, a successful business man of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of a family of English extraction who came from England to America about the middle of the seventeenth century. The first representatives in this country were three brothers, one of whom settled at Crosswicks, New Jersey, another in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and the third, Samuel by name, settled at Darby, now Delaware county. From the latter named David S. Bunting is a lineal descendant. Samuel Bunting married a granddaughter of John Blunston, who emigrated from England in 1682 and settled in Darby, where he took up a large tract of land; he was a member of the Provincial Assembly for thirteen years, and several times held the position of speaker of that body. Mr. Blunston was also appointed by William Penn as a member of the council of state and a justice of court, and frequently acted as attorney for the people in England who held land in Pennsylvania. Josiah Bunting, grandfather of David S. Bunting, was a native of Darby, Delaware county, where he resided all his life engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was a consistent member of the Society of Friends.

Josiah Bunting, father of David S. Bunting, was born and reared at Darby, and upon attaining young manhood he removed to Philadelphia, entered into partnership with Joseph Watson, who for five years served as mayor of that city, and engaged in the lumber business, under the firm name of Watson & Bunting. Mr. Bunting remained in the firm until 1832, when he disposed of his interest in the business and purchased the old Bunting homestead at Darby, to which he removed in the autumn of that year. In 1814 he was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Sellers, a daughter of David Sellers, then residing in Philadelphia, though a native of Upper Darby, Delaware county. Seven children were born to them, namely: Rachel Sellers, Elizabeth, David Sellers, Sarah Hunt, Josiah, Samuel Sellers, and Joseph Bunting. The father of these children was a life-long member of the Society of Friends, and his death occurred in 1863, in the ninety-first year of his age; his wife, who was born in Philadelphia, died at her home in Darby, in 1850, aged sixty-two years.

The Sellers family, of which the mother of

J. Bunting

David S. Bunting was a member, is also one of the oldest in Pennsylvania, having been founded here by Samuel Sellers, a native of Derbyshire, England, who, in 1682, settled at Darby, then Chester, now Delaware, county. In June, 1684, he married Miss Anna Gibbons, also from Derbyshire, England, they being the first couple ever married in the Darby Meeting of the Society of Friends. They had six children born to them, the third, Samuel, being born December 3, 1690, married August 12, 1712, to Miss Sarah Smith, also of English descent. To them were born seven children, of whom the youngest was John Sellers, the maternal great-grandfather of David S. Bunting, who was born September 19, 1728, died February 2, 1804. His father having erected the first twisting mill in Pennsylvania, he learned the trade of weaver, but, possessing a marked mechanical genius, he invented the first wire rolling screens and sieves for cleaning grain ever made on this continent. The first wire store in America was in Philadelphia. This invention proved such a success that he abandoned the manufacture of textile fabrics and devoted his attention to wire weaving. He was one of the prominent men of the town, and was elected to serve in the assembly in 1767, holding the office for five terms. On February 26, 1749, he married Miss Ann Gibbons, and the following named children were born to them: Nathan, David, John and George Sellers. David Sellers, maternal grandfather of David S. Bunting, was a native of Upper Darby, and after completing his education, he learned the trade of wire worker in Philadelphia, where he erected the first wire-working establishment ever operated in America. His death occurred in 1813, at the age of fifty-six years.

David S. Bunting, son of Josiah and Sarah Bunting, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, September 23, 1820. He was reared on the old Bunting homestead at Darby, Delaware county, to which his parents removed when he was a young child. He obtained his education in the Friends' School at Darby, a boarding school at West Chester, and this was supplemented by a course of study at a college in Wilmington, Delaware. Shortly after completing his studies he was engaged in farming and dairying at Upper Darby, meeting with so large a degree of success in this enterprise that he remained there for eight years. He then purchased a farm on Chester creek, and pursued the same line of trade until 1862, when he sold his property, located in the city of Chester, and engaged in the lumber business in partnership with Joseph H. Hinkson. This connection continued until the death of Mr. Hinkson two years later, since which time Mr. Bunting has carried on the lumber and coal business alone. He has the most extensive lumber trade in the city of Chester, and carries constantly in stock the largest assortment of rough and dressed lumber to be found in the locality. He has always been regarded as a careful, conservative business man, whose plans and operations are based upon mature judgment and strict integrity, and his commendable methods have been rewarded with conspicuous and well merited success. Mr. Bunting is an ardent Republican in politics, and has been several times elected a member of the city council, and his services in that body were recognized as useful and important.

On March 9, 1843, Mr. Bunting married Miss Hannah P. Serrill, a daughter of Benjamin Serrill, a grazier of Darby, Delaware county. Their children are: Sidney P., wife of Joseph W. Sharp, president of the National Bank at Berwyn, Chester county, Pennsylvania; Elizabeth, wife of J. Charles Andrews, of Darby; and Sarah S., now deceased, who was the wife of Josiah Bunting, chief of the dress goods department of John Wanamaker's store in Philadelphia, and who at her death, in 1888, left three sons, Joseph S., Sydney S., deceased, and Aubrey R. Bunting. Personally Mr. Bunting is genial and affable, is very popular with the residents of the community in which he has resided for so many years, and is rightly called one of Chester's foremost citizens.

HON. WILLIAM WARD, an eminent member of the legal profession and also an ex-congressman of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Philadelphia, February 2, 1837, a son of M. and Margaret Ward, who came from Ireland, and was a descendant of an honored family who possessed large landed interests in that country, and his death occurred when William was only six months old.

At the age of six years young William entered the Stephen Girard College in Philadelphia, being one of the first boys to become a student in that institution. After completing his education he served a four years apprenticeship in the art of printing in the office of the "Delaware County Republican," then edited by Mr. Walters. After the expiration of this period of time, he studied law with John M. Broomall, and was admitted to the bar in August, 1859, after which he practiced his profession in partnership with his preceptor. He was actively connected with various land enterprises and public improvements in Chester and vicinity, to which he added the business of banking in 1868, being a member of the firm of Ward & Baker. Five years later he retired from the banking business and since that time devoted his attention to legal affairs. In all his professional effort he enjoyed the respect and esteem of his colleagues at the bar and the confidence of his clients, and being possessed of considerable wit and humor he was often chosen as a platform orator, as well as an after-dinner speaker.

Mr. Ward served for many years as city solicitor, secretary and treasurer of the Chester Improvement Company, was a director of the First National Bank, treasurer of the South Ward Water Board and secretary of the Chester Creek & Delaware River Railroad Companies. In politics Mr. Ward was a Republican, but never held any purely political office until 1876, when he was elected a member of the forty-fifth Congress. His services in that body were so appreciated by his constituents that he was returned to the forty-sixth Congress, and afterward was honored with a third term by his party, which made his tenure of the office of congressman continue until 1883, after which he declined all further political nominations in order to give needed attention to his business affairs. He also served in the capacity of president of the city council for many years, was head of the Water Works Company, and filled other local offices.

On February 2, 1862, Mr. Ward married Miss Clara Ecker Ulrich, daughter of Samuel Ulrich, a member of an old and honored family. Their children are: Samuel, a resident of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Dr. John M. B., deceased, who resided at Marcus Hook; William, a citizen of Chester; Renee U., Clara N., Margaret D. and George E. Ward. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ward were active and zealous members of the Protestant Episcopal church of Chester, Pennsylvania. Mr. Ward's decease occurred February 27, 1895.

JOHN M. B. WARD, M. D., deceased, late quarantine officer of Marcus Hook, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Chester, Pennsylvania, August 5, 1863, a son of the Hon. William and Clara (Ecker) Ward.

Dr. Ward acquired his primary education with Miss Crosby, of Chester; later he enrolled as a pupil in the Burlington Military Academy, where he remained two years. After the completion of his academic studies he entered the drug store of G. Banks Willson, and later began a course of pharmacy at the Philadelphia College, from which institution he was graduated in 1884. He then accepted a position with Carpenter, Henzey & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, after which he was appointed chemist of the United States Marine Hospital in the same city, where he remained for a period of three years. He then matriculated in the Jefferson Medical College for the purpose of perfecting his study of medicine, and was duly graduated from that institution in the spring of 1891 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He immediately returned to Chester and began the practice of his profession in partnership with his uncle, Dr. Ulrich, and this connection continued until March, 1893, when Dr. Ward opened an office on his own account. In the summer of 1891 Dr. Ward was appointed United States quarantine officer at Cape Charles, and he also served in the capacity of visiting surgeon to the Chester Hospital. The following year he was chosen deputy quarantine officer of the Lazaretto, a hospital, the station being changed to Marcus Hook in the fall of the same year.

Dr. Ward was the first man that was enlisted and commissioned in the Sixth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry during the Spanish-American war, being appointed first lieutenant and assistant surgeon; he was executive officer and had complete charge of the Second Brigade, Second Division, at Camp Alger, Virginia. Later on he was a member of the staff of the chief surgeon of the Second Army Corps, and subsequently was placed in command of the reserve ambulance corps until his regiment was mustered out from Camp Meade. Dr. Ward had in his possession quite a number of commendatory letters which he received from his superior officers. After the close of the war Dr. Ward returned to Marcus Hook and resumed his duties as quarantine officer until his death, January 21, 1903. In addition to these duties he has served as major surgeon in the medical corps of the Pennsylvania militia, assigned to duty as chief surgeon of the Sixth Pennsylvania Regiment. Dr. Ward was a member of the Delaware County Medical Society and the J. N. Da Costa Medical Society of Philadelphia. Socially he was a member of the Alpha Boat Club, and fraternally he affiliated with the Knights of Honor, the order of the Elks, and was a member of the Lulu Temple, Mystic Shrine, Philadelphia.

On December 31, 1890, Dr. Ward married Miss Elizabeth J. Walsh, daughter of Robert F. Walsh, and their children are: Jane N. and William Ward.

HENRY VON HOFF STOEVER, M. D., a highly esteemed physician of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a German family which has been for nearly three centuries represented in the United States. The name is one distinguished in the annals of the Fatherland, as that of a friend and advisor of Martin Luther, the hero of the German reformation. It is from this brave fellow-laborer of the monk of Wittenberg that the Stoever family trace their descent. In 1728 John Casper Stoever emigrated to America, bringing with him the faith for which his ancestors had braved the perils of excommunication and martyrdom. He was a pioneer in the New World of the doctrines of German Protestantism, being the builder of the first Lutheran church in America. The record of the family since the period of their emigration shows them to have been animated by the same fearless and devoted spirit which characterized them in their native Germany, ever ready to take up arms in defense of the country of their adoption. In all our wars, both colonial and national, the Stoevers have served, attesting by their gallant conduct on many a battlefield, the sincerity of their allegiance.

Jacob M. Stoever, father of Dr. Henry von Hoff Stoever, was born in Milton, Pennsylvania, and was engaged in the iron and steel business. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted in the Fifty-sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, serving to the termination of the conflict. From 1871 to 1897 he resided in Chester, where he was active in politics and in local affairs, serving on the school board. He married Pleasance S. Bickhead, and was the father of four sons. Mr. and Mrs. Stoever are both living, the former being sixty-three years of age.

Henry von Hoff Stoever, son of Jacob M. and Pleasance S. (Bickhead) Stoever, was born March 23, 1869, in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, where he received his primary education in the public schools. He afterward graduated at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and having decided to devote himself for life to the practice of medicine, he matriculated in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated in the class of 1891. His practice was large and steadily increasing and his professional standing was unquestioned. He was a member of the visiting staff of the Chester Hospital. In addition to his revenues as a medical practitioner, he has several business interests in Philadelphia. These interests he still retains, but in consequence of impaired health, has been compelled to resign the practice of his profession. Dr. Stoever is the possessor of a large and valuable collection of Indian blankets, weapons and curios, brought from the west and abounding in interest for all who have in any way made a study of the history and manners of the aborigines.

Dr. Stoever is a member of all the medical associations, both of the county and state, and in 1893 held the office of president of the County Medical Society. He belongs to the Penn Club of Chester. Although obliged, by reason of failing health, to retire from the active duties of his profession, Dr. Stoever retains the position which he has for some time held on the visiting staff of the Chester Hospital, and is frequently solicited to act as an adviser in cases of peculiar moment.

Dr. Stoever married, October 19, 1894, Miria B., daughter of John N. Wilson, a prominent citizen of Chester. Dr. and Mrs. Stoever are the parents of two children: J. Wilson, and Pleasance L. Stoever.

JOHN NEVIUS WILSON, of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, belongs to an ancient family of Irish origin, the name of which is very famous in the annals of the American Revolution, and traces its genealogy through the following generations:

James Wilson (1) came with his son Samuel (2) from the north of Ireland, and settled in Derry, Lancaster county. James (3), son of Samuel (2), was one of the illustrious band of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He married Martha Sterrette. Their son, William (4), born in 1743, married Elizabeth Robinson, and they were the parents of Samuel (5), who was born in Union county, followed the occupation of a farmer, and served in the patriot army during the war of 1812. He was born April 7, 1790, and on December 12, 1816, married Elizabeth Nevius, who was descended from an old family which originated in Holland, and presents the following record:

Johannes Nevius (1) came from Amsterdam in 1650, and settled in New York, or as it was then called New Amsterdam, being a Dutch colony. It was thus naturally the place of all others in the New World which Johannes Nevius or Neiff, as the name was then spelled, would make his home, as he would there find himself among his countrymen. He afterward removed to New Jersey. He married, November 18, 1653, Adriaenty Bleych.

Peter Nevius (2), son of Johannes (1) and Adriaenty (Bleych) Nevius, was born February 4, 1663, married January 22, 1684, Janetze Schenck, and died April 29, 1740. Their son Roeloff Nevyus (3), as the name was at that time spelled, was born in 1687, lived in Raritan, New Jersey, and married, May 3, 1712, Catheynthe Lucane Van Voorhees. Their son, Peter (4), was born in 1727, lived at Clover Hill, New Jersey, married, in 1751, Maria Van Doren, born in 1727, and died in 1800. Their son Christopher, or Christian (5), was born November 1, 1759, in Bedminster township, Somerset county, New Jersey, married, November 16, 1789, Lucretia, daughter of William and Elizabeth Chamberlain, and died November 1, 1815. Their daughter, Elizabeth (6), married Samuel Wilson, December 12, 1816. Samuel Wilson died January 16, 1843.

John Nevius Wilson, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Nevius) Wilson, was born September 27, 1834, near Lewisburg, Union county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the public schools of Kelly township, and at John Randolph's Academy in Lewisburg. On leaving school in 1855 he took charge of his father's farm, which he afterward purchased in connection with his brother Thomas. In the autumn of 1856 he went to Minnesota, and in the following year purchased a section of land there. In the autumn of 1857 he returned to Pennsylvania, and in the ensuing spring traveled extensively in the west for the furtherance of certain business enterprises, returning to Pennsylvania after an absence of six months. In the spring of 1861, on the outbreak of the Civil war, he enlisted in Company G, Fourth Pennsylvania Regiment, with the rank of sergeant. He took part in the defense of Washington, and was honorably discharged at the expiration of his term of service. In April, 1863, he went to Chester, as a member of the firm of Frick & Co., builders of canal boats. In 1881 he became connected with the Arasapha Manufacturing Company, of which in the course of time he was made president. This office he held for ten years, until January, 1901, when he resigned and passed the winter in California. Mr. Wilson takes an active interest in whatever tends to promote the welfare of the community in which he resides, and five years ago, when the park commission of the city of Chester was organized, he became one of its members, a position which he has since continued to hold. He belongs to the board of directors of The Jordan Manufacturing Company. In politics Mr. Wilson has always been a Republican, his first vote having been cast for Abraham Lincoln. He is a member of the Madison Street Methodist Episcopal church, in which for seven years he has held the office of president of the board of trustees.

Mr. Wilson married, October 19, 1865, Sophie Dupont Blakeley, daughter of Abraham Blakeley. They are the parents of the following children: Frank Blakeley, born June 25, 1867, died November 12, 1869; Ralph Norton, born May 14, 1869, died June 7, 1872; Maria Blakeley, born January 27, 1871, married, October 19, 1893, Dr. Henry Von Hoff Stover; Abraham Blakeley, born September 30, 1874, died July 28, 1875; Edlth Norton, born September 27, 1876, married, June 30, 1898, the Rev. Malcolm James McLeod, D. D.; and John Nevius, born August 17, 1886, died July 30, 1900.

JOHN M. MARIS, for many years a successful business man and respected citizen of Philadelphia, was descended from George Maris, who, with his wife, Alice, and their children, emigrated from Worcestershire, England, to the Province of Pennsylvania, in 1683, driven thither by the persecutions to which Friends were subjected in England at that period. His descendants became very numerous in Delaware and Chester counties, and on 10 mo., 4, 1815, Jesse J. Maris, of the latter county, married according to the custom of Friends, Mary West, born 7 mo., 11, 1795, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Pusey) West. Samuel West was the son of William, and a member of the old Pennsylvania family which produced the celebrated painter, Benjamin West. Hannah, another daughter of Samuel and Mary (Pusey) West, married Robert M. Huston, a physician of Philadelphia. Jesse J. Maris and his wife were the parents of the following children:

1. Hannah, born 9 mo., 18, 1816, married 6 mo., 8, 1864, John Stokes, a widower, and died 4 mo., 6, 1887.

2. John McIlvain, mentioned at length hereinafter.

3. Samuel West, born 7 mo., 17, 1821, married, 10 mo., 8, 1845, Sarah Wetherill, and their children were: Mary Anna, born 8 mo., 30, 1846, married Stephen, son of Dr. Stephen and Catherine (Murray) Wood, of New York; Emily E., born 2 mo., 11, 1848, married William Parker, of Washington; Jesse Jonathan, born 7 mo., 3, 1850, died without issue 12 mo., 20, 1871; Sarah Wetherill, born 9 mo., 21, 1852; Frances, born 11 mo., 13, 1854; and Richard Wetherill born 3 mo., 15, 1857.

4. William, born 11 mo., 11, 1823, married 12 mo., 26, 1883, Lillian Hart, of Chester, and they have one child, Alice.

5. Jesse Emlen, born 11 mo., 6, 1825, married Mary C. Gaskill, 4 mo., 6, 1856, and their children are: Caroline, Franklin, Charles and Mary H.

6. Sarah Ann, born 4 mo., 15, 1828, died 4 mo., 21, 1871.

7. Edward, born 3 mo., 15, 1832, became a physician, and married Eleanor K. Wood, daughter of Dr. Stephen and Catharine (Murray) Wood, of New York, 10 mo., 14, 1857. His wife died 4 mo., 14, 1871, and he married 6 mo., 5, 1873, Rachel Scattergood, daughter of Joseph and Mary (McCollin) Scattergood. Dr. Edward Maris died 6 mo., 13, 1900, and his widow expired 1 mo., 5, 1903. His children, who were all by his first wife, were: Howard, born 8 mo., 16, 1858, died 1 mo., 31, 1879; Alfred Edward, born 2 mo., 4, 1862, married Maud Nichols; Robert Wood, born 8 mo., 14, 1866, married Elua Branson, 9 mo., 7, 1892, and their children are: Albert Branson, born 12 mo., 19, 1893; 2. Eleanor Wood, born 8 mo., 23, 1895; 3. Arthur Stanley, born 10 mo., 29, 1896. Robert Wood Maris, the father of these children, died 3 mo., 19, 1900. Mary Eleanor, born 8 mo., 3, 1870, married 9 mo., 26, 1894, George Y. Wood, of Philadelphia. They have one child, Eleanor Maris, born 11 mo., 8, 1900.

8. Mary West, born 9 mo., 1, 1835, married

John Francis

10 mo., 3, 1866, George Sellers Garrett, of Lansdowne.

Mary (West) Maris, widow of Jesse J. Maris, the mother of this family, died 10 mo., 9, 1878, her husband having passed away 12 mo., 15, 1860.

John McIlvaine Maris, second child and eldest son of Jesse J. Maris and Mary (West) Maris, was born 9 mo., 20, 1818, in Ridley township, Delaware county, died 4 mo., 23, 1892, in Philadelphia. He received his education in the Westtown Boarding School. He taught the first public school in the district in which his father resided, and in 1836 he removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where he was assistant teacher in the school of the late John Bullock. In 1836 he went to Philadelphia and engaged in business. He soon entered the wholesale drug trade, and for many years had his place of business at No. 711 Market street. His sons, Henry J. and Theodore Maris, have for years conducted the business under the old firm name of John M. Maris & Company. Mr. Maris was one of the best known merchants in Philadelphia, continuing actively in business until about five years before his death. He was one of the organizers of the Drug Exchange, of which he was the first president. In 1859 he was appointed one of the guardians of the poor, being elected in 1860 to the presidency of the board. During his administration of affairs at the Almshouse, great reforms were instituted in the medical service of the hospital. The staff of physicians was organized, and some of the leading doctors of the city were associated with the medical service of the institution. After a brief rest from public labor, Mr. Maris was in 1871 appointed an inspector of the Eastern Penitentiary, continuing in that position until 1891, when he resigned. During part of this time he was treasurer of the board. Mr. Maris was an ardent Methodist, working earnestly for the success of the churches, and contributing liberally to charities and missions. He assisted in the organization and building of the Methodist Episcopal church at the corner of Broad and Arch streets, of which he was a trustee from the day of its foundation until his death.

John M. Maris married 10 mo., 14, 1846, S. Louisa Wainwright, the eldest child of William Wainwright, of Philadelphia, who was a prominent business man, and for years was president of the Commercial National Bank of Philadelphia, and his wife Mary Wood Reeves, of Woodbury, New Jersey, and the following named children were born to them.

1. William Wainwright Maris, born 9 mo., 22, 1848; he married 10 mo., 12, 1876, Anne, daughter of Dr. William and Annie Gerhard, and to them were born the following children:

Anne Gerhard, born 7 mo., 26, 1878; John McIlvaine, born 8 mo., 26, 1879.

2. Henry Jesse Maris, born 6 mo., 18, 1850; he was married 4 mo., 14, 1880, to Susan, daughter of Robert and Susan D. Bryson, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and to them were born the following children: Dorothy Wainwright, born 4 mo., 30, 1883; Henry McIlvaine, born 1 mo., 13, 1889; Louis Bryson, born 3 mo., 11, 1894, died 5 mo., 21, 1900.

3. John McIlvaine Maris, Jr., born 1 mo., 6, 1854; was married 6 mo., 17, 1880, to Eleanor, daughter of Colonel and Ellie (Bowman) Musser, and his children by this union are: 1. Louisa Wainwright, born 5 mo., 5, 1881; 2. Montgomery, born 1 mo., 14, 1883, died 5 mo., 21, 1885; 3. James Montgomery, born 1 mo., 10, 1885; 4. Arthur, born 11 mo., 9, 1886. The mother of these children died, and Mr. Maris married secondly Adelaide Lamareaux, of New York.

4. George, born 11 mo., 7, 1855, died 1 mo., 11, 1890.

5. Theodore, born 9 mo., 6, 1864, unmarried.

6. Mary Louisa, born 4 mo., 11, 1866, married 12 mo., 12, 1899, J. Roberts, son of Dr. Nathaniel and Martha (Bacon) Newkirk, and they have one child, Louisa Maris, born 1 mo., 23, 1901.

EDWARD MARIS, M. D., was the seventh child in order of birth of Jesse Jonathan and Mary (West) Maris. He was born at the family home at Upland, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, 3 mo., 15, 1832. His elementary education was obtained in the schools of the neighborhood, and while in his fourteenth year he entered the Westtown Boarding School, in Chester county, and after graduating from this institution he became connected with Haverford College, where he was for some time instructor in mathematics. Having decided to take up the study of medicine, he entered the office of his uncle, Dr. Robert M. Houston, of Philadelphia, who was a professor of Jefferson Medical College, and of whom a sketch appears elsewhere in this work. After attending a full course of lectures in this famous old institution, the young student was graduated, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and at once took up the practice of his profession near Whitford Station, in West Whiteland township, Chester county. About 1859, Dr. Maris removed to Philadelphia, where he became the resident physician of the Philadelphia Dispensary, located at 127 South Fifth street, where he remained for some sixteen years. He subsequently engaged in general practice, in which he was conspicuously successful. During the many years of his professional career, Dr. Maris became widely and favorably known for many deeds of kindness and charity which he rendered to the poor and needy wherever met, and, indeed, it can be said that much of the time during the latter years of his life was devoted to relieving distress and suffering among the poor and those needing help.

In addition to his philanthropic work, Dr. Maris was much interested in educational interests. He was for many years a member of the board of managers of the Friends Select School, of Philadelphia, and was also for many years treasurer of the board. His active and useful career ended with his death, which occurred 6 mo., 13, 1900.

Dr. Edward Maris was twice married. His first union was with Eleanor K. Wood, who was a daughter of Dr. Stephen and Catharine (King) Wood and by whom he had the following children: 1. Howard, born 8 mo., 16, 1858, died 1 mo., 31, 1879. 2. Alfred Edward, born 2 mo., 4, 1862; he married Maud Nichols, a daughter of Egbert K. and Elizabeth (Baugh) Nichols. 3. Robert Wood, born 8 mo., 14, 1866; he married Elma Branson, 9 mo., 7, 1892, and their children were Albert Branson, born 12 mo., 19, 1893; Eleanor Wood, born 8 mo., 23, 1895; Arthur Stanley, born 10 mo., 29, 1896. Robert Wood Maris, the father of these children, died 3 mo., 19, 1900. The fourth child of Dr. Edward and Eleanor (Wood) Maris was Mary Eleanor, born 8 mo., 3, 1870; she married, 9 mo., 26, 1894, George Y. Wood, of Philadelphia.

The mother, Eleanor K. (Wood) Maris, died 4 mo., 14, 1871, and Dr. Edward Maris married (second) 6 mo., 5, 1873, Rachel Scattergood, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Mrs. Collin) Scattergood. She died 1 mo., 5, 1903.

JOSEPH MESSICK, a leading man of affairs of Chester, Pennsylvania, represents the German element which from an early period has been an important factor in the history and development of the Keystone state.

George Messick, father of Joseph Messick, was born at Friedberg, Baden, Germany, and was by trade a butcher. In 1851 he emigrated to America and settled at Wilmington, Delaware, removing later to New Castle. He affiliated with the Democratic party, and was a member of the Roman Catholic church. He married Madeline Hauck, a native of Friedberg, Baden, Germany, and was the father of four children: Joseph, Linus, Katharine, and Mary Messick. In 1857 Mr. Messick died in New Castle, at the age of forty-two, and his widow returned to Wilmington, where she resided until her death.

Joseph Messick, son of George and Madeline

(Hauck) Messick, was born February 15, 1846, at Friedberg, Baden, Germany, and at five years of age was brought to America by his parents. His education was received at the public schools at New Castle and at St. Peter's parochial school in Wilmington, Delaware. At the age of twelve years he went to work for a furniture dealer, with whom he remained for a year and a half. In the latter part of 1859 he obtained a position in a carriage factory in Wilmington, where his work was to operate a sawing machine, and in the following summer he entered another shop to learn carriage trimming, but in the following year owing to the outbreak of the Civil war, the business was disorganized and he was thrown out of employment. In September, 1861, he went to Philadelphia and obtained work in a factory which was engaged in making knapsacks for the United States government, but at the end of a year returned to Wilmington and finished learning the trade of carriage maker. Later he went again to Philadelphia where he worked as a journeyman until 1865, when he returned once more to Wilmington and worked at his trade for nine months with John Merrick. At the end of that time he was placed in charge of the trimming department of Gregg & Bowe's carriage factory in that city, which position he retained until 1874. In that year he went to Chester and engaged on his own account in the furniture business, in which he was very successful and in which he remained until 1886, when he sold out. He then entered into partnership with D. H. Daley, in conjunction with whom he built the Grove Mills at the corner of Rose and Walnut streets, and began the manufacture of all kinds of worsted yarns. This enterprise was extremely successful, the mills being equipped in all respects in the most improved manner, and the articles produced being of a superior order. A force of one hundred hands was constantly employed, and the receipts were large and steadily increasing. This success was largely due to the practical knowledge and business ability of Mr. Messick, who over and above the onerous duties involved in his position as a millowner is obliged to devote a portion of his time to the care of his large property interests. He was one of the original stockholders and is now a director in the Delaware County Trust, Safe Deposit and Title Insurance Company of Chester, and was one of the organizers of the Chester Electric Light & Power Company, in whose board of directors he has also served. In 1889 Mr. Messick became president of the Franklin Building and Loan Association, in which position he has rendered efficient aid alike to the success of the business and to the interests of the members of the association. He is also president and treasurer of the New Parson Manufacturing Company of Chester, Pennsylvania, is first vice-president of the Delaware County Trust.

Safe Deposit and Title Insurance Company and president of the Chester Worsted Company.

In politics Mr. Messick is independent, being bound to no party but advocating the cause of whichever candidate commends itself to his judgment as most likely to advance the welfare of the community. He is a member of St. Michael's Roman Catholic church.

Mr. Messick married, July 7, 1867, Hannah, daughter of Mrs. Mary Dougherty, of Wilmington, Delaware. Of the twelve children who have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Messick, nine are now living: George F., now in business in Chester, Mary, Madeline, Annie, Joseph, Jr., also engaged in business in Chester, Pennsylvania, Laura, Elizabeth, Nellie and Stephen Messick.

JOSEPH H. EVANS. The fitting reward of a life well spent is an honorable retirement from labor. When one has devoted many years to active business pursuits it is meet that, in the evening of life, rest should crown his toil and a comfortable competence gained in former years should supply him with all that goes to make life worth living. Such is the case with Joseph H. Evans, who was born near Chester, Pennsylvania, July 27, 1836, a son of Jacob and Orphie (Hinkson) Evans. Jacob Evans was born in this country, a descendant of an honored Welsh ancestry; by occupation he was a farmer and butcher, and for many years successfully conducted both enterprises. He was united in marriage to Miss Orphie Hinkson, and eight children were born to them; his decease occurred in the year 1861, and his wife passed away in 1852.

Joseph H. Evans, son of Jacob and Orphie Evans, attended the local schools in the vicinity of Chester, where he obtained a good practical education. Upon completing his studies he learned the trade of plasterer, which he followed for many years. He was industrious, possessed good judgment in the carrying on of his labors, and by working conscientiously always found employment; the large amount of property owned by Mr. Evans has been gained entirely through his toil, aided by the good management of his wife, to whom he gives much credit for her share of the labor. In addition to his active business pursuits, Mr. Evans acted for many years in the capacity of president of the Franklin Building Association. He is also an active member of the Madison Street Methodist Episcopal church of Chester, in which he has served as steward for about thirty years. He is a Democrat, as were his ancestors.

In 1862 Mr. Evans married Miss Mary M. Gore, daughter of Jesse Gore, a descendant of an old Maryland family. Six children have been born to them, four of who are now living: Dr.

Frank J. Evans, Dr. Fred H. Evans, both of whom are graduates of the University of Pennsylvania, and are now in the active practice of their profession in Chester; Mary M. and Kate F. Evans. Mr. Evans is a man of sterling worth and strict integrity, alike true to every public and private trust; he has been the architect of his own fortune, and has built wisely and well, gaining for himself a position among the substantial residents of the city of Chester.

GEORGE WIEGAND, a prominent contractor and builder of Chester, Pennsylvania, and who also acts in the capacity of school and county tax collector, was born in Prussia, January 9, 1843, a son of Christian and Martha C. Wiegand, both natives of Germany where the former named died in the year 1854.

George Wiegand acquired an excellent literary education in the common schools of his native town and this country, to which he emigrated in 1853, being then only ten years of age; he was accompanied on the voyage by his elder brother, John Wiegand. George first settled at Palmers Corner, Pennsylvania, and for a few years his time was devoted to attendance at the village school, after which he worked upon a farm for two years. He then removed to Chester and from 1859 to 1861 was engaged in learning the trade of brick layer. It was just at this time that the Civil war broke out and Mr. Wiegand enlisted on April 14, 1861, at Chester, in the Union Blues, Company I, Ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and at the expiration of his term of service re-enlisted on September 16, 1861, in the Third Pennsylvania Cavalry and served in that company until February, 1865. He participated in all the leading battles in which his regiment was engaged, being taken prisoner October 6, 1863, at Bristow station, near Culpeper Courthouse, Virginia. For a period of fifteen months Mr. Wiegand remained in the hands of the enemy, being confined in Libby, Salisbury, Andersonville, Savannah and Milligan Prisons, where the prisoners were treated with the utmost brutality and neglect. After peace was declared he returned to Chester and finished learning his trade, which he successfully pursued for a number of years. In 1870 he engaged in the contracting and building business on his own account, and by careful and conscientious devotion to his work he is now at the head of a large and lucrative business, and enjoys an enviable reputation among business men of the city. In addition to his extensive building interests Mr. Wiegand served in the capacity of director of the Keystone Brick Company of Chester, and he was also its general manager for two years as well as a large stockholder in the corporation. He is the owner of considerable real estate in the city.

Mr. Wiegand has always taken an active interest in politics, being a firm adherent of the Republican party. In 1870 he was elected a member of the city council in which he served for twenty years, being a representative from seven wards, and for the past four years he has cheditably filled the office of school and county tax collector. He is a prominent member of Wilde Post, No. 25, Grand Army of the Republic, and he also holds membership with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On October 29, 1865, Mr. Wiegand married Miss Mary Gibbons, a daughter of William Gibbons, of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, and their children are: Mary, wife of William Neal; Gertrude, widow of Frank Carey; Florence; and Curtis Wiegand. The career of Mr. Wiegand fully demonstrates what energy, perseverance and honorable business methods can accomplish for a man, and it should act as a stimulus to every boy who has ambition to rise in the world and make the most he can of himself.

JOHN WORTHINGTON, a prosperous and enterprising citizen of Chester, Pennsylvania, belongs to a family who are old residents of Delaware county, his grandfather, Isaac Worthington, having been born there more than a century ago.

Seth Worthington, father of John Worthington, was born in Chester, where he followed the occupation of a baker. He was a Republican in politics, and was active in the affairs of the township. He married Mary, daughter of James Sherry, and was the father of four children, three of whom are living. Mr. Worthington died in 1850, and his wife passed away thirty-five years since.

John Worthington, son of Seth and Mary (Sherry) Worthington, was born August 26, 1849, at Kenneth Station, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the local schools. At the age of nine years, he worked in a mill at Upland and later filled the position of coachman for the Crozer family. In 1892 he established himself in the livery business, which he has made signally successful. The patronage he enjoys is of the most desirable character, and is also very extensive. He is the proprietor of one of the finest establishments of the kind in the country, perfect in its management and appointments. His horses are very fine and are kept in the best manner, and the wagons and various other vehicles which he supplies are all of the best and most improved make. Mr. Worthington is purely a self-made man, and the ability, enterprise, thoroughness and strict integrity which have enabled him to reach his present position can scarcely be too highly commended.

Mr. Worthington married, in 1872, Charlotte, daughter of John Gilson, of Upland. Their family consists of two sons, both of whom are in business with their father: George and John Worthington.

THE REV. HENRY ENGARD GILROY, who was for many years a highly respected minister of the Presbyterian church, was born in January, 1822. He was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia, and in his youth decided to study for the ministry of the Presbyterian church, and was for many years a faithful and beloved pastor.

Mr. Gilroy married Eliza Graham Blakely, daughter of Abraham Blakely, a sketch of whom may be found elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Gilroy were the parents of two daughters: Emily, who became the wife of A. F. Damon, of Darby, Pennsylvania; and Alice B. Gilroy.

During the latter part of his life Mr. Gilroy retired from active duties of the ministry, followed by the blessings of those among whom he had labored for so long a period. His death occurred June 19, 1896, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. He was deeply and sincerely mourned by his family and near friends, the large circle of his former parishioners, to whom he had ever been an affectionate, faithful and devoted pastor, and by the community among whom he had lived so long as an earnest, honorable and truly good man.

HIBBERD. The settlers of Darby township were nearly all from the adjoining counties of Derby, Leicester and Nottingham, and the Hibberds may have come from any part of England. Daniel Hibberd came in 1682 or 1683 from Wales as a servant in order to obtain the fifty acres of land offered by William Penn to such as came in that capacity. He was married in the 8th month, 1697, to Rachel Bonsall, daughter of Richard and Mary Bonsall, of Darby, and afterward resided in that township. He is believed to have had the following children: Mary, born 5 mo., 22, 1698, married John David, of Radnor, 1718; Aaron, born 2 mo., 1, 1700, married Elizabeth —; Moses, born 2 mo., 14, 1702, married Sarah Bradshaw, 1732, and died 1762; Phebe, born 12 mo., 28, 1703; Hannah, married in 1729 to Thomas Hall, of Philadelphia; Martha, married (by license dated March 19, 1730,) to Joseph Lees, of Darby; Rachel, married (by license dated July 30, 1735,) to John Pearson, of Darby. A Daniel

John W. Hibberd

HENRIETTA L. HIBBERD.

Hibberd, perhaps the father, died 2 mo., 24, 1740. Moses Hibberd left a daughter Mary, wife of John Palmer, and a daughter Hannah, wife of Abel Moore, but the writer is not aware of any descendants from Daniel bearing the name of Hibberd.

1. Josiah Hibberd, perhaps a brother to Daniel, was in Darby as early as 1692, and in 1698 was a suitor for the hand of Ann Bonsall, a sister of the wife of Daniel Hibberd. Her father opposed the union, and at the monthly meeting, 8 mo., 5, 1698, John Hallowell and Michael Blunston were appointed to speak to Richard Bonsall to know what reason he could show for not allowing Josiah Hibberd to marry his daughter Ann. In that day Friends would not permit marriages to be accomplished in meeting without the consent of parents, and, as the father was unyielding in this case, the young couple went to the house of John Blunston, Esq., and were married on the 9th of 9th mo. (November), 1698, and the certificate was recorded in our oldest deed-book. Josiah Hibberd purchased 100 acres of land near Fernwood, from Anthony Morgan, by deed of 10 mo., 7, 1692. This he conveyed to Josiah Fearn, 3 mo., 1, 1711, having purchased 250 acres west of Kellyville June 30, 1710. In addition to his lands in Darby he bought 500 acres in Willistown, from Martha Barker, of London, by deeds of lease and release dated May 16 and 17, 1722. He died intestate 6 mo., 16, 1744, and, having conveyed his Willistown lands to his sons John and Benjamin by deeds of gift, the administrators found difficulty in trying to do justice to the other heirs. His widow survived him just five years. The children were these:

2. John, b. 11 mo., 18, 1699; d. 9 mo., 25, 1766; m. Deborah Lewis, Mary Mendenhall and Margaret Havard.

3. Joseph, b. 11 mo., 20, 1700; d. 6 mo., 11, 1737; m. Elizabeth Fearn and Elizabeth Garrett.

4. Josiah, b. 7 mo., 28, 1701; d. 11 mo., 13, 1727-8, unmarried.

5. Abraham, b. 9 mo., 28, 1703; died young or unmarried.

6. Mary, b. 6 mo., 29, 1705; d. 12 mo., 12, 1782; m. Benjamin Lobb.

7. Benjamin, b. 2 mo., 27, 1707; d. 1783; m. Phebe Sharpless.

8. Elizabeth, b. 12 mo., 11, 1708-9; d. 3 mo., 19, 1738, unmarried.

9. Sarah, b. 3 mo., 19, 1711; d. 2 mo., 24, 1795; m. Samuel Garrett.

10. Isaac, b. 1 mo., 16, 1712-3; d. about 1797; m. Mary Lownes.

11. Ann, b. 3 mo., 12, 1715; m. John Ash, of Darby, 1744.

12. Jacob, b. 2 mo., 21, 1718; d. 1750; m. Jane Garrett. They had one child, Esther, who married her cousin, Isaac Lobb, in 1762.

