Isaac Warner, father of Gardiner L. Warner, was a master carpenter by occupation and conducted a flourishing business for many years in Lower Merion township, where he not only gained a handsome competence but also secured the confidence and respect of the business world by his honorable and thoroughly reliable methods. He was a veteran of the war of 1812, having served with distinction under the command of Captain Mathews. Mr. Warner was united in marriage to Miss Jane Latch, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Hamill, deceased; 2. Lewis, deceased; 3. Jacob, deceased; 4. Eliza, deceased; 5. Levi E., deceased; 6 and 7. Isaac and Jacob (2d) twins, deceased; 8. Rebecca J., wife of Charles J. Arthur; 9. Penrose E.; 10. Charles Anderson, a prominent resident of Ardmore, Pennsylvania; 11. Gardiner L. Mrs. Warner is a daughter of Jacob and Jane (Rose) Latch.

Gardiner L. Warner was a student in the public schools of Quinwood, a suburb of Philadelphia, where he acquired an excellent literary education, after which he pursued a course in the civil engineering department of a private school in Philadelphia, completing his studies about the year 1863. For several years he was engaged in the capacity of assistant surveyor in and around Delaware county, Pennsylvania, but subsequently resigned from this position in order to return to his home and to assume charge of his father's property and business interests. Since then he has fully demonstrated his ability to manage the same with rare tact and business foresight, so that a good income is realized therefrom. Mr. Warner is respected by all who have the honor of his acquaintance for his many excellent qualities, his business honor, his fidelity to duty, and his devotion to any cause which he champions.

In 1875, Mr. Warner married Miss Jane McConnell, a daughter of Cunningham and Catherine (Dunne) McConnell. Their children are: Jacob L.; Elizabeth G., deceased; Arthur, Rebecca J., Mildred, Margaretta, Clarence G., and Genevieve L. Warner. The mother of this family, Jane (McConnell) Warner, died April 7, 1889.

THOMAS D. LAWRENCE, deceased, for many years was a progressive and prosperous agriculturist of Haverford township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His birth occurred in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 6 mo., 24, 1800, the son of Henry and Mary (Pennell) Lawrence, and he was a man of honorable business principles, his name having been synonymous with truth and integrity.

Henry Lawrence, father of Thomas D. Lawrence, was born 8 mo., 26, 1763. He was a resident of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where for many years he engaged in mercantile business which proved very successful. Later he purchased considerable land in Haverford and Marple townships, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, selecting the former named township for his residence. In 1795, Mr. Lawrence married Mary Pennell, a daughter of William and Mary Pennell, and three children were born to them: William, a resident of Philadelphia, where he is engaged as a banker; Thomas D., and Mordecai. Upon the death of Mr. Lawrence, which occurred at his home in Haverford township, 10 mo., 11, 1810, his property was equally divided between his three sons. His widow, Mary (Pennell) Lawrence, subsequently became the wife of Reese Heacock; her death occurred 8 mo., 6, 1860.

Thomas D. Lawrence, second son of Henry and Mary Lawrence, after completing his education, made good use of the land he inherited from his father. He became thoroughly proficient in that line of industry and his highly cultivated fields and substantial out buildings gave ample proof of his thrift and careful management. He was of Quaker descent and a prominent member of the Society of Friends. He was a man of strong political opinions, and an active member of the Republican party.

Mr. Lawrence was united in marriage to Mary A. Lewis, daughter of Jesse and Amelia (Speakman) Lewis, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Amelia, born 7 mo., 24, 1826, died 3 mo., 29, 1898; 2. Henry, born 3 mo., 28, 1827; 3. William, born 11 mo., 16, 1828, married Jane Koause, and they are the parents of one daughter, Anna Mary Lawrence; 4. Clement, born 9 mo., 8, 1830, married Eliza Stanley, and their children are: Martha Emily, Irene, and William Stanley Lawrence; 5. Abraham, born 8 mo., 15, 1832, died in 1853; 6. Thomas, born 5 mo., 4, 1834, died 11 mo., 6, 1859; 7. Mary Lavinia, born 11 mo., 27, 1838, died 8 mo., 2, 1892; 8. Jesse Lewis, born 12 mo., 22, 1840; 9. Mordecai, born 5 mo., 7, 1842; 10. Elizabeth, born 2 mo., 2, 1845. Thomas D. Lawrence, the father of these children, died 5 mo., 13, 1885, and his wife, Mary Ann (Lewis) Lawrence, passed away 12 mo., 12, 1861.

GEORGE C. WILLIAMSON, of Haverford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born March 2, 1848. His early ancestors were James and Patience (Gray) Williamson, who were the first members of the Williamson family of whom we have direct information. They were descendents of the Quakers who settled in Delaware county and to whom the prosperity of the county is chiefly due. James and Patience Williamson had two children, Mary, who married Davis Heacock, a native of Indiana, and James who was born 4 mo., 11, 1810, learned the trades of wheelwright and millwright, and who followed these callings for a number of years. After he had acquired a competence, he bought property in Haverford, where he built a residence in 1876, and engaged in the cultivation of the land he had purchased, residing there for the remainder of his life. The superior judgment he displayed in the management of his own affairs attracted the attention of his fellow citizens, and he was elected supervisor of Haverford, holding the office for many years. He was a worthy member of the Society of Friends, and always kept the faith of his ancestors. He married Elizabeth Cornog, born August 21, 1810, daughter of Isaac and Margaret Cornog, of Haverford.

Their only child was George C. Williamson, who was brought up on the farm in Haverford where he was born, and who succeeded to the estate of his father after the death of the latter, November 19, 1893. Mr. Williamson is a prosperous farmer, but also has some practical knowledge of the different trades, and is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics Association. He realizes that education is an important agency in making good citizens, and that good schools are therefore good investments. To this end he has been actively concerned in the advancement of the Haverford public schools. He is interested in local politics, and votes the Republican ticket. He follows the trend of his ancestors' belief, and is a member of the Society of Friends.

He was married April 22, 1880, to Miss Emily W. Jones, who was born February 17, 1856, a resident of Montgomery county, and a daughter of Davis and Hannah (Price) Jones, who were of Welsh descent. They had two sons and three daughters, Mary Emily, born March 30, 1881; William Jones, born October 25, 1882 (he died May 31, 1899); George Cornog, born November 26, 1884; Ida Boulton, born March 1, 1889, and Ione Clara, born January 27, 1896.

FRANK A. HOWER, deceased, for a quarter of a century the popular and efficient editor and publisher of "The Home News," a weekly paper of Bryn Mawr, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, was born February 29, 1848, in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, one of four sons born to Dr. Joseph B. and Margaret E. (McNaughton) Hower.

The early childhood days of Frank A. Hower were spent in Lancaster city, where he acquired his education, graduating from the public schools at the age of fourteen years. Shortly afterward he entered the printing office of "The Lancaster Examiner" to learn the printing trade, where he remained until May 26, 1864, when he enlisted in Company K, Ninety-second Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, then the Ninth Regiment Cavalry, as a bugler, and was mustered out with the company at Lexington, North Carolina, July 18, 1865. During one engagement he was shot in the calf of the right leg, and up to the time of his death the bullet was still imbedded in the fleshy part of the limb; he also lost the partial hearing of the left ear. At the close of the war Mr. Hower returned to Lancaster and resumed work at his trade; from there he went to Reading and worked on one of the papers in the capacity of compositor, and later went to Coatesville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where in partnership with Dr. William George, he started the publication of the "Coatesville Times" which is still published in that town. After the paper had been in existence for a short period of time he disposed of it, being actively connected with the publication of the Rochester, New York, "Herald," and the Sunbury, Pennsylvania, Express. In 1876 Mr. Hower removed to Philadelphia, and being aware of the fact that Bryn Mawr was going to grow into a thickly populated center, located there and on June 1, 1877, established the Home News, a weekly paper. His publication office at that time was in a cottage on the grounds where at present stands the Bryn Mawr Hospital. At first he had no printing material, type or presses, but gathered the local and other news of interest and had the typesetting and presswork done at Parkesburg, by William F. Potts. Several years later Mr. Hower fitted out a printing office in a building that stood on the ground owned by the Humphrey estate, opposite Dr. Charles T. Goentner's property, on Lancaster avenue, Bryn Mawr. After conducting business here for about two years, he sold the paper to Samuel A. Black, and on July 1, 1881, established The News, a weekly publication, in a building situated north of Lancaster avenue on Robert's Road, where he remained until January, 1883, when the office was removed to the "Old Temperance Hall," Lancaster avenue and Buck Road. The business was conducted in that building for nineteen years, but when about to issue the silver anniversary edition of the paper, on May 22, 1902, the building was destroyed by fire. After this catastrophe the type was set in the parlor of the residence and the presswork was done in Philadelphia, until a suitable location could be secured. On August 8, 1890, Mr. Hower again purchased the Home News from the heirs of Samuel A. Black, and consolidated it with The News, afterward calling the paper The News and Home News. On August 18, 1902, the office of the paper, as well as the residence, was moved to its present location, on Lancaster pike, a short distance east of the Bryn Mawr depot.

In politics Mr. Hower was always an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and whenever an election was about to be held he was found working for the entire Republican ticket, whether local or national, using the columns of his paper to further their election. Senator Matthew Stanley Quay and Senator Boise Penrose often consulted him upon matters of vital interest to the party, counting him as one of the best co-workers in the political arena. His political acumen was recognized at numerous times by being called upon to officiate at conferences of the state and national leaders of the Republican party, and whenever his party controlled the apportionment of offices he was foremost in the ranks to plead the cause of some friend for official appointment, notwithstanding that he had been earnestly solicited at various times to become a candidate for at least some county office. In 1889, when Haverford district was created by the division of the Bryn Mawr district, he was elected committeeman and continued in that office until 1901. For a number of years Mr. Hower was a member of the Knights Templar, Knights of the Golden Eagle, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, Typographical Union, but as his business enterprise occupied all of his time, he allowed himself to run out in the orders. At the time of his death he was a member of Colonel Owen Jones Post, No. 591, Grand Army of the Republic, being one of its charter members. He was also a member of the Bucks-Montgomery Press League, the State Editorial Association, and the Pen and Pencil Club.

On July 4, 1879, Mr. Hower married Miss Anna M. Grubb, daughter of William B. and Catharine E. (Hagarty) Grubb, at the home of the parents, 2205 Spruce street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Their children were: William G., Frank A., Charles M., James S., Thomas, Harry V., Catherine M., Anna M., and Mary M. Hower. Mr. Hower died October 23, 1902, and the funeral services were conducted at his late residence on Lancaster avenue, Bryn Mawr, by the Rev. James Houghton, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer. He was buried in his soldier's uniform, and the casket was draped in the American flag according to a desire often expressed by him. The interment was made at Mount Moriah cemetery, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS HUGHES is a representative of industrial interest of Lansdowne, where he is now engaged in carriage making. Although he is one of the adopted sons of this portion of Pennsylvania, there is no more loyal citizen in Delaware county than is Thomas Hughes. He was born in Ireland in November, 1836, one of a family of seven children. His parents were John and Ann (McHugh) Hughes. He spent the first fourteen years of his life on the Emerald Isle, and then accompanied his parents as they crossed the broad Atlantic to the new world, settling in Kelleyville, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. For some time thereafter the son, Thomas, assisted at farm work and then went to the city in order to learn the carriage making trade. He also mastered the business of shoeing horses and of painting and decorating fine carriages as well as building them. He was employed by T. B. Parker, with whom he remained for three years, after which he went to New York city, where he spent a similar period. On the expiration of that time he returned to Philadelphia, where he was employed as a journeyman, and at Wilmington, Delaware, his attention being given to his trade until the inauguration of the Civil war.

Mr. Hughes had watched with interest the progress of events in the South, had noted the threatening attitude of the southern states and had resolved that if a blow was struck to overthrow the Union he would aid in its defense. Accordingly, on the 12th of August, 1861, he donned the blue uniform and became a member of the Third Pennsylvania Cavalry, which was attached to the Army of the Potomac, and participated in all of the engagements of that great military organization, numbering altogether forty-two battles and skirmishes. On one occasion General Heintzelman had to send some retreat orders to General Averill, and Mr. Hughes and a companion were selected to carry these orders on account of the superiority of the horses which they rode, as speed was a very necessary item in the movement. On the way, his companion's horse became exhausted and the two men separated, so Mr. Hughes never saw his companion again. However, he pushed resolutely forward, urging his horse on to its utmost speed, and as he reached the lines his horse dropped dead from exhaustion. He was immediately furnished with another which had been captured from the First North Carolina regiment, and thus he finished the journey and delivered the orders so that the retreat took place as had been planned. After this Mr. Hughes was confined to his tent for three weeks on account of illness brought on by exposure at Harrison's Landing, but on his release from the doctor's care he immediately resumed his active duties in the field, remaining with his regiment in its varied service until after the battle of Fredericksburg, when he received an honorable discharge and then went to Washington, D. C., and was, for some time, in the government employ there and in Virginia until the close of the war, and returned to his home. His military record is certainly a creditable one, for at all times he was found loyal to his duty, whether it led him into the thickest of the fight or caused him to march on the lonely picket line.

Mr. Hughes next went to Philadelphia, where for a year he worked at his trade, and then came to Upper Darby, establishing business on his own account where Bartram's Lumber Yard had been located. In 1893 he purchased the property he now occupies, and removing his business to this place, he has one of the best equipped shops in the state for his line of work. For thirty-seven years he has carried on business on his own account, and it is probable that his sons will continue as his successors for many years. His excellent understanding of the work in every department enables him to superintend the labors of those who serve under him, and anything sent out from the Hughes' shops is noted for its excellent workmanship. In business affairs Mr. Hughes is notably prompt and reliable, and in all matters is thoroughly trustworthy.

In 1855 occurred the marriage of Thomas Hughes and Miss Catherine Kelley, of Kelleyville, daughter of William and Catherine Kelley. They have seven children who are yet living: Catherine C., who has taken the veil in the Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, Villa Marie, Westchester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and is now known as Sister M. Sulpicius;

Thomas Hughes

William F., who wedded Mary Morris and has two children, Miriam and Francis J.; Thomas I., who married Ella M. Cavanaugh; Joseph A., Charles V., John F., and Mary T., who are all yet at home. Mr. Hughes and his family are communicants of St. Philomena Roman Catholic church and have done much for the growth and advancement of the church, and of its work. The cause of temperance finds in him a warm friend, and the Total Abstinence Society of Kelleysville, was organized in his house. He also belongs to St. Mary's Benefit Society and to the Knights of Columbus. He maintains pleasant relations with his old army comrades through his membership in the Third Pennsylvania Cavalry Association, which holds a meeting every year in the old state house in Philadelphia, and during the Centennial in 1876, this historic spot was the headquarters for the association which kept open house for all. Mr. Hughes likewise belongs to the Veteran Association of Clifton Heights, and of all these organizations he is a worthy and valued representative.

JOSEPH THOMAS McCLELLAN, a prominent business man of Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, was born January 23, 1833, in Upper Darby township, Delaware county, and is a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Thomas) McClellan, and a grandson of Robert and Ann (Thomas) McClellan, of Upper Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Samuel McClellan was twice married, and by his first wife he had five children—Maria, Samuel, Mary, John and Elizabeth. The mother of these children died, and Mr. McClellan married Elizabeth Thomas, who became the mother of the following children—Ann T., Joseph T., and Robert. Samuel McClellan died in December, 1847, and his wife Elizabeth died in 1848 or 1849.

Joseph Thomas McClellan was the second child and first son of Samuel McClellan and his second wife, Elizabeth Thomas. He was educated in Delaware county, and after leaving school entered a blacksmith shop at Fitzwater-town, near Germantown, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Here he learned his trade, serving four years and nine months, and afterward accepted a position in Philadelphia as journeyman. This position he held a short time and then settled at what is now Lancaster Pike and Penn street, Bryn Mawr, in Haverford township, where he opened a carriage factory and blacksmith shop. Having acquired a practical knowledge as a veterinarian under the preceptorship of Dr. Robert McClure, of Philadelphia, he began practice as a veterinary surgeon, at the same time attending to his factory and shops. The business grew in time to demand his whole attention, and he was obliged to abandon his professional work for the management of the carriage factory. Since 1856 he has been a member of the United American Mechanics, and he also belongs to the Masonic Order, affiliating with Cassia Lodge No. 273, Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is a past master. He is past high priest of Montgomery Chapter No. 262, R. A. M., and he was for twenty-seven years a member of St. John's Commandery, K. T., from which he holds a demit. He is past grand and past district deputy grand master of Banyan Tree Lodge, No. 378, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. McClellan married, December 18, 1856, Friedriana M., daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Fredricks) Ristine, the father being a native of Germany. Jacob and Catherine Ristine were married December 31, 1813, and became the parents of the following children: John A., born April 19, 1816; Sarah Jane, born January 16, 1818; William, born November 12, 1819; Jacob, born January 27, 1822; Catharine F., February 17, 1824; Philip, born in April 20, 1827; James, born December 4, 1834; Rebecca, born October 4, 1829; George C., born April 12, 1838; and Christiana, born March 4, 1836, wife of Joseph Thomas McClellan. The children of Mr. and Mrs. McClellan were: George R., born November 1, 1857; Katie, who was born September 14, 1860, and died in August, 1865; Elizabeth, who was born June 23, 1865, and married, April 22, 1896, Dr. Herbert T. Ziebarth, a graduate of the Chirurgical Medical College of Philadelphia, has one child, Christine McClellan, born May 16, 1897; Henry Joseph, who was born February 6, 1867, now a practicing physician and a graduate of Baltimore University, married Lillian G. Metzger of Jeffersonville, New York; Emma May, who was born April 16, 1869, and died May 13, 1876; Frank E., born April 29, 1871, who married Mary L. Moore of Haverford, has one child, Francis Moore; William J., born May 25, 1876, married Mary B. Hoyer of Philadelphia, and has one child, Laura Sparks, born March 9, 1902.

GEORGE C. RISTINE, a well known and successful business man of Bryn Mawr, Montgomery county, was born April 12, 1838, in Lower Merion township, in the same county. His parents were Jacob and Catharine (Fredrick) Ristine. Jacob Ristine came from the Fatherland with his parents, while an infant. He was reared to manhood in the vicinity of Philadelphia; the earlier years of his manhood were spent driving a mail stage coach between various points on the Lancaster turnpike. His latter years were spent in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He died in March, 1872, and his wife Catharine (Frederick) Ristine, died in 1859.

George C. Kistine was educated in the public schools, and, when a lad began to learn the carpenter's trade. After finishing his apprenticeship, he worked as a journeyman in Montgomery county until the opening of the Civil war, when he enlisted in Battery L, Second Pennsylvania Artillery, under Captain Paul Jones. He witnessed hard fighting, and participated in the engagement at Petersburg. After the close of the war he settled at Bryn Mawr, where for many years he has done an extensive business as a contractor and builder, being known throughout the county as a man of enterprise and integrity.

Mr. Ristine married, September 8, 1865, Susan, born February 1, 1846, a daughter of Benjamin and Mary (McClellan) Shank, of Lancaster. The following children have been born to them: 1. Anna, born October 10, 1866, who married Samuel, son of Joseph L. and Mary (Simes) Richards, and has three children; Joseph, Cyrus and George R. 2. George Howard, born October 10, 1868; 3. Frederick P., born November 10, 1871; 4. Florence E., born August 4, 1875; 5. Mary Elizabeth, born September 8, 1879; 6. Helen P., born January 26, 1882; 7. Miriam V., born April 9, 1885; 8. Charles S., born February 11, 1887.

ROBERT N. LEE, a venerable and highly respected citizen of Bryn Mawr, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he has contributed much towards the material advancement of the neighborhood in which he has resided for nearly forty years, is a native of Zanesville, Ohio, where he was born January 27, 1825, a son of William H. and Susan (Umstead) Lee.

William H. Lee was a native of Baltimore county, Maryland, where he was born in 1786, and was there educated and reared to manhood. During the war of 1812, he was loyal to his country's cause and served as a private soldier during the attack on Baltimore by the English. Soon after the cessation of hostilities, with others, he emigrated westward into Ohio, making the journey with a wagon and team of horses. After a tedious journey fraught with perils and hardships, he finally settled and took up lands by purchase, where the city of Zanesville now stands. He afterwards sold part of his lands to his brother, who in turn laid out the tract into building lots which have become an important part of the city of Zanesville, opposite the new concrete Y bridge. Mr. Lee was a man of strict integrity and reliability, and was for some time employed by the Bank of Zanesville as messenger to carry remittances to and from Cincinnati, the bank officials having placed so much confidence in his honesty that they would not require from him a bond of security as was usual in such cases. His son, Robert N. Lee, recalls an incident on one of the trips. His father was carrying the sum of fifty thousand dollars in silver in his wagon, when one of the wheels broke down. The son, Robert, was left entirely alone as guardian over the treasure, while the father carried the wheel to the nearest shop to have it repaired. Mr. Lee was united in marriage to Miss Susan Umstead, and to them were born the following children: 1. Margaretta, who became the wife of George Brenholtz; 2. Elizabeth, who married Wesley Ebert; 3. Ellen, who married Jacob Kircher; 4. Josephine, who became the wife of Charles Brenholtz; 5. Harriet, whose first husband was a Mr. Moore, and her second husband was John Ford; 6. Francis, unmarried; 7. Emma; 8. William, who married and resided at Zanesville, Ohio; 9. Robert N. Lee.

Robert N. Lee, youngest child of William H. and Susan (Umstead) Lee, was reared to manhood and acquired his education in the public schools of Zanesville, Ohio, and in the fall of 1851 removed to Pennsylvania, settling in Philadelphia, where in partnership with John Bancroft he established a wholesale notion business. Their enterprise, good management and systematic methods commended them to the public confidence and support, and they met with a large degree of success in their undertaking which they continued for a number of years. In 1863 Mr. Lee purchased a tract of land in Haverford township. A part of this land he afterwards sold for building purposes, thereby contributing in large degree to the growth and development of the neighborhood. He retired from active business pursuits in 1868. While a resident of Zanesville, Mr. Lee was a member of good standing in the order of Odd Fellows, but shortly after his removal to Pennsylvania he joined the Masonic order, affiliated with Cassia Lodge, No. 262, at Ardmore. Politically he is a staunch supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, was for twenty-five years a member of the Haverford township school board and served as president of the board for a number of years, an active member of the Lower Merion Baptist church, in which he has served as deacon for a number of years; he is also a member of the board of trustees, and has served as its president for some time.

About 1845, Mr. Lee married Miss Sarah Evaline Arter, daughter of William Henry and Sarah Arter. Their children are: 1. Henry A., who married Eugenia Harnish; 2. Ellen Clara, now the wife of Charles Hill Anderson, a son of the Rev. George W. and Maria Frances (Hill) Anderson; they had one child, Charles Lee Anderson; 3. Eva Randolph, now the wife of Fletcher Randolph, a son of the Rev. Warren and Malvina (Dunn) Randolph; their children are: Robert Lee, Frederick Warrren, and Norman Randolph; 4. Susan J., unmarried; 5. Ida Alice, who died in 1870; 6. Emma, the wife of William H. Turton of Brooklyn, New York; she died in 1886; 7. Charles Robert, who married Jeanetta Drysdale of Philadelphia, daughter of Dr. Thomas and Mary C. (Arter) Drysdale; they have one child, Jeanetta D. Lee; and 8. William F. Lee, who married Carrie M. Butler of Bryn Mawr, a daughter of J. E. Butler; they have one daughter, Frances B. Lee. The mother of this family, Sarah Evaline (Arter) Lee, died August 24, 1870. She was a most estimable lady of the old school type, was possessed of many excellencies of character, and was respected and esteemed by all who knew her.

JACOB ROBERTS ELFRETH. Josiah Elfretb came from England in 1682, about the time of William Penn. His wife was Hester Boyer, who, with their two sons, Henry and Jeremiah, came with him; the latter named soon after returned to England. Henry Elfretb married Sarah, daughter of John Gilbert, a merchant of Philadelphia. He was a ship builder by trade and is mentioned in Watson's "Annals of Philadelphia," in connection with some building transactions at Dock Creek.

His son Jeremiah was born in 1690, and was a blacksmith by trade, his place of business being on Front street, above Arch, at the corner of an alley or street running through to Second street, called Elfretb's Alley. He appears to have been a man of prominence both in civil and religious affairs, for Watson mentions the freedom of the city having been voted him. He was an elder in the Society of Friends (of which he was a member) for many years. He was married five times, his first wife being Sarah Oldman, to whom he was married at the Friends' Meeting House, southwest corner Indiana and Market streets, 4 mo., 12, 1716. He afterwards married Letitia Richardson, at the same place 5 mo., 8, 1731, then Elizabeth Massey, Rachel Seaman, and Mary Wells, none of whom survived him. He died in 1772. His daughter Mary married Josiah Dawson.

His son, Jeremiah Elfretb, was born in 1720. He was a silversmith, and married Hannah Trotter, 8 mo., 25, 1752, a daughter of Joseph and Dinah Trotter, the former a merchant of Philadelphia. He deceased 2 mo., 10, 1765, leaving a widow, who died in 1791, and two sons—Jeremiah, born 8, 2, 1754, and Josiah, born 5, 2, 1759, married Rachel Cathrall, sister of Dr. Cathrall; the former died in 1793 at the time of the yellow fever, which almost depopulated Philadelphia. 9 mo., 8, the day of his death, he was visited by his brother Jeremiah, and as he arose to leave him he got up, and sat on the side of the bed, and taking his brother by the hand said, "Brother, farewell, I am going to that land where none of the inhabitants thereof can say 'I am sick.'" This was at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and before 8 o'clock that evening he was in the ground. As soon as the breath left the body, and often before, the dying were buried; it is believed that hundreds were buried before they were dead. It was indeed a dreadful time; many as soon as stricken with the fever were deserted by their relatives, parents leaving children, children leaving parents, and husbands and wives leaving each other to the mercy of strangers, many of them hard and unkind.

He left two sons, John and Isaac, who were engaged in the East India trade, the former dying in Canton. His brother Jeremiah went to Haddonfield, New Jersey, in early life, where he carried on the cabinet trade as cabinet maker and joiner, as they were styled in early times; he also carried on farming. He was married in 1775 to Mary Taylor, a daughter of Jacob and Hannah Roberts, and had ten children: Joseph T., Josiah, Hannah, Mary, Sarah, Jeremiah, Elizabeth, Jeremiah (the first having deceased), Jacob R., and John.

During the Revolutionary war, in 1777, the British army passed through Haddonfield with a detachment of Hessians, and many of the inhabitants suffered from them. Jeremiah Elfretb was one of these. Being a member of the Society of Friends he could not engage in war, though his sympathies were with the Colonists. All who were suspected of sympathy with them were pointed out as the army passed along and their stock was taken and their property destroyed. A number of soldiers entered his house. His wife had just taken the baby from the cradle when one of them ran his bayonet through the cradle to the floor. They then began breaking the furniture. One of them went to the china cupboard, and running his hand back on each shelf swept the dishes to the floor, remarking, as he did so, "Well, my lady, this is what George Washington has done for you." The presence of an officer, who came in that moment saved her from further harm, the soldiers going out the back door. The officer asked for something to eat, which she gave him. He told her they intended to remain in the place till the next day, and asked if she could lodge them, to which she consented. After eating and sitting awhile writing, he arose to go, remarking that he would soon be back. She told him that she was afraid of her life should the soldiers return. He replied, "While I do stand here no harm shall come to you," and unbricking his sword from his side he laid it on the table saying, "You need now have no fear, and then" went out. Several times during his absence the door was opened by soldiers, who looked in, and seeing the sword, immediately departed. The officer returned about ten o'clock, remained all night, got his breakfast, and on leaving paid her in gold for his accommodation with many thanks for her kindness. In after years, in referring to that awful night, she would speak with much feeling of the loving kindness of her Heavenly Father in protecting her and her child from harm. She was a minister in the Society of Friends, and greatly beloved by friends and neighbors; she deceased in 1813. Jeremiah, who had taken refuge in the hay-mow in the barn, was discovered by some soldiers who were getting hay for their horses, and was taken prisoner and confined in the guard house with a number of others until the next day, when they were released. Jeremiah deceased in 1825, aged seventy-one years.

The babe, who was in his mother's arms, was Joseph, and grew to manhood without much love for the English, and on the breaking out of the war of 1812 he departed from the peace principles of the Society and joined the army, being an officer in one of the New Jersey regiments. He married Mary Thackary, in 1797, and had two children, Jeremiah and Hannah. In 1809 he married Elizabeth Denny, by whom he had four children—Samuel, Josiah, John and Mary, all of whom married and had families. Josiah went to New Orleans in early life, where he married Anna Lockbridge, whose father was a wealthy planter about one hundred miles above New Orleans, where he had a large plantation and many slaves. At the breaking out of the Civil war, Josiah's sympathies were with the south, and two of his sons were in the Rebel army, one with the rank of colonel. His sister Mary's son was in the Union army, was taken prisoner, and was fifteen months in Andersonville. When released at the close of the war, he weighed but seventy-five pounds. Thousands of Union men were starved to death in that horrible pen.

Jeremiah's daughter Hannah married Joshua Brick, of Egg Harbor, New Jersey, 3 mo., 23, 1806. They had two children, Hannah E., and Joshua, both of whom married and have families. Her sister Mary married Samuel Allen, of Salem, New Jersey, 11 mo., 23, 1809, and had eight children—David, Mary, Samuel, Jeremiah, Rebecca, Edward, Joseph and Hannah. A number of these married and had families.

Jacob R. Elfreth, son of Jeremiah Elfreth, who was born 3 mo., 8, 1789, was a notable character of his day. He was one of the first pupils of the Westtown Friends' School, when it was opened in 1799, and many years of his life were devoted to the interests of this institution in official capacities. In early life he was apprenticed to learn the hardware trade, but soon abandoned this to become a teacher in New Jersey. From there he came to the Westtown school, which he taught for some years and of which during 1814 and 1816, he acted both as teacher and librarian. At a later period he became bookkeeper for the Leligh Navigation Company, and remained with this company until his retirement from active business a few years before his death in 1870.

Jacob R. Elfreth married Abigail Pierce, daughter of Caleb and Jane Peirce, 8 mo., 25, 1821. Her father was a hardware merchant on Market street, above Second, in Philadelphia, and was a grandson of Caleb Peirce, who came over with William Penn and settled in Thornbury, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Jacob R. and Abigail Elfreth had ten children, viz: Joseph; Jane, who died aged three months; Jane P., Caleb P., Sarah (deceased); James, Rebecca P., Jacob R., Mary and Robert M.

Joseph Elfreth married Hannah, daughter of John and Esther Hill, in 1851, and settled in Hadonfield; they had three children—Florence, John, Esther; the eldest, married Samuel Redman, in 1876, and had three children—Florence, Harriet and Hannah. Florence married J. Linton Engle, and they have one son, Joseph Redman.

Jane P. Elfreth married Dr. James Morris Corse, in 1858, and had two children, Margaret and James M.; the former married Andrew J. Ayers, in 1894; they had six children—Margaret, Ruth, Dorothy, Roger, Donald and Theodore.

Caleb P. Elfreth married Annie M. Shepherd, in 1855; they had seven children—Jacob R., Annie M., Rebecca P., Caleb P., Elizabeth B., Robert M. and Gustavus A., all of whom married and have families except Rebecca P., who died in early life. Jacob R., married Alice DuBois in 1882; their children are Harold, Caleb P., Randolph and Alice. Annie M., married Frederick Starling, in 1890; they had three children, of whom only one is now living, Frederick. Elizabeth married Mitchell B. Brooks, in 1883; they have one child, Annie M. Caleb P. Elfreth, Jr., married Sarah Lanning, in 1892; they have one child, Henry. Robert M. Elfreth married Mary Clothier, in 1893; they have one child, Mary. Gustavus A. Elfreth married Charlotta Lanning, in 1894; they have four children.

James Elfreth married Ann, daughter of John and Phoebe Benington, in 1857; her father died recently in Media, aged one hundred years; to James and Ann Elfreth were born seven children, all of whom died in early life excepting John Benington and Miriam. John Benington Elfreth married Virginia Miller, in 1879; they had four children, William Henry, Anna, John Benington and Edith.

The other children of Jacob R. and Abigail

ISAAC T. JONES, Sr.

Elfreth were Rebecca P.; Jacob Roberts; Mary, deceased; and Robert Mendenhall, deceased.

Jacob Roberts Elfreth, eighth child in the last mentioned family, was born at Philadelphia, 10 mo., 22, 1837. He attended the school taught by Lydia Reeves, and finished his education in the Friends' Select School at Philadelphia. In 1854 he was apprenticed to the wholesale dry goods firm of J. R. Sower & Company, with whom he remained five years, and then joined his brother James in establishing a retail carpet business. They remained together until 1862, when James retired and Jacob, after continuing the business until 1870, also closed his mercantile career by retirement. Shortly afterward he went to Darby, where he lived until 1901, and then removed to his present location in Lansdowne. While engaged in merchandising he had been appointed trustee and executor to settle many estates, and this led him indirectly to dealing in real estate, which he followed to a considerable extent. While in Darby in 1876 he was elected a member of the school board, and three years later was elected to the office of secretary of the board, which position he held until 1898, the longest continuous service in that capacity of any incumbent. Mr. Elfreth is one of the trustees of the Friends' Meeting at Lansdowne as well as one of the overseers, and throughout life has been an earnest as well as efficient factor in the cause of education. His political affiliations have always been with the Republican party.

ISAAC T. JONES, SR. The Jones family in Eastern Pennsylvania, and of which the subject of this review is a descendant, has for many generations, been prominently connected with the social and material interests of this section of the state. The first ancestor of whom we have any information was Paul Jones, who was among the early colonists who came to this part of what was then the Province of Pennsylvania. He married Phoebe ———, and among his children was a son who bore his father's name, Paul (2), who married Tacy Davis, and among their children was a son, Isaac T. Jones.

Paul Jones (2) was born in what is now Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, 6 mo., 27, 1776, and here he followed farming. He married Tacy Davis, who was born 9 mo., 16, 1777, and to this union were born the following children:

1. Mary Ann, born 12 mo., 31, 1799. She married Isaac Heston, who resided at Hestonville, formerly a suburb of Philadelphia.

2. William D., born 8 mo., 3, 1802. He married Frances Lloyd, and to them was born one child, Susan Lloyd, now Mrs. Joel J. Bally, of Darby, Delaware county.

3. Susan D., born 3 mo., 31, 1804. She married Jacob Fry.

4. Isaac T., born 5 mo., 20, 1806, who is the subject of this memoir.

5. Esther F., born 4 mo., 11, 1810. She married Lewis Yerkes.

6. J. Davis, born 5 mo., 20, 1812, who married Hannah R. Price, daughter of Edward and Hannah (Jones) Price. Of this union were born the following children: (1). Amanda P., born 1837, married Reuben Bally; (2). William D., born 1839, he married Louisa Bally; (3) Mary Y., born 1841; she married William F. Davis; (4). Lydia W., born in 1843; she died unmarried in 1876; (5). Paul, born in 1845; he married Ella Wilkinson; (6). Edward P., born in 1847; he married Elizabeth Fornance; (7). Susan F., born in 1849; she died unmarried; (8). Isaac T., born 12 mo., 28, 1851; he married Mary E. H. Eastwick; (9). Emily W., born in 1854; she married George Williamson.

7. Justus P., born 5 mo., 15, 1814. He married Margaretta Erben, and after her death married Margaret Yerkes.

8. Emily, born 6 mo., 9, 1816. She married William Warner Roberts.

9. Elizabeth, born 2 mo., 21, 1819, who died 6 mo., 24, 1819.

Tacy Davis Jones, the mother of this family, died 10 mo., 13, 1847, and her husband, Paul Jones, died 9 mo., 11, 1857. Both were eminently respectable people, and were consistent members of the Society of Friends.

Isaac T. Jones, the fourth child of Paul and Tacy (Davis) Jones, was born at the Jones homestead, in Lower Merion township, nearly opposite Manayunk, and here the lad attended the schools of the neighborhood. He did not take kindly to rural life and the routine of farm work, and came to Philadelphia, where he engaged in a mercantile business with his brother, William D. Jones. During the Civil war period they carried on a very large trade, and when it closed the members of the firm were comparatively wealthy.

It was in October, 1860, that Mr. Jones became a resident of Darby and entered upon that connection with its affairs which proved of such great usefulness to the community. For a year he occupied the home at the corner of Chester and Hook roads, and in August of 1861, he bought from John D. Bartram, a residence on Lansdowne avenue, one unsurpassable for beauty and desirability of location, and which was thenceforth his home and the scene of the latter years of his married life, and after the death of his children and his wife, here, with another loved companion he passed his later years, dispensing a gracious and abundant hospitality. As was said of him by an admiring friend, he approached more nearly a good old country squire than any one of the excellent community among which he dwelt. He was noted for his openhanded benevolence. He did not care to increase his wealth but expended a generous share of his ample income in providing for the necessity of the sick and poor. Many families in Darby lived entirely, or in part upon the bounty which he afforded them in person, and he called to his aid three worthy women who were commissioned to discover deserving cases and draw upon him for means as they found advisable. One small item of expense which he assumed was the annual purchase of considerable quantities of coal. His aid was also freely extended to aiding worthy men in the establishment of business and home making, and every good act of his life was performed with a hearty cheerfulness and lack of ostentation which proclaimed the fact that he took a genuine delight in contributing to the well-being of his fellows.

In public affairs he ever manifested a lively interest, and was among the foremost in advancing whatever was promising of advantage to the community in material and moral ways. A man of excellent judgment and accurate business methods, he was frequently called upon to manage and close up estates, and in discharge of such trusts guarded the interests of the widow and orphan with the same fidelity that he would his own. He was deeply interested in the Darby Library Association, of which he was president for several years preceding his death, and he contributed in larger degree than did any other to the procurement of the fund for the erection of the handsome library building. He was chief burgess in 1869 and again in 1873, and was a member of the council in 1864-65. He was an ideal public servant, caring for community interests as religiously as he did for his own family and for his church. In religion he was a communicant of St. James church, Protestant Episcopal, in which he was a vestryman for twenty-four years, and a warden for fourteen years.

Mr. Jones was married 3 mo., 6, 1834, to Mary P. Bowen, a daughter of Daniel and Mary R. (Paine) Bowen, of Boston. Three children were born to them: 1. William B., born 12 mo., 22, 1834, who died 8 mo., 7, 1836; 2. Margaretta B., born 7 mo., 1, 1837, who died 9 mo., 4, 1838; 3. Charles B., born 4 mo., 11, 1840, who died 3 mo., 3, 1863. The mother of these children died 1 mo., 20, 1857. Mr. Jones married 12 mo., 3, 1863, Louisa Castner, who was born 10 mo., 14, 1812, a daughter of Jacob and Hannah Castner, of White Hall. This union was childless, and the pair made their home a delightful place of visitation by the young of the neighborhood, into whose enjoyments they entered with parental delight. Mrs. Jones died 1 mo., 29, 1888, and her husband survived her less than two months, dying the following 3 mo., 1. He maintained his physical and mental faculties to almost the very last, and was at the age of eighty-two, as quick in movement and discernment as a lad. In the ending of his long, useful and unselfish life he left a vacancy in the community such as there was none to fill.

ISAAC T. JONES, JR., of Lansdowne, Upper Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born 12 mo., 28, 1851, in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, nearly opposite Manayunk. His parents were Joel Davis and Hannah R. (Price) Jones, who have been written of in a preceding sketch.

His preliminary education was obtained in the schools in the neighborhood where he was born. When he was about twelve years of age he went to live with his uncle, the late Isaac T. Jones, Sr., of Lansdowne, Delaware county, and that estimable man, with his family, bestowed upon the lad the most affectionate care. While with them he attended the Friends' School in Darby for a time, and then became a student in the Friends' Central School in Philadelphia, from which he was graduated with credit. He then entered the wholesale dry goods house of J. B. Kempton & Company, in Philadelphia, and his connection with this firm was pleasantly and usefully maintained for a period of about ten years. In 1881 he went west, and was for three years engaged in a dry goods trade in Colorado Springs, Colorado, in partnership with Edward Ferris. He relinquished this business in 1884, and took up his residence in Lansdowne, Pennsylvania. He soon engaged in business pursuits to which he devoted himself with great activity, so long as his health would permit. He was an active partner in the Warner H. Jenkins Company, of Philadelphia, a firm which transacted a large business as paving contractors in the city and its suburbs, and he was a special partner in the firm of William B. Riley & Company, manufacturers of horse goods. He was also a director in the Citizens' Electric Light and Power Company of Clifton Heights, and he was for several years a member of the Darby Borough Council. In all these various relations he displayed business qualities of a high order, and a commendable public spirit, while his integrity was unimpeachable. He was a communicant and a vestryman of St. James church (Protestant Episcopal) of Kingsessing, and a liberal patron of the Home for Children, maintained in Angora by this denomination. He was, in 1902, vice-president of the Lansdowne Cricket Club, and he was re-elected in 1903, but declined to serve on account of declining health.