Joseph Hibberd (3) was first married, 8 mo., 16, 1723, at Darby Meeting, to Elizabeth Fearn, daughter of Josiah and Sarah Fearn, of that township. She died 1 mo., 11, 1725-6, leaving an infant daughter. He was again married, 11 mo., 26, 1731, to Elizabeth Garrett, daughter of William and Mary Garrett, of Darby. After his death, she married, in 1756, Stephen Hoopes, of Westtown. Joseph Hibberd left three children:

13. Elizabeth, b. 12 mo., 20, 1725; m. Benjamin Bonsall.

14. Hezekiah, see below.

15. Mary, d. 5 mo., 18, 1742.

Hezekiah Hibberd (14) was born in Darby, 7 mo., 28, 1735, and married Mary Holloway, born in Newton township (now) Camden county, New Jersey, 10 mo., (Dec.) 16, 1733; died in Darby 1 mo., 8, 1795; daughter of Tobias Holloway, from Bristol, England, 1714, and Mary (Griscom?) his wife, married in New Jersey, 1732. Hezekiah and wife resided in Philadelphia for several years, but returned to Darby in 1778 and there died. He was buried at Darby Meeting, 4 mo., 1, 1806. Besides a son Hezekiah, who died in 1765, aged four years, they had three children, who came with them to Darby, viz.:

16. John, b. 10 mo., 14, 1763; d. 6 mo., 1, 1790; m. Rebecca Davis.

17. Joseph, b. 5 mo., 12, 1765; see below.

18. Elizabeth, b. 1 mo., 26, 1773; supposed to have died unmarried.

Joseph Hibberd (17), born in Philadelphia, was married 12 mo., 9, 1790, at Darby Meeting, to Hannah Bonsall, born 3 mo., 13, 1771, daughter of Abraham and Mary (Hinde) Bonsall, of Darby. They resided in Upper Darby and had five children:

19. John, b. 3 mo., 22, 1796; d. 1 mo., 23, 1866; see below.

20. Joseph, m. Emily Levis, daughter of Samuel Levis, upper Darby, and had Samuel Levis, William, and Margaret. Samuel Levis Hibberd was born in Upper Darby, 4 mo., 13, 1835, and was reared to manhood on the homestead, being educated in the neighborhood schools. He was a farmer until 1880, when he retired from agricultural pursuits, and in recent years has resided in Lansdowne. He was married in Chicago, 6 mo., 1, 1862, to Novella R. Small, daughter of Dr. A. E. and Martha M. (Sloan) Small, and has children: 1. Talbot L. 5 mo., 5, 1864, who married Elizabeth Webb and has children, Harriet, Novella and Levis. 2. Sloan E., b. 2 mo., 2, 1867. 3. Emily L., born 7 mo., 11, 1877. 4. Samuel L., Jr., b. 2 mo., 14, 1880.

21. Elizabeth, m. 12 mo., 7, 1820, Abram Powell, of Upper Darby.

22. Hannah, m. Charles Garrett, 3 mo., 14, 1811.

23. Rebecca, m. Thomas Powell, but had no children.

John Hibberd (19) was married 11 mo., 17, 1825, at Springfield Meeting, to Henrietta Levis, born in Springfield, 5 mo., 15, 1805; died 5 mo., 21, 1885; daughter of John Levis, born 3 mo., 19, 1767; died 5 mo., 11, 1839, and Mary Levis, born 6 mo., 20, 1778; died 8 mo., 28, 1827. John and Henrietta Hibberd had six children:

24. John L., b. 12 mo., 14, 1827; d. 6 mo., 25, 1867; m. Elizabeth Parry, 9 mo., 8, 1855.

25. Joseph H., b. 7 mo., 11, 1829; d. 2 mo., 15, 1879, unmarried.

26. Samuel H., b. 7 mo., 3, 1833; see forward.

27. Abram B., b. 7 mo., 13, 1831; d. 3 mo., 30, 1891; m. Mary Entriken, daughter of John Entriken, near West Chester.

28. Hannah B., b. 8 mo., 22, 1835; m. Thomas Reed of Upper Darby.

29. Thomas Henry, b. 10 mo., 4, 1837; d. 12 mo., 15, 1875, unmarried.

Samuel Hezekiah Hibberd (26), born in Upper Darby, was educated in the public schools of Haverford and became a farmer in that township, but retired from the business in 1886. Like his ancestors, he is a Friend, and a member of the Hicksite branch of the society. He was married in Philadelphia, by Mayor Henry, 12 mo., 19, 1860, to Margaret Jones Cooper, born 8 mo., 19, 1837; educated in the public schools of Haverford, and died 12 mo., 21, 1902. Her father was Townsend Cooper, carpenter and farmer (son of Joseph Cooper and Sarah Townsend), and her mother was Mary R. Lukens, daughter of Levi and Mary Lukens, of Haverford. Samuel Hibberd's address is Manoa, Pennsylvania, and he has two children.

30. Mary Cooper, b. 1 mo., 26, 1864; m. 10 mo., 22, 1884, George C. Dickinson, b. 1 mo., 5, 1853; son of Charles and Elizabeth (Rose) Dickinson, of Haverford, and grandson of George and Hannah (Leedom) Dickinson. She was educated at Swarthmore College; her husband is engaged with Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia, with residence at Manoa, and they have three children, Charles Rose, b. 4 mo., 14, 1889; Margaret Hibberd, b. 3 mo., 24, 1891, and Marion Cooper, b. 3 mo., 22, 1898.

31. John Henry, b. 6 mo., 17, 1867; m. 11 mo., 8, 1893, Sarah L. Hagey, b. 5 mo., 22, 1871; daughter of Jacob Robinson Hagey (b. 1 mo., 3, 1831; d. 3 mo., 3, 1883) and Sarah Ann Ott (b. 9 mo., 25, 1841; d. 4 mo., 5, 1893) both from Lower Merion. John Henry was educated at Friends' Central School, Philadelphia, is engaged in farming, and has four children: Mildred Lillian, b. 8 mo., 31, 1894; Anita Hagey, b. 12 mo., 14, 1895; Samuel Hezekiah, b. 8 mo., 1, 1897; Mary Jane, b. 11 mo., 25, 1900.

CHARLES E. MORRIS. In no country in the world can men depend upon their individual efforts to attain success to the like extent as in the United States, where labor is held supreme, and indolence, in every station, is regarded with disfavor. The story of every man who surmounts the difficulties and obstacles of his early environments teaches the lesson that persistent labor and well directed energy will command position and influence in the community in which it is exercised.

Charles E. Morris, of Chester, has been the architect of his own fortune. His father, Charles J. Morris, born at Seaford, Delaware, in 1833, was a posthumous child, his father having died two months before his son's birth. He later learned the trade of sailmaking, and established himself in that business in Boston, Massachusetts, where he married Almira Josephine Gardner, of Machias, Maine, who was connected with the Gardner family of the Bay state, conspicuous in the Revolution, some of whom united their fortunes with the Whigs, while some held allegiance to the crown, losing their all in their fidelity to the King.

To the young couple a son, Charles, was born in Boston, May 8, 1856, and when an infant of one year his parents removed to South Boston, two years later to Machias, Maine, and when the lad was less than four located at Leipsic, Delaware. Business opportunities which proved fallacious induced the father to return to Boston and later to Machias, where the family remained for two years, and there the boy was placed in a primary school. Again business conditions caused the removal of the family to Charlestown, and subsequently to East Boston, Chelsea, Massachusetts, and finally in November, 1867, to Chester, Pennsylvania, where the elder Morris established a sail loft. Later he transferred this business to Philadelphia, retaining his residence in Chester until his death, in 1885, at the age of fifty-five years, the mother lived until 1902, and died aged sixty-nine years.

In addition to maintaining a sail loft, the elder Morris established a restaurant in Chester, where during 1870 and 1871 the son Charles assisted as best he could in the support of the family. When a lad of twelve he hired as cook for a number of fishermen who lived during the season in a cabin on the shores of Delaware Bay. He remained with these men for one month, but as the catch was light his employers were without means to pay his wages, and at the end of one month he returned home penniless. The following spring he aided fishermen from time to time when a crew chanced to be short handed.

In December, 1871, young Morris found employment as helper in John Roach's shipyard, where he remained until early in the following March, when he shipped on the United States revenue cutter "Colfax," and later was transferred to the "Hamilton." In the fall of 1872, then but sixteen, the lad was away, and upon returning from a day's shooting of reed birds on Chester Island, was apprehended by the United States authorities, and when the facts were presented to the department he was discharged from service in December. On his return he attended the bar in his father's restaurant until the summer of 1874, when he established a refreshment stand at the Market street wharf at Chester. When the season closed he shipped as cook on the revenue cutter "Seward" and sailed in that vessel to New York, where after ten days the crew of a cutter which had been lost on the lakes was ordered to man the "Seward," when its crew was discharged from the service. Returning to Chester he found employment with the Irving & Leiper Manufacturing Company, leaving there to act as barkeeper at Henry Goff's hotel, where he remained until 1878, when he secured work in the folding department of the Eddystone Print Works, for which he was paid six dollars a week.

In the meantime he had become enamored of Ellen I. P. Stewart, daughter of John and Mary Stewart. The young couple were married January 20, 1879, an act which their friends deemed unwise, for when the groom paid the clergyman two dollars as a fee, he then had but two dollars in the world. To this day the husband and wife regard their marriage as the one fortunate incident in their lives. The wife proved herself a helpmate and not a hindrance to her husband's advancement, accepting willingly her share in the battle of life, in which, with united efforts, they won abundant success. The six dollars a week hardly paid the board of the young couple, but the husband gave every spare moment to labor in order that his slender income might be increased by the money he earned outside of his daily occupation. In March, 1881, Captain Homar Jardella was charting the Delaware river and bay for the United States coast survey, and he employed Morris upon the road at forty dollars a month, and he remained in that employment until September, when the work was suspended for the season. Mr. Morris secured a place at Roach's shipyard, where during the winter, when outside work was not attempted, the young man gunned for ducks, often making in one day as much as a half week returned him at his usual occupation.

In May, 1882, hearing that Henry Abbott, Jr., the proprietor of the Washington House, was seeking a bartender, Mr. Morris applied for the place and was engaged at twelve dollars a week on a three weeks' trial, which extended over a period of more than ten years. When Mr. Abbott was appointed assistant sergeant-at-arms of the House of Representatives, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, Mr. Morris became manager of the hotel and practically a partner in the enterprise. On December 13, 1894, Mr. Morris entered into an agreement with Henry Abbott to purchase the Washington House at a valuation of $57,000, and in February, 1895, Mr. Morris became absolute proprietor of the hotel, upon which from time to time he has since expended extensive and costly improvements which has increased his investment until now it exceeds $70,000.

The Washington House is a pre-Revolutionary hostelry, and has associated with it an interesting history in connection with the war of Independence. In April, 1902, the Delaware county chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution placed a bronze tablet upon the exterior wall of the hotel, in commemoration of the facts that it was there, at midnight, September 11, 1777, that Washington wrote the only report of the battle of Brandywine, and that it was there that, on April 20, 1789, he received the congratulations of the people of Chester upon his election as the President of the United States.

To the marriage of Charles E. and Ellen I. P. (Stewart) Morris were born two sons. The eldest, Frank S. Morris, now a member of the Delaware county bar, was born January 21, 1880, and Herman Jardella Morris was born October 13, 1881, and was named in honor of his father's friend, Captain Jardella, of the coast survey. The child died in his eighth year, May 12, 1889.

THE REV. FATHER JAMES TIMMINS, rector of St. Michael's Roman Catholic church of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Easton, Pennsylvania, July 12, 1847, the son of Thomas Timmins, who was born in the north of Ireland, emigrated to this country in the year 1840, settled in Philadelphia and became one of the prominent and successful merchants of that city, moving in 1845 to Easton, where he died in 1875.

The Rev. Father Timmins acquired his literary education in the schools of Easton, New York and Philadelphia, finally completing his course at Fordham College, New York, from which he was graduated in 1866. Realizing that God wished him to labor in his vineyard, he began the study of theology, and the same success and thoroughness which distinguished his collegiate course were noted here, and July 6, 1871, he was raised to the ineffable dignity of the priesthood.

On July 12, 1878, Father Timmins was called to the rectorship of St. Michael the Archangel, and to this parish and its devoted people he brought the zeal and love for souls which has characterized his entire work there. The imposing church edifice is the second one erected on the site, and the church organization extends backward in the history of the city over fifty-eight years. In 1842 a number of Catholics residing in the neighborhood determined to establish a church in the borough, and application was made to the Right Rev. Francis Patrick Kendrick, Bishop of Philadelphia, for permission to organize a congregation and erect a church in Chester. Permission being given, on July 12, 1842, a lot was purchased on Edgemont Road, and September 29 of the same year the cornerstone was laid by Bishop Kendrick. June 25, 1843, the church was dedicated to Almighty God under the patronage of St. Michael the Archangel, the Right Rev. Dr. Moriarty preaching the dedicatory sermon. In 1854 the parsonage adjoining the sanctuary was erected, and on July 29, 1874, the old church building was demolished in order to erect a more commodious structure which would accommodate the enlarged congregation. The corner-stone of the new church was laid November 1, 1874, by the Right Rev. Bishop Wood, and on October 3, 1880, during the pastorate of Father Timmins, the ceremony of blessing the cross which surmounts the center tower of the church was performed by Archbishop Wood, over two thousand persons being present on this memorable occasion, and on Sunday, November 5, 1882, the church was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies by the Right Rev. Bishop Shanahan, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. A very large and commodious school building, finished in 1890, has been added to the parish property. During the year 1901-02 a new rectory in keeping with the other stone structures was built with a beautiful lawn surrounding it on all sides, and which is now completed and occupied. From the moment Father Timmins came to St. Michael's to the present time, his one thought has been to advance spiritual interests of his flock, and that his efforts have not been fruitless there is abundant testimony.

ALBERT G. LORENZ, secretary and director of the Chester Steel Casting Company of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, August 17, 1865, a son of Fred Lorenz, who came from Prussia to this country about the year 1840; he was a manufacturer of trunks, bags, and other articles of like description. He was a capable, thorough-going business man, and his careful management, attention to the details of his business, and his straightforward dealings brought to him a well earned success. He was united in marriage to Miss Marie Lepple, and seven children were born to them, all of whom are now living. Mr. Lorenz was a resident of the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he enjoyed the fruits of his many years of toil. He was eighty years of age at the time of his death; his wife passed away in 1901.

Albert G. Lorenz attended the public schools of Philadelphia until he was thirteen years of age; he then entered the Philadelphia office of the Chester Steel Casting Company and familiarized himself with the details of the business and acquired that practical knowledge of affairs which qualified him for the success he has since attained. From time to time he was promoted until in 1885 he was appointed secretary of the company, in which capacity he has since served, and at which time he was transferred to the main office in Chester, Pennsylvania, where he has since occupied the responsible position of secretary and director. In business he has demonstrated the possession of fine executive ability, and being careful and accommodating in all his transactions he soon became popular and well known. The company's trade has grown to mammoth proportions in recent years, and their plant has been greatly enlarged and improved, and some of the credit is due to Mr. Lorenz's management of affairs.

On March 26, 1889, Mr. Lorenz married Miss Fredericka Lutz, a daughter of Fred Lutz. Their children are: A. Walter, Fred R., and Emily R. Lorenz. The family are earnest members and attendants of the Lutheran church of Chester, Pennsylvania.

ROBERT F. ASH. The annals of the Ash family are particularly interesting to the student of history, marking as they do the steady progress of events in state and country.

Its English founder, Matthew Ash, came to America in 1720, and, locating in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, found a colony of thirty-seven years' growth, already enjoying commercial and financial prosperity. The population at that time was mainly English and Welsh. As time went on he saw the immigration of Germans and Scotch-Irish, who were destined to play an important part in the history of this section of the country. Year by year he saw the colony flourish until its growth reacted on the surrounding towns. This rapid growth of the colonies terminated eventually in the Revolutionary war, some fifty-seven years later, in which his grandson participated. His family consisted of a wife and six children-- Sarah, born in 1708; Joshua, born in 1710; John, born in 1712; Mary, born in 1715; Edward, born

Matthew Ash

Robert F. Carr.

Samuel D. Lane

in 1718, who served in the English army; and Elizabeth, who was born on board the ship which brought them to America.

Joshua, the oldest son of Matthew Ash, resided in Philadelphia, but was also the owner of property in Delaware county. He married Alice Woodward, the daughter of Richard and Mary Woodward. They had six children—Joshua, born in 1743; Caleb, born in 1744; Samuel, born in 1748, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and fought in the battle of Brandywine in 1777; John, born in 1751; Sarah, born in 1753; and Matthew, born in 1758.

Matthew Ash, the youngest child of Joshua and Alice (Woodward) Ash, married Mary Gibbons, the daughter of Joseph and Marjory Gibbons. Their children were: Jane, born in 1786; Hannah, born in 1788; Mary, born in 1790; Elizabeth, born in 1791; John, born in 1793; Humphrey, born in 1795; Joseph, born in 1796; Margaret, born in 1797; Matthew, born in 1799; Caleb, born in 1800; James, born in 1803; Robert, born in 1805; Ann, born in 1807; and George, born in 1808.

Matthew Ash, the son of Matthew and Mary (Gibbins) Ash, learned the miller's trade in Darby, Pennsylvania, and followed it in Darby and Concord for twenty-five years. He gave up the business for farm life in Middletown, finally removing to Media, Pennsylvania, where he spent his last days. He was a man noted for his integrity and uprightness. In business and politics his fair and impartial dealings won for him the confidence of his fellow citizens, and he was appointed inspector of elections from year to year. In 1832 he married Mary Fairlamb, who was born in Middletown in 1803, and who was a daughter of Robert and Mary (Harry) Fairlamb. Their children were Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Alice H., Robert, and Henry, who died unmarried. Mrs. Ash died in 1865, while Mr. Ash died thirty years later.

In 1836, during another epoch, when events following on the development of the states were leading up to the Civil war, which was to be an inevitable result, Robert F. Ash, son of Matthew and Mary (Fairlamb) Ash, was born in Upper Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He lived a quiet, uneventful life on his father's farm until 1861, when he enlisted in Company H, Sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, known as Rushe's Lancers, which was attached to the cavalry corps of the Army of the Potomac. He was in the thick of the fight, taking part in the famous seven days' battle at Gaines' Mill, Malvern Hill and other points. He also displayed great heroism at Antietam, Gettysburg, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania. He received an honorable discharge December 3, 1864. After the close of the war he engaged in farming until he lost his eyesight, which, owing to exposure on the battlefield, had been gradually failing. He is now totally blind. Mr. Ash is a member of the Sixth Pennsylvania Volunteer Association, the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Masonic fraternity, in which he has taken the chapter degrees. He has conscientiously performed the duties of citizenship, and at different times has been called upon to serve as justice of the peace, auditor, assessor of taxes, and he has been a member of the school committee. He has always belonged to the Republican party, and has served its interests in many ways.

Mr. Ash was married December 14, 1881, to Miss Kate Yearsby, daughter of Humphrey Yearsby. They have one daughter, Mary.

WILLIAM J. McCLURE. Among those who have wielded a definite influence in the business and political affairs of the city of Chester, Pennsylvania, is William J. McClure, who was born in Lower Chichester township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, June 20, 1854, a grandson of John and Sarah (Oliver) McClure, natives of county Donegal, Ireland.

John McClure, father of William J. McClure, was born in county Donegal, Ireland, in the year 1816. He obtained a good practical education in his native county, after which he learned the trade of carpenter. In 1840 he came to this country and soon afterward engaged in railroad construction work, becoming foreman of a number of men when only twenty-one years of age; he followed this line of work for a period of eighteen years, and during this time performed many difficult tasks. He laid the tracks on ice over the Susquehanna river for the P. W. & B. R. R. Being very industrious and economical, he managed to save sufficient means from his earnings to purchase a farm of fifty-five acres in Lower Chichester township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, upon which he resided for nearly thirty years. In 1877 Mr. McClure located in Chester, and the remainder of his life was spent in ease and comfort, and he enjoyed to the full the fruits of a successful life whose activities extended over more than forty years. Although never taking an active part in political affairs, he always supported the men and measures advocated by the Republican party. He was an active and consistent member of the Second Presbyterian church of Chester. On July 22, 1852, Mr. McClure married Miss Fannie M. Williams, daughter of James Williams, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and the following named children were born to them: John C., William J., Oliver C., George W., John A., Robert G., and David B. McClure. On February 6, 1870, Mrs. McClure passed away from this life, and in 1877 Mr.

McClure married for his second wife, Miss Anna Likens, a daughter of Daniel Likens, a native of Delaware county. Mr. McClure's decease occurred in the year 1896.

William J. McClure, second son of John and Fannie McClure, obtained his preliminary education in the public schools of Chester, later he entered the Chester Academy, and after his graduation from that institution he pursued a regular course in the Business College. He commenced his active business career in the grocery business, where he remained for a short period of time, after which he was employed for one year in the ship yard of John B. Roach. On February 4, 1874, Mr. McClure established a small cigar store in Chester, and by directing his thoughts and devoting his energies to this line of trade he has made it one of the largest stores in the city. Mr. McClure is also interested in various business enterprises, being president of the Consumers' Ice Company, secretary and treasurer of the Chester Brewing Company, director of the Delaware County Trust Company, and he also acts in the same capacity for the Chester Shipping Company. Mr. McClure takes an active part in the political life of Chester, is an adherent of the Republican party and was the first incumbent of the office of city comptroller, being the only candidate that ever carried each and every precinct. In the discharge of the important responsibilities of this office he gave an efficient, capable and strong administration, displaying an executive ability of a high order. He has also been elected a member of the Republican State Committee. Mr. McClure is prominently identified with the Elks Lodge No. 488, the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of the Eagle; he is a member of numerous Republican clubs, and the McClure Gun Club, a noted outing club of the city of Chester, was named in honor of him.

On June 21, 1877, Mr. McClure married Miss Sabina McClay, a daughter of James McClay, and three children have been born—Fannie M., Wm. J., Jr., and John J. McClure. The first two are deceased.

JOHN M. CALLANAN, a prominent business man of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a representative of an old family of Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

George Callanan, father of John M. Callanan, was a successful business man and followed the occupation of a contractor. He married Rosa Ann Marjarum. Mr. Callanan is living at the present time (1903), having attained the advanced age of seventy-nine years. Mrs. Callanan died February 20, 1903.

John M. Callanan, son of George and Rosa Ann (Marjarum) Callanan, was born November

7, 1851, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the common and private schools of Philadelphia. He engaged in the stationery business in Bristol, Pennsylvania, and also in the seed business in the same place. In 1890 he went to Chester in order to assume the position of bookkeeper for the Delaware County Gas Company. Mr. Callanan not only discharged the duties of this position in a satisfactory manner, but gave such proofs of his abilities as a business man that in September, 1897, he was made superintendent of the company. The record which he has made for himself in the office has more than justified the high estimate formed of his talents, he having within the last five years built up the system from 12,000,000 to 67,000,000 cubic feet of gas per year.

Notwithstanding the absorbing nature of Mr. Callanan's duties as a business man, they are not allowed to consume all of his time, as his connection with fraternal and social orders testifies. He is one of the charter members of the American Mechanics and Odd Fellows, and also belongs to the Penn Club. He is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Callanan married, in August, 1873, Isabella, daughter of Sommers Warwick, and has a family of four children, three of whom are living: Rosabella W., Matilda A., and Ernest S. Callanan.

GREEN. On the 5th mo., 11, 1686, there arrived from Bristol, England, the ship "Delaware," with Thomas Green and Margaret, his wife, their sons Thomas and John, and daughter Mary, with her husband, Richard Moore. The first location of the family in America is unknown, but in 1689 Richard Moore, then described as an inhabitant of West Jersey, bought 200 acres of land in Concord township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and on 6 mo. 8, Thomas Green, the elder, described as of Lower Hook, in the Province of West Jersey, purchased of Dennis Rochford 400 acres of land in Concord township, on which he and his family settled. John, one of the sons, died there unmarried in or about 1695. Thomas, the remaining son, died in 1712, leaving widow Sarah and children: John, Robert, Henry, Edward, Thomas, Samuel, Abel, Margaret, and Sarah.

Robert, son of Thomas and Sarah, born in 1695, married 9 mo., 14, 1724, Rachel, daughter of John and Sarah (Pyle) Vernon, at Concord Meeting. Their marriage certificate is in possession of a descendant. Rachel was born in Bethel 9 mo., 27, 1704, and died 2 mo., 17, 1751. Robert died 3 mo., 20, 1779. They resided in Birmingham township after their marriage, and both are undoubtedly interred in the old Concord

SPRINGFIELD MEETING HOUSE.

Erected 1738. Taken down 1851.

MIDDLETOWN MEETING HOUSE, 1900.

Erected about 1770.

Meeting burying ground. They left children: Daniel, Robert, Rachel (Prickett), Rebecca (Register), Margaret (Chalfant), and Sarah (Neilds).

Daniel, son of Robert and Rachel, was born 9 mo., 23, 1746, and married August 27, 1768, Mary Chamberlain, daughter of Robert and Ann Chamberlain of Birmingham. Daniel died April 1, 1815, and Mary a few days later, on 6th of same month, and both were buried at Concord. They had children: Joseph, Elizabeth, Thomas, Ann, Lydia, Amor, Isaac, Mary, Daniel and Rachel.

Isaac, son of Daniel and Mary, born about 1780, in Concord township, married in 1805, Elizabeth, daughter of Peter and Keziah (Parker) Wickersham of Unionville. Isaac died in October, 1831, and Elizabeth, December 28, 1857. They are buried at Concord. Their children were: Esther, Parker, Eli, Peter W., Isaac, Rachel, Lewis and Phoebe.

Peter W., son of Isaac and Elizabeth, born February 12, 1811, married February 25, 1836, Rachel (born April 30, 1808), daughter of Robert and Mary McCay, of Chester township. After 1845 they resided on a farm on the Concord road, near Upland, and had children: Mary J., John A., Robert M., William W., George W., and James D. Rachel died November 14, 1886, and Peter April 15, 1898. They are buried in the cemetery adjoining the Baptist church at Upland.

Robert M., son of Peter and Rachel, was born in Chichester, Delaware county, March 26, 1842. At the age of seventeen he was apprenticed to a local builder, and was an architect and builder at Chester until the Civil war broke out, when he enlisted in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, in August, 1862. He was discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability after four months in military hospitals. He re-entered the building business, but in 1871, while residing in Washington, D. C., became interested in the manufacture of soda water apparatus, and removed to Philadelphia for the purpose of embarking in the business of manufacturing such apparatus, which were then made in a very crude way, and in which he foresaw large possibilities. His inventions and improvements have practically reorganized this business, which is now one of the leading industries of the country, and his firm (Robert M. Green & Sons) has a magnificent plant and make and ship fountains to all parts of the world. Mr. Green married, May 27, 1869, Louisa B., daughter of John and Sarah (Lee) Gelston, of Chester, and they have had children: Frank D., Robert M., Jr., Louis G., Edgar L., Mary D. (deceased), and Helen. The sons are associated in the firm of Robert M. Green & Sons.

Frank D., eldest son of Robert and Louisa, born May 19, 1870, married October 27, 1891, Freda B. Goldsmith, and has children: Louisa, Nettie, Marie and Dorothy (deceased).

Robert M., Jr., second son of Robert and Louisa, married April 22, 1896, Nettie M. Powell, and has children: Elizabeth, Ruth, Eleanor and John.

EDWARD EYRE TRAINER. The Trainer family, whose members have included those who were pioneers in one of the great manufacturing industries of Chester, is of old and honorable lineage, having for its American ancestor David Trainer, one of those gentlefolk who left his home in England to escape the persecutions which were visited upon his sect, and who in the new land whither he came practiced those virtues which have made the name of Quaker (or Friend) the synonym for all which is beautiful in personal life. In 1771 he settled on the present site of Ridley Park, Delaware county, where he received the grant of a large tract of land and near where the different branches of the family resided for many generations. He was the father of seven children, four sons and three daughters.

David Trainer, grandfather of Edward Eyre Trainer, was a prominent resident of the town of Ridley Park, and was united in marriage to Mrs. Sarah Smith, nee Newlin, who was noted for the beauty of her features and refinement of her character; she was a Quakeress of the olden type, and had the honor of standing as bridesmaid to Dolly Madison when she was married to President James Madison. They were the parents of five children—Sarah M. Walker, William, Josiah B., Mary Smith, and David Trainer. Mr. Trainer died February 29, 1846, having attained the age of seventy years.

David Trainer, father of Edward Eyre Trainer, was born in Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, July 9, 1814, and after acquiring an excellent literary education in the village schools he commenced his business career by becoming one of the pioneer cotton manufacturers of the county. This enterprise proved very successful, owing to the fact that Mr. Trainer was a thorough business man, honorable in all his transactions, and one who never believed in making an agreement that he was not able to fulfill. He conducted the business for fifty-three years, and during that time he was instrumental in improving the methods in use and the character of the finished product. In his later years he admitted his sons into partnership under the firm name of D. Trainer & Sons, and later this was changed to the D. Trainer & Sons Manufacturing Company, in which he served in the capacity of president until his death. He was also the founder of the three large cotton factories known as the Trainer Mills, which were situated at Trainer, Nos. 1, 2 and 3. This was in 1837. In politics he was formerly a Whig, but upon the organization of the Republican party he joined the ranks of that body. In his religion he was a devout believer in the doctrines of the Episcopal church, being the senior warden of St. Martin's church, in Marcus Hook, which is two hundred years old and the second oldest in the state of Pennsylvania. He married Miss Ellen Eyre, daughter of William Eyre, of Chester, and seven children were born to them, four of whom are living at the present time (1903): J. Newlin, a resident of New York; William E., who resides at Trainer; Catherine N., wife of Mahlon D. Marshall, of Marcus Hook; and Edward Eyre Trainer. After the death of his wife, which occurred March 13, 1872, Mr. Trainer married Mrs. Mary Balfour, nee Leiper, who was a descendant of old and honored Revolutionary stock and a leader in work for the betterment of humanity, also a liberal contributor and consistent worker in the church. Mr. Trainer died April 7, 1890, aged seventy-five years.

Edward Eyre Trainer, youngest son of David and Ellen Trainer, was born at Trainer, Pennsylvania, November 27, 1850. His literary educational advantages were obtained in the Penn Central School at Philadelphia, and later this was supplemented by a course in the Chester Military College. At the age of eighteen years he entered the cotton mill then owned and operated by his father, where he familiarized himself with the business in all its details, being employed in all the different branches of the trade, so that when he attained his majority he was well qualified to become a member of the firm. He continued in this relation until June 8, 1901, when he became actively interested in the Standard Spinning Company of Chester, for which he acts in the capacity of president. For many years Mr. Trainer served as treasurer for the Chester Hospital (and still holds that office), of which organization his father was one of the charter members. Mr. Trainer is of a domestic nature, active in charity, affable and pleasant in manner, and of undoubted integrity in business affairs.

Mr. Trainer was married twice, his first wife having been Miss Lena Woodward, daughter of Thomas Woodward, and five children were born to them, three of whom are living: Thomas W., Archibald, and Malcolm E. Trainer. On April 23, 1890, Mr. Trainer contracted an alliance with Miss Hannah D. Rogers, daughter of William B. Rogers, of New Jersey; they have one son, Rogers E. Trainer. Both Mr. Trainer and his wife are faithful and loyal members of the Episcopal church of Marcus Hook, and he has served as junior warden of St. Martin's church for twenty years, and his wife also took an active part in all the work connected with it.

LYDIA YARNALL. The Yarnall family, who have been prominently associated with the various interests of Delaware and Chester counties, Pennsylvania, for many generations, claim for their pioneer ancestor, Francis Yarnall, who accompanied by his brother, Phillip Yarnall, came from Cloynes, in Worcestershire, England. They first settled in Springfield township, adjoining the property of George Maris, and about a mile from Springfield Friends' meeting-house. This land was conveyed to Francis Yarnall, October 17, 1683, and for several years they were members of the Darby Monthly Meeting of Friends. In 1686 Francis Yarnall married Hannah Baker, and their children were: Sarah, John, Peter, Moses, Francis, Joseph, Amos, Daniel, and Mordecai Yarnall. Francis Yarnall, father of these children, died in Willistown township, in 1721.

Amos Yarnall, great-great-grandfather of Lydia Yarnall, was born March 28, 1700, and was the sixth son born to Francis and Hannah Yarnall. He was united in marriage May 18, 1727, to Mary Ashbridge, who was born in January, 1710 or 1711, a daughter of George and Mary (Malin) Ashbridge, the former named having arrived in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, July 5, 1698, this fact being recorded in the family Bible which is now in the Friends' Library in the city of Philadelphia. George Ashbridge was married at Providence Meeting, October 23, 1701, to Mary Malin, who was probably the daughter of Randall Malin, of Upper Providence, coming to this section of the state from Great Barrum, in Cheshire, England. Amos Yarnall died February 4, 1789, and his wife, Mary (Ashbridge) Yarnall, died January 20, 1745.

Amos Yarnall, great-grandfather of Lydia Yarnall, was a son of Amos and Mary (Ashbridge) Yarnall, and his birth occurred October 28, 1730. He subsequently settled on a farm in Willistown township, Chester county, and by his integrity of character and public spiritedness was highly esteemed in the community. He married July 17, 1753, at Goshen Meeting, Jane Hibberd, who was born in Willistown, February 23, 1734 or 1735, a daughter of Benjamin and Phoebe (Sharples) Hibberd, the former named having been born April 27, 1707, died about 1785, and the latter was born January 9, 1701 or 1702, and died in Willistown township, May 29, 1772. Their children were: Phoebe, Ezra, Caleb, Benjamin, Hannah, Amos, Jane, Jesse, and Ezra Yarnall. Amos Yarnall died August 26, 1818, and his wife passed away December 28, 1778.

Caleb Yarnall, grandfather of Lydia Yarnall, was born January 25, 1759, the second son of Amos and Jane Yarnall, and his early life was spent in acquiring an education in the common schools of his birth place, the township of Wil-listown. Later he followed agricultural pursuits on his father's farm in Edgemont, Delaware county, and his name was respected by all for the many estimable characteristics which he displayed. He married Phoebe Minshall. Mr. Yarnall died November 4, 1849.

John Yarnall, father of Lydia Yarnall, was the son of Caleb and Phoebe Yarnall, and his birth occurred November 24, 1776. After obtaining a common school education he devoted his energies to farming, which he conducted on the property formerly owned by his father and grandfather, which was situated in the township of Edgemont. He was united in marriage March 2, 1812, at Middletown Meeting, to Phoebe Sharpless, who was born April 15, 1785, a daughter of Joseph and Mary Sharpless. Their children were: Sidney, born January 25, 1813; his death occurred in Media, Pennsylvania; Hannah, born April 28, 1815, died December 24, 1875; Eliza, born May 4, 1819, died April 2, 1843; Caleb, born August 15, 1821, died in Media, March 4, 1886; Mary S., born July 19, 1823, died August 6, 1826, and Lydia, born November 27, 1825. All of these children were unmarried. Mr. Yarnall, the father of these children, died April 27, 1843, survived by his widow, whose death occurred in Edgemont, July 16, 1870.

Lydia Yarnall, youngest child of John and Phoebe Yarnall, was born November 27, 1825, in Edgemont township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. She acquired a liberal education in the Edgemont schools and also at Darby, Delaware county, where she completed her studies. She now resides quietly in a beautiful home at Media, Pennsylvania, where her time is fully occupied with her household duties and the performance of philanthropic deeds among the poor and suffering. She is a pleasant, courteous and accomplished woman, and stands high in the Society of Friends, of which she has been a life-long member. She is unmarried.

JOHN R. FLOWER, known and esteemed in Delaware county, both as a farmer and citizen, is descended from ancestors who were among the early settlers of Pennsylvania, and members of the Society of Friends. His grandfather was Richard, and his father, William G. Flower. The latter was a native of Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

John R. Flower was born January 13, 1852, in Felton, Chester township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the local schools. Like his brother, Charles Flower, a man of unquestioned standing in the county, he has made general farming and horse raising the business of his life, and in both these occupations has been very successful. The esteem and confidence with which he is regarded by his neighbors are attested by the fact that he was elected to fill the office of supervisor for two terms, the duties of which he discharged in a manner which proved him to be a public-spirited citizen. He is unmarried.

H. G. INGRAM, for many years prominently connected with the business and social interests of the city of Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in 1862, in Lower Providence, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, the son of Rufus M. Ingram, whose father was William Ingram, a descendant of an old and honored English family.

Rufus M. Ingram, father of H. G. Ingram, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his educational advantages were obtained in the district schools of his native town. He then learned the trade of millwright, and his natural genius, supplemented by an energy that enabled him to make the best use of all opportunities that came in his way, served him to accomplish satisfactory results in this vocation, so that now in his old age he can enjoy the fruits of his long years of toil. He was united in marriage to Miss Barbara N. Miller, daughter of Valentine Miller, and nine children were born to them. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ingram are still living, he having attained the age of eighty years.

H. G. Ingram, son of Rufus M. and Barbara Ingram, acquired his education in the public schools of Lower Providence, and the early years of his life were spent in that vicinity. At the age of sixteen years he entered a blacksmith shop, and in due course of time became thoroughly familiar and proficient in all the details of that trade; he also learned the trade of wagon making and in 1886 established the shop which he is now conducting in Wallingford. He is a man of great energy, endowed with good judgment and fine business ability, and his patronage has steadily increased from year to year until now he enjoys one of the largest and most profitable trades in the city. Mr. Ingram is prominently affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, and he also takes an active and keen interest in the social life of the city.

MAPLEWOOD INSTITUTE, situated at Concordville, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was founded in 1862 by Professor Joseph Shortlidge, A. M., from Yale University. The institution was originally conducted as a school for both sexes, and consisted of a single brick building, fifty by eighty feet. It was later changed to a fitting school for college or business for boys and young men. The success of the school was assured from the beginning, and after a few years the increasing demand for larger facilities necessitated the addition of a large wing to the main building containing sleeping rooms, scientific laboratory, class rooms, principal's office, etc. In 1870 the institution was chartered by act of the legislature and empowered to grant degrees to its graduates.

After several years of growth and activity, in ence, a series of extensive improvements was begun in order to keep the school in a high state of efficiency and thoroughly abreast with modern ideas and conditions. A complete plant for furnishing an abundant supply of pure spring water throughout the buildings was installed, followed later by an efficient hot water heating system. Up to this time the school had been lighted by coal oil lamps, but following out the general plan of expansion and improvement, the management caused the buildings to be lighted with acetylene gas, the new illuminant, which, by reason of its brilliancy, perfect whiteness, and safety make it an ideal light for the student and teacher. The interior of the buildings was also refitted with modern furnishings and appointments.

Previous to these changes, a frame gymnasium had been erected for physical training and

MAPLEWOOD INSTITUTE.

1879 a general reunion of all the former students of the school was held on the spacious and well shaded grounds of the institution. The day was devoted to addresses by former students and in renewing old acquaintances.

In 1898, in the thirty-sixth year of its exist-for recreation in inclement weather. As it was eventually found to be inadequate for the increasing demands of athletic sports in the modern system of education, it was torn down, as well as other buildings near it, and on the site was erected a commodious brick gymnasium, seventy-two by forty-five feet. The main floor is devoted to basket ball and kindred sports. It presents an unobstructed floor space seventy by forty-three feet, giving excellent facilities for practice in all modern games. The basement contains shower baths, toilet rooms, lockers, base ball cage, bowling alley, etc.