ISAAC T. JONES, Jr.

Mr. Jones was married April 12, 1882, to Miss Mary E. H. Eastwick, a daughter of Andrew M. and Lydia A. Eastwick, of Philadelphia. Four children were born of this marriage: Katharine E., born April 3, 1885; Isaac T., born September 3, 1888; Arthur K., born October 20, 1889, and Horace D., born December 12, 1893.

For several of his later years Mr. Jones had been in poor health. In January, 1895, he voyaged to the Bermudas, where he sojourned for a time, finding some improvement, but he soon began to again decline, and died of Bright's disease May 20, 1895, at his beautiful home, "Elmscroft," on Lansdowne avenue. The funeral services were held in his home, according to the beautiful and time honored ritual of the Protestant Episcopal faith. The officiating clergymen were the Rev. Dr. Maison, a former rector, the Rev. Mr. Gilberson, his successor, and the Rev. Dr. Keefer, who was formerly rector at Colorado Springs, Colorado, and who journeyed from Pittsburg to pay his last and fervent tribute to his departed friend and former parishioner. The remains were then tenderly laid away in a flower-filled grave in West Laurel Hill cemetery.

The death of Mr. Jones was sincerely deplored throughout the community, both in Lansdowne and in Darby. A gentleman, in all the fullness of meaning of the words, he had endeared himself to all through his beauty of character and his helpfulness to all sorrowful or suffering ones. He was zealous in the cause of true charity, and obeyed the scriptural mandate to do good without display. His benefactions were always cheerfully bestowed, and none really needy ever came to him in vain. His home life was one of ideal domestic happiness, and the admiration of a charming circle of friends.

Among the many beautiful tributes paid to the memory of Mr. Jones, the resolutions adopted by the vestry of St. James church were peculiarly touching, and were as follows:

Whereas, It has pleased an All Wise Providence to remove from our midst, one of our vestrymen, Isaac T. Jones; be it therefore Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the decree, knowing that He who protects and looks over us all, does not afflict only for the well-being of his people.

That the church and vestry do recognize in the death of our late associate and esteemed fellow member, the loss of one of its most active and useful members, steadfast in the belief, benevolent, and loving, and earnestly interested in all matters concerning its welfare. Be it further

Resolved, That we desire to extend to his bereaved family our sincere condolence in their hour of sorrow, and that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family, and also spread upon our minutes.

LEVI LUKENS. The Lukens family is one of the old and substantial ones of Pennsylvania, and numbers among its representatives some of the leading lights of the state. Levi Lukens, grandfather of our subject, came to Delaware county from Plymouth, Montgomery county. He embarked in the business of tanning and currying on the Sellar's property on West Chester road, which he carried on for many years. He then bought the Ashurst property on the Linc road, and operated it as a farm. Levi Lukens married Mary Jones, and they had a family of thirteen children, as follows

1. Elizabeth, born 8 mo., 3, 1788, married Townsend Cooper and their children are—Joseph, Sarah, Levi, Mary and Joanna H. Cooper;
2. Sarah, born 3 mo., 4, 1790, married Benjamin Pauling and their children are—Jesse, Elizabeth, Maggie and Mary Pauling, who lived to quite an old age;
3. Nathan, born 11 mo., 27, 1791, married Sarah Naylor Lincoln and two children were born to them—Levi and Elizabeth L.
4. Ann, born 1 mo., 26, 1794;
5. Hannah, born 12 mo., 25, 1795, married William Bryan and they are the parents of three children—Elizabeth, Mary Ann and Lewis Bryan;
6. Norris, born 6 mo., 26, 1798, was unmarried and died in an accident;
7. Margaret, born 4 mo., 5, 1800, became the wife of Jehu Jones, no issue;
8. Clement, born 3 mo., 31, 1802, married Pauline ———, no issue;
9. Lewis, born 3 mo., 15, 1804, married Ann Smith and they were the parents of three children—Norris Jones, Elizabeth Moore and Mary Jane;
10. Gibson I., born 3 mo., 2, 1807;
11. Mary R., born 5 mo., 15, 1809, became the wife of Townsend Cooper, who was formerly the husband of her deceased sister, Elizabeth; they were the parents of six children, four of whom died when but a few weeks old, and the surviving members of the family were—Elizabeth and Margaret;
12. Sarah, born 1 mo., 20, 1811; it is hardly probable that this daughter was named Sarah, as the first Sarah was yet living;
13. Abraham, born 4 mo., 11, 1814.

Levi Lukens, the subject of this sketch, and the eldest in the family of Nathan Lukens, was born on the old Butler place in Upper Darby and attended school at the old Stone school for a short time, after which he went to a private school at Norristown, and still later to the Pine Grove School at West Chester. When he arrived at the age of twenty-one years, his father turned the farm over to him, and he commenced farming on a property of one hundred and seventy-five acres, later developing his dairy and making a specialty of dairy products. For many years he furnished milk, cream and butter to a large territory, but at present, while he operates his farm, the other part of the business has been given to the charge of his son, John S. Lukens, who is recognized as one of the best business men in the county. The residence is one of the finest in this locality, thoroughly fitted with modern conveniences, and the entire farm is first class in every particular.

Mr. Lukens married Mary E. Shaffner, who is a daughter of John and Mary E. (Metzger) Shaffner of Lancaster City, Pennsylvania. The children of Levi and Mary E. (Shaffner) Lukens are as follows: 1. Laura, born December 31, 1860; 2. Nathan, born May 28, 1862; he married a Miss Vandever and has children: Shaffner, born June 12, 1897; Nathan, born September, 1898; Donald, born June, 1900; 3. Mary, born June 24, 1864; 4. John S. Shaffner, born January 29, 1867; he married Elizabeth Courtney, and has children, Mary Lindell, born July 13, 1897, Levi Courtney, born July 24, 1899, Elizabeth, born November 12, 1902. 5. George, born January 17, 1869. 6. Kate Estelle, born February 27, 1875.

While the life of Levi Lukens has been an uneventful one, he has always carried out any duty imposed upon him, and, while not desiring political preferment, served for nine years as assessor of the township. In 1863 he assisted in raising a company of infantry and was out for six weeks, being attached to the Sixteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, taking an active part in the battle of Antietam. He was made second lieutenant of this company under Captain Amos Bonsall of Upper Darby. Upon his return Mr. Lukens resumed his life of farming, and is one of the most highly respected men of his township.

ARCHIBALD ANDERSON, one of the leading florists of Lansdowne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a respected citizen of the borough, was born in Ireland, December 10, 1832, and there received his education and grew to manhood. About 1850 he emigrated to America and began work in the home of his adoption as a gardener, his ambition being to accumulate sufficient money to engage in a milk business.

After several years he found himself in a position where such was possible, and he began business for himself as a milkman, and followed this calling for twenty-six years. During this entire time, however, his tastes led him to experiment in various horticultural lines, and finally (in 1887) he embarked as a florist, making a specialty of growing the finest strains of roses. As soon as this business was well established, he disposed of his other interests and devoted himself exclusively to his new enterprise. His houses cover half an acre, and all of his product is sent to a wholesale house in Philadelphia, although if he desired a local trade he would have more customers than his establishment could supply. His plant consists of five large houses and a complete steam heating apparatus, including a 50-horse-power boiler, and he is contemplating adding to his present space, the demands of his market being already too large for his capacity. He purchased this property from Robert Smith, in 1868, and it then consisted of twenty-one acres. This property he has been improving ever since, and he now produces three hundred roses per day. By nature Mr. Anderson is a florist, and his success is largely due to his love for his calling and his thorough understanding of all its requirements.

Mr. Anderson was married to Mary Blackburn, who was born October 2, 1834. The children born to them are as follows: Kathryn, who married Edward Reed, and they have two children, Helen and Lloyd; James, who married Elizabeth Reed, who died leaving one child, James, Jr.; David, who married Mattie Runyon, and has two children, Pauline and Harold; Mary who is unmarried; Archie and Martha, twins, who are unmarried; William, who married Bessie R. Lindsay, and they have two children, Russell and David; and Anna C., who is unmarried.

In politics Mr. Anderson is a Republican, but while interested in local affairs, he has been too much absorbed in his business to take an active part in such matters. Religiously he is a consistent Presbyterian, and gives liberally to the support of that denomination.

SAMUEL D. LOCKE, of Lansdowne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Camden, New Jersey, August 22, 1837. He is the son of David and Beulah (Cranmer) Locke. His mother was a daughter of Hezekiah and Hannah (Willis) Cranmer. On her death her husband, David L., married Eliza Crispin, who was a direct descendant of William Crispin, who was William Penn's first commissioner in the Province of Pennsylvania.

Samuel D. Locke received his education in the public schools of Camden, and upon completing his studies entered the employ of John and Edward Reed of Camden, New Jersey, to learn the retail wall paper trade; there he remained until 1866, when he went to Philadelphia where, with Charles D. Middleton as a partner, he engaged in the wall paper business for himself. His undertaking proved very successful and he carried on the business until 1900, when he retired from active connection with it.

Harry M. Davis

Politically Mr. Locke has always been identified with the Republican party, and has taken an active part in town affairs, and always with an eye to the beneficial effect of a proposed measure on the community at large. His religious affiliations have ever been with the Baptist church.

On December 24, 1866, Mr. Locke married Jennie Louise Orangee, a daughter of Robert and Hannah Louise Orangee, by whom he has had a family of four children, namely: Caroline Howe, born November 19, 1867; Charles Middleton, born August 8, 1870, now deceased; Jennie Louise, born December 13, 1872; William Ellwood, born November 3, 1875; Beulah Cranmer and Ethel Custis, both deceased; and Florence Barrick, born March 6, 1883.

Robert Orangee, father of Mrs. Locke, was born in Lyons, France. He came to this country and married Hannah Louise Gascoigne, in New York city, about 1840. His wife, Hannah, was the daughter of George Gascoigne, who was a son of George, a prominent French Huguenot. A paternal relation of Mrs. Orangee, in the person of one Sarah Gascoigne, came to this country from Loudon and settled in Troy, New York, where she married one Charles Hall. Her daughter Louisa Hall married William T. Powers, who was afterwards made mayor of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

MORGAN R. DAVIS, a successful and progressive citizen of Haverford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in the county of Philadelphia, December 7, 1830. He is of Welsh descent, his grandfather, a native of Wales, being the first of the family to come to the United States. He married and had sons, among whom was Err, who presumably was born in the State of Maryland, from whence he came and took up his abode in the vicinity of Philadelphia. He was married at Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, to Mary Pawling, a daughter of Isaac and Barbara (Wampole) Pawling, and of this marriage were born twelve children as follows: 1. Elijah P., who married Ellen Young; 2. Morgan Reese, to be further referred to in this narrative; 3. Barbara (Mrs. William Morgan); 4. Mersey A. (Mrs. Daniel Shupert); 5. Isaac, who settled in Arkansas, where he married; 6. Emily, who did not marry; 7. John, who died in childhood; 8. Rebecca, (Mrs. Wesley Smith); 9. Annie, who did not marry; 10. Err, Jr., who went west and has not been heard of for many years; 11. Joseph L., who died in childhood; 12. one not named, who died in infancy. Both the parents of this family died in West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, the father in January, 1885, and the mother two years later.

Morgan Reese Davis acquired his educational training in the schools of the neighborhood of his birth place, and when he attained young manhood set out to make his own way in the world and took up the tilling of the soil for his life work. By industry and frugality he accumulated sufficient capital to purchase a farm for himself and in 1867 he came to Haverford township, and here purchased the old Squire Samuel Davis farm near Llanerch, where he has since resided, and has by his thrift and enterprise contributed materially to the progress and advancement of the neighborhood.

Mr. Davis was married in Philadelphia county, November 22, 1860, to Eliza B. Roberts, who was born April 11, 1841, a daughter of William and Hannah (Wilson) Roberts. Of this marriage have been born the following children: 1. Irwin, born August 15, 1862, died March 8, 1863; 2. Clara L., born August 16, 1864; died September 12, 1897; 3. William R., born April 22, 1866; he married Elizabeth Jones, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Davis) Jones; 4. Harry M., of whom a sketch appears in this work; 5. Sarah, born June 4, 1869; 6. Nellie, born June 15, 1874 (Mrs. Dr. Francis Clemens) of Philadelphia; 7. Cresson R., born October 14, 1877; he married Margaret Johnson, daughter of Alexander and Sophia (Moore) Johnson; 8. John H., born August 6, 1879; 9. Morgan Reese, Jr., born June 3, 1881.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Davis are highly esteemed and respected for their genuine worth and excellent neighborly qualities.

HARRY MORGAN DAVIS was born in Haverford, Pennsylvania, February 28, 1868, and is a son of Morgan Reese and Eliza (Roberts) Davis. His paternal grandparents were Err and Elizabeth (Pawling) Davis, while on the maternal side the grandparents were William and Hannah (Wilson) Roberts. Unto the marriage of Morgan R. and Eliza Davis were born nine children, namely: Err and Clara Louise, both deceased; William Robert, who married Lizzie Jones; Henry Morgan, of this review, who wedded Emily R. Johnson, and has one child, Clara Louise; Sarah, who is a resident of Llanerch; Cresson Reese, who married Margaret Johnson; Nellie, who is the widow of Francis Clemens; John Hall; and Morgan R. Davis.

Harry M. Davis, whose name introduces this record, obtained his early education in the public school, and afterward became a student in a private school conducted by Rachel Emma Bond, at Upper Darby, Pennsylvania. Subsequently he entered the Hotchkiss School at Marple, and next went to the West Chester Normal School, while later he became a student in the Millersville State Normal, after which he prepared for his business career by matriculating in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, completing its regular course and graduating in 1892. Mr. Davis then entered the store of John P. Frey as manager, occupying that position for a short time, after which he went to Ardmore, Pennsylvania, to take charge of the store owned by Mrs. S. F. Sattelman. In November, 1896, he arrived in Lansdowne, where he began business for himself, and since that time he has purchased the property he now occupies, its former owner having been Henry C. Statsall. It was known as the Pennock corner, and Mr. Davis has a fine building here, it being one of the pleasing architectural features of the town. It is splendidly equipped for the purpose used, and in it he has a large and well selected stock of general druggist goods, medicines, toilet articles, and in fact everything found in a first class establishment of the kind. At the present writing, in 1903, he is erecting a fine business block at East Lansdowne, where he intends to open another store. In his mercantile career he has been very successful, and his enterprise and industry are salient features in his business life. He carefully prepared for the work which he undertook, and as soon as his labors had brought him a sufficient capital he embarked in business on his own account, and has since steadily progressed until he is now numbered among the representative merchants of Lansdowne.

Mr. Davis is also active in matters of citizenship contributing to the general good, and at the present time is serving as a member of the board of health of Lansdowne, having been appointed in 1902. Socially he is connected with Cassia Lodge, No. 273, F. & A. M., at Ardmore. In his political views he is a stalwart Republican, while in religious faith he is a Presbyterian. His marked industry, keen business discernment and enterprise have been potent factors in winning him prosperity, and his deference for the opinion of others, his kindness and geniality, have gained for him the friendship and favor of many with whom he has been brought in contact.

HENRY MIDDLETON HOFFNER. This gentleman is one of the best known dairy farmers in Upper Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and may be said to have passed a model life in different branches of activity, such as the world brings to the ordinary man. His parents, Samuel and Sarah (Elfry) Hoffner had nine children, as follows: Catherine, who died young; Henry M., to be mentioned in the following paragraph; Phillip Elfry, who died young; Edward Morris, who married Sarah Rankin; Mary, the wife of Andrew Rex; Anna Margaret, the wife of Samuel Root, and they have one child, Lena; Samuel D., single; George W., deceased; Albert W., deceased.

Henry Middleton Hoffner was born in what is known as Old Philadelphia, on November 21, 1839. When he was in the period when the modern boy passes his time in the attendance of school and in the countless diversions and sports of youth, life had a somewhat sterner hue, and he was able to attend the district school only during the limited winter season, and in the summer was compelled to assist the other members of the family in eking a living from the farm. He began his education in the Landreth school, and one of his schoolmates was the later famous Philadelphia merchant, John Wanamaker. He later attended the Girard school and at fourteen years of age attended the Weccaco Grammar School, and then the Buckroads, which ended his fundamental training. He decided to learn the carpenter's trade, and for this purpose he apprenticed himself to Henry Barry and Riego Taylor. During the time of apprenticeship he received the munificent wage of two dollars and a half a week, and with this he had to provide all the necessaries for himself. But the many men who have had this same experience agree that by it they laid the foundation for their future success in the care which they were compelled to exercise in regard to expenditures. When he was of age he ended his novitiate with them, and for a time went back and worked on the farm, but in 1862 he engaged in carpentry. One of the first pieces of work on which he was employed was the Satterlee Hospital, and from then on to the close of the war he was employed in shipbuilding for the government. He then followed his trade continuously until 1876, after which he engaged in the sash and door business for a short time. He had moved to Upper Darby in 1873, and in 1885, when he closed out his business, he bought the Powell place of seven and a half acres, on which he started a dairy farm. He is now engaged in this most pleasant and profitable branch of farming, and one for which Delaware county is noted, and he disposes of all his products to his son Harry, who has one of the best paying routes for dairy produce in the township.

Mr. Hoffner was married to Eliza Fryburg, who was the daughter of John L. and Eliza (Phillips) Fryburg, and five children have been born to them: Emma Mason is single; Sarah, Eliza and Ida all died young; Harry married Elizabeth Atkins, a daughter of Harry and Elizabeth Atkins, and they have one child, Emma May.

Mr. Hoffner was made a Mason in 1868; and later was one of the charter members of Fernwood Lodge No. 543, of which he was elected treasurer in 1884 and has held the office ever since. He joined the West Philadelphia Lodge No. 572, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in 1865, and has been a member since that time. There is no stancher Republican in the township than Mr. Hoffner, and he has voted for every presidential candidate from Lincoln to McKinley. In 1894 he was elected to the office of township supervisor and served three consecutive terms.

JAMES EDMUND GARRETSON, M. D., son of Jacob M. and Mary Powell Garretson, was born in Wilmington, Delaware, October 28, 1828, where his early boyhood was passed. His thoughts turning to a professional life, he removed to Philadelphia and pursued a course in dentistry at the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery, from which he was graduated in 1857. Desiring also to become a graduate of medicine, he entered the University of Pennsylvania from which he obtained the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1859. For some years after his graduation he practiced dentistry, and at the same time he became more interested in surgery. He gradually became a specialist in the line of oral surgery, and was recognized throughout the United States an accepted authority on diseases of the mouth, jaw, face and associate parts. He introduced the use of the surgical engine, a plan of operating which has worked a revolution in the methods of operations upon the bony system. Against opposition he successfully demonstrated the cure of epithelial cancer by means of what is professionally known as the "flap transfer," an operation now generally in favor among skilled practitioners. Dr. Garretson invented many operations which attracted widespread attention both in this country and abroad; and operations without resultant scars are results for which much credit is due to him in the surgical world. An operation designed and practiced by him, and conceded to be one of the high refinements of surgery, is the removal of the inferior maxillary nerve, as it lies in its canal, without disfiguring the face. In 1861 he was associated with Dr. D. Hayes Agnew in the Philadelphia School of Anatomy, and in 1878 he was called to the chair of Anatomy and Oral Surgery in the Philadelphia Dental College. He had been an instructor for a short time some years before in the same institution, but had resigned in order to accept a similar position in the Philadelphia School of Anatomy. Again becoming a member of the faculty of the Philadelphia Dental College, he was shortly after appointed to the responsible position of dean of the college, which position he filled until his death. Apart from his anatomical lectures, Dr. Garretson delivered every winter for a number of years a series of philosophical lectures before an association of young people composed for the most part of the students of the colleges with which he was connected. They called themselves the Garretsonian Society, the object of which was a seeking after the deeper truths of living. In 1884 he accepted a chair in the Medico-Chirurgical College, and later became president of the same institution.

The founding of a hospital had long been a cherished scheme of his, and in a very small way an oral hospital had already been started, but seeing an opportunity for a larger work in that direction, he gained the co-operation of his colleagues and a few friends, and the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital was founded. Under his able leadership, for he was chosen president of it, the work grew with surprising rapidity, and established for itself a firm foundation and an assured position among institutions of its kind. During all these years of ceaseless activity, Dr. Garretson found time, by economizing the minutes, to become a successful literary man; his writings with the exception of professional articles and a volume on oral surgery, which later became the accepted text book on that subject, and which had a large sale in America, England and throughout the entire civilized world, are all of a philosophical nature. In his profession he was an energetic busy man, and in the library an earnest searcher after truth, a dreamy thinker. As a humanitarian and a philosopher he was less widely known than as a surgeon, and the former phase of his character he would be the last to desire to have made known. His love for humanity and his desire to aid was such that he felt the whole world his brother; none were too poor or sinful but they might claim a brother's loving sympathy and help. Only those, and they are many, to whom his hand had been stretched forth, will ever know how much he was able to do for suffering mankind; as a physician he healed their bodies—as a friend their souls. He was a free thinker in the real meaning of the term, inasmuch as his philosophy was broad enough to embrace the whole world, regardless of creed and belief. There is good in all things and all men, was one of his favorite sayings, and one which will throw a light upon the way in which he looked upon mankind was this Braminical salutation "To the divinity that is within you I do homage." For those having been reared in a belief their growing intelligence could not altogether sanction, he had the most profound pity; it was one of the strongest feelings of his life that they must be helped to a clearer and fuller meaning of life and living. A belief once destroyed is infinitely harder to cope with than where there was disbelief from the beginning. It was for these people he labored so long and earnestly and for whom his books were written, and not for those whose belief in the goodness of God was unshaken; they were not in need of his ministrations, but for those who doubted the existence of a God did his whole soul go out in pity and a strong desire to help them to a knowledge of the Creator. Coming in touch with so many students in his professional life as a teacher, he very soon came to see that a sad state of what might be termed irreligion existed among them. Medical students, as a class, have come to be looked upon as a set of Atheists, but from the very nature of their work in the dissecting room it is perhaps natural that they should come to look upon life lightly, and, as is too apt to be the case, one idea shaken, they indulge in violent extremes. To give them something else—to make them comprehend the utter disassociation of the individuality and its bodily environments, was his great object in life, and this he was able to do to a very great extent. Many a life has been made brighter and been brought to a wider knowledge of life and living because of his teachings and example.

On November 10, 1859, Dr. Garretson married Miss Beulah Craft, daughter of George and Mary Craft, and their children are: Mary, wife of Frank Davenport Cook, and Beulah Craft Garretson, unmarried. Mrs. Cook has one child, Edmund Garretson Cook, born November 9, 1885. Dr. Garretson passed on to that other world which his philosophy told him was only a putting off of the old and a taking on of the new life with its wider opportunities and grander possibilities on October 26, 1895. He felt there was no death—only a going to sleep and an awakening amid a new environment.

ALFRED HENRY MATTHEWS, one of the prominent and well known citizens of Lansdowne, Pennsylvania, now living retired from active life, was born in Upper Darby, December 25, 1830, and is a son of Thomas and Martha B. (Fowler) Matthews, and grandson of John and Mary (Dilworth) Matthews.

John Matthews came to America from Exeter, England, while yet in his teens, locating in Philadelphia, where he made his home, and at one time he served as city clerk. Later he became a director in several banks, and was very prominent in financial circles. In 1799, he purchased the property which is now owned by Alfred Henry Matthews, from Morris Trueman, who in turn secured it from Cruikshank and Freeman, and there he built a summer residence, and also a paper mill on the creek which flowed through the grounds, the ruins of which are still to be seen. In this mill he manufactured only a high grade of writing paper, and some of his product is still in the possession of our subject. One of the old landmarks of Delaware county is the old log cabin, a survival of the early days of this country, which was standing when the property passed into the hands of Mr. Matthews, and which he preserves in memory of the energetic old man who founded his family in America.

Thomas and Martha Matthews had two children, viz: Mary D., deceased, and Alfred Henry. The latter named received his early education in the Friends' Central School at Darby, after which he went to Philadelphia to learn the trade of silversmith. This he followed many years, and then embarked in the manufacture of bronze hardware, and was thus engaged until 1898, when he retired, and has since then lived away from active business strife, surrounded by the comforts of life, provided by ample means. Mr. Matthews married Emma Pullium of Asheville, North Carolina and they have one child—Edna D., born June 21, 1888.

THE MISSES SHIPLEYS' SCHOOL is at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, and is situated opposite the entrance to Bryn Mawr College.

In many ways the founders of the school were peculiarly fitted for their task. Descended on both sides of the house from generations who had been members of the Society of Friends, the Misses Shipley were entirely in sympathy with a college built upon the principles of the Society. The family had been prominent in assisting to organize benevolent and philanthropic work both in New York and Cincinnati.

Miss Hannah Shipley, whose early education was received in private schools of Cincinnati and Philadelphia, had afterwards studied abroad, in Germany, Paris and Cambridge, and had also traveled extensively. Miss Elizabeth Shipley was educated at private schools in Cincinnati and in England, and later studied in Germany and France. Miss Katharine Shipley was one of the first to enter Bryn Mawr College, graduating in 1890, and taking the European fellowship. She spent the two following years studying in France, Germany and England.

With the co-operation and endorsement of Bryn Mawr College, these three sisters opened their school in a rented house, opposite the college grounds, in 1894-95 with four pupils.

Before the end of the first year, they leased the adjoining property; the second year had two houses, having bought the property, and built a house particularly for school purposes. Every year since has seen some enlargement of the school, or some improvement of its buildings.

There is now:

1. A boarding department, for pupils who come from a distance.
2. A day department for those who live nearby.
3. A college preparatory department with high standard of scholarship.
4. A department for such pupils as do not care to prepare for a regular college course.
5. A primary and elementary department for girls as young as six years of age.

The school has always stood for interested personal oversight of pupils, and development of the individual. Because of this, the number of pupils received is, and will continue to be, limited. It is not possible to admit all who apply—the number turned away each year would increase the school beyond its usefulness.

Gentleness, refinement and "old time" courtesy mark the tone of the Misses Shipleys' School.

One cannot be in the school for a day without learning that its highest aim, even above the expansion and training of young minds, is the fullest development of Christian gentlewomen.

WASHINGTON W. JAMES is numbered among the native sons of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred in Edgemont, July 8, 1840. He was one of a family of twelve children born to Morris and Sarah (Ritner) James. The father was a son of Joseph and Ann (Morris) James, and the mother of our subject was a lineal descendant of Governor Ritner. To Morris and Sarah (Ritner) James were born the following named: John Ritner, who is now deceased; William Morris, who married Anna Frances, and has one daughter, Mary; Mary Ritner, who became the wife of Thomas Beaumont, by whom she has two children: Edward Jones, who married Elizabeth Rodney, and has three daughters; Ellwood H., who wedded Hannah Malin and has one child, Washington W.; Alfred; Margaret, who is the wife of Frank Epright, by whom she has two children; Sarah Elizabeth, who married Henry Hoskins, and has four children; Henry B., who married Abby Sill, and has two children; Anna, at home; and Eva, the wife of Thomas Rodenbaugh, by whom she has two children.

Of this family, Washington William James was married in 1866 to Miss Rebecca M. Dutton, who is a direct descendant of the Sharpless family of Delaware and Chester counties, a daughter of Joseph and Sarah Dutton. In his early life Mr. James attended the public schools, and during much of his youth made his home with the uncle for whom he was named, at Nether Providence, Delaware county. He remained with him until he was sixteen years of age, and then entered upon an apprenticeship to the cabinet maker's and undertaking trade, his employer being Enoch Otty, at Willistown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. James remained with him until after the beginning of the Civil War, when prompted by a spirit of patriotism, he enlisted on the 30th of September, 1861, becoming a private of the Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry, under Colonel Guss. This regiment was attached to the Army of the South, and saw some of the most active service of the war, taking part in all of the noted battles of the Peninsular campaign. Mr. James served for four years and eleven months, and was finally mustered out on the 28th of August, 1865, at Weldon, North Carolina, with the rank of captain, having been promoted in recognition of his meritorious conduct on the field of battle. In January, 1864, the Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Regiment had been transferred to the Army of the James, with which he was connected until the cessation of hostilities.

When the country no longer needed his services Mr. James returned to the north and resumed the trade of carpentering which he followed for a year and a half in the employ of others. He then began business on his own account as an undertaker at Clifton Heights, where he located in 1871, remaining there until 1873, when he purchased his present home in Darby. At this place he has since carried on business and is the only undertaker here. Mr. James was always a Democrat until after the nomination of William J. Bryan for the presidency, when he became an advocate of the Republican party, and has since voted the ticket. For twenty-five years he served as a justice of the peace in the borough of Darby, has been a member of the school board, served as a member of the town council and has also been tax collector. He is now serving his sixth consecutive term of five years as justice of the peace. Mr. James was for a number of years a member of Saunders Post No. 21, G. A. R., West Philadelphia, and at present is a member of General Leiper Post of Norwood, Delaware county.

WALTER C. POWELL, a successful merchant of Lansdowne, was born October 10, 1865, and is a son of Thomas and Sarah M. (Trimnall) Powell. He obtained his early education in the Friends' School of Darby, and supplemented his early privileges by study in the Pierce Business College of Philadelphia, where he was fitted for life's practical and responsible duties that come with a business career. When he had completed his education he became an active factor in commercial life by accepting a clerkship in the store of the Biddle Hardware Company, wholesale merchants. There he learned the business, remaining with that company for nine years, during which time his faithfulness and capability won him promotion on many different occasions.

In 1892 Mr. Powell came to Lansdowne, where he embarked in merchandising on his own account, establishing a small hardware and house furnishing store. He remained at his first location for five years, and in the meantime his trade increased in volume and importance so that it was necessary for him to seek larger quarters, and he removed to the new granite store which he now occupies, and in which he is carrying a complete line of everything pertaining to house furnishing, to building, and to the hardware trade. His store would be a credit to a city of much greater size than Lansdowne. He carries a large, new and complete stock; his store is neat and attractive in its appointments and equipments; and his business methods are honorable, being such as neither seek nor require disguise, but will bear the closest investigation and scrutiny. Mr. Powell is recognized as a man of excellent business ability and executive force, carrying forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes, and brooking no obstacle that can be overcome by strong purpose, honorable effort and unfaltering determination.

On the 15th of October, 1892, was celebrated the marriage of Walter C. Powell and Margaret E. Hallowell, of Maryland. Unto them have been born four children, namely: Helen Elizabeth, born November 4, 1893; Charles Hallowell, born November 27, 1895; Margaret Elgar, born May 4, 1897; and Edward Townsend, born September 9, 1901. The family is well known in Lansdowne and the household is celebrated for its gracious and pleasing hospitality, while in business circles Mr. Powell sustains an unassailable reputation as a self-made and trustworthy man who well merits the prosperity that has come to him.

MRS. ANNA M. SHOEMAKER. In the year 1696 Edward and Eleanor Foulke came to the new world, and making their way to Pennsylvania they secured as a homestead a tract of land which they purchased from William Penn. This remained in the family through successive generations, and at length was sold by the father of Mrs. Shoemaker to Clarke Wharton. It now belongs to his estate and is occupied by the Country Club.

From Edward and Eleanor Foulke the line of descent is traced down through Thomas (first), William, Levi, William (second) and William (third) to Mrs. Shoemaker. Her father, William Foulke, was united in marriage to Susanna Conard, a daughter of Jonathan Conard and a granddaughter of Dennis Conard. The faith of the Foulke family from the establishment of the family in America down to the present time has been that of the Society of Friends.

Anna M. Foulke, after arriving at years of maturity, gave her hand in marriage to Charles Bird Shoemaker, and to them were born the following children: Charles Frances, who was born October 1, 1856, and died in March, 1876, at the age of twenty years; William Foulke, who was born February 1, 1858, and died August 13, 1885, at the age of twenty-seven years; Amelia Bird, who was born April 20, 1861, and died October 26, 1862; Benjamin H., born November 30, 1865; Lewis Foulke, who was born July 1, 1868, and married Lucretia McIlvain, by whom he has two children, Helen and Lewis, Jr.; and Ella Foulke Shoemaker, who was born July 11, 1874, and is the wife of Thomas C. Satterthwait, a son of George and Sarah Satterthwait, by whom she has one son, Charles Shoemaker Satterthwait.

GEORGE DAVIS EVANS. No name is better or more favorably known in Lansdowne and vicinity than that of the Evans family. For generations, even before the Revolutionary war, their old homestead has stood, a monument of solidity and strength as a historical landmark in the township of Upper Darby, about a mile from Lansdowne. Few such structures remain to remind us of the grandeur of the old colonial days, and it may be interesting to our readers to know that this old country residence was built about the year 1693; the exact date is unknown, the records being somewhat obscure on this point. It has been occupied for five generations continuously from 1723 to the present time, embracing a period of 182 years, by the ancestors and descendants of the Evans family, the same now being occupied by the surviving children of Jonathan Evans, to whom the property descended in direct line as follows:

The original patent was granted by William Penn, July 30, 1684, to Joshua Fearne, for two hundred acres. Joshua Fearne, by deed dated December 12, 1692, conveyed to his brother, Josiah Fearne, one hundred acres, part of the two hundred and ninety acres recorded at Chester, Pennsylvania, Book A, Volume 1, page 69. Josiah Fearne, by deed dated December 27, 1717, conveyed the said one hundred acres with other land to Samuel Garrett in fee. Samuel Garrett, by deed dated September 5, 1723, conveyed to Joseph Kirk and Ann (Hood) Kirk, his wife, eighty-six acres, being part of the said one hundred acres. Joseph Kirk by will dated November 6, 1771, devised to his son-in-law Jonathan Evans, and his daughter Sarah (wife of Jonathan) forty acres, being part of said eighty-six acres. On the death of Sarah, her surviving husband Jonathan became heir to the land in fee. Jonathan Evans (1) by will dated March 26, 1807, devised twenty acres, part of said forty acres, to his son William Evans and Lydia (Hoopes) Evans, his wife, and the remaining twenty acres to his son, Jonathan Evans (2). Jonathan Evans (2) and Elizabeth, his wife, by deed granted the said twenty acres (devised to him as aforesaid) to his brother, the said William Evans in fee. William Evans and Lydia his wife, thus became possessed of the forty acres in fee devised by Joseph Kirk. After their death, their son Jonathan Evans (3) took the property at appraised value and held it in fee until his death.

Joseph Kirk and Ann (Hood) Kirk, who were the first in the line of ancestry to occupy the premises, were married about the year 1720, and moved to the old homestead in September, 1723, the year of the purchase. Sarah Kirk, daughter of Joseph and Ann (Hood) Kirk, was born in 1741, and was married about the year 1770 to Jonathan Evans (1), who died in 1817. William Evans, son of Jonathan (1) and Sarah (Kirk) Evans, was born October 20, 1776 and died October 17, 1826. He married Lydia Hoopes, November 24, 1803; they were members of the Society of Friends, as were most of their ancestors. Lydia (Hoopes) Evans was born January 31, 1785, and died December 15, 1834. The children of William and Lydia (Hoopes) Evans were as follows: Phoebe, born May 17, 1805, died March 26, 1828; Sarah, born March 23, 1807, died March 10, 1859; Thomas S., born March 10, 1809, died April 10, 1841; Elizabeth, born October 2, 1811, died July 19, 1875; Susanna, born June 29, 1813, died November 14, 1840; Lydia, born November 19, died March 24, 1867; William H., born April 4, 1817, died April 22, 1842; Jonathan, born May 9, 1819, died December 29, 1896; John, born August 5, 1821, died January 7, 1867; George, born October 4, 1824, died February 4, 1859. All of these children were born in the old homestead, and most of them were buried from there.

From the above record it will be seen that Jonathan survived all the other members of the family of his generation by many years. It has been said that no tribute written to his memory could sufficiently commend his sterling worth as a man and as an example of Christian uprightness of character. No man exerted a more helpful influence among his fellowmen while living, and none have left behind them such pleasant memories in the minds of those among whom his life was passed. His memory is still cherished and revered by those who walked with him along life's path, and their acquaintance with him will ever remain a pleasurable page in their experience. He was twice married, his first wife being Christiana Fimple, to whom he was united on June 15, 1843. She was born July 18, 1822, and died May 14, 1856. Their four children were: 1. William Evans, born July 28, 1844, and died March 8, 1845; 2. Eleanor F., born December 2, 1846, died September 3, 1848; 3. Joseph A., born October 6, 1850, died February 13, 1899; he married Mary Roberts, and had three children, namely, Walter C., Jeannette and Mary, all unmarried; Mary, his wife, died April 9, 1887. Their fourth child was Annie Evans, born March 1, 1853, unmarried, and now living in the old homestead.

The second wife of Jonathan Evans was Eliza Valentine, a daughter of Robert and Susanna (Latch) Valentine. Susanna was the daughter of Jacob and Jane Latch. Robert and Susanna Valentine had a family of nine children as follows: Caroline, wife of Simeon Leany; Mary; Sarah, wife of James Edwards; Hannah, wife of Michael Isard; Eliza, wife of Jonathan Evans; Jane, wife of Robert Fielding; David, who married Sarah Roberts; Robert and Susanna.

The children of Jonathan Evans by his second wife, Eliza Valentine Evans, were George Davis Evans and Emma Isard Evans, twins, born August 27, 1862. Emma died September 27, 1862. George Davis Evans, his mother and half-sister Annie, still occupy the old place, and give their attention to market gardening and the raising of fruits for the early city markets.

The first impression of the visitor at the old homestead is one of delight at the peaceful quietude of the place; then gradually the eye begins to take in the beauties of the surroundings—the evidence of careful attention on every hand—the solidity of the old structure, which in its massive strength gives no evidence of the many years it has stood in all its dignity, impervious to wind or weather—the great trees spreading out their giant arms toward the house as if to protect and screen it as best they can from the destructive forces of the elements. A grand old home—well beloved for old associations sake—well cared for—imposing and beautiful.

HENRY CLAY BARTLESON, M. D., who is successfully engaged in the practice of medicine at Lansdowne, was born in Radnor, Pennsylvania, January 23, 1844, and is a son of Mark and Mary (McKnight) Bartleson. His mother was a distant relative of the old and distinguished Evan Evans family. Her father purchased the old Fox Tavern on the Lancaster pike, twelve miles from Philadelphia, and there he reared his family and later the old home became the birthplace of our subject.

The paternal grandparents of our subject were Bartle and Ann (Powell) Bartleson. By the marriage of Mark and Mary (McKnight) Bartleson eight children were born. Edward Evans, the eldest, married Sarah Norris, of Paoli, Pennsylvania, and had six children: Hibbard Evans, who married and has one child; Mark B.; Ella; Susan; Edward, who married Jennie Lees and has three children; and Randall. Lewis, the second son of Mr. Bartleson, married Elizabeth Beckley, and they have two children, Mark and William, both of whom are now married. Samuel Powell Bartleson, the third of the family, married Ruth Leedom and they have four children—Charles L., Harry C., Mary L. and Hettie. Of this number Charles is married and has three children; and Mary L. is the wife of Samuel D. Rhoads and they have one child. William D., the fourth member of the Bartleson family, married Caroline Twining, and they have three children—Annie, Martha and William. The daughters have married and each has two children. Mary Louise is the wife of Robert Ambler, and their children are Horace, Mark B. and Mary. The son, Mark B., wedded Annie Ambler, and has two children. Evan Evans, the sixth member of the Bartleson family, is unmarried. Henry C., the next, married Clara Virginia Thompson, of Philadelphia, a daughter of Isaac and Mary A. Thompson, and they have no children—Evan Evans, who is cashier of the Clifton Heights National Bank; and Isaac T. B., who is employed in the Centennial Bank of Philadelphia. Zachary Taylor, the eighth member of the Bartleson family, married Beulah Hill, and they have two children, Bertha and Mary.

When Dr. Bartleson of this review was but nine years of age, his father removed to Harford county, Maryland, where he attended the public schools until he was seventeen years of age. At that time, on the 14th of August, 1862, he responded to President Lincoln's call for troops to aid in the preservation of the Union, and joined the Eighth Regiment Maryland Volunteers as a private for three years' service. That he was brave and loyal is indicated by the fact that when he was mustered out on the expiration of his term he was holding the rank of captain, having been promoted until he had attained to that position. His regiment was attached to the First Army Corps until after the battle of Gettysburg, and subsequently to the Fifth Army Corps. From the time of the first battle of the Wilderness until the close of the war, the Eighth Maryland was always at the front, participating in almost every engagement in which the Army of the Potomac took part. Dr. Bartleson was always found at his post of duty, faithfully defending the old flag and the cause it represented, and with a most creditable military record he returned home.

In October, 1865, Dr. Bartleson became a student in the Millersville Normal School, from which he was graduated with the class of 1868, and then, with a good literary education to serve as the foundation upon which to rear the superstructure of professional knowledge, he entered the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and on the completion of a regular course in medicine was graduated with the class of 1870. Immediately afterward he took up his abode at Upper Darby, within a mile of his present residence, and entered upon the practice of medicine and surgery, which he has followed until the present time. He has been a close, earnest and discriminating student of his profession, and anything which tends to bring to man the key to that complex mystery which we call life elicits his earnest study. His patronage has steadily grown in volume and importance, and in fact, is too great to allow him to accept any of the town offices which have been tendered him. In politics he is a Republican and socially is a member of the Heptasophis. In the line of his profession he is connected with the State Medical Society and also with the County Medical Society.

MARTHA WILLIAMS ALDEN, principal of Maplewood School at Lansdowne, Pennsylvania, is a native of Bridgewater, Massachusetts, a direct descendant from John Alden, and is in the eighth generation. Miss Alden received her early education in the schools of her native place, after which her studies were pursued at the State Normal School, where she fitted herself for a teacher, being graduated from that institution in 1887. After her graduation, Miss Alden went to Kingston, Massachusetts, where she taught for three years, after which for eight years she was a teacher at the normal school.

At the normal school she met her present partner, Miss Mabel Starbuck Jones, a native of Nantucket, Massachusetts, who like Miss Alden had fitted herself for the profession of teaching in the Bridgewater Normal, and was graduated in 1896. After her graduation Miss Jones went to New Haven, Vermont, and taught one year when she removed to Pennsylvania and taught in The Overbrook School. On September 27, 1900, Miss Alden and Miss Jones opened the Maplewood school. The first year they started with seventeen pupils; the second year, having added a music class of both instrumental and vocal music, the number was increased to twenty-five before the close of the year, and then opened their year of 1902-3 with an enrollment of twenty-seven pupils, with promises of several more in the immediate future. This year they have added language to their already long list of studies, and employ special French and drawing teachers.

It is the intention of these ladies to make their school a thorough preparatory one for both boys and girls, and second to none which has for its object fitting girls for college. In September, 1903, Miss Alden and Miss Jones will add a kindergarten to the school. The success which has attended these ladies is largely due to their thorough understanding of the science of teaching and their deep love for their work. Not only are the pupils placed in their charge given instructions, but are also taught to glean knowledge for themselves and to enjoy their studies. The gentle womanly influence which pervades the school is of inestimable benefit to the young people, and its power for good is recognized by their parents, who are anxious to provide not only excellent instruction, but also wise training during a period when characters are being formed and after destinies worked out.

WILLIAM DYSON KENNEDY, M. D., engaged in the practice of medicine in Lansdowne, was born in 1856, and is a son of William and Sarah (Quillan) Kennedy. His paternal grandparents were James and Mary Kennedy, and his maternal grandparents were Nathan and Mary (Dixon) Quillan. Dr. Kennedy was one of a family of six children, namely: Mary, the wife of Joel P. Conard; Rachel, the wife of R. A. Gould; Marian, the wife of S. C. Delap, by whom she has two children, Charles D. and Harold; Terza E., the wife of A. H. Eavenson, by whom she has three children, Edgar, William and George; Sarah, the wife of J. H. Yocum, by whom she has one child, Velma; and William Dyson, who married Katharine Seymour Armstrong, a daughter of C. S. and Emily S. Armstrong. Three surviving children have been born unto our subject and his wife: Katherine E., born February 24, 1886; Dyson Armstrong, born July 8, 1890; and James Henry, born February 8, 1893.

In early life Dr. Kennedy was a student in the academy at New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and afterward went to the west, entering the normal school at Emporia, Kansas. When his literary education was completed he began preparation for the profession which he had determined to make his life work, and entered upon a three years' course of study in the Chicago Medical College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1884. The west attracted him and he proceeded to Colorado where he entered upon the practice of his chosen profession, remaining there for two years. At the end of that time, desiring to further perfect himself for his chosen calling, he returned to Philadelphia and pursued a post graduate course in the Polyclinic Hospital and College. Subsequent to this time he removed to the town of Clifton Heights, Delaware county, where he opened an office and began the practice of medicine and surgery, there remaining until 1892, when he came to Lansdowne, where he has since made his home and through the eleven years that have passed he has been widely recognized as one of the most successful practitioners of this part of the county. Dr. Kennedy is a student who reads broadly and thinks deeply, keeping abreast with the progress of the times, especially in the line of his chosen profession. His skill and ability are widely recognized and have received the public endorsement of a large and growing patronage. He is a member of the Delaware County, the Philadelphia County and the Tri-County Medical Societies, and thus he keeps in touch with the advanced thought and knowledge of his fellow practitioners through the exchange of ideas in those organizations. A Republican in political views, he strongly endorses the principles of the party yet has never been an aspirant for office; he is a member of the Presbyterian church.

HENRY VAHLE, a resident of Clifton Heights, well known in connection with banking interests, was born in Germany, February 29, 1860, and is a son of Henry William and Johanna (Busch) Vahle. The father came to this country in 1869, accompanied by his family, and settled in Philadelphia. He then began working at his trade in the employ of C. F. Rumpf & Company, manufacturers of pocketbooks. He remained in their employ for two years, and then began dealing in birds, importing, buying and selling all kinds of birds, and to that enterprise he devoted his time and energy until his death. In his family were eight children, of whom Henry Vahle is the eldest, the others being Ernest C., Otto F., Frank F., Sophia, Minnie, William and Albert, who is the youngest.

Henry Vahle of this review was only about nine years of age when with his parents he came to America; and he acquired his education in the public schools. Upon putting aside his textbooks he began learning the baker's trade under the direction and in the employ of Leon Symonety, at No. 1018 Walnut street, Philadelphia, remaining for three years in his employ, during which time he gained a mastery of the business and then accepted the position of foreman for Mr. Harkinson at Seventeenth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, with whom he remained for four years. He next entered the employ of Charles Holzherr, at Seventeenth and Brandywine streets, Philadelphia, with whom he was associated for three years and then began business on his own account at 513 South Front street, Philadelphia. Later he came to Clifton Heights and purchased a banking business of J. M. Geckeler, to whom he paid $16,000. This was in 1889, and during the first year after the transfer of the property Mr. Vahle did a business which amounted to the sum he had paid for it. By close application, energy, strong determination and honorable business methods, and also by placing good products upon the market, he has steadily increased his business until his annual sales have now reached the large figure of $85,000. He manufactures bread, cake and ice cream, handles the best line of confectionery, and it requires fifteen or more teams in order to deliver his products.

Mr. Vahle is a man of resourceful business ability, energetic and progressive and quick to note opportunity. He has not only been a prominent factor in commercial circles in Clifton Heights, but it also a worthy representative of its financial interests and was the organizer of the Clifton Bank. This filled a long felt need in the community, and he has continued his efforts in behalf of the institution until it is now one of the best financial concerns in this part of Pennsylvania, conducting an extensive and profitable banking business.

In his political views Mr. Vahle is an independent Democrat. He has steadily refused to accept nominations for local offices that have been tendered him, save that for seven consecutive years he served as borough treasurer. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic order, the Knights of Pythias and the Foresters of America. Mr. Vahle certainly deserves great credit for what he has accomplished, as he entered upon his business career without capital, and has steadily worked his way upward to a prominent position in trade circles, controlling enterprises of magnitude that not only return to him success, but also promote the general prosperity of the community. Mr. Vahle is a member of the Presbyterian church at Clifton Heights.

On the 24th of November, 1885, Mr. Vahle was united in marriage to Mary Oeken, of Philadelphia, a daughter of Louis and Catherine Oeken. They now have five children: Catherine, born August 17, 1886; Johanna, born August 17, 1889; Henry W., born December 17, 1894; Mary, born August 30, 1896; and Henry, born July 4, 1899.

MISS WRIGHT'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Among the most useful and highly reputed preparatory schools for young ladies is Miss Wright's School for Girls, an institution which has for its primary object the preparation of students for admission to Bryn Mawr College. The school is situated at Bryn Mawr, on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, ten miles from Philadelphia. The location is healthy and attractive, and the building is lighted by electricity and heated by steam.

The course, for pupils to be fitted for college, is of at least two years duration, unless special proficiency renders this period unnecessary. A finishing course is provided for such as do not intend to enter college. The design of the school is to combine the best of the so-called "old-fashioned" methods with the most approved and modern progressive ideas. In addition to the regular class room work, instruction is given in cookery, and plain and fancy sewing. Instruction in instrumental and vocal music, drawing and painting, is provided when desired.

Intelligent and liberal provision is made for physical development and recreation. Two hours each week are devoted to gymnastic exercises, and lessons in fencing are given during this time. Out-door sports are encouraged, the ample grounds affording room for tennis and basketball, and lessons in riding are also provided for. The school life is interspersed with hours for culture and social intercourse with the teachers, and the advantages of lectures, concerts and art exhibitions in the city of Philadelphia (only ten miles distant) are open to the pupils.

The school is in charge of Miss Lila M. Wright, an accomplished educator. She was for several years a pupil of Miss Catharine Aiken, the talented author of the Catharine Aiken Methods of Mind Training for the cultivation of attention, concentration and memory, and this system is followed with great success by Miss Wright. Mrs. Florence Scott Wright, associate principal, is a graduate of Brook Hall. Other teachers have been connected with Bryn Mawr College, and are especially qualified for the preparatory work leading to that institution.

JOHN MILTON LUTZ. Adam Lutz, a resident of Pennsylvania, married a Miss Bisbing, and they had a family of five children, namely: Hiram, George M., Albert, Mary and Hannah. Of this number George Mahlon Lutz, the second in order of birth, was united in marriage to Mary Martha Collom, a daughter of Clement Collom and Lavinia Collom, in whose family were six children, namely: Edward, Alfred, Charles, John, Mary and Melinda. The marriage of George Mahlon and Mary Martha (Collom) Lutz was blessed with three children: John Milton, Charles Hiram and Phillip Melancthon. The second son married Hettie Dermond and they have one child, Myrtle Lutz.

John Milton Lutz, the eldest, was born in Thretons, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, October 18, 1857, and obtained his early education in the schools of West Philadelphia and at Hestonville. During the period of his youth he also assisted his father, who was engaged in the butchering business in Upper Darby, and when he left school he devoted his time so well to this enterprise that when his father removed to the city in 1882 he was well equipped to carry on the trade, and, becoming his father's successor, he was connected with the meat business in Upper Darby until January 1, 1899, when he sold out and for a time lived a retired life. In June, 1902, however, he became connected with banking interests, joining Henry Vahle, Henry J. Kent, H. H. Haines, Joseph T. Richards, W. Frank English, Arthur H. Eyles, Frederick Schoff, Joseph K. Sommers, David M. Taylor, John Wolfenden and Thomas T. Wolfenden in obtaining a charter and establishing what is now the Clifton Heights National Bank. This was capitalized for $50,000, and the bank has a beautiful building well equipped and furnished with the special view to carrying on the business. This bank now has on hand deposits to the amount of $92,000 from individual depositors, $50,000 of United States government deposits, and has accumulated a surplus fund of $3,000.

Mr. Lutz has served for eighteen years on the school board of Upper Darby, and for seven years was its treasurer, while for the past four years he has been its secretary. In his political views he has always been an earnest Republican, and in his religious faith and membership he is a Baptist. He is a valued representative of many secret and fraternal organizations, and has filled many offices in these. He belongs to the Blue Lodge of Masons, is secretary of University Chapter, No. 256, Royal Arch Masons, of Philadelphia, and has also taken the Knight Templar degrees, and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Lutz was married, April 25, 1883, to Mary Jane Dermond, daughter of Patrick and Esther (Chambers) Dermond, and they have three children—Lavinia M., Howard M., and Mary M. Lutz.

WILLIAM ALBERT JOHNSON. The above named gentleman is quite well known in the agricultural circles of Delaware county, where he has been farming for more than a quarter of a century. He was born in Haverford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, October 13, 1850, his parents being Charles and Sarah (Hood) Johnson, old residents of the county.

He had the benefit of a good education in youth, as besides the usual common-school routine, he studied under the preceptorship of Warren Poland, at Westchester, and afterward attended a business college in Philadelphia. With this equipment he returned home and assisted his father on the farm for several years, but eventually rented and in 1877 purchased the farm which he now occupies in Lansdowne. The place consists of about one hundred and fifteen acres, which Mr. Johnson has been operating with success and carrying on a general farming business. Though a Republican in his general views, Mr. Johnson is quite independent, and does not hesitate to "cross his ticket" when he thinks the right kind of men have not been nominated by the party conventions. While not an office seeker, he has consented to serve his township as a member of the school board and has been auditor for two terms.

November 27, 1872, occurred the nuptials of William Albert Johnson and Hannah, daughter of John and Emily (Dickerson) Lobb. The two children of this union are: Lemuel Lobb Johnson, born in August, 1874, and now a widower; and Emily Lobb Johnson, born in April, 1876, and married to Harry M. Davis, by whom she has one child, Clara Davis.

HIBBARD POWELL. The above named gentleman is quite well known at Lansdowne and vicinity as the conductor of a popular dairy and daily dispenser of milk to a large list of patrons. He is one of the old residents of the county, and has been connected with its farming and stock interests for fully half a century.

He was born at Upper Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, February 22, 1831, his parents being Abram and Elizabeth (Hibbard) Powell. They lived on a farm, and their son assisted in the work as he grew up, attending school during the winter sessions in a somewhat irregular way, as was then the custom in the rural districts. This routine continued until he had reached the twentieth year of his age, when he made a venture in the world of trade as a buyer and seller of live stock of all kinds. He continued this about five years with more or less success, and in 1856 engaged in farming on a rented place, but at the end of five years (in 1861) purchased the place which he now occupies. This tract, consisting of thirty acres, is conducted principally as a dairy farm and a specialty is made of supplying the retail milk trade. Mr. Powell has found time from his own business to serve the township as a member of the board of assessors, and he has been one of the auditors for ten years.

In 1861 Mr. Powell was united in marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of George and Elmira (Hoofstittler) Powell, and by this union had born to him seven children, in order of birth as follows: 1. William Henry, who is engaged in the retail milk business at Lansdowne; he married Jean M. Wilson, and has children, Dorothy, John W., Eugene H., Eleanor McKenzie and Helen W. 2. Albert E. married Alice Wolfe, and has three children, Henry Hibbard, Cecil and Theodore Spencer; 3. G. Edgar, died at seventeen years of age; 4. Samuel Hibbard; 5. Elmira; 6. Marion L., both of whom are single; 7. Edith H., who is the youngest of this family, married Frank Davis; they have no children.

ROBERT GREEN, of Darby, was born in Edgemont, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, September 14, 1833, his parents being James and Orpha (Malin) Green. His paternal grandparents were Robert and Hannah (Williamson) Green, while his maternal grandfather was George Malin. The parents of our subject had a family of eleven children: 1. Rebecca, who became the wife of William Pinkerton, and has nine children; 2. Mary Ann, who is the wife of Lewis Slawter, by whom she has four children; 3. Benjamin, who married Ann Eliza White, and has seven children; 4. Orpha Ann, the wife of William Green, and the mother of eleven children; 5. David R., who married Miss Callahan; 6. Mahala E., the wife of Eli Yarnall; 7. Robert, of this review; 8. Hannah W., wife of Jesse Baker, and the mother of seven children; 9. Sarah, the wife of Minshall P. Sharpless, and the mother of seven children; 10. James, who married Miss Wright and had nine children; 11. George, who wedded Miss Anderson and after her death married Bell Scherff.

Of the family Robert Green was the seventh in order of birth. He was married July 16, 1857, to Letitia G. Afflick, of Upper Providence, a daughter of John and Johanna (Malin) Afflick, and their children are as follows: Mahala E., the wife of Harry F. Singles, by whom she has five sons—Walter, who is now a student in West Point; Robert, Harry, Frank and Charles; Harry, who married Louise Folk and has one child, Hubert; Robert, who wedded Linda Craner and has two children, Irene and Nellie; Sarah M., who is at home; David R., who married Rebecca Wisner and has two children, Bera and Myrtle; Mary Emma, who has passed away; Ellen, the wife of Charles Cattell, by whom she has three children, Raymond, Russell and Franklin; Mahlan H., who married Jessie Norton and has one daughter, Helen Mae; Letitia G., who is at home; Elizabeth M., the wife of Stanley Norris, by whom she has one daughter, Mary Elizabeth; George Fernley Pierson, who is also under the parental roof; and Florence, the wife of Harry Batty.

In taking up the personal history of Robert Green we note that in his boyhood he worked in the fields during the summer months, in fact from the time of early spring planting until crops were harvested in the autumn, and then was accorded the privilege of attending the public schools during the three months' winter term. He was thus engaged until eleven years of age, when he began earning his own living by working as a farm boy for William Sill, with whom he remained for about a year. He was afterward employed by different farmers of the neighborhood until he was about seventeen years of age, when he began butchering; and with his brother followed that pursuit until the inauguration of the Civil war. During that period he was drafted for service, but not wishing to leave home at that time he sent a substitute. His attention was given to the buying and selling of cattle, which he followed until 1865, when he embarked in the express business, which he carried on with good success until 1898. He then sold out to his son, who continues it to the present time. During the years in which he was engaged in the express business he also had other business interests, and for two years was proprietor of the Buttonwood Hotel, which was conducted without a bar, as the town had voted for no license. On his retirement from the hotel business he removed to the farm, which he conducted for six years, subsequent to which time he took up his residence at his present home in Darby, where he is conducting a real estate agency, negotiating many important realty transfers.

He was for some time connected with the Twenty-seventh Ward Land Association of Philadelphia, of which he was one of the directors, and for several years he was president of the corporation. He was also more or less identified with other enterprises.

In politics Mr. Green is a Democrat, and in town offices he has faithfully discharged his duties in behalf of the public, serving as a member of the council and of the school board, and as assessor.

DANIEL C. ABRAHAM, a venerable and respected citizen of Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is descended from ancestors who, in the different generations, have rendered faithful service to the state and national government.

The patriarch and founder of the family in this country was Sarah Abraham, who was a widow and came from Wales, with her three sons, James, Enoch and Noah, also a daughter, Keziah, during the latter part of the seventeenth century, and settled with other members of the Society of Friends in what was then the Province of Pennsylvania. From the two sons, James and Noah Abraham, are descended the families of that name now scattered throughout the different states of the Union, and they are numbered among the leading citizens of their respective localities.

James Abraham, one of the emigrant brothers, settled in what is now Upper Merion township, Montgomery county, where he came in possession of a tract of land through his mother's estate, purchased from Lucretia Penn, in 1730, it being a portion of the Penn Manor, and a part of this same property is still in the possession of some of the descendants of the family. Enoch Abraham, another of the emigrant brothers, also settled in Upper Merion township, Montgomery county; he was united in marriage to Mrs. Roberts, who was a widow, but there were no children born of this union. Noah Abraham, brother to James and Enoch Abraham, settled in what is now known as Uwehlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania; he married and reared a family of sons and daughters, and many of his descendants now reside throughout the Northwestern states. Keziah Abraham, the only daughter of the founder of the family, was united in marriage to Mr. Phillips, who was also a descendant of Welsh ancestors, and a prominent and respected citizen of Upper Merion township.

David L. Abrahamson

David L. Abrahamson Sr.

James Abraham, eldest son of the patriarch of the family, married Margaret Davis, and among his children was a son, Isaac Abraham, who was born 4 mo. 28th, 1717, and about the year 1750 married Dinah Havard, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Isaac and Dinah (Havard) Abraham had also two daughters as follows: Dinah, Mrs. Cornog, and Hannah, who married Peter Supples. He settled in what is now Radnor township, Delaware county, where he acquired considerable land and engaged in farming. He became well and favorably known as a man of affairs in his time. The second child of James and Margaret (Davis) Abraham was Ezekiel. The next in order of birth was Elizabeth, who married Joseph Walker; Keziah married Samuel Philips; Marlon and Heriah, of this family, did not marry. Abigail married Jonathan Moore. Isaac and Dinah (Havard) Abraham had by their marriage a son, James, born in 1751, who married Hannah George, and by their marriage had two sons and two daughters. John, who did not marry and died in early manhood; Joseph who married Anne Davis, and by this marriage had a family of ten children, two of whom died in childhood. The others all attained years of maturity, and were as follows: Hannah, Sarah, James, Benjamin D., George D., Thomas D., Eliza and Emma, all of whom married and had children and their descendants now reside in various states of the Union. Catherine Abraham, one of the two daughters of James and Hannah (George) Abraham, married Jonathan Moore, of Haverford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and by her marriage had two sons and two daughters, James A., John, Rachel, who married David Siter and died two weeks after her union; Eliza, married Robert Craig, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and has two children, James and Catherine.

About the year 1778, Mr. Abraham married Jane Cornog, daughter of Abraham Cornog, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and their children were: 1. Enoch, born in 1779, died in 1827; he married Hannah Jones, and their children were Jane, Sarah, Christiana, Eliza, Isaac and Nathaniel J. Abraham. 2. Daniel, born in 1781, was the father of Daniel C. Abraham, whose name introduces this review. 3. David, born in 1783, died in 1813, unmarried. 4. Sarah, born in 1786, became the wife of Lemuel George, a resident of Radnor township, and her death occurred in 1866.

Daniel Abraham, second child and second son of Isaac and Jane (Cornog) Abraham, was born January 11, 1781, upon the farm at Wayne, which had been purchased about 1750, by his grandfather, Isaac Abraham. Daniel was appointed first lieutenant of the Chester and Delaware county troops, and served in the capacity of escort to General Lafayette, in the city of Philadelphia, during the latter's visit to this country in 1824. Daniel Abraham married in 1807, Eliza Phillips, daughter of Deacon Jonathan Phillips, of Montgomery county, who was of Welsh descent. Their children were: 1. Martha D., who died unmarried, in 1878. 2. Mary P., who married Jacob Printup, resided near Schenectady, New York, and died in 1843. 3. Jane A., who became the wife of David Siter, of Delaware county, and died in 1861. 4. Sarah C., who married Nathaniel Stetson, of East Bridgewater, Massachusetts, and died June 9, 1870. 5. David, resided near Centreville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and died February 23, 1897. 6. Jonathan P., who was a member of the state legislature, from Delaware county, later removed to Minnesota, where he also served in the legislature. He married Sarah S. Thomas, of Newtown, Delaware county, and his death occurred at St. Peter, Minnesota, in December, 1880. Of this marriage were born the following children: Mary T., David T., Eliza A., Francis R., George W., R. Harvey and Sarah T. One of the sons, George W., while only in his eighteenth year, endured all the hardships and privations incident to a soldier's life, and died in Andersonville prison, after refusing liberty at the price of enlistment in the Confederate service. 7. Phineas P., who died in 1836, at the age of eighteen, while a student in Haddington College. 8. Elizabeth D., who died, unmarried, in 1845, near Centreville. 9. Samuel P., who married Elizabeth Evans, of Radnor township, and died March 28, 1878, in Norristown, Montgomery county. 10. Daniel C. 11. Anna T., who married the Rev. James F. Brown, of Mullica Hill, New Jersey, and died there, December 23, 1880. Daniel Abraham, the father of this family, died in 1861, in his eighty-first year, and his wife, Eliza (Phillips) Abraham, died in October, 1848.

Daniel C. Abraham, tenth child and fifth son of Daniel and Eliza (Phillips) Abraham, was born February 1, 1823, in Radnor township, Delaware county, and received his early education in the common schools of that vicinity, and in Tredyffrin township, Chester county; in 1835-6 he was a student in the academic department of Haddington College. For a short time he was in business in Blair county, Pennsylvania, and also spent some time in Georgia (from 1844 to 1846) when he was employed as conductor on the Georgia Railroad under J. Edgar Thompson, who was the first president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. During the Civil war he was appointed by Captain Brooks to recruit a company, which he accordingly accomplished. Subsequently he joined the first Delaware county troops, of which he was orderly sergeant, and remained with them until the close of the war. During the latter part of the war he was appointed by the provost marshal to correct the draft list of soldiers in Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and also the quota of the township for the navy and marine service. Mr. Abraham is one of the committee appointed by the county commissioners to provide for the proper burial of indigent soldiers of the Civil war.

Mr. Abraham, for the greater part of his life, has resided in Delaware county, his occupation having been almost exclusively that of an agriculturist. Upon the death of his father he succeeded to the possession of the farm, from the active management of which he retired in 1903. In 1873 he was appointed justice of the peace, an office which might almost be said to be hereditary in the family, having been held by three generations, and Mr. Abraham finished his last term of office in 1893, having faithfully and successfully served several terms. He has also filled the position of school director and treasurer of the school fund. In 1882 he was a member of the finance committee of the Bi-Centennial Association of Delaware County, which was organized for the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the landing of William Penn in Chester, Pennsylvania. Mr. Abraham, acting for his district of Radnor, by his energy raised and paid a larger amount of money than was received from any other district in the county. He was a contributor toward the building and endowment of the Lewisburg University, and is a life member of the Delaware County Institute of Science.

Mr. Abraham is a staunch adherent of the political principles advocated and upheld by the Republican party. He is a member of the Baptist church, and for a number of years held the office of president of the board of trustees of the Great Valley Baptist church in Chester county, his father having filled the same position for several years. He was extremely active in 1871 in promoting the remodeling of this church, which was then made one of the finest in the neighborhood. The family of which Mr. Abraham is a representative have always been large land owners, and among the real estate of which he is now the possessor, is the old residence situated on the edge of Chester county, which was known in Revolutionary times as the headquarters of General Andrew Porter, who was the grandfather of General Horace Porter, the present ambassador to France.

DAVID H. STITELER. Among the brave boys in blue that Pennsylvania sent to the south in defense of the Union was David Hickman Stiteler, who was born in Milltown, Chester county, this state, on the 12th of February, 1840, and is a son of David and Lydia Ann (McCarrier) Stiteler. In the family were seven children, of whom four are yet living, Ellwood, Mary Elizabeth and Lydia Ann all having passed away. Those who still survive are Jacob Ellwood, who married Rebecca Davis, by whom he has five children: David Hickman; George J., who married Mrs. Elizabeth Carr, a widow, by whom he has three children; and Emeline, the wife of J. Wesley Pyle, by whom she has one child.

During the early boyhood of our subject his parents removed to Lionville, and there he began his education in the public schools under the guidance of Charles Moore. His father for many years carried on blacksmithing and also worked at the wheelwright's trade and when the son of David had completed his education he, too, was prepared for a business career by learning a trade, being bound out for three years to a harness maker. During the term of his apprenticeship he had the misfortune to lose one of his sisters who passed away after a severe illness. He went home to attend the funeral, being absent from his work for three days, and the character of his employer is shown by the fact that when his three years' term of service had expired he was obliged to make up the three days which he had lost by attending the funeral. However, he mastered the business and was thus well equipped for earning his living. In 1861 he put aside his business and personal interests and responded to President Lincoln's call for troops to serve for nine months, was among the first to offer his services to the government and succeeded in getting about twenty men to join the army, becoming a member of Company A,

One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania Infantry. When they were mustered in Mr. Stiteler was appointed to the position of corporal of that company. He was in active service with the regiment and participated in the battle of Antietam, on the 17th of September, 1862, at which time he was wounded, although he did not retire from the field. Again he was wounded at the battle of Chancellorsville and at that place he was promoted to the rank of sergeant of the company, in which position he was serving at the time the company was mustered out.

On the 14th of November, 1865, Mr. Stiteler was united in marriage to Rebecca Hamlin, a daughter of Henry and Sarah Hamlin. Their union has been blessed with eight children: William Lincoln, who was born August 17, 1866, and married Minnie Magnin, by whom he has eight children; Walden John, who was born March 23, 1868, married Martha Chritzfield, by whom he has five children; Burton Matthew, born August 30, 1870; Lydia Ann, born August 29, 1872; Georgie E., born March 8, 1877; Edwin Hickman, born April 8, 1879; Benjamin James, born November 27, 1882; and Emeline, born January 27, 1888.

An earnest Republican, Mr. Stiteler has always voted for the candidates of the Republican party at state elections with one exception and has always supported the presidential nominees of the organization. At local elections, however, he has been independent, giving his allegiance to the candidates whom he believed would best care for the business affairs of town or county. His fellow townsmen, recognizing his worth and ability, have frequently called him to positions of public trust and for fourteen consecutive years has filled the office of supervisor while for fourteen years he was road commissioner. He was also a member of the school board for three years, and no trust reposed in him has ever been betrayed in the slightest degree for he is loyal and earnest in behalf of every movement or measure which he believes will contribute to the general good, and puts forth every effort in his power for the public progress and welfare.

JOSEPH R. MENAGH. In colonial days the farm upon which Joseph R. Menagh, of Edgemont, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, now resides, became the property of William Penn, who in 1786 deeded it to Richard Scott, in whose possession it remained for about thirty years, when in 1816 it passed into the ownership of William Menagh, who came to America from Ireland and established his home in Pennsylvania. He was a cabinet maker by trade and carried on that business for some time in connection with agricultural pursuits. Eventually he deeded the farm to his son Joseph, and thus it came into the possession of the latter's son, Joseph Ritner Menagh, of this review. It will thus be seen that our subject is the possessor of one of the old farming properties of this portion of the state, and in managing his place he has kept abreast with the progressive spirit of the times.

He was born here September 25, 1835, his parents being Joseph and Phebe Ann (Sharp) Menagh, while his paternal grandparents were William and Wilannah (Bomen) Menagh. In the family of the grandparents were seven children, as follows: Jane, born April 5, 1793; John B., born June 16, 1795; Sarah, born December 25, 1797; Joseph, born May 25, 1800; Hannah, born June 18, 1803; William, born May 11, 1806; and Mary, born July 31, 1808. Reared upon the old family homestead, Joseph Menagh, Sr., became familiar with all the work of the farm and in course of time assumed the management of the property. He wedded Phebe Ann Sharp and upon the old home place they reared their family of seven children, namely: Bomen, Sarah, Mary, Hannah, Rebecca, John and Joseph Ritner Menagh.

Quietly has the life of Joseph R. Menagh been passed. He was reared under the parental roof, early becoming familiar with the labors of field and meadow, and throughout his entire life he has carried on a dairy and butchering business, taking his own products to the market. He made a specialty of supplying dairy products to various families in this portion of the state and many of his customers have been his patrons for years, a fact which is indicative of the excellence of his dairy products and of his honorable business dealing. His education was obtained in the public schools and he remained with his father until seventeen years of age, when he entered upon an apprenticeship to learn the miller's trade which he followed for six years. On the expiration of that period, however, he assumed control of the old home farm and has continuously given his time and attention to its work throughout the intervening period.

Mr. Menagh has been twice married. On the 18th of January, 1859, he wedded Sarah Ann Cornett, a daughter of William and Mary (Ruth) Cornett. Two children were born of this union, the elder being William Henry, who was born November 11, 1859, and married Laura Lentz, of Philadelphia, a daughter of Joseph Lentz. They now have three children, Joseph Ritner, Hazel and Emma Cornett. Ida, the daughter of Joseph R. and Sarah A. Menagh, was born March 14, 1861, and on the 8th of Noember, 1892, gave her hand in marriage to Ellis L. Brous, a son of Franklin and Jane Brous. They have one child, Anita May, born December 19, 1893. In 1865 Mr. Menagh was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife who passed away on the 25th of May of that year. On the 8th of September, 1869, our subject was again married, his second union being with Naomi Bail, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of John and Rachel Ann (Register) Bail. Her father was a son of John and Naomi (Stuart) Bail, while her mother was a daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Wilson) Register. Mrs. Menagh was one of seven children: Nathan, William, Phebe Anne, Naomi, Hannah, John and John Daniel.

In matters of citizenship Mr. Menagh is public spirited and progressive and his support is given to the Republican party on questions of political importance. He has served as auditor and school director, proving a capable, prompt and efficient officer, and to every cause calculated to advance the general welfare he gives his earnest support and co-operation.

ALFRED JAMES. One of the strongest proofs of the attractiveness of Pennsylvania as a place of residence is the fact that so many of its native sons remain within its borders. A representative of this class is Alfred James, of Edgemont, who was here born March 20, 1842, his parents being Maurice and Sarah (Ritner) James.

The ancestral history of the family can be traced back on the paternal side to Joseph and Ann (Morris) James, who came to America from the little rock-ribbed country of Wales, believing that they might have better business opportunities and superior advantages for securing a home if they came to the new world. In the maternal line the ancestry is traced back through John and Elizabeth Ritner to Governor Ritner, one of the chief executives of the state. Mrs. James, the mother of our subject, is a direct descendant of the governor and is still living, enjoying comparatively good health, at the advanced age of ninety-one years. By her marriage she became the mother of twelve children, namely: 1. John, who was born October 1, 1831, and was killed by accident in California, February 25, 1856; 2. William M., who was born August 2, 1833, and married Anna Frances, by whom he has one daughter; 3. Mary R., who was born July 9, 1835, and is the wife of Thomas Beaumont; 4. Edward J., who was born September 20, 1836, and married Elizabeth Rodney; 5. Elwood, who was born August 23, 1838, and married Hannah Malin, by whom he has one child; 6. Washington, who was born July 13, 1840, and wedded Rebecca Dutton; 7. Alfred, whose name introduces this review; 8. Margaret, who was born July 18, 1844, and married Franklin Epright, by whom she has two children; 9. Sarah E., who was born May 2, 1846, is the wife of Henry Hoskins and the mother of four children; 10. Henry, who was born June 20, 1848, and married Abbie Sill, by whom he has two children; 11. Anna, born February 3, 1851; 12. Eva, born April 23, 1853, and now the wife of Thomas Rhodenloh, by whom she has two children.

At the usual age Alfred James entered the public schools near his home, and when he had acquired a good literary education, fitting him for life's practical duties, he further prepared for business life by entering the Fairbanks Commercial College at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated with honors. His father at that time was operating a tract of land of about sixty acres and carrying on a general farming business, and after completing his education Alfred James returned to the old home farm and assisted in its work until his father's death, which occurred in 1887. Since that time he has conducted the farm and his thorough understanding of the work both in principle and detail, his careful supervision and his unfaltering energy, have enabled him to continue the business in a manner to make it profitable. In politics he has ever been an advocate of the Democracy, and was called by his fellow townsmen to the office of supervisor of his town, in which position he served for one term.

SAMUEL S. PINKERTON, a representative of the farming interests of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Edgemont, October 31, 1859, and is a son of William and Rebecca (Green) Pinkerton. The father was born November 28, 1814, and his parents were John and Sarah Pinkerton. After arriving at years of maturity he wedded Rebecca Green, whose birth occurred on the 22d of November, 1821, and they became the parents of ten children, namely: 1. William Henry, who was born March 12, 1842, and died on the 18th of the same month; 2. John Wesley, who was born June 4, 1843, and wedded Mary Pyle, by whom he had a family of nine children; 3. James Henry, who was born April 27, 1845, and was twice married, his first union being with Lizzie Davls, by whom he had four children, and after her death he wedded Clara Kesst, by whom he had five children; 4. Mary Jane, who was born March 10, 1848, and is the wife of Calvin Jones, by whom she has six children; 5. Hannah Yarnall, who was born March 8, 1851, died November 11, 1856; 6. William A., who was born December 23, 1854.

married Sally Lamborn, by whom he had one child, while for his second wife he chose Mahala Eaches, by whom he had five children; 7. Eli Yarnall, who was born April 27, 1857, died January 4, 1866; 8. Samuel S., whose name introduces this review; 9. Theodosia, who was born October 17, 1862, died January 20, 1865; 10. Casper Pennock, who was born September 16, 1864, died November 13, 1866.

In early life Samuel Smedley Pinkerton, the subject of this review, assisted his father in the work of the farm from the time of the early spring planting and through the hot months of summer, until the crops were harvested in the late autumn. He then had the privilege of attending the public schools, wherein he acquired a good, practical education. He remained upon the home farm until 1881, when at the age of twenty-two years he started out in life for himself, following the occupation to which he was reared. He first rented the old Smedley property of one hundred and twenty-five acres, and this he continued to cultivate and improve until he purchased of Rebecca E. Baker a farm at Tanguy, whereon he resided for thirteen years, devoting his attention to agricultural pursuits. On the expiration of that period he purchased the property which he now owns at Edgemont. This was a part of the Franklin Baker estate, and comprises one hundred and thirty-three acres of rich land which he has placed under a high state of cultivation and which is improved with modern equipments. In addition to general farming he is engaged extensively in the dairy business, and has upon his place all the accessories needful for carrying on this work. He keeps a large herd of milch cows, and everything about his place is neat in appearance, indicating his careful supervision. He started with a horse power thresher in 1885, and in 1890, he, in company with Daniel Green, entered into the steam thresher business, which they are conducting at the present time (1903), supplying steam outfits.

On the 15th of July, 1886, Mr. Pinkerton was united in marriage to Miss Anna Smedley Baker, a daughter of Franklin and Mary (Baker) Baker, in whose family were three children, the others being Anthony, who was born March 13, 1871, and Mary, born March 19, 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Pinkerton have a most interesting family, noted for their good looks, and they are certainly fortunate in that the family circle still remains unbroken by the hand of death. There are three sons and five daughters, as follows: Samuel Lewis, born July 24, 1887; Franklin B., born November 3, 1888; Grace Emma, born July 8, 1891; Natalie R., born September 29, 1893; Clarence, born April 6, 1896; Ethel May, born July 26, 1899; Sarah Mildred, born November 26, 1900, and Elsie Florence, born December 22, 1901.

In his political views Mr. Pinkerton has ever been an advocate of the principles which form the platform of the Democratic party, and always votes for the candidates upon the state and national tickets. In town affairs he is more independent, and does not consider himself bound by party ties. He has served as a member of the board of education, and the schools have found in him a warm friend, for he recognizes that universal education is one of the strong bulwarks of the nation, and that upon this largely rests good citizenship. He has, therefore, been earnest in behalf of the advancement of the schools, and is also found as a co-operant factor in all of the work of progress and improvement calculated to benefit this portion of the Keystone state.

DANIEL HOWARD GREEN, of Gradyville, Pennsylvania, was born in Edgemont township, August 15, 1863. He is a son of Smedley and Elizabeth (McBride) Green, the others of whose family are as follows: Winfield Scott; William E., who married Celia Drennen; Elmer Ellsworth; Susanna, deceased; Olive and Edward S. Green. Smedley Green, the father of the above family was the son of Smedley and Phoebe (Bishop) Green, being one of a family of eight children as follows: George, deceased; Bishop, who married Jane Thornton, by whom he had four children; Sarah, wife of Pierce King, has a family of five children; William, who married Orltry Green, has a family of eleven children; Hammel married Elizabeth Wood, and has one child; Smedley (2d), father of Daniel Howard; Priscilla, wife of Thomas Mincher; and Phoebe Ann, deceased wife of Dutton Worrall, who left one child.

Smedley Green (1), grandfather of Daniel Howard Green, was a son of George and Rebecca (Smedley) Green, and was one of the earliest farmers of Edgemont township.

Elizabeth (McBride) Green, the mother of Daniel Howard Green, was a daughter of Daniel McBride and Jane (Long) McBride, and was one of a family of twelve children whose names are as follows: Mary, wife of John Taylor, has eight children; Jane, wife of James Blyler, ten children; Daniel married Martha Maxwell and has six children; Christie Ann, wife of George Stuart, has a family of four children; Rachel; Sarah, married Josiah Miller, and has a family of four children; Joseph M., who died aged twenty-two months; Josephine, who married James Lewis, has a family of five children; Elizabeth, married Smedley Green (2d), has a family of seven children as above; Susanna, wife of David R. Cofrode, and has a family of three children; Lydia, single; George, married Rebecca Palmer, and has eight children.