Maplewood was originally patronized largely by students from the rural sections of the surrounding counties. The rapid growth of the state normal schools, however, which by reason of their large state appropriations could offer excellent advantages at very low rates, and the rapacity with which they sought for students regardless of whether they expected to become teachers or not, changed materially the status of private educational institutions of the commonwealth. During these years of usefulness, Maplewood had become favorably and widely known, especially in the larger cities of the East, as a safe home school for boys and young men, and, as a result, the rural patronage was gradually supplanted by students from the larger cities whose parents desired their sons to receive more personal and interested attention than was possible in the overcrowded public schools of the cities and in the exceedingly large secondary schools. The beautiful and healthful situation of the school, its freedom from harmful surroundings and its wholesome moral atmosphere have contributed in no small degree to the continued success of the institution.

For a number of years the buildings were utilized during the vacation period as a summer boarding house. During the summer of 1903, however, a summer school was organized, in which a limited amount of instruction and abundant wholesome recreation were so combined as to keep students and teachers alike in good physical condition for the more arduous labors of the regular winter session. Students, whose parents so desire, may now remain for the entire year under the care and instruction of the institution.

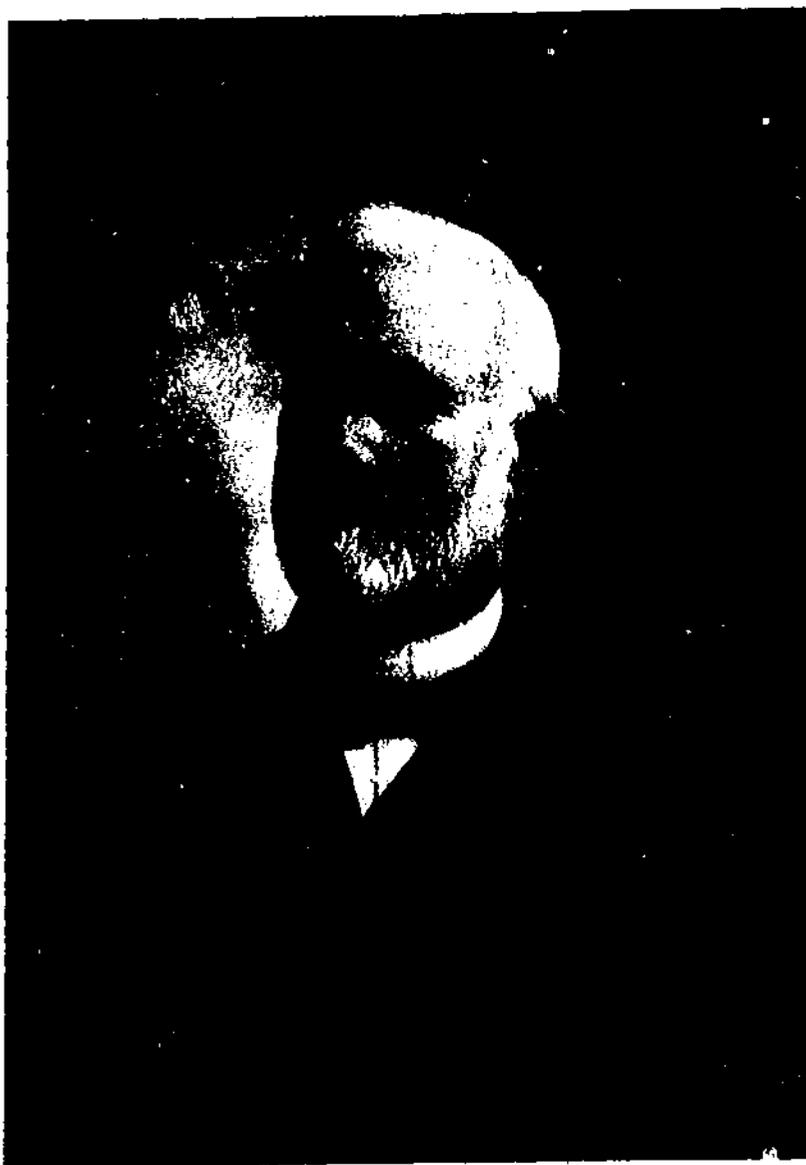

Former students of Maplewood are filling important and responsible positions in agricultural, mercantile and professional life. Some have been elected to the legislatures of their respective states, and one is at present a member of the United States senate.

The school is self supporting and non-sectarian, and although organized in 1862 during the Civil war, by its improvements and additions it is to-day, as at the beginning, a thoroughly progressive and modern institution.

PROFESSOR JOSEPH SHORTLIDGE, M. A., founder and principal of Maplewood Institute, is of Scotch-English ancestry. On the paternal side he is a descendant of the Chandlers and Gawthrops, and on the maternal side of the Huttons and Pughs, all prominent families in Delaware and adjacent counties. Through the Chandlers he traces his line to the Norman French of England, and he is related to the Kirk, Stubbs, Trimble, Parrish and other highly respected Pennsylvania families. The American branch of the Shortlidge family was planted by James Shortlidge, who came from England about the time of the Revolution and settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. His son, Swithin Shortlidge, was born in the county named, lived the life of a farmer, and was a member of the Society of Friends. George Shortlidge, son of Swithin, was born in the same place in 1800. He was a prosperous farmer; in religion was a Friend and his political affiliations were with the Democratic party until the founding of the Republican party in 1856, when on account of his anti-slavery sentiments he allied himself with that body. He married Martha Pugh Hutton, of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Hyatt and Sarah (Pugh) Hutton, who was a relative of the distinguished English mathematician, Charles Hutton. Of this union were born four sons and two daughters,—William, who engaged in mercantile pursuits in Bellefonte, Pennsylvania; Joseph, who is further referred to in this sketch; Anna P., who became the wife of William H. Walker, of New Castle county, Delaware; Lydia H., who became the wife of Prof. Augustus C. Norris, deceased, who was principal of the Woodstown Academy, New Jersey; Swithin C., who became the principal of Media Academy; and Evan G., who became a physician and settled in Wilmington, Delaware, of which city he was at one time mayor.

Joseph Shortlidge, second child of George and Martha (Hutton) Shortlidge, was born August 1, 1832, on the family homestead in New Garden township, where his father was born in 1800. The old farm, which is now owned by Thomas Jeffries, lies north of and adjoins the Walnut Run school house. Joseph Shortlidge acquired a broad education, completing courses of study in Jonathan Gause's Greenwood Dell Academy, in Chester county, in the Williams Chemical Laboratory in Philadelphia, and in the Fort Edward (New York) Institute, before entering Yale College. He entered college in 1859, but his eyesight becoming impaired during the latter part of his freshman year from his being obliged to recite his lessons by gas light at six o'clock in the morning, he was forced for a time to give up his studies. He made up the requirements of the course, however, and received the degree of Master of Arts. Upon Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania in 1863, he responded to the call of President Lincoln for an additional force of one hundred thousand men for six months' service. He enlisted in a company of which he was elected sergent, and which, as a part of Major Short's battalion, participated in the defense of the state, and in the subsequent operations of that portion of the army.

Joseph Shortridge

Even while obtaining his education, Prof. Shortlidge was performing useful and creditable work as a teacher. He began as a public school teacher at Concordville, Pennsylvania, in 1852, where he still pursued his studies, often walking to West Chester, a distance of eight and one-half miles, to take French lessons. As early as 1856 he began teaching in Greenwood Dell. The following year he was principal of Putnam (New York) Academy, and he was then for two years principal of Fairville Institute, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. In 1862 he purchased a tract of land near the Friends' Meeting House in Concordville, and built the school known as Maplewood Institute, with which his name has since been inseparably associated. He was principal of this institution until 1880, when he resigned in order to accept the presidency of the Pennsylvania State College, near Bellefonte, Center county. During his administration of State College he made strenuous efforts to establish certain changes and reforms necessary for the success of the college as an educational institution. Failing in this, he resigned and returned to Maplewood Institute, with which his connection has since been unbroken. The value of Maplewood Institute and Professor Shortlidge's great usefulness as a principal and instructor, are attested by the great number of students, from the best families, who have come under his charge during the fifty years of his service, many of whom have risen to eminence in the professions, in commercial life, and in public place. Among them are prominent lawyers, physicians and others who have become conspicuous in state and national affairs.

Exactng as are his duties as an instructor, Professor Shortlidge has not failed in his duties as a citizen, and has rendered to the public valuable service in various responsible positions. For a number of years he served as school director. In 1887 he was appointed by Governor Beaver to fill an unexpired term of a deceased justice of the peace, Darwin Painter, and was afterward elected and re-elected to the same office, which he still holds. He is a Friend in religion, as have been his ancestors for several generations. In politics he is a staunch adherent of the Republican party. He is a highly regarded comrade in Bradbury Post, G. A. R., of Media.

Professor Shortlidge was married, May 24, 1865, to Miss Caroline B. Gause, a highly educated lady, daughter of Jonathan and Eliza (Bailey) Gause. Jonathan Gause was one of the most prominent educators of his day, and Professor Shortlidge was a student of his in his early school days in Greenwood Dell Academy. Mrs. Shortlidge died May 23, 1874, leaving three children: Marian E., who became the wife of Jared Darlington, of Delaware county, and to whom were born three children—Mary Edna, Charles Joseph and Caroline S.; Charles B., who was for a time a teacher in the Maplewood Institute, and afterward became a practicing physician at Elton, Pennsylvania, married Josephine M. Showers, of St. Marys, Pennsylvania, November 7, 1901; and J. Chauncey, a graduate of Harvard, who is professor of Latin, Greek, physics and chemistry in Maplewood Institute.

December 21, 1893, Professor Shortlidge was married to Miss Isabel Gawthrop Shortlidge. She is a lady of fine literary attainments and a forceful platform speaker. During Mr. McKinley's first presidential candidacy, she attracted much attention and received much commendation for her addresses in his behalf.

Now in his seventy-second year, Professor Shortlidge maintains a splendid physique, and his mental powers are at their best. He gives close oversight to all pertaining to the Institute, as well as personal instruction in Greek and the higher mathematics. His fiftieth year as a teacher was recently celebrated at the Institute, on June 4, 1902, and was a notable reunion. All old pupils and friends of the school who could possibly be there, came to renew old acquaintance and do honor to the veteran teacher. The high and picturesque grounds of the Institute and a beautiful day contributed to the fullest enjoyment of the occasion. The arrangements were in charge of a competent committee, who met the heartiest co-operation of the townspeople in caring for the visitors. Carriages were furnished for conveying guests from both the special and regular trains to the scene of the day's festivity. After a reception during the morning hours by Professor and Mrs. Shortlidge, the guests listened to a literary program, consisting of speeches, reminiscent and congratulatory, and the personal tribute of a poem by Professor Leggett, of Concordville. Among the speakers was Dr. King, president of Fort Edward Institute, New York. A fine gold watch bearing a suitable inscription was presented to Professor Shortlidge by his old pupils. The day will long be remembered as a pleasurable social occasion, and as one giving to Maplewood Institute new impetus for usefulness.

MAURICE C. MICHENER, an enterprising manufacturer of Delaware county, is a representative of one of the oldest families of Chester county, where he was born December 21, 1868, a son of Courtland and Catherine (Tussey) Michener.

His boyhood was passed on the paternal farm, and he received his education at the State Normal School at West Chester and the Marton Academy at Kennett Square. After leaving school he entered the employ of the Avondale Stone and Lime Company, of Chester county, and later became the treasurer of the company. In 1888 they retired from business, and Mr. Michener then went to Media, where he was for seven years engaged in clerical work. April 1, 1896, he established the first ice manufacturing plant in Media, and from a small beginning his output has now grown to twenty tons per day, with a limited capacity for cold storage. In connection with this business Mr. Michener also cultivates a large farm in Newtown township. In politics Mr. Michener is a Republican. He belongs to the Media Club, and is a member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Michener married, in 1897, Hannah M. Haines, who was born in Montgomery county, but reared in Newtown, Delaware county, and is a daughter of Amos and Martha (Williams) Haines.

HENRY MENDENHALL, a resident of Media, and active in community interests, is a descendant of old and honorable Pennsylvania families which date back to colonial times.

His grandfather, John Mendenhall, son of Robert and Phoebe Mendenhall, who was the first of the family to settle at Edgemont, was one of the most active members of the Society of Friends. He was a tailor by trade and followed that occupation until he was able to purchase the parental home, which thenceforward came to be known as the Mendenhall homestead. John Mendenhall lived to the advanced age of eighty-nine years, and his wife, Tabitha Newlin, died a few years afterward. She was a member of an old and influential family in Chester county. Their children were: 1. Cyrus, born December 12, 1781; 2. Martha, born August 18, 1784; 3. Esther, born June 5, 1786; 4. Annie, born December 23, 1789; 5. John, born August 27, 1793.

John (2) youngest child and one of the two sons of John (1) and Tabitha (Newlin) Mendenhall, after obtaining a good practical education in the Friends Schools, engaged in farming on the paternal homestead upon which he was reared. He married Hannah, daughter of Daniel and Sarah Sharpless. She was a descendant of that Sharpless family who settled in 1682 at Waterville, on Ridley creek. Here an ancestor lived on a cove on the side of the bluff for twenty years, when a son, Joseph, who was a carpenter, built on the hill above a house which is yet standing and is now owned by a member of the Garrett family. John and Sarah (Sharp-less) Mendenhall were the parents of three children: Rebecca, born February 14, 1822, died March 24, 1882, and two sons, Henry and Joseph. John Mendenhall died in 1882.

Henry Mendenhall, born in Edgemont, Delaware county, August 31, 1824, began life with much in his favor, preceded as he was by three generations of good American stock which had that Quaker origin that so largely modified the early government of Pennsylvania, for the simple dignity and the uncompromising conscientiousness of the early Quakers could not but leave its impress on every descendant however remote. He was sent at an early age to a private school conducted by the Friends, later to the public schools and to Westtown. He lived on the old homestead until he was twenty-one years of age, then he worked five years more on the Howell farm which his father had previously purchased. He afterwards purchased the farm himself, and was a successful farmer for forty years. In 1883 he removed to Media, Delaware county, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Society of Friends, and is a respected and honored member of the community. He shows his interest in all matters of general concern by an active participation in educational and other community affairs. He has served on the school board for a long period. He is a director of the Delaware Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He is decided in his political sentiments and his opinions incline him to favor the Republican party.

In 1856 he was married to Deborah Ann Passmore, a native of Cecil county, Maryland, born in Little Britain, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, June 10, 1826, a daughter of Abijah and Naomi Passmore, who was a member of an old Pennsylvania family. They had six children, Mary Ella, born September 11, 1858, who married George S. Yarnell, of Media; Hannah S., born February 28, 1860, who died October 8, 1861; William, born June 26, 1862, who died February 19, 1865; J. Howard, born July 25, 1864, married Annie Baker; and Walter P., born January 18, 1866, now living in Philadelphia, and Anna R., born December 8, 1868, who married W. Horace Long.

Joseph, youngest son of John and Sarah (Sharpless) Mendenhall, was born November 1, 1829. After obtaining an education similar to that of his brother Henry, he went to Missouri where he engaged in a furniture business, which he abandoned at the opening of the Civil war and returned to Pennsylvania. After peace was restored, he again sought his fortune in the West, going to Lawrence, Kansas, where he found an excellent opportunity to establish the furniture and undertaking business and was as successful in his new enterprise as he had been in his former occupation. He was well informed upon the political questions of his time, and was a member of the old Whig party as it was known in Jackson's time, having been formed in opposition to the Democratic party. As a Whig he favored a protective tariff, so in later years from principle he became a member of the Republican party. He was always interested in the development and progress of education, and was regarded as a public spirited and enterprising citizen. He is unmarried.

JOHN HOWARD MENDENHALL, a successful stock raiser of Gradyville, as well as one of the town's most influential citizens, was born July 26, 1864, a son of Henry and Deborah Ann (Passmore) Mendenhall. He is the sixth generation of the name, being a direct descendant from Benjamin, who, with his brothers John and George Mendenhall, came to this country from England in 1682 in company with William Penn. John Mendenhall settled in Chester county, and Benjamin took up his residence in Delaware county, while George, after a brief stay, returned to England. Benjamin married Ann Pennell, of Delaware county; they had two sons, Robert and Benjamin. Robert was born in 1719; he married Phoebe Taylor, by whom he had a family of thirteen children, among them being John, the great-grandfather of John Howard Mendenhall. John married Tabitha Newlin, and their five children were Cyrus, Martha, Esther, John and Anne. John was born May 27, 1793, in Edgemont; his marriage took place in 1821 to Hannah Sharpless, daughter of Daniel and Sarah Sharpless, of Chester township, Delaware county; their children were Rebecca (deceased), Henry and Joseph; the latter went to Kansas, where for many years he was actively engaged in business pursuits. Henry Mendenhall (father of John Howard Mendenhall), married Deborah Passmore, of Chester county, by whom he had four children, namely: Mary Ella, wife of George S. Yarnall; John Howard, Walter P., unmarried, and Anna R., wife of W. Horace Long.

John Howard Mendenhall received his preliminary education in the Friends' School of his native town, which was later supplemented by three terms spent at the Westtown Friends' School, after which he returned to assist his father about the farm. He was but eighteen years of age when, determining to start out in life on his own responsibility, he rented his father's farm of one hundred and forty-three acres and conducted every detail of the work thereon for several years. At first his attention was given to a general line of farming, but as time wore on he thought he saw a greater opportunity for development and success in the breeding of horses and in cattle raising. This he concentrated his attention upon, and time has demonstrated the wisdom of his foresight, for he has been most successful in the undertaking. Aside from his fine horses, which are a source of pride as well as profit, his cows afford him an output of about two hundred and fifty quarts of milk per day. Besides this, his regular products of grain, hay and vegetables find a ready market.

Politically Mr. Mendenhall is a Republican, and a charter member, director and active worker in the Media Republican Club. In town politics he has figured quite conspicuously, having filled the position of justice of the peace for many years, and for fifteen years having been on the election board. He is also a member of various secret organizations, among them being the Knights of Pythias, the Red Men, the Junior Order of American Mechanics, and the Patrons of Husbandry; in the three latter societies he occupies one of the past offices, having filled all the chairs. In religious life he and his family, as in generations past, are consistent members of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Mendenhall was married on May 6, 1886, to Aimee Baker, a daughter of Jackson and Emeline (Mercer) Baker, of Edgemont; their four children are: Emma Baker, born July 8, 1887; Joseph Harlan, born August 3, 1890; Marie Howard, born November 11, 1894, and Walter Paul, born June 2, 1902.

WILLIAM IRWIN CHEYNEY. The oldest known ancestor of the Cheyney family was the Sir Thomas Cheyney, who by reason of his knight service to the crown held many large estates in Kent, England, and his death is recorded in 1559. One of his descendants was John Cheyney, who was an emigrant from England and settled in Middletown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and by his will, made on October 30, 1722, he gave his property to his sons John and Thomas. More about these brothers and their family history will be found in the sketch of George Spangler Cheyney, but it is sufficient here to mention that John married Ann Hickman, by whom he had five children, one being the celebrated Squire Cheyney of Revolutionary fame; but the descent is carried down through the son Richard, who married Mary Hannum. William, the son of the last union, married Catherine Spangler, and their son, William Hannum Cheyney, became the husband of Ann Scott Sharpless.

Charles Henry Cheyney was the son of the last mentioned couple, and was born in Middletown township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, June 23, 1830, being the son of a school teacher.

When he was six years old his family brought him to Thornbury township, where he grew up and received his education in the public schools. He was but eighteen years old when he first entered into mercantile business in Thornbury, and he was so engaged there till 1857, at which time he moved to Wawa and farmed for two years. Then moving to Cheyney, he was appointed postmaster in 1859 and held the office until 1864, when he resigned and again took up farming, this time in Bucks county, near Quakertown, but in the following year he returned to Cheyney, where he has made his residence to this time. He was in business with his brother, George S. Cheyney, until 1880, when he took charge of the Cheyney station for the Pennsylvania Railroad, holding that position until 1901, when he retired on account of ill health. He has been a Whig and Republican in political matters, in 1866 was assistant revenue assessor, and has held various town offices in Thornbury, being secretary of the school board for twenty-one years, having been town clerk for thirty years, which position he still holds, and he is now justice of the peace. He has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and although not a member of any church, he has been interested in building and maintaining the Union church at Cheyney. On November 8, 1855, he was married to Elizabeth Mary Cheyney, a distant relative, born November 9, 1835, and the daughter of Joseph and Mary (Johnson) Cheyney. There were seven children born, and five are still living: Henry Clay, born September 3, 1856, lives in Omaha, Nebraska; he married Mary Crowell, and they have two children, Charles and Henry Clay, Jr. The second in the family was Arthur Stotesbury, who was born July 12, 1858, and died September 1, 1863. Mary Ella, who was born October 2, 1860, died August 19, 1863. William Irwin is the fourth in order of birth. George Spangler, born July 5, 1863, is unmarried and lives at home. Anna Cornelia, born September 8, 1864, married William Abner Garrett, and they live at Wyncote, Pennsylvania, and have three children, Hibbard, Elizabeth Cheyney and Catherine. The seventh is Horace Lincoln, born February 27, 1866, who is a practicing attorney in Philadelphia, and is unmarried.

It is to William Irwin Cheyney that this biography is specially devoted. He was born in Cheyney, Thornbury township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, November 30, 1861. He was educated in the public schools of Thornbury and at Professor McClellan's private school in West Chester. He was only fifteen years old when he began work in the store of his uncle at Cheyney, where he remained until 1881. In this year he took a position with Pile, Deer, Hancy & Company, wholesale notion dealers in Philadelphia, with whom he remained until 1888. He branched out into a new line when he engaged with Thomas H. Dallett & Company, Philadelphia, with whom he learned the machinery and electrical apparatus business. He was with this firm for seven years and in 1895 he began business in Philadelphia for himself, dealing in electrical machinery and as consulting engineer. This is his present enterprise, and he enjoys an extensive and increasing business. He has made his residence since April 10, 1898, in Media, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Cheyney is a Republican, is a member of Phenix Lodge No. 130, A. F. & A. M., in Philadelphia, and of Harmony Chapter No. 52, R. A. M.

On April 8, 1898, he was married to Miss Edith Worrall Lewis, who was born March 9, 1873, the daughter of Isaac and Susannah (Morton) Lewis. On the Morton side her great-great-grandfather, John Morton, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and her grandfather was Sketchley Morton; on the Lewis side her grandparents were Mordecai and Sarah Pennock (Miller) Lewis. One child is the result of the union of Mr. Cheyney and Miss Lewis, William Irwin, Jr., who was born May 8, 1901. Mrs. Cheyney is a member of the Hicksite Friends meeting; and both she and her husband enjoy excellent standing in society.

WILLIAM H. RIGBY, a well known citizen of Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of an honored English lineage, who at an early day were largely instrumental in the settlement and building up of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

The progenitor of the American branch of the family was James Rigby, an Englishman who came to America some time before the Revolutionary war. He settled about a quarter of a mile from a place then called Seven Stars Tavern, now Village Green, and lived there and taught school until a short time before his death. During the retreat of the Continental army from the battle of Brandywine and past the Seven Stars, he dismissed his school and watched the retreating army. (From History of United States, and also family tradition). He married a Miss Brown (probably Rachel): she was an aunt to Jeremiah Brown, of Chichester, Delaware county. They had children—sons, John, Rodney, Seth, Eli; daughters, Sidney, Rachel, and another daughter who married a Flounders. Sidney married a Williamson and Rachel married a Burk.

Eli, son of the original James Rigby, married Elizabeth Harlan, daughter of George Harlan, of Doe Run, then the owner of the Doe Run Iron Works. Their children were James, William, Seth, Elizabeth, George, Eli, Eber and Harlan.

George W. Rigby, son of Eli and Elizabeth (Harlan) Rigby, was born, reared, educated and spent the greater part of his business career in Concord township, Delaware county, having been a potent factor in the various enterprises that conduced the maternal growth and welfare of that section of the state. He was united in marriage to Ann Vernon, of Hinkson's Corners, Providence township; she was a daughter of Woodward and Hannah (Vernon) Vernon. Her parents had three other children—Graham, Jonathan (at one time sheriff of Delaware county), and Moses Vernon. Two children were born to George and Ann (Harlan) Ribby—Hannah Ann and George H. Rigby.

Hannah Rigby became the wife of William H. Osburn, who was born in the vicinity of Chester, Delaware county, in November, 1833, a son of Antrim and Isabel (Barass) Osburn. William H. Osburn was a manufacturer of woolen goods, and about the year 1860 located at Rose Valley, erected a mill for the manufacture of both woolen and cotton goods, and this he successfully operated until 1882 in partnership with his father; during that year the mill was destroyed by fire, and after rebuilding on the same site they rented the premises to other parties who operated the plant for many years. William H. Osburn, who died in 1898, and his wife, Hannah (Rigby) Osburn, were the parents of two children—Dr. Albert E. Osburn, of West Chester, and Emma E., who died at the age of eighteen years. Albert E. Osburn was born November 3, 1869; he attended the schools of Wallingford, the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1893, and the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1897. He began his professional career as the resident physician in the Odd Fellows' Home at Thermalito, California, but after remaining there for one year he returned to West Chester and has since been engaged in active practice. He is a member of the A. M. P. O. of his university, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a Republican in politics. He married Carrie M. Prentiss, daughter of Charles and Ella (Knox) Prentiss, of Boston, Massachusetts, and one child is the issue of this union—Margaret Ellis Osburn. Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Osburn is residing with her son, Dr. Albert E. Osburn, in West Chester, Pennsylvania.

George H. Rigby, son of George W. and Ann (Vernon) Rigby, was born October 10, 1837, on the old homestead in Lower Providence township, and passed his life on a farm until he went to Wilmington, Delaware, to learn the cabinet-maker's trade. In 1857 he came to Media, where he established himself in business as a cabinetmaker and undertaker, occupations which he followed successfully the remainder of his life. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Independent Order of Red Men, and the Knights of Pythias. His politics were those of the Republican party. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He married Elizabeth M., daughter of Nichols Spencer, of Wilmington, Delaware, and they were the parents of two children, Frank S., who died at the age of five years; and William H., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Rigby died August 9, 1881, and his wife passed away December 18, 1890.

William H. Rigby, son of George H. and Elizabeth M. (Spencer) Rigby, was born December 24, 1859, in Media, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the public schools of his native town. After completing his course of study he became associated in business with his father, and, on the death of the latter, succeeded to the proprietorship of the establishment, which he has conducted successfully for many years. He is a member of George W. Bertram Lodge, No. 298, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and Media Chapter No. 234, Royal Arch Masons. In politics he is a Republican, and the confidence with which he is regarded by his townsmen is best indicated by the fact that he is now serving his second term as a member of the city council. He and his family attend the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Rigby married, October 20, 1881, Arabella, daughter of Amos and Susan (Worrell) Bond, of Marple. The following children have been born to them: Bessie, deceased; George H., who is in business with his father; Helen, deceased; James; Nelson; Jennie, deceased, and Esther Rigby. Mr. Rigby resides in the house in which he was born.

SAMUEL R. HUNTER. The Hunter family of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, of which Samuel R. Hunter, a retired agriculturist, is a member, were of Scotch-Irish descent and were early settlers in Delaware county, where they purchased a large estate in Newtown township. His great-grandfather, James Hunter, married Martha Levis, of Springfield township, and their children were Samuel, J. Morgan, Peter, Hannah, Martha, Rachel, Mary, Sydney, Ann, and Sarah Hunter.

Samuel Hunter, grandfather of Samuel R. Hunter, was born in Radnor township, Delaware county, where his entire life was spent in the occupation of farming, in which pursuit he was eminently successful. He married Hannah Edwards, and two children were born to them, namely: Elizabeth and J. Morgan. Elizabeth became the wife of Edward Tomlinson, and their children were: Rachel, who is still living; and J. Morgan, who enlisted at the outbreak of the Civil war, and during an engagement was so seriously wounded that he died from the effects of the hurt. Mr. Hunter died in 1802, after a brief but useful life, survived by his widow, who passed away at the extreme old age of ninety-four years.

J. Morgan Hunter, father of Samuel R. Hunter, was born March 26, 1801, in Radnor township, and very early in life found a home with his paternal grandfather. At the age of seven he removed to Newtown township, and remained with an uncle, John Hunter, until sixteen years of age, when he learned the trade of blacksmith in Chester county. He continued actively employed at his trade until 1828, when he removed to Marple township and engaged in farming on land belonging to his wife. In 1852 he settled in Upper Providence, purchased a farm, and ten years later (1862) erected a spacious and handsome residence in which the remaining years of his life were spent, free from the cares of active business pursuits. In politics he was formerly an old-line Whig, but later was a strong adherent of the Republican party. Mr. Hunter married Eliza Rhoades, a daughter of John and Rachel Rhoades; she was born January 21, 1799, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Rachel and Hannah, twins; Rachel became the wife of Nathan H. Yarnall, both now deceased, and they were the parents of one son, J. Morgan, who married Ida Baley, and they had one son; Hannah became the wife of Richard Baldwin, and their children are: Franklyn, Richard and William; Samuel R., mentioned hereinafter; Emily, wife of Isaac S. Cassin, and their children are: Eliza, John, Isaac and Emily; Sarah Jane, wife of Dr. James Hoey, of Philadelphia, and they are the parents of four living children: Samuel H., Robert, James and Olita, wife of Dr. Duffield, of Camden. The father of these children died in December, 1886, his wife having previously died in 1874.

Samuel R. Hunter, only son of J. Morgan and Eliza Hunter, was born in Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, January 27, 1827. His early life was spent in attendance at the village school, where he acquired a practical education, and in assisting his father with the work upon the farm. Upon attaining young manhood he devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits which he followed ever since, meeting with a marked degree of success so that of late years he has been enabled to live in retirement and enjoy the fruits of his many years of toil.

On March 3, 1853, Mr. Hunter married Caroline Williamson, a daughter of Adam B. and Sarah (Phillips) Williamson, of Newtown, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Annie C., wife of Dillwyn Lewis, and their two sons are: D. Hunter and Horace M. Lewis; Lizzie H., wife of Joseph S. Keller, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and three children have been born to them: J. Walter, Albert S., and Elizabeth Keller.

PENNEL LARKIN WEBSTER. William Webster, founder of the Webster family in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was twice married, his second wife being Agnes Yarnell. They had two sons and two daughters, Caleb, William, Phoebe, and Ruth.

William Webster, son of William and Agnes (Yarnell) Webster, was born at Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1815. From his Quaker parentage he inherited the love of quiet pursuits, and never entered into the activities of the business and political world, preferring rather the uneventful farm life to which he had been bred. He inherited also that love of books that caused his Quaker ancestors to found schools throughout all the country districts of Pennsylvania, and which laid the foundation for a higher education resulting later in the colleges in Bryn Mawr, Haverford and Swarthmore. It has been claimed that in the time of the Revolution as many as fifty elementary schools had been organized, and that illiterate Quakers were unknown.

Educated at Westtown, Chester county, William became an efficient and successful school teacher, only leaving this occupation to enter upon that of farming, for which he always had a preference. About this time he married Elizabeth, daughter of Salkeld and Mary (Pennell) Larkin, of Delaware. They had eleven children, Hannah, who married Samuel Moore, who had been the husband of her sister Ruth Anna; Sarah L., who married Joseph W. Jones; Nathan and Rebecca, who died in childhood; Edward, who married Emma England; Ruth Anna, who was Mrs. Samuel Moore and died in 1880, leaving two children, Hannah and Elizabeth; William, who married Cynthia D. Kester; Pennell Larkin; Owen Y., who married Clara England; Elizabeth; and Richard G., who married Annie Hutton, daughter of William Hutton. Of these only Sarah, William, Pennell, Owen, Elizabeth and Richard are living. Mr. Webster always attended the Friends' Meeting. Although not particularly active in politics, yet he believed that man's welfare depended on the enactment and enforcement of certain laws by civil government. With this conviction, he always gave his individual support by his vote, and was a firm adherent of the Republican party. He died in 1891, his wife having died in 1877.

David July

Pennell Larkin Webster, son of William and Elizabeth (Larkin) Webster, was born at Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, July 9, 1853. In early childhood he attended the public schools of Middletown, and when sufficiently advanced in his studies he became a student in the Friends' Boarding School at Westtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He resided on his father's farm during his school days, until 1878, when he engaged in farming on his own account, then took up the creamery business in Chester county, where he followed this occupation for two years. In 1883 he opened a creamery which he retained until 1899, when he established a milk depot in Media in which he is still interested. He has always been affiliated with the Quakers, and is treasurer of the Monthly Meeting, which is the executive body of that district. He has always maintained an interest in educational affairs, and is a member of the school committee.

In 1878 Mr. Webster married Mary Y. Yarnell, and they lived for some time on the old Yarnell homestead, well-known in that section. They have two children; I. Herbert, born May 8, 1879, and who was educated at Westtown, completing his studies at Haverford; he is at present assistant treasurer of the Philadelphia Pneumatic Tube Company; he married Miss Mary K. Hackensack. His sister, Anna Grace, born February 13, 1880, was also educated at Westtown, and is a teacher at the Friends' School in Philadelphia.

DAVID TULLY, D. D., of Media, Pennsylvania, was born August 29, 1818, in Birgham, Scotland, and is a son of Andrew and Catherine (Dickey) Tully. In 1829 they came to Canada, and settled in Peterboro county, Ontario, where Andrew Tully engaged in agricultural pursuits, in which he combined thorough knowledge with great practical skill. He and his wife were the parents of eight children, including David. The names of the others are: John, a farmer residing in Canada; Andrew, a graduate of the second class of Lafayette College, who entered the ministry, and died in Portland, Pennsylvania; William, a farmer in Canada; Margaret, who married Hugh McAfee; George, a farmer of Iowa; Mary, who died in 1847; and Robert, who lives as a farmer on the old homestead. The family were devoted Presbyterians. Andrew Tully, the father, died in the ninetyeth year of his age, and his wife passed away at seventy, from the effects of a fall.

Dr. Tully was educated in the United States. In 1847 he graduated from Union College, Schenectady, New York, being at the same time an alumnus of Lafayette College, of Pennsylvania. In 1850 he graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary, and the same year was ordained pastor of the Presbyterian church, Princetown, New York. After a successful pastorate of five years he was called to the Presbyterian church of Ballston Spa, New York, where he remained eleven years. Shortly after the breaking out of the Civil war Dr. Tully was elected chaplain of the Seventy-seventh New York Volunteers, by popular vote of the members. His church gave him leave of absence, and he went through the campaign of the Peninsula under McClellan, was at the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg, and the seven days' battle. In 1866 he was called to the First Presbyterian church of Belvidere, New Jersey, whence he was summoned in 1872, after an extremely fruitful pastorate, to take charge of the First Presbyterian church of Oswego, New York. The fourteen years which he spent there were years of much spiritual growth, and the church was in a most flourishing condition when in 1886, he was induced to become the pastor of the Media Presbyterian church, where he has since remained. His pastorate has been marked by much prosperity, both spiritual and material. The church has been beautified and improved, a pipe organ has taken the place of the old parlor organ, and other improvements have been made. Dr. Tully has travelled extensively, has crossed the continent several times, has been in Canada, Mexico, the West Indies, the British Isles, and has traversed the continent of Europe and visited Palestine. Of his powers of observation and of relating what he has seen, his interesting lectures on Syria, Constantinople, and the Turks have given abundant proof. In June, 1900, occurred the fiftieth anniversary of Dr. Tully's ordination to the ministry. This was made the occasion of a celebration by his church in Media, the members of which united with his brethren in the ministry in expressing their affection for Dr. Tully, and their heartfelt appreciation of the faithful service which he has rendered among them. In addition to many letters of congratulation from personal friends, words of loving and grateful remembrance were received from each of the churches of which he had formerly been pastor. Among the reminiscences naturally evoked by the occasion was the memory of the time when in 1848 Dr. Tully labored in Albany, New York, among the seamen and boatmen for the Bethel Society of that city, and during the cholera epidemic in 1849. He has since resigned the pulpit and the church elected him pastor emeritus.

Dr. Tully is a life director of the American Bible Society, a life member of the American Board of Foreign Missions, the American Tract Society, and both the Foreign and Home Mission Boards of the Presbyterian church. He has represented his Presbytery at the General Assembly eight times, and was a member of the Assembly at the re-union of the Old and New School bodies, and the representative of the church at the first General Assembly of the Canadian church in Toronto in 1870. In 1886 he received from Kings College, Bristol, Tennessee, the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He is chaplain of the G. A. R. Post of Media, is also a member of the Loyal Legion Commandery of Pennsylvania, and holds the nominal office of chaplain of the Media Fire Department.

CHARLES POTTS, of Media, Pennsylvania, the son of Joseph K. and Sidney (Bonsall) Potts, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, December 9, 1825. His great-grandfather was John Potts, who was born at Germantown, Pennsylvania, in 1710. He married Ruth Savage in 1734, and died January 7, 1786.

Joseph Potts, the son of John and Ruth (Savage) Potts, was born March 12, 1742. He was a merchant in Philadelphia and well known in business circles. He was noted for his liberality in contributing to philanthropic and charitable objects, and in 1768 he gave one hundred pounds to the Philadelphia Hospital. He married Mary Morris, and they had one son, Joseph K. Potts, who was born in Philadelphia, April 20, 1789. He received a business education, and early in life engaged in a mercantile enterprise, subsequently acting as clerk in the United States Bank until 1840. For the following ten years he lived in the country, afterwards returning to Philadelphia, where he resided during the remainder of his life.

He was married at Frankford, Pennsylvania, January 11, 1822, to Sidney, daughter of Isaac and Mercy (Millhouse) Bonsall. Isaac Bonsall, a son of Edward Bonsall, was at one time superintendent of the Insane Asylum at Frankford. Sidney Bonsall, the wife of Joseph K. Potts, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 9, 1799. Mr. and Mrs. Potts had a family of eight children whose names were as follows: 1. Mary, born January 24, 1824; 2. Charles, born December 9, 1825; 3. Anna, born October 27, 1827; 4. Edward, born December 19, 1829; 5. Frances, born July 28, 1832; 6. Joseph, born November 4, 1834; 7. William, born May 5, 1838; 8. Elizabeth, born June 25, 1841. Mr. Potts was of Quaker descent and a member of the Society of Friends. In political affairs he was allied with the Whig faction. He died in 1861; his wife died in 1883.

Charles Potts, their oldest son, attended the Friends' School in Philadelphia, and on completing his studies there spent two years at Westtown. After leaving school he adopted the occupation of farming, following this pursuit in the valley between Penningtonville, now Atglen, and Parkesburg for two years, after which he worked for his father for some time. In 1848 he was engaged as a teacher in the English department of the Westtown school, filling this position for three years. At the end of this period he returned to his former employment of farming for a few years, then again accepted the position of teacher in the Westtown school where he remained for twenty-five years. In 1887, he became the owner of a farm near Media, Pennsylvania, residing there until 1893, when he retired from all active work and settled in Media, where he still lives a somewhat secluded life. He is an overseer of the Meeting of the Society of Friends. He is a member of council of the Delaware Valley Naturalists' Union, of council of the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, and of the Delaware County Institute of Sciences, of which he is vice-president.

He was married in 1851, to Anna A., daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Garrett) McCullom; they have one son, Franklin M., born in 1855, who is president of the Pennsylvania Warehouse Company of Philadelphia. Philip Garrett, maternal grandfather of Mrs. Potts, was an extensive manufacturer of locomotives and sent men to Russia to start the plant for the Czar. Edward Potts, brother of Charles Potts, is a well known scientist and a specialist on sponges, having a variety named after him in Europe, he being the discoverer of the same.

CHARLES MOORE, a successful farmer of Upper Providence, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is the oldest living male descendant of Charles Moore, who emigrated to America in 1682.