Daniel Howard Green received his education in the public schools of his birth place, which he attended as he could be spared from his duties about his father's farm. His early career having laid the foundation for a farmer's life, young Green adopted it as the most promising business in which he could engage. Later foreseeing an opportunity for extension along similar lines, he purchased the necessary machinery and established a plant for threshing and baling, which he carried on in connection with the many duties devolving upon him as his father's assistant, doing his work for neighboring farmers round about. From the money realized through this medium, Mr. Green was in 1896 enabled to purchase the property known as the old Green Homestead, consisting of seventy-two acres, and which is now considered one of the best farms in the township.

Politically Mr. Green is a Republican. In town affairs he has ever interested himself on the side of whatever measure appealed to him as likely to result in the greatest good to the greatest number. Mr. Green is unmarried.

CAMPBELL MACPHERSON. The family history of Campbell MacPherson, with his descendants and his connections by marriage, shows this to be one of the best known families in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and one well worthy of preservation in historical form. John and Mary (Campbell) MacPherson, as the name implies, were Scottish people, and emigrated to America and settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. On February 22, 1826, there was born to them in that county, at Mount Pleasant, the son Campbell. At the age of seven he was taken by his parents to Radnor township, Delaware county, where he resided the remainder of his life. He attended the schools of that township and in what is now Wayne, and being reared on a farm he took to that pursuit and followed it until his death, which occurred September 7, 1878.

Elizabeth Jane Moore, who became the wife of Mr. MacPherson on February 10, 1858, survived him and resided on the old place in Radnor township, until her death, March 9, 1903. She has a long line of descent from one of the earliest pioneers of this country. This settler was John Hunter, whose son James married Hannah Morgan, and their daughter Mary Hunter became the wife of Captain Hugh Jones, these last being the maternal grandparents of Mrs. MacPherson, inasmuch as their daughter Elizabeth Jones married John M. Moore, and by this marriage eleven children were born, of whom her sister Phoebe, is now the only survivor; the others were Philip, Mary, William, Charles, John Morris, Hannah, Hugh Jones, James Hunter and Margret Brooks.

The children born of the union of Campbell MacPherson and Elizabeth Jane Moore were: Mary Elizabeth, who was born January 3, 1859; John Campbell, born July 30, 1864, was married February 25, 1890, to Jennette Havard, who claims descent through the following ancestors: Her grandparents were David and Mary (Reinhart) Havard, whose son Benjamin Franklin Havard married Annie Righter, the daughter of George and Hannah (Hunter) Righter, and, on the maternal side, the granddaughter of William and Hannah (Ralston) Hunter, of Scotch descent; Jennette Havard was the daughter of this last marriage. By her marriage to John Campbell MacPherson she became the mother of John Havard, on February 25, 1894, and of Campbell Hunter, on May 26, 1897.

JOHN CONNER, a well known citizen of Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a native of that township, born November 24, 1825, son of Phillip and Ann (Caley) Conner. His father, Phillip Conner, emigrated to this country from Ireland; his mother was a resident of Newtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

John Conner received his education in Radnor township, and at Ithan, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His marriage to Martha B. Ramsey took place on March 24, 1858; she is a daughter of Isaac and Martha (Biddle) Ramsey. Their children are as follows: 1. Anna Gertrude, who is the wife of Horace F. Weeks, son of John Hart and Lydia (Atkinson) Weeks; their children are Francis E. and Harry C.

2. I. Walter Conner, born January 9, 1863, in Radnor township. His early mental training was acquired at home, and later at Philadelphia. Upon completing his studies he entered the hardware business in Philadelphia, and afterwards took up his residence in Wayne, Pennsylvania. Here he became quite prominent in town affairs and for many years held the offices of tax collector and assessor. He became interested in the coal and lumber trade at Wayne, and in this line has established a successful business. He is well identified with the town's growth and development, and is a member in good standing in Masonic circles, being a charter member of Wayne Lodge, No. 531 of Wayne. August 28, 1888, he married Pauline N. Lynch, a daughter of Joseph C. and Elizabeth (McFall) Lynch. They have three children, Martha, born July 18, 1889, Anna, born January 25, 1893, and I. Walter, Jr., born April 7, 1903.

3. Harry P. Conner, born in 1866, married Anna Harshberger.

John R. Conner, fourth child of John Conner, was born in 1869. Early in life he developed quite a taste for learning, and has sought every advantage to perfect himself in the higher branches of study. He attended the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia and won the medal which was offered to the student standing highest in his studies, the conferring of which honor also entitled him to a free passage to Europe with $800 in cash to be expended on further researches and study in France along the lines that claimed his interest. Upon completing his course he returned to the homestead in Radnor township, and continues in the pursuit of his profession.

The father of the above named children died February 22, 1903. He was a worthy and highly respected citizen, and at the time of his death was sincerely mourned by those who knew him best in life.

JOSEPH H. CHILDS, SR., is one of the prominent citizens of Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, having resided there for over half a century, and his career and family history form an important portion of the county records. He is the son of Jesse and Rebecca (Harding) Childs, whose marriage occurred in Philadelphia on October 23, 1828. Their children were: Joseph H. and Emmor, the latter named being now deceased. Mr. Childs' death occurred 12 mo., 5, 1829. Rebecca Harding was the granddaughter of Henry and Mary Harding, and daughter of Abraham and Esther (Bond) Harding, whose children were: 1. Mary, born May 29, 1782; 2. Susannah, born September 1, 1783; 3. Rachel, born June 19, 1785; 4. Elizabeth, born August 5, 1787; 5. Sarah, born October 20, 1789; 6. Anna, born October 22, 1791; 7. Esther, born January 11, 1794; 8. Isaac, born August 23, 1796; 9. Joseph B., born November 23, 1798; 10. Rebecca, born April 13, 1801; 11. John, born February 7, 1803. Esther (Bond) Harding who was born 10 mo., 5, 1759, died 9 mo., 14, 1824.

The birth of Joseph H. Childs occurred 9 mo., 13, 1829, in a house in Philadelphia which covered the spot where the Broad street station now stands. He was three years of age when his parents removed to Radnor township, Delaware county, and he obtained his education in the common schools of that township and in a Chester county boarding school. After completing his studies he began farming and he has been a successful and enterprising agricultur-ist ever since, being highly esteemed in business circles for his sterling worth of character which commands respect everywhere. During the Civil war, owing to the press of business affairs, he was obliged to hire a substitute for the army. During his boyhood Mr. Childs attended the Friends Meeting, but since arriving at manhood he has adhered to the doctrines of the Baptist denomination.

January 16, 1853, Mr. Childs married Sarah J. Miller, a daughter of Christian and Margaret (Spear) Miller, of Radnor township. Their children are: 1. Harry Newton, December 8, 1853; he married Ellen Corona Moore, the daughter of James and Eliza (Lindsay) Moore; their children are: Joseph Walter, Lillian Moore, and Clarence Lindsay Childs, all of whom reside in Radnor township with their parents. 2. Rebecca Ellan, born October 28, 1855, became the wife of Howard J. Matthias, the son of George and Mary Matthias; they have two sons, Howard Childs and Norman Matthias. 3. Lizzie Gertrude, born March 14, 1858, wife of Philip Moore, of Marple township, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. 4. Annie Hobbs, born January 5, 1860, became the wife of Dr. Charles Terry Goentner, of Montgomery county, April 11, 1894. 5. Norwood Harding, born April 10, 1862, died April 28, 1865. 6. Cordilla Bender, born April 13, 1864, unmarried and residing at home. 7. Joseph Harding, born September 16, 1866, married, in 1894, Anna Catherine Warner, of Devon, Chester county. 8. Marion Moore, born January 19, 1874, attended the Radnor township schools and graduated from the Hillcroft Academy at Marple. The mother of this family died September 2, 1898.

Dr. Charles Terry Goentner, son-in-law of Joseph H. Childs, was born at Hatboro, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, February 2, 1852, the son of William Krider and Sarah Terry (Beans) Goentner. He acquired his literary education in the public schools of Montgomery county, and later attended the School of Medicine at the University of the State of New York, from which institution he was graduated, in 1881, with the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Surgery. In the same year he established an office for active practice in Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, which he successfully conducted up to the year 1902, when he was obliged to abandon his profession on account of failing health, which was the sequel of a severe attack of sickness. He then accepted the presidency of the Bryn Mawr National Bank, in which capacity he still serves, and for the past fourteen years he has been a director of the board of the bank.

Dr. Goentner was one of the organizers of the Keystone Veterinary Medical Association, being still a charter member of that body, which was the first association in America composed of veterinary graduates only. Since 1881 he has been a member of the American Veterinary Medical Association, and in 1886 he was chosen to represent the state of Pennsylvania in the Sanitary Science Association, which had for its object the establishment of quarantine rules and regulations for the preservation of health. Dr. Goentner is a Mason of high standing, being affiliated with Cassia Lodge, No. 273, Free and Accepted Masons of which he is past master, Montgomery chapter No. 262, Royal Arch Masons, and Mary Commandery, No. 36, Knights Templar.

CHARLES LEEDOM, of Ridley Park, Delaware county, widely known as a successful business man, was born February 17, 1826, on Lancaster turnpike, six miles from Philadelphia, in Montgomery county, and is a son of Charles and Susanna (Roberts) Leedom. The latter, at the time of her death, had reached the advanced age of ninety-eight.

Mr. Leedom was educated in Montgomery county, and after leaving school remained on the farm with his father until arriving at the age of eighteen, when feeling a preference for mercantile over agricultural pursuits he entered a mill in his native county with the intention of learning the business. After remaining there more than a year, he bought his grandfather's farm and carried on farming. In 1864 he sold the farm, and in 1865, feeling a renewed inclination for a business career, he went to Oil City, having nothing definite in view in regard to occupation. On his arrival he engaged in the oil business in which he met with signal success, his efforts resulting in financial prosperity, and in the establishment of a name for himself as an enterprising and sagacious business man.

Mr. Leedom married, in 1866, Sara J., a daughter of John S. and Rebecca (Miller) Hayes, of Ohio. The following children were born to them. 1. Susanna, born in 1869, in Oil City; in 1896 she married John Savin Hoffecker, of Wilmington, and they have one child, Sara Louisa Hoffecker. 2. Charles, who died in 1873. 3. Harriet R., who was born in Franklin, Pennsylvania, and married D. B. Andrews, a son of Charles and Lillian (Bunting) Andrews, of Darby.

Both the Andrews and Bunting families are among the old residents of Delaware county, and have belonged from an early period to the Society of Friends. James Andrews, a prominent citizen of Darby, was for fifteen years associate judge of Delaware county, serving until the age of seventy, when he declined a re-election. The Bunting family is of English extraction and was transplanted from Europe to America about the middle of the seventeenth century by three brothers, one of whom settled at Crosswicks, New Jersey, and two in Pennsylvania, one in Bucks county, and the third, Samuel, at Darby. From the last named are descended the Buntings of Delaware county. Samuel Bunting married a daughter of John Blunston, who emigrated from England in 1682 and took up a large tract of land in Darby. He belonged for thirteen years to the provincial assembly, and several times held the position of speaker of that body. He was also appointed by William Penn a member of the council of state and a justice of court, and frequently acted as attorney for people in England who owned land in Pennsylvania. Josiah Bunting, a lineal descendant of Samuel, was a prosperous farmer of Darby, and his son, also named Josiah, was for many years extensively engaged in the lumber business in Philadelphia. He married Sarah, daughter of David Sellers, a lineal descendant of Samuel Sellers, who came from Derbyshire, England, in 1682, and settled at Darby. In June, 1684, he married Anna Gibbons, also from Derbyshire, they being the first couple ever married in Darby Meeting. Of their six children, the third, Samuel, married Sarah Smith, also of English descent, and erected the first twisting mill in Pennsylvania. His youngest child John learned the trade of a weaver but early displayed great mechanical skill and invented the first wire rolling screens and sieves for cleaning grain ever made on this continent. In consequence of the success of this invention he abandoned the manufacture of textile fabrics and devoted his attention to wire weaving. In 1767 he was elected to the assembly and served five terms, in addition to holding many other positions of honor and trust. He married Ann Gibbons, and was the father of a large family. One of his sons, David, erected in Philadelphia the first wire-working establishment ever operated in America, becoming widely known, and accumulating what in those days was considered a large fortune. He was the father of Sarah, who became the wife of Josiah Bunting (2), mentioned above. Their son, David Sellers, was for many years a leading farmer of Delaware county, and subsequently engaged very successfully in the coal and lumber business in Chester. He was a man who was universally respected, and was several times elected a member of the city council. He married Hannah P., daughter of Benjamin Serrill, of Darby. Of their three daughters, Lillian married Charles Andrews, of Darby, and they were the parents of D. B. Andrews, mentioned above as the husband of Harriet R., daughter of Charles and Sara J. (Hayes) Leedom.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews have two children: David Bunting, and Charles Leedom.

JAMES FREEBORN, a resident of Haverford township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, comes of sturdy, long lived line of Irish ancestors, his paternal grandfather and grandmother having attained the remarkable age of one hundred and seven and one hundred and eight years respectively. The grandfather, James Freeborn, married twice and was the father of twenty-four children. Among the children of his first union were Thomas, James, William, Andrew, Bridget and Bessie, all of whom attained years of maturity. After the death of his first wife, he married Margaret Spence, who, after the death of her husband came to America and spent the remaining years of her life here.

James Freeborn, grandson of the James Freeborn before mentioned, and the subject of this sketch, was born in county Donegal, Ireland, in 1824, a son of Andrew and Margaret Freeborn. When only fifteen years of age, young Freeborn came to America, having concluded, like many others of his native land, that in the new world there was greater promise for growth and development than the land of his birth afforded. Arriving here he located in Philadelphia where he was employed at trunk making. For some time, however, he had acknowledged the fact that all his inclinations were urging him to seek the quiet of country life. He therefore relinquished his employment in Philadelphia and engaged at farm work in Haverford township, where it was his purpose to live the rest of his days.

While still a very young man in 1844 Mr. Freeborn assumed the obligations of married life, wedding Miss Jane Watson, who bore him a family of eight children as follows: James, who married Josephine Moore, of Marple, Pennsylvania; Isabella, wife of Mark Baker, of Middletown, Pennsylvania; Mary, deceased; Hannah, deceased; Annie, wife of Frank Lowrie; Andrew, who married Maggie Freeborn; Mordecai and Margaret. The mother of the foregoing named children died in April, 1876, and Mr. Freeborn took as his second wife, on November 27, 1879, Ellen Miller, a daughter of Thomas and Sermares (Taylor) Miller. Mr. Freeborn enjoys the respect and good will of his neighbors throughout his section of the country.

JOHN WILDS, the son of John and Hannah (Byerley) Wilds, and a well known and respected citizen of Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in Tredyffrin township, February 16, 1821. He is a descendant of an old and prominent English family, his grandfather James Wilds having emigrated from Lancaster, England, when young, and having settled in Tredyffrin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a weaver by trade, and was a member of the Church of England. He married Barbara Wesley, of Chester county, and they had four children.

The younger son of James and Barbara (Wesley) Wilds, John Wilds, Sr., was born in Tredyffrin, in 1794. He occupied a prominent position in the life and growth of the colony, and was conspicuous as a soldier in the war of 1812, being stationed at Marcus Hook. In 1819 he married Hannah Byerley, daughter of John Byerley. Their children were fourteen in number: Emily, James, John, Mary Ann, Elijah, Elizabeth, Sarah Jane, Edward, Alice, Mahlon, Stephen, William, Joseph, who served in the Civil war and was seriously wounded; and Hannah.

John Wilds, the second son of John and Hannah (Byerley) Wilds, was educated at the Episcopal school of Radnor, in Delaware county, where some of his ancestors had located in the early days of that section. At the expiration of his school life he made farming his occupation, and soon purchased a farm of twenty-one acres, near Strafford, Chester county, in the vicinity of Wayne, where he located permanently, and where he still resides with his son. He is a loyal supporter of the Republican party, and a member of the Baptist church.

He was married, March 22, 1855, to Rachel Famous, a daughter of George Famous, who belonged to a well known family of Chester county. Their family consists of two children: 1. Isaac R. Wilds, born in 1857, in Chester county, near Wayne, who married Mary Zimmerman and has one child surviving, James Wilds. 2. Mary Wilds, who married Joseph Dyson, of Delaware county, who is a contractor and builder; they have two surviving children, Elmer and Marietta Dyson. Rachel (Famous) Wilds died October 12, 1892.

PETER PECHIN, of Radnor, Pennsylvania, son of Edward and Ann (Wagner) Pechin, was born in Delaware county, December 16, 1824. Edward Pechin was a son of Peter and Rebecca (Hunter) Pechin. The ancestors of the Pechin family were French Huguenots, and came to America in early times, settling in Pennsylvania, where many of their race had found a home.

Edward Pechin, the son of Peter and Rebecca (Hunter) Pechin, was a farmer and owned property in Delaware county, where his son Peter Pechin received his early education. He completed his studies in Radnor township, and after he left school assisted his father in farm work, continuing this occupation until 1895, when he retired from the active duties of farm life.

He married Mary Jane Holmes, a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Pettit) Holmes. Their children were as follows: (1) Sarah Emily, (2) Edward, both of whom died when young; (3) Annie, who also died in childhood; (4) Ida, who lives at home; (5) Jeannette, who married Frank Hoy, a son of James and Madeline (Boucot) Hoy; (6) Annie, who married Horace Brooke, a son of Jesse and Sarah (Moore) Brooke, and whose children were Mary, Jesse, Ida, Albert and Mildred. (7) Charles, who married Lillie Hickman, a daughter of James and Annie Hickman, and are the parents of Douglas, Frank, Marion and Horace. (8) Elizabeth, who lives at home; (9) Nathan, also living at home. The mother of the above named children, Mary Jane (Holmes) Pechin, died June 5, 1886.

JOHN S. MURRAY. For many years Mr. Murray has been engaged in the carpentering business in Radnor township, and is imbued with a spirit of enterprise that makes him an active factor in commercial circles. He was born in Tredyffrin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1842, a son of George W. and Elizabeth (Supplee) Murray. Elizabeth Supplee was born in Chester county, her family being descended from French Huguenots who came to America during the religious troubles in France. George W. Murray was the son of Jacob Murray, who was an active participant in the Revolutionary war under General Green, and who served in the regular army under the command of Anthony Wayne.

John S. Murray attended the common schools of Chester county, where he obtained a practical education which fully qualified him for the duties of life. After completing his studies he entered a carpenter shop, where he familiarized himself with all the details of the business and became a thorough master of the trade. He has followed this line of work all his life, discharging his duties with marked promptness and fidelity, and in this manner has won the confidence and respect of his neighbors and friends.

In May, 1875, Mr. Murray married Annie R. Dillin, a daughter of Charles and Margaret (Sidener) Dillin, of Montgomery county. Their children are: Elizabeth V., born in 1876, acquired an excellent literary education and was graduated from the Philadelphia School of Design for Women, afterward attending for three years the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts; Charles H., born in 1877, is a graduate from Pierce's Business College in Philadelphia; Oscar A., born in 1879, obtained his education in the public schools of Radnor; George W., born in 1883; was educated at Pierce's Business College, and John S., born in 1887, obtained his education at the Radnor public schools.

THE ARMITAGE PREPARATORY AND FINISHING SCHOOL is a favorite institution which has been accorded the patronage of many of the best families in Pennsylvania and adjoining states. It enjoys an ideal situation on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Wayne, which is regarded as the most healthful and attractive among the many suburbs of Philadelphia. The elevation is four hundred feet above sea level, and artesian wells provide water of absolute purity.

The main building occupied by the school was the famous Louella Mansion, and was purchased from the Drexel estate by Miss Harriet Clare Armitage, who has equipped and improved it for the purpose to which it is now devoted. The grounds comprise twelve acres, with beautifully parked rose gardens in the front, basket-ball field and tennis courts in the rear and a planked walk leading directly to the suburban station. The principal building is of granite, with a wide veranda on all sides, and is screened from view of the street by stately old pines. The interior is beautifully furnished, and the students rooms are provided with all modern aids to health and comfort.

Three courses of instruction are provided—college preparatory, general and special. The college preparatory course comprises such branches as are requisite for admission to Bryn Mawr and other high class collegiate institutions. The general course comprises an ample high-grade academical curriculum, and the special course affords, in its two divisions, a liberal literary training for such collegiate work as the student desires to undertake without entering a college.

The faculty comprises Harriet Clare Armitage, principal and instructor in literature; Laura K. Snyder, B. A. (Woman's College of Baltimore and Oxford University, England), history and English; Lucile Matthews, B. A., (Rockford College), Latin and mathematics; Rosa Marie Thieme (Royal Teachers' College at Dresden, 1882-1888, Royal Conservatory for Music at Dresden, 1895-1897, University of Geneva, Switzerland, 1898-1899), French and German; Edith Potter McIlhenney (Drexel Institute), art; Edwin Atlee Brill (Henry Schradieck, Springer College of Music, Ohio, 1886), violin; Mrs. A. T. Abbott, vocal music; Mr. Carl Sidney Abbott, piano; H. A. Clark, musical director (Chair of Music at University of Pennsylvania).

harmony; Laura Louise Angle, secretary; Eliza Criswell (Bryn Mawr), science and gymnastics; Bertha Cornelia Norris (Bryn Mawr), Greek; F. Eyre Miller, trained nurse.

ROBERT WALTER BEATTY, deceased; for many years a well known and influential resident of Collingdale, and up to the time of his decease a valued and trusted employe of the customs department of the United States government at Chester, Pennsylvania, was born at the Beatty homestead in Chester township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He was the youngest of a family of nine children, born to John and Mary (Mad-dock) Beatty, whose names are as follows: 1. Harriet, wife of John Dutton, of Chester, Pennsylvania; 2. Charles, who never married; he was born June 1, 1835; he was a jeweler in Augusta, Georgia; just after the Civil war he was on his way home to visit his sister, Ida, and died while on his journey, in 1865, or 1866; 3. George; 4. Edward; 5. Sarah, wife of Townsend Green, of Media, Pennsylvania; 6. Ida, wife of Horace P. Green, of Media, Pennsylvania; 7. Ellen, a twin sister of Ida, who died in childhood; 8. John; 9. Robert Walter Beatty.

Robert W. Beatty attended the common schools adjacent to his home, and this was supplemented by attendance at the Gilbert Academy in Chester, Pennsylvania. For a short time after his graduation he taught school, spending his leisure time at the old homestead, and in 1886 he passed a civil service examination and was appointed to the customs department in the city of Philadelphia. He was the incumbent of this office until 1894, when he was stationed at Chester, Pennsylvania, and this position he retained up to the time of his death, which occurred December 25, 1902. Mr. Beatty evinced a keen interest along educational lines, was a member of the school committee of his township, and for a number of years served in the capacity of secretary of the board. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party, and he was an honored member of L. H. Scott Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, at Chester, Pennsylvania.

On June 3, 1890, Mr. Beatty married Hettie G. Bonsall, who was born March 19, 1865, in Upper Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Lewis Knoll and Mary Ann (Alexander) Bonsall, who were married June 8, 1864. Lewis Knoll Bonsall, born May 15, 1830, and his wife, Mary Ann (Alexander) Bonsall, daughter of John and Ellen (Flood) Alexander, of England, were the parents of the following named children: Hettie, Garrett, widow of Robert W. Beatty; Harry Knoll, born August 2, 1867, who married Lillian Loyd, a daughter of William and Williamina Loyd, of Sharon Hill, Delaware county; Hannah, born February 18, 1870, died August 6, 1876; Ellen Jane, born September 6, 1872; and Elmira, born August 23, 1875. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Beatty—Lewis Bonsall, born February 18, 1892; Robert Walter, Jr., born June 23, 1894; Edward Fell, born November 13, 1897; Dorothy, born September 26, 1900.

EDMUND T. RICE was born near Glen Olden, in Ridley township, Delaware county, September 5, 1839. He was educated in the public schools and afterward devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, and with a fair measure of success. However, during the last ten years of his life, he was in the service of an insurance company, and also, during a still longer period, was known for his unselfish interest in public affairs and his earnest support of all measures which had for their end the welfare of the borough and its people. He was the son of Jacob and Zaidee (Taylor) Rice, his father having been a farmer of Delaware county.

Mr. Rice died August 13, 1901. His wife, whom he married December 24, 1868, was Maria Fairlamb, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Patterson) Fairlamb, of Media, her father at one time being an owner of a large tract of land near Chester, at the place known as Eddystone. Mrs. Rice's grandparents were, on the paternal side, Joseph and Sidney (Vernon) Fairlamb, and on the maternal side, William and Susan (Trimble) Patterson. The parents of Susan Patterson, great-grandparents of Mrs. Rice, were Abraham and Lydia Trimble. All of these family names represent elements of substantial early settlement, and for many years have been synonymous with entire respectability and straightforward honesty.

The children born of this marriage of Edmund T. and Maria (Fairlamb) Rice were as follows: William F. Rice, born March 16, 1871, and now cashier of the West Philadelphia First National Bank; Jacob, born August 31, 1872, died August 27, 1901; Robert Pennell, born April 28, 1874; Mary P., born September 27, 1877, died September 6, 1901; Susan T., born January 10, 1879; Edmund T., born November 10, 1880; Elsie Z., born June 14, 1882; Charles P., born June 8, 1884; and Frank, born October 29, 1890.

JOSEPH LOWNES was born in Springfield township, Delaware county, on the 12th of October, 1827, and is still living in the same township, being now in his seventy-sixth year. He is a son of Joseph Lownes, and he attended the Friends' school of his home locality until fourteen years of age, after which he spent two years as a student in the Orthodox Friends' Boarding School at Westtown. He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and has always adhered closely to its teachings and principles.

In 1853 Mr. Lownes was united in marriage in Pensbury township, Chester county, to Miss Minerva Webb, a daughter of Alban and Hannah Webb. In the year of their marriage they settled near Marple, in Springfield township, where Mr. Lownes purchased a farm whereon he has since made his home, devoting his entire life to agricultural interests. His has been a useful, busy and upright career, commending him to the confidence and regard of all with whom he has come in contact. He long served as an active member of the school board of Springfield township, and was also a member of the Springfield Free Fountain Society, and contributed generously of his means to the work of that organization. In business affairs he has ever been straightforward and reliable in his dealings, and in matters of citizenship public spirited and progressive, so that he is numbered among the valued residents of the community in which his entire life has been passed.

JONATHAN HEACOCK, a farmer now retired from active pursuits and living at Sharon Hill, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Darby township, April 3, 1840, a son and one of eight children of Jonathan and Rebecca (Roberts) Heacock. Jonathan, the father, was the son of Joseph and Mary Heacock, who were among the early settlers in that region, although not pioneers. Joseph died in 1843, and his wife Mary in 1846.

The children of Jonathan and Rebecca (Roberts) Heacock were: Margaret, born in 1826; Mary, born in 1830, married William P. Yarnall, and died in 1885; Joseph, born in 1832, married Elizabeth Serrill, and died in 1859; Edward R., born in 1834, married for his first wife, Sarah Dickinson, and for his second wife Elizabeth Lewis; James H., born in 1838; Jonathan, born in 1840; Rebecca, born in 1842, died in 1884; and Samuel, born in 1847, married Elizabeth Bonsall, daughter of Samuel and granddaughter of David Bonsall, of Delaware county.

Jonathan Heacock, son of Jonathan and Rebecca, was brought up to farm work and acquired his early education in the Friends' school at Darby. He lived at home until about twenty years old and then set out to travel, which he did extensively for several years, visiting various places of interest, from all of which he was materially benefitted without losing any of his native love of home and kindred. He returned to Pennsylvania about the time of the outbreak of the Civil war, and in 1862 he enlisted in one of the companies comprising the regiment commanded by Colonel J. W. Hawley, of Media.

In 1868, March 10th, Mr. Heacock married Rebecca Evenson, daughter of James and Jane (Reimer) Evenson, and after this event he devoted his attention to farming pursuits; and being industrious, thrifty and progressive, he achieved and earned a fair measure of success; and more, he has won the confidence and regard of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. The children born to Jonathan and Rebecca Heacock have been two sons, Thomas Wilson and Howard Heacock; and two daughters, Margaret, and Helen V.; Margaret is now the wife of William Vollmer, of Sharon Hill, the latter the son of John and Mary Helen Vollmer; Helen V. Heacock is unmarried.

GEORGE G. PATCHEL, a well known citizen of Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, who has been honored by his townsmen with offices of trust, was born in Darby township, March 8, 1857, and is a son of George S. and Elizabeth (Loren) Patchel.

In early life Mr. Patchel learned the printer's trade, but subsequently mastered the art of telegraphy, which he followed for five years. He then engaged in the business of metal roofing, and in company with his brother, T. T. Patchel, organized a firm which dealt extensively in heaters and ranges, and continued in business for fifteen years. Mr. Patchel was appointed by President Harrison as postmaster of Darby, an office which he held for four years, and in 1898 he was elected register of wills for Delaware county, being re-elected in 1900. He is also clerk of the orphans' court of Delaware county. The manner in which Mr. Patchel has discharged the duties of these responsible positions fully justifies the trust reposed in him both by the United States government and by his fellow citizens. Politically he is a Republican. He is a member of the society of Elks, and the order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Patchel married January 31, 1884, Adeline Verlenden, a native of Darby, and daughter of Enos and Mary (Hirst) Verlenden. They have one son: Leroy S., born January 21, 1885.

DAVID PRATT. The Pratt family of Newtown Square, Pennsylvania, of whom David Pratt is a worthy representative, trace their ancestry back to Abraham De Pratt, who came from France to America, obtained a deed of land in Dublin, Pennsylvania, where he settled. His death occurred in 1709, and he left a will that was recorded October 24, 1709, bequeathing his property to his son.

Joseph Pratt, son of Abraham De Pratt, seems to have dropped the prefix which his father used, for the family name has been henceforth known as Pratt. He purchased a farm in Edgemont, Delaware county, on which he erected the Pratt homestead, which at his death was bequeathed to his son. On May 9, 1717, he married Sarah Edwards, a daughter of William Edwards, of Middletown, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Alice, Ann, Sarah, Rose, Priscilla, and Joseph Pratt.

Joseph Pratt, only son of Joseph and Sarah Pratt, in 1767 purchased two hundred and fifty acres of land in Marple, for which he paid forty-one pounds, seven shillings and two pence, and to which he gave the name of Springtown. He married Jane Davis, daughter of David and Jane (Jones) Davis, and granddaughter of Ellis Davis. The following named children were born to them: Abraham, Sarah, Jane, Joseph, David, Mary, Priscilla and Thomas Pratt.

David Pratt, son of Joseph and Jane Pratt, was born June 12, 1756, and after his father's death, he settled on the Springtown property, and changed the name to Springton. He devoted his entire time and attention to the improvement and cultivation of the land. In his religious belief he was an earnest follower of the tenets of the Quaker faith, being an elder in the Newtown Friends' Meeting. He was united in marriage to Lydia Hooper, daughter of John and Christina (Reynolds) Hooper, of West Chester, Pennsylvania. Their children were: John, David, Joseph, Jane, Abraham, Jeremiah, Henry, Lydia, Christina, Sophia, Randall and David Pratt.

David Pratt, son of David and Lydia Pratt, was born in Marple township, February 20, 1809, and reared upon the old homestead. He followed the usual customs of the young men of that time, attending school and assisting with the work upon the farm, and subsequently settled upon a portion of his father's farm in Newtown, which he cultivated to a high state of perfection. He married Tamer Lewis, daughter of John Lewis; she was born January 26, 1810. Their children were: John L., born November 13, 1837, died July 9, 1884; David, born November 7, 1840, and Ruth A. T. Mr. Pratt died February 20, 1882, his wife having died January 26, of the same year.

David Pratt, son of David and Tamer Pratt, was born in Newtown, Pennsylvania, November 7, 1840, and after attending the village school, he pursued a course of study at Foulk's Boarding School, and completed his education at the Normal Schools in Millersville and West Chester. After completing his studies he returned to his father's farm and assisted with the work until 1869, when he started marketing for himself; he followed this occupation for fifteen years, or until 1884, when he disposed of the old property which had come to him by inheritance on the death of his father in 1882. At that time he inherited through his grandfather, John Lewis, a part of the William Lewis homestead, which included the farm sold to William Marks in 1891, and Mr. Pratt's present farm in Central Square, which consists of sixty acres of ground, where he has since continued to raise a general line of garden produce. The old home was the headquarters of Washington at one time, and the old place standing at the cross roads on the farm, was an early tavern from which it is said that Sandy Flash once escaped when pursued by twenty men.

14 X

Mr. Pratt has always taken an active interest in town affairs, and has served nearly twenty years as auditor, always refusing all other offices. In state politics he has always voted a Republican ticket, but he is also a strong Prohibitionist, having devoted considerable time to the advocacy of the cause of temperance. In his religion he is an earnest and consistent member of the Friends' Meeting.

On October 15, 1872, Mr. Pratt married Sarah Ann Jones, a daughter of Benjamin and Sarah A. (Esbin) Jones, whose children were Jesse E., deceased; Anna M.; Chalkley, deceased; Benjamin, deceased; Edwin; Sarah A.; Esther H., deceased; John Sharpless, and Emma F.

The children of David and Sarah A. (Jones) Pratt are John Walter, born August 30, 1873, died January 23, 1890; Ruth A. T., born March 31, 1878.

JAMES PATCHEL, a well known citizen of Gradyville, Pennsylvania, was born in Lower Merion, January 28, 1845. He was the first of seven children born to James and Elizabeth (Grayel) Patchel, the others being as follows: William H., deceased; George M., who married Portia Pennington, by whom he has two children; Ellen, wife of Joseph Blythe, who is the mother of four children; Mary, wife of William Supplee; Annie, wife of Rinewalt Supplee, by whom she has had three children; Rebecca, unmarried.

James Patchel acquired his education in the public schools at Radnor. For ten years he lived on the Tryon Lewis farm, and then removed to Edgemont, his father's place, and went to the Friends' School at Sugartown. After completing his studies he assisted his father about the farm until his marriage, when he went to Radnor, where he remained only one year on David Abraham's place. He then rented two farms, consisting of two hundred and thirty-five acres, of Joseph Taylor, which he cultivated for six years; from here he went to Willistown, renting a farm of one hundred and twenty acres belonging to Joseph Roberts. Here he remained a short time.

and then went to Newtown, on the Milton Lewis farm, where he remained for two years. His next move was to Easttown, Chester county, where he spent another year, and from there returned to Edgemont and purchased one of the farms belonging to Joseph Taylor, consisting of one hundred and twenty acres, and which he had previously occupied. This property he still operates, carrying on general farming, and doing a thriving business in dairy produce, making about one hundred pounds of butter weekly.

Politically Mr. Patchel has always been a staunch adherent of the Democratic party, and while he takes a keen interest in matters of public interest, national, state and local, he has never occupied public office, having no desire for political prominence.

Mr. Patchel has been twice married, his first wife having been Sallie Cloud, a daughter of William and Annie (Pearson) Cloud, whom he married on February 17, 1870; her death occurred June 9, 1888; she left a family of five children: Lizzie P., born June 1, 1871, wife of Horace Bishop, by whom she had one child, Oscar Bishop; William H., born December 23, 1873; Ellwood, born March 19, 1879, married Eva Baker; Anna Cloud, born December 10, 1881, and James, born June 19, 1883. His second marriage occurred on November 28, 1891, to Lydia H. Thomas, daughter of Emmor and Hannah (Fairlamb) Thomas, of Goshen, Chester county. She was one of a family of five children, the others being Isaac, who married Anna Russell; Mary F.; Anna T., who married David Windle, and has six children; and Susan H. Thomas, who married Samuel Reno, and has a family of six children.

ALEXANDER JOHNSON, the son of Alexander and Sarah P. (Esery) Johnson, was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, September 27, 1844. Alexander Johnson, Sr., was a son of Aaron Johnson, one of the early residents of Pennsylvania.

Alexander Johnson, Jr., was brought up on his father's farm, and during his early life attended the common schools. He lived in Montgomery county until his marriage in 1867, to Sophia, daughter of Phillip Moore, of Marple, Pennsylvania. After his marriage, he lived one year in Philadelphia county, then removed to Concord township, Delaware county, where he remained seventeen years. He bought the old Fawks Homestead at Marple in 1884, and resided there until his death, which occurred October 18, 1899. The farm he purchased contained more than one hundred acres which he cultivated and improved. He was one of the most prosperous farmers in that vicinity, having had long experience in agriculture. He was a member of George Bartram Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Media, Pennsylvania.

The children of Alexander and Sophia (Moore) Johnson were named as follows: Mary, Sarah, Annie, who married George Esery, and whose two children are Joseph and Alexander, Hannah, Margaret, the wife of C. R. Davis, and Gertrude Johnson.

JONATHAN WOLFENDEN. The Wolfenden family of Cardington, in Upper Darby township, Delaware county, originated in Royton, a village near Oldham, in Lancashire, England. The progenitor of the American branch of the family was James Wolfenden, who married Mary Taylor of Royton, near Oldham, where all their nine children were born. James Wolfenden (1), born August 12, 1795, had learned the art of weaving cloth, which he pursued for some time in England in connection with his farming interests. Some time before the demise of his wife, who died at Royton, December 22, 1848, in her fifty-second year, he emigrated to the United States in company with his son Jonathan, and after a brief period he returned to England. In 1851 he returned to the United States and settled at Avondale, Delaware county, where he resided for some time, then removing to Cardington, where he spent the remaining years of his life with his children, and passed away November 1, 1868. He was a conscientious and just man in all his affairs, and at the time of his death it was justly said that he bore the ill-will of none, and enjoyed the respect of all who knew him. His wife was Mary Taylor, a daughter of John and Esther (Park) Taylor, both natives of England, the former of Royton, Lancashire, and the latter of Yorkshire. John Taylor had learned the various arts entering into the manufacture of cloths, and was engaged in the manufacturing business in his native town, and he was the first to invent and perfect the picker now used in the looms in connection with the shuttle, for weaving cloth. Of the marriage of James and Mary (Taylor) Wolfenden were born nine children who attained years of maturity, and all came to the United States. They were as follows:

1. Thomas, born May 13, 1818, and died July 17, 1875; he married Ellen Musker, daughter of John and Ann Musker, and their children were: John, who died at Darby; James, who died in England; Jonathan; Mary Alice; Isaiah, who died at Avondale, Delaware county; and Thomas T. Wolfenden. The mother of this family, Ellen (Musker) Wolfenden, was born in 1822, and died January 30, 1884. 2. Esther Park, born May 12, 1821, and died March 31, 1900; she married William Baldwin, a native of England, who died April 23, 1903; they had no issue. 3. Mally, who married Oliver Holt, of Springfield township; she died in childbirth with her first born; 4. Jonathan, whose name introduces this narrative; 5. Betty, who married Thomas Marshall, a native of Royton, England; she died leaving four children—John, Mary, Jonathan and Taylor; 6. Grace, who married John Normington, a native of England, and has five children: Mary; Horace, deceased; Elizabeth and Emily, both deceased, and Sarah. 7. James, born September 21, 1835 and died December 26, 1889, married Mary Shore, who was a daughter of Thomas and Mary (Brierley) Shore, and his children are: Hannah, (Mrs. Charles Shurtleff, of Philadelphia, who has three children); Mary, (Mrs. David Cottrell, of Hammonton, New Jersey); and John Taylor, who married Pherenna Boyer. James Wolfenden, who was born September 21, 1835, died December 26, 1889, and his wife, Mary (Shore) Wolfenden, survives him. Mr. Wolfenden was connected with the firm of Wolfenden, Shore & Co., until the time of his death. 8. Hannah, who married Joseph Holt, who was a native of England, and to them were born two children: Ann Graham, who married Willie Law, and Mary Emily, who died aged six years. 9. Taylor Wolfenden, who married Jane Moorehouse, and had seven children: Mary Ann and Sarah, both deceased; Mary Taylor, Emma Jane, Floretta and Esther. The father of this family died July 26, 1892, and his widow still survives him.