Charles Moore, the present bearer of the name, was born September 21, 1839, on the old homestead, and is the son of Philip and Hannah (Hale) Moore. His boyhood was passed on the farm and at the age of sixteen he entered mercantile life, in which he was engaged at the opening of the Civil war. He enlisted, August 19, 1862, in Company D, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He was attached to the Army of the Potomac, and participated in all the engagements in which his regiment took part, until the expiration of his term of service. After the war he remained with his father until 1870, residing for a few years thereafter in various places. In 1879 he purchased the Pratt-Bishop farm of one hundred and five acres in Upper Provi-cence, which he has since made his home. The estate is under careful cultivation and is especially devoted to the purposes of milk dairying, in which the owner has engaged with marked success. In politics Mr. Moore is a Republican.

On March 24, 1870, Mr. Moore married Priscilla P., daughter of Pratt and Mathilda (Yarnold) Bishop. The former was the son of Emery and Jane (Marlin) Bishop. Emery, who was the son of Thomas Bishop, established a rolling mill on his own land, and was the first man to use coal for the purpose of melting iron. Pratt Bishop was the father of nine daughters: Margaret; Priscilla, mentioned above as the wife of Charles Moore; Debbie, Emma, Mathilda, Ida, Hannah and Alice. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are the parents of two children: Alice B., who is the wife of Walter Wood; and Philip, who is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and holds a position in the First National Bank of Media.

WILLIAM C. ALEXANDER, a member of the Delaware county bar, was born at Thornton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, November 12, 1870. He is a son of Thomas B. and Maggie C. Alexander, and his father was killed in an accident on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad when the child was but five years old. His sister Bertha, aged seven months, died a month prior to the death of the father. Mrs. Alexander became a nurse in order to support herself and her son. She sent the boy to school until he was eleven years old, when by reason of declining health Mrs. Alexander was compelled to give up nursing, and he went to live with an uncle, G. Pearson Cloud, a farmer, in East Goshen township, Chester county. Here he earned his board and clothes and attended the country school. One of his teachers at Rocky Hill was W. Roger Fronfield, now a prominent member of the Media bar, with whom he afterward read law, and to whom he is indebted for much of the best formative influence of his life.

Mr. Alexander was for a time a student at the West Chester Normal School, and afterward taught for two terms in Kennet township. He then entered Prickett's Business College in Philadelphia, and finishing a course there was employed as shipping clerk by the John M. Rowe Son & Company. This position he gave up to enter the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad, where he remained for six years as clerk in the transportation department at the Broad street station. During this time he gave his evenings to the study of law with his old teacher, Roger Fronfield. As his reading progressed, he gave up his position in the railroad office and became assistant to the recorder of deeds of Delaware county, Dr. Thomas Young, where the work was more in line with his ambition, and afforded him opportunity for study. His persistence was rewarded, when in March, 1897, he was admitted on examination to the Delaware county bar. Since then he has had an office in Media, where his thorough preparation and habit of work have brought him an increasing clientele. He is now solicitor for the directors of the poor, of Delaware county. Mr. Alexander is a Republican, and stumped the county for Governor Stone during his campaign.

On May 7, 1892, Mr. Alexander married Mae F., the daughter of John D. Erisman, a florist of Kennet Square, and Mary E., his wife. One child, Beatrice Zadie, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, November 22, 1893.

J. LORD RIGBY. Among the prominent business men of Delaware county who take an active interest in the public affairs and general welfare of the community is J. Lord Rigby, the efficient manager of the Land Title Trust Company, of Philadelphia. His father was James P. Rigby, who came to this country from Stockport, England, in 1854, and took up his abode in Wilmington, Delaware. On his arrival there he engaged in the manufacture of woollen goods, and in his business ventures he achieved marked success. His wife bore the maiden name of Elizabeth R. Scanlan, she being a daughter of John Scanlan, of Paoli, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and he was engaged in the lime-burning business at Christiana, Lancaster county, this state. The following children were born of this union: Mary H., who became the wife of John McGraw, and they have four children: Annie E., the wife of George Standring and the mother of one child; Edward H., who married Elsie Snyder, by whom he has one child; Harry H., who is still with his parents in Media; Margaret H., also at home; and J. Lord, whose name introduces this review.

J. Lord Rigby is a native son of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred on the 4th of August, 1864. His elementary education was received in the public schools of his native locality, and this was later supplemented by a course in the College of Commerce at Philadelphia, where he enjoyed superior advantages. Desiring then to gain a knowledge of the legal profession, he accordingly began the study of law under the preceptorship of E. A. Price, of Media, thus continuing for four years, but he has never entered the legal arena as a practitioner. On the expiration of his four years of study Mr. Rigby accepted a position with the Land Title Trust Company, of Philadelphia, and so well did he perform the duties devolving upon him therein that he rose to the office of manager, of which he is the present incumbent. He has won prosperity in the business world, and by his good fellowship, genial disposition and true worth of character has become popular with a large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Rigby was united in marriage to Miss Annie, a daughter of William Hurlow, a coal merchant of Mount Carmel, Northumberland county, Pennsylvania. Two children have been born to brighten and bless their home, Hurlow and Renee. In political matters Mr. Rigby gives an unflinching allegiance to the principles of the Republican party, and, being a forceful and entertaining speaker, has many times occupied the platform in state and national controversies. His fraternal relations connect him with the Masonic order, and in his social relations he is a member of the Keystone Club, of Chester, Pennsylvania, the Radnor Republican Club, the Young Men's Republican Club, the Fernwood Republican Club, the Media Social Club, and is serving as president of the last named society. During his life he has been an extensive traveler, visiting the many points of interest in both this country and Canada, and has thus gained that knowledge which travel alone can bring. The family occupy a beautiful home in Media, surrounded by all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life, and in this city the parents of Mr. Rigby also reside.

HON. JOHN M. BROOMALL, deceased, was during a long and active career one of the most able and conspicuously useful men of his day. A distinguished member of the Pennsylvania bar, his career as a lawyer covered the phenomenal period of more than a half-century. For nearly the same period he was a prominent political leader, first in the Whig party, and, after its dissolution, in the Republican party, which he aided in founding. His activities were not confined to those fields in which he won for himself a nation-wide fame, but extended to local affairs, and he was a prime factor in promoting the interests of his home community along commercial, educational and other lines.

Mr. Broomall was of English Quaker descent, and the family from which he sprang was planted in Pennsylvania in the early colonial days of William Penn. His immigrant ancestor, John Broomall (1), came about 1682 or 1684, and obtained land in what is now East Bradford, Chester county, and in the old county records of 1710 his name appears as a land holder in West Chester. He subsequently settled in Nether Providence, Delaware county. He died 6mo., 23, 1729, and his will dated, 4 mo., 29, 1729; and proved 8 mo., 21, 1729, makes his wife Mary executor of his estate, and names his children—John, Lydia, Ellen, Mary and Jane.

John (2), only son of John Broomall (1), was born prior to 1700, and was the first of the family born in America. He died at his farm in East Howellsville, in 1730, from injuries received in falling from a load of hay. He married 8 mo., 12, 1720, Anne Lewis, who was born in Philadelphia. Their children were Daniel and David.

Daniel (3), son of John (2) and Anne (Lewis) Broomall, was born in 1728, and died 4 mo., 2, 1817, at the advanced age of eighty-nine years. He was owner of a large farm in Chester Creek, in Thornbury township, which was until a recent date in the ownership of his grandsons Abraham and Daniel. He married, in 1751, Martha, who died 5 mo., 3, 1812, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Talbot, and great-great-granddaughter of George and Alice Maris, of Springfield township, Delaware county. They were the parents of the following named children: 1. Hannah, married John Smith; 2. John; 3. Daniel, married Sarah Worrall; 4. Nehemiah, married Mary Robinson; 5. Isaac, married Lydia Neal; 6. James, married Hannah Dutton; 7. Jacob, married Phoebe Broomall; 8. Rachel, married Caleb Temple; 9. David; 10. Elizabeth, married Isaac Frame; 11. Nathan, married Hannah G. Connor, and they were the godparents of the wife of Judge Pennypacker; 12. Joseph, married Elizabeth Yeats, and (second) Phoebe Brown.

John (4), second child and eldest son of Daniel and Martha (Talbot) Broomall, was born 11 mo., 8, 1760. He spent his youth on the paternal farm in Thornbury township. He was four times married. He married, according to the discipline of Friends' at Concord Meeting, 1 mo., 4, 1796, Susanna, daughter of Thomas and Ruth Wilson. She died without issue, 12 mo., 19, 1798. John Broomall married (second) 6 mo., 7, 1804, Sarah, buried 6 mo., 15, 1806, daughter of Joseph and Mary Sharpless. For his third wife John Broomall married, 3 mo., 14, 1811, Sarah, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Reynolds) Martin. She died, 4 mo., 12, 1819, leaving four children—George, Elizabeth and John M. (twins), and Martha, who died at the age of nine years. John Broomall married (fourth) 7 mo., 4, 1822, Ann, daughter of Samuel and Sarah Townsend, of Newtown, New Jersey. She died in 1836, and her husband lived a widower twelve years, dying 3 mo., 6, 1848, aged nearly eighty-eight years, and was buried in the burying ground at Chichester Meeting House.

John Martin Broomall (5) son of John and Sarah (Martin) Broomall, was born January 19, 1816, in Upper Chichester township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He was reared upon the home farm and was educated in the schools of the Society of Friends and in Samuel Smith's

J. M. G. G. G.

J. M. G. G. G.

boarding school in Wilmington, Delaware, and he was for a time a teacher in the last named institution. He began his legal studies in Philadelphia under the preceptorship of the eminent legist, jurist and author, John Bouvier, and completed them under Samuel Edwards, a leading lawyer of Delaware county. Mr. Broomall was admitted to the bar on August 24, 1840, and at once entered upon the profession in which he soon gained an advanced position and to which he devoted himself with unabated zeal and ability until his last illness. It was his great distinction from a midway point in his career until its close, to enjoy recognition among his professional colleagues as the foremost of them all, and it was no uncommon expression among suitors to say that, with Mr. Broomall against them, their case was half lost before the trial had begun. He was a close and logical reasoner upon legal topics, and was often powerful before the court in his discussion of principles and precedents, but he was at his best before the jury. His deep knowledge of human nature made him all-powerful in his persuasive advocacy. He was a legal strategist. His cases were often won by fixing upon some particularly strong point, and by keeping it continually before the jury. He was spoken of as "an uncurable competitor," and he had the faculty of introducing some favorable feature of his case, regardless of the restrictions of the laws of evidence. While his profound knowledge of law made him a master in all its various fields, he was particularly renowned in criminal law, and during almost his entire career appeared for the defense in cases of homicide, and in nearly all obtaining either entire acquittal or acquittal of first-degree murder. His zealous interest in such cases was not due to his desire for gain, for he was rarely paid for his services, but was prompted by an inveterate hostility to capital punishment. This opposition probably having its foundation in his Quaker heredity, manifested itself in him early in his youth, and gradually intensified throughout his life, until he would go to almost any extreme to save a fellow creature from the gallows. The court records and the journals of the days contain many narratives of cases in which he achieved notable success, but for these there is no space in these pages. When Delaware county became a separate judicial district, the bar made unanimous recommendation of Mr. Broomall for the position of president judge, to which he was appointed by the governor. He was commissioned early in 1874, and served until January 1, 1875. Of the cases tried before him, only about a half dozen were appealed, and all of these were sustained upon review. Undoubtedly Judge Broomall would have attained to a high position upon the bench, had not the logic of events thrown him into another field.

9 X

Judge Broomall, from his earliest life, was a determined opponent of human slavery, and he came to be numbered among the most aggressive in the movements for its overthrow. Allied with the Whig party, the time came when its younger element in the county, in casting about for a leader, selected Mr. Broomall, whose prominence at the bar and forcefulness as a speaker were already established. He was nominated for the legislature, and was elected, and served most creditably in the sessions of 1851 and 1852, taking a prominent part in state legislation. He declined to again become a candidate, and he also refused the nomination of the Whig party for a seat in congress, declining in favor of William Everhart, of Chester county. He accepted the candidacy in 1854, but was defeated by the Democratic candidate, John Hickman, Mr. Broomall having made opponents of many of those who desired to support him, by his refusal, out of conscientious objection to affiliation with secret orders or parties, to connect himself with the Know Nothings.

Mr. Broomall aided in the organization of the new Republican party in Delaware county, in 1856, and the same year was nominated by the Republicans of the county for a seat in congress. In the other county in the district (Chester) Mr. Bowan was nominated, and, rather than divide the party in its initial campaign, Mr. Broomall withdrew. In 1858 he was again nominated in Delaware county and also in Chester county. Mr. Hickman, who had been elected at the previous election, now appeared as an independent candidate and received many Republican votes because of his break with President Buchanan, and was elected. In 1860 Mr. Hickman, having now fully renounced the Democratic party, was nominated for congress by the Republicans in both counties, and received Mr. Broomall's cordial support.

Mr. Broomall's political career had a new beginning in 1862. In that year he was nominated by the Republicans in both the counties of Delaware and Chester, and was elected, being returned to his seat by two successive re-elections. He entered upon his duties at a crucial period of the Civil war, and until the close of that momentous struggle he took an able part in all military and financial legislation, and he was a potent factor in the moulding of the legislation which conferred full civil and political rights upon the black as well as the white man. During his entire congressional service he was a member of the committee on accounts and the committee on expenditures, and was chairman of the latter body in his last term, and in his second term he was a member of a special committee (and for a considerable time its chairman) sent to Memphis to investigate the riots in that city. He was among the foremost of his party in struggling for the abolition of slavery, and he took a very active part in all debates upon slavery, finance and other leading issues. On February 7, 1865, he delivered a masterly speech on civil rights, which Mr. Blaine (in his "Twenty Years of Congress") said was "the finest specimen of terse and strong English known to the American Congress," and the same high authority testified of Mr. Broomall that he was "an independent thinker, a keen debater, inflexible in principle, untiring in effort." During all the time of his congressional service Mr. Broomall was closely associated with the foremost men of the times—Blaine, Stevens, Garfield, Butler, and others and he possessed the intimate friendship of the great Lincoln. His high abilities were warmly appreciated by these eminent statesmen, and his ability and sagacity commanded the plaudits of his opponents, as Mr. Randall, a Democratic leader, who said of him that he was one to whom recourse was generally had for any ingenious and skillful management of the course of legislation, and that, when his plans were once adopted, Stevens, Butler, Blaine and others were sent to the front to do the ponderous hitting. Mr. Broomall was an ardent admirer and warm friend of Thaddeus Stevens, and, as his eulogist upon the occasion of the memorial proceedings in congress after his death, paid a glowing tribute to his services in behalf of the colored race.

Mr. Broomall's patriotism was not of a type which would permit him to confine his effort to the halls of legislation. Twice during the period of his service as a congressman, he also performed the duty of a soldier. In 1862, when Lee's army threatened Washington with capture and Pennsylvania with invasion, he took the field as captain commanding Company C, Sixteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, and in the following year, previous to the battle of Gettysburg, he served from June 19 to August 1st in command of Company C, Twenty-ninth Regiment Emergency Men.

In the field of politics proper, Mr. Broomall kept an unspotted record. In his campaigns in his district, during which he delivered a greater number of speeches than any other speaker, he never used money nor ever made or promised an appointment to office to further his own interests. He held others to the same standard which he set for himself, and contended for honesty at all times and in all places. Thus, while a member of the legislature, he was a determined opponent of the influence on state politics and legislation exercised by powerful corporations, particularly the Pennsylvania Railroad. Out of such considerations, also, in the first national Republican convention in Chicago, in 1860, in which he was a delegate, he declined to be a follower of General

Cameron, and was one of three men of the Pennsylvania delegation who from the first cast their votes for Abraham Lincoln, thus leading the break which resulted in his nomination. Mr. Broomall was a member of the electoral college in 1860 and again in 1872, when his votes were cast for Lincoln and Grant respectively.

Mr. Broomall performed highly useful service as a member of the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention of 1874. He was a member of the two most important committees, the committee on judiciary and committee on taxation, and was chairman of the last named. He took a diligent part in all the transactions of the convention. Holding advanced ground upon all questions of organic law, he ably advocated, but unsuccessfully, the incorporation in the constitution of a provision against capital punishment, and another for the extension of political rights to women.

Mr. Broomall was a charming personality, a rare compound of womanly tenderness and self-assertive virility. He could rise to a height of aggressiveness almost passionate, but it was ever in defense of the wronged. He was endowed with ready sympathy for his fellow man, particularly the poor and afflicted, and he viewed the criminal with pitying compassion, deeming him rather the victim of circumstances, the creature of heredity and environment, and contending that he should be corrected by reformation rather than visited with severe penalties. He was touchingly fond of children, and strenuously opposed their punishment lest they might misunderstand it and be incited to rebellion against the exercise of power. In brief, his personal life bore ample evidence of his Quaker birth and rearing. It is curious and interesting to note that while he had been disowned by the Society of Friends because of his first marriage being "out of meeting," he never bore enmity towards that people, was a constant attendant at their meetings and frequently a speaker at the Providence meeting in Media, and yet resisted all solicitations to resume his formal membership. His intellectual faculties were strong, and he was a powerful analytical reasoner. He was eloquent in speech, yet simple in language, confining himself as far as possible to the unsalted, vigorous, deep meaning words of the English Bible and Shakespeare. He delighted in music and poetry, and would for hours recite for his own amusement, or in the social circle, verses from his favorite British and American poets.

Mr. Broomall was twice married. His first wife, to whom he was wed October 14, 1841, was Elizabeth, a daughter of Joseph and Martha Booth, who died March 19, 1848, leaving to her husband two children, William B. and Anna E., another, Joseph J., having died. September 29, 1853, Mr. Broomall married Caroline L., daughter of John Larkin, Jr., of Chester, and to them were born five children—John L., John M., Jr., Henry L., Caroline L., and Carolus M., of whom Henry L. and Carolus M. survive.

Mr. Broomall resided in Media from 1860 until his death. He was of frail constitution and in youth held out little hope of extending his life to more than the scriptural limit of three score years and ten. But his nervous activity developed an energy which rendered him untiring in effort, and conquered every physical weakness. His health did not suffer serious impairment until December, 1893, when he was attacked with pneumonia, which left him with an enfeebled heart, and death came to him on June 3, 1894. His death was a deep sorrow to the entire community, and all classes united in paying respect to the memory of a loved friend. The Delaware County Institute of Science, of which the deceased was an active member, and, for many years and to the time of his death the president, held a special meeting. Mr. Charles Potts, who presided, paid a glowing tribute to the illustrious dead. Various members read papers descriptive of the leading characteristics of Mr. Broomall—Thomas V. Cooper, on "The Political Career of Hon. John M. Broomall;" Miss Graceanna Lewis on "Mr. Broomall as a Philanthropist;" and Benjamin C. Potts on "Mr. Broomall as President of the Institute." Extemporaneous remarks were made by Captain Isaac Johnson, on the life and public services of Mr. Broomall; the Rev. S. A. Heilner on his life from a religious standpoint; and Dr. Brinton on his usefulness to science and scientists. The papers read, with an excellent biographical history from the pen of Mr. William B. Broomall, son of the deceased, were printed in a memorial pamphlet.

WILLIAM BOOTH BROOMALL traces his descent from an ancestry remarkable because of its association with the early settlement and colonial development of the southwestern section of Delaware county, and in all the lines in which he derives descent his forebears have resided within six miles of the place of his birth, excepting in the one instance of the Dilworths, who were located in Birmingham. It was at Dilworthtown, named from the Dilworths, that General Greene made his masterly stand which saved the American army from destruction at the disastrous battlefield of the Brandywine. In the paternal line he represents in the fifth generation descent from Anna Lewis; in the sixth from John Talbot, Margaret Batten and Elizabeth Acton; while in the seventh, Margery Mendenhall, John Worrelow, Thomas Marten, James Dilworth, Anna Wain, Richard Webb, Henry Reynolds, Lewis Davis, Florence Jones, Rebecca Hinde and Joseph Baker. The eighth gives his descent from William Clayton, who settled at Marcus Hook before the grant of the province to Penn, and, when Governor Markham formed his cabinet, Clayton was one who took the oath of office, August 3, 1681. During 1683-84-85 he was a member of Penn's provincial council. In the same generation Mr. Broomall is descended from George Maris, the first settler in Springfield, who gave to that township the name it still bears.

In the maternal line he is in the fourth generation from William Hoskins; in the fifth from John Smith; sixth from Robert Booth, Betty Caston, William Cloud, Robert Shelly and John Davis; in the seventh from William Buzby, Elizabeth Acton, Joseph Niels and Rebecca Hinde; while in the eighth from John Dutton, Henry Reynolds and John Kingsman. In the ninth he descends from John Simcock, who in 1688, during the quarrel between Penn and the assembly, was commissioned by Penn as one of his deputies or "Leiftenants." To John Simcock, Penn patented more than half of the present township of Ridley. Hence, in Mr. Broomall's case is exemplified Deborah Logan's declaration showing "in a good degree the advantages of stability which a family acquires by being fixed in its place of residence."

William Booth Broomall, the eldest son of Hon. John M. and Elizabeth (Booth) Broomall, was born January 30, 1843, in the house still standing at the northeast corner of Market Square and Third street. His father, one of the eminent men of Pennsylvania, when his son was two years old, purchased a farm in Upper Chichester, near the present Boothwyn, which he tilled until 1848, when he returned to Chester and resumed the practice of law. The lad was placed in the school conducted by Joseph Taylor, in the second story of the Penn buildings, Market Square, and later was instructed in the classics and higher mathematics by James G. Riddle, a learned but eccentric resident of Chester. In September, 1856, Mr. Broomall entered Haverford College, graduating therefrom in July, 1861. Judge Broomall had in the meanwhile removed to Media, where his son entered the father's office. Among his fellow students at law was Hon. James Barton, Jr., and Hon. John B. Hinkson, both of whom later filled the position of mayor of Chester.

When nineteen, W. B. Broomall enlisted in Company D. (Gideon's Band), Captain Norris L. Yarnall, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania Infantry, and August 11, 1862, was mustered into the service of the United States with the rank of sergeant. A month later (September 16), after a hard day's march, the regiment, which had been without food for nearly twenty-four hours, was ordered to take part in the battle of Antietam, and from early light until three o'clock in the afternoon of the following day, held its position at the close of the engagement, although several times compelled to recapture the ground, as the battle ebbed and flowed. In the disastrous Chancellorsville campaign, the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth, with other regiments, was thrown to the front when the Eleventh Corps became panic stricken, and for five hours held the Confederate veterans in check, until, being outflanked, the line was compelled to retire. In all the service of his regiment in the field, Mr. Broomall took active part, although he was scarcely twenty, until his regiment was honorably discharged at Philadelphia, on May 9, 1863.

He thereupon resumed the reading of law in Broomall & Ward's office in Chester, and was admitted to the bar of Delaware county, February 28, 1864. By a strange error in the minutes of court, his admission appears as of December 28, 1863. For more than three years he remained in the office of his preceptors without seeking to build up an individual practice. In January, 1867, a partnership was formed for one year, comprising Hon. William Ward, David M. Johnson and William B. Broomall. At the expiration of this period Mr. Johnson withdrew, and the firm became Ward & Broomall, which continued until 1878, when Mr. Broomall withdrew. Up to that time he seldom appeared in court in the trial of cases, but so quickly did he attract public attention by his advocacy, exact reasoning and profound knowledge of law, that in less than two years he became the recognized leader of the bar of Delaware county. In the spring of 1882 he was elected to the council of Chester, representing what is now the sixth, seventh and eighth wards. He was re-elected in 1884, but in the fall of that year he resigned to accept the solicitorship of the Baltimore & Philadelphia Railroad Company for this district.

From the time Mr. Broomall began individual practice, there has rarely been a case involving nice questions of law, or in which large amounts were in litigation, in which he has not been engaged. In 1889, after the Union Railway Company was authorized to lay tracks upon designated streets, the Chester Street Railway Company, represented by John G. Johnston, Esq., sought to restrain the former corporation from the use of the streets of the city, but at the hearing Mr. Broomall so ably represented the facts and law that the court sustained his contention, with the result that the Union Railway Company purchased the equipment of the Chester Street Railway Company, miles of track were laid, and the present system of street railway communication was inaugurated. In the case, Swarthmore & Morton Railway vs. the Chester Traction Company, Mr. Broomall's argument, which was followed by the supreme court in its opinion, settled the question that one railway company, in the exercise of eminent domain, cannot condemn the road of another company for its own purposes. In 1901 Mr. Eroomall was the leading counsel in the noted Robinson will case, a litigation which attracted the attention of the public throughout the state. Mr. Broomall has rarely appeared in the criminal side of the courts, but in the Pfitzenmeyer homicide proceedings, the most dramatic and sensational trial in the annals of Delaware county, he was the leading counsel for Caroline Schmidt, indicted in 1891 for the murder of her sister Emma Pfitzenmeyer. The prosecution hinged largely upon medical expert testimony, the witnesses for the state asserting that both the carotid arteries had been cut, which, if true, absolutely destroyed the theory of suicide, the hypothesis upon which the defense was founded. Mr. Broomall produced the neck of the dead woman before the jury, absolutely refuting the testimony of the commonwealth's experts. Since the Colt case, tried in New York, in 1841, when the head of the murdered man was produced at the trial, there had been no incident in a criminal trial in the United States where such proof had been introduced in court. The jury, after a few minutes' deliberation, acquitted the prisoner. In 1892 Mr. Broomall was leading counsel in the William Brown homicide case, where during a strike at the Standard Steel Works, one of the strikers, attempting to intimidate other workmen, was killed. The accused parties were acquitted.

Mr. Broomall has been prominent in Masonic circles for a score of years. He is past master of Chester Lodge, No. 236, and for fifteen years has been deputy grand master representing the grand lodge in Delaware and Chester counties. Since the organization of the Penn Club, in 1896, he has been its presiding officer. In 1874 he visited Europe, and since then has twice spent his vacations abroad. In the western continent he has traveled extensively in the United States, Mexico and Canada, frequently in the interests of clients as well as for pleasant recreation. He has given considerable of his leisure to historical investigation. His papers on William Lewis, an old time leader of the Pennsylvania bar, and on William Ward, read before the Delaware County Historical Society, are valuable contributions to the annals of the state.

October 17, 1876, Mr. Broomall married Anna M. Hinkson. A peculiar incident associated with his marriage is that the wedding took place in the same house where he was born thirty-three years before, the property having passed through many owners in the meanwhile. Mrs. Broomall is a daughter of Joseph Engle and Anna (Black) Hinkson, her mother being a daughter of Samuel Black. Her grandparents were John and Abigail—daughter of Frederick and Abigail (Vernon) Engle—Hinkson. Her great-grandparents were John and Jane (Morrow) Hinkson, who, prior to 1750 emigrated from county Cavan, Ireland, and settled in Upper Providence in Chester (now Delaware) county.

HENRY L. BROOMALL, of English Quaker descent, is a son of the Honorable John M. Broomall, a complete sketch of whose life appears on foregoing pages of this work, and Caroline L. (Larkin) Broomall, and his birth occurred in Chester, Pennsylvania, April 12, 1860.

Henry L. Broomall acquired an excellent education by attendance at Swarthmore College and under the preceptorship of private tutors. From 1877 to 1880 he reported stenographically all the important cases in the Delaware county courts, and during the years 1879 and 1880 served in the capacity of instructor in stenography at Shortlidge's Academy in Media, Pennsylvania. Deciding to lead a professional life, he began the study of law under his father, Hon. John M. Broomall, and after passing a creditable examination he was admitted to the Delaware county bar, February 6, 1882, and to the supreme court of the state two years later. Subsequently he practiced law with his brother, William B. Broomall, in the city of Chester, and with his father, Hon. John M. Broomall, in Media, Pennsylvania, and, in 1894, he established his present law office in the latter named borough where he now has an extensive and select clientage. Mr. Broomall is serving as solicitor for the Delaware county prison inspectors, is also one of the directors of the Charter National Bank, and a potent factor in promoting the scientific, professional and educational interests of the town in which he resides. He is a member of the Academy of Natural Science of Philadelphia, vice-president of the Delaware County Institute of Science, a member of the County Historical Society and the Media Club. He adheres to the religious faith of his forefathers, that of the Quaker, and his political affiliations are with the Republican party. He has contributed many valuable articles to scientific periodicals on the subjects of anthropology and linguistics and occasionally lectures on these subjects before local organizations. From 1884 to 1888 Mr. Broomall devoted considerable time to sea voyaging along the Atlantic coast, the Gulf of Mexico and the West Indies.

On June 8, 1893, Mr. Broomall married Virginia Snowden, daughter of Henry C. and Mary E. (Brenner) Snowden. Their children are—Margaret, born December 6, 1894, William B., Jr., born August 29, 1896, Virginia, born March 26, 1898, and Dorothy, born July 16, 1903.

HARRY J. MAKIVER, since 1896 a successful and eminent member of the Delaware county bar, also serving in the capacity of county solicitor, is a progressive and public-spirited citizen, who is thoroughly in touch with modern advancement and is a close student of all questions which concern the public welfare.

He was born at Mortonville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 3, 1871, a son of John D. and Susen B. (Clark) Makiver, who now reside at Russellville, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His preliminary education was acquired at the Maplewood Institute, Concordville, Delaware county, and this was supplemented by attendance at the Ward Academy, the West Chester State Normal School, the Easton Academy, from which institution he was graduated in 1889, and Lafayette College, from which he was graduated in 1893 with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy, receiving the degree of Master of Science from the same institution in 1896. In 1895 he graduated from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. He then entered upon the active practice of his profession in Media, Delaware county, connecting himself with the prominent and distinguished lawyer, V. Gilpin Robinson. Mr. Makiver has been called upon to serve in a number of cases which have been famous in the annals of the state, and has won prominence for himself by bringing to bear all the powers of his strong mind and his comprehensive knowledge of the law. He is a forceful speaker, and his arguments are characterized by logic, plain statement and clear appeals to the intelligence of his hearers.

Mr. Makiver ably supports the principles of the Republican party, and was an active participant in the campaign at the time of President McKinley's election, and in the bitter contest over the election of Governor Stone. He is now the incumbent of the office of county solicitor, and is a very promising candidate for the office of district attorney. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and holds membership in several athletic clubs, being very active in those sports during his college days.

On October 24, 1901, Mr. Makiver married Margaret Pennock, a daughter of John Pennock, who was engaged in the meat business at Cochranville, Chester county, Pennsylvania. In public life Mr. Makiver has won the approval of his friends and clients, and in private life he has always manifested those traits of character which make the home all that it should be. He resides in a beautiful, modern house in Media, Delaware county, which is equipped with all the appliances for comfort and ease.

WILLIAM H. WOOD, a prominent engineer and designer of special machinery of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born November 26, 1844, in Stockport, Cheshire, England, and is a son of James and Elizabeth Wood. He was educated at Stockport and in Derbyshire, and studied and learned his trade under his father, James Wood, who was a prominent engineer and manager of large engineering works in his native country (and who was the inventor of compressing by heavy pressure fluid copper in moulds for making copper rollers solid for engraving for calico and other printing, as well as other metals, in advance of Sir Joseph Whitworth), where he followed it and became prominently known as a designer of large hoisting engines for coal mines; also for hydraulic and other machinery. On coming to this country, he settled at 176 Broadway, New York, as a consulting engineer, where he was well known by reputation, and his connection with a large number of American engineering works. While there he designed large air compressors for the Nevada mines; also large pumping and other machinery in connection with the mines. He also invented refrigerating and ice making machinery, the last of which was built for the Lancaster Brewing Company. All this machinery is successfully working at the present day. From New York he went to Philadelphia, and in 1892 established himself in Media, as a hydraulic engineer and builder of special machinery. The superiority of the machinery constructed by him is best attested by the fact that he enjoys the patronage of the leading manufacturers of the country, as well as the United States Government, among whom may be mentioned the following: The Waterous Engine Works Co., Ltd., Brantford, Ontario, Canada; Fox Solid Pressed Steel Co., Joliet; Tobin & Hamler Manufacturing Co., Chicago, Illinois; Franklin Boiler Works Co., Troy; Farrar & Trefts, Buffalo; Thompson Kingsford Boiler & Machine Works, Oswego; Ames Iron Works, Oswego, New York; Thomas McNeill & Bro., Pittsburgh; James Lappan & Company, Pittsburgh; Erie City Iron Works, Erie; Dickson Manufacturing Co., Scranton; Chas. H. Cramp Shipbuilding Co., Kensington Ship Yard, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Wm. Allen & Sons, Worcester; Coglan's Holyoke Steam Boiler Works, Holyoke, Massachusetts; H. B. Beach & Sons Boiler & Machine Works, Hartford; Berlin Bridge Co., East Berlin, Connecticut; Cooke Locomotive & Machine Works, Paterson; The New Jersey Steel & Iron Co., forming part of the American Bridge Company's Plant at Trenton, New Jersey; Gaar, Scott & Co., Manufacturers Agricultural Engines & Boilers, Richmond, Indiana; The C. H. Dutton Co., Kalamazoo, Michigan; Kewanee Boiler Co., Kewanee, Illinois; S. Freeman & Sons, Racine, Wisconsin; Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co., Chicago, Illinois; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway Co., Burlington, Iowa; Anaconda Copper Mining Company, Anaconda, Montana; Union Iron Works, San Francisco, California; the Honolulu Iron Works, Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands; The Walsh & Weidner Boiler Co., Chattanooga, Tennessee; Birmingham Boiler Works, Birmingham; Hartley Boiler Works, Montgomery, Alabama; The Aultman & Taylor Machinery Co., Mansfield, Ohio; De Fries & Co., Dusseldorf, Germany, and others.

Mr. Wood is the inventor of a hydraulic riveting machine, the patent for which was secured November 28, 1893, and also the patentee of a hydraulic automatic safety valve, as well as a patent circular flanging machine, which invention was patented July 2, 1895, as well as a patent for an improved hydraulic adjusting valve for adjusting the pressure on the rivet to suit the thickness of plates being riveted. He also has patents for the guides for improvements on his Single Standard Steam Hammers.

In addition to supplying the machinery for the firms mentioned and others, Mr. Wood is the builder of the hydraulic riveters and cranes for the United States government Boston and New York navy yards. He is connected with works at Reading, Pennsylvania, where all his machinery is manufactured, notwithstanding all his machinery bears the name of "W. H. WOOD, ENGINEER, MEDIA, PA." which is cast on it.

Mr. Wood married, in 1884, Miss Bertha A. Crane, of Trumansburg, and a resident of Elmira, New York.

CHARLES RUDOLPH WILLIAMSON, of Media, Pennsylvania, who during a long and active life has been a potent factor in the industrial and financial concerns of Delaware county, comes of ancestors who were equally useful in their day. His paternal grandfather, Jesse Williamson, resided near the present site of the city of Media, where he established and operated a paper manufactory, turning out his product through the tedious and laborious hand process which was in vogue before the days of labor-saving machinery and when rags were the sole material.

Charles Williamson, son of the pioneer paper

C. R. Williamson

manufacturer, was born in Springfield township. He learned shoe manufacturing, and he subsequently established a factory in the neighborhood, believing that the facilities afforded by the Philadelphia & West Chester Railroad would make it a favorable location for such an industry. He afterwards removed the business to Providence township, where he set up a large manufactory which supplied shoes to the merchants of Chester and Delaware counties, and afforded employment to a large proportion of the people in the immediate vicinage. His success was marked and in a twofold degree, for he carried on a large business for many years, and afforded a prestige to the place which largely increased its consequence. Aside from his business proper, Mr. Williamson was a man of foresight and enterprise, and he took an active and useful part in the affairs of the community and county. At that time Chester was the shire town of Delaware county. It was the oldest town in the state, dating from the Swedish establishment in 1643, and its status was apparently fixed for all time. But a project to make Media the county seat was broached, and Mr. Williamson took an active part in accomplishing the removal. He was a member of the first municipal council of Media, notwithstanding he was not an actual resident of the borough, and his broad intelligence and force of character gave great weight to his propositions and argument. He was deeply interested in educational and religious affairs, was among the foremost in establishing and maintaining schools, and he was one of the organizers of the Media Methodist church and a member of its original board of trustees.

He married Sarah Rudolph, daughter of Thomas Rudolph, a descendant of an old Springfield family. Mr. Rudolph was one of the first to engage in the anthracite coal operations at Mount Carbon, a borough of Schuylkill county, on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and which is connected with Minersville, the central point of the coal region, by the People's Railroad, six miles in length.

The children of Charles and Sarah (Rudolph) Williamson were John P., Charles Rudolph and Sarah Rudolph Williamson. The mother died about twelve years after her marriage, and her husband remained a widower for some years, and then married Sidney Burk. He died in 1855, and his widow survived him until 1899, and died in her ninety-fifth year.

Charles Rudolph Williamson, second child of Charles and Sarah (Rudolph) Williamson, was born in Springfield township, October 12, 1823. The instruction which he received in the public schools was supplemented by a course in the Friends' School in Wilmington, Delaware, which afforded what was equivalent to that of an academy. In 1850 he succeeded to the shoe manufacturing business established by his father, which he removed in the following year to Media. There his operations were quite successful, and during the continuance of the Civil war his establishment was devoted to furnishing shoes to the government, under contract, and during this period he employed about seventy-five men. This business necessarily ceased with the close of the war, and Mr. Williamson sold his manufactory and engaged in a coal and lumber business. The conditions were most favorable for this enterprise, which he conducted with success until 1887, when he sold out to his sons and retired from active business.

In addition to his manufacturing and commercial interests, Mr. Williamson has been habitually connected with various financial associations. Since 1864 he has been a director in the First National Bank of Media, of which he was one of the incorporators, and he was chairman of the committee to whom was committed the building of the bank edifice. For twenty years he was president of the Media Loan and Security Association, and for a number of years he has been president of the Delaware Mutual Insurance Company. At various times he has been called to positions of honor and trust. He was a member of the town council for thirty years, and for more than twenty years he was president of that body. He served as postmaster under the administration of President Pierce, and until 1857, when he was elected county treasurer. In all official positions his duties have been discharged with signal ability and scrupulous integrity, while his public spirit has been manifested in his deep interest in educational and church affairs. He is a member of Bartram Lodge, A. F. and A. M., in which he has sat as master.

Mr. Williamson was married, February 4, 1845, to Miss Mary R. Eves, who was born at Wallingford, Delaware county, a daughter of William and Sarah (Hawkins) Eves. Her father was of English ancestry, a descendant of Sir George Eves, and was born in Aston, in Delaware county. To Mr. and Mrs. Williamson were born five children. Two sons, William E. and C. Frank, are engaged in the coal and lumber business which was derived from their father. Two daughters, Sarah R. and Mary E., are living, and a third, Lucy, died at the age of twenty years.

WILLIAM EVES WILLIAMSON was born in Lower Providence township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, November 29, 1845. His parents were Charles R. and Mary R. (Eves) Williamson. For more than three generations the Williamson family have held a prominent position in the local affairs of this part of the state. Charles R., the father of William, was highly respected and esteemed in business, official and social circles. Like his father and grandfather he enjoyed a large measure of the public confidence, being chosen to fill various offices, all the duties of which he performed in the most creditable manner. An account of his life and ancestry has been given in a separate sketch, in which were noted his efforts to build up and to increase the prosperity of his native town.