Jonathan Wolfenden, the fourth child and second son of James and Mary (Taylor) Wolfenden, was born at the village of Royton, near Oldham, Lancashire, England, October 16, 1827. He had learned the art of spinning yarns and weaving cloth during his boyhood years, and pursued that line of work in the land of his nativity until 1848, when, at the age of twenty-one years, he decided to come to America, hoping to find a broader field for his skill and labor. He accordingly embarked from Liverpool in company with his father on the good ship "Saranac," and after a voyage of five weeks landed in Philadelphia. Finding themselves in a strange land, without friends and but little capital, the son at once sought for employment, but did not meet with immediate success, owing to the depression in business which prevailed at that time, and the fact that many of the troops returning from the Mexican war at that time were given preference by many of the leading employers in Philadelphia and vicinity. The young man was not to be discouraged, however, and was undaunted in his determination to succeed. He made his way on foot to Pottsville, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, but there his hopes for securing employment were not realized, and he finally returned to Philadelphia, fatigued and crestfallen, but none the less determined to find employment, which he finally secured in a cloth mill at Mill Creek, Montgomery county. He worked there for some time under adverse conditions, and finally wishing to improve his opportunities, he came to Chester, Delaware county, where he obtained permanent employment with Mr. Simeon Lord, at Avondale, in the same county. Here the young weaver met and later married his wife, and here also were born his sons, Taylor, Thomas and John. Upon the closing down of Simeon Lord's mill, owing to business failure, Mr. Wolfenden found employment at the Oliver Holt mill, in Springfield township. In 1855 he went to Parksburg, Chester county, where he was employed by Charles Shore, an uncle of his wife.

In 1856 Mr. Wolfenden, with his brother James and his brother-in-law Jesse Shore, came to Cardington, and here with their united effort they engaged in the manufacture of woolen yarns under the firm name of Wolfenden, Shore & Company. The combined capital of the firm being limited, they were only able to purchase one set of carding machines, one spinning mule and one picking machine, and with this equipment and a stock of one bag of wool, they began business. From this humble beginning these pioneer spinners and weavers, by their united and well directed efforts, succeeded in building up one of the most important enterprises of its kind in Delaware county, furnishing employment to an aggregate of four hundred skilled operatives. The establishment proved of vast benefit to the village and neighborhood, and, indeed, it may be said in all truthfulness that the village of Cardington owes its growth and development to the enterprise and progressiveness of the founders of the firm of Wolfenden, Shore & Company. It is furthermore to be stated that Jonathan Wolfenden, the senior member of the firm, contributed in so small degree, by his indefatigable energy and perseverance to the successful establishment and conduct of the manufactory with which he has been connected from its inception, and of which he has long been president. While he has been thus vastly serviceable to the community, he has also contributed to its prosperity by his intelligent and public-spirited effort along all material and moral lines, and has liberally aided every laudable effort and enterprise. In 1888, after the death of Jesse Shore, which occurred in March, 1887, the firm became and has since been known as Wolfenden, Shore & Company, Limited, and is now being conducted by the descendants of the original founders.

Mr. Wolfenden was married, at Chester, to Sarah Shore, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Brierley) Shore. Of this union have been born the following children: 1. Taylor, born March 5, 1850; he married Emma Cottrell, and their children are Mary A.; Jonathan, who died in childhood; and Jonathan Lincoln Elmer; 2. Thomas, born January 10, 1851, died May 9, 1868, at the age of seventeen years; 3. John, born May 12, 1852; he married Anna S. Cottrell and his children are Bertha and Sarah. 4. Mary Shore, born February 19, 1858; she married David Henry, and to them was born a son, Harry Lincoln, born January 22, 1883; her husband died April 7, 1890, and she married, (secondly) Thomas T. Wolfenden. 5. Jonathan Lincoln, born May 12, 1861; he married Martha Robinson, and to them were born two children, Mary Shore, and Taylor, who died aged six years.

Sarah (Shore) Wolfenden, the mother of this family was born July 31, 1829, and died September 14, 1888. She was a most estimable lady of the old school type, possessed of those excellences of character which mark the real wife and mother. Her death was deeply deplored, and among her sincere mourners were many who had been the recipients of her liberal but unostentatious bounty in times of sorrow and need.

JOSEPH LEEDOM, the son of Joseph B. and Mary Maris (Worrell) Leedom, was born in Upper Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, January 2, 1827. His grandfather, John Leedom was a native of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and his two brothers, Daniel and Edward, settled in Delaware county, founding a homestead in Upper Darby. John Leedom, the grandfather of Joseph Leedom, settled in Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he followed farming and spent the remaining years of his life and died in 1842. He married Miss Bond, and they had seven children, Charles, Joseph B., John, Elizabeth, Samuel, Esther and Ruth Anna.

Joseph B., the son of John Leedom, was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, in March, 1796. He was brought up on a farm, and from 1828 until his death, which occurred in March, 1864, he engaged in the miller's trade, having operated a grist and saw mill on Darby creek in Haverford township. He was of Quaker descent, and was an elder in the meeting of the Society of Friends. He was interested in politics to some extent, and was an old time Whig, afterward joining the Republican party. He married Mary Maris Worrell, a daughter of Elisha Worrell, of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children were Mira W., who married Charles Worrell, and who died some years later; John, deceased; Maris W., deceased; and Joseph. The mother of this family, Mary M. (Worrell) Leedom, died in August, 1865, in her eightieth year.

Joseph Leedom, the youngest child of Joseph B. and Mary Maris (Worrell) Leedom, spent his boyhood years under the parental roof in Haverford township, Delaware county. His education was obtained in the public schools and at Joseph Faulk's Friends' school in Montgomery county. He learned the miller's trade and succeeded his father in the business, being in partnership with his brothers. Subsequently, he carried on the grist mill alone. In 1868 he purchased a farm near Manoa, Haverford township, and has made farming his business up to the present time. He has held numerous county and town offices, having been secretary and treasurer of the West Chester Pike for several years, director of the poor for thirteen years, and a school director for a long period. He was brought up in the Quaker faith, and is an elder in the Society of Friends.

He was married in 1852 to Emily, daughter of Jonathan and Naoma (Parsons) Pyle, of Delaware county. They have had six children: 1. Amanda R., who died at the age of twenty-two years; 2. William P., of Haverford, Delaware county, who married Louisiana Enoch, and they are the parents of two sons: Harry T. and Elwood B., deceased; 3. Joseph B., who married Emma Tyson, and their children are: Mary Ethel, Joseph and Ira, deceased; 4. George Towman, who died aged sixteen years; 5. John L., who resides at home; 6. L. Walter, who married S. Zaidee Thornbury, and they have one child, Emily Prudence Leedom.

HUGH SAVAGE, of Manoa, Pennsylvania, was born in county Antrim, Ireland, April 3, 1846. His parents were Hugh and Margaret (McCandless) Savage, and his mother was a daughter of Thomas and Jane McCandless, who were of Scotch ancestry. The father was a son of Hugh and Jane (Mitchell) Savage, natives of county Derry, Ireland.

The parents of Hugh Savage came to this country soon after he had settled here, about 1874, bringing with them the six remaining children. They had born to them in all twelve children, viz: 1. Hugh, who is hereinafter written of; 2. Jane, who was married to James P. Gallagher; 3. Alexander, unmarried, who was graduated from the Reform Presbyterian Seminary of Philadelphia, and is now a pastor at Darlington, Beaver county, Pennsylvania; 4. Martha, who married John Parkhill; 5-6. William George and Thomas Henry, who were twins; William George married Elizabeth McClure, and Thomas Henry died unmarried, November 2, 1881; 7. James Lyle, who is single; 8. Margaret, who married William Wilkins; 9. Mary, who became the wife of Charles Hunter; 10. Hannah, now the wife of James Anderson; 11.

Rachel, who married Samuel P. Cosgrove; 12. John W. Savage, unmarried.

The Savage family settled in Pennsylvania, where they lived without being separated until the death of the father. He was a just and conscientious man and was held in high esteem in the neighborhood. He was survived by his wife, who is now residing in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and by eleven of the children, who are living in different parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Hugh Savage, the eldest of the children of Hugh and Margaret (McCandless) Savage, came to America from Ireland and landed in Philadelphia, May 14, 1865, being the second member of the family to emigrate, his sister Jane having come in August, 1864. He entered the employ of Robert Craig, at Upper Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and for three years was engaged in the milk business, becoming so familiar with its details that he bought the route and continued the business for twenty-three years, and was entirely successful in his undertaking. By strict attention to business he has increased his trade and has accumulated considerable property. In 1879 he purchased the farm at Manoa where he now resides. Through his business relations he has become well known in that section, and he has been of practical service to the community, taking an active interest in all measures calculated to advance the cause of education and other important community interests. He served for three years as supervisor of the township, and discharged the duties of the position with signal ability and strict fidelity to the trusts committed to him. He has given to political affairs the attention which a true citizen should, and his affiliations have been with the Republican party. He is a member of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Savage was married, November 25, 1868, to Elizabeth Jane, daughter of Andrew and Jane (Ramsey) Lockhart. They have seven children: 1. Andrew, born April 16, 1870, and died April 27, following; 2. Hugh, born October 2, 1871; he married Mary W. McAllister, and they have one child, Hugh Gilmore, born July 4, 1902; 3. Alexander, born September 18, 1873, who married M. Olive Collins, and has three children, viz: Alexander, born April 16, 1900; Anna May, born May 24, 1901, and Samuel George, born November 14, 1902; 4. Jane R., born September 14, 1875; 5. John L., born September 17, 1877; 6. Thomas H., born March 3, 1880; 7. Elizabeth, born April 29, 1882; 8. Anna E., born September 7, 1884, who is a graduate of the West Chester State Normal School and is teaching at Norwood, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

JOHN REESE LEWIS, who was for many years a leading manufacturer of Delaware county, was a representative of a family which had been for several generations closely identified with the agricultural and manufacturing interests of the county. His great-grandfather was William Lewis, whose son, John, married Jane Farh.

Edward Lewis, son of John and Jane (Farh) Lewis, was born in Haverford township, where he was reared to the milling business and later removed to Springfield, where he engaged in the manufacture of paper, naming the place Wallingford. After conducting this business for some time he removed to what is known as the Ashbridge mills, where he remained until the death of his father-in-law, Isaac Levis, after which event he returned to the Levis homestead, which contained many mill sites on Ridley creek. Here he conducted the milling business on an extensive scale with his brother-in-law, Seth Levis, until the freshet of August, 1843, in which his whole milling property was washed away. This great disaster failed to discourage the enterprising and persevering spirit of Mr. Lewis, who straightway applied himself to the task of rebuilding his saw and grist mills. These he conducted in connection with farming the remainder of his days. In politics Mr. Lewis was an old-line Whig. He served as county commissioner and director of the poor, and was a member of the Hicksite branch of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Lewis married Esther, daughter of Isaac and Esther (Pancoast) Levis, and they were the parents of the following children: Isaac L., Hannah A., William L., John Reese, mentioned at length hereinafter, Phoebe Ann and Edward, Jr. Mr. Lewis died at the age of eighty, in 1850.

John Reese Lewis, son of Edward and Esther (Levis) Lewis, was born in 1799, in Middletown township, Delaware county, and was educated in the Friends' School. On reaching manhood he became associated with his father and brothers in their business of paper manufacturing, at Ridley creek and settled on Crum creek after his marriage. Later he took charge of the paper mills on Ridley creek, with his brother, which they conducted until 1843, after which he engaged in the saw mill business in association with his brothers William and Edward. On the death of the father in 1850, Mr. Lewis came into possession of a share of the paternal estate, on which he built in 1850 the house in which his children now live, and where he lived until his death. Here he passed the remainder of his days, in the enjoyment of the affection of his family, and the well merited esteem and confidence of his neighbors.

Mr. Lewis married, in 1832, Hannah, daughter of Levi and Ellen H. (Meredith) Wells, of Chester Valley, Chester county. Their eldest child, Isaac L., was born in 1834, educated in the public schools, and in Mr. Parker's private school, and was afterward employed for some years in a clerical capacity by the Pennsylvania Railroad. In 1879 he entered the employ of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, in Colorado, located at Denver, there remained for four years, and on his return settled on the old homestead. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are: Ellen Meredith, Esther Levis, Sarah Fallon, Mary Passmore and Christopher Fallon, who leads the life of a farmer on the homestead. The family attend the meetings of the Society of Friends. Mrs. Lewis died in September, 1875, and her husband passed away in May, 1879. Both left the memory of long, useful and beneficent lives, and died rich in the affection and esteem of a large circle of friends.

JOSEPH GIBBONS, for many years a leading farmer and prominent citizen of Delaware county, belonged to a family of English origin, which for more than two centuries has been represented in the counties of Chester and Delaware. His grandfather and his father both bore the name of Joseph. The latter, who was born in 1770 on the homestead which is now the property of his grandson, followed the occupation of a farmer, making a specialty of stock grazing. He was a man of rare judgment and was frequently placed by his townsmen in positions calling for the exercise of clerical duties. He was a member of the Society of Friends. He married Lydia Dicks, of Providence township, and was the father of the following children: John, George, James, Humphrey, William, Ann, who became the wife of Edward Fell, Jane, Sarah, who married David Worrell, Elizabeth, who was the wife of Frederick Fairland, Lydia, who married Morris Roberts, and Joseph, mentioned hereinafter. Mr. Gibbons died in 1853.

Joseph Gibbons, Jr., son of Joseph and Lydia (Dicks) Gibbons, was born August 20, 1799, on the homestead in Springfield township, and was educated in the Friends' Select School. From early life he assisted in the labor of the paternal farm, subsequently cultivating the land on shares until the death of his father, when the estate became his by inheritance. He devoted himself mainly, as his father had done, to cattle grazing. Though devoting his life to the labors of an agriculturist, Mr. Gibbons was a man of much business ability and in all commercial transactions in which he was concerned was not less known for integrity and scrupulous honesty, than for executive sagacity and soundness of judgment.

His thorough acquaintance with all matters pertaining to agricultural science, together with his practical knowledge, combined to make him one of the most successful farmers in the county. He was one of the directors of the Delaware County Bank, of Chester. In politics he was a Whig, and later a Republican, and filled at various times, owing to the solicitation of his neighbors, a number of township offices. In religious matters he adhered to the faith of his ancestors, which was that of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Gibbons married Hannah B., daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Powell, of Springfield. Eight children were born to them: Joseph P., who resides on the homestead, and is a prominent business man in the financial affairs of Delaware county; John, deceased; George, deceased; William, deceased; Lydia; Mary E.; Sally P.; and Emma. Mr. Gibbons was no less beloved for his generous instincts, his judicious liberality, and his genial and kindly nature than he was respected for his strict integrity and unswerving honesty. His death occurred December 1, 1882, and his wife passed away one year, four months and twenty-one days later.

MAURICE M. DICKINSON, a leading farmer of Delaware county, is the bearer of a name celebrated in the annals of Pennsylvania as that of a Revolutionary patriot, and the founder of Dickinson College. William Dickinson, father of Maurice M. Dickinson, was born in Delaware county, and when a boy learned the wheelwright's trade. In 1855 he went to Marple, where he followed his trade for many years, making his home in Broomall, and purchased the farm where his son, Maurice, was born. He was a Republican in politics, and for many years filled the office of school director. He married Louisa Mattsinger, and was the father of eleven children, nine of whom are still living: Ellza, who married George Shellingford, and is now deceased; Mary, who is the wife of A. C. Sloane; John, who is a resident of Broomall; William, who resides in Springfield; Annie, who is the wife of Maurice Morris, of Fernwood; Ida, who married Sharpless Novell, and is now deceased; Hannah, who is the wife of Josiah Longstreth, of Norristown; Charles, who resides in Broomall; Maurice, mentioned at length hereinafter; Walter, who lives at Marple Glen, Montgomery county; and Howard, who resides in Broomall. William Dickinson, the father of this family, died in 1889.

Maurice M. Dickinson, ninth child of William and Louisa (Mattsinger) Dickinson, was born November 25, 1860, in Marple township, and passed his boyhood on the farm where, with the exception of a few years, he has always resided.

William Dickinson

This farm, where he makes a specialty of dairying, consists of forty-eight acres, and is one of the most flourishing dairy farms in the county. In politics, Mr. Dickinson adheres to the Republican party, and since 1894 has served as school director.

Mr. Dickinson married, December 14, 1882, Anna, daughter of Samuel and Margaret Howard, of Milton, Chittenden county, Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson are the parents of two children: Josephine, born October 21, 1885; and William M., born January 21, 1891.

GEORGE F. BLACK was born in Marple, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, July 20, 1839. His parents were Samuel V. and Elizabeth T. (Horton) Black. Samuel V. Black was born on the old Black homestead in 1801, being descended on his father's side from an old Pennsylvania family. He worked on his father's farm until 1827, when he married Miss Elizabeth T. Horton who was born in Newtown, Pennsylvania. Her father was John Horton who was a descendant of Barnabas Horton, one of the earliest inhabitants of Southold, Long Island.

After their marriage, Samuel Black and his wife moved to Marple, where they soon became prominent in the social life of the place. Mr. Black was a farmer but had time and inclination for many interests outside of agriculture. He was an honored and respected member of the community, and always aided and encouraged every good cause. He was one of the founders of the Marple Presbyterian church, and was one of its most active workers until his death which occurred in 1851. His family consisted of eight children, named as follows:

1. John Horton, the oldest son, now living in Philadelphia, married Hannah Moore of Radnor, Delaware county, Pennsylvania; they had three children, Emma, Eliza, and Samuel Sherwood, who died when twenty-one year of age.
2. Catherine, who married Lewis Morris Lewis, and they were the parents of two children, one of whom died in infancy.
3. William V., who always lived on the Black homestead, and died at the age of sixty-three years.
4. Samuel V., who enlisted in the Civil war, serving as captain in the Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He was at one time a prisoner in Andersonville prison. He remained in the army until the close of the war, when he was discharged, having won an honorable record for long and valuable service. After the war was over he like many others was attracted to the west. In 1869 the Pacific Railroad was opened, forming a connecting link between the east and west, and this in itself was a sufficient inducement for many to develop western industries and resources. Samuel Black never returned to the east, but engaged in western trade until his death which occurred December 27, 1900. 5. Henry H., of Glen Olden, Delaware county, married Helen Lawrence. They had two children, Elizabeth who became the wife of Mr. Gershon, and Florence who married Dr. Gallagher of Glen Olden. Henry H. Black was a member of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment under Colonel Hawley, which was organized to repel the threatened invasion of General Lee. 6. George F., mentioned hereinafter. 7. Elizabeth, who married Charles J. Esrey; they had a daughter Margaret, and a son George, who married Ann Johnson, and their two children were Joseph and Alexander. Mrs. Esrey died some time ago. 8. Bernard, who was the youngest child of the family.

George F. Black, the fifth son of Samuel V. and Elizabeth T. Black, lived on the farm in Marple until 1862, when he served for one year in the Civil war, being enrolled in the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He fought in the battle of Gettysburg which took place in July, 1863, and his performance of all military duties gained for him honorable mention when he received his discharge in September of that year. He was married, in 1867, to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Moore, who was the daughter of Philip Moore, a resident of Marple. For nine years after his marriage he lived in Concord, Pennsylvania. On the death of his mother in 1876, he bought the homestead in Marple, where he has since resided. He has been prosperous in his chosen occupation, and is known as a successful agriculturist throughout that part of the state.

He is a regular attendant of the Presbyterian church, and is interested in promoting its many schemes for usefulness that originated in his father's time. His wife died in 1893 at their home in Marple, Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM COATES CONRAD. In the early settlement and subsequent history of Pennsylvania the ancestors of William C. Conrad were prominent. His paternal grandfather, Matthew Conrad, from small beginnings in the boot and shoe business built up a large wholesale trade, which he carried on at Strawberry and Market streets, Philadelphia, and at the time of his death was considered one of the wealthy merchants of that city. His business became very extensive during the Civil war. Matthew and Martha Conrad were the parents of the following children: William, deceased; Sarah, the wife of William Edwards; Mary, the wife of Henry Hoppin; Caroline, who became the wife of William Potter and is now deceased; Elizabeth, the deceased wife of William Wells; and

George Washington. The last named, who became the father of our subject, was born in Philadelphia, and eventually succeeded to the wholesale shoe business of his father, which he carried on successfully, for many years. His death occurred on the 28th of February, 1868.

For his wife George W. Conrad chose Sarah Ann Fackney, who was also born in Philadelphia, on the 16th of July, 1824, and her death occurred February 19, 1902. Her grandfather came to this country during the Revolutionary war. He was a native of Scotland, where he was a very wealthy man and vessel owner, and the voyage to this country was made in one of his own ships, which he took up the Sassafras river. During the Revolutionary war his sympathies were with the colonists, and, wishing to join their army, he abandoned and scuttled his ship, and in order to conceal his identity from the British and protect his property interests in Scotland he assumed the name of John Fackney. What his rightful name was is not known to his descendants. After the close of the war he located in Cecil county, Maryland, where the grandfather of our subject was born. He also bore the name of John Fackney, and by his marriage to Margaret Kohn became the father of five children, as follows: Mary, who became the wife of William Emhart, and is now deceased; Sarah Ann, the mother of our subject; Celeste, the deceased wife of William Edgar; Margaret Jane, who married John C. Beatty, and has also passed away; and William M., who served as a soldier in Anderson's Cavalry during the Civil war, and is still unmarried. Unto George Washington and Sarah Ann (Fackney) Conrad were born six children, namely: Sarah, who died in childhood; Mathew, who married Annie Kater, by whom he had two children, Frederick and Mary Ann, and the parents and children are all deceased, the father dying when forty-two years of age; Sally, who is still unmarried, and makes her home in Virginia; George Washington, who died in childhood; Lillian, who also died in childhood; and William Coates, whose name introduces this review.

William Coates Conrad was born in Elwyn, Pennsylvania, in the house in which he now resides, on the 21st of September, 1865. His elementary education was received in a private school at Media, Pennsylvania, after which he matriculated in Shortlidge's Academy, also of that borough, and later entered the Lawrenceville classical and commercial high school. Returning thence to his home, he there remained until his marriage, when he removed to an adjoining farm, of which he then became owner, and on which he remained for nine years, returning on the expiration of that period to his old home and birthplace, where he still resides. The tilling of the soil has been his life occupation, and in this line he has met with a high degree of success. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, and for one year he served as a school director. In his social relations he is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry, and at the present time is serving as master of Brookhaven Grange, No. 1173, of Media, Pennsylvania. Although not a member of any religious denomination his sympathies are with the Episcopal church.

The marriage of Mr. Conrad was celebrated on the 1st of March, 1892, by the Rev. C. H. Hibbard, when Edith May Hergesheimer became his wife. She was born in Germantown, Pennsylvania, October 7, 1870. Her paternal grandparents were William Henry and Hannah (Stout) Hergesheimer, and they had three children, all now living: William Henry, the father of Mrs. Conrad; Mary Hinkle, who married James Gosline, and had seven children, four now living; and Susan, who is unmarried. On the 27th of February, 1868, William Henry Hergesheimer, Jr., married Anna Cass, and they had three children, namely: Hannah Mary, who was born March 31, 1869, and died in infancy; Edith May, the wife of our subject; and Florence Taylor, who was born January 28, 1875. The father of this family served throughout the period of the Civil war in Anderson's Cavalry, having enlisted for service in Pennsylvania. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Conrad was Moses Taylor Cass, who was born in Concord, New Hampshire, July 29, 1821, a son of Burrack and Ruth Cass, and his death occurred January 23, 1888. On the 13th of August, 1845, he was united in marriage to Mary Springer Pierce, who was born June 9, 1823, and was a daughter of George and Catherine Pierce. Four children were born of this union, as follows: George Cass, who was born May 10, 1847, and died August 17, 1895, after becoming the father of three children, two now living; Anna, the mother of Mrs. Conrad, and who was born April 23, 1849, and died March 29, 1897; Jesse, who was born July 31, 1851, and died October 25, 1873, unmarried; and Jennie Chipman, who was born January 13, 1855, and died October 30, 1878. Thus it will be seen that the ancestors of both Mr. and Mrs. Conrad have long been identified with the interests of the Keystone state, and they are worthy representatives of honored old families.

JOSEPH BISHOP. As one reviews the history of the county and looks into the past to see who were prominent in its early development, he will find that almost throughout the entire century the name of Bishop has been closely connected with the progress and advancement of this section. For the long period of seventy-nine years, Joseph Bishop has been a resident of Delaware county, and during all these years he has been prominently identified with the history of this section, and now in his declining years he is practically living retired, crowned with the veneration and respect which should ever be accorded an honorable old age.

Mr. Bishop was born in the old Bishop homestead in Upper Providence township Delaware county, on the 6th of October, 1823. His father, Randal Bishop, was a leader and an active worker in the Society of Friends, and much of his life was given to the advancement of Christianity among men. He married Maria Massie, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and they became the parents of seven children, namely: Sarah P., deceased; Lydia M., who became the wife of Maris E. Taylor; Elizabeth L., wife of Preston P. Hill; Priscilla P., deceased; Emma Bishop, at home; Susanna, who is also living at home; and Joseph; the subject of this review. The last named obtained his elementary education in the public schools of his native locality, and later matriculated in the Westtown School, in Chester county. Throughout the period of his active business career he has given his attention to the tilling of the soil, and until recently was the owner of forty acres on the border of Springfield township, near Clifton Heights. Although at all times an active and public-spirited citizen, he has never been an aspirant for political honors, but has been a member of Springfield township school board since 1865 to the present time without intermission. He is an active worker in the Society of Friends, and is an earnest Christian gentleman.

In 1853 occurred the marriage of Mr. Bishop and Miss Martha Stokes, the lady being a daughter of Hezekiah and Frances Stokes, of New Jersey. Their children are as follows: Edgar T., a prominent contractor and builder of Lansdowne; he married Mary Louise Worrell, and they are the parents of one daughter, Mary Bishop; Maria, who became the wife of Penrose D. Curtis, of Marple; Randal, who follows his trade of carpenter in Rutledge, Delaware county; he married Mary Vallmer, and their children are: R. Morton and Martha Clara Bishop; Joel, a miller by trade, married Othelia Miller, and they are now residing in Minnesota; Albert, who died in infancy; and J. Stokes, who follows his trade of carpenter in Darby township, was united in marriage to Viola Vallmer, and one child has been born to them, Maria C. Bishop. No one in the community enjoys a better reputation than Mr. Bishop, and when a man stands high in the estimation of the people who have known him during his entire life no greater testimonial to his worth can be given.

EDWIN E. EACHUS, one of the leading citizens of Thornbury township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, as well as a successful farmer and carpenter, was born May 4, 1852, in that same township, and he is a son of Samuel G. Eachus, and a grandson of Homer Eachus, Sr., and his wife, Lydia M. (Greene) Eachus.

Edwin E. Eachus received his education in the schools of his native township, and remained upon the homestead until he was seventeen years of age, at which time he secured a position in the store of Henry Ogden in Oakdale, Springfield township, Pennsylvania, but after two years he went into the employ of T. J. Haldeman, and six months later being offered a similar position in Philadelphia, he accepted it and remained in that city until 1870, when he began an apprenticeship with a carpenter and three years later was able to undertake business for himself.

In 1874 Mr. Eachus was married to Annie E. Crowthers, a daughter of John and Alice Crothers, and she was born in Oldom, England, February 8, 1846. The following children were born to this marriage, namely: Alice G., born May 25, 1875; Samuel S. G., born March 12, 1877, educated in schools of Morton, learned the trade of carpenter, and is now assisting his father, a bright promising young man; Oliver H., born January 11, 1879, married Annie M. Gallagher, of Philadelphia, now living at Thompson Bridge; Mary E., born March 24, 1881, educated in Morton schools as were all the children; Althea B., born July 5, 1883; Hannah G., born September 19, 1886, died in infancy; Sadie Castilla, born August 31, 1888, now attending Media high school.

The grandfather of our subject, Homer Eachus, Sr., was born July 15, 1792, and was one of the early settlers of Delaware county, where he owned a large tract of land. He married Lydia M. Greene, born September 12, 1790, and died July 15, 1871, while her husband died December 8, 1869. Their children were as follows: Robert G., born July 8, 1815, died July 11, 1815; Hannah G., born June 27, 1816, died February 24, 1885; Samuel S. G., born March 1, 1818, died April 16, 1889; Elizabeth, born January 29, 1820, died August 13, 1829; Homer, Jr., born November 23, 1821, died July 27, 1893; Lydia M., born February 20, 1824, died July 15, 1871; Obed, born December 13, 1825; Virgil, born February 21, 1827, died July 28, 1829; Jane S., born December 28, 1829, died January 10, 1854; Joseph, born April 24, 1831, died April 24, 1831; George W., born March 29, 1832; James B., born June 9, 1834, died April 24, 1837; Edward G., born July 23, 1836, died September 15, 1851. George W. is still living, residing in Media, and he married Miss Anna Calahan.

The father of our subject, Samuel Smith Green Eachus, was a wealthy farmer, owning a large tract of land in Thornbury township, but retired from an agricultural life in 1863 to Media, and there resided until his death. His children were as follows: Alfred E., born November 1, 1844, married Anna Millen, and lives at Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania; Mary E., born April 14, 1848, is unmarried, and she resides at Media; Edwin E., who is our subject. The children born to the parents of Mrs. Edwin E. Eachus were as follows: William, married Sallie Bennett, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania; Benjamin, married Anna Scollin; Harry married Emma Boyer; Edward Farrand, a half brother, married Margrette Beaty, and Mrs. Eachus, whose birth is already given.

During his boyhood days Mr. Eachus was extremely fond of hunting and was one of the best marksmen in his locality, but since attaining to manhood's estate, business cares have engrossed his time and attention to the exclusion of many other matters. He is one of the substantial men of his township and enjoys the respect and confidence of all who know him.

JOHN MARSHALL, a respected and influential citizen of Llanwellan, Delaware county, is the great-grandson of Benjamin Marshall, who landed in Pennsylvania in 1682, the year of the arrival of William Penn, from whom he received a grant of land. His son John married Elizabeth Evans, and, after her death, Sarah Bonsall. Charles, the son of John, married Phoebe Swayne, and the following children were born to them: George, Charles, who died young; Sarah, Humphries, Samuel, Thomas S., John, mentioned at length hereinafter; Elizabeth S., deceased, and Ann L.

John Marshall, son of Charles and Phoebe (Swayne) Marshall, was born March 10, 1828, in Darby township, and received his education at the old oak school house in his native place. He afterward settled on the farm with his father, remaining there until his marriage. During his stay in the township of Darby he was very active in local affairs, holding the offices of township auditor and township clerk, and for six years has served as a member of the school board.

Mr. Marshall married April 29, 1857, Martha M., daughter of Henry and Lydia (Price) Flood. The latter was the daughter of an English Friend, who came to this country and settled in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are the parents of the following children: 1. Emma E., who was born September 21, 1858, and married Frederic, son of Frank and Matilda (Freihart) Rupertus; they have one son, Ebert B. Rupertus, born in 1900. 2. Charles Henry, who was born in 1860, and married Margaret, daughter of Jacob and Margaret (Pabst) Kohler; they have three children: Harold, Lydia, and Kohler. 3. J. Humphries, who was born in 1863, and has served as one term as sheriff of Delaware county; he married Sophia, daughter of Carl and Caroline (Pabst) Mass, and they are the parents of the following children: Clarence, J. Humphries, Martha Caroline, Margaret Clara, Phoebe, Sophia, and Carl. 4. Isaac Hibberd, who was born in 1866, and married Anna, daughter of Cooper and Elizabeth Waples; their children are: Emma May, Edna and Miriam. 5. Lydia F., who died at three years of age. 6. U. S. Grant, who was born in 1871, and is living at home with his parents.

RICHARD HOLMES, deceased, who for many years was actively identified with the agricultural, political and social interests of Ridley township and throughout his long and useful career commanded the respect of all who had the honor of his acquaintance, was born in the township of Ridley, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1805.

He was the son of Richard Holmes, who emigrated to this country from the north of Ireland, where his ancestors had fled from Scotland during the persecutions of the Covenanters. Richard Holmes, the emigrant, took passage on a sailing vessel that was three months in crossing the Atlantic, and in the course of the voyage made the acquaintance of a fellow passenger, Margaret Holmes, from the south of Ireland, who afterwards became his wife. It is not thought that there was any blood relationship between the couple, but they were both of Scottish Covenanter stock, transplanted to Irish soil, and by a strange coincidence each had sisters, Mary, Martha and Eleanor. Margaret Holmes had a half-sister, Betty, and a half-brother, William, who died of yellow fever, leaving an estate in Tennessee. Richard Holmes was enlisted as a soldier of the Revolutionary war, though he was not called into active service, and he was enrolled with the militia and reported at Chester for duty for a long time after the declaration of peace. He was a stone-mason, and the Munckinapawtus bridge, on the Chester pike, below Norwood, was built by him. He met his death in a piece of woods near his home as he was returning one night on horseback, and it is believed that he was murdered. His daughter, Mary, then twelve years old, whose habit it was to meet her father for a ride to the house, saw him fall and a man on horseback ride rapidly away, though she saw no blow struck. He recognized his daughter, but died almost immediately after she reached him, speaking only her name. It was thought that the murder was a part of a plot to secure money, and through false swearing the plot was successfully carried out. The tree under which he fell was in Winona avenue, Norwood, and it was suggested that he might have struck a projecting limb. It is said that in a short time this tree was girdled and that it soon died. The shoot that sprang up from the root became a large tree, which was killed in the same way.

Richard Holmes

ELIZABETH M. HOLMES.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Richard Holmes were obtained in the public schools of Ridley township, and after completing his studies he located on a farm which was situated a short distance from Glenolden. Here he made his home for the remainder of his life, and by his energy and perseverance the farm became one of the best cultivated in that section of the state. Later the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad laid their tracks through the property, and named the station which they erected, Holmes, in his honor. In his political views he was a Republican, and being a man of much force of character and sterling worth, enjoyed the confidence and regard of both parties as was evidenced by the fact that he was elected to the office of supervisor of roads by the Democratic party, being the incumbent of that position for many years. Mr. Holmes took an active interest in all matters that tended toward the growth and improvement of Ridley township and the adjacent neighborhood.

In 1834 Mr. Holmes was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth M. Reynolds, who was descended from some of the early settlers of this country and was the daughter of Thomas and Phebe (Moore) Reynolds, of Allentown, New Jersey. Their children are: Sarah Rhile, wife of Thomas Johnson, and the following named children were born to them: Thomas D., Elizabeth Holmes, Harry Eugene, Dr. Frank, Clara Emily, Dr. Walter Scott, and Richard P. Johnson; Mary R., unmarried and now dead; Martha, wife of Bethel M. Custer (both now dead), a prominent farmer of Ridley township, and Margaret Holmes unmarried, who has always remained at home and taken much interest in the management of her father's estate.

JOHN H. DUFFEE, a leading citizen of Norwood, Pennsylvania, was born December 27, 1845, in Aston township, Delaware county, and is the son of Neal and Lydia Ann (Trites) Duffee. The former had four sisters, Susan, Hannah, Mary and Eveline, and the latter was the daughter of William and Lydia (Trainer) Trites. Neal Duffee was a well known teacher in the public schools of Ridley township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Duffee, in addition to their son John H., were as follows: William A., Mary Eliza, Georgina, all of whom are deceased; and George W., a well known farmer of Norwood, whose children, Lizzie, Frank N., Eva May, and Anna Lydia, were educated in the common schools of Ridley township.

When John H. Duffee was but eighteen months old his father purchased a farm in Ridley township, whither he removed his family, and it was there that the son received his education, finishing at Bucknell College. In 1864 Mr. Duffee enlisted in Company B, Two Hundred and Third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and was present at the battle of Fort Fisher, where he received a wound which well nigh resulted in scalping him. He was taken to the hospital, whence he was subsequently removed to the Up-land (Delaware County) Hospital, where he remained for some time. On being discharged he returned to his father's farm, on a portion of which he built himself a home. He has since erected in the township seventeen houses at an average cost of between five and nine thousand dollars each. Before the organization of the borough, Mr. Duffee had named his little village Duffwyn, the place being pleasingly situated on an elevation between the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and on the opposite side of the line which separated it from the town of Norwood. Since the organization of the borough of Norwood, Duffwyn is included under that designation. It is also known as "the four hundreds," in consequence of the fact that, whenever a lot was sold from a farm, it was stipulated by a specification in the lease that no house or factory should be erected on the ground at a cost of less than four thousand dollars.

Mr. Duffee married, in 1874, Elnora, daughter of Mr. Hodskins of Boston. A son who was born to Mr. and Mrs. Duffee in 1875 died a year later, and Mrs. Duffee passed away in February, 1876. In 1877 Mr. Duffee married Naomi M. Morris, daughter of George and Elizabeth Morris, of Ridley township, and their children are: John H. Jr., aged twenty-one, who is now attending a business college in Philadelphia; Harold N., aged eighteen, who is now at school; and Lottie U., aged twelve. Blanche Lydia died July 23, 1888, aged nine months, and Lauretta died July 12, 1900 aged nine months.

GEORGE J. JOHNSTON. This gentleman was born to Samuel J. and Catherine (Kane) Johnston on September 15, 1862, on a farm near Chester, Pennsylvania. His early life was passed on the farm in Springfield township, Delaware county, where his father is still farming, and his education was obtained at St. Charles school at Keltyville. As usual with farmer boys, he left the school room at a rather early age, and began farming with his father. About the time he arrived at maturity he discovered an extensive belt of stone on the farm, and he and his father at once began to develop it and open a quarry, in a short time receiving contracts from all the neighboring towns for the stone, which was of an excellent quality. His father dropped out of this branch of the business, and he has since carried it on alone, deriving a comfortable revenue from his sales.

When Mr. Johnston had gained a position of independence in business, he looked around for a companion and in 1892 was married to Miss Annie E. McCloskie, who was born June 10, 1862, and has an interesting family history of her own. Her paternal grandparents were Michael and Catherine (Kane) McCloskie, natives of Ireland, the former of whom died in 1841, and the latter in 1879; on the maternal side she is the granddaughter of Nathan and Mary (Barrett) Durney, of Ireland. Charles and Eleanor (Durney) McCloskie, the parents of Mrs. Johnston, were born in Derry, Ireland, crossed the Atlantic and located in Wilmington, Delaware, in 1826; in 1842 the former formed the company of McCloskie Brothers, contractors and builders, the firm consisting of himself, Francis and Daniel, who were builders, John and Peter A., who were bricklayers, and Joseph, who was a painter.

Eleanor, who was born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnston on March 14, 1894, is the oldest of their four children; Samuel J., deceased; Charles, born February 1, 1898; and Catherine came into their home on December 5, 1902. In connection with his business Mr. Johnston found time to perform the duties of the supervisor of Springfield township for two terms, which office was pressed upon him by his fellow citizens. He was also the Democratic candidate for sheriff in 1896 and made a good campaign in face of a strong opposition in a staunch Republican county. He has served as a councilman in the borough of Morton, and is now a justice of the peace in Morton. He is one of the staunch Democrats of the county and a member in good standing of the Knights of Columbus—certainly a model citizen and well worthy of the regard in which he is uniformly held by all.

EDWARD McFADDEN. There are few old residents of Pennsylvania not familiar with the name of the "Black Horse Tavern," one of the features and landmarks of Delaware county. This ancient hostelry has been a licensed public house continuously since 1739, or more than one hundred and sixty-three years, and has a history calculated to delight lovers of legends and stories of the "old times entombed." It would be curious to know the names of the eminent men who have procured entertainment at this remarkable establishment. What delightful dinners must have been served there in the far distant past; what gatherings there must have been before the old fashioned fireside and what "Tales of a Traveler" to charm the listening ear. It is safe to say that some of the greatest men of Pennsylvania, possessing names of historic interest, have found lodgment in the warm feather-beds of the "Black Horse Tavern." Politicians doubtless have often made it their headquarters, and over the cheering mugs of Mine Host concocted schemes of great moment to the state. But this is all mere idle speculation now, as the events connected with the old inn during the best part of two centuries have been lost forever for lack of a local historian to preserve the chronicles. But coming down to the living present, it is possible to tell something about the present owner of the noted old hostelry and that it is the main object of this writing.