His son, William Eves Williamson, after a course of study in the private schools of Media, and Wilmington, Delaware, followed by special instruction at the Central High School in Philadelphia, was fitted for the business life which he contemplated entering, at Bryant & Stratton's Commercial College, taking the regular course, and after that a post-graduate course. He first made a practical use of his education as a clerk in a mercantile concern at Media. Having gained some business experience here and desiring to add to this, he went to Philadelphia as bookkeeper for Williams & Dodd, afterwards leaving the firm to take a position as head bookkeeper in Harding Williams' wholesale fruit and fancy grocery store. After remaining here for some time he returned to Media, entering into business relations with his father in the shoe manufacturing trade; then, when familiar with the general details of the business, he became a member of the firm of Lott, Roberts & Co., shoe jobbers, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. When his father decided to retire from the coal and lumber trade, which he had successfully conducted after leaving the shoe business, William succeeded him, and showed his power of adapting himself to an entirely different line of trade. He formed a partnership with his brother under the firm name of C. R. Williamson's Sons, which continued until he transferred his part of the business to Rosemont, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. For five years he remained there, actively associating himself with the business interests of the place, and building up an extensive trade. Afterwards circumstances favored his removal to Philadelphia, where he continued the lumber business until 1901, when his failing health compelled him to retire. His early life was associated with the stirring events of the Civil war, in which he saw active service. It was in July, 1863, when the memorable battle of Gettysburg was fought, in which the army of the Potomac under the distinguished leadership of General Meade, of Pennsylvania, defeated the Confederates under General Lee. This was felt to be the crisis of the war, and Pennsylvania sacrificed many of her bravest citizens to the cause. Among the younger volunteers was William Eves Williamson, who at this critical period in his country's history, and when not yet eighteen years of age, enlisted in Company I, Twenty-ninth Pennsylvania Emergency Regiment, as a drummer, and was soon transferred to the regimental quartermaster's department as clerk, subsequently being sworn into the United States service, and serving as clerk of the regiment until it was mustered out. His efficiency and capability in the performance of public duties were recognized by various appointments to public service. For seventeen years he was a creditable member of the board of prison inspectors of Delaware county, a position which his father had previously filled. He is a member of Bradbury Post No. 149, G. A. R., George W. Bartram Lodge No. 298, A. F. and A. M., of which he is a past master, and of which he has been treasurer for the past eighteen years. He is past high priest of Media Chapter, R. A. M., a trustee of St. Alban's Commandery, K. T., of Philadelphia, and until 1895 was secretary of the Media Club, of which he was one of the organizers. He takes an active interest in politics and belongs to the Republican party.

In 1870 he was married to Miss Jemima Elizabeth Brooke, a daughter of Mark Brooke, of Radnor, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. They have five children, Mark Brooke, born December 21, 1871; Mary Eves, born December 3, 1872, who married Captain Charles E. Tayman, U. S. A.; Esther Lewis, born March 1, 1874, wife of James Bradshaw Moss, of Chester, Pennsylvania; Charles Rudolph, born May 3, 1878; and Francis Victor, born January 4, 1882.

C. E. STAFFORD. This is an age when energies are directed in a special line of investigation. The man in professional or industrial life, after gaining a varied knowledge of the basic principles of the calling to which he has consecrated his time, afterward gives his thought and effort to perfecting himself in his chosen department, thereby gaining a proficiency and prominence which he could otherwise not attain if his labors were spread over a wider field. It is in this way that C. E. Stafford, president of the Tidewater Steel Company of Chester, Pennsylvania, is prominent in the development of the open-hearth process in the United States.

C. E. Stafford was born in Plymouth, New Hampshire, January 31, 1854, a descendant of an old and honored English family, one of the members having served as a general during the Revolutionary war. Mr. Stafford acquired a thorough education in the Boston Latin School, after which he entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, from which he was graduated in 1873 with the degree of Bachelor of Science in the department of mining and

C. Edward Stafford

The Lewis Publishing Co.

1877-1878

Charles F. Hoover

metallurgy. The year following his graduation he was engaged as instructor in the metallurgical laboratories of the same institute; later he acted as chemist for several mining companies at Wyandotte, Michigan, and during the year 1875 acted in the capacity of chemist for the Pennsylvania Steel Works, and subsequently was placed in charge of the open-hearth department. He improved the design of the open-hearth furnaces which soon became a universal feature in American open-hearth furnaces. In 1880 he designed and placed in operation two thirty-ton furnaces, which were at that time the largest in the world; the removable or portable parts were originated by Mr. Stafford, and they were remarkable for extremely low oxidation of the charge. In 1880 Mr. Stafford was appointed superintendent of the Bessemer converting department, and to him is due the honor of making the first basic or Thomas Bessemer steel ingots in this country. He retained this position until the year 1885, when he resigned in order to accept a position with the Shoenberger Steel Company of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he remained until 1901. He designed and built the Bessemer converting plant of that company, and in 1896 he removed to the South Chicago plant of the Illinois Steel Company (now owned by the United States Steel Corporation), where he was placed in complete charge of the open-hearth, plate and slabbing departments, which under his competent management developed in a most wonderful manner. In July, 1901, Mr. Stafford was chosen to act in the capacity of president of the Tidewater Steel Company, of Chester, Pennsylvania, which has become a strong factor in the plate trade of the eastern coast. He is a prominent member of the American Institute of Mining and Engineering, having joined in 1873; a member of the college Chi-Phi Society; a member of the Chicago Club, the Manufacturers Club of Philadelphia, the Harrisburg Club, the Pittsburg Club, and Penn Club of Chester, Pennsylvania.

On April 27, 1877, Mr. Stafford married Miss Mary Louise Hammill, daughter of Caleb Hammill, of Chicago, Illinois, and granddaughter of Judge Robert Hammill, one of the earliest settlers of Chicago. Their children are: Franklin Hammill and Elizabeth Hammill Stafford. Both Mr. Stafford and his wife are active and consistent members of the Episcopal church of Chester, Pennsylvania.

CHARLES FLOWER. The Flower family of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, dates its origin from the Norman Conquest. Playfair, in his "Noble Families of England," states that Hugh, one of the adventurers gathered under the standard of the Duke of Normandy, was noted for his personal beauty. His valor at Hastings earned for him from William the name Le Fleur, which in the course of time became translated into the corresponding English name Flower.

The earliest mention of the name in connection with the Delaware river settlements, was at Salem, New Jersey, 1686, when a warrant was issued to the surveyor-general to lay out certain lands to William Flower, who was one of Fenwick's colonists. Prior to 1692 he located at Marcus Hook, Chester (now Delaware) county, where he died in 1717. His daughter¹ Mary married John Flower, a distant relative, who came of the branch of the family settled in New England years before William Flower left his native land. Richard Flower, grandson of John and Mary, was born at Marcus Hook, 1759, and when a lad of sixteen, in December, 1774, was named as one of the committee of safety for the county of Chester. Being a good penman, he wrote much of the necessary correspondence with the central organization in Philadelphia, although the letters are signed by the older members of the committee. On September 8, 1785, he married Henrietta, daughter of Hon. Henry Hale Graham, afterwards the first president judge of the courts of Delaware county. Richard Flower was by occupation a miller, and at the time of his marriage operated the Lapidea Mills on Crum Creek, but in 1789 he purchased the noted Chester Mills on Chester Creek, now Upland, which he operated until 1824, when he leased them to his son, William Graham Flower. Richard Flower died July 24, 1843, aged eighty-four.

William Graham Flower was born at Chester Mills, November 28, 1794. By occupation he was a miller, and when of age leased the mills which he conducted from 1824 to 1845, when the property was sold in settling Richard Flower's estate. During the great freshet of August 5, 1843, Mr. Flower was on the meadow near his mills when the flood, swollen by the breaking of several dams further up the creek, rushed down in great waves said to be four feet in height. He was carried into the mill race, when, catching a grapevine as he was swept along, he drew himself into a tree, but, soon after, the tree was torn from the earth and borne rapidly down the creek. For a time his life was in great peril, for the stream was filled with floating timbers and debris of habitations whirled onward by the stirring waters. Finally he succeeded in grasping the branch of a tree still standing, and drew himself to a place of safety. Several hours later, when the waters had subsided, he was rescued.

Mr. Flower, although a man of prominence and frequently solicited to be a candidate for office, always refused, except during the Anti-Masonic campaign he allowed his name to go on the Anti-Masonic ticket for county auditor, and, to his surprise, he was elected. He was a director of the Bank of Delaware County from 1834 to 1839, and again in 1843-44.

William G. Flower married Susan Bratton, daughter of William and Sarah (Smith) Bratton. William G. Flower died August 21, 1865. He was the brother of Reese Wall Flower, who died in 1875, leaving his entire estate to the University of Pennsylvania for the establishment and maintenance of the Flower observatory, and he was the great-nephew of Dr. Jonas Preston, who at his death left nearly half a million dollars to establish the Preston Retreat in Philadelphia, a maternity hospital "for the relief of indigent married women of good character." William G. Flower left a large estate to his family.

Chester Flower, son of William G. and Susan (Bratton) Flower, was born in Chester township, Delaware county, May 31, 1847. In the seventh generation he is descended from William Flower, the original settler at Marcus Hook; in the tenth generation he is descended from Henry Grubb, member of Parliament from Devizes, Wiltshire, in 1571 (14th Elizabeth); in the eighteenth generation in the Graham line from Robert II of Scotland¹; in the eighth generation from Henry Hale, of Hornton, a nephew of Sir Mathew Hale; in the seventh generation from Robert Pennell, of Baldeston, Nottinghamshire, England, who settled in Middletown, Delaware county, in 1686; in the like generation from Thomas Mercer, of Ayro-on-the-Hill, Nottinghamshire, who settled in Thornbury, Delaware county, prior to 1700; in the like generation from Phillip Yarnall, of Cleyness, Worcestershire, England, who settled in Edgemont, Delaware county, prior to 1690; in the eighth generation from John Baker, of Edgemont, Shropshire, England, who settled in Edgemont, Delaware county, prior to 1685; and in the seventh generation from William Clayton, a member of Penn's council, who settled at Marcus Hook, Delaware county, in 1679.

Charles Flower was educated in the public schools of Chester township and at Norristown. His father died while his son was still in his minority, and when he attained his majority he devoted his energies to tilling and conducting a dairy upon the farm which had come to him as part of his inheritance of the paternal estate.

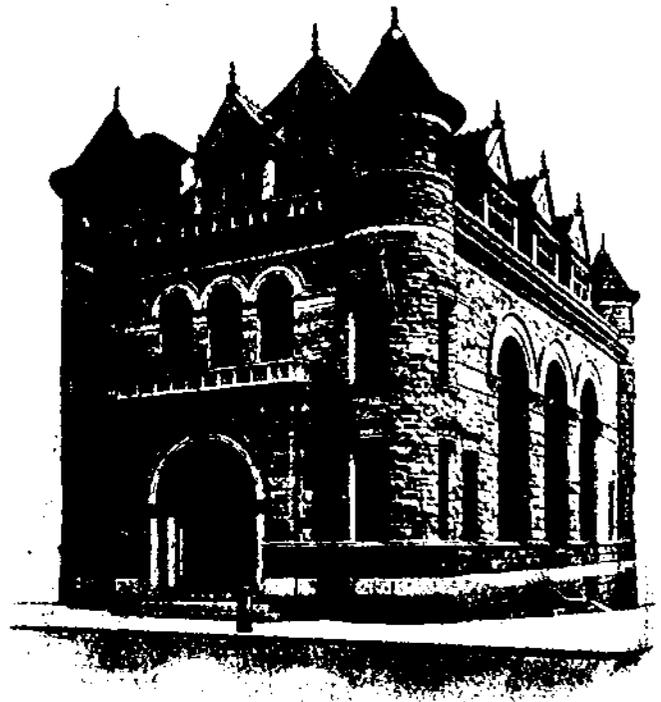

A man of inventive turn, several labor-saving contrivances of his own design are used in the conduct of his business, and his farms and buildings are models for the purposes to which they are applied. His cattle are of highbred milk-producing strains, and, a lover of fine horses,

(1) See "Americans of Royal Descent" (Pedigree No. 12).

he has raised a number of registered speedy colts, several of which he has sold at considerable profit. He has been one of those farmers who has succeeded in making two blades of grass grow where but one grew before, and hence, to that extent, benefited his neighbor and himself alike. Mr. Flower has served as school director of the township, and was an ardent advocate of the good road agitation in Delaware county. He is a member of the Penn Club of Chester.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF MEDIA.

The new building owned and occupied by the First National Bank of Media is one of the most strikingly beautiful and substantial bank structures in eastern Pennsylvania, and is perhaps, unexcelled in the country. It is entirely substantial, and interior and exterior alike are highly ornamental. It is provided with the most approved burglar and fire-proof vaults for the bank's funds and records, as well as for the safe keeping of valuable papers belonging to its patrons.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF MEDIA.

The First National Bank of Media is numbered among the first half-hundred national banks in the United States, according to the scale of merit adopted by the United States treasury department. The initial organization was effected in February, 1864, with a capital of $65,000, which was increased the same year to $100,000. Until May, 1885, the semi-annual dividends were five per cent. and since then they have been six per cent. In thirty-nine years the bank returned to its stockholders nearly seven times its total capital.

Isaac Haldeman, the first president, died in 1878, and was succeeded by his son, Thomas J. Haldeman, who died in 1894, and was succeeded by Colonel Joseph W. Hawley. The bank began business in the Haldeman building, which was occupied until 1871, when it removed to the John M. Hall building at the corner of State street and South avenue, where it remained until it finally removed to its present splendid edifice, in 1901.

COLONEL JOSEPH WILLIAMSON HAWLEY, president of the First National Bank of Media, Pennsylvania, and a veteran of the Civil war, son of Joel and Catherine B. (Williamson) Hawley, was born in Lionville, Chester county, July 14, 1836. His early life was passed in the public schools and in the country store owned by his father. His further education was received in the schools of Jonathan Gause and Dr. Franklin Taylor, and at the West Chester Academy, then under the charge of Professor William F. Wyers, Mr. Hawley spending one year at each of these schools, and in the interim teaching two years in the public schools. At the close of the term with Professor Wyers, the latter named offered him the position of assistant teacher, which was accepted, and he remained in that institution until 1860, when he received the appointment of paying teller in the National Bank of Chester County, and at once entered upon the duties of that position. He was thus engaged in the early part of the Civil war, when President Lincoln called for troops to repel the rebel army which, under General Lee, was advancing into Pennsylvania. His patriotism aroused, he obtained permission from the board of directors to recruit a company of soldiers to aid in the protection of the state. In ten days the required number, one hundred men, were enlisted, met at Downingtown, and organized by the election of Joseph W. Hawley as captain, Allen M. Davis as first lieutenant, and Charles W. Roberts as second lieutenant, and immediately afterward took train for Camp Curtin, at Harrisburg, where Captain Hawley and the other officers received their commissions August 12, 1862, from Governor A. G. Curtin.

Captain Hawley's company was one of the first ten to arrive at Harrisburg, and these were formed into the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. The regiment, under command of Captain Hawley, was transported to Washington, where it became a part of the Army of the Potomac, then in motion to meet General Lee's army moving northward. On August 16, Captain Hawley received from Governor Curtin his commission as colonel, and he led his regiment into the battle of Antietam on September 17, 1862, being placed in position on the extreme right of the line. By nine o'clock in the morning the regiment was under a heavy fire in what is known as the "Bloody Cornfield," where it lost many killed and wounded. Among the latter was Colonel Hawley, who received a bullet in his neck and was carried off the field to the Miller house, but, as that building was within range of the enemy's heavy guns, the wounded were carried back into the woods and finally conveyed to Hagerstown. After being sufficiently recovered, Colonel Hawley was removed to his home in Lionville. The bullet at this date (1903), still remains embedded in one of the bones of his neck. Upon recovery, Colonel Hawley rejoined the regiment at Harper's Ferry, and served with it until it was honorably discharged, May 17, 1863.

Returning to his duties with the Bank of Chester County, Colonel Hawley remained but one day, when the governor of the state called for additional troops to repel a second invasion which General Lee was then projecting northward. In one day one thousand troops were raised in Chester county and forwarded to Harrisburg the same night. The Twenty-ninth Emergency Regiment was formed partly from Chester county troops and partly from Delaware county men, and on June 19, 1863, Colonel Hawley was again commissioned colonel. He was assigned to the command of a brigade consisting of his own and two New York regiments, and to him General Couch committed the protection of the bridges of the Pennsylvania Railroad against their threatened destruction. Upon the retreat of Lee from Gettysburg, Colonel Hawley was ordered to follow and harass his rear, and he moved with such celerity that he reached the Potomac the day previous to Lee's crossing, and his troops engaged in a slight skirmish at Clear Spring.

Returning to his home, Colonel Hawley resumed his duties in the bank, where he remained until January 1, 1864. On that date the First National Bank of West Chester was organized, and, being offered a more liberal salary he accepted a similar position in this. On February 1st he was invited to assist in the organization of the First National Bank of Media, which was opened March 21, 1864, with Colonel Hawley as cashier, a position which he held until the death of its president, Thomas J. Haldeman, in 1894, when he was elected to fill the vacancy.

The name of Colonel Hawley appears among the directors of various other institutions which need not be enumerated here. One of his favorite fields of usefulness is the House of Refuge, at Glen Mills, of which he has been a director and one of the most liberal and zealous patrons and friends for many years.

Colonel Hawley was married October 6, 1864, to Miss Anna Miller, daughter of Levis and Ann (McIlvain) Miller, of Media. Their daughter and only child, Mary Miller Hawley, born April 14, 1868, was married November 15, 1893, to Justice M. Thompson, of Philadelphia.

HENRY GRAHAM ASHMEAD, of Chester, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of John Ashmead, who was born at Cheltenham, county of Gloucester, England, October 14, 1648, and emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1682, accompanied by his mother, Mary Ashmead, his wife and two children.

Ashmead and his brother-in-law, Toby Leach, had purchased from William Penn a large tract of land in what is now Cheltenham township, Montgomery county, then included in Philadelphia, where they settled, giving to the township the name Cheltenham, a reminder of their old home in the motherland. John Ashmead died there, December 21, 1688, and his wife the following day. The shock of her husband's death (the result of an accident) was fatal to her. She was a daughter of William Currier, of Cheltenham, England, where she was married, October 14, 1677.

The eldest child, John Ashmead, was born at Cheltenham, England, July 12, 1679, and when at the age of nine years, five months and ten days, on the death of his parents, the second John Ashmead became the head of the family in the new world.

This John (second) married, October 12, 1703,

NOTE.—"There is an ancient family in Spain named Ashmede, as I believe the name is spelled there, which is thought by some to be of Moorish origin. Some one had said the name possibly came from Achmet. However this may be, certain it is that a wanderer of the Germantown race of Ashmeads, it may be with this Moorish blood in his veins, found in England a bride in the Baroness Burdett Coutts."—"The Germantown Road and its Associations," in Penn. Mag. of History, vol. vi, p. 377.

The Ashmede family of Granada, Spain, as well as the branches of that family in Mexico, Brazil, and other South American countries, assert that the Ashmeads of Pennsylvania are of the same lines as themselves, and that the original emigrant to England was banished among the Moriscos expelled, from Spain, by the edict of Philip III, in 1611.

at Darby Meeting, Sarah Sellers, born at Darby, July 13, 1685, a daughter of Samuel Sellers, of Derbyshire, England, who settled in Upper Darby, Chester county (now Delaware), Pennsylvania, in 1682, and his wife Ann, daughter of Henry and Helen Gibbons, formerly of Partridge, England. John Ashmead died at Germantown, October 7, 1742. To the marriage of John (second) and Sarah Sellers was born, May 12, 1706, John Ashmead (3), who on August 23, 1734, married Ann Rush, born October 25, 1716. She was the great-granddaughter of Captain John Rush, an officer in Cromwell's army, whose sword and watch are now in the museum in the old State House (Independence Hall), Philadelphia. Ann Rush was an aunt of Dr. Benjamin Rush, the signer of the Declaration of Independence. John Ashmead (3) died July 30, 1750. His widow married Samuel Potts, and became the mother of Major James Potts, of the Revolutionary army. To the marriage of John Ashmead (3) and Ann Rush was born at Germantown, September 29, 1738, John Ashmead (4), who became a noted sea captain.

He was appointed naval constructor by the Continental Congress in 1776, and captain of the ship "Mars," the brig "Eagle," and other vessels of the Pennsylvania navy, 1777-82, and was engaged in action with various British privateers in 1779. In his later years Captain Ashmead, who was senior warden of the port of Philadelphia, wrote an account of his voyages and adventures between the years 1758 and 1782, which have been privately printed. Thomas Twining, in his travels in America in 1795-6, makes numerous references to the Captain, in whose vessel he was a passenger from India to Philadelphia. Captain Ashmead, on January 28, 1761, married Mary Mifflin, daughter of Benjamin Mifflin, and niece of Major General Thomas Mifflin, of the Revolutionary army, and first governor of Pennsylvania. His wife died May 18, 1814, and Captain Ashmead died June 6, 1818. (*)

William Ashmead, fourth son and fifth child of Captain John and Mary Ashmead, was born April 24, 1776. When a lad of seventeen he married Margaret McKinley, daughter of William McKinley, of Delaware, and of the family from which President McKinley was descended. Her mother was Margaret Wayne, daughter of John Wayne, and granddaughter of Captain Anthony Wayne, who commanded four troops of horse in the army of William III, at the battle of the Boyne. She and "Mad Anthony" Wayne were first cousins. To this marriage eight children were born, of whom four reached adult age; the eldest son was the distinguished Rev. William Ashmead, and the youngest was the father of Henry Graham Ashmead.

(*) Sir Ellis Ashmead Bartlett and William Ashmead Bartlett, now Burdett-Coutts, are great-great-grandsons of Captain John Ashmead.

John Wayne Ashmead, son of William and Mary (McKinley) Ashmead, was born in Philadelphia, May 16, 1806. His parents died when he was hardly more than an infant. He was reared by his three maternal aunts, and at fifteen years of age was apprenticed to Isaac Ashmead to learn painting. His inclination was for the law, and entering the office of Archibald Randall, afterward judge of the United States district court, he worked at his trade by day and read law by night. He was admitted to the Philadelphia bar, May 5, 1827. He was elected a member of the legislature in 1832, and was deputy attorney-general for Philadelphia under attorneys General George M. Dallas and Ellis Lewis. In 1849 he was appointed by President Taylor district attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, and was continued in the same office by President Fillmore, and held the position for one year under President Pierce. While in the discharge of his duties in that office, he conducted on behalf of the United States, in November, 1851, the noted proceedings against Castner Hanway, indicted for treason in resisting the enforcement of the fugitive slave law, which Colonel McClure, in his "Recollections," declares was the opening struggle to the Civil war.

In 1856 John W. Ashmead removed to New York, where he was engaged in a number of celebrated cases. In March, 1859, he defended James Stevens in the leading trial of arsenical poisoning in this country. In 1866 he defended Captain Richard W. Meade, tried before a naval court martial for the loss of the United States steamer "San Jacinto," on the Bahama Banks, January 1, 1865, and was counsel for James Murphy in his claim against the Republic of Chili for the seizure of the brig "Townsend Jones" and her cargo at Valparaiso, in April, 1859.

John W. Ashmead was the author of Ashmead's "Reports of Decisions of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia." He died April 7, 1868, at his country seat, Clinton Place, near Newark, New Jersey. (*)

John W. Ashmead married Henrietta Graham Flower, daughter of Richard and Henrietta (Graham) Flower, November 29, 1829; she was born June 20, 1809, and died at Chester, Pennsylvania, February 20, 1879.

THE FLOWER LINE.—The Flower family first appears in the history of Chester county in 1685, when William Flower, who had been one of Fenwick's colonists in New Jersey, settled at Marcus Hook, where his daughter Mary became the wife of John Flower, of the Connecticut branch. A son of that marriage, Richard Flower, born in 1724, and who died January 25, 1763, married Hannah Grubb in 1746. Her grandfather, John Grubb, who settled at Upland, now Chester, prior to 1677, was the great-great-grandson of Henry Grubb, member of Parliament from Devizes, Wiltshire, 1571, and whose death occurred in 1581.

Richard Flower, second son of Richard and Hannah (Grubb) Flower, was born at Marcus Hook in 1759. When only a few months over sixteen, he was appointed one of the committee of correspondence for Chester county, and under the supervision of Richard Riley, his first cousin, the young man was active in collecting intelligence of the movements of the enemy in the southeastern section of the county. He was a miller by occupation, and in 1789 purchased the noted Chester Mills, where is now Upland borough, then owned by his father-in-law. Richard Flower retired from business in 1824, and died at Lamokin Hall, his plantation near Chester, August 24, 1843. He married Henrietta, daughter of Henry Hale Graham, September 8, 1785. She was born April 27, 1768, and died October 6, 1841. Her father, Henry Hale Graham (a nephew of George Graham, the inventor of the chronometer, for which the English nation gave his remains interment in Westminster Abbey), was born in London, England, July 1, 1731. His father, William Graham, born April 25, 1692, on December 31, 1729, married Eleanor Wyatt, daughter of Zedekiah Wyatt.

Henry Hale Graham was named for his great-great-grandfather, Henry Hale, of Horton, Worcestershire, England, whose granddaughter, Alice Hale, became the wife of George Graham and they were the grandparents of Henry Hale Graham.*

The latter, Henry Hale Graham, when a child of three years, came with his parents to the colony, and when eighteen he became deputy prothonotary of Chester county under Joseph Parker, and in 1765, was appointed prothonotary and deputy register-general, a position he held until 1777. November 7, 1789, he was appointed president judge of the then newly created Delaware county, and died in Philadelphia, January 24, 1790, where he was attending as a delegate the proceedings of the state constitutional convention of that year.

(*) An account of John Wayne Ashmead will be found in Martin's "History of Chester," p. 440; as also in Thomson Westcott's "Rich Men of Philadelphia Forty Years Ago," a series of papers published in the "Philadelphia Sunday Republic," which Westcott, who died in 1888, did not live to complete.

(*) For line of Graham, see Pedigree xii, "Americans of Royal Descent."

Judge Graham married, July 1, 1760, Abigail Pennell, half-sister of Dr. Jonas Preston (the founder of Preston Retreat, a maternity hospital in Philadelphia); a great-granddaughter of Robert Pennell, who settled in Middletown, Delaware county, 1685; granddaughter of Thomas Mercer, an early settler at Thornbury; a like descendant of David Williamson, who settled in Pennsylvania in 1682, and who died in 1727, while attending the session of the assembly, of which he was a member. She was also a granddaughter of Phillip Yarnall, of Edgemont, and great-great-granddaughter of John Baker, of Edgemont, where he died in 1685. He named the township for his natal place, Edgmond, Shropshire, England.

Henry Graham Ashmead, son of John Wayne and Henrietta Graham (Flower) Ashmead, was born at Philadelphia, June 30, 1838. He was educated at the Chester Academy at West Chester, Pennsylvania, of which the Rev. James Crowell was principal, and at the Saunders Institute, West Philadelphia, Hon. Samuel W. Pennypacker, governor of Pennsylvania, the distinguished surgeon, William W. Keen, Professor Gregory B. Keen, the curator of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, being among his fellow students.

He read law in his father's office, and was admitted to the bar in New York on November 29, 1859, and entered into partnership with Leon Abbett, afterwards twice governor of New Jersey, in the practice of his profession, but, his health failing him, by advice of physicians he abandoned the active pursuit of the law. While in New Orleans in 1863, a friend who was correspondent of one of the leading New York dailies became ill with typhoid fever. Mr. Ashmead acted in his stead for a period covering several months, during which time he had opportunity of seeing much of the active campaigning in the department of the Gulf. On the death of his father, in 1868, the following year the family removed to Chester, Pennsylvania.

In June, 1872, when the "Chester Evening News" was established by F. Stanhope Hill, he became first reporter and local editor of that daily paper, and in 1874 held a like position on the "Delaware County Republican," at which time the late Y. S. Walter was the editor and proprietor. In the fall of that year he edited "The Campaign," a political sheet designed to advocate the election of Thomas J. Clayton as judge of the Delaware county courts, one of the incidents in Mr. Ashmead's life which he views with regret.

From this time on, Mr. Ashmead was a busy writer. In 1876 he wrote the "Sketch of Delaware County" published in Eagle's "History of Pennsylvania." He was appointed in 1882 corresponding secretary of the Bi-Centennial Association of Chester, and he wrote "Historical Sketches of Chester-on-Delaware," William Shaler Johnson furnishing the account of the Bi-Centennial exercises, the work of the committee, the celebration, and other interesting matter which forms a part of that volume.*

In 1884 Mr. Ashmead wrote "A History of Delaware county, Pennsylvania," a volume of permanent value, and involving much diligent labor.

August 3, 1885, President Cleveland appointed Mr. Ashmead postmaster at Chester, and during his administration (on June 6, 1886), the special delivery service was instituted, and July 1, 1887, he organized the free mail delivery by carriers and put it into active operation on the date mentioned. In the spring of that year a committee was appointed to urge upon Congress an appropriation for a United States post-office building in Chester, and, at the request of the committee, Mr. Ashmead prepared a pamphlet entitled "Chester and Its Suburbs," which in a compact form presented the industrial features of the city of that day, and its importance as a commercial center as an adjunct to the port of Philadelphia. This pamphlet was distributed to the senate and house of representatives, and from the data therein contained the subsequent reports of the committees of both houses were founded, and upon which a favorable report was made.

In 1889 he collected and wrote the greater part of the pamphlet published by the Board of Trade, entitled "Chester, Pennsylvania; a History of its Industrial Progress and its Advantages for Large Manufacturing," but did not supervise the final form in which it was given publication.

In 1890-91 Mr. Ashmead was in Colorado with an invalid son, who had gone there in search of health. From 1895 to 1900 he was editorial writer on the Chester Morning Republican. In 1897 he wrote the text of the "Art Works of Delaware County." In 1902 he prepared a genealogical sketch tracing the descent of the children of Robert and Phoebe Ann (De Lancy) Wetherill through the Sharp, Keen, Sandelands and other families, which was printed in book form for private distribution.

In the same year he wrote the plays, "Mistress Nancy," "The Captain's Ward," and "Miss De (*) Thomson Westcott, in writing of John W. Ashmead, makes this allusion to his son, H. G. Ashmead. "He is distinguished for his literary abilities, and published a few years ago an exceedingly interesting book entitled "An Historical Sketch of Chester."

Courcy." In the following year (1903) he wrote other plays—"The Matchmakers," "The Silent Witness," "By Order of the Czarina," "In Troublous Times," and "A Hallowe'en Tangle." In the same year he wrote, "The History of Chester," and was also associated editor of "Pennsylvania, Colonial and Federal," a history of the commonwealth. His fugitive contributions to the periodical and newspaper press, upon historical subjects, are numerous, far exceeding, if gathered into volumes, his publications in book form. He now has in preparation for publication "The Story of Lapidea Farm," the country seat of Hon. William C. Sproul, and "The History of the Bank of Delaware County, and its successor, the Delaware County National Bank."

In 1897 Mr. Ashmead read before the Delaware County Historical Society a paper entitled "Chester Street Nomenclature," and in 1901 "The Man in Leather Stockings," "Noted Trials in Early Colonial Days," and "Some Ghosts and Haunted Places in Delaware County." Although not posing as a public speaker, Mr. Ashmead has at various times delivered addresses which were heard with deep interest. He was called upon to make historical remarks at the unveiling of the tablets placed by the Delaware county chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution on the Washington House, April 20, 1902, and on the City Hall April 19, 1903. Again on June 27, 1903, at a meeting of the Society of the War of 1812, he delivered the historical address, taking for his theme the story of Camp Gaines.

It may be permitted to the writer of this sketch, during a long and busy life time engaged in work somewhat similar to that performed by the Ashmead, yet not so long acquainted with him as to make personal bias the main-spring of his remarks, to pass a verdict upon his performances. His writings have ever been characterized by that which is approved by the highest standards—clearness of style and smoothly flowing diction. It is to be said in all truthfulness that his pen has never been used in an unworthy cause. Whether as editor, writer or speaker, his one object has been the exploitation, forcefully, yet never outside the bounds of truthfulness, the accomplishments of those men of the past and of the present, too, who have stood for the best that there is in citizenship in their devotion to public interests and worthy causes, and all that goes to the establishment and development of an ideal community. To his tasks he has brought a wide range of abilities. A deep student of books, a close observer of events and a rare judge of men, and uniting the knowledge of the historian, the wise discrimination of the critic, and the well tempered judgment of the philosopher. He has through a long and peculiarly useful life, endowed himself with all the equipment necessary for his labors in promoting the upbuilding of the historic city and county in which he takes a genuinely hearty pride.

To this narrative may be added a pleasant incident which was written of in the following from the "Chester Times," in the autumn of 1902:

Henry Graham Ashmead, the Delaware county historian, may be said to have been nurtured in the cradle of literature, and has all his lifetime wielded the pen with a masterly effect. His literary researches and labors have naturally brought him into contact with many of the distinguished writers, but one of the pleasantest recollections of such intercourse, dates back to 1849, when he was a lad of ten years. His home was then in Philadelphia, opposite Washington Square, a few doors below Seventh street.

John Sartain, the distinguished mezzotint engraver, who was United States commissioner of fine arts at the Centennial exposition, and William H. Sloanaker, then naval officer of the port, were publishing "Sartain's Magazine." Both of these gentlemen were clients of Graham's father, John Wayne Ashmead, the United States district attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. The boy was privileged to frequent the office of the Magazine at Third and Chestnut streets, and inspect at will a number of portfolios containing fine imported steel prints, of which, from time to time, selections were made for reproduction in the monthly.

On one of these occasions, when the noon hour arrived, Graham was about to leave for home, when a seedily attired gentleman, who had been conversing with the editor, Prof. John S. Hart, asked him which way he was going. When informed of the route, the gentleman replied: "I am going that way, and will walk with you, my lad." The two proceeded up Chestnut street to Sixth and thence to Walnut, the boy being attracted toward the stranger and charmed by his delightful conversation, until they separated at the corner of Seventh and Walnut streets.

That afternoon a lady calling upon Mrs. Ashmead chanced to remark that she had seen her son walking with a person evidently in needy circumstances, whom she thought was scarcely a proper companion for a child of his age. The boy did not know the name of his chance companion. In the evening Mr. Sartain and Sloanaker visited the house, and Mrs. Ashmead inquired of them who the stranger was. She was informed that he was no less a personage than Edgar Allan Poe, conceded to be the most original of American poets, and classed by the majority of European critics as the greatest of all American authors.

When quite a young man, Mr. Ashmead was well acquainted with Frank R. Stockton, the author, who died last spring. There was a difference of only five years in their ages. Some fifteen years ago, at a chance meeting, Ashmead jocularly remarked to Stockton that the names he gave to some of his characters were noticeably ugly.

"So you object to the names I have selected for some of my heroes?" interrogated Stockton.

"Yes," was the reply, "they are in some instances just ugly, lacking that attractiveness which not unfrequently accompanies certain types of ugliness."

"Well," said Stockton, "the next story I write I will give my hero a name to which you cannot object."

Shortly afterwards this celebrated author published a Christmas love story entitled "Major Pendallas," in which the hero is styled "Henry G. Ashmead," an artist. Several years subsequent to the appearance of this story, Stockton and Ashmead again met, and in the course of their conversation "Major Pendallas" was mentioned, Ashmead remarking:

"Stockton, you failed to remember that I am always called by my middle name, Graham."

"So you still object to the names of my heroes," laughed the author.

Mr. Ashmead was at one time exceedingly active in Masonic circles, having attained to the thirty-second degree, Scottish Rite.

Mr. Ashmead has been twice married—first, September 2, 1872, to Miss Rebecca Frances Warner, daughter of Captain Richard N. Warner, of Alexandria, Virginia, and (second) October 26, 1881, to Miss Emma Campbell, daughter of James and Angelina (Garsed) Campbell. Her father, James Campbell, is prominently identified with the history of Chester as its first manufacturer who was instrumental in giving it its industrial incentive. To the first marriage of Mr. Ashmead was born, August 27, 1873, a son, John Wayne Ashmead, who, when a young man of exceeding promise, died November 30, 1891.

F. Y. HEDLEY.

J. ENGLE EVANS is a member of a sterling old family of the Keystone state, and is a son of Nathan Evans, who was born on the 7th of March, 1797. The latter was a son of Benjamin and Mary Evans, and his death occurred on the 2d of May, 1869. On the 26th of March, 1844, he was united in marriage to Emma W. Thomas, who was born December 31, 1807, and died on the 16th of February, 1883. She was a daughter of Joseph and Mary Worell, and at the time of her marriage to Mr.

Evans was the widow of Isaac Thomas. The children of Nathan and Emma Evans were as follows: William Henry, who was born May 3, 1845, is married, and resides on the old homestead in Upper Providence township, Delaware county; Reece T., who was born July 13, 1847, died on the 17th of May, 1864; and John Engle, the subject of this review.

John Engle Evans was born on the old homestead in Upper Providence township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, September 19, 1851. Leaving the school room at the age of sixteen years, he then learned the printer's trade in the Delaware County American office, of Media, Pennsylvania, where he remained for about twenty-five years. On the expiration of this period he entered the office of the Delaware County Record, also in Media, there remaining for several years. Throughout nearly the entire period of his business career he has been identified with the printing business, but in connection therewith he has been interested in outside ventures, buying, improving, handling and speculating in real estate, in which he has been quite successful. During the past three or four years Mr. Evans has also devoted a portion of his time and attention to agricultural pursuits, being the owner of two farms, one of which, consisting of sixteen and a half acres, is located near Lima, in Middletown township, and there he now resides. The other is a tract of forty acres in Bethel. In political matters he gives a staunch support to the principles of the Republican party, but has never been a seeker for public honors, preferring rather to give his undivided time to his extensive business affairs. He was reared in the Quaker faith, his parents having been members of that religious sect, but he has never identified himself with any church or meeting. Most of his life has been spent in the borough of Media, and he has been prominent in its development and maintenance, always being safely counted upon to indorse and support to the extent of his ability every good work, movement and enterprise.

Mr. Evans has been twice married, his first wife having been Georgie Anna Baldwin, who died on the 26th of September, 1894. She was a daughter of George and Mary Baldwin, of Fairville, Chester county, the former of whom passed away on the 19th of May, 1884, and in November, 1899, his wife joined him in the spirit world. The children born unto Mr. and Mrs. Evans were as follows: Edward Everett, who was born in Upper Providence township July 1, 1878, is still at home; William Nathan Earle, who was born in Media, May 1, 1882, was drowned on the 17th of April, 1896; Thomas Baldwin, who was born in East Media, November 3, 1884, is also at home; Ernest Dudley, born in Media, February 23, 1887, died January 23, 1890; Marian Kent, born in Media, October 26, 1888, died of diphtheria at Lima, Pennsylvania, September 6, 1899; and Rebecca Allen, born in Media, August 16, 1891, died August 23, of the same year. For his second wife Mr. Evans chose Ada Quimby, she being a daughter of John and Jennie Quimby, of New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Four children have been born to bless this union: Anna Q., who was born in Media, October 24, 1898, and died on the 14th of October, 1899; Emma J., who was born May 19, 1900, in Middletown; John C., who was born February 22, 1902, and died on the 23d of July of the same year, and the baby, Roy, born in Middletown June 30, 1903.

WILLIAM H. MILLER, one of the enterprising and prominent citizen of Media, Pennsylvania, was born in 1837, a son of John Miller, who was born in Upper Providence township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in October, 1799.

The early years of John Miller's life were spent in securing an education in the common schools of the neighborhood, and at Westtown Boarding School and in acquiring a thorough knowledge of agricultural pursuits. Upon attaining young manhood he settled on one of the farms belonging to his father and which had been in the possession of the family since 1714. He took a prominent part in the affairs of the town, and was an active and consistent member of the Society of Friends. In October, 1836, Mr. Miller married Hannah Moore, who was born in 1802, a daughter of William and Mary (Massey) Moore, of Springfield township. William Moore, was the son of William and Mary Moore; and William was the son of Philip Moore, who was in turn a son of Charles Moore, the progenitor of the family in this country. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller: William H.; Mary Elizabeth, widow of Capt. Charles H. Roberts; and Isaac Levis Miller. The father of these children died in December, 1855, and his wife passed away December 23, 1890.

William H. Miller, eldest son of John and Hannah Miller, acquired his preliminary education in the common schools of his birth place, and this was supplemented by a thorough course in Haverford College, from which institution he was graduated.

On November 20, 1861, Mr. Miller was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Wistar Pennock, a daughter of Dr. Caspar Wistar and Caroline (Morris) Pennock, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Dr. Pennock was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, a son of George and Sarah (Wistar) Pennock; George Pennock was a son of Joseph and Sarah (Taylor) Pennock; Joseph Pennock was a son of Joseph and Mary (Levis) Pennock, and he was a son of Joseph and Mary (Collett) Pennock. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller, namely: Caroline, and Caspar Wistar, and the last named is a prominent medical practitioner of Delaware county.

EDWARD CAREY was born in Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, October 13, 1820. Charles Carey, his grandfather, was born in Delaware county, and was a well-known farmer in that region. His children were John, who went to Baltimore, and having learned the trade of cabinet maker, remained there and went into business; Elizabeth, and Charles, father of Edward Carey, who assisted his father on the farm until he had an opportunity of taking up the lumber business in Philadelphia. In after years he returned to the old homestead where he spent his last days in farming.

He married Beulah, the daughter of William Tyson, a resident of Cecil county, who had previously lived in Delaware county. Their children were William, who after he married Elizabeth Robinson, went to Clark county, remaining there until his death; Elizabeth, who died when young; Martha, who married George Caldwell; Edward, whom we shall mention later, and Matthew, who was a mute and was educated at the Asylum for Deaf Mutes in Philadelphia, and who married Emma Wade. Mr. and Mrs. Carey both died at the old home in Delaware county, at the age of eighty-two years.

Edward Carey was educated in the public schools of his native county, and on reaching manhood exhibited more of a business spirit than his ancestors had shown. He bought a farm in Upper Providence, Delaware county, and raised produce for the Philadelphia market, delivering it himself by making two journeys each week. In this manner by long and tedious labor, working early and late, he established a flourishing business long before the days of easy and rapid transportation, and during a period of forty years he never failed in his undertaking. He still has a large and well cultivated farm of fifty acres in the vicinity of Media. Although especially adapted for agricultural pursuits, yet he also shows much interest in town matters, and has filled several local offices to the satisfaction of those who elected him. His experiences in a political line date from the days of the United Whig party, of which he was a member, as were most of the Quakers of that time. He has since been a zealous Republican. He was a member of the Society of Friends in his early life.

In 1840 he married Miss Jane Moore, a daugh-

CONCORD MEETING HOUSE, ABOUT 1870.
Rebuilt 1788.

PROVIDENCE MEETING HOUSE, MEDIA.
Rebuilt 1815.

ter of James and Rachel (Worrell) Moore, of Middletown, Delaware county. They had six children, three of whom are dead. The three surviving members of the family are, Mary Amanda, Elwood S., and Martha Jane, who is the wife of the Rev. W. R. Patton, and whose children are Mabel, William and Harold Patton. Mrs. Carey died April 19, 1901, after more than sixty years of married life.

FORREST FLAVILL WILLIAMSON, the son of Thomas Mathews and Elizabeth (Lloyd) Williamson, was born in Lower Providence, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, October 1, 1845.

Thomas Mathews Williamson, the son of George and Rebecca (Johnson) Williamson, was born in Upper Darby, Pennsylvania. In his youth he was apprenticed to a shoemaker, and after serving for the required time and having learned the trade, he became a journeyman for a short period, soon establishing a permanent business of his own as a manufacturer of shoes, to which he added a retail shoe store, conducting both branches of the business as long as he lived. He received and held the appointment of postmaster of Media, Pennsylvania, under the administration of President Buchanan.

He married the daughter of John and Ann (Carler) Lloyd of Chester, Pennsylvania. Their family consisted of the following children: Forrest Flavill; Jesse, who died in infancy; Anna, who died young; Emma, now the widow of Lewis Hartman, and Kate B., the wife of Samuel Kitts. Mr. Williamson and his wife both died some time ago.

Forrest Flavill Williamson was the oldest child of Thomas M. and Elizabeth L. Williamson. He attended the schools of Delaware county, and having finished his studies acquired a thorough knowledge of the drug business, which enabled him to open a drug store in Philadelphia. He removed the business to Bryn Mawr, somewhat later, and continued the drug trade for eighteen years. He also established a cigar business in Media, which he conducted for some time. He was elected to fill many town offices to the satisfaction of his fellow townsmen. He was appointed justice of the peace by the late Governor Hastings of Pennsylvania, April 9, 1898, and was reappointed to the same office in 1899, for a term of five years. He has also served as jury commissioner. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. He is somewhat interested in politics, and belongs to the Republican party.

He was married, March 28, 1895, to Hattie Armstrong Rogers, daughter of Benjamin Rogers, of Upper Providence, Pennsylvania.

EDWIN E. WORRELL. This well known agriculturist and highly esteemed citizen of Delaware county is a worthy representative of one of the pioneer families of the locality. He was born in Radnor, this county, on the 21st of September, 1833, being a son of Lewis L. and Matilda (Eachus) Worrell. The former was born in Haverford, Pennsylvania, and was a son of Maris Worrell, who was a miller at that place, he having followed that occupation throughout his entire business career, and the mill property was owned by the family for many years.

Lewis L. Worrell, the father of our subject, was early in life engaged in the milling business with his father, but later for some time gave his attention to agricultural pursuits, after which he again resumed the milling business. He was united in marriage to Matilda, a daughter of Evan Eachus, who was born on the present site of Westchester, being a son of Enoch Eachus, who removed from the present site of Media to Chester county, Pennsylvania, prior to the war of the Revolution. He lived to the age of ninety years. Unto Lewis and Matilda Worrell were born three children, two of whom died in childhood, and our subject is now the only survivor. For his second wife Lewis Worrell chose Rebecca Pyle, by whom he had three children, namely: J. Leedon, a resident of Philadelphia; Dr. J. Pyle, of Terre Haute, Indiana; and Hibbard E., who is engaged in the real-estate business in Philadelphia. The father was a member of the Society of Friends, and in that religious faith he passed to his final reward when he had reached the age of seventy-five years.

Edwin E. Worrell, the immediate subject of this review, received his education in the schools of Blue Hill, Delaware county. For a period of seven years he served as postmaster of Upper Providence, and during that time was also engaged in the mercantile business. Since that period he has given his attention to agricultural pursuits, being the owner of one hundred and twenty acres of land, and in this vocation his efforts are attended with a high degree of success. His marriage was celebrated in 1865, when Miss Margaret E. Bishop became his wife. She was born on the 17th of October, 1840, and is a daughter of Pratt Bishop, whose birth occurred on the old Bishop homestead in Upper Providence township, Delaware county. His parents were Emory and Jane (Mahn) Bishop, while the former was a son of Thomas Bishop and a grandson of Joseph Bishop, the latter being the first settler of that township. Emory Bishop was a miller by occupation, and as early as 1812 established a rolling mill in Upper Providence, and he was the first man in this country to successfully fuse iron with coal. In this occupation he was succeeded by his son Pratt, who was reared on the old homestead, and was married to Matilda Yarnall, they becoming the parents of nine daughters, as follows: Margaret, who became the wife of Edwin Worrell; Priscilla, the wife of Charles Moore; Debby, who married Passmore Howard, a farmer of Glen Mills, Delaware county; Emma, a successful school teacher; Ellen W., the wife of Frank Yarnall, an agriculturist; Matilda, who was engaged in teaching but is now deceased; Ida, the wife of Edgar Pierce, a farmer of Delaware county; Hannah, the wife of Arthur B. Adams, a prominent educator in Philadelphia; and Alice, the wife of Nelson Strong, who is engaged in the real estate business in Philadelphia. Mr. Bishop served in various township offices, and for many years was a school director. His death occurred when he had reached the seventy-eighth milestone on the journey of life.

Mrs. Worrell began her education in the schools of Lancaster county, and later became a student in the Crozer Theological Seminary of Delaware county. By her marriage to Mr. Worrell she has become the mother of three children, namely: Channing, who is engaged in mercantile pursuits in the store adjoining the home property; David Yarnall, who was born in 1873, and is a farmer at home; he married Etta Longshore, and they have a daughter Emma; and Pratt Bishop, who is an employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in Philadelphia. The eldest son, Channing, married Clara Meridith, and they have one child, Howard. Wherever known Mr. Worrell is held in high regard, and those who know him best are numbered among his warmest friends.

TRIMBLE PRATT, M. D., of Media, Pennsylvania, was born in Goshen, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 27, 1844, and is the son of Enos Lewis and Lydia (Trimble) Pratt. The former, who belonged to one of the old families of Chester county, was educated in the public schools and the select school of West Chester. He began his business life as a clerk and later established himself as a merchant at Rocky Hill, where he remained for a few years. He then went to West Goshen, became a farmer, and devoted himself to agricultural pursuits for the remainder of his life. His wife was a daughter of Isaac Trimble. Mr. and Mrs. Pratt are the parents of the following children: Anna Mary, who married Hubbard B. Garrett; Trimble, mentioned at length hereinafter; Hettie, who became the wife of Jesse P. Thatcher, of West Chester; Orpha E.; Elizabeth T.; E. Randall; and Henry E. Pratt. Mr. Pratt is still living at the age of eighty-five.

Trimble Pratt was educated in the public schools and at Wyers Academy, at West Chester. He took up the study of medicine at Hahnemann's Medical College, Philadelphia, where he graduated in 1870. He settled in Media, where for many years he has been in possession of a large and successful practice. He is a member of the American Institute of Homeopathy, the Pennsylvania State Homeopathic Medical Society, the Medical Society of Chester, Delaware and Montgomery counties, the Delaware County Medical Society, and the Medical Club of Chester, of which he was one of the organizers. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

Dr. Pratt married, in 1889, Elizabeth Lewis, daughter of the late J. Henry Ogden.

JOHN EVANS, deceased, was for many years widely and favorably known in the business circles of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and his success came as the reward of strong purpose, energy and capable management. He was born January 19, 1825, the son of Jacob Evans, and he in turn was the son of William Evans.

John Evans was reared and received a practical education in his native county, and after attaining young manhood devoted all his energies to agricultural pursuits and the vocation of undertaker, meeting with a large degree of success in both these enterprises. He had excellent equipments for conducting the former business after the most approved methods, and was recognized as one of the most progressive and successful farmers of the community. Mr. Evans was prominently affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was a cousin of Mayor William Evans and of Miller Evans, a prominent attorney of Reading, Pennsylvania.

On January 19, 1865, Mr. Evans married Sarah Love, born in 1842, daughter of Charles B. Love, of Rockdale, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Virginia L., wife of Samuel Harrison, an agriculturist; Louis M., engaged in farming pursuits, who married Grace Robinson; Mabel Hinkson, wife of William Allen; Charles L., who married Grace E. Pennell, and is now engaged as a clerk in the Pennsylvania Railroad office; Sara L. (Mrs. Tyler); Harry Hinkson, employed as a clerk in the grocery business at Media, Pennsylvania; Elizabeth L., a school teacher, who devotes much time to music, and Helen Bonner Evans, residing at home. Mr. Evans's death occurred September 17, 1883.

JOHN PLATT. Enterprise, energy and honesty in business, combined with a marked fidelity to every duty of public and private life, are the characteristics that have guided and controlled the career of John Platt, of Media, Pennsylvania, and given him rank among the substantial and valued citizens of Delaware county.

Timothy P. H.

John Platt was born March 18, 1865. He is the adopted son of Casper Rudolph, and was only three years of age when admitted as a member of the Rudolph family, in which he made his home for thirty-five years. He was always treated as their own child, and upon the death of Mr. Rudolph all the money and vast estates in Delaware county owned by that gentleman were deeded to Mr. Platt. He is the owner of a farm of thirty-four acres, devoted to the production of a general line of garden truck, and, his methods being progressive and systematical, he has won fair success in his undertaking. Mr. Platt is a prominent member of Rose Tree Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Platt was united in marriage to Miss Emily Brinton, a daughter of Elwood and Rachel Brinton, of Chester, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Ervin, ten years of age; Albert, nine years of age; John, five years of age, and Donald Platt, two years old. Both Mr. Platt and his wife are earnest and consistent members of the First Baptist church of Media, Pennsylvania.

Elwood Brinton, father of Mrs. Platt, is a descendant of Robert de Brinton, who received a manor in Shropshire, England, from King Henry II, about 1160. His lineal descendants removed to Staffordshire about 1450, and from that county came William Brinton in 1684 and settled in the township since called Birmingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania. As his home in England was near that town, it is supposed that he gave the name to the township. He had a son, William Brinton, who was a Quaker, and had suffered persecution on that account in England. William married Jane Thatcher, and had two sons, Joseph and Edward, who were prominent and active citizens, and from them has descended the numerous Brinton family of this country, among whom have been many men of marked individuality and great force of character. William Brinton, grandfather of Elwood Brinton, was a prominent Quaker of Birmingham township, and kept the church records for many years. He was a farmer by occupation, and his residence, which is still standing, was built directly on the ground made famous by the battle between General Washington and General Howe, which was fought September 11, 1777. He was a Federalist in politics, and died at his home in 1812, at the extreme old age of ninety-two years.

Joseph Brinton, father of Elwood Brinton, was born in 1786, on the old homestead, where his entire life was spent in agricultural pursuits. He was very prosperous in his undertakings, and became the owner of a large amount of property. He died in 1865, in the eighty-first year of his age. His son, Elwood Brinton, served in the capacity of lieutenant in Company C, Independent Battery, during the progress of the Civil war. Three of his brothers also served in the war, Alfred being a member of Company M, One Hundred and Eighty-first Pennsylvania Infantry, and afterward re-enlisting in Company G, Twentieth Cavalry, and participating in the campaign through the valley of Virginia, while David R. P. and Levis Brinton were members of Company A, First Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves. David was severely wounded while on picket duty in Virginia.

SAMUEL CALEY. Samuel Caley (4), deceased, who was for many years a well known and highly respected citizen of Newtown, was a descendant of one of the most ancient and honored families of Delaware county. The progenitor of the family in America was Samuel Caley (1), who came from the Isle of Man, England, and settled at Newtown Square, on a farm which has remained in the possession of his descendants for six generations, in each of which his christian name has been perpetuated. He built a stone house which stood in its original form and dimensions until Samuel Caley (3) was fifteen years old, when it was enlarged, and it was again remodeled when Samuel Caley (4) had reached the same age.

Samuel Caley (1) married Ann Free. Their son, Samuel (2), married Jennis Thomas, in 1768, and of this marriage was born a daughter, Honoriah, who died at the age of fifteen years. The mother died in 1783 and Samuel Caley (2) married, May 1, 1785, Hannah Reece. The children born of this marriage were: 1. Mary, who married Phineas Lewis. 2. Ann, who married Phillip Conner. 3. Samuel.

Samuel Caley (3), youngest child of Samuel (2) and Hannah (Reece) Caley, was born October 1, 1790, and died August 29, 1870. He married, in 1814, Ann Phillips, born March 6, 1794, a daughter of David and Margaret Phillips, of Radnor, and their children were: 1. Samuel (4), further referred to below; 2. Margaret, born January 26, 1817, who married Jonathan Richards, 3, 29, 1838. 3. Hannah, born February 28, 1819, who married Walter W. Green, 12, 14, 1848. 4. Mary, born April 22, 1821, who married Amos Lukens, 10, 9, 1850, and (2d) Thomas P. Baynes, 10, 18, 1883. 5. David P., born February 27, 1824, who married Margaret B. Matlack, 3, 6, 1850. 6. Ann, born October 16, 1826. 7. Sarah G., born January 5, 1829, who married Harvey Gillam, 10, 23, 1862. 8. George P., born July 17, 1831, who married Hannah Lewis, 2, 24, 1859, and (2d) Rachel W. Kelley, 3, 19, 1886. 9. William R., who married Sabina Bishop, 3, 3, 1859.

10. Annie, who married Edward H. Dorland, 6, 15, 1882. 11. Elizabeth, born July 10, 1841. The mother of these children died December 5, 1844, and Samuel Caley (3) then married (1st) Mary Rowland, of Philadelphia, and (2d) Esther Hibberd Pratt, of Marple.

Samuel Caley (4), eldest child of Samuel (3) and Ann Phillips (Caley), was born March 24, 1815, in the Caley homestead, near Newtown Square, Delaware county. He was the fourth of his christian name in lineal descent. He was educated in the common schools in Newtown Square, and in course of time succeeded to the possession of the homestead, where he led the life of a farmer as his ancestors had done, residing in the house in which he had lived since the age of fifteen, when it was rebuilt by his father to replace the old original dwelling. In June, 1886, he sold his farm to the Pennsylvania Hospital Company, and on November 30, of the same year, in the seventy-second year of his age, passed peacefully away, leaving to his family the precious legacy of a useful and well-spent life and an unsullied character. In all the relations of life he was a fine type of the Christian gentleman, who discharged with fidelity every duty devolving upon him, and rendered aid to the suffering and distressed with kindly sympathy and characteristic modesty.

Mr. Caley was married to Miss Lucy Cheyney Hickman, born 2, 20, 1819, a daughter of Cyrus and Phoebe (Matlack) Hickman, of Westtown, Chester county. The following named children were born of this marriage.

1. Cyrus Hickman Caley, born 2, 11, 1841, and who is a farmer in Montgomery county. He married, 3, 16, 1865, Annie L. Beidler, and their children were:

(a) Harry T., born 12, 11, 1865, died 4, 13, 1867; (b) Sarah Lucy, born 5, 11, 1868; (c) Ella B., born 12, 14, 1869, married William Frederick, and their children are Anna and Frances; (d) Laura M., born 12, 6, 1873, married William Moore, and to them were born a child, Cyrus Norman; (e) J. Oswald, born 4, 4, 1876, married Lillian Moore; (f) Jonathan R., born 3, 8, 1878; (g) David Ashmore, born 8, 21, 1880, married Katharine Moyer; (h) Hannah M., born 5, 4, 1883.

2. Samuel Caley (5), a practicing physician at Mt. Holly, New Jersey, born 6, 14, 1844, and died 7, 16, 1901. He married, 3, 25, 1868, Mary H. Yarnall, and their children were: (a) Bertha, born 1, 11, 1869; died 9, 19, 1879; (b) Herman W., born 6, 14, 1873, died 2, 18, 1874; (c) Samuel (6), born 7, 13, 1875, died 10, 25, 1882; (d) M. Frances, born 9, 7, 1882.

3. Anna Phillips Caley born 11, 20, 1848, died 10, 4, 1852.

4. William Hickman Caley born December 27, 1851, a merchant in Boothwyn, Delaware county; he married, 2, 5, 1878, Miriam H. Bowker, who died 1, 25, 1893. They were the parents of a child, Howard B. Caley, born 10, 15, 1884, died 1, 12, 1903. Mr. Caley married 5, 30, 1894, Anna V. Mulford.

5. Elizabeth Hickman Caley, born August 13, 1854.

6. Hannah Reece Caley, born November 18, 1857, who married (June 6, 1889) Empson Haines Garwood, of Newtown Square.

7. Margaret Richards Caley, born November 25, 1860.

In the spring following the death of her husband, Mrs. Lucy C. H. Caley and her three daughters removed to Media. There Miss Elizabeth H. Caley established, in 1887, a kindergarten class which she conducted for four years, and at the end of that time, encouraged by the success which had attended her efforts, in association with her sisters, Mrs. Garwood and Miss Margaret R. Caley, she organized the Caley School, with its more advanced classes, and which has acquired a deservedly wide and favorable reputation. In the summer of 1894, Mrs. Caley built a beautiful and commodious home on North Monroe street, Media, where she resided until her useful and beautiful life closed by death, April 13, 1900. Her remains were interred in the Friends' burial ground at Newtown Square, Pennsylvania, the resting place of the five generations of the Caley ancestors, and in close proximity to the farm where the first Samuel Caley made his home when he came from England, known as the Caley homestead.

ALLEN C. W. MATHUES, of Media, Pennsylvania, where he is recognized as a leading and progressive citizen, was born January 7, 1870, in Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and is a son of the late William F. Mathues.

Mr. Mathues was educated in the public schools of Chelsea and at Media High School. He served an apprenticeship of five years to the printer's trade in the office of The Delaware County American, and subsequently worked as a journeyman for nine years. For nine months he was employed in the office of The Chester News, and for a time worked in the government printing office in Washington city. In 1902, under the administration of President Roosevelt, Mr. Mathues was appointed postmaster of Media. The manner in which he has discharged the duties of this office proves that the confidence reposed in him by the post office department of the United States government was not misplaced, and the esteem and friendship accorded him by his fellow townsmen testify to the regard in which he is held as a citizen and neighbor. In politics he is a Republican, and he is a member of the Young Men's Republican Club, the Media Club, the American Mechanics, and the Media Athletic Association.

Mr. Mathues married, May 5, 1892, Mary, daughter of the late Joseph T. Blythe, of Media. Five children have been born to them: Mabel, Mary Elizabeth, Leroy, Harvey Fronfield, and Allen Randall.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE. This institution, situated near Media, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is the only educational institution of the college grade that is under the care of members of what is sometimes called the Hick-site branch of the religious Society of Friends. Friends were, at an early day, even in the time of George Fox, the founder of their society, much lish their first college took definite form early in the second half of the nineteenth century, and the funds for this purpose were raised by private subscriptions. The institution was to have a stock basis, and a charter was drawn restricting its control and direction to members of the religious Society of Friends. Delaware county was selected for the locality of the new college, as being quite central for the largest bodies of our Friends, the three cities of Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore, with one of our Yearly Meetings in each, furnishing the most of the funds and the largest number of students. Although a stock institution in one sense, the Friends' democratic idea of individual responsibility prevailed in the management, and the votes of the stockholders were individual votes, not being in the least influenced by the amount of stock held.

The site having been selected, commanding a fine view of the valley of the Delaware from interested in the education and proper training of their children; and some of the early Friends, like Penn and Barclay, were themselves well educated men and women for the day in which they lived. But, being an eminently practical people, the Friends, in the early days and even down to our own times, were disposed to give their children only a training in the essentials, and in this country the idea of a college education for them received very little consideration until the middle of the century just passed. The other branch of the society moved in this matter rather earlier, and they have now several colleges under their care in various parts of the United States.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE.

The movement among our Friends to estab-

Philadelphia to Wilmington, the work of erecting the main building, called later Parrish Hall, after the name of the first president, was entered upon in good earnest, and completed and ready for students in the autumn of 1869, about four years having been spent on the building; for Friends, with their usual care and foresight, did the work no faster than the funds were raised, and hence stopped several times for want of funds, and renewed the work only when the funds actually in hand would warrant it. The new building was erected near the center of a tract of land of about three hundred and sixty-five acres, which was purchased for the purpose of giving ample grounds for the various open air exercises and a farm, the produce of which should go toward the supply of the boarding department.

Both sexes were from the first admitted to the college on entire equality, and there was no restriction as to sex in the make up of the several classes. Friends recognized early the entire equality of the sexes in all educational matters. This was on the same principle as that on which their meetings were established, in which it was always understood that the positions of men and woman were equal, both in the exercise of the gift of the ministry and in the management of the business matters of the church.

The family life was organized in the institution at its first opening, in the autumn of 1869, and now for the past thirty-four years the institution has been managed upon that basis with entire success. Men and women have also been on the board of management in equal numbers and with equal powers from the beginning. More and more, in these later years, other educational institutions have been following successfully the good example of Swarthmore in this important respect.

Friends were not generally prepared to patronize a college in 1869. The years that had been spent in the construction of the main college building were devoted to making a home for faculty and students, and furnishing all necessary rooms for college work, for a college of about three hundred students, as was estimated at that time. Further experience and more modern needs have shown that two hundred instead of three hundred would have been a large estimate. At the time of this writing, another large building, at some distance from the first, intended for the accommodation of the young men only, is in process of erection, and is to be called Wharton Hall, after Joseph Wharton, of Philadelphia, one of the large contributors to the college, and the second president its board of managers. The use of the original Parrish Hall is to be given up to the young women and to the various class and lecture rooms of the college, where the young men and young women are to be taught in mixed classes as from the beginning.

The amount spent on Parrish Hall was about two hundred and thirty thousand dollars. The bills and vouchers, as presented by the early and most efficient chairman of our building committee, Hugh B. McIlvain, amounted to about two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, when the formal exercises were held and the keys passed over to Samuel Willets, our largest early contributor and the first president of the board of managers. But a good deal of work was then unfinished, and in the end the full amount for the first building was but little short of a quarter of a million dollars.

The evidence that Friends had not yet turned their attention fully to the idea of a college in 1869 is, that of the one hundred and thirty-eight students who first presented themselves only about twenty were prepared to enter the freshman class, and none could go higher, all the rest having to enter a preparatory department, which continued for a number of years to far outnumber the students of the college classes. But now, for a number of years, the preparatory department has been given up, and the institution, like most of our colleges in good standing, contains college classes only.

Plans were formed early for courses of study in the college leading to the various degrees then conferred, i. e.: Classical, Literary and Scientific, the third being subdivided into the general Scientific and the Engineering Degree. In conferring this last, as part of a college course, Swarthmore was among the pioneers, and that degree was early accepted as equalling in honor and real scholarship any of the rest. Now, after the lapse of a third of a century, Swarthmore is no longer peculiar in this respect.

The college has also, quite recently, under the lead of its present most efficient and successful president, Joseph Swain, adopted the practice now coming into general favor, of conferring the same degree upon all, whatever one of the courses offered has been successfully pursued to the end of the course. The college is, in other words, like other leading educational institutions, recognizing the fact that, to be well educated and scholarly, it is no longer necessary, as in the earlier days, to be well trained in the classical languages, so called, but that modern literature and modern science, in its now varied and complete forms, may all be regarded as an evidence of true culture, and equally worthy of an honorable degree.

The organization of the colleges, and constant conference and comparison with one another, has done much to bring about this result. This began in the New England states, but within the past two decades it has made rapid growth throughout other parts of the country, and Swarthmore was one of the very few colleges that first united under the name of "The College Association of Pennsylvania," which name was later changed to "The College Association of the Middle States and Maryland," and still later, recognizing the necessary bond between the colleges and preparatory schools, the organization assumed its present name of "The Association of the Colleges and Preparatory Schools of the Middle States and Maryland," which, instead of being one of the smallest, as fifteen years ago, is to-day the next to the largest of the educational organizations in the United States.

Another good result has grown out of this movement, and that is the establishment of a general examining board, and the establishing of a definite standard of admission to the various colleges, a certificate from the general examining board admitting a student to any of the colleges which constitute this college union.

Thus, in these modern days, in educational as in other matters, great organizations working in harmony are taking the place of competitive individual effort. In this work, it will be remembered, Swarthmore was active and efficient from the beginning.

In another line of progress which is characteristic of these twentieth century times, Swarthmore can take a leading place. This is not merely the coeducation of the sexes, so called, but combining wisely and well the home life, the family life, with the work of a great educational institution. Attempts to do this are now growing more numerous every year, but nowhere can it be said to have been so successfully done as at Swarthmore, and this has come from constant and vigilant care and oversight, wisely combined with trust and confidence, making the students feel that they are to be in a way self-governed, and that the responsibility of this must be largely shared by them, working in harmony with those entrusted with the management. In this success Swarthmore can well be pointed out as a model for certainly the last two decades. To witness its working in the fine results thus produced, visitors have been with good reason attracted to Swarthmore from both sides of the ocean.

Opening thirty-four years ago as a large preparatory school, with but one small college class, the college has long since outgrown that preliminary stage, and now numbers over two hundred students, with college classes only, and in grade among the colleges of the state it stands unquestionably with the best. Indeed, it compares not at all unfavorably with colleges of our country which reckon their ages in centuries instead of a few decades. Its classes in art, letters, science, engineering, architecture, are all open to inspection; visitors are gladly welcomed at any time, and its religious meetings are so conducted as to be acceptable to all Christian people, and painful or offensive to none; and whoever is interested in the important and far reaching work now progressing in our little Delaware county, within an hour's ride by rail from Philadelphia, are most cordially invited to go and see for themselves, and all will see that the picture is neither exaggerated nor overdrawn. Besides the large grounds, buildings and necessary equipments for the varied departments of college work, all of which holdings are without mortgage, the general endowment fund of the college has now reached the sum of eight hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and it is to be made a million before the commencement of 1905.

The limit of this article prevents any special reference to the individual members of the board or the faculty, whose labors in these few decades have produced the results referred to. It has been suggested that the article close with a list of those who have filled the office of president of the board of managers and president of the college from the opening of the college to the present time. They are as follows:

PRESIDENTS OF THE BOARD OF MANAGERS.

Samuel Willets, of New York, 1869 to 1883.
Joseph Wharton, of Philadelphia, 1863 to the present time.

PRESIDENTS OF THE COLLEGE.

Edward Parrish, 1869 to 1870.
Edward H. Magill, 1870 to 1890.
William Hyde Appleton, 1890 to 1891.
Charles De Garmo, 1891 to 1898.
William W. Birdsall, 1898 to 1902.
Joseph Swain, 1902 to the present time.

EDWARD HICKS MAGILL, LL. D. The conspicuous position which Dr. Magill has occupied for so long a period in the educational world, and his identification with Swarthmore College for so many years, render him a most interesting subject for biographical record. As may be expected, we find in him the ripe scholar, a man of wide culture, enlightened views and trained intellect, a man of pronounced personality and strength, one equally at home in the class room, the library, on the lecture platform and in pleasant social life.

Edward Hicks Magill was born in 1825, in Solebury, Bucks county, Pennsylvania. His early education was obtained in the local schools, and he was fourteen years old when he entered the Friends' Boarding School at Westtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was graduated in 1841. His choice of profession was made very early, as in his sixteenth year he began teaching school, and he continued to teach both in public and private schools during the winter seasons for the following eight years, his summers being occupied in work upon his father's farm. The year 1849-50 was spent at Willistown Seminary, at East Hampton, Massachusetts, in preparation for college, and in the latter year he was able to enter Yale College without a condition. Here he soon made himself noted, as he easily carried off the prize in mathematics, in his freshman year, sharing with Dr. Eastman.

In 1851 a pamphlet issued by Dr. Francis Wayland on a new system of degrees, attracted the young student's attention, and resulted in a change being made from Yale to Brown University. Here, under Dr. Wayland, he took a selected course and in 1852 received from Brown University the degree of Bachelor of Arts. From 1852 to 1859 he served as principal of the classical department of the Providence High School, meantime continuing his studies at Brown and reciting once a day. His examination in 1855 secured him a degree of Master of Arts. In 1859 he was invited to take the sub-mastership in the Boston Latin School under Dr. Francis Gardner, and here Dr. Magill remained until 1867, instructing in Latin, Greek, French and mathematics, preparing students for Harvard University. In 1867 he received from Edward Parrish, of Philadelphia, an urgent invitation to accept the position of principal of the preparatory department of Swarthmore College. The acceptance of this position was deferred until 1869, the intervening years being passed by Dr. Magill in study at the Sorbonne and the University of Paris. Upon his return from abroad in December, 1869, he entered upon his duties at Swarthmore. One year later he was appointed president of that institution, a position for which he was eminently fitted and which he occupied for nineteen years. The duties of the position pressing heavily upon him, and desiring rest and recreation, Dr. Magill resigned in 1889. The board reluctantly accepted it, to take effect one year later, and during the intermediate time he was continued in the position with the same generous salary. This second trip abroad was enjoyed in literary and scientific study. Upon his return, in 1890, he accepted the chair of French in Swarthmore and filled it for the succeeding ten years, resigning at this time, and becoming professor-emeritus. Since that date Dr. Magill has belonged to the college faculty as a lecturer on French literature. Dr. Magill has been honored in many ways. His degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon him by Haverford College, as a recognition of his efforts in the founding of the great institution of learning with which his name must ever be indissolubly associated.

In the world of literature Dr. Magill is also well known. His first text book was issued during the period of his connection with the Latin school. It was an introduction to a French reader, with a volume of prose and poetry. Since entering upon his duties at Swarthmore he has followed with a French grammar, and a series of French readers, in four volumes. A work to which he has given much attention, is a history of Swarthmore College from its founding. A very comprehensive work, which his friends venture to hope is in a measure an autobiography, is now in course of preparation, bearing the title, "Sixty years in the Life of a Teacher." He is also now engaged upon a series of works entitled, "French Dramatic Master Pieces, Translated in English Verse, of the Same Metre as the Originals." These are to include Victor Hugo; Corneille; Racine; Moliere; Rostand; and perhaps others. Hugo's Hernani is now finished, and is expected to appear the coming spring. The series will appear in small, neat volumes, each containing but one work of the author. He has been a contributor to many journals, his essays and literary criticisms meeting with approbation on many sides, from the cultivated classes for which they are intended.

During the past few years Dr. Magill has occupied a very congenial position, being chairman of the National Committees Association on Modern Languages in America, an international correspondence between students and teachers of France, Germany, Italy and Spain. During this period it has been his pleasant privilege to place thousands of students in international correspondence.

As president of Swarthmore College he was recognized as a man of unusual executive ability and exhibited a breadth of culture, and through his fidelity and perseverance did more than any other to place this institution of learning on a par with many which have the halo of years behind them.

JOSEPH SWAIN, M. A., LL. D., president of Swarthmore College, is a native of Indiana, to which state his father, Woolston Swain, born and reared in Pennsylvania, removed when about twenty years of age.

Woolston Swain was destitute of means, but his energy and determination proved an abundant capital. He made his journey on foot as far as Pittsburg, whence he traveled by boat to Cincinnati, and on foot again to Indianapolis. He went to the neighborhood of Pendleton, and there cleared off a tract of land out of the primitive forest. In time, through persistent industry and economy, he had become the owner of an excellent farm and a comfortable home, and lived a most exemplary life, and was recognized as a leader in the community which gathered about him. He married Mary Ann (Thomas) Swain, who was born in the state of New York; daughter of a missionary who had long labored there among the Indians. In her girlhood her parents removed to Indiana, and settled near the place which became the scene of her married life. To the Swain pair were born five children, all of whom were reared in the Society of Friends, to which the parents also adhered.

Their son, Joseph Swain, was born June 16, 1857. He began his education in the district schools of his native village, Pendleton, and then completed a course in the high school, where his studious habits so commended him to his instructors that they urged him to extend his studies into a broader field. He accordingly entered the Indiana State University at Bloomington, in 1879, and was graduated therefrom in 1883, when twenty-six years of age. These dates are of interest, and may prove a stimulus to some to follow after his example—that of entering upon a high scholastic life much later than is usual. While a college student, Mr. Swain devoted special attention to mathematics and the natural sciences, and he had as instructors in these branches, respectively, two eminent professors, Dr. Daniel Kirkwood and Dr. David Starr Jordan, and the potency of their influence in determining his future career can now be discerned. The University at that time conferred no honors, but Mr. Swain led all his class in the credits given him for excellence in his studies. While on intimate terms with his associate students, he persistently declined to attach himself to any of the college fraternities, a notable exception to the rule.

Doctor Swain entered upon the labors of a teacher in the same year in which he was graduated from the University, and in that institution, and from that time to the present his connection with establishments has been uninterrupted, while he has been advanced from time to time to larger fields of usefulness and influence. His first appointment was as an instructor in mathematics. During the following summer vacation he was engaged with the United States Fish Commission, to make collections in the southern states. In the next University term he was made instructor in the natural sciences as well as in mathematics, and at the commencement following, in 1885, the degree of Master of Science was conferred upon him and he was appointed associate professor of mathematics. He was at the same time given a leave of absence for one year to enable him to prosecute advanced studies in the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Upon his return home, in 1886, Dr. Kirkwood had resigned the chair of mathematics, and Dr. Swain was elected to succeed him, and proved a most worthy successor for a period of five years. At the expiration of that time, in 1891, Dr. Jordan was chosen to the presidency of Stanford University, and Dr. Swain to the position of professor of mathematics in the same institution, his appointment being one of the first made.

In 1893, ten years after his graduation from the State University of Indiana, Professor Swain was called to the presidency of that institution as successor to Dr. Coulter, who had resigned. In the same year Wabash College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws. His connection with the University of Indiana was maintained until June, 1902, when he accepted a call to the presidency of Swarthmore College, and entered upon his duties at the beginning of the next ensuing scholastic term. It is not to be questioned that the appointment was most gratifying to him, for it brought him into close relation with a people with whom he was in entire sympathy, and to whose service he felt obligated in a peculiar degree.

Doctor Swain has habitually displayed an unusual power of reaching students and of controlling them, not through the exercise of authority, but by a genial influence which commands their affection and keeps alive their enthusiasm. As was said of him by Dr. David Starr Jordan, President of Stanford University, "he is a man of very large ability, particularly in the management of men and in the training of students. He is a man of most genial disposition and cheery but refined manners. He is in the prime of physical health, and is of heroic stature, standing six feet four inches in height, and weighing two hundred and sixty pounds.

While, as has been shown in this narrative, Dr. Swain has been busily engaged as a teacher in the class room and as the head of a large institution of learning, his effort has been freely extended to other instructional work. During the term of his presidency of the University of Indiana, he delivered educational addresses in every county in the state, and to his labors is to be ascribed in large degree the increased number of students, from 702 to 1,302. His high standing throughout the state is further affirmed by the fact that he was a member of the state board of education during all the period of his presidency of the University of Indiana, and that his reputation was not merely local is shown by his election as president of the higher education section of the National Teachers' Association in 1897. For a number of years he has been a member of the National Convention of Educators.

Doctor Swain has performed a great amount of excellent scientific work in which he has been faithful and thorough rather than brilliant. He has written numerous papers upon scientific topics, several of which have been published in the reports of the Smithsonian Institution, and he has also written many papers and delivered many addresses upon educational and kindred subjects. He has travelled extensively, and has made five journeys to Europe, where he spent one year, four summers, devoting his time to visiting such places and institutions as would enlarge his views and add to his store of knowledge. On three occasions he conducted parties to Europe, and was their genial and interesting guide to many cities and edifices of great historic interest.

Doctor Swain was married, September 22,

1885, to Miss Frances Hannah Morgan, who has proved a most efficient aid to her talented husband. She has shown a deep interest in the young women students of Swarthmore College, and was the organizer of the Woman's League of Indiana University, which has proven a most serviceable adjunct to it, and she was for one year the president of the Indiana Literary Clubs Union.

Mrs. Swain is a daughter of Charles Dayton and Alvira H. (Woods) Morgan, who were married November 13, 1856. Her father was born in Richmond, Indiana, July 31, 1829, son of Nathan Morgan, a farmer and cabinet maker, who settled for life at Richmond, where he died. Charles D. Morgan received a common school education, and then entered upon the study of law in the office of William H. Beckle, and afterwards in that of Judge James Perry, at Richmond, where he was admitted to the bar in 1850. In 1852 he removed to Knightstown, Indiana, where he was engaged in practice until 1865. In that year he became connected with the First National Bank of Knightstown, with which he was connected during the remainder of his life, either in the capacity of cashier or president. He was a Republican in politics, and in 1862 he was elected to the legislature. It was during the Civil war, and the session was an extremely stormy one. A bill was introduced providing for the reorganization of the state militia, and Mr. Morgan was one of thirty-four opponents who left the hall and thus rendered impossible the passage of the measure. His religious associations were with the Society of Friends. For thirty years he was a member of the Brotherhood of Odd Fellows. His wife, Alvira (Woods) Morgan, bore him six children, of whom three died quite young. Those who came to maturity were Frances Hannah, who became the wife of Dr. Swain, Raymond C. and Eric C. Morgan. After the decease of the mother of these children, Mr. Morgan married Rebecca Gray, a daughter of William Gray, of Knightstown, Indiana.