It would probably not require a prophet or clairvoyant to hazard a guess that the McFadden family originated in Ireland, as the very name smacks of the flavor of the "old sod." Neil McFadden, the founder of the American branch, was born in Ireland during the latter part of the eighteenth century, married Ellen McIntyre in early life, and came to the United States about 1830. He settled in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he led a quiet but industrious life and reared his family to imitate his example. John, his eldest son, who was about one year old when his parents left the old country, married Susanna Haston, by whom he had five children and is now deceased. William, the third child, who was born after the settlement in Delaware county, has also passed away. Mary, the fourth child, who is now also dead, became the wife of James McGlynchey and had four children. James, the youngest of the family, is unmarried and resides at Clifton Heights.

Edward McFadden, third in the above list of children, was born at Shoemakerville, Pennsylvania, December 25, 1835, and has spent the larger portion of his time in Delaware county. After he grew up he spent fifteen years in business in Clifton Heights, but since March, 1895, up to the time of his death was the landlord of the famous Black Horse Tavern spoken of in the introductory remarks. Besides the hotel, of which he was sole owner, Mr. McFadden also owned a farm, consisting of fifty-five acres which is situated in Middletown township. He was successful in business and did especially well after he took charge of the popular house of entertainment. Guests who enjoyed the hospitality of this place were enthusiastic in praise of its accommodations and speak of Mr. McFadden as a model landlord. Besides possessing that rare talent of knowing how to run a hotel, his genial disposition, accommodating spirit and tact in welcoming as well as speeding the parting guest commended him to all callers as a typical Boniface.

About 1858 Mr. McFadden married Annie, daughter of Andrew and Mary Ryan, of Clifton Heights. Mrs. McFadden, who is living at the present time (1903), was the mother of thirteen children, of whom only four are living, and are named as follows: Annie, born August 6, 1860; Neil, born May 3, 1872; Charles Edward, born June 28, 1881; Charlotte, born August 7, 1882. The names of the deceased children are: Mary Ellen, Catherine, Jennie, Alice, Edward, Walter, Warren, Alice and Margaret. Annie McFadden, the eldest child, was married in 1879 to William J. Kelly, a son of Francis and Mary (McFadden) Kelly, and they live at Clifton Heights, where Mr. Kelly is engaged in the hotel business. Their living children are: Elsie, Eva, Blanche, Edward and Nellie. Mr. McFadden was a member of the Roman Catholic church and took little or no interest in politics, having had his hands full in looking after his hotel and seeing that the traveling public got satisfactory service. Mr. McFadden died on January 24, 1903.

DAVID IRVIN HENDERSON, a veteran farmer and respected citizen of Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in 1823, in the place where he now resides, and is a son of Matthew and Sarah (Irvin) Henderson. His early education was obtained in the schools of his native place, and he afterward finished his course of study at Reading, where he spent two years. He then returned to his father's farm, to the ownership of which he in time succeeded. He has passed his life in agricultural pursuits, and in the management of his estate, which consists of seventy-three acres.

Mr. Henderson married Amanda, daughter of Thomas and Charlotte (Byerley) Brown, and their children are: Mary B., who was born in Ridley township, where she received her education in the public schools; Sarah, who married Frank Bonsall, of Upper Darby township, son of Samuel Bonsall, of Darby and has children, Frank aged fourteen years, and Florence, aged eleven years; Horace, who married Martha, daughter of Thomas Scofield, of Philadelphia; and their children are: Walter, aged ten; Jennie, aged eight; Olive, aged six and Anna, aged three. Florence, who is the wife of William Reed of Essington, Pennsylvania, son of William Reed; Irvin, who lives at home on the farm, unmarried; Victor, also living on the farm; and Daisy, who married Archie Knott of Lynwood, Delaware county, a son of Archie Knott.

GEORGE SWAYNE, a prominent and enterprising agriculturist of Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of William Swayne, of Ockingham, Liberty of Wilts, Berkshire, England, who died in 1693, leaving two sons and one daughter—Francis, Judith and William. Francis Swayne married Elizabeth Milton, and their son, William Swayne, born in the Parish of Bienfield, England, January 30, 1689, sailed from Bristol when about eighteen years of age, and after a voyage of five weeks landed at Philadelphia, October 15, 1708. About a year and a half later his father and mother with their remaining children came to this country, landed at New Castle, on the Delaware, where they were met and welcomed by their son, William Swayne.

George Swayne was born in the township of Darby, Delaware county, June 23, 1814, the son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Noblet) Swayne, the former named being a son of George Swayne, who was considered a very wealthy farmer in his day, and the latter a daughter of John and Mary (Boon) Noblet, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. George Swayne enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the public schools of his locality, and after completing his studies he located on a farm at a place known as Folcroft, Darby township, where he has since remained, devoting his time and energy to agricultural pursuits. He was a just and honorable man in all his transactions in life and was respected and esteemed by all who knew him.

In 1845 Mr. Swayne married Miss Sarah Grover, a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Porter) Grover, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: 1. Elmira, born October 9, 1845; 2. Virginia, born August 6, 1847; 3. Mary Eliza, born December 10, 1852, wife of John Ruch, of Sharron Hill, and their children are: Jennie, wife of John Young, of Darby; J. Harry, and Mamie Ruch; 4. John, born August 15, 1854, married Rebecca Lincoln, a daughter of Jacob and Mary Lincoln, of Delaware county; their children are: Susie V. L. and Stanley Swayne; 5. George Grover, born September 20, 1858, died in childhood; 6. Elizabeth, born November 22, 1860, wife of John Kyle, of Haverford township; they were married April 26, 1893, and their children are: Wesley, who died in infancy, and Warren, who was born January 9, 1898.

Sarah (Grover) Swayne, the mother of this family, died April 1, 1903. She was a most worthy lady of the old school type, possessed of many excellencies of character, and was beloved and esteemed by all who knew her.

THOMAS W. PARKINSON, a well known and popular citizen of Norwood, Pennsylvania, was born August 1, 1871, in Philadelphia, and obtained his education in the Jackson School of that city. He also took a course of study at the Industrial Art School, situated at the corner of Broad and Pine streets, Philadelphia, and graduated from this institution as a professional textile designer.

For some years Mr. Parkinson followed this business in Philadelphia, and subsequently moved to Norwood, where he opened a grocery store. In this enterprise he was successful, and his father, who is now the proprietor of the store, carries on a very large business. Mr. Parkinson has since established another grocery store opposite the one presided over by his father, this later venture having also resulted favorably. In 1897 Mr. Parkinson was appointed postmaster of Norwood, a position which he now holds, and the duties of which he discharges in a manner alike creditable to himself and satisfactory to the government and to his neighbors.

Mr. Parkinson married, in 1901, Eva, daughter of Thomas J. and Mary (Stoopes) Clinger, of Delaware. They have a son, Ralph W., born April 7, 1903.

WILLIAM CALHOUN, a prominent citizen of Norwood, Pennsylvania, was born January 14, 1834, in Philadelphia, and received his education in his native city. For many years he followed successfully the business of a butcher, and enjoyed in a high degree the esteem of his fellow citizens, as was proved by the fact that he held the office of councilman for eight years, that of regulator of weights and measures for seven years, and that of fire commissioner for three years.

He removed to Norwood, June 2, 1877. In his new place of abode he bought a lot, built for himself a home, and entered into the real estate business. From 1877 to the present time he has built no fewer than thirty-two houses in the boroughs of Norwood and Moores. He has been a member of the Masonic order since 1860, and was one of the founders of the first lodge ever organized in Moores. He has travelled extensively, having visited all of the United States, Canada, and the principal cities of Europe.

Mr. Calhoun married, June 2, 1853, Elizabeth, daughter of David and Betsey Applegate, and by this marriage became the father of one child, Margaret Morrison, who died at the age of eleven months. Mrs. Calhoun died in 1863 of consumption. One year later Mr. Calhoun married Sophia, daughter of Joseph and Anna (Stinsman) Hoe. To Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun the following children have been born: Mary A., now living in Philadelphia; Sophia, who died at twenty months old; William, Jr., who established a plumbing business in Philadelphia, at 703 Walnut street; he married Clara McFarland, of Norwood, and three children have been born to them, only one of whom, Mary A., is living; his wife died in June, 1903; Joseph, who died in infancy; and Joseph Hoe, who married Agnes, daughter of John Dukes, of Norwood.

Through the agency of a Philadelphia newspaper, Mr. Calhoun adopted a child of seventeen months old, whose name was Louisa Steel, and who remained a member of his family until reaching the age of twenty-five, when she became the wife of Joseph Lewis. They had several children, two of whom were sons, Charles and Joseph, who, through the influence of Mr. Calhoun, were received as students in Girard College. Upon the death of Mr. Lewis, Mr. Calhoun secured for his widow a position as police matron of the first ward of the city of Philadelphia.

JOHN HIBBERD, a farmer well known in the counties of Delaware and Chester, is a descendant of old residents. Jacob and Sarah (Dutton) Hibberd, the latter a native of Aston township, were the parents of the following children: Jacob, Thomas, John, Samuel, mentioned hereinafter; Jesse, Hannah, Mary and Sarah and Susanna, twins.

Samuel Hibberd, son of Jacob and Sarah (Dutton) Hibberd, married Lydia, daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth (Davis) Reece, whose other children were named respectively: Davis, Thomas, Eli, Elizabeth, and Sydney. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hibberd are: 1. Jacob, who married Sarah Worrall, daughter of Richard and Mary Ann (Wilson) Worall, and has two children, Bertha and John. 2. John, mentioned at length hereinafter. 3. Jesse, who married Mary Ann Levis, and has one son, Samuel. 4. Mary; 5. Elizabeth. The two last named are living in Westchester, unmarried.

John Hibberd, son of Samuel and Lydia (Reece) Hibberd, was born June 17, 1841, in Middletown township, and was educated at his birthplace, and at Richards' Private School, Haddonfield, New Jersey, completing his course of study at a boarding school kept by Mr. Joseph Folke at Gwynedd, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, from which institution he graduated in 1861. He then returned to the homestead, where he led the life of a farmer until 1892, when he went to Chester county in order to superintend a farm of six hundred acres owned by the Pennsylvania Lime Company.

Mr. Hibberd married, May 3, 1876, Mary E. Hall, born July 3, 1843, died January 26, 1892, daughter of Samuel and Lydia Hall, of Village Green, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Hibberd are the parents of three children: Lydia Hall, who was born in May, 1878, and resides at home; Carrie Jackson, born in May, 1879, who also resides at home, and Devis Reece, who was born in October, 1880, married Maggie, daughter of Ezekiel Mann, of Coatesville, Chester county, and has one child, Lydia M.

SAMUEL T. CARR was born in Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, May 9, 1836, the son of Barney F. and Mary (Johnson) Carr, who were also the parents of Amos J. Carr, who was united in marriage to Rebecca Rudolph, and is now a prominent resident of Darby, Pennsylvania.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Samuel T. Carr were obtained in the common schools of Ridley township, and after completing his studies he decided to follow the vocation of farming. He was trained to that occupation in his early youth, and his entire business career has been devoted to the supervision and active work of the ancestral farm. His methods have been progressive and practical, and his well tilled fields yielded a golden harvest for the care and labor bestowed upon them. In all business transactions he is straightforward and honorable, and thus he has gained a comfortable competence.

October 3, 1864, Mr. Carr married Miss Catherine Ward, daughter of William G. and Catherine (Seary) Ward. Their children are: Emma, born in 1865, married Charles W. Jackson, of Washington, and their children are: Willis, died aged three and one-half months, and Adele Mae; Elizabeth, born in 1867, became the wife of George Grant Miller of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and has three children, Alma C., J. Raymond and G. Clifford; Catherine, born in 1870, died at the age of nine years; E. Celeste, born in 1872, who became of the wife of J. G. Schnerring, of Pottsville, Pennsylvania.

MARY FRANCES MOORHEAD, of Ridley township, Delaware county, is descended from families which have been for several generations resident in the county.

Alexander Moorhead, son of William and Margaret Moorhead, was born May 8, 1801, and married, in 1835, Rachel Noble, daughter of Christopher and Rachel (Worrall) Noble; the former of whom died April 27, 1846, and the latter March 9, 1838. The following children were born to Alexander Moorhead and his wife: Christopher Noble, born October 14, 1836, died September 28, 1901; Mary Frances, mentioned at length hereinafter; William, born April 15, 1842, died August 6, 1901; and Annie, born October 26, 1847. Mrs. Moorhead, the mother of these children, died November 1, 1866, and the father of the family passed away September 15, 1870.

Mary Frances Moorhead, daughter of Alexander and Rachel (Noble) Moorhead, was born May 12, 1840, in Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Her early education was obtained in the schools of her native place, and was completed at the West Chester Boarding School, where she was for a few years a pupil. Her entire life has been spent on the homestead, where she resides with her sister, Annie, who assists her in the care and management of all things pertaining to the large estate.

WILSON B. YOUNG, one of the leading business men of Rutledge, and one who enjoys the unlimited respect and confidence of his fellow-townsmen, was born January 27, 1860, at Philadelphia, where he lived until five years of age, when his father brought him to Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and there he attended public school, and later enjoyed the advantage of a course at Chester Military Academy, at Chester, from which he was graduated as civil engineer in 1880, although he has never used his knowledge of this profession. Until 1885 he remained with his father, but at that time a good opportunity offered, and he embarked in a grocery business in Philadelphia at Fifteenth and Pine streets. For five years he successfully carried on his business, but then disposed of his interests and removed to Rutledge, where he engaged in the same line and developed a fine trade. His stock is one of the largest in the city, and the services rendered are prompt and efficient.

In 1892 Mr. Young was married to Elizabeth R. Craig, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Lotta) Craig, and she was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 4, 1865. Julia Ralston, born January 3, 1896, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Young, was educated in the public schools of Rutledge, and she is fitting herself for Swarthmore College.

Wilson B. Young is a son of Richard and Wilhemina Young, the former being a wealthy retired business man of Morton. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Young are as follows: Wilson B.; Randolph S., who married Bertha Robinson, a resident of Lansdowne; Harry P., living at Atlantic City with his brother, Randolph, unmarried; Lewis, married and residing at Germantown, Pennsylvania; Stella, who married William H. Farrand, of Morton, Pennsylvania, for a long time engaged in the lumber business at Morton; Janette, who married Henry H. Bryan, a clergyman of the Episcopal church at Garden City, Long Island; Mary, who married William H. Smith, of Morton, who is engaged in business in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson B. Young are highly esteemed in Rutledge, where they have made many friends, and where Mr. Young is accounted one of the substantial men of the place.

MAXIMILLIAN F. LAROCHE. The name of LaRoche is of French origin, and the early ancestors of the family for a number of years were prominent in the social and civil affairs of Paris preceding the period of the insurrection. They were the founders of the town of La Rochelle, situated not far from Paris.

The Marquis De LaRoche, a prominent member of this family, came to America and founded a French colony on Sable Island, on the Virginia coast, in 1598. The Marquis did not, however, remain long with the settlement, being compelled to return to France owing to the condition of his health, and financial adversity which overtook his interests at home. His remaining years were passed in his native land.

Among his descendants were four brothers, two of whom had become followers of Martin Luther, and, in consequence, during the insurrection were ostracized and fled across the Rhine, settling in the Kingdom of Wurtemberg. One of these two brothers married a German peasant who was of the Protestant faith, and for this cause he was disowned by his father and disinherited from his share of the family estate. His independence and dignity did not forsake him, and he took up his abode on a large estate at Schloss-Staeten, where he was given the responsible position of court marshal and general manager of the castle and the estate of his titled employer. Notwithstanding his loss of family recognition and of property rights, he lived a happy and contented life with his German wife, and the pair reared an excellent family of fourteen children, to whom they transmitted the honored ancestral name of LaRoche.

Charles LaRoche, one of the sons of the family last named, was reared and educated in Germany, where he married Sophia Steg, and they became the parents of children named as follows: Maximillian F., the subject of this sketch; Caroline, who married Joseph Blachonski, and settled at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Bertha, who married Balthaser Stahle, and settled in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Frederick A., who married Julia Miller, of Philadelphia, and resides in New York city; Charles, who married and settled at St. Paul, Minnesota; and Julia, who married Jacob E. Eisele, of Riverton, New Jersey.

In 1862 Charles LaRoche decided to emigrate to the United States, and upon his arrival he settled in New York city, where he became engaged in the floricultural and horticultural business. About a year after his arrival, his wife, according to previous arrangements, followed her husband, bringing with her the family of four children, among whom was Maximillian F. LaRoche. The mother of this family, Sophia (Steg) LaRoche, died in July, 1892.

Maximillian LaRoche obtained the rudiments of his education in the schools of his native place, and he completed his studies in the schools of New York city, and there also he acquired his first business experience. In 1877 he located in Sharon Hill, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he resided for some time. He subsequently purchased a tract of land at Collingdale, where he now resides, and where, by his thrift and enterprise, he has contributed much toward the growth and development of the borough, having erected many residences and built up many attractive and comfortable homes. He also built a number of greenhouses provided with all the accessories and conveniences pertaining to a first-class establishment, and now conducts an extensive retail and wholesale business as a florist.

Having been one of the first to take up residence in Collingdale, Mr. LaRoche's interest was at once naturally enlisted in all proposed plans for the development of the borough, and he afforded valuable assistance in the work of organization, and in the carrying out the necessary measures. His earnest efforts earned for him the appreciative recognition of his fellow citizens, which resulted in his being elected as the first Burgess of the borough, which office he held for three terms. In 1900 he was appointed justice of the peace by the governor of the state, and in 1902 he was elected by the people to the same office for a term of five years. Politically Mr. LaRoche allies himself with the Republican party, and in religion he and his wife are communicants of the Lutheran church. Mr. LaRoche is a member of Ivanhoe Lodge No. 449, F. & A. M., of Philadelphia; St. Johns Royal Arch Chapter, No. 232, of Philadelphia; Chester Commandery, No. 66, K. T., of Chester, Pennsylvania; Philadelphia Consistory, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, of Philadelphia, and Lu Lu Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Mr. LaRoche was married June 1, 1882, to Miss Amelia A. J. Pabst, of Germantown, Philadelphia, a daughter of John and Christine (Yaeger) Pabst. Of this union have been born the following named children: Maximillian J., born November 19, 1886. Albert S., born July

M. P. LaRoche.

14, 1888. Arthur W., born September 14, 1890. Frederick A., born February 3, 1893. Irma C., born December 28, 1894. Charles H., born January 15, 1897, and William J., born September 3, 1900. The three eldest sons are engaged in the higher branches of study at the Darby high school.

The parents of Mrs. LaRoche, John and Christine (Yaeger) Pabst, were the parents of nine children: Charles, John, William, Adolph and Albert, all of whom are deceased; Caroline became the wife of Charles Moss; Margaret the wife of Jacob Kohler, of Philadelphia; Sophia, the wife of Otto Wand, of Philadelphia, and Amelia A. J., born October 6, 1856, now the wife of Maximilian F. LaRoche.

CAPT. FREEMAN J. GEISSINGER was born in Hellertown, Northampton county, Pennsylvania, in 1834, and obtained his education in his home neighborhood until he had mastered the elementary principles of learning, after which he entered the Fremont Seminary at Norristown, where he was graduated. On the completion of his school life he turned his attention to the business of burning lime, sawing wood and milling and in these departments of business activity he met with a creditable and gratifying degree of success. In 1862, following the outbreak of the Civil war, he went to the front with a company which he commanded as its captain until 1864. This company was organized in Bucks county, and every man of the company marched with him through Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina to the borders of Georgia, and returned with him, all in good health, not a man missing.

In 1856 Captain Geissinger was united in marriage to Sarah O. Booz, a daughter of William and Mary Booz of Norristown, Pennsylvania. In the family are the following children: Ada Virginia, who married Dr. Griffith, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, who is living retired in Philadelphia; Walter H., who was graduated on the completion of a course of architecture in a business college in Philadelphia and married a daughter of John Conn, of that city; Edwin J., who received a college education and is at present a successful mechanic living in New Jersey with his family; Harry G., M. D., who has completed a course in medicine and surgery and is now acting as surgeon on board the steamship "Zealand;" Mary Lulu, the wife of A. W. Harned, who is superintendent of the New Shortline Railroad from Chicago to New York city, in Ohio; George Eugene, who married Mary Seaman, of Wilmington, Delaware, and is engaged in architectural work in Philadelphia.

In his home Captain Geissinger has a very valuable collection of antique articles which are extremely interesting. These include a testament of German wood type, printed in 1527, with the Revelations of St. John Illustrated. This is a very rare piece of work for a book of that order. He also has a gun which was broken over the head of one of his ancestors one hundred and forty years ago, while the ancestor was wrestling with a burglar who was attempting to steal the money, amounting to $15,000, which had been hidden between the rafters of the kitchen and the bedroom floor. He also has a collection of old furniture, including clocks, tables and other articles indicative of the styles of many years ago.

18 x

MRS. ELIZABETH LOGAN was born in Springfield township, Delaware county, in 1823, and is a daughter of Moses and Judith (Flounders) Wells. She is also a sister of Moses J. Wells, who is represented on another page of this work. Her paternal grandparents were Moses and Martha (Bonsall) Wells, and the latter was a daughter of Joseph Bonsall, who in turn was a son of Richard Bonsall, who settled in Pennsylvania at an early day, coming to this country from Derby, England. The place Darby, in Pennsylvania, took its name from the town in which the ancestors of Mrs. Logan once lived.

Mrs. Logan obtained her education in the Springfield Central school until twelve years of age, when she became a student in Darby, Delaware county. She was born upon the old homestead in Springfield township now occupied by John Shillingford. There she remained during her girlhood days, but in 1845 she gave her hand in marriage to Jabez Logan. Their children are James, who was born in 1848, and married Mary Jane Mitchell, of Philadelphia; George, who was born in 1849, and died the same year; and Sarah W., who was born in 1851, and became the wife of William H. Black, who died in 1899.

JOSEPH ELLWOOD POND, for over half a century a resident of Delaware county, and since 1865 actively engaged in business in Philadelphia, was born in East Goshen, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 25, 1848, the son of Thomas and Hannah R. Pond. Thomas Pond was born March 6, 1812, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and died July 4, 1890. In his religious views he believed in the doctrines of the Methodist church, and politically he was formerly a Whig, but upon the formation of the Republican party joined their ranks. His wife, Hannah R. Pond, was born January 19, 1815, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and died April 7, 1884. She was a member of the Methodist church.

Joseph E. Pond received his education in the common schools of the county of Delaware, including the first Media Grammar School, when Joseph Ad. Thomson was the teacher, and a collegiate course in Philadelphia. He graduated in penmanship under the special instruction of Boston's accomplished penman, Prof. A. R. Dunton, a member of the firm of Payson, Dunton & Scribner. Mr. Pond began his business career in the capacity of accountant, in Philadelphia, in 1865, first being engaged in the Fairmount Park Commissioners' office, then with Harrison Bros. & Co., and for the past twenty-five years with a large wholesale marble company.

In addition to the duties of this office, Mr. Pond serves as a member of the board of directors of the Morton Building and Loan Association, and is an occasional contributor, to county papers, of articles on local history, his long residence in Springfield township, Delaware county making him an authority on that subject. In his political affiliations he is a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and served, for two terms, as auditor of Springfield township. In religious matters he is non-sectarian, attending the services of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches. In social and business circles he is highly esteemed for that sterling worth which everywhere commands respect, and his public and private life are alike above reproach.

EDWIN H. BEATTY. The Beatty family, prominent in the industrial and political affairs of the town of Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is of Scotch-Irish origin, claiming as their pioneer ancestor Thomas Beatty, a native of county Tyrone, Ireland, who came to this country in early life and settled in Delaware county.

William Beatty, grandfather of Edwin H. Beatty, was a son of Thomas Beatty, the immigrant ancestor, and his birth occurred in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He began his business career as a farmer, but later discovered the process of manufacturing and tempering edge tools, his method of tempering being the only one in use at that time in the country. In partnership with his father, Thomas Beatty, Mr. Beatty rented a tilt-mill from Edward Lewis, this being situated in Middletown township, and here they successfully manufactured edge tools until 1828, when they removed their plant to Springfield, on Crum Creek. William Beatty served with distinction and bravery during the war of 1812, was an active and public-spirited citizen, and a consistent member of the Presbyterian church of Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His death occurred in the year 1842.

William P. Beatty, father of Edwin H. Beatty, was born on the old homestead in Springfield township in 1828 and after obtaining a common school education he succeeded his father in the business of manufacturing edge tools, the plant being situated on the borders of Crum Creek. In 1843 the mill was washed away by the flood which occurred in the month of August, but it was speedily rebuilt. By hard labor, careful management, and strict attention to business, his patronage steadily increased and it soon became one of the leading industries in the township. Politically Mr. Beatty was an adherent of the principles advocated by Jackson, and was elected by the Democrats of the township to serve as school director for one term. In 1852 Mr. Beatty married Martha Hannum, a daughter of Edwin Hannum, a resident of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of that section. Four children were born to them, namely Ella M., John F., William P., and Edwin H. Beatty. The death of Mr. Beatty occurred in February, 1878, in the fiftieth year of his age.

Edwin H. Beatty, youngest son of William P. and Martha Beatty, was born in Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, December 23, 1863. His education was obtained at the Springfield Western School and at a private school in the town of Media, Pennsylvania. At an early age he entered the employ of his brother, J. Franklin Beatty, who was engaged in the coal and feed business at Morton, Delaware county, and he has continued at this occupation up to the present time (1903), making his home with his sister, Ella M. Beatty, in the town of Morton. He is a staunch Democrat, being recognized as one of the active and influential supporters of that party, and he has served as justice of the peace of the borough of Morton for several years. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias. As a man Mr. Beatty stands high in the estimation of his neighbors, and as a citizen is full of public spirit and ever anxious to advance the general welfare of his town and county.

WALTER BIDDLE LOWRY. One of the active workers in the cause of Christianity, Walter B. Lowry has devoted many years of his life in spreading the gospel among men. His influence is ever found on the side of progress, of liberty and of right, and the effect of his labors has been far reaching. He is now an honored resident of Morton, where he is the loved rector of the Episcopal church. A native son of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, his birth occurred on the 7th of November, 1868, and his father, George Lowry, was born in Ireland. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Frances Wallace, was also a native of the Emerald Isle, and this worthy couple became the parents of eleven children. After coming to the United States, George Lowry engaged in contracting and building in Philadelphia, and his death occurred in that city in 1875, while his wife survived until 1883, when she joined him in the spirit world. The paternal grandparents of our subject were natives of Scotland.

Walter B. Lowry received his elementary education in the Episcopal Academy of Philadelphia, and later became a student in the University of Pennsylvania, graduating in the last named institution with the class of 1887. During the following three years he was a student in the General Seminary in New York, being a graduate of the latter institution in 1890, and on June 1, of the same year he was ordained in Calvary church of New York city by Bishop Potter. Returning thence to Philadelphia, he accepted a junior assistantship in St. Peter's church, at Third and Pine streets, and from there went to Buffalo as assistant in Trinity church, where he spent the following two years. In 1891, in Buffalo, he was ordained to the priesthood, and from that time until 1900 he served as rector of Emmanuel church at Corry, Pennsylvania. Going thence to the Calvary Monumental church at Philadelphia, he there remained as the loved rector until 1902, and on the 1st of January of that year he accepted a charge in the Episcopal church at Morton. He is thoroughly earnest and sincere in all his thoughts, words and deeds, and his noble, manly life has won for him the love and respect of his friends and associates.

In his fraternal relations Mr. Lowry is a member of Lodge No. 444, F. & A. M., of Pennsylvania, and also of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. During the Spanish-American war he went to Porto Rico as chaplain and captain in the Sixteenth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and remained in service until the close of the war, when he was mustered out of volunteer service. He is now a member of the Naval and Military Order of the Spanish-American War, an order that was organized by President Roosevelt and only includes officers that served in the late war. He is also a member of the Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States, Pennsylvania Commandery. Socially he is a member of the Delta Psi. As a minister his efforts have been far-reaching and effective, and at all times he is active in promoting the general good along many lines of progress.

January 3, 1894, Mr. Lowry was united in marriage to Helen L., a daughter of James A. and Mary D. (Cowan) Moore, the former a native of Brantford, and the latter of Princeton, Canada. Mrs. Lowry received her education in St. Margaret's school, a Protestant Episcopal institution of Buffalo, New York, where she graduated. By her marriage she has become the mother of one son, Walter Barclay Lowry, who was born December 11, 1895.

ELLA MARIA BEATTY. Among the prominent residents of Morton, Pennsylvania, is the lady whose name heads this biography, who was born November 28, 1854, in Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. She is a daughter of William P. and Martha Ann (Hannum) Beatty, the former of whom was born in 1828, and the latter on December 29, 1831. William P. is a son of William and Deborah Beatty, and his wife is a daughter of Edwin and Maria Hannum. Four children were born to these parents, J. Frank, Edwin H., William Penrose, who was born August 6, 1861, and who married Helen Matthews; and Miss Ella Maria.

After completing a public school course, Miss Beatty attended Swarthmore College for two years. A highly educated lady, she takes a deep interest in educational matters, and has a discriminating taste for literature. For twenty-five years she remained on the homestead farm with her father, at the edge tool works in Springfield township. This factory was built by the early settlers of Beatty's, and at the time of its erection was the only one in which was understood the process of tempering of cast steel for tools.

Some years ago Miss Beatty built a pleasant house in Morton, where she makes her home with her brother Edwin H., surrounded with the comforts of life and enjoying the companionship of her many acquaintances, to whom she has proven herself a kind neighbor and tried friend.

EDWARD W. SMITH. Young in years, Mr. Edward W. Smith, of Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a veteran in the field of journalism, and is also numbered among the leaders in all public movements which result in permanent advantage to a community and are prime factors in its development.

He was born in Delaware City, Delaware, March 11, 1854. His education may be said to have been gained in one of the best of practical schools, the printing office. He was only fifteen years of age when he removed to Norristown, Pennsylvania, where he entered the employ of Ashenfelter & McClellan, book and job printers, as an apprentice. He had previously obtained a rudimentary knowledge of language and the common branches, but his principal source of information were the journals and books which he read in the intervals of his work in the printing office, after the manner of many famous newspaper men in years before him, representatives of a class which in this day has practically disappeared. He finished a five years apprenticeship in the office to which he first came, and left it a master workman, capable of performing all description of work pertaining to his craft. For a short time afterwards he worked in the offices of the Republican and the Advocate, in Chester, and then went to Philadelphia, where he remained for several years, constantly employed in large job houses or on the morning newspapers.

In 1880 Mr. John H. Irwin, the wealthy inventor and manufacturer, who had large interests at Morton, was casting about for a medium to add prestige to the village, and determined upon the establishment of a newspaper. He learned of Mr. Smith, and having satisfied himself of his ability and integrity, sought him out and persuaded him to essay the undertaking he had at heart. Mr. Smith consented, and Mr. Irwin provided means for the purchase of a small printing outfit from which was produced, on June 17, 1880, the first issue of the Morton Chronicle. For two years the young publisher prosecuted his work under considerable disadvantage. The office building was a one story shell, ten by twelve feet, which had been used as a coal office. Mr. Smith performed nearly all the type-setting and press work, edited his paper, was newsgatherer for it, as well as solicitor and collector. But his perseverance was unflagging, and he gradually drew patronage and increased his facilities until, in October, 1882, little more than two years after he entered upon his venture, his office and equipment occupied four rooms in a new building. In all the years since, the business has shown a healthy and steady increase, and the Morton Chronicle is known among newspaper men the state over as a model local newspaper, while at home its merits are warmly appreciated as an exponent and advocate of all that is to the advantage of a community.

Mr. Smith has not confined his effort in behalf of his town to the exhortatory tasks, but he has borne a full share in forwarding all worthy projects, various of them being of his own suggestion. He aided in founding the Morton Public Library Association, and he has been its president for several years. He was also one of the organizers of the Morton Building and Loan Association, and he has long been a member of its directorate. In brief, he is known as an energetic, conscientious public-spirited citizen, whose first thought and whose continual effort is for the betterment of the material and moral condition of the town in which his lot has been cast. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party. He is treasurer of the borough, and a member of the school board. For eighteen years past he has been engaged in a real estate business, in addition to conducting his newspaper.

CHARLES ANDERSON WARNER, of Ardmore, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, is a well known representative of the ancient family which traces its descent from Captain William Warner, who was baptized July 8, 1627, in the parish of Blockley, Worcestershire, England. He was the son of John Warner, of Draycot, and, according to tradition, was one of those who served in the parliamentary army and were forced to leave England soon after the death of the Lord Protector. He filled various positions of honor and responsibility in the Province of Pennsylvania, of which he became a resident many years before the arrival of the proprietor from whom it derives its name. He purchased large tracts of land from the Indians, and gave to his large plantation on the west bank of the Schuylkill river, the name of Blockley, after the parish in England in which he had been born. The name of his wife, whom he probably married in England, was Anne, and they had a family of several sons and daughters. Captain William Warner died on his plantation in Lower Merion township in October, 1706, his will being proved in Philadelphia on the 18th of the same month. By its provisions the estate passed to his eldest son, who was, in turn, to leave it to his eldest son.

Isaac Warner, eldest son of Captain William and Anne Warner, married, November 30, 1692, Ann Craven, and died in April 1727, in which year and month his will was proved in Philadelphia. He was succeeded in the possession of the estate by his eldest son, William, known in history as "Baron" Warner. He was one of the founders in 1732 of the "State on Schuylkill" Fishing Company, the old hall of the company being erected upon his property. He died in September, 1766, as is shown by the fact that his will was then proved in Philadelphia. His eldest son, Isaac, served during the Revolutionary war, first as lieutenant-colonel, and afterward as colonel of the Seventh Battalion, Philadelphia county militia. He married in 1757, Lydia Coulton, and died in November, 1794, leaving a large number of descendants.

Isaac Warner, son of Anthony and Rachel (Evans) Warner, was born July 24, 1780, and engaged in business as a carpenter and builder, being well known throughout the counties of Montgomery and Delaware. During the war of 1812 he enlisted under Captain Matthews, and served until the restoration of peace. He then settled in Lower Merion, Montgomery county, ISAAC WARNER.

JANE WARNER.

at a place known as Haverford, where he lived for the remainder of his life. He married December 1, 1808, Jane Latch, born April 10, 1790, daughter of Jacob and Jane (Rose) Latch, and their children were: Hammil, born September 10, 1809, married Mary Roland, who died January 25, 1848, and himself deceased January 19, 1873; Lewis, born January 20, 1812, married Margaretta Underwood, and died April 19, 1872, his widow surviving until March 14, 1891; Jacob, born November 26, 1814, died August 23, 1817; Eliza Ann, born October 7, 1817; died September 6, 1875; Levi Evans, born October 27, 1820, and died in May, 1880; Isaac and Jacob L., twins, born December 9, 1823, the latter of whom married Emily Shur, who died August 23, 1875; and Isaac married Mary Roland; Rebecca, born March 27, 1826; Penrose Evans, born December 11, 1828; Charles Anderson, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Gardiner L., born February 1, 1835. Isaac Warner, the father of this family, died January 3, 1864, and his wife passed away about 1882, at the advanced age of ninety-three.

Charles Anderson Warner, son of Isaac and Jane (Latch) Warner, was born March 10, 1832, in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, and received his education at Winwood, near Philadelphia. He took a private course in engineering architecture, and was graduated about 1849. He at once engaged in business for himself and has done much building in different parts of the country. About 1862 he remodeled a fine mansion in Ardmore, and has since made it his home.

Mr. Warner married Margaret, daughter of Norris and Sarah (Ott) Hansell, and they were the parents of the following children: Emily S., born June 16, 1867; Charles Arthur, born March 3, 1870; Robley A., born November 1, 1873; and Albert and Oscar, twins, born April 1, 1879, who died in infancy. Mrs. Warner died April 1, 1879, and some time after Mr. Warner married his sister-in-law, Anna C. Hansell. Of Mr. Warner's children it may be remarked that his daughter, Emily S., possesses much artistic ability. She was educated at the Hagerstown Female Seminary, from which she graduated about 1889, and in 1890 went abroad in order to pursue the study of art, in which her attainments are of a high order, as the specimens of her work by which her home is adorned bear witness. Charles Arthur, the elder son of Mr. Warner, has inherited the mechanical genius of his father, and has opened a wide field for his efforts in the building business. Robley A., the younger son, has adopted the profession of civil engineering, in which he holds a high position.

While Mr. Warner's mother attained a high degree of longevity, it is shown, by the family records, that length of life was an inherited characteristic of the race, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Warner having died in 1803, at the age of eighty-seven, his wife Jane (Rose) Latch, passing away aged ninety-six years.

ISAAC W. LEAMEY, a highly respected citizen of Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a native of the state, and was born at Reeceville, now Berwyn, in Chester county, December 31, 1844. His parents were Stephen M. and Elizabeth (Pawling) Leamey. The father, who was a son of John Leamey, was born in 1801, in the same village which was the birthplace of his son. Stephen M. Leamey was a man of industry and enterprise, became owner of a considerable farm and other realty. At his death his surviving children received substantial legacies from his estate. His children were: John W., who married Amanda Reeves, and resided in Philadelphia; both are deceased, the husband dying at the age of sixty-three years; Nathan P., who married Sarah Waters, and who is living at Berwyn, at the age of sixty-one years; Morgan, who died aged six years; Mary, who died unmarried, at the age of fifty-two years; Hannah Pawling, who married John Potter, bore him a son William, now aged twenty-six years, and died in her fiftieth year; Anna, who died at the age of fifteen years; and Isaac W. Leamey.

Isaac W. Leamey received his education in the Glassley and Lepord schools in his native county. On leaving school he engaged with his father in conducting the home farm. During the latter part of the Civil war period he enlisted in Company G, Twenty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Militia, and served in the defense of the state against rebel invasion for about two months, when his command was honorably mustered out of service. He then returned and settled in Springfield township, and built the pleasant farm home which he now occupies, and where he has since passed his life pleasantly and usefully, esteemed throughout the community for his excellent qualities. He is a member of the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, and of the Springfield Free Fountain Society.

Mr. Leamey was married, December 13, 1871, to Miss Sallie T. Myers, a daughter of John and Margaret (Thompson) Myers. She was one of a family of seven children, those beside herself being as follows: George, who married Mary Shroder, of Willistown, and whose children are Charles and Edith; Lewis, who is living in Dakota, is married, and has a son Edgar; John, who married Kattie Chettick, and whose children are Irwin and May; Hunter, who married Mary Bancroft, and whose children are George and Charles; Margaret, who married Frank P. Carr, of Springfield township, and who is mentioned more fully on another page; and Lydia, who died at the age of eighteen years.

The children of Isaac W. and Sallie (Myers) Leamey were as follows: W. Walter Leamey, who is further mentioned elsewhere; John P., who was born at Hestonville, Philadelphia county, August 2, 1882, and who is a graduate of the Philadelphia Business College; and Ada F., who was born December 6, 1885, in Springfield township, and who was educated in the schools there and at Media.

W. WALTER LEAMEY, an enterprising business man and public-spirited citizen of Morton, in Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is the eldest child of Isaac W. and Sallie (Myers) Leamey, whose family history appears in the sketch of the father, at another place in this volume.

He was born December 12, 1872, at Berwyn, in Chester county. He began his education in the schools at Hestonville, Philadelphia county, and pursued advanced studies in the central school in Springfield township, Delaware county, to which his parents had removed. Soon after leaving school he established a milk route through Springfield township, and succeeded in building up so profitable a business that he disposed of it to good advantage. The pursuit was congenial, however, and he soon afterward established a new route covering a larger territory, and he is now giving it his attention, constantly adding to the number of his customers and friends. In all his dealings with others, whether in business or in social relations, he commands the respect and confidence of all.

Mr. Leamey is an esteemed member of the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, the Knights of Pythias and the Knights of Malta. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, and he is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of that organization.

GEORGE YERKES EDWARDS, a well known farmer and honored citizen of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, has throughout nearly his active business career been prominently identified with the agricultural interests of this section, and for a number of years has resided on his present farm. His birth occurred in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, March 27, 1839, his parents being Alfred and Mary (Hall) Edwards, the former of whom was born in 1811, while the latter, who was a daughter of Catherine Hall, was born in 1812.