WILLIAM I. HULL, Ph. D., professor of history and political economy in Swarthmore College, is a native of Maryland, born in Baltimore.

His parents were Thomas B. and Mary Dixon Hull. His father, Judge Hull, was born in Milton, Dutchess county, New York. Mrs. Hull was a native of Maryland, and a daughter of Isaac F. Dixon, a prominent citizen of Baltimore. Two of the sons of Judge Hull became identified with Swarthmore College, at Swarthmore, Pennsylvania.

William I. Hull, son of Judge Thomas B. and Mary Dixon Hull, was born in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1868. He graduated from Johns Hopkins University in 1889, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and in 1892 he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the same institution, having meantime (in 1891) pursued special studies in the University of Berlin. In 1892 he was called to the Joseph Wharton Chair of History and Political Economy in Swarthmore College, a position which he has occupied most usefully and creditably to the present time. The group of studies included in his department are history, politics, economics and social science, fitting the student for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, and affording special training for the public service, and for law and journalism. Professor Hull is a man of peculiar magnetic force in the class room, and his department is one of the strongest in the college.

Professor Hull is the author of various literary productions of an important character from an educational standpoint. He made an auspicious beginning as a writer, when he took his degree in philosophy, with his thesis on "The Influence of Maryland Upon the Adoption of the Articles of Confederation," and this was so meritorious that it was published by the Maryland Historical Society. Professor Hull is also joint author of a "Handbook of Sociology," and of a "History of Higher Education in Pennsylvania." He has also written various articles upon historical and economic topics which have found publication in leading magazines and newspapers. He has added to his attainments as a student by two summers passed in travel in Europe, where he visited and studied with discrimination and enthusiasm in various centers of science and art.

Professor Hull was married to Miss Hannah, a daughter of Isaac H. Clothier, one of the most prominent business men of Philadelphia. Professor Hull and family reside in a beautiful home near the campus of Swarthmore College.

MISS SUSAN J. CUNNINGHAM, Sc. D. Edward H. Magill, professor of mathematics and astronomy in Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, is a member of an old Pennsylvania Quaker family, the Hallingsworth, who came over in the time of William Penn, and settled in New Castle county, Delaware, then Penn, and founded by Valentine Hallingsworth, from whom she is a descendant, and probably in the seventh generation. She was born in Pennsylvania March 23, 1842. She began her education in a Friends' School in her native state, and in early life developed a taste and aptitude for educational work. She pursued a special course in Vassar College, and advanced studies at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and Cambridge, England.

Miss Cunningham has been identified with

Jacob Hibberd

Swarthmore College from its opening in 1869, and in all the years from then until the present she has been constantly at her post of duty. She was at first assistant professor of mathematics, and after a few months she was advanced to the full professorship, to which was subsequently attached the department of astronomy. In addition to giving faithful and capable discharge to her duties as a teacher, her personality has been felt in all stages of the growth and development of the institution, to which all her mature years have been devoted. The college is written of at length elsewhere in this work.

JAMES D. HULL, superintendent of Swarthmore college, was born in Baltimore, Maryland, October 9, 1872, a son of Judge T. Burling and Mary Dixon Hull, and a brother of Professor William I. Hull. He was educated at public schools of Baltimore. He entered upon his business career in 1887 with B. F. Starr & Co., mill furnishers of Baltimore.

For the past five years he has occupied the position of confidential clerk to the firm of Brigham Hopkins Company, of Baltimore, the most extensive manufacturers of straw hats in the world.

In 1901, Mr. Hull accepted appointment to the position of superintendent of Swarthmore College. A man of excellent business ability and clear foresight, he also cherishes a sentimental regard for the institution, and he has served with great usefulness in safeguarding its various interests.

Mr. Hull was married in June, 1902, to Miss Mary E. Broomell, a daughter of Seneca P. Broomell, one of the best known authorities in the fertilizer trade.

JACOB HIBBERD, one of the leading agriculturists of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of Josiah and Ann (Bonsall) Hibberd, the former named having been a member of the Society of Friends, emigrated to this country from England, and settled in Pennsylvania soon after William Penn arrived in the province. The family have always been large land owners.

The eldest son of Josiah and Ann was John, who married twice, his first marriage being with Deborah Lewis and the number of children five. His second marriage was with Mary Mendenhall and their children were, Deborah, Lydia, Mary, Jacob, Martha, Amos and Abraham. Jacob was born 3 mo., 10, 1752, and died 9 mo., 13, 1827. He married Sarah Dutton, sister of Thomas Dutton, the centenarian of Aston, Delaware county.

Samuel Hibberd, father of Jacob, was the son of aforesaid Jacob and Sarah. He was born in Middletown township, Delaware county, followed the occupation of a farmer and was one of the early sheriffs of the county. He married Lydia Reece, a daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth (Davis) Reece, whose ancestor was George Smedley, who probably came from Derbyshire, England, about the year 1682. Their children were: Jacob, mentioned at length hereinafter, Jesse, Mary, Elizabeth R., and John. Samuel Hibberd died in 1866, and his wife survived until 1893. Samuel Hibberd was one of a family of eight children, as follows: John, Thomas, Abram, Samuel, Mary, Hannah, Sarah and Susanna Hibberd.

John Hibberd, eldest son of Jacob and Sarah (Dutton) Hibberd, was born in Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, the 4th of 1st mo., 1783. He was married the 16th of 5th mo., 1816, to Amy (Lobb) Thomas, who died in 1836. He again married on the 28th of 11th mo., 1839, Rebecca Maris, daughter of George and Elizabeth Maris, of Pikeland, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who died in 1845. They were the parents of one child, Amy Ann, who died at the age of eight years. John Hibberd was a brush block maker and followed the trade on the farm of his father in Middletown, and also in the adjoining village of Lima, until the 29th of 10 mo., 1817, when he purchased at sheriff's sale, the property now occupied by his nephew, Jacob Hibberd, in Nether Providence. This property was a part of a tract owned by John Worrall, and John Hibberd was to pay an annual interest to Rebecca Meitchener, widow of John Worrall, and at her death the amount was to be paid to Mahlon Parsons and Zebulan Worrall. John Hibberd died 6th of 12th mo., 1857, and his nephew, Jacob Hibberd, came to reside with him the 25th of 3rd mo., of the same year.

Jacob Hibberd, son of Samuel and Lydia (Reece) Hibberd, was born in Middletown township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, December 11, 1829, and was named in memory of his grandfather, Jacob Hibberd. He was educated in the local schools, and his business career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits. In 1858 he came into possession of the farm on which he now resides, this being one of the best cultivated and most productive in this section of the county and the residence upon it was erected more than a century ago. Mr. Hibberd is a man of influence in the county and has held at various times the offices of supervisor, auditor and school director, being the incumbent of the latter named office for twenty consecutive years. In religion he is a Friend, as have been all his ancestors for more than two centuries, and in politics a loyal Republican.

Jacob Hibberd married, December 31, 1863, Sarah R. Worrall, daughter of Richard Thatcher and Mary Ann (Wilson) Worrall, and they are the parents of the following children: Bertha, who resides at home, is a member of the Delaware County Historical Society; John W., who resides at home; and Elwood W., who died at the age of four years.

Sarah R. (Worrall) Hibberd, wife of Jacob Hibberd, was born on the property adjoining the one which was to be her future home, the 3d of 6th mo., 1833, one of five children born to Richard T. and Mary Ann Worrall, namely: Hannah A., Sarah R., Thomas Wilson, Anna Eliza, and John Ellwood. Her childhood was spent in the home of her parents and she attended the Providence Friends' School, adjacent to her home, taught by her father, and later the school of Samuel Martin of Kennett Square, Chester county. The death of the father occurred when the children were small. The home was inherited by her father from his father, John Worrall, who married Hannah Thatcher the 12th of 4th mo., 1780. John was a son of Peter Worrall, a twin, who married Abigail Pyle. Peter was the son of John Worrall, a Friend, who emigrated from Dare, Berkshire, England, in 1682, and finally settled in Edgmont, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His certificate was removed from Parish of Llandewi, Brefi, in Cardiganshire, Wales, 25th of 12 mo., 1708, to Chester Monthly Meeting. His second wife, Sarah (Goodwin) Worrall, a recommended minister of Chester Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends, 24th of 12th mo., 1723, was the mother of Peter Worrall, aforementioned. On the maternal side Sarah R. Hibberd is descended from Thomas Stackhouse, Jr., who was a resident of Pennsylvania in 1682. He is supposed to have come from the village of Stackhouse, near Settle, Yorkshire, England. He represented Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in the Colonial Assembly of the Province from 1711 to 1715. He married 1st of 7th mo., 1688, at Middletown Meeting, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, Grace Heaton, daughter of Robert and Alice Heaton. Their daughter, Grace Stackhouse, married David Wilson, the 31st of 1st mo., 1719. Among their children was a son, Jonathan Wilson, whose wife, Sarah Wilson, bore him a son, Thomas Wilson, who married Ann Neeld, daughter of Eli and Martha (Brelsford) Neeld, of Bucks county, Pennsylvania. They were the parents of Mary Ann Wilson, who married Richard Thatcher Worrall, and this couple were the parents of Sarah R. Hibberd.

JACOB P. STRIEBY, M. D., of Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, is of German extraction, and the original form of the family name is supposed to have been Streby. His great-grandfather in the paternal line was probably a resident of Philadelphia, whence he removed to Northampton county, Pennsylvania, where Jacob Strieby, son of him last named, was probably born, and where he certainly lived. Jacob Strieby removed to Lycoming county about 1820 or soon thereafter, when that region was an utter wilderness. He was a cooper by trade, but he bought and cleared off a farm tract near Williamsport. He was a Lutheran in religion, and was supposedly a Democrat in politics. He married Sarah Keiser, daughter of a tanner who lived at or near Easton. Their children were Jonas, Jesse, Joseph, Catherine, William and Sarah.

Joseph, third child and son in the family last named, was born in 1817, in Upper Mount Bethel township, Northampton county. By occupation he was a farmer. His education was limited, on account of poor school facilities in those pioneer days, but he was a man of native ability, as was attested by his being called to various township offices. He married Margaret Follmer, who was born in Loyalsock township, Lycoming county, in 1819. Her father was Jonathan Follmer, who was probably born near Milton, in Northumberland county. Her mother was Mary Buser, or Bucer, daughter of Bernard Bucer, who emigrated from Switzerland when Mary was about twelve years old. One of the same family name (Bucer), according to a church history, was a prominent Reformed Minister who about 1530 was sent to Rome on a special mission. The children of Joseph and Margaret (Follmer) Strieby were: A. Lewis, Jacob Peter, Jonathan Follmer, Mary Rebecca, Joseph Welker and Catherine.

Jacob P. Strieby, second son and child in the family last named, was born April 9, 1848, in Loyalsock township, Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, about a half-mile from Williamsport. He was well educated for those days, having supplemented the common school instruction with advanced instruction in the Lycoming Normal School. He performed farm labor until he was of age, and for eight years thereafter he was a teacher in the public schools. In that calling he acquitted himself most creditably, and he had every encouragement to continue it, but he had contemplated the practice of medicine, and in 1875 he began a course of study under the preceptorship of Dr. Crawford, of Williamsport. After a year necessity obliged him to turn aside to other pursuits, and he bought an interest in a small tannery near Mortonsville. In 1878 he disposed of that venture and purchased a large farm near Martinsburg, in West Virginia. This he sold soon afterward, and in 1881 he bought a flouring mill near Newville, Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, which he sold in 1883. Meantime he had been engaged in the sale of farm implements, fertilizers, etc., and he now bought an interest in a planing mill in Williamsport. This business proved unfortunate, resulting in his entire loss of means, and he again returned to the sale of implements, etc., with C. F. Follmer & Co., of Williamsport. In 1886 he returned to teaching, and in 1888 he was again enabled to take up the study of medicine, under the instruction of Dr. C. B. Kinkle, of Mortonville. He then matriculated in the Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1891. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession in Philadelphia, at No. 2606 Montgomery avenue, whence he removed, in October following, to No. 1305 South Sixth street. In 1895 he located in Swarthmore, where he has established himself in an excellent practice. It is not often that a professional man makes so late a beginning in life, for he was forty-three years of age when he assumed the active duties of a physician. But it is to be remembered that he made his first medical studies in his youth, and he never ceased to pursue such reading as would be to his advantage when he should be able to resume them, and when he returned to his text books it was in one of the very first medical colleges in the land, where he was, in his mature years, afforded the most perfect instructional advantages known to the profession. And, again, he came from college with an enthusiasm for professional knowledge which has served to keep him continually abreast with all new discoveries and methods.

In the year of his coming to Swarthmore, Dr. Strieby was made secretary of the Swarthmore Board of Health, a position which he has occupied to the present time, and he is also medical examiner for the Fidelity Mutual Insurance Company, and the Manhattan Insurance Company. He was never a candidate for any local or political office, but has been called by appointment to the position of township auditor for a term of two years. He is an independent Democrat in politics. In religion he is a Baptist, and he yet retains his membership in the Olivet church, at Sixth and Federal streets, Philadelphia, in which he was a deacon previous to his removal to Swarthmore.

Dr. Strieby was married in 1878 to Mary Hepburn Bear, a daughter of John J. and Emily (Hepburn) Bear, of Montgomery, Pennsylvania. Her death occurred at Newville, May 2, 1882. May 31, 1894, Dr. Strieby was married, in Philadelphia, to Miss Emily Thomas Staunton, a native of that city, born January 1, 1865, and who received her education in the Philadelphia high school. She was of excellent family, a daughter of Col. Richard M. and Ellen Prouty (Curry) Staunton. Colonel Staunton was a native of Philadelphia, and was a man of great prominence in his day. He was a hatter by trade, but was soon called into the customs service, first in the cashier's department and then as an inspector. As a member of the Black Hussars he served under General Patterson during the riots of 1844. In 1856 he was made a lieutenant-colonel on the staff of Governor Pollock, which position he resigned to command a detachment of custom house employes which marched under Colonel Thomas to the defense of the southern border of the state against General Lee's invasion in 1863. He afterwards served in municipal positions, and was employed in the mint during the administration of President Harrison. He was a prominent member of various military and civic societies. His parents were Richard and Mary (DeGroot) Staunton, the former a native of Scotland and the latter of France, a granddaughter of a French ambassador bearing her maiden family name. Colonel Staunton's wife was the daughter of George and Margaret (Johnson) Curry. Her father was born in 1795, probably in England, and died in 1829 in Philadelphia; during the war of 1812 he was (the captain being ill) first lieutenant commanding the Washington Blues of Philadelphia in the engagement with the British which preceded the capture of Washington; his father, Christopher Curry, came from England, died in Philadelphia, and he was buried in Christ church graveyard in that city. Margaret Johnson, wife of George Curry, was born in England in 1796.

The children of Dr. Jacob P. and Emily Thomas (Staunton) Strieby are Malcolm Staunton Strieby, born Sunday, September 26, 1897, and Emily May Strieby, born Sunday, July 22, 1900.

ELIZABETH JANE HOFFMAN. Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Hoffman, of Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, belongs to a branch of the Hood family which has been for a considerable period, resident in this country. Samuel Hood, who was born December 26, 1826, in Washington county, Pennsylvania, married, April 14, 1859, Mary Jane McBride, born October 10, 1838, in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, and they were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth Jane, mentioned hereinafter; William McBride, born February 26, 1860, in Washington county, Pennsylvania, now living with his sister, Elizabeth Jane; James Patterson, born August 30, 1865, in Washington county, Pennsylvania, died July 4, 1884, at Swarthmore, Delaware county, Pennsylvania; and Margaret Getty, born October 25, 1866, in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, died August 4, 1867, in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Hood, the father of these children, died September 18, 1887, and his wife passed away February 8, 1894. They were both residents of Swarthmore, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

Elizabeth Jane Hood, daughter of Samuel and Mary Jane (McBride) Hood, was born June 8, 1863, in Washington county, Pennsylvania, and was married to John Henry Hoffman, born September 20, 1865, in Maryland, son of Daniel and Elizabeth Hoffman, of that state. The following children were born to them: William Daniel, who was born December 26, 1891, and is receiving his education at the Swarthmore School; and Earl Louis, born March 24, 1895, died April 7, 1895.

HORACE P. GREEN. While it is an established fact that the Greens in America are of English ancestry, but little is definitely known of their early history in that country. It is certain, however, that the Green family in England (presumably the ancestors of the early settlers in America) were of social prominence and wealth. This is apparent from the following letter which appeared in The Nation, published in Boston in October, 1888:

To the Editor of The Nation:

Sir—I may perhaps be trespassing on your space if I ask you to publish the following "Simple Tale."

I happen to be a rector of the parish of Green's Norton, Northamptonshire, England. In the parish church are several mutilated tombs belonging to the family of "Green," who for six generations between the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries were the lords of this manor. The first Sir Henry Green was Lord Chief Justice of England about the end of the 13th century; the last Sir Thomas Green was the father of Maud Green, who married Sir Thomas Parr, of Kendal, Westmoreland, and was mother of Kate Parr, Queen of England by marriage with Henry VIII.

The only information I can arrive at by inquiry from the oldest inhabitant of this parish about the descendants of the Green family is that many years ago a gentleman from America (my informant mentions Boston doubtfully) came to this church, presumably to inspect the beautiful tombs and brasses belonging to the Green family.

We are about to undertake the re-arrangement of the church. I write to you to know if it is within the limits of your rules as editor to allow this letter to appear in your columns, as perhaps some member of the family of Green would wish to have a voice in the disposal of the effigies which still remain as witnesses of their wealth and position.

I may only add that I am "a constant reader" of your paper, and an occasional contributor thereto.

Yours sincerely,

S. BEAL, D. C. L.

The Rectory, Green's Norton, Towchester, England, September 29, 1888.

In the "Book of Arrivals" in the Pennsylvania Historical Society of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, there is contained this entry:

"The ship 'Delaware,' from Bristol, in Old England, John Moore, Commander, arrived here the 11th of the 5th mo., 1686. Thomas Green, husbandman, and Margaret, his wife, Thomas and John Green, his sons, Mary Guest, his servant, for seven years to come the third day of May, 1686. Richard Moore, Brickmaker, and Mary, his wife, and Mary, his daughter."

The above named Thomas Green (1) and Margaret, his wife, are believed to be the pioneers of the Green family in America, and they appear to have settled upon a tract of four hundred acres in Concord township, purchased 8th mo., 6th, 1691. Richard Moore and Mary, his wife, the latter being the daughter of Thomas Green, appear to have settled in Radnor township about the same time.

The second son, Thomas Green (2), the ancestor of the subject of this sketch, died in 1713, and his will, dated February 17, 1712, is on file at Philadelphia. He mentions his children, Thomas, John, Robert, Henry, Edward, Samuel, Abel, Margaret and Sarah. We know but little of him otherwise, excepting that his wife's name was Sarah, and that the "History of Chester County" says she obtained a warrant for twenty-five acres of land, June 24, 1713.

Abel (3), the son of the last named Thomas Green (2), and the ancestor of the subject of this sketch, was married to Jane Williamson (born 6 mo., 30, 1725, died November 17, 1797), who had been previously married to Robert Regester, 9 mo., 9, 1743, and the issue of this marriage were: 1. Abigail, born May 15, 1755. 2 and 3. Margaret and Esther, twins, born January 10, 1757, and died, respectively, 2, 16, 1815, and 3, 27, 1812. Margaret married Isaac Burns, and Esther married Daniel Megowen. 4. Abel, born October 10, 1759, died 1, 31, 1829; he married Prudence Sidwell. 5. Robert, born December 4, 1761, died 10, 20, 1841; he married Hannah Williamson. 6. George, born November 14, 1763, died 10, 9, 1844; he married Priscilla Smedley, and (second) Mary Cheney. 7. Jane, born November 27, 1765, died 6, 25, 1835; she married Edward Baker. 8. Sarah, born December 30, 1767; she married Caleb Smedley.

Horace P. Green.

Abel Green (3), by deed of December 28 and 29, 1735, purchased 276 $\frac{3}{4}$ acres of land in Thornbury township, being a part of 500 acres formerly of William Bostock; of this he sold 100 acres to Stephen Ogden, January 30, 1736. By deed dated February 9, 1742, he purchased from Thomas Williamson 109 acres and 115 perches in Edgmont, where he continued to live until the time of his death in 1788. He was not in membership with the Friends, though he probably attended their meetings. He was buried in Middletown Friends' Graveyard, December 3, 1788.

George Green (4), son of Abel (3), and ancestor of the subject of this sketch, was twice married. His first wife was Priscilla Smedley, born October 2, 1763, died March 5, 1797, and the issue of this marriage was as follows: 1. Smedley Green, born May 30, 1787, died September 8, 1861; 2. Abel Green, born January 22, 1789, died April 24, 1828; 3. Hannah Green (afterwards Bishop), born October 2, 1790, died October 7, 1859; 4. George Green, born March 7, 1793, died June 16, 1843; 5. Sally Green (afterwards Sill), born September 13, 1795, died December 26, 1860.

The second wife of George Green (4) was Mary Cheney, born September 6, 1772, and died June 21, 1852. The issue of this marriage was as follows: 1. Cheney Green, born February 15, 1798, died July 18, 1837; 2. Edith C. Green, born July 7, 1799, died May 10, 1882; 3. John Green, born July 16, 1801, died September 10, 1875; 4. Isaac Green, born August 11, 1804, died July 18, 1877; 5. Jesse Green, born October 11, 1806, died May 6, 1873; 6. Hiram Green, born August 11, 1809, died January 18, 1858; 7. Mary Ann Green, born October 5, 1813, died May 31, 1890.

George Green was a prominent character in the early history of Delaware county, was a thrifty, prosperous farmer, and acquired a large fortune for men of that day, being the owner of some nine or ten farms in Delaware and Chester counties at the time of his death. He was for several years one of the county commissioners, and at a time when fitness, honesty and business capacity were the qualities that fixed the standard for selection. He died October 9, 1844, aged eighty-one years. He lived in Edgmont his entire life.

Isaac Green (5), son of George (4) and Mary (Cheney) Green, married Phoebe H. Plankinton, the daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Robbins) Plankinton, January 8, 1835. These were the parents of the subject of this sketch.

Horace Plankinton Green (6), of Media, was born in Edgmont township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1854. He received his early education in the public schools, and pursued advanced studies in the West Chester State Normal School and the Maplewood Institute at Concordville, Pennsylvania. In 1877 he entered upon the study of law under the masterly preceptorship of Hon. John M. Broomall, of Media, and two years later he passed a creditable examination and was admitted to the bar of Delaware county in June, 1879, and at once entered upon the practice of his profession. In 1883 he formed a copartnership with V. Gilpin Robinson, Esq., and the firm of Robinson & Green enjoyed a large and lucrative practice until 1892, when the partnership was dissolved, each member of the firm opening a separate office. For many years past that of Mr. Green has been on the corner of South avenue and Front street, opposite the court house.

During the past twenty-four years that Mr. Green has followed his profession, he has been known and recognized as one of the most capable and trustworthy members of the bar, so dignifying his calling that from the first he has enjoyed the patronage of the more conservative element who prefer to have their differences settled rather than to engage in litigation. He has achieved great success in the conduct of many important cases, involving perplexing law points, in settlement of which he avoided the vexations and great expense attendant upon long drawn out court proceedings. In the course of his practice Mr. Green has acted as guardian, executor, administrator, trustee and assignee of many large estates and other valuable properties. In this important department of his profession, which, while not demanding the aggressiveness or oratorical arts of the jury pleader, requires a thorough knowledge of the common and statute laws, and the high qualities of industry and clearness of discernment in the analysis and preparation of all descriptions of legal papers conferring or affecting title or contract rights, and in his unswerving fidelity to the interests of his clients, Mr. Green has won an enviable reputation. In no case were his tactful abilities more manifest than in the noted Robinson will case, in which he was counsel for the contestants. This was one of the most important and bitterly contested civil cases ever tried in the county, consuming five weeks in trial, and resulting in a victory for the clients of Mr. Green, with whom was associated his former partner, V. Gilpin Robinson, Esq.

During the twenty-six years of his residence in Media, Mr. Green has not only been industrious in his profession, but he has been an earnest and intelligent factor in promoting the interests of the town, and has contributed largely to its development and prosperity during that period. For six years he was a member of the borough council, a part of which time he was president of that body. As a member he was an earnest advocate of all meritorious measures, and as a presiding officer, he was fair and impartial and a skillful parliamentarian. For the past six years he has been a member of the Media Board of Education and is now president of that body. An earnest friend of education, he has afforded substantial aid to the schools, and their present advanced condition is in no small degree due to his efforts. He was one of the organizers of the Charter National Bank, in which he was a director and vice-president until the time of his resignation. He was also one of the organizers of the Media Title and Trust Company, and for several years past he has been a director and vice-president of that corporation. He is also a director and an officer in several other important financial institutions. He is a prominent member of the Masonic order, and is a past master of George W. Bartram Lodge, No. 298, F. A. M., and past high priest of Media Chapter, No. 234, R. A. M. In all his personal relations he is courteous and warm-hearted, and holds a firm place in the affections of his fellow-citizens, in every walk of life.

Mr. Green was married, October 7, 1880, to Miss Ida Virginia, daughter of John and Mary P. Beatty, of Chester township. One child of this union, Ernest LeRoy Green, was born August 4, 1881.

JAMES C. JACKSON has reached the eighty-seventh milestone on life's journey, and represents one of the distinguished families of this section of the country. He was born July 13, 1816, in Hockessin township, New Castle county, Delaware. Hockessin is an Indian name, signifying a good bark hill. The ancestry of the family can be traced back to Isaac Jackson, who was born in Ballymore, in the county of Kildare, Ireland, January 13, 1715. Desiring to make a home in the new world, he crossed the Atlantic to America and settled upon a farm in West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania. There was a remarkable coincidence connected with this settlement, for, while upon the voyage, Mr. Jackson dreamed of the place in which he located, seeing it so clearly that when he came to the locality he was able to identify the farm with the place of his dreams. He had come to America with two brothers, one of whom took up his abode in New York, the other in South Carolina, but it is from the Pennsylvania branch of the family that our subject is descended. The ancestral history also shows connection with the family to which Andrew and "Stonewall" Jackson belonged. The grandfather of our subject bore the name of James Jackson, while the father was Thomas Jackson, and was born in Hockessin, in the state of Delaware, and from his father inherited a farm of two hundred acres of valuable land.

James C. Jackson obtained his early education in the township in which his birth occurred, attending the subscription schools conducted by the Society of Friends and later becoming a student in the Westtown Boarding School, from which he was graduated on the completion of the regular course. A man of strong mentality and scholarly attainments, after completing his own education he continued in the Westtown Boarding School as a teacher for a number of years. From there he went to the home of his father in Hockessin, Delaware, and assisted in the work of the farm and in caring for the fruit trees, for in those days fruit growing in Delaware was considered an art. There he remained for several years.

It was in 1844 that James C. Jackson was united in marriage to Miss Amelia Spencer, a daughter of Jesse Spencer of Gwynedd township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Their daughter, Alice W. Jackson, who was born July 12, 1863, pursued her education in the preparatory school in Swarthmore and in Swarthmore College, where she was graduated with the class of 1883 and she is now a teacher in A. H. Tomlinson's Preparatory School of Swarthmore.

JOHN G. JACKSON. One of the noble figures of the history of Wilmington, Delaware, was a brother of James C. Jackson, John G. Jackson, who won distinction as an astronomer, civil engineer and surveyor. He passed away at his home, Sunset Cottage, in Hockessin, March 12, 1898, at the age of eighty years. In "The Times" of Philadelphia appeared the following record of his life:

"John G. Jackson, surveyor, civil engineer and astronomer, has occupied a unique position in the community for more than a quarter of a century. Born in New Castle county on September 8, 1818, he was descended from English ancestry of much distinction and integrity, his parents being Thomas and Jane Jackson. The latter was a daughter of John Griffith, and was of almost pure Welsh ancestry, descending directly from Llewellyn Griffith, said to have been one of the last native princes of Wales and occupying a castle on the coast of Cardiganshire.

"Mr. Jackson, while not a devout follower of the tenets of Fox, still admired the simplicity of the lives of the Quakers, together with their integrity of character, sterling worth and sincerity of purpose. According to his own admission, his ambition lay in his desire to be known as a member of the 'great human brotherhood,' a searcher after truth in all its highest and purest manifestations. He was a Spiritualist in every sense of the word, and advocated seeking salvation by acquiring a knowledge of and yielding due obedience to the divine and inexorable laws of one's being, rather than worshipping according to the teachings of what he regarded as inventions of a more 'barbarous age' than his.

"After an early education in the public schools, he attended the Westtown Boarding School, under the tuition of Enoch Lewis, a noted mathematician and philosopher of his time. Young Jackson first became a teacher and then a lecturer on astronomy and other branches of natural philosophy. Finally, about 1838, with the aid of the best tables of the planet Venus then accessible, he made the needful calculations for the projection of the transit of that planet across the sun's disc to occur in 1882, forty-five years thereafter. This had last been observed in the United States by David Rittenhouse in 1769.

"Relinquishing his position at Westtown, owing to failing health, young Jackson then took up the business of a surveyor with Thomas Williamson, a Philadelphia conveyancer. He followed this occupation for a number of years, during which time he made many important surveys, among which was the survey for the Delaware & Western Railroad, having been elected a director and afterwards chief engineer of the road. He assisted in its organization with the late Joshua T. Heald.

"He served successively as notary public, justice of the peace, representative to the general assembly and state senator and when in the fall of 1878 an effort was made to organize the Greenback party in Delaware, he consented to allow his name to be placed on the ticket for representative in Congress. There being no Republican candidate in the field that year he received one-fourth of the vote of the state. Had he consented to make an active canvass his friends admit that he might have been elected to the office.

"Though retired from active life for several years prior to his death, Mr. John G. Jackson has spent much of his time in his astronomical observations. In 1882 he observed the transit of Venus, co-operating with other astronomers and being assisted by Professor Harkness, of the Washington Naval Observatory, who was then president of the transit commission. He has also written a number of poems, has contributed to current literature, and among his papers are prose writings upon the topics of the day."

EDWIN J. DURNALL, who resides at Swarthmore, Delaware county, was born in East Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, on the 1st of October, 1847. His father, Joseph Durnall, was also a native of that locality, born in 1813, and after arriving at years of maturity he wedded Sarah Bailey, whose birth occurred in 1818, and who was a daughter of Reuben Bailey. In the maternal line Mr. Durnall is descended from Sarah P. Bailey, a descendant of John Jackson, the founder of that family, and he is also a descendant of John Bartram. Among their children was Edwin J. Durnall, who was reared under the parental roof and pursued his education in the public schools. He engaged in teaching school for a number of years, following that profession successfully in Chester county, but on account of ill health he was obliged to abandon the duties of the school room and take up a work that would give him outdoor exercise. Therefore, he turned his attention to farming which he followed for some time at East Goshen, Chester county. For thirteen years he devoted his labors to the improvement of his property there and then accepted the position of superintendent of the farm connected with the Swarthmore College. He wedded Sydney Cox, a daughter of Caleb H. and Mary H. Cox of Chester county.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Durnall have been born the following children: Gertrude, who became the wife of Joseph Lewis Baldwin and they are the parents of one child, Edwin Durnall Baldwin, aged four years; J. Dellwyn, who, after leaving the public schools, spent two years in a preparatory school and is now engaged in the hardware business in Philadelphia and is twenty-five years of age; Charles R., twenty-three years of age, is living at home, having spent two years in a preparatory school and two years in college; Walter, who is twenty-one years of age and who spent two years in a preparatory school, is now employed in the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Philadelphia; Pauline M., a maiden of twelve summers, is attending the high school at Swarthmore.

Mr. Durnall holds high rank in the Masonic fraternity and is a worthy exemplar of the craft, being very familiar with its tenets and teachings and in his life following closely its principles of brotherly kindness and helpfulness. He is also connected with the Odd Fellows Society; and is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry and master of Ponomo Grange, of Chester and Delaware counties.

FRANCIS LOWNES. Upon the old family homestead of his father, George B. Lownes, the subject of this review was born July 6, 1863, and there the days of his boyhood and youth were passed, his time being largely devoted to the acquirement of an education. At the age of six years he entered the public schools of Springfield township, where he remained a student until 1874. In that year he entered the Friends' Select School in Philadelphia, where he remained until 1879. Through the succeeding five years he worked upon the home farm, assisting his father in the labors of fields and meadows and in 1895 he built a palatial residence of stone upon a tract of land adjoining his father's farm in Springfield township, Delaware county, and here he engaged in the milk business, supplying the trade of Swarthmore. In the year 1902, however, he removed to that village, where he continued in the dairy business, establishing a trade of his own there.

In 1896 Mr. Lownes was united in marriage to Miss Eliza Florence Rogers, the wedding being celebrated on the 21st of October of that year. She is a daughter of John S. Rogers, and by her marriage has become the mother of two children. The elder, Sarah Margaret, was born June 5, 1898, and the son, John Rogers, on May 24, 1899. Mr. Lownes is a member of the Society of Friends, while his wife belongs to the Presbyterian church of Swarthmore. Both are well known in Delaware county, where they have always resided, and Mr. Lownes is regarded as a representative business man whose energy and enterprise have gained for him a handsome competence.

◆◆◆

SWARTHMORE PREPARATORY SCHOOL. Early in the year 1891 the possibility of a good private school at Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, was conceived by Professor Arthur H. Tomlinson, and in September, 1892, Swarthmore

Grammar School was founded. It was established strictly as a home school where children might receive careful attention and would be urged to develop those traits of character so much admired in our best citizens.

Two cottages were secured for the boarding department, and a frame school house for recitations was erected. The school opened with a faculty of five teachers, which since has grown to fourteen teachers and three matrons. The number of students enrolled has grown rapidly, increasing from forty in the fall of the first year to over one hundred and eighty in the fall of the tenth year.

As the school grew in numbers each year, new buildings and improvements were needed. In the spring of 1896 the first steps were taken towards a change of site, and the entire school now stands about one square from the station. Since the erection of the first building here, a recitation hall, two dormitories—one for boys and one for girls—and a gymnasium have been built, and the athletic grounds greatly enlarged and improved by the addition of a fine quarter-mile running track and a foot ball field. The grounds now have a frontage on Chester Road of over four hundred feet, and a depth of six hundred and fifty feet. All the buildings are of gray stone, and present a fine appearance.

Three departments have been established—primary, intermediate and academic. The students are prepared to enter the leading colleges Gymnasium.

Recitation Hall.

Principal's Cottage.

Vice-Principal's Cottage.

VIEW FROM GIRLS' CAMPUS.

of the east, and graduates have already entered Cornell, Princeton, the University of Pennsylvania, and Swarthmore, where they have brought credit to themselves and school.

The name of the school caused many to mistake its real character, and it was finally decided to change the name to Swarthmore Preparatory School.

In the school life are found exercises such as are necessary to well developed preparatory courses. A literary society, debating club, chess club, camera club and school paper, are all in flourishing condition and keep the students well informed in current events.

Athletics and gymnasium work are under the care of skillful directors, and care is taken to see that these are carried on strictly in accordance with the rules of health, and honor of both school and individual.

The faculty at present is as follows: Principal—Arthur H. Tomlinson, geometry; vice principals—Hanna T. Mitchell, reading and grammar; Samuel C. Palmer, algebra and Greek; instructors—Alice W. Jackson, English; Harold C. Sprague, physics and chemistry; Mary L. Haines, drawing and painting; Amy A. Way, primary; Mary A. Wollaston, intermediate and physical culture for girls; Ethel Beardsley, Latin and French; Charles O. Appleman, physical director for boys; E. R. B. Willis, Latin; Amos M. Cassel, arithmetic; Eleanor M. Hartman, music; Julia Ball, music, French and German; Ralph J. Herkimer, superintendent.

ARTHUR HIBBS TOMLINSON. Prof. Arthur H. Tomlinson, founder and to the present time principal of the Swarthmore Preparatory School, at Swarthmore, and widely known as a successful educator, comes from an excellent English family which made an early settlement in New Jersey, where his paternal grandfather, Benjamin P. Tomlinson, was born and reared.

In his young manhood, Benjamin P. Tomlinson removed to Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he passed a long and useful life, and where he died in 1857, aged seventy years. He was a farmer and miller by occupation, and a Quaker in religion. While he took little interest in political affairs, he was an ardent opponent of slavery. His wife was Hannah Knowles, who bore him three sons and as many daughters.

Robert Knowles Tomlinson, a son of the parents named, was born in 1831, in Bucks county, where has been his home during his entire life. He began his education in the common schools, and afterwards attended an academy at Westtown and Benjamin Hallowell's excellent school at Alexandria. He engaged in farming, which he pursued with abundant success. A man of broad intelligence and well poised mind, he exerted a wide influence through his writings in local and class journals upon agricultural, educational and economic questions. He is a member of the Hicksite branch of the Society of Friends, and a Prohibitionist in politics. He married, in 1855, Mary Hibbs, of a well known Quaker family, and a woman whose life reflected all the Christian graces. She died in 1890, at the age of fifty-seven years. She was the mother of seven children—Arthur H., Edith, Walter H., Alvan H., Ernest H., Benjamin P. and William H. Tomlinson.

Arthur H. Tomlinson, eldest child in the family named, was born January 20, 1856, in Upper Makefield township, Bucks county, was reared upon the paternal farm and acquired an excellent English education in the public schools. When nineteen years old he was competent to teach, and for two years following he had charge of a school. He had developed a special aptitude for educational work, and he now devoted his effort to qualifying himself for more advanced effort. He took a course in the State Normal School at West Chester, and was graduated from its elementary department in 1877. He then went to Cecil county, Maryland, where he opened a Friends' school which he conducted with marked success for four years. Returning to his native state, he opened a Friends' select school at Oxford, which he conducted for two years. He was meantime pursuing his studies, and in 1883 was graduated from the Scientific Department of the West Chester State Normal School. Immediately afterwards he took a post graduate course in the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, and it was his distinction at entrance to be one of a remarkably small number admitted on a normal school diploma. In 1884 he became principal of the Friends' Academy at Locust Valley, New York, which he conducted with gratifying success for a period of three years and until 1887, when he was called to Jenkintown, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, to establish a Friends' boarding school. He opened this school under the most favorable auspices, his reputation as an educator being well known in the neighborhood, and enlisting the hearty co-operation of the people and the interest of their children. This school Prof. Tomlinson conducted with entire success and added credit to himself for a period of five years, when (in 1892) he resigned.

His retirement from the school at Jenkintown was an event deeply regretted by the people of that village. But Professor Tomlinson had become impressed with the great necessity for an adequate preparatory school at Swarthmore which should afford proper preparation to young men and women desiring to enter the college there. His efforts were warmly seconded by the people into whose midst he came, and he was enabled to open the Swarthmore Grammar School on September 12 of the same year. To this beneficent institution, now known as the Swarthmore Preparatory School, which had its inception in him, he has given his conscientious and intelligent effort to the present time. From a small beginning it has grown to important proportions, and its future is bright with promise. The teaching faculty is headed by Professor Tomlinson, an experienced and successful educator, who has devoted the best years of life to the school providing for the community an agency for good which is of incalculable worth.

Professor Tomlinson was married, August 6, 1886, to Miss Emma Pyle, a daughter of William H. Pyle, of West Chester. Four children have been born of this marriage: Willard, Helen, Albert H., and Dorothy.

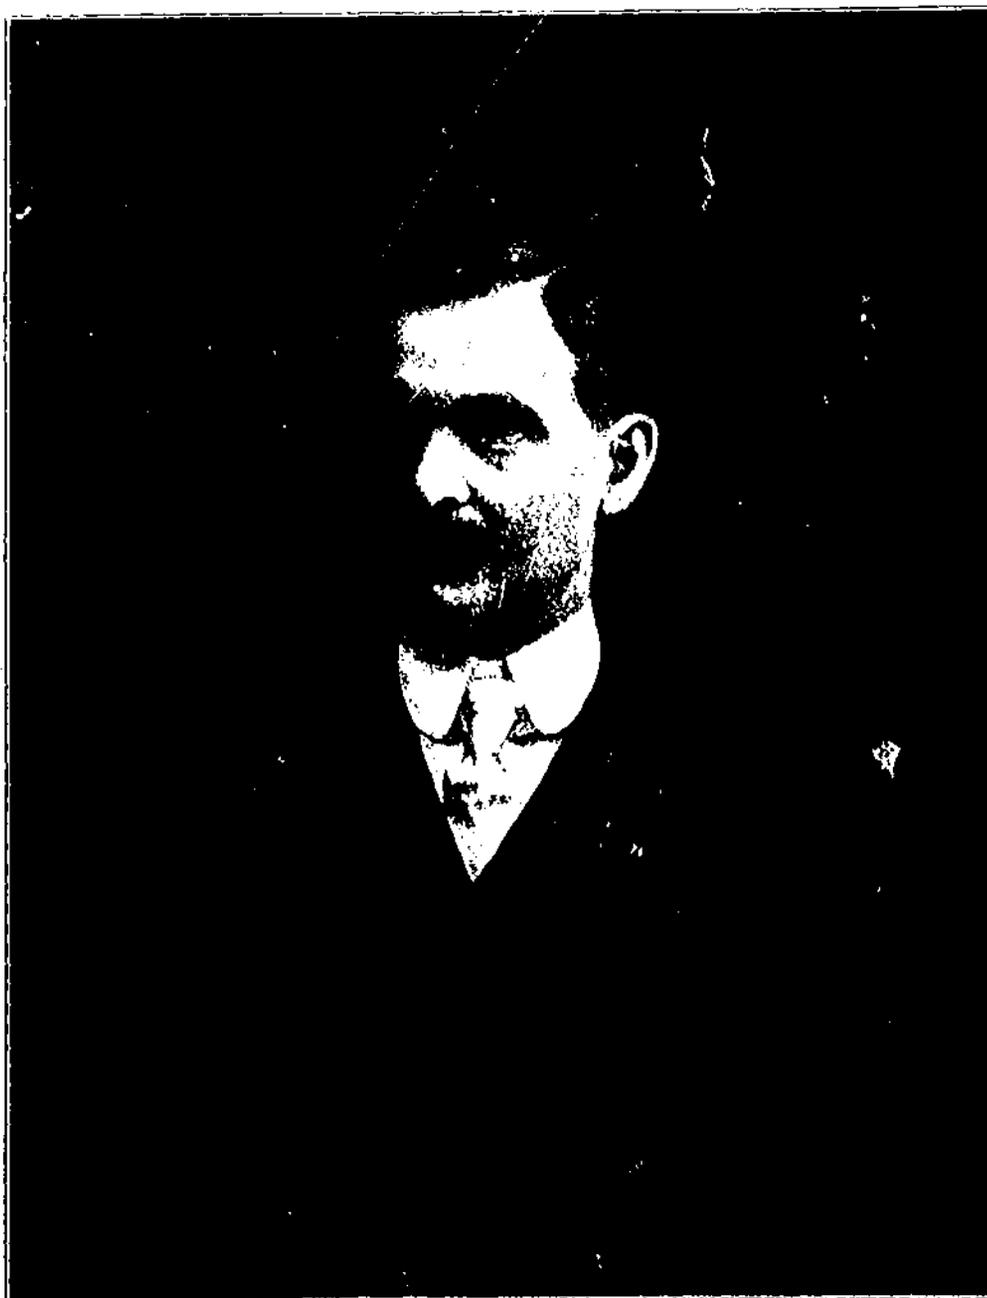

A. G. CRISWELL SMITH, of Media, Pennsylvania, favorably known to the teaching profession of the state at large as an accomplished educator, was born near Cochranville, Chester county, September 16, 1853. His parents were Jesse Jackson and Mary M. Smith, both of whom are deceased.

He was educated in the public schools of West Fallowfield township, Chester county, and in a private school known as Hebron Hall, in Cochranville, and in a private school in his father's house, locally known as Smithsonian Institute. In the fall of 1873 he taught his first school in Sadsbury township, Lancaster county. Desirous, however, of fitting himself more fully for the profession upon which he had entered, and for which he had developed a genuine aptitude, he resigned his position in March of the following year to enter the Millersville State Normal School, from which he was graduated in June, 1876. The next year he taught a school in East Donegal township, Lancaster county. The following two years he taught in the public schools of Highland township, Chester county, but resigned before the close of the spring term of 1879 to enter upon a larger field as principal of the Lansford borough public schools in Carbon county. He served most usefully and acceptably in this position until the summer of 1881, when he removed to Media to become principal of the public schools of that city. After occupying that position for four years, he was elected in the fall of 1885 to the principalship of the Lower Chichester public schools, in Delaware county. While here occupied in teaching he was called to a position of great importance, that of superintendent of public schools for Delaware county, to which he was elected in May, 1887, and his excellent conduct of the educational affairs of the county has found abundant recognition in his re-election triennially since that time, his period of service thus extending over the unusual period of six consecutive terms.

Following his profession out of ardent love for his calling and not simply as a means of livelihood, Mr. Smith has at all times taken a deep interest in general educational affairs, as desirous of attaining broader knowledge and greater efficiency as a teacher, as he has been to afford his aid to other educators. He has been for many years prominent in educational bodies, and he has seen long service as a member of the Pennsylvania State Educational Association, and at the annual meeting held in Mt. Gretna, in July, 1895, he was unanimously elected to the presidency of that body, and in that capacity presided at the annual meeting held in Bloomsburg in the ensuing year. He has also attended numerous sessions of the National Educational Association, among them those held in Saratoga Springs, New York, San Francisco, California, Washington City, and Ocean Grove, New Jersey. In all these various bodies he has been known as a most capable and practical exponent of educational interests and methods, while in his county he is held in affection and gratitude for the incalculable benefits he has conferred upon it in the advancement of its public school system and the impress of his personality upon its teachers and youth.

Mr. Smith has ever taken a deep interest in the religious, social and commercial interests of the community with which he resides. He has been for a number of years a director of the Second Media Loan and Savings Association, and for a time served as its treasurer. He is a member of the Media Club, and for three years was its treasurer and a member of its board of governors. He is also a member of the Media Fire Company, with which he has performed active service. He was one of the organizers of the Delaware County Historical Society, of which he is the first vice-president. In February, 1903, he was elected chief burgess of Media. He has attained to high rank in the Masonic order, and is affiliated with George W. Bartram Lodge, F. A. M., in which he was made a Mason in February, 1882, and in which he is a past master; and a past high priest of Media Chapter, R. A. M.; a past thrice illustrious grand master of Philadelphia Council, No. 11, R. and S. M.; a past most puissant grand master of the Grand Council of Pennsylvania; a past commander of St. Alban Commandery, No. 47, K. T., of Philadelphia, and holds elective offices in Philadelphia Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree, DeJoinville Council, Princes of Jerusalem, 16th degree, and Philadelphia Consistory, S. P. R. S., 32d degree. In 1903 he was honored at the annual session of the

A. G. Criswell Smith.

Supreme Council, 33d degree, held in Boston, September 16, 1903, by being elected to receive the 33d degree, the last of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite—a distinction never before conferred upon a Delaware county Mason. He is also a member of the Order of Odd Fellows and is past noble grand of Kossuth Lodge of several years standing.

Mr. Smith has ever devoted himself to Sabbath-school and church work. Early in life he connected himself with the Faggs Manor Presbyterian church in Chester county, and he is now a member of the Media Presbyterian church, in which he is a member of the board of trustees, and was for a time treasurer, a member of the session, clerk of the congregation and superintendent of the Sabbath school. He has twice been elected commissioner to the Synod of Pennsylvania and once to the General Assembly, and attended the session of that body at Pittsburg. He has been identified with the County Sabbath-school Association work for a number of years, serving upon the executive committee.

Mr. Smith was married, September 9, 1879, to Miss Ada M. Davis, daughter of John and Hannah E. Davis, near Homeville, Chester county. Of this union were born in Media two sons: Norman Davis Smith, born April 1, 1882, who is now teaching in Radnor township, and H. Ross Smith, born September 6, 1884, who is now attending Lafayette College. The mother of these children died in August, 1885. December 8, 1887, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Alice A. Green, of Media, daughter of Isaac and Phebe Green, of Edgemont, Delaware county.

SIMMONS KENT, who died at Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, October 19, 1895, was for many years an active merchant of Philadelphia. He is counted among those of Chester county birth who have achieved success in the larger world.

He was born near West Grove, Pennsylvania, 8 mo., 7, 1847, of a family long resident in Chester county. He was a son of Benjamin and Hannah (Simmons) Kent. His father was a farmer who well sustained a worthy line, and who gave to his son all the advantages within his means. The boy attended the country school, and afterward went to the high school at Kennett Square. He worked on the farm for a few years, but his mind reached out to the larger possibilities that the city offered, and in 1870 he went to Philadelphia, where he secured a clerkship at three dollars a week with Norcross & Sheets, lumber merchants. To say that he finally succeeded them in business is to tell in brief a story of hard work, perseverance and sagacity. He had that comprehensive grasp of affairs and the instant decision that mark the successful merchant everywhere in the intense competition of these times. He was a man of democratic sympathies, and earnestly desired to help, in so far as one man may, toward the betterment of the common lot. He came to believe that intemperance is the direct cause of most of the misery, vice and squalor that make our cities the awful problem they are to the humanitarian and the sociologist. He gave his support unreservedly to the party of practical temperance reform, for he believed that to remove temptation is the only way to give to the weak and the debased a chance for the growth of that self-respect that leads to self-mastery. Mr. Kent was a protectionist, and was in sympathy with the Republican party on tariff issues. In 1891 he was a nominee for congress on the Prohibition ticket, and a candidate for state treasurer in 1893. He was a delegate to the national convention of 1892, and was in every state and county convention of his party after its organization.

In 1872 Mr. Kent married Mary L., daughter of William and Sarah (Lukens) Webster, of Chester county. Mrs. Kent was born at Bart, Lancaster county, September 22, 1848. Her parents were natives of that county, and the daughter was educated at Unionville and Kennett Square Academy. Mr. Kent made his home in Philadelphia until 1884, when he removed to Swarthmore, where his family still live. Six children were born, all but one of whom survive. They are: 1. Harriet M., born 7 mo., 7, 1873, who is now the wife of Arthur D. Hilton, pastor of the First Baptist church of Hatboro, Pennsylvania; 2. J. Norcross, born 6 mo., 6, 1876, now in Cornell University; 3. Arthur W., born 9 mo., 18, 1879; now in Swarthmore College; 4. Virginia, born 12 mo., 11, 1882, and who died 3 mo., 25, 1884; 5. Homer S., born 1 mo., 31, 1885; 6. Ralph W., born 7 mo., 10, 1887.

JAMES ESREY, of Haverford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born on the 3d of November, 1850, near Manoa, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He is a son of Joseph and Hannah (Bittle) Esrey. His father, Joseph, was a prosperous farmer of Delaware county. He was a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and his wife was of the Lutheran faith. They reared a family of seven children, namely: 1. Dr. Louis K. Esrey, who is a graduate of the Hahnemann Medical College of Philadelphia; he married Cecilia Lindsay, and they had four children; the wife died and Dr. Esrey married, secondly, Clara Elliot. 2. Rebecca, who is Mrs. James Worrell; 3. William died in early manhood; 4. Nathan, who married Annie Martin; no issue; 5. James, our subject; 6. Sarah (Mrs. Howard Vandegrift, of Rosemont, Delaware county); 7. Hannah (Mrs. Walter Hood), of Ardmore, Montgomery county. Joseph Esrey, the father of this family, died in 1886, and his wife died in 1876.

James Esrey received his early education in the public schools of Delaware county; he completed his studies by taking a course at Bryant & Stratton's Business College of Philadelphia, from which institution he was graduated. Returning to the farm in Delaware county, he began his career as an auctioneer, in which line of business he has forged ahead until he is now well known in this capacity throughout the county.

Mr. Esrey married Ella Virginia McAfee, a daughter of John and Margaret M. (Heden) McAfee, on February 24, 1881. Their children are as follows: John M., born February 14, 1882; 2. Horace J., born February 25, 1884; 3. Anna Margaret, born May 13, 1886; 4. James Leroy, born March 27, 1890; 5. Ruthella May, born May 24, 1893; 6. Lucy Campbell, born November 6, 1896.

DR. J. FOSTER FLAGG. During the first half of the last century one of the most prominent physicians who practiced in the city of Providence, Rhode Island, was Dr. J. F. B. Flagg, who was a native of Boston and had gained a most enviable reputation in his chosen profession. He married Miss Mary Watterman Jackson, a daughter of Richard Jackson, and to this union there was born in October, 1828, a son whom they named J. Foster, and whose career forms the basis of this brief biography. Providence was the scene of his youthful activity, and it was in the brick school on College street, an institution that fitted boys for Brown University, that he first displayed that acuteness of intellect which afterward made him one of the leaders in his life pursuit.

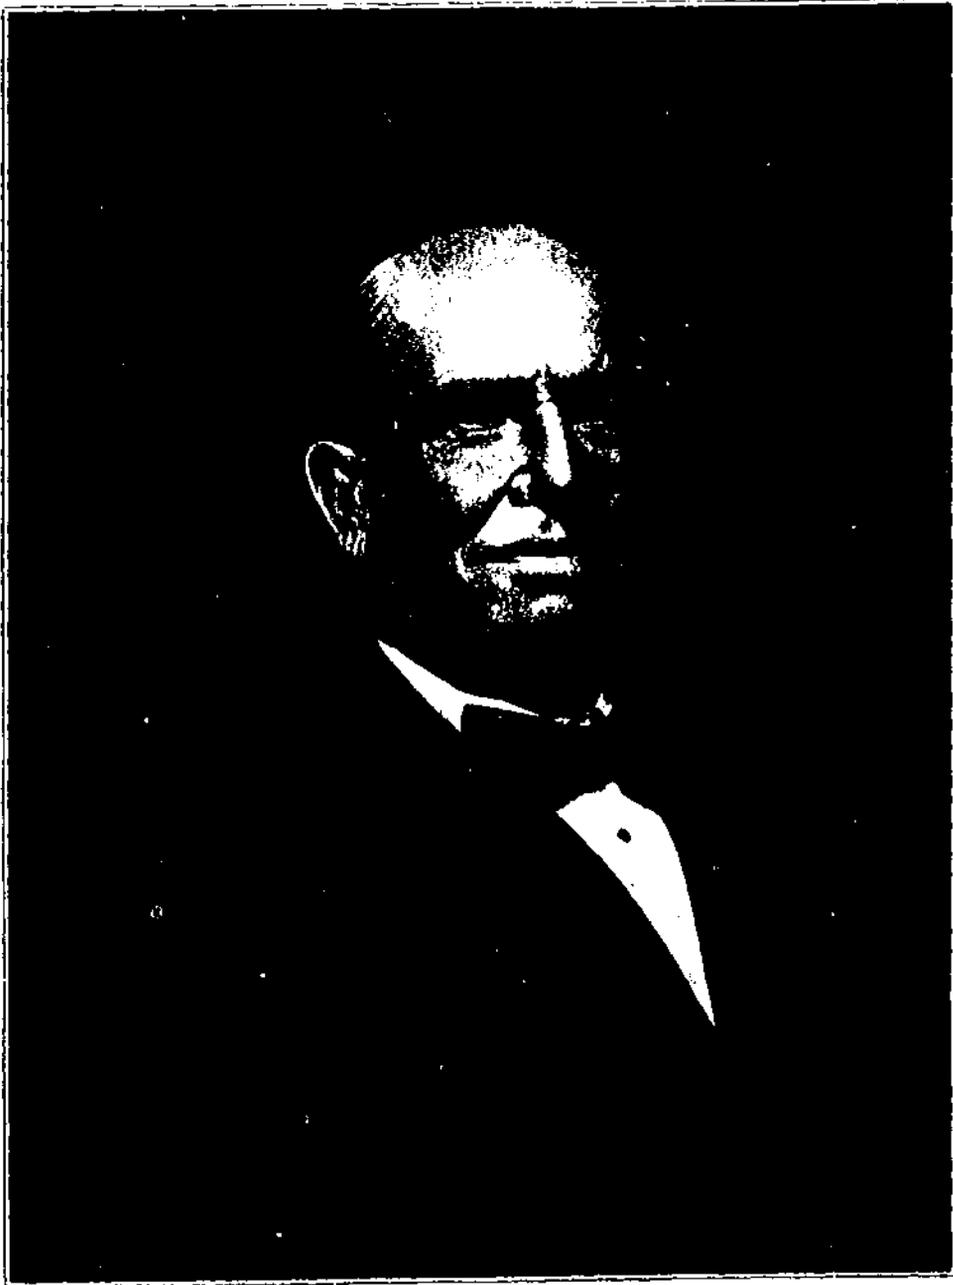

In 1849 young Flagg, who attained his majority that year, became one of the pioneer travelers to California, to which he journeyed by water, via Cape Horn. He was there until 1853, and, having decided upon dental surgery as his choice of occupations, he matriculated in the Philadelphia College of Dental Surgery, from which he was graduated in 1856. He had shown such a thorough grasp of his subject in all its branches that seven years later, in 1863, he was called to accept a professorship in the Philadelphia Dental College, a position which he held, with some interims when he was in practice for himself, for thirty-three years, and in that period many of the foremost dentists of the country received instruction from him. He was one of the most popular lecturers, and was often inclined to be humorous with his class. One incident related of this disposition is that one day, after he had explained at length the work of another bright scholar, he exclaimed to his assembled class, "Gentlemen, do you all thoroughly understand what I have explained?" and on receiving an emphatic and unanimous "yes," he cried "God be thanked,—I don't." After serving for this long period as professor, in 1886, Dr. Flagg was asked to take the office of dean of the school, but he declined. In the following year he retired to the beautiful Philadelphia suburb of Swarthmore, where he erected a nice home and established a laboratory in which he spends his leisure hours in making dental supplies. Although this employment is merely an avocation, it has been the source of considerable profit to him, for he disposes of all his products to a reputable Philadelphia firm.

In 1861 Dr. Flagg was united in marriage to Miss Mary Craft, the daughter of George Craft, whose wife was a Miss Bassett. Of the children of Dr. Flagg, George Flagg, who was born in 1862, died young. Maria, born in 1863, married James D. Price, of Delaware county, and they have three children, J. Foster, Mary and James Garretson. The third child of the union was Lydia, who was born at Woodbury, New Jersey, in 1866, and married Prof. Henry V. Gummere, a son of John and the grandson of John Gummere, the celebrated educator and mathematician of the early part of the last century; of this marriage one son was born in July, 1901, named John Flagg Gummere. This brief sketch is sufficient to indicate the prominent position which Dr. Flagg holds in scientific and professional circles. Like all men who have devoted a great part of their time to the instruction of others, the value of his services to his own profession and to humanity in general can never be rightly estimated.

GEORGE DRAYTON, who has been for many years one of the leading financiers of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born April 9, 1818, in England, and is the son of John and Harriet (Bullivant) Drayton, and the grandson of George Drayton, a contractor and builder. In 1819 John Drayton came to America and settled in Philadelphia, where he worked at his trade, which was that of ladies' shoemaker, as foreman in the shop of De Grasse and Samuel Beans, continuing in that position until his death, which occurred in February, 1832. His wife had died about 1823. George was their only child.

Mr. Drayton was, at the age of two years, brought to this country by his mother, who came hither to join her husband. At ten years of age he went to live with Richard Timple, a farmer in Marple township, where, until reaching the age of sixteen, he worked for his board and clothing. During the six years he spent on the farm he was given two months' schooling in each of three winters. He next worked on the farm of Jehu Jones, receiving five dollars a month during the summer. During the autumn and winter he cared for twelve cows and three horses, and cut the wood for the family for his board. He also attended school three months in the winter, paying his own tuition. He remained with Mr. Jones two years, and for the next three years was employed by a farmer named David Worrell, receiving ten dollars a month. At the end of the first year he took charge of Mrs. Kenney's farm (where Lansdowne is now situated), receiving eleven dollars a month for his services. He held this position until his marriage, after which he settled near Springfield meeting house, and worked on the farm of Jehu Jones, his former employer, walking a distance of two miles night and morning, to and from his work. In 1846 he engaged with James Ogden, with whom he remained one year, working for half a dollar a day, and supporting a wife and two children. After working two years for George B. Lownes, he took charge of the farm of Christopher Fallon, where he remained nine years, during the whole of this time, in addition to his other work, superintending the erection of the buildings on the place. At the end of nine years he moved to Thornbury township and purchased the farm at Leedom's Mills, the first land he possessed being the acres now owned by Parnum. He also bought what was known as the "Mendenhall place," where he engaged in farming, trading and the real estate business, acting as an auctioneer. He laid out the town of South Media, and became interested in real estate in Chestnut street, Philadelphia. In this city he opened an office, and did a large and successful business. He also opened coal and lumber yards in Chester Heights, and in this enterprise was attended by his accustomed success. In 1887 his diversified business interests were such that he withdrew from the coal and lumber trade. At the breaking out of the Civil war he was appointed marshal to take the roll of Concord township, and, at President Lincoln's second call for troops, although over age, and holding a public office, he enlisted in Captain B. T. Green's Delaware County Guards, and was made quartermaster-sergeant of his regiment, in which capacity he served until his term of enlistment expired, doing guard or patrol duty near Antletam. He was one of the organizers and also the first president of the Charter National Bank of Media, which was opened for business in April, 1887. He served as president of this bank until January, 1894, when he declined re-election. He was one of the organizers of the Media Title and Trust Company, which was incorporated under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, January 15, 1891. The company engaged in a general trust business, deals in real estate, makes loans, receives deposits on interest, and transacts all other kinds of business in its line. It has burglar-proof steel vaults, and occupies a fine building. Mr. Drayton is president of the company, and under his careful management the bank has become one of the strong financial institutions of Delaware county.

Geo Drayton

In politics Mr. Drayton was formerly an old line Whig, and cast his first vote for General William Henry Harrison. Later he became a Republican, but has been for a number of years identified with the Prohibition party. In 1863 he was elected county commissioner, in which capacity he served for three years. In 1891 he was the Prohibition candidate for state treasurer, and received in Philadelphia the highest vote cast there for any candidate in that year on the Prohibition ticket for Congress. He is a member of Bradbury Post, No. 149, G. A. R. He is a member of the Baptist church, and assisted largely in building the church of that denomination at Brandywine.

Mr. Drayton married January 29, 1840, Judith, daughter of James Flounders, of Springfield. He and his wife were the parents of children: Elizabeth, who married the late Smith Sharpless, and had one child; Mary, who married Perry C. Clark, and was the mother of two children, Helen and Ethel, and is now deceased. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Drayton were: Hannah, who died in 1896, unmarried; and John, who died at five years of age. The married life of Mr. and Mrs. Drayton extended over a half century, being terminated by the death of Mrs. Drayton, who passed away November 1, 1890. Mr. Drayton married, February 22, 1898, Lottie, daughter of Thomas W. Johnson, of Concord township. Notwithstanding the advanced age to which Mr. Drayton has attained, he is still vigorous, a blessing which he ascribes largely to the fact of his life-long and total abstinence, not only from intoxicating drinks but from the use of tobacco in any form.

On April 9, 1898, Mr. Drayton was the honored guest upon a really remarkable occasion. On the evening of that day some one hundred and fifty men of prominence—clergymen, judges, lawyers, legislators, physicians, bankers, editors, merchants and public officials—gave him a banquet at the Media Club House. It was a splendid tribute to a noble life, and was an occasion without a counterpart in the history of the county, or perhaps, of the state. The floral and flag decorations were of much beauty, and most conspicuous was a fine portrait of the guest, wreathed in the national colors. An orchestra from Philadelphia discoursed sweet music while a bounteous repast was partaken of, and at intervals between the speeches. Horace P. Green, as toastmaster, made an opening address in which he summarized Mr. Drayton's life work, saying that "whatever he has undertaken to do, he has tried with all his heart to do well, and his whole life has been characterized by the most thorough, sincere earnestness." Captain Isaac Johnson said: "His object was to benefit his fellowman. Many a poor fellow on his downward road has been halted and turned back in the right way by George Drayton." Ex-Senator Cooper said of him that his motto was "to do right under all circumstances." John B. Rhodes said his life had been a pure and open one, and remarks of similar purport were made by V. Gilpin Robinson, Professor Joseph Shortlidge and Samuel Greenwood. Dr. George W. Smith, of Philadelphia, read an original poem on "Our Honored Guest," in which Mr. Drayton's entire career was pleasantly and melodiously told, closing with the lines—

"A county that can proudly boast
Of great names all along its line,
And high among this honored host
George Drayton's name shall ever shine."

None of the speakers said better of Mr. Drayton than he said of himself, but with such sincerity and modesty that he probably did not have a full conception of his own weighty meaning: "I don't think I deserve any great credit. I owed it to God and my fellow man to do what was right."

The writer of these pages esteems it a high privilege to thus briefly recount the honors paid to a man of rare nobility of character. The telling of the story is of infinite value in the inspiration it affords to the young to emulate so beautiful a life. For exemplary conduct does beget good deeds by others, and so do the good man's works live after him in following generations.

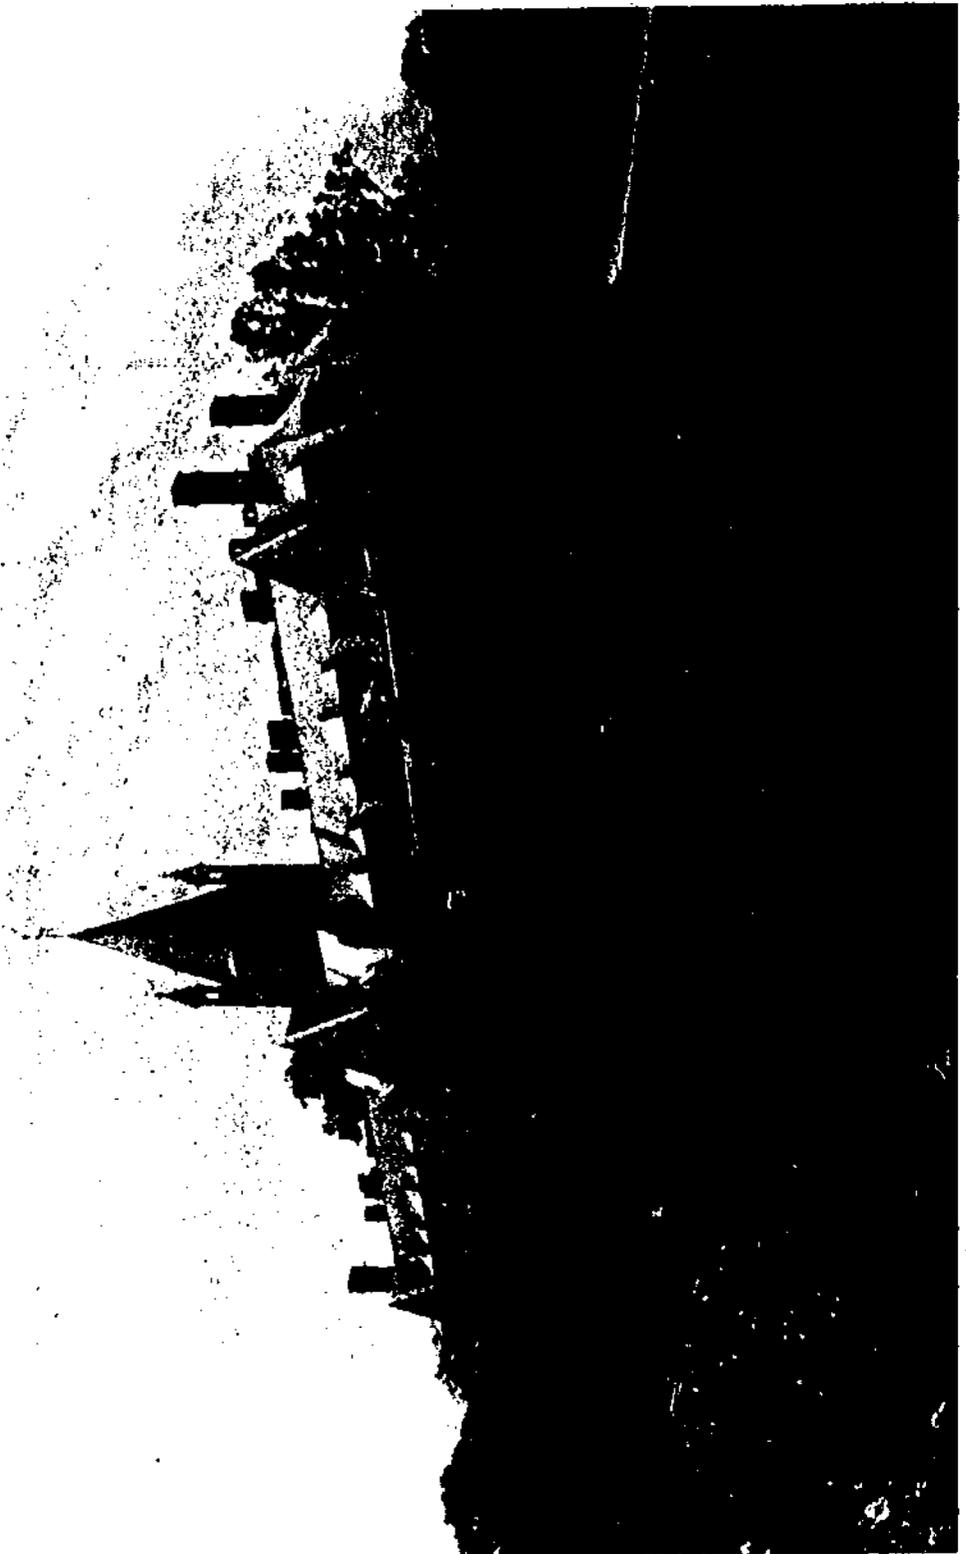

HAVERFORD COLLEGE was originated in 1830 by a committee of Friends in Philadelphia and another in New York, who expressed a desire to found an institution where Friends' children could have a "guarded education in the higher branches of learning combining the requisite literary instructions with a religious care over their morals and manners." It was thus intended as a purely sectarian institution for Friends only, and its grade was to be that of a high school. Within a dozen years it was practically doing under-graduate work on an equal footing with the college department of the University of Pennsylvania. In 1856 it received the name of college, and was chartered by the legislature to grant degrees. In 1861 its preparatory department was abolished and since that time it has done exclusively college work. About the same time the restrictions as to membership in the Society of Friends were withdrawn, and in this respect it is an undenominational college. Its growth has been slow, because it preferred to furnish ample resources and to exercise care over the individual student. Originally it bought a farm of about 200 acres on the line of the then new Pennsylvania Railroad, nine miles from the heart of Philadelphia. This has been increased by other purchases, and a large number of buildings have been erected. The country around has been developed rapidly so that the tract is now in a village of suburban homes as fine as any in the vicinity of Philadelphia. Starting with a faculty of four men, the number has been increased to twenty, and the number of students to about one hundred and twenty-five. The college furnishes residence and board as well as instruction, the combined cost to the student being about $500. There are 40,000 volumes in the library and its scientific equipment is large and valuable. Founders' Hall, as the original building is called, stands in the midst of a number of newer ones, and is used for the scientific laboratories and certain general purposes of the college. The next building erected was Alumni Hall, which was originally used for the combined purposes of a library and a lecture room, but is now much enlarged and is occupied for library purposes alone. The books are open to the use of the students all the day; hundreds of periodicals are subscribed for, and abundant facilities are offered in the way of reference books and reading rooms.

The students are housed principally in Barclay and Lloyd Halls, the one built in 1877 and the other in 1898. The favorite method of living is for two students to occupy a suite of rooms consisting of two bed rooms and a study. The rooms in Lloyd Hall are more modern and more costly, and furnish most attractive quarters for student house-keeping.

Chase Hall is used exclusively for recitation purposes. Whittall Hall is a machine shop and drawing room. While the fundamental purposes of Haverford are general rather than technical, opportunity is given for a limited number of students to take mechanical and electrical engineering, and a costly equipment of this sort has been gathered in Whittall Hall and adjacent buildings.

The gymnasium is probably the finest college gymnasium in the state, and was built by subscription, and was finished in 1901. The main room is sixty by ninety feet, and adjoining this are rooms for the director, the trophy room, where the numerous marks of success which have attended athletic contests are preserved, and a reading room for lighter literature than is usually found in a library. In the basement are lockers, a swimming pool, and a bowling alley. The whole constitutes a grand recreation place for students when off duty.

HAVERFORD COLLEGE.

At the time of writing, a new hall is in process of erection, which will contain fire proof rooms for the valuable autograph collection of letters made by the late Charles Roberts, and a large auditorium capable of holding one thousand people.

There is also an astronomical observatory with considerable equipment, and a cricket shed where the elements of that peculiarly Haverfordian game are taught to the freshmen. The grounds around the buildings are very fine. They were planted at the time of the starting of the college, hence the old trees have a growth of about seventy years. Some of them are on the decline, but it has been the intention to plant a number of trees each year, so that the quality of the lawn may not deteriorate. On one side is the skating pond, which is largely patronized in winter. Close by is the cricket field, which is a brilliant object in the spring months, and in another part is the foot ball field where great crowds collect in the fall to witness games with other colleges. This is surrounded by a running track, and tennis courts are near by.

The faculty is a learned body of skillful teachers. Seventeen of them have received their Doctor's degree from reputable institutions, and the publication of books and learned papers each year fill a page or two of the annual reports.

The college has adopted a policy of guarding with jealous care the morals and quality of the student body, thus fulfilling the purposes of its original founders. They are subject to no restrictions but such as are necessary to secure regular attendance, but are expected to develop their better qualities in a favoring atmosphere. Their success in many walks of professional and business life attest the excellence of the instruction, and their qualifications as students the character of the influences by which they have been surrounded.

ISAAC SHARPLESS, Sc. D., LL. D., president of Haverford College, is from an old family of Friends which has contributed many of its members to useful educational labor. His father was Aaron Sharpless, who married Susanna, daughter of Thomas Kite, an esteemed minister in the Society of Friends. The children born of this marriage were Edith, Thomas and Elizabeth. Aaron Sharpless took for his second wife, Susanna, daughter of James and Ann (Truman) Forsythe, and they for some years filled the positions of superintendent and matron, respectively, of the Westtown Boarding School, and, after the death of her husband, the widow filled positions similar to that which she had occupied with him. Mr. Sharpless filled the positions of clerk, overseer and elder for several years, and at the time of his death was a member of the "Meeting for Sufferings," or representative committee of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, "while his sound judgment was recognized in frequent appointments as arbitrator in neighboring disputes."—Cope.

The children of Aaron and Susanna (Forsythe) Sharpless were Isaac, who is further written of below; Ann, who became a teacher in the Westtown Boarding School; James F., who died in youth; William T., who became a physician in West Chester, Pennsylvania; and Susanna, who as a member of the Yearly Meeting Committee, was given oversight of the Westtown Boarding School.

Isaac Sharpless, eldest child in the family, last named, was born 12 mo., 16, 1848. He received his early education in the school with which his parents were connected, Westtown Boarding School, from which he was graduated in 1867, when eighteen years of age. He then entered the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard University, from which he was graduated in 1873, with the degree of Bachelor of Science in civil engineering. He began his career as a teacher in the Westtown Boarding School, whence he was called after two years to the position of instructor in mathematics in Haverford College. He was appointed successively to the positions of professor of mathematics and of dean of the college, and in 1887 to that of president, in which capacity he now (1903) continues to act. He received the degree of Doctor of Science from the University of Pennsylvania, in 1883, and that of Doctor of Laws from Swarthmore College in 1887. Dr. Sharpless is the author of text books on geometry and astronomy, and "An Account of the English Educational System," which is one of the volumes of the International Educational series. He has also written "Quaker Experiment in Government," being an account of the early history of Pennsylvania, and "Two Centuries of Pennsylvania History" in Lippincott's Educational Series.

Dr. Sharpless was married 8 mo., 10, 1876, at West Chester Meeting, to Miss Lydia Trimble Cope, born in West Chester, 2 mo., 13, 1857, daughter of Paschall and Amy A. (Baily) Cope. The children born of this marriage were as follows: 1. Helen, born in Haverford, 7 mo., 25, 1877, who graduated from Drexel Institute, and is now assistant in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.; 2. Amy C., born 1 mo., 12, 1879, who is a student in art; 3. Frederic C., born 10 mo., 1, 1880, who graduated from Haverford College in 1900, and in 1903 from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania:

4. Edith F., born 11 mo., 1, 1883; 5. Lydia T., born 10 mo., 10, 1885; 6. Katherine T., born 10 mo., 17, 1896.

WALTER S. BITTLE, one of the leading dairy farmers of Delaware county, is descended from old residents of that county. His great-grandfather, William Bittle, a farmer, who built in 1811 what is now known as the "old Eagle Hotel," on the West Chester pike. His son, also named William, was the father of two children Hannah, who married Joseph Esrey; and a son, who was born December 26, 1816, in Haverford township, and received the ancestral name of William.

This last William, the third of the name, succeeded his grandfather as proprietor of the hotel, and later engaged in farming. He was a man of standing in the community, serving as school director, tax collector and holding other township offices. In politics he was a Republican. He attended the Friends' Meeting. He married Jane G., daughter of David and Sarah (Gibbons) Worrell, and they were the parents of ten children: Sarah, who became the wife of John Kirk, of Darby township; William was born at the old Eagle Hotel, on the West Chester pike, in Haverford township August 23, 1843; his educational training was obtained in the schools of the neighborhood and when he had attained his majority he engaged in the grocery trade in Philadelphia, where he was also for some time engaged in the wholesale and retail produce trade and met with a well merited degree of success. In 1902 he retired from active business pursuits. He was married in Philadelphia February 12, 1868, to America Jane Werner, daughter of Henry and Eliza (Stewart) Werner, of Duncannon, Pennsylvania, and had born to him one son, William, who was born March 19, 1869, and died in August, 1869; Jennie, who lives in Haverford township; Hannah, who married William V. Carter, of Ardmore; Lydia, who is the wife of John E. Stanley, of Haverford; Joseph, Howard and Rebecca, all of whom died in infancy; Lizzie M., who married William Steward, of Haverford; and Walter S., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mrs. Bittle, the mother of this family, died in June, 1861, and Mr. Bittle passed away May 3, 1891, on the old homestead where he had been born and had always lived.

Walter S. Bittle, son of William and Jane (Worrell) Bittle, was born April 17, 1861, on the old homestead in Haverford township, Delaware county, and passed his boyhood on the ancestral farm. He was educated at John M. Lock's school, at Norristown, and after completing his education settled on the homestead, and devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. His farm contains thirty-three acres of fine land, in the cultivation of which he employs all the modern appliances. He makes a specialty of dairying, in which he is very successful. Politically he is a Republican. He and all his family attend the Friends' Meeting.

Mr. Bittle married, October 27, 1885, Emily, daughter of the late Daniel and Mary (Wynn) Hagy, the former named having been an extensive farmer and paper manufacturer of Montgomery county, and a son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Hagy. Mr. and Mrs. Bittle are the parents of three children: Henry H., born January 1, 1888; Helen, born July 15, 1890; and Emily, born March 6, 1901.

GARDINER L. WARNER, one of the prominent and esteemed citizens of Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, was born in that neighborhood February 1, 1835, the son of Isaac and Jane (Latch) Warner, the former named being a son of Anthony and Rachel (Evans) Warner, and Anthony Warner was in turn a son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Lewis) Warner.