George Y. Edwards received his education at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, and after putting aside his text books to engage in the active battle of life for himself, he chose the vocation of farming, which with the exception of a few years when he was engaged in the milling business has continued to be his life work. His homestead which consists of sixty-four acres of rich and productive land is located near Morton, Delaware county, and there he devotes his attention to general farming. He commands the respect of his fellow men by his sterling worth, and Pennsylvania numbers him among her honored sons.

Mr. Edwards married Maggie A. Crothers, who was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April 21, 1840, a daughter of Margaret Ann Crothers. They are the parents of the following named children: Alfred, born in Philadelphia, December 17, 1861; Augustus, born in Ridley, Delaware county, February 21, 1865; Ella, born in Hog Island, Tinicum township, Delaware county, August 21, 1868; Mary J., born in Philadelphia, September 21, 1872; Nellie G., born in Darby, Delaware county, March 1, 1874; Samuel C., born in Darby, Delaware county, September 16, 1876; Clara D., born in Philadelphia, May 16, 1879; John H., born in Philadelphia, December 20, 1881; and Harry C., born in Philadelphia, June 21, 1884.

FRANKLIN PARSONS CARR was born in Delaware county, in the year 1855, and now resides in Springfield township, near Morton. He is connected with building interests, and is also the owner of one of the beautiful residences of this portion of the state. He is a son of William and Mary Carr, and in his youth he attended a number of schools in Delaware county, thus acquiring a good education. After arriving at years of maturity, he was married, on the 23d of October, 1884, to Miss Margaret Ella Myers, a daughter of John and Margaret Myers, of Easttown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are Bessie, who is seventeen years of age; Edith, who is fourteen years of age; Elsie, a maiden of eleven summers; and Frank, who is a little lad of three years.

Mr. Carr is living in his own home, which stands upon a part of the old family homestead in Springfield township, which has long been in possession of the Carrs. He did much of the carpenter work upon the old home. His early youth was devoted to agricultural pursuits, but later he entered upon an apprenticeship to the carpenter's trade, and has since been identified with the building interests of Delaware county, covering a period of twenty-three years. His home is upon a tract of land in the midst of which stands a beautiful residence surrounded by a well kept lawn. Everything about the home is neat and attractive in appearance, and it is one of the pleasing features of the landscape. Mr. Carr is a man of fine physique, strong and robust. His many excellent traits of character have gained for him warm friends throughout this portion of the county, and he is widely known. In matters of citizenship he is progressive and enterprising, and in the line of his business his efforts have proven of marked value in the community. Mr. Carr has back of him an ancestry honorable and distinguished, and one of close connection with the history of eastern Pennsylvania. He now has in his possession a number of valuable heirlooms, including a watch chain that was woven by William Penn, in Delaware county, when the founder of the state was in the prime of life. His brother, William Henry Carr, is the possessor of the watch to which this chain was once attached, and his mother has a felt hat that was worn by William Penn.

WILLIAM HENRY CARR, at present a resident of Springfield township, near the village of Morton, has spent his whole life in this vicinity, which is the locality of his birth, his rearing and his education. His father, William Carr, was born in 1810, and married Mary Ann Parsons, whose birth occurred in 1816, and while she is still living her husband passed away some years ago. Their son, William Henry Carr, was born on his father's homestead in Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania in 1846. He began attending the Springfield Central public school in 1852, and finished his education in 1864, after which he engaged in farming for awhile and then became apprenticed to the carpenter's trade. After mastering the details of this handicraft he did contract work as a carpenter, and in this pursuit accumulated sufficient capital to purchase the small house in which he resides near Morton. Mr. Carr has devoted considerable time to the social and fraternal life of his community and borne a full share in all the obligations of good citizenship. For seventeen years he has served as superintendent of the Springfield Sunday-school, and is secretary and director of the Public Library Association at Morton. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A. Lodge and of the J. O. U. R. A. M.

Mr. Carr married Mary Ann, daughter of Richard and Julia Frank, of West Philadelphia, by whom he has had four children: Bessie B., born in 1874, now deceased; Lillian May, born in 1876; Emma Matilda, born in 1878; and Clara S., born in 1880.

MRS. SARAH M. ROGERS, widow of the late John S. Rogers, one of the highly esteemed residents of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born on November 10, 1842, in Philadelphia, and her husband was born on March 26, 1840. The early life of John Rogers was spent upon his father's farm, where he acquired the habits of industry and economy which made his after efforts so successful. For a number of years prior to his death he conducted a flourishing milk business, his route being in Philadelphia, where he lived until his removal to the farm. Earlier in life he was prison inspector for a number of years, and both in public and private life he discharged every duty assigned him with characteristic faithfulness and ability. Fraternally Mr. Rogers was a member of the Masonic order in which he took an active part and he was a man who made many friends. In his death, which occurred November 21, 1900, the community lost one of its best citizens, and his memory is tenderly cherished by many outside his home circle.

To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Rogers the following children were born, viz: Samuel B., born October 10, 1865, died July 6, 1866; John Thomas, born November 27, 1866; Anna Laura, born November 17, 1868, died May 18, 1888; Guilma, born December 18, 1874, who resides with her mother; she is a charming young lady, highly accomplished, and was educated at the Friends' select school at Media, Pennsylvania; Lida Florence, born March 6, 1877, was educated at Wilson college, Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, and she married Francis, a son of George B. Lownes. The other children were educated at private schools, and given many advantages, and all were born in West Philadelphia.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Rogers retired from her farm to Morton, where she has since resided. She is a lady whose kind and gentle disposition has won for her many friends, her life being spent in carrying out her charitable ideas, many of which are never known to the public, and in making her home one of the most pleasant in Morton.

JOHN T. ROGERS. Among those who have achieved unusual success in the commercial circles of Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of John T. Rogers, a highly respected and progressive citizen of that town, who is extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits, making a specialty of dairying.

John T. Rogers was born in West Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 27, 1866, the son of John S. and Sarah M. Rogers, who are descendants of an old and honorable ancestry. He obtained a practical education in the public schools of the neighborhood, and after the death of his father, which occurred November 21, 1901, he took up his residence on his present farm, which consists of 165 acres, and since then has devoted his time and attention to farming interests. He has met with remarkable success in this undertaking, becoming widely known for the superiority of his dairy products, which are in great demand in the city of Philadelphia.

On October 23, 1890, Mr. Rogers was united in marriage to Miss Fanny Allyn, a member of the distinguished Allyn family of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. They are the parents of one child, Allyn Rogers, born May 1, 1892.

MRS. ELIZABETH POWELL is a representative of one of the old families of Pennsylvania, her home being at Marple. She was born in 1817, in Delaware county, a daughter of Charles and Mary H. Garrett. After arriving at years of maturity she gave her hand in marriage to George S. Powell, who was born in 1809, in Delaware county. Carrying on agricultural pursuits many years, he became a very wealthy farmer, possessing extensive interests at the time of his death, which was caused by a rupture of a blood vessel. Thus he died suddenly, in 1871. He left two sons, Charles and Elwood G. Another child, William, died in infancy.

Mrs. Powell resides with her eldest son, Charles, and is now in her eighty-sixth year, but is a very active lady for one of her age, retaining her mental and physical faculties unimpaired. She is a devoted member and zealous adherent of the Society of Friends, to which her husband also belonged. Her son Charles was united in marriage to Emma J. Worrall, a daughter of John and Sarah P. (Levis) Worrall, in whose family were fifteen children. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Charles Powell have been born twelve children: Frank W., who married Sydney Burke; Preston W., who wedded Mattie Taggart; Joseph M., who married Nelly Arundt; George; Elizabeth, who is the wife of William Bowman; Walter C., who married Mabel Worrell; William; Jennie W.; Carrie L., the wife of Charles Katz; Lucy M.; Mary F.; and Charles H. Powell.

ELWOOD G. POWELL, an honorable and highly esteemed representative of the agricultural interests of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born on the old homestead in 1850, the son of George S. and Elizabeth H. (Garrett) Powell.

Elwood G. Powell acquired his early education in the common schools of the neighborhood, and later was a student at the Millersville State Normal School for two terms. Being reared upon a farm, his time was occupied with the duties incident to such a life, and at a very early age he manifested that spirit of progressiveness and enterprise that has characterized his later years. He is now the owner of a farm which consists of seventy acres, and here he puts to a practical use the knowledge gained in his boyhood.

On January 8, 1873, Mr. Powell was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Porter, daughter of Edwin Davis and Mary (Hays) Porter. Their children are: George Howard, aged twenty-one years, and Mary Powell, born in 1875. Both children enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the public and private schools of Delaware county. Mrs. Powell's ancestors were highly cultured people, and were among the first settlers of Delaware county. Her mother, Mary Porter, was a daughter of John and Catherine Hays, the former named being one of the first three teachers who secured positions in Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM SITER, deceased. The first ancestor of the Siter family of whom there is any authentic information was Adam Siter, who was of Welsh descent, and family tradition says he, for some time, resided in what is now Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

He married, and among his children was a son, William, who married Mary Taylor, and by their union were born the following children: 1. David; 2. John; 3-4. William and Adam, who were twins; 5. Anna, who became the wife of Enoch Davis; and 6. Elizabeth, who married John Yocum. David, the eldest child of this family, married, and for some time kept store at the old Eagle house on the Lancaster turnpike. John married and settled in Radnor township, near the village of Ithan, where he followed farming. Adam and William, the twin brothers (born December 8, 1798), received, under their father's will, a tract of land containing 192 acres where South Wayne now stands, and here they conducted farming. When Adam married, he sold his interest to his brother, William, who continued the cultivation of the farm and the old Siter saw and grist mill, which stood upon the property, and he was so occupied until death, which occurred July 24, 1857.

Adam Siter married Margaret Brooke, and by his marriage had two sons, Reese and Brooke Siter, neither of whom married.

The other twin brother, William Siter, married Emily Worthington, born July 10, 1800, who was a daughter of Eber Worthington, of West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania. To this marriage were born the following children: 1. Harriet Sarah, who died in childhood; 2. Wilmer, who married Annie Bradley; 3. Lucy, who married John West; 4. John, who married Sarah Garrett; 5. Mary, who married John Reed; 6. Eber, who married Caroline

Mr. Wm. Siter

EMILY WORTHINGTON SITER.

Crox; 7. William, whose name introduces this review; 8. Emily, who became the wife of the Rev. George Holman; 9. Malinda, who married John Boyd. Emily (Worthington) Siter, the mother of these children, died April 7, 1878. She was born July 10, 1800. She was a devout and earnest Christian woman, while her husband, who was a very energetic and worthy man in all the affairs of life, did not attend any church, and gave little heed to the observances of the Sabbath day, continuing without interruption his daily routine of toil and business. This indifference to the Sabbath day on the part of the husband gave his good wife no little worry or concern, and she resolved that she should rescue him from his ways of error. Upon one occasion she appealed in prayer to the Almighty Lord to shield and save her erring husband. Hearing her supplication, the strong man of iron nerve could no longer resist, and at once went to the side of his wife and promised to accompany her and the children to church that same Sunday morning, and from that day until the time of his death he was a regular attendant at religious services, and was ever after known as a devout and consistent Christian man. He had been, previous to his conversion to the Christian faith, for a number of years a member of the Musical Fund Hall, an organization for social amusement. His interest in Christianity and the religious welfare of the neighborhood had now become so earnest that he purchased the interests of the Music Fund Hall and with others organized the Radnor Hall Baptist church, which organization later became the first Baptist church of Wayne, and here himself and family were regular attendants during the remaining years of their lives. William Siter died July 24, 1857, and his wife and their dead descendants are all buried in the cemetery of the First Baptist church at Wayne, which William Siter, upon his conversion to the church, helped to organize and establish.

William Siter, son of William and Emily (Worthington) Siter, was born March 16, 1838. He was married October 31, 1878, to Sarah Martin, daughter of Richard and Hannah (Moore) Martin. Both her parents were natives of England. The children of their marriage were: 1. Annie M., born August 9, 1879, died September 19, 1879; 2. George Martin, born February 5, 1887; 3. Mary Emily Worthington, born April 15, 1890. The father of the family died December 6, 1902, esteemed by all who knew him.

JACOB BOON, M. D., deceased, for many years a well known and eminent general practitioner of Darby township, was born October 9, 1837, at Glenolden, Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. The Boon family is of Swedish origin and claims the distinction of being one of the oldest in the state of Pennsylvania, its progenitors, who were Swedes and Finns, having settled along Darby creek as early as 1637. The first of the name of whom there is any record were three brothers, Peter, Hans and Swan, the latter named being the great-great-grandfather of Dr. Boon. They were all large landowners in what is now known as Delaware county, and a portion of the estate owned by Hans Boon was later the property of Dr. Boon. He is also a descendant of Daniel Boone, the celebrated Kentucky frontiersman.

Andrew Boon, great-grandfather of Dr. Boon, followed the vocation of his forefathers, that of farming, in the township of Darby, where he resided all his life. He married and reared a family of children, one of whom was Abram Boon (grandfather of Dr. Boon) who was born in Darby township about the year 1776, and also engaged in the occupation of farming. He was an anti-federalist in politics, and an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church in Darby village. He was the father of the following named children: Andrew, Marcus, Joel, William, Christina, Susan, Lydia and Elizabeth Boon. His death occurred about the year 1840, aged sixty-five years.

Andrew Boon, father of Dr. Boon, was born in an old log house in the township of Darby in 1803, and after acquiring a practical education in the common schools of the neighborhood he devoted his attention to farming interests, which vocation he followed during his entire life. Politically he was a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, taking a keen interest in all local matters that pertained to the growth and development of Marcus Hook and Ridley township, where he was the owner of large tracts of land. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Darby, to the support of which he contributed liberally both of his time and money. Mr. Boon married Anna Foulke, a native of Delaware county, and a daughter of George Foulke. Their children were: Susan, wife of William Rudolph; Ellen, who died at the age of twenty-two years; Jacob; James, died in his twenty-second year; Emily, wife of George Hedrick; Daniel; Ann; Martha and Mariah, the two latter named being twins. Mr. Boon died in the year 1871, aged seventy-two years, and his wife passed away in the eighty-third year of her age.

Dr. Jacob Boon was reared and obtained his literary education in the township of Darby, after which he taught school for seven terms in that township and Montgomery county. In 1862 he decided to take up the profession of medicine, and after pursuing a course of medical reading for one year he entered Jefferson Medical College, where he continued his studies for more than a year. Before completing his course he enlisted for ninety days in Company A, Thirty-seventh Regiment of emergency men, stationed at Greencastle, but after one month's service was discharged. Dr. Boon then went to Philadelphia and enlisted in Company B, Two Hundred and Third Pennsylvania Regiment Infantry, joining the main army in front of Petersburg. His regiment was sent to reinforce the troops at Deep Bottom, but arrived too late to take an active part in that engagement. After several minor battles he participated in the historical struggle at Fort Fisher, and was with General Terry at the capture of that stronghold. The regiment was camped on the old York road in front of Richmond, and subsequently skirmished along the coast line toward Raleigh, North Carolina, and joined in besieging that city.

After his return from the war, Dr. Boon resumed his occupation of teaching for a short period of time, after which he again took up his medical studies at Jefferson College, from which well known institution he was graduated in 1867. He immediately commenced the practice of his profession in Darby township, and meeting with appreciation and encouragement from the beginning he soon had a large patronage which increased with the passing years, until it ranked with the most important in the county. He was an active member of the Delaware County Medical Society. Dr. Boon was also actively interested in other enterprises, having been one of the largest real estate owners in that part of Pennsylvania. He owned valuable property at Glenolden, Ridley Park, Chester, Lansdowne, and Boon Station, and in association with Fred Vogel was instrumental in the development of Lansdowne Heights and West Folsom. At the latter named place he purchased fifty-four acres of land which he laid out into building lots, and gave it the name of Oakland; in 1888 he disposed of this property to James Mornan, but subsequently became the owner of it again. In 1889 he and Mr. Vogel purchased two tracts containing one hundred and ninety-five acres, named the place Lansdowne Heights, and spent much time and attention in the improvement and development of the property. In 1886 Dr. Boon purchased fifteen acres of ground, erected fifteen residences, and derived a goodly income from the rental of the same. He was also the promoter and main owner of the village of Boon, and was largely instrumental in the building up and improving of Glenolden, Folsom and West Folsom. He was one of the promoters of the Darby & Chester pike, and his influence was felt in nearly all the public enterprises of this section of the state. In political sentiment he was a Democrat, and was elected by that party to serve as auditor, school director and to fill other official positions. For many years he was a member of the Odd Fellow Society, served in all the chairs of his lodge, and afterward became connected with the encampment.

On May 10, 1872, Dr. Boon married Elizabeth F. Lawrence, a daughter of J. Warren and Martha (Holland) Lawrence, of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Boon is a sister of Jennie, wife of Charles Evans, of Springfield township, and Helen Lawrence, wife of Harry Black, of Marple township, a son of Samuel Black. Dr. Boon died at his residence in Ridley township July 17, 1898, survived by his widow.

SAMUEL CONARD. In June, 1683, thirteen families of colonists from Crefeld on the Rhine bade farewell to their fatherland and set out for America, whither they had been preceded by Francis Daniel Pastorius, who had been charged with the duty of finding home lands for them within the province lately granted by the English sovereign to William Penn. On July 24, these colonists embarked at London in the ship "Concord," five hundred tons burthen, William Jeffries, Master, and after a voyage of seventy-four days landed on Pennsylvania soil at Philadelphia, on October 6, 1683.

In early Pennsylvania history this historic party became known as the "Germantown Colonists," for through the offices of their agent, Pastorius, the latter had procured for them a large tract not far from Penn's seat of government, and to which was given the name of Germantown—a name known even to the present day although the region many years ago was included within the corporate limits of the greater city of Philadelphia.

Among these families of German colonists was one whose name is variously written in public and family records, but which was written by himself as both Kunders and Kunrad, and is mentioned in Penn's charter of Germantown, signed and granted August 12, 1689, as Dennis Conrad, for then he was one of the first burgesses of Germantown, as well as one of the founders; in later years he was one of its most worthy inhabitants and the progenitor of a most worthy line of descendants. It may be said, however, that Dennis Conrad was also known as Thones Kunders, in the Westphalian, and became Dennis Kunrade, or Conrad, in the Saxon (Proud). A more recent genealogist of the family says that Thones Kunders "was frequently known as Dennis Conrad, or Conrades"; and, further, that "after his time the name Kunders fell altogether its disuse, his descendants calling themselves, indifferently, Cunnads, Conrads, Cunnard, Cunard, Conrads, Conard and Conrad." Many later-day generations of the family have used the surname Conard.

The children of Thones Kunders were: Cunrad, born in Crefeld, Germany, May 17, 1678, married, first, Anna Klincken, May 31, 1704, married second, (unknown) and died in 1747; Matthias, born in Crefeld, November 25, 1679-80; John, born in Crefeld, June 3, 1681, died probably in 1765; Ann, born in Germantown May 4, 1684 (probably the first child born in the settlement) married Leonard Streepers, July 29, 1715; Agnes, born in Germantown, September 28, 1686, married Samuel Powell, October 29, 1709; Henry, born in Germantown, December 16, 1688-9, married Catharine Streepers June 28, 1710; Elizabeth, born in Germantown February 30, 1691, married Griffith Jones, November 30, 1709.

Matthias Cunard, second child of Thones, married May 29, 1705, Barbara Tyson, who survived him; he died in 1726, leaving children: Anthony, Margaret, Cornelius, Magdalin, William, John and Matthias, all of whom adopted the family name of Conard. Says a chronicler of family history: "The above named Cornelius Conard married, March 29, 1732, Priscilla Bolton, daughter of Eberhard and Mary Bolton. He was then living at Horsham and is described as 'yeoman.' In 1737 he is described as 'weaver,' and in 1742 we find him described as of 'German township yeoman.' He died in 1770. He seems to have adopted and kept the spelling 'Conard.' This Cornelius must not be confounded with another of the same name, also of 'German township,' and also a 'weaver.' The children of Cornelius Conard were: Susannah, married October 13, 1773, Samuel Carew; Samuel, of Horsham, yeoman, married November 16, 1772, Hannah, widow of Jacob Kinderdine; John; Matthew, of Cheltenham, a miller, who married April 13, 1760, Mary Roberts; Everard; Joseph; Mary, married May 25, 1762, Jacob Watson. Everard Conard, fifth child and fourth son of Cornelius Conard and Priscilla Bolton, was by trade a wheelwright, and he married, June 18, 1761, Margaret Cadwallader, a daughter of Isaac Cadwallader, late of Wacminster township, Philadelphia county." The foregoing is a brief genealogical record of one of the oldest and in many respects one of the most prominent families of eastern Pennsylvania, and one whose descendants are still known as factors in the civil and business history of that region.

The late Samuel Conard, formerly a merchant of Philadelphia, was a descendant in direct line of Thone Kunders and one of the best representatives of the old or the adopted surnames. He was born at Lampeter, Lancaster county, October 4, 1830, and received his early education at public and private schools in the counties of Lancaster and Chester, afterwards entering the school of Benjamin Hallowell, at Sandy Spring, Maryland, when he also taught in the school. He developed a taste for meteorology, and a decided ability for mathematics, the latter qualification enabling him to be the financial head of the business concern, which made his name to be greatly respected by all who had dealings with him. His straightforward and conscientious principles giving him a name more than respected among men. In 1876 he purchased a farm at Sharon Hill, Delaware county, and occupied it as a residence and home after 1877. His efforts in life were rewarded with success and he enjoyed the respect of all who were acquainted with him either in business or social relation. Mr. Conard married Mary B. Clayton, daughter of Jacob E. and Hannah Littler (Yerkes) Clayton, of Montgomery county. The children of this marriage are: Caroline C. born August 31, 1861, and died young; Francis Paxton born June 2, 1864; Helen Clayton, born November 4, 1865, married Robert C. Biddle, Jr., son of Clement M. and Lydia C. Biddle of Philadelphia; Henry Norman, born June 25, 1869, unmarried; Mary L. Conard, born June 10, 1873, died young; and Sarah Emlen Conard, born June 11, 1878.

Jacob E. Clayton, father of Mary B. (Clayton) Conard, was the son of John and Elizabeth (Norman) Clayton, the latter being of Welsh descent; and Hannah Littler (Yerkes) Clayton, her mother was a daughter of Anthony and Susan (Canby) Yerkes, the former a descendant of the prominent old Yerkes family of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and the latter of a well known and respected family of Baltimore, Maryland. All of these families were closely associated with the best sides of civil and social life in their respective localities, and among them were several persons who attained to positions of influence and public affairs.

THE CALDWELLS OF MORTON. Miss Beulah and Charles Caldwell, who reside on the old homestead in Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where they were born, are children of George W. and Martha (Carey) Caldwell. Their father removed in 1843 to Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he purchased a farm consisting of thirty-five acres and was engaged in agricultural pursuits up to the time of his death, which was in 1884, when the property was willed to his wife, and after her death, which occurred in 1891, descended to their three children, Hannah, Beulah and Charles Caldwell. Another daughter, Catharine, died in 1890, and Hannah died in 1897. Their mother, Martha (Carey) Caldwell, was a daughter of Charles and Beulah (Tyson) Carey.

Charles Carey, father of Mrs. Caldwell, spent the early years of his life in assisting his father with the work on the farm. He afterward engaged in the lumber business in Philadelphia, and after being thus employed during the greater part of his active career, returned to the old homestead and resumed farming. He married Beulah Tyson, daughter of William Tyson, a citizen of Cecil county, Maryland, who was formerly a resident of Delaware county. Their children were: 1. William, who married Elizabeth Robinson, removed to Clark county, Ohio, and remained there until his death; 2. Elizabeth, who died in early life; 3. Martha, wife of George W. Caldwell and mother of Beulah and Charles Caldwell; 4. Edward, who after completing his education, purchased a farm in Upper Providence, Delaware county, where he was a market gardener, who disposed of his products in the Philadelphia market, making two journeys each week for a period of forty years. He is now the owner of a large and well cultivated farm of fifty acres in the vicinity of Media, Pennsylvania, where he has creditably and efficiently filled various important political positions. He married Miss Jane Moore, a daughter of James and Rachel (Worrell) Moore, of Middletown, Delaware county, and six children were the issue of this marriage. Matthias, the fifth child, was a mute and acquired his education at the Asylum for Deaf Mutes in the city of Philadelphia; he was united in marriage to Emma Wade. Two daughters of Charles and Beulah (Tyson) Carey are deceased: Jane and Elizabeth. Charles and Beulah Carey, the parents of these children, died at the old home in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, both of them having attained the extreme old age of eighty-two years.

CONRAD K. DOLBEY, a prominent business man of Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is descended from a family of Welsh origin, which was planted in America by Thomas Dolbey, who left his native land about 1788, and settled in Uwchlan township, Chester county, where he passed the remainder of his life as a farmer. He had two sons, Lewis and Abraham, the first named of whom left no descendants.

Abraham Dolbey, son of Thomas, was born in 1789, on the homestead in Uwchlan, Chester county. His life was entirely devoted to agricultural pursuits in which he was very successful. In politics he was a Jacksonian Democrat, and in religious preferences a Baptist, being for many years a member of the church of that denomination near his home. In 1817 he married Catherine King, a native of the same township, and a daughter of Conrad King, who had a family of seven children. Mr. Dolbey died on the homestead at the age of ninety years. Abraham and Catherine (King) Dolbey were the parents of eleven children, named as follows:

1. Able E., born August 31, 1812, died August, 1889, single.

2. Newlin, born October 22, 1814, died September 23, 1891; he married Sarah A. Phipps, and to them were born seven children.

3. Sarah, still living, who was born April 6, 1817; she married George Scofield, and to them were born two children, Secelia J., and Ida M.

4. Catherine King, a twin with Sarah, died January 12, 1899; married Mifflin L. Palmer, to whom she bore these children: Rebecca W., Selinda C., Eliza Evans, Alphonse Morris, Sarah Buthulah, Laura Irene, and Esther.

5. Eliza Evans, born December 31, 1819, died January 6, 1881. She married Abner J. Huzzard, and to them were born five children: Cathrine Myra, Gertrude Dolbey, Rhudolph, Lavina and Ella M.

6. Selinda, born October 10, 1822, who is living. She married Benjamin Jacobs, January 20, 1848, and to them were born six children: Brinton, Mary Emma, Laura J., Ella Rassetta, Selinda, Nettie.

7. Lewis, born June 14, 1825, died January 20, 1903. He married Mary Dixey, and to them were born these children: Lancing Boroughs, Howard, Malcome, Lizzie Fletcher, Caddie Lane.

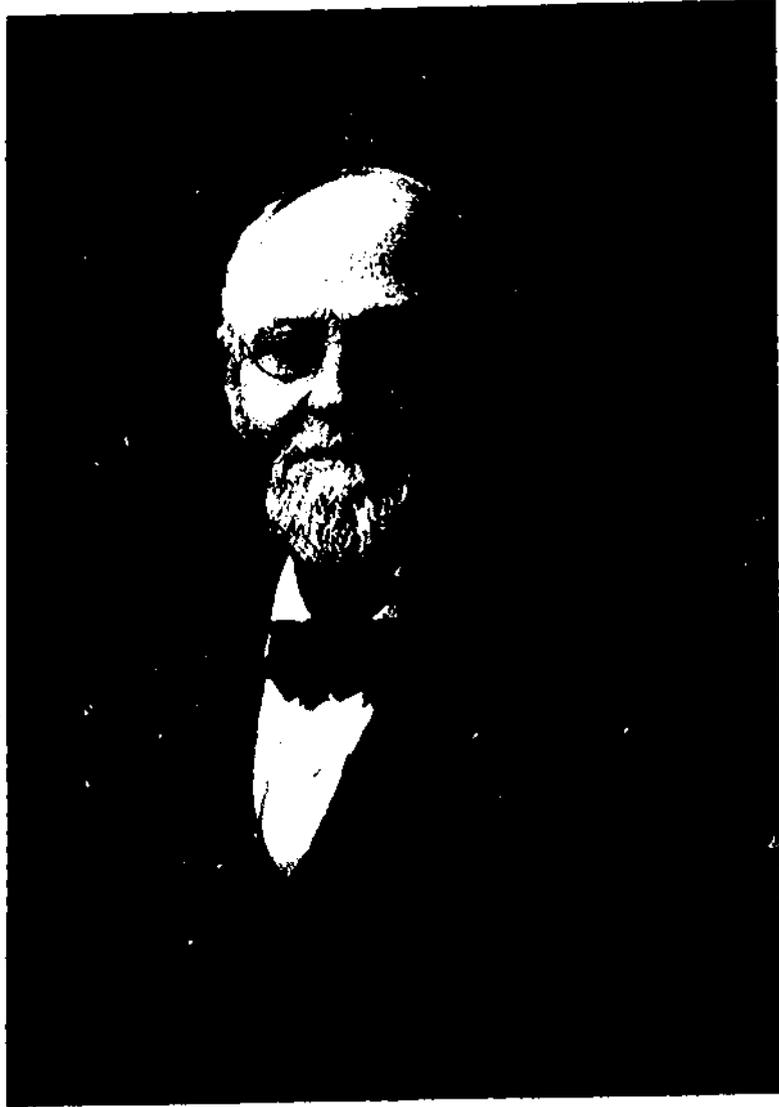

8. Thomas, born August 29, 1828; died in infancy.

9. Melvina, born December 20, 1830. She married Peter Davis, March 13, 1862. No children were born of this marriage.

10. Conrad K., who is referred to at length hereinafter.

11. Emma Margaret, born May 6, 1836, died May 23, 1871. She married John Davis, November 4, 1857, and to them were born two children: Kate and George Brinton McClelland Davis.

Conrad K. Dolbey, son of Abraham and Catherine King Dolbey, was born February 16, 1834, on the homestead in Chester county, where he passed his boyhood, attending the public schools of the neighborhood. At the age of seventeen he went to Philadelphia, where he learned the carpenter's trade, to which he served an apprenticeship of four years. He afterward worked for some time as a journeyman, and later engaged independently in the contracting and building business. In 1868 he embarked in mercantile business in West Philadelphia, and after two years moved to Angora, Philadelphia county, where for some years he conducted a prosperous trade. He then moved to Delaware county and opened a store at Darby Creek, where he remained until 1876, when he took up his abode in his present home at Morton. Here, from the beginning, he met with gratifying success, and now has a flourishing business, being the owner of a handsome store which contains a large stock of general merchandise. He is also engaged in the real estate and fire insurance business, being the representative of a number of leading insurance companies of Philadelphia. He has negotiated some important transactions in realty. He is the owner of a large amount of real estate, both in Morton and in Philadelphia. For several years he has been connected as a stockholder with the Faraday Heat, Power & Light Company, of Morton, and was at one time its treasurer. He is also a stockholder in the Media Title and Trust Company of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. For nearly thirty-five years he has been prominently identified with the building associations of this part of the country, having been instrumental in the organization of the Morton Building and Loan Association, in which he is a stockholder. He also took part in organizing a similar association at Folson, Delaware county, in which he now holds the office of treasurer.

Conrad K. Dolbey

Politically, Mr. Dolbey is strictly independent, voting for the men and measures that, in his opinion, are most likely to promote the public welfare. For two years he served as school director in Upper Darby township, and for ten years held the office of postmaster at Morton. He is a member of Hamilton Lodge, No. 274, F. and A. M., of Philadelphia, and is Past High Priest of Media Chapter No. 234, R. A. M., of Media. He is treasurer and deacon of the Ridley Park Baptist church, adhering to the denomination with which his father was prominently identified. In recent years he has travelled much, having visited all but six of the States and territories of the Union, thus making himself familiar with all sections of his native land.

Mr. Dolbey married, December 8, 1859, Mary Elizabeth Lewis, born January 24, 1836, a daughter of Thomas B. Lewis, of West Philadelphia. Of this marriage was born a daughter, Ada Ione, September 1, 1863, in Lower Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. She received her primary education in the public schools of Morton, and graduated in Philadelphia from the Grammar school on the corner of Thirty-Eighth and Spruce streets. For three years she devoted herself to teaching in the schools of Morton, and for two years in those of Oakdale. She married, June 15, 1898, Simeon M. Brinton, of Thorndale township, Delaware county, who was for some years a clerk in Mr. Dolbey's store. They now reside in Bryn Mawr, Montgomery county, where Mr. Brinton conducts a large mercantile business.

JAMES F. KROMER, well known not only throughout Northampton county, Pennsylvania, but throughout that entire section of country, as a connoisseur of high bred horses, of which he has several superior specimens in his stables, was born in the county named, February 18, 1846. He is a son of Andrew and Salome (Fry) Kromer, his father being of the same county and his mother of Lehigh county.

Andrew Kromer was a son of Andrew Kromer, who married a Miss Schaffer, of Northampton county, Pennsylvania, and his father was Andrew Kromer, who was a stone mason by trade, and was for many years a preacher of local reputation, and was respected and esteemed by all who knew him. Andrew Kromer the second, was the father of the following named children: Abraham, Charles, Joseph, Jacob, Andrew and John, and Mrs. Kester, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Seigfried, and Mrs. Rogers, all of whom lived to be over three score years. The only surviving one is Mrs. Seigfried at Coplay, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

Andrew Kromer, of the family last named, married Salome Fry. She died November 4, 1866, and her husband died in 1890, and they are buried at St. John's Reformed Lutheran cemetery, at Howerton, Northampton county, Pennsylvania. They were consistent Christians of the Lutheran faith. They were the parents of ten children: 1. Sarah Jane (Mrs. Eliza Sager); 2. James F.; 3. William H., who lost his life by drowning in the Lehigh river during the freshet of 1862, aged fourteen years, four months and four days; 4. Adaline (Mrs. Charles Hill); 5. Lucinda (Mrs. John Bruck); 6. Samuel A.; 7. Alfred E., who married Dean Rager; 8. Edward Alexander, who married and resides at Allentown, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania; 9. John A., died September 28, 1903, who married in Philadelphia; 10. Harrison J., who married and resides at Narberth, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

James Franklin Kromer, second child and eldest son of Andrew and Salome (Fry) Kromer, very early in life developed a marked fondness for horses, so it was not remarkable that later, after completing his schooling, he turned his attention toward the goal of his ambition. His keen business instinct pointed out Berwyn, Chester county, Pennsylvania, as a good starting point, and leaving the old homestead he began the upward climb toward success. In 1880 with but little money he established himself at Berwyn in the livery business. With limited capital this road was anything but a smooth one, but being abundantly endowed with energy and perseverance, he made up his mind to conquer in the struggle to overcome adverse circumstances.

Step by step he gained the mastery, and within two years he found himself in a position to purchase a desirable site for the location of a larger and more commodious stable in a prominent part of the town, thus increasing his facilities for handling his rapidly growing trade. So well and satisfactorily had he supplied his patrons when the road was all up-hill work, that it did not take long for his increased facilities to be taxed to the utmost, as people began to seek the accommodations of his well-filled and well kept stables from far and near.

Having compassed the livery question at Berwyn, Mr. Kromer began to look about for fresh fields in which to develop, and this time his business foresight pointed to Wayne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, as promising good results, for there he found a company engaged in the business which was meeting with scant success. This company he bought out, and immediately began to improve the property and put into execution his many practical ideas, acquired through years of experience and careful study. A livery stable is not generally considered a desirable acquisition, so far as appearance goes, in any community, but the property under the improved conditions, is now greeted as a benefit in that it adds greatly to the beauty of the town. He anticipates that the property will be ready for business this spring (1903), and everything points to future success under his capable management. Being so fond of horses, it is not to be wondered at that among the many, Mr. Kromer has selected three of the finest stock, in which he takes peculiar pride. He has experienced keen enjoyment in driving them about through the counties of Chester and Delaware, and has had the gratification as well of leaving many race tracks the proud possessor of the highest honors they had to dispense.

Mr. Kromer married Catherine Bauchman, May 16, 1869, daughter of Charles Bauchman, by whom he had one son, Elwood Franklin Kromer, born December 13, 1870. His wife, Catherine, died in 1893, and he again married, this time, Elizabeth Fields, a Philadelphian, Mr. Kromer has taken his son Elwood into partnership, and he ably assists his father in the management of their extensive business. Young Kromer is also a great lover of horses, and is endowed with his father's energy and ambition. He married Miss Emma Strohl, and two children, James Franklin, Jr., and Ralph, have been born to them.

Samuel A. Kromer, sixth child and second son of Andrew and Salome (Fry) Kromer, was born January 15, 1854. He was educated in the public schools in Lehigh county, and became a telegrapher when almost eighteen years of age. An accomplished operator, he was called to a position with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, which he relinquished after two years to enter the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Berwyn, Chester county. He has taken an active interest in community affairs, and was postmaster during President Cleveland's first term, and he served for a number of years as school director. He was married to Miss Ellen Jane Peters, daughter of David and Caroline Peters, and to them were born the following children: Calvin A., Howard S., Franklin P., William H. and Grover C. Kromer.

HENRY HIPPLE, deceased, for many years a prominent and influential farmer of the township of Marple, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born on the Hipple homestead in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1816. His ancestors were of German origin, but took up their residence in this country at an early day, the majority of them settling in Pennsylvania.

His father, Henry Hipple, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his boyhood was spent in attendance at the district school and in mastering the details of life upon a farm. His entire life was passed in this locality where he was recognized as a prosperous and methodical agriculturist. In his religious beliefs he was a Quaker, attending the regular meetings of that organization. He was united in marriage to Jane Garrett, by whom he had a family of eight children. His death occurred about the year 1864, in the eighty-fourth year of his age.

Henry Hipple, son of Henry and Jane Hipple, grew to manhood, received a good common school education, and resided in Chester county until after their marriage. He then removed to Delaware county, settling in the township of Marple, where he devoted his attention to the cultivation of his farm of one hundred and fifty-six acres, which was located between Marple and Media, and which soon became one of the most valuable and finely improved farms in that section of the state.

In 1840, Mr. Hipple married Rachel Roberts, who was born January 1, 1815, in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Amos and Mary (Ellis) Roberts. Their children were: Mary J., Margaretta, Elizabeth, Jesse, who married Fannie E. Hannum in 1876, and Rebecca Maris in 1896; Harry, born December 14, 1856; Annaretta, and William, who married Hannah M. Bartram, and is now a resident of Media, Pennsylvania, where he is engaged in the capacity of county commissioner of Delaware county. Mr. Hipple died in 1878, at the age of sixty-three years, survived by his widow, who resides on the old homestead in Marple township. The grandparents of Mrs. Hipple were Moses and Sarah (Ellis) Roberts, and their children were: Mary Ellis, mother of Rachel Hipple, born August 21, 1777; Lydia, born August 30, 1780; Isaac Ellis, born May 30, 1783; Hephzibah, born July 27, 1785, died April 24, 1834; and William, born April 11, 1788, died August 23, 1834. Sarah Ellis, wife of William Ellis, Sr., died April 28, 1837, and the deaths of their children were as follows: Lydia, died October 10, 1850; Mary Roberts, died September 10, 1862; Isaac, died July 15, 1867, and Margaret, wife of Isaac Ellis, died December 12, 1871. The parents of Mrs. Hipple were Amos and Mary (Ellis) Roberts, the former named being a native of Montgomery county; he died in the year 1827, and was buried at Gwined, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: William, who married Hannah Wilson; he died in the year 1870, and his widow is now residing at Overbrook; Isaac, who died at the age of twenty-eight years; Joseph, who married Adaline Heycock; Joseph, who died in the year 1880, and left surviving a widow and five children: Jesse, Isaac, Penrose, Joseph and William Roberts; Sarah, born in 1803, died at the age of seventeen years; Jane, born in 1808, died January 8, 1888; Lydia, born in 1811, died in June, 1899; she was the wife of William Dickinson; Mary, born in 1820, who married Peter Gilbert, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, who died April 19, 1901, aged eighty-five years; and Rachel, born January 1, 1815, who acquired her education in the common schools of Montgomery and Delaware counties, and is now the widow of Henry Hipple.

WILLIAM H. LOWNES. The Lownes family of which William H. Lownes, a prominent agriculturist of Morton, Pennsylvania, is a representative, trace their origin to Hugh Lownes, who was born near Chester, England, and suffered imprisonment on account of his religious belief. After his release he emigrated to the United States, accompanied by his wife, Jane, also a native of Chester, England, but died on the voyage of a disease contracted while in prison, and was buried at sea. His widow, with her four children, settled in 1685 in Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where she became the possessor of a large tract of land which is still in the possession of the family. They took up their residence in a cave, where they remained until the erection of a log house, which was situated between what is now Woodland Avenue and the present home of Joseph Lownes, Sr., and this property has never been out of the possession of the family. The cave is marked by a stone bearing the inscription, "Jane Lownes, her cave and dwelling, 1685."

Joseph Lownes, grandfather of William H. Lownes, was the son of Hugh and Rebecca (Rhoades) Lownes. He was born in 1786 and became a man of great influence in the community, his advice being often sought in the settlement of disputes among his neighbors. He was at one time engaged as a teacher in the Springfield Central School, served in the capacity of school director for several terms, was auditor for the township, and in 1824 acted as supervisor. He was twice married, his first wife having been Rachel Massey, and his second wife, Priscilla Pratt. His death occurred in 1872.

George B. Lownes, father of William H. Lownes, was born in 1825, and on January 11, 1849, was united in marriage to Rebecca Webb, the daughter of Alban Webb. Their children are: William, George Bolton, Mary Moore, Hannah Darlington, Joseph, Edward, Francis, Minerva, and Jane Carpenter Lownes.

William H. Lownes, eldest child of George B. and Rebecca Lownes, was born in the township of Springfield, Pennsylvania, January 9, 1850, and his education was acquired in the common schools of the neighborhood. After laying aside his textbooks he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits on the old homestead, and has continuously followed this line of industry up to the present time (1903). He is a man of wide acquaintance, and his life of industry and usefulness and his record for integrity has given him a firm hold upon the regard and confidence of his friends.

On December 10, 1881, Mr. Lownes married Florence Thayer, born July 11, 1854, a daughter of Nathan Thayer, who was deputy collector of the Port of Boston for many years. Their children are: Nathan Thayer, born March 16, 1883; Rebecca, born August 26, 1884; Emily, born June 20, 1887, and Charlotte, born September 1, 1890.

MRS. REBECCA J. ARTHUR, of Rosemont, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of the old and distinguished Warner family, which was founded in America by Capt. William Warner, who was born at Draycot, in the parish of Blockley, in Worcestershire, England. He was the son of John Warner, of Draycot, and was baptized in the parish church of Blockley, July 8, 1627. He was a captain in the body guard of Oliver Cromwell, and left England about 1658. This seems not improbable in view of the fact that a very large number of men holding commissions under Cromwell were, after the restoration, forced to leave England, in order not only to save their estates from confiscation but themselves from transportation as convicts. It also appears not unlikely that Capt. William Warner came first to New England, and removed thence to Pennsylvania. It is certain that he was in the province years before William Penn acquired a title to it, and that therefore he must have been among the very earliest settlers in this region.

He purchased most of his land direct from the Indians, with whom he appears to have been on excellent terms, speaking their language, and trading with them in a way satisfactory, apparently, to the tribes. At a court held at Upland (Chester, Delaware county), April 3, 1678, William Warner had a grant of forty acres of land on the west bank of the Schuylkill. June, 1681, he made an application to purchase land from the Indians, and the same day he had a grant to take up four hundred acres. His purchase from the Indians was probably in common with others, for the court required that a proportion of the 335 guilders (Dutch money) to be paid to the Indians should be paid by him separately. In 1681 William Warner was appointed a member of Deputy Governor Markham's council, and the oath of office subscribed by him, August 3, 1681, is extant. A fac-simile of it is to be found in an edition of "The Duke of York's Laws," published by the state of Pennsylvania in 1869. September 13, 1681, he was appointed one of the nine judges under Governor Markham, his appointment being approved at the sessions of November 30 of the same year. He was elected a member of the first Assembly of Pennsylvania, convened at Philadelphia, March 10, 1683. His plantation extended from the west bank of the Schuylkill river to above Hestonville, or the present Fifty-second street station, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and adjoined the line of Lower Merion township. This plantation he named Blockley, after the parish in England of which he was a native, and Blockley township was so called after it.

William Warner's wife was named Anne, and he married her, doubtless, in England. They were the parents of several sons and daughters. One of his daughters married James Kite, who lived afterward in Lower Merion. Captain Warner died upon his plantation on the Lower Merion line, in a house yet standing, near Fifty-second street, in October, 1706, his will being dated September 8, 1703, and proved at Philadelphia, October 18, 1706. In this will he mentions estates in Draycot, Blockley, England.

Isaac Warner, eldest son of Captain William and Anne Warner, by the provisions of his father's will inherited the plantation on the Schuylkill river, which he was to possess for the term of his natural life, and upon his death it was to pass to his eldest son. He married, November 30, 1692, Ann Craven, and died in April, 1727. His will is dated April 6 of that year, and was proved in Philadelphia on the 26th of the same year and month.

William Warner, eldest son of Isaac and Ann

Warner, lived upon the ancestral plantation in Blockley township. He is known in history as "Baron" Warner, and was one of the founders in 1732 of the "State on Schuylkill" Fishing Company, the old hall of the company being erected upon his property. He died in September, 1766, in which month and year, his will was proved in Philadelphia.

Isaac Warner, eldest son of "Baron" William Warner, served, during the war of the Revolution, first as lieutenant-colonel and afterward as colonel of the Seventh Battalion, Philadelphia County Militia. When he received his commission as colonel, his son-in-law, Algernon Roberts, was made lieutenant-colonel. He married, in 1757, Lydia Coulton, and died in November, 1794, leaving a large number of descendants. Anthony Warner, a brother of Colonel Isaac Warner, also served in the Continental Army and was with his company at Valley Forge, and while there the Hessians visited his home at Rosemont and carried away seventeen cows, as well as supplies from the house, including a silk quilt which was given to Mrs. Warner on her wedding day. She appealed to the British officer and it was restored to her. Isaac Warner, son of Anthony Warner, married Jane Latch, and the following named children were born to them: Hamil, Lewis, Jacob, Eliza, Levi, Isaac and Jacob, twins, Rebecca J., Penrose C., Anderson and Gardner L. Warner.

Rebecca J. Warner, daughter of Isaac and Jane (Latch) Warner, was born March 27, 1826, in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. She married April 22, 1852, Charles J., born July 11, 1824, son of Robert and Catherine (Wolbert) Arthur, of Philadelphia. Mr. Arthur was a well known farmer. During the Civil war, although unable to serve in the army by reason of having passed the age limit, he became widely and honorably known for his liberal contributions to the relief of the wants of the soldiers in the field. He died June 13, 1877. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur were the parents of the following children: 1. I. Warner, born January 9, 1854, who married Annie W. Miller, of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania. 2. Jennie, born August 20, 1856, married Edwin Parsons, who came from Halifax, England; their children are: Edwin Arthur, Meredith, and Wolbert. 3. Margareta, born December 24, 1858. 4. Charles, who was born March 2, 1861, married Jeannette, daughter of Alexander and Annie Maxwell, who came from England and settled in Philadelphia, and they have one child, Doris. 5. R. Frances, who was born February 20, 1867, graduated in 1889 from the Hagarstown Female Seminary.

The present representatives of the Warner family are extremely numerous. It has been estimated that the posterity of Captain William Warner, the emigrant ancestor, now number at least five thousand, and several hundred of whom reside in Lower Merion township, the majority being inhabitants of Ardmore and Bryn Mawr. Jacob Latch, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Arthur, died at the advanced age of eighty-seven. He also served in the Continental army and was commissioned major.

JESSE HIPPLE. The Hipple family, of which Jesse Hipple is a worthy representative, are of German extraction but have been residents of the state of Pennsylvania since an early day. Henry Hipple, grandfather of Jesse Hipple, was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was successfully engaged in farming pursuits. He was a member of the Society of Friends, contributing both liberally of his time and money to further the cause. He married Jane Garrett, and eight children were born to them. Mr. Hipple died in the year 1864, at the advanced age of eighty-three years.

Henry Hipple, father of Jesse Hipple, was born on the old homestead in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1815, acquired his education in the district schools and remained a resident of that county until after attaining young manhood. He then located in the township of Marple, Delaware county, purchased a large and valuable farm, and by his industry and good management became one of the prosperous and influential agriculturists of that section of the state. In politics he was a Republican, and for many years served in the capacity of school director of the township. In religion he followed the teachings of the Quakers, being a regular attendant of the meetings of the Society of Friends. In 1840 Mr. Hipple married Rachel Roberts, born in 1815, a native of Montgomery county, and a daughter of Amos and Mary Roberts; she was also a member of the Society of Friends. Their children were: Lydia Dickinson, Rachel, Mary Gilbert, Joseph, Sarah, Isaac, William and Jane Roberts. Mr. Hipple died in Marple township, in 1878, in the sixty-fourth year of his age.

Jesse Hipple was born on the homestead in Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, July 9, 1847. He obtained his education in the Cedar Grove public school, the Newtown public school, and at Shortlidge's private school at Kennett Square, Pennsylvania. During his boyhood and up to the time of his marriage, Mr. Hipple assisted his father with the work on the farm which consisted of one hundred and sixty-five acres of well-cultivated land, and since then he has been engaged in farming in the county.

Mr. Hipple has been twice married, his first wife having been Fannie E. Hannum, daughter of Phillip Hannum, of Missouri. The ceremony was performed March 8, 1876, and the following named children were born to them: Harry H., born December 2, 1876, attended the public schools of Springfield township and completed his education at the West Chester school, taking a two years course; Leroy C., born February 9, 1880, acquired his education in the public schools of Delaware county; and Rachel M., born February 11, 1882, was a pupil in the public schools of Delaware county, and graduated from the Westchester Normal school; subsequently she took up the study of shorthand, and now commands an excellent position. Mrs. Hipple died in 1887, and on June 4, 1894, Mr. Hipple was united in marriage to Rebecca Maris, a daughter of George Maris, of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: George M., born April 26, 1895, and Emma Hipple, born January 12, 1897, both of whom reside at home with their parents.

SAMUEL SELLERS BUNTING, a man of most exemplary character, and for many years prominently identified with the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, was a representative of a family which was among the early Quaker settlers of Pennsylvania, who, from the time of their coming from England, have been during several generations residents and landowners near Darby, in Delaware county.

His father, Josiah Bunting, was for many years engaged in the lumber business in Philadelphia, as a member of the firm of Bunting & Watson, and his partner was at one time mayor of the city. Josiah Bunting, after a prosperous commercial life, removed to the old family home at Darby. He married Sarah Sellers, a descendant of the Delaware county family of that name and whose father was one of the early wire manufacturers of Philadelphia. The children born of this marriage were: David S., who is the only surviving child; he married Hannah P. Serrill; Rachel, who married William P. Serrill; Elizabeth; Sarah; Josiah, who came to his death by drowning; Samuel S., who is referred to at length below; and Joseph, who married Elizabeth Spencer Miller.

Samuel Sellers Bunting, sixth child in the family last named, was born in Philadelphia, April 23, 1828. It was during his infancy that his father retired to the family home at Darby, and there the son received an elementary education in the Friends' Monthly Meeting School, and this instruction was supplemented with lectures on chemistry and astronomy, given by John Jackson, a capable teacher who was in charge of the Sharon Academy for Girls. When about seventeen years of age he went to Philadelphia to become an apprentice in the drug and apothecary establishment of Joseph C. Turn-penny, a leading house in its line, situated at the northeast corner of Tenth and Spruce streets. He was diligent in acquainting himself with the business in which he had engaged, and he was graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy with the class of 1849-50. About 1857 he became a partner in business with Mr. Turnpenny, and in 1864 he purchased the interest of his partner and conducted the business alone until June, 1886, when he retired to enjoy a well earned season of repose. For many years he had been sadly inconvenienced through an accident which had occurred in the summer of 1860. The sudden displacement of the stopper of a large bottle of concentrated ammonia had thrown into his face a portion of the liquid, which produced injuries threatening him with loss of sight, impaired his vision for the remainder of his life, and produced a nervous shock which told upon his constitutional vigor during all his remaining days. Owing to these conditions, his successful conduct of his business and the discharge of other duties he had assumed were only performed through the stimulus of an inflexible determination.

During all his active years, Mr. Bunting devoted himself zealously to advancing the interests and promoting the usefulness of the College of Pharmacy. He became a member of the College in 1855, and in March, 1856, he was elected a member of its board of trustees and he served in that capacity up to the time of his death. In September, 1871, he was chosen treasurer, and he served as such until 1880, when failing health admonished him to withdraw from the position by resignation.

The death of Mr. Bunting occurred at the family home in Upper Darby, now Secane, on August 15, 1890, in the sixty-third year of his age. He had endeared himself to all with whom he had come into association, whether in business, college or social life, and his character was briefly but touchingly depicted in the tribute paid to his memory by Mr. Charles Bullock, a co-worker in the College of Pharmacy, in the following sentences which he gave to a public journal:

"Mr. Bunting was a man of unassuming manner, his diffidence and modesty obscuring his real worth to those not well acquainted with him. His sterling integrity and the faithful performance of his duties have left their record with all who have had relations with him. The quiet and even tenor of his life, in its simplicity, has left with us a pleasant memorial of one of the old, useful and valued members of this college."

Mr. Bunting was married, in 1857, in Upper Darby, in the house in which he subsequently resided and which was the scene of his death, to Miss Anne H. Hibberd, daughter of Isaac and Susan (Fairlamb) Hibberd. Of this marriage were born one son and three daughters—Joseph T.; Mary H., who became the wife of Hugh McIlvaine, and of which marriage were born two children, Edna B., and Mary B.; Susan, who became the wife of James A. Bunting; and Sarah Sellers Bunting. All these children, with the mother, have survived the beloved husband and father.

BALDWIN HOWARD, who died in Media in 1892, was one of the most worthy and substantial citizens of Edgemont township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He was a man of unbiased views and forceful character, who stood uncompromisingly for the right as it was given him to see the right. He was interested in all things that tend to make life fuller or freer, and in local matters of public policy he made himself felt as a sane and enlightened influence. Especially did his sympathies go out to any individual or class oppressed or handicapped beyond the common lot.

This branch of the Howard family count as the first ancestor of whom they have record, Henry Howard, whose wife was Hannah Sharpless. James, a son of this couple, came to Delaware county and settled on the farm on Crum creek which is now in possession of his descendants. He was twice married, his first wife being Alice Passmore, and the second Hannah Jones. William P., a son of James Howard and his first wife, Alice Passmore, married Rebecca Baldwin. Of Baldwin, a son of this last marriage, mention has already been made.

Baldwin Howard was born in Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, 10 mo., 15, 1803. He was a farmer all his life, and was a man who dignified his calling. He came into possession of the farm cleared by his grandfather, James Howard, and to him it represented more than the means of a livelihood. He gave up active work in 1878 and moved to Media, leaving the ancestral farm in the hands of his son Lewis. The schools of the township owe much to his efforts. He was trustee under the old pay system, and was directly instrumental in bringing about the change to the present system of public charge. For two terms he was director of the poor. He was never bound by party lines, but gave his political support according to the best light he could get on constantly changing conditions. In early life he was a Democrat, but he became a Free Soiler, and his was one of the two votes cast in his county for James G. Birney, the anti-slavery candidate for president, in 1848. In 1856 he aided in organizing the Republican party in Delaware county. To this party he gave allegiance until late in life, when the Prohibition party won him to its support. He always attended the meetings of the Society of Friends.

Adam B. Goddard

He married Sarah Ann, a daughter of Jesse and Mary (Matlack) Smedley, who was born 6 mo., 3, 1809, and died 4 mo., 7, 1876. Nine children were born of this marriage: 1. William L., born 11 mo., 18, 1829, who married Elizabeth H. Cassino and had children, Edgar, and T. Reese, who died 4 mo., 28, 1880; 2. Hannah, who died in 1833; 3. Charles, who died in 1840; 4. Jesse, who died in 1846; 5. Passmore, now living at Gradyville; 6. Mary Rebecca, who died in 1845; 7. Henry, born 8 mo., 19, 1846, now living in Seattle, Washington; his wife was Elizabeth Bromall, and he has five children, Anna, William S., George B., Grace and Henry; 8. Lewis, born 9 mo., 5, 1849, who is now living on the home place; he married Hannah M. Hunter, and four children, Irene E., Walter L., Elwood, and Bertha have been born; 9. Anna L., who became the wife of Dr. Joseph Rowland, now deceased.

Passmore Howard, fifth child of Baldwin and Sarah Ann (Smedley) Howard, was born on the old farm, 10 mo., 29, 1840. He remained at home until his twenty-sixth year, when he occupied the old Preston farm at Newton Square, which belonged to his father. He stayed here for three years, until 1870, when he bought the farm of one hundred and ninety-three acres which he still owns. For several years he gave his attention to a general line of farm produce; in 1885 he worked out a plan he had long held, by opening a creamery, which he now successfully carries on in connection with his farm.

Passmore Howard was married; February 13, 1867, to Debbie R., daughter of Pratt and Matilda (Yarnall) Bishop. Pratt Bishop was the son of Amor and Jane (Malin) Bishop, and Amor was the son of Thomas and Priscilla Bishop. Mr. and Mrs. Howard's three children are as follows: Emma B., born January 13, 1868, wife of Edgar M. Smedley, and mother of two children, Edgar Howard and Edith B.; Harvey P., born May 9, 1872; Leonard B., born March 27, 1875, and died February 22, 1885.

ADAM C. ECKFELDT, for many years a prominent and highly respected citizen of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, belonged to a German family which for two generations prior to his birth had been recognized as leaders in the business circles of Philadelphia.

John Jacob, grandfather of Adam C. Eckfeldt, was born in Germany and emigrated with his wife about 1765 from Nuremberg. He settled in Philadelphia, and during the struggle for independence served as a soldier in the field, and also manufactured bayonets for the army.

Adam, son of John Jacob Eckfeldt, was born in Philadelphia in 1769. He learned the trade of machinist, and established a factory for the manufacture of wrought iron nails. Later, he received large contracts from the United States government for the construction of machinery for the United States mint, with which he was closely identified from its establishment in 1793, first as assistant coiner and afterward as chief coiner, which position he filled until his resignation in 1848. He married Margaretta Bausch, of Philadelphia, and was the father of the following named children: Sarah, Jacob R., Elias B., Magdalena, Susannah, Adam C. and Margaretta.

Adam C., son of Adam and Margaretta (Bausch) Eckfeldt, was born August 26, 1812, in Philadelphia. He received his primary education in the schools of his native city, and afterwards attended school at Doylestown, Pennsylvania. He engaged for a short time in the commission business in his native city, but in consequence of failing health removed to Haverford township, Delaware county, where he became interested in agricultural pursuits. Here he resided for many years, devoting himself to the care of his estate in the most thorough, practical and scientific manner, introducing all the modern appliances and improvements. From 1865 until 1868 he resided in Philadelphia and then purchased the residence in Chester, at Twentieth street and Providence avenue, where he resided for the remainder of his life.

Early in life Mr. Eckfeldt was an old line Whig, and became an ardent member of the Republican party on its organization. He refused all solicitations to stand as a candidate for various offices, but consented to act as justice of the peace, which position he filled in the most satisfactory manner for ten years in Haverford township. He was one of the first members of the Marple Presbyterian church, and an elder for many years. For several years he was an active member of the First Presbyterian church of Chester, and later of the Third church of the same place, in which he served as an elder until his death, being foremost in all benevolent and charitable enterprises of the church.

Mr. Eckfeldt married, in 1839, Rebecca, daughter of Jacob Sulger, of Philadelphia. They had three children: Elias B., deceased; Anna S., and Margaretta, deceased. The son, Elias B., was lost at the battle of Antietam, during the Civil war, having enlisted in Company D, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, for a service of nine months. Mrs. Eckfeldt died in 1846, and on May 21, 1851, Mr. Eckfeldt married Martha Ann, widow of Adam Carter, and daughter of John M. Campbell. Of this marriage was born one daughter, Sarah E., who became the wife of Charles W. Perkins, M. D., of Chester, Pennsylvania. The death of Mrs. Eckfeldt took place in 1894.

Mr. Eckfeldt died on the fourth of June, 1890, at his home in Chester, deeply and sincerely lamented by his family and immediate circle of friends and also by the community, in which for many years he had set the example of an honorable and public-spirited citizen, and an upright, earnest and benevolent man.

WILLIAM HARLAN BAKER, of Gradyville, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of Joseph Baker, one of three brothers (Aaron, Thomas and Joseph), who came to America from Yorkshire, England, in company with William Penn, in the year 1682. Previous to their going to Yorkshire, the brothers, in about the year 1642, lived in Carrickfergus, Ireland.

After coming to Pennsylvania, Joseph settled in Edgemont, Thomas in Darby, and Aaron in Chester county. Joseph's son, Aaron, married Elizabeth Register, who had a son Joseph, who married Hannah Reece, and their son Aaron, born in 1795, was the grandfather of William H. Baker, he having married Amy Carter, by whom he had a son Jackson Baker, the father of William H. Baker. Jackson Baker married Emeline M. Mercer, by whom he had two children, William Harlan, born in Howellville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 26, 1858, and Amy, the wife of J. Howard Mendenhall, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work.

Emeline Levis (Mercer) Baker, the wife of Jackson Baker, and mother of William Harlan Baker, was the daughter of Harlan W. and Mary Ann (Levis) Mercer. Harlan W. Mercer was the son of Thomas H. Mercer, the fourth, who was married twice, his second wife, Mary Ann (Harlan) Mercer, being the mother of Harlan W. Mercer. Thomas H. Mercer, the fourth, was the son of Thomas the third, he the son of Thomas the second, and he the son of Thomas Mercer, the founder of the family in this country.

William Harlan Baker received his early training in the public schools of his birthplace, Howellville, and he completed his education at the Friends' School, the Maplewood Institute, which was at that time under the management of Joseph Shortlidge. After finishing his educational course he returned to his father's house and assisted with the work upon the farm. The farm, consisting of fifty-two acres, has been in the Baker family since the first settlement in 1685. This land he has brought to a high state of cultivation in the raising of a general line of farm produce.

In state politics Mr. Baker is a Democrat, but in local affairs he votes for the candidate who in his judgment will bring the greatest good to the greatest number.

On May 12, 1886, Mr. Baker was united in marriage to Alwilda M. Baker, a daughter of William S. and Amy (Johnson) Baker. William S. Baker, the father of Alwilda, was the son of Abel and Ann (Sill) Baker. Abel was the son of Edward and Jane (Green) Baker, and Edward was the son of Aaron and Elizabeth (Register) Baker. Aaron was the son of Joseph, one of the three brothers who founded the Baker family in Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. William Harlan Baker have a family of three children, namely: Amy Mercer, born February 15, 1887, Anna Mary, born August 11, 1888, and Emma Levis, born September 16, 1889.

GEORGE SHAW PATCHEL. The first ancestor of the Patchel family in America of whom we have any authentic information was George Patchel, who was of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and came from Ireland, with his wife and a family of children about the year 1806. He landed in Philadelphia, and finally took up his abode in the valley of the Brandywine, near West Chester, Chester county. He followed the tilling of the soil, and was known to be a just and upright man in all the affairs of life, and lived to be more than four score and ten years of age. He married Nancy Patterson, and both he and his wife are buried near where they settled in the Brandywine valley. This worthy old couple had in their family three sons, Thomas, Oswald and John. Thomas and John both married and settled in Philadelphia, where they spent their remaining years of life, and many of their descendants are now residents of that city.

Oswald Patchel, second son of the patriarch of the family, was born in Londonderry, Ireland, and came with his parents to this country when about twelve years of age. He settled with the family in the historic valley of the Brandywine, where he followed in the footsteps of his father and for many years pursued farming. He emulated the worthy example of his sire, and became well and favorably known as a most useful and upright man. He took an important part in the social as well as in the moral interests of the community in which he resided, and became well known as a local exhorter in the Methodist Episcopal church.

Oswald Patchel married Hannah Shaw, who was a daughter of Samuel and Margaret (Geuber) Shaw, and to this union were born the following children: 1. George S., to be further mentioned below; 2. Mary, born May 26, 1825; she married James Patchel, who was a remote kinsman; 3. Margaret, born January 14, 1827, and died February 12, 1827; 4. Oswald, Jr., served three years in the Civil war; he married Anna Elizabeth Souder, a daughter of John and Eliza (Smith) Souder, of Bridgeton, Cumberland county, New Jersey; the children of this union are: 1. Lizzie (Mrs. John H. Lewis); 2. Kate; 3. Clara; 4. Florence (Mrs. Harry W. Doak); 5. Harry, who died aged two years; 6. Francis E., who married Maria Sell; 7. Herbert O., who married Elizabeth Coe; 8. Lewis A.; 9. Horace E. Patchel. The mother of this family died about 1834. Oswald Patchel, Sr., subsequently married Rebecca Long, who bore him one son, Samuel, born April 29, 1838, and who married Jenny Hickey, and to whom was born one son, Noble Patchel. Oswald Patchel, Sr., died February 27, 1898.

George S. Patrick

George Shaw Patchel, eldest son of Oswald and Hannah (Shaw) Patchel, was born in Darby township, near the borough of Llanwellyn, April 24, 1824. His educational training was obtained in the schools of the neighborhood, as was the custom for farmers' sons in those days. He remained under the parental roof until his early manhood years; and then went to Philadelphia, where he learned the carpenter's trade, which he later followed for about three years in that city. He then returned home and worked at his trade as a journeyman for some time, and then decided to begin business on his own account, which he finally accomplished through his economy and perseverance. He began contracting and building, and in this undertaking he met with a well merited degree of success. His undertakings were varied and numerous as a builder, and in many places are seen the evidences of his skill. The Methodist Episcopal church at Darby and that at Morton, and the African Methodist Episcopal church at Paschallville were erected by him. In all these long years of active effort he has been known as an honorable and upright man, and has, at various times, been called to important positions by his fellow townsmen. He has served as burgess of Darby borough, a member of the council, and of the board of education, and also as justice of the peace. Politically he has always allied himself with the Republican party. He was for many years one of the leading members of the Sharon Building and Loan Association of Darby, which organization he served as treasurer for a number of years. He also took an active interest in other enterprises which had for their object the welfare of the community.

George S. Patchel was united in marriage, November 29, 1848, to Elizabeth Sorin, a daughter of Charles and Susan (Longacre) Sorin, and to this union were born five children, as follows:

1. Charles, born April 4, 1850. He married Eveline Trivett, and their children are May, Helen (Mrs. George Slick), Alice and Charles.

2. Mary, born January 18, 1852. She married Amor Anderson, and to them were born four children: Walter, who married Emma Blythe, and to whom was born one child, Elizabeth Sorin; and Howard, who married Mary R. Beaumont; Charles, who died at the age of six years; and Ralph, who died aged eleven months.

3. Anne R., born August 11, 1854, and died June 5, 1868.

4. George G., born March 8, 1857. He married Adalaide Verlenden, and to them was born one son, LeRoy.

5. Thomas T., born September 12, 1862. He married Elizabeth McGee, and to them were born the following children: Katie, George, Mabel, Thomas, William, Reva, Mary and Tracy.

Elizabeth (Sorin) Patchel, the mother of this family, died December 2, 1891. She was a most estimable lady of the old school type, and was possessed of many excellencies of character. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which she was an ardent worker. She was generous and charitable to the sick and poor, who were ever the recipients of her generous benefactions.

JOSEPH L. SERRILL. As long ago as 1750 the Serrill family lived in Darby, Pennsylvania, where Jacob Serrill was born in that year. He married Hannah Pierson, the daughter of Thomas Pierson, in 1772. Their son Benjamin married Sidney Pennell, a daughter of Dill and Hannah (Hill) Pennell. They had four children, namely: William Pennell, Thomas Sidney, Hannah and Benjamin.

William Pennell Serrill was born in Darby, December 6, 1814, and married Rachel Sellars Bunting, of Darby, March 5, 1840; their children were Josiah B. Serrill, born December 28, 1840, and Sally B. Serrill, born January 15, 1844.

Josiah B. Serrill began his education in the Friends' schools of Darby, completing his studies at Bolmar's boarding school at West Chester. He then located in Easttown, now Devon, Chester county, afterwards removing to Norristown, Pennsylvania. In 1880 he purchased of Joseph Lewis, Jr., the place now occupied by his family. This was the old Speakman property, formerly known as the Thomas homestead. Mr. Serrill engaged extensively in the raising and training of thoroughbred trotting horses, and gained a wide reputation as a careful and competent man in the handling of animals of unquestionable pedigree. To facilitate his work of training, Mr. Serrill constructed one of the finest half-mile courses on any private estate in eastern Pennsylvania, and this he conducted up to the time of his death, which occurred February 22, 1902, since which date it has been carried on by his son, Joseph L. Serrill. Mr. Serrill was married on September 27, 1865, to Hannabell Lewis; their family consisted of four children, as follows: Edwin L., born November 19, 1866, died October 9, 1879; Sally B., born September 21, 1868, wife of James P. Calvert, and they have one child, Elizabeth S. Calvert; Joseph Lewis born October 25, 1876, who became successor to his father's business; and Elizabeth Bunting, born August 20, 1879.

Hannabell (Lewis) Serrill, wife of Josiah B. Serrill, was the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Steel Hoopes Lewis, and one of a family of eight children, namely: 1. Edwin R., born September 16, 1832, died December 28, 1890; 2. Joseph, born January 1, 1835, died April 25, 1888; 3. Emma A., born March 17, 1837; wife of Caleb Baldwin, whom she married in October, 1866—their two children are John and Joseph Lewis Baldwin; 4. Daniel H., born November 9, 1838, married Laura Hood, of Christiana, Pennsylvania, and whose second wife was Martha Thomas, of West Chester; he died in February, 1892; 5. Hannabell, born September 29, 1842; 6. Susanna E., born May 31, 1845, wife of E. Evan Dunwoodie, of Minnesota; 7. Laura C., born May 29, 1849, wife of William H. Fussell, whose children are Howard and Willis Fussell; their mother died in July, 1899, and their father in November, 1901; 8. Helen M., born November 11, 1858, died March 15, 1889.

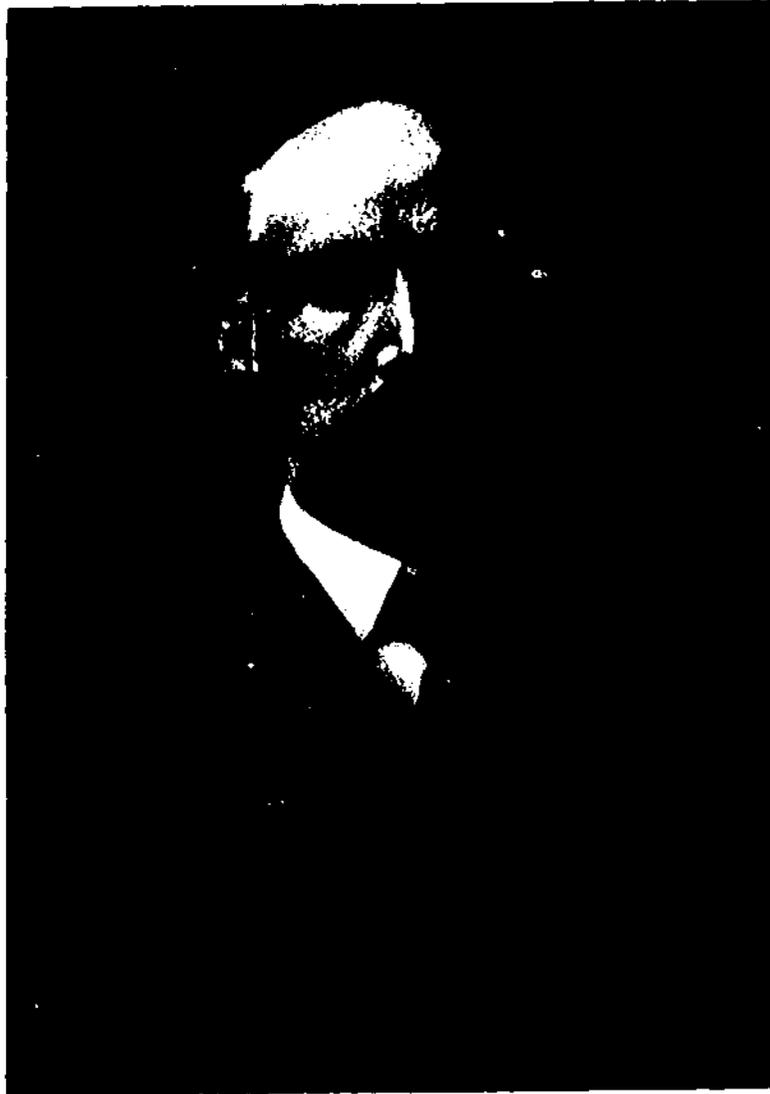

The progenitor of the Lewis family in America was William Lewis, who came here with his wife Ann from Glan Morganshire, South Wales, in 1686; he had a son Evan, who in turn called his son Evan, one of whose sons was Joseph Lewis, the father of Hannabell (Lewis) Serrill.

ENOS LEWIS BAKER, a prominent citizen of Edgemont township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born March 14, 1826, the son of Anthony and Hannah (Williamson) Baker. Anthony Baker was born February 20, 1788, and died February 14, 1875. Hannah, his wife, was born December 4, 1798, and died March 30, 1870. They were married December 23, 1819, and had a family of eight children, namely: 1. Williamson Baker, born February 19, 1821, died February 20, 1821; 2. Sarah W., born July 30, 1822; 3. Lydia, born April 2, 1824, who became the wife of Homer Eachus, and whose family consists of eight children; 4. Enos Lewis, born March 14, 1826; 5. Anna, born May 13, 1828, who became the wife of Edwin A. Hoopes, and died August 5, 1894, leaving her surviving five children; 6. Anthony Walter, born October 1, 1832, who married Margaret McCloskey, and who have two children; 7. Esther Jane, born January 7, 1836, who became the wife of William Henry Ashbridge, bore a family of twelve children, died August 12, 1899; 8. Mary, born March 25, 1839, who became the wife of Franklin Baker and had three children.

Enos L. Baker, fourth child in order of birth of Anthony and Hannah Baker, obtained the foundation of his education in the pay schools of his native place. It did not take him long to grow restive under the restrictions of this tuition, he being of a spirited and energetic nature, and to meet the demands of his broadening views he went to a boarding school in Vermont, which it was thought would meet the requirements of the case. This, however, did not result as anticipated, for young Baker, who felt a strong inclination to see something of the great country in which he lived, could not overcome the desire, and finally, having no money to gratify his wish, started on a tour of investigation on foot. Notwithstanding the difficulties he must have encountered, he managed by his indomitable will to visit the principal cities in Vermont and New Hampshire, and one day when about one hundred and fifty-five miles from Boston, he determined to make that city his objective point, and within four and one-half days had covered the distance, in one day walking fifty-five miles. From Boston he started west, visiting in his travels all the larger cities of that day, and made several trips up and down the Mississippi river. In traveling about in this way, he spent about four years. By this time he considered his education about complete, in so far as experience of the world is concerned, and thereupon determined to return to his father's home in Edgemont. During his travels he had acquired the miller's trade, and upon his reaching home he took charge of the mill on his father's place, which he successfully conducted for thirty-two years. In 1880 he took up his residence in the old homestead where he was born, and at the death of his father he purchased the property of the heirs. This place consists of one hundred and forty-seven acres, which Mr. Baker operates with the assistance of his two sons, carrying on a general farming business. Mr. Baker has always been a hard worker in the cause of Republicanism, both in matters of state and in town affairs. For nine years he was a member of the school directorate.

On November 29, 1855, Mr. Baker married Mary Vernon Shimer, a daughter of Edward and Hannah (Jones) Shimer, of Thornbury, Chester county. She was one of a family of eight children, as follows: 1. Elizabeth, born April 3, 1824; 2. William, born June 9, 1827; 3. Alice, born December 12, 1828; 4. Phœbe, born November 12, 1830; 5. Mary Vernon, born March 26, 1832; 6. Sarah, born in October, 1835; 7. Annie, born in May, 1837; 8. Amy, born March 17, 1839.

Samuel G Watt

Mr. and Mrs. Baker's family consists of seven children, namely: 1. Hannah S., born November 9, 1856; 2. Anthony Howard, born January 12, 1860; 3. Lizzie D., born December 13, 1861, who is the wife of Milton S. Garrett, who have two children, Enos L. and Ralph P. Garrett; 4-5. Enos L. and Mary V., twins, born July 28, 1864, died August 2, 1864; 6. Alice S., born March 6, 1866; 7. George E., born December 10, 1872.

SAMUEL GEORGE WATT, who conducts one of the oldest milk routes in Upper Darby, and one of the leading citizens of Llanerch, was born in Ireland, County Donegal, August 12, 1854, a son of John and Mary Ann (Rankin) Watt. John was a son of John, Sr., of County Fawn, Ireland, and Mary Ann was a daughter of James Rankin, County Boncrannon, Ireland. Nothing further is known of the ancestral history.

John and Mary Ann (Rankin) Watt were the parents of ten children, surviving, the majority of whom are living in America today. These children are as follows: Elizabeth, married George Brown and has two children; Mary, unmarried, now dead; David, unmarried; Robert, married Tillie McCartel, and has seven children; Alexander, married a Miss Chambers, no issue; Samuel G., married for his first wife Caroline Transue, and had four children: Mary, Bertha, Ellwood and Sylvester, and his second wife was Jennie Warwick, of Newtown Square, and she is a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Hillpot) Warwick, and they have two children: Willie and Jennie, and she came of a family of five children: Annie, William, Greer and Grace, all single; Joseph, unmarried; John, unmarried; Annie, married William Bogg, no issue; James, unmarried.

Samuel George Watt emigrated to America in 1872, having obtained his education in his native land. He began working upon a farm in Havertown township. For some time he continued in this way, accumulating money and increasing his fund of information, until he had sufficient means to purchase a milk business. At that time he came to Upper Darby, in the early seventies and has continued on the same route, and many of his first customers still buy their milk of him. In 1885 he purchased the farm owned by John Smith, of twenty acres, and he now operates it as a dairy farm, delivering his milk himself, and practicing the same honest methods which won him business in the beginning of his career. In politics he is a Republican, and he supports the candidates of the party upon all occasions. His religious belief makes him a Presbyterian, and he gives liberally to the church. Hardworking, thrifty and honest, Mr. Watt has steadily worked his way upward, and is respected in his community by the many friends he has won through his excellent traits of character.

HARRY SHERWOOD BAKER, a descendant of an old Pennsylvania family by that name, was born in Crozierville, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, October 1, 1854, the son of William Sill and Aimee (Johnson) Baker. William Sill Baker was one of a family of eleven children born to Abel and Ann (Sill) Baker, who married on January 1, 1820, said children being as follows: Benjamin Franklin, born March 4, 1821; Mary D., born April 30, 1822; William S., born June 21, 1823; Sarah born October 3, 1824; Thomas Jefferson, born August 21, 1826; Annâ Maria, born July 29, 1828; Stephen Gerard, born September 19, 1830; Edward D., born July 16, 1832; Jane, born January 14, 1835; Louise E., born January 8, 1837; Francis, born August 20, 1840. William Sill and Aimee (Johnson) Baker were the parents of three children, namely: Edward N., Harry Sherwood, and Alwilda M. Baker.

Harry Sherwood Baker, as was the custom in those days, assisted his father in the work upon the farm, between times attending the district schools, in which his education was acquired. When he was quite a small boy, his father took up his residence at Edgemont, on his father's old place, which is the same property now occupied by Harry S. Baker, where his agricultural pursuits were carried on. As soon as Harry Sherwood was in a position to do so, he took the farm and operated it on his own account, conducting a successful dairy business in connection with his stock farm, besides raising a general line of produce, in which he was also remarkably successful. In 1892 he purchased the general store of Wilbur Yearsley, at Westtown, whence he removed and conducted the business about seven years, when he sold out to Miller M. Boyd. He then returned to the farm, where he has since remained.

Mr. Baker has always been a Republican in state politics, and in town affairs takes a keen interest in the educational problems. He has for many years been a member of the school board, and has also occupied the position of tax collector and assessor. He is thoroughly alive to those things which tend toward the improvement of his town, and is ever ready and willing to advocate such measures as will redound to the greatest good.

On December 27, 1880, Mr. Baker married Sally M. Frame, a daughter of Joseph E. and Hannah (Taylor) Frame. Joseph E. Frame was the son of Robert and Martha (Phillips) Frame; he was one of a family of ten children, namely: John Taylor, deceased; Sally Miles; Martha Phillips; Elbridge M., deceased; Phocion Lewis; Robert Marion; Emma Josephine; Hannah H., and Isaac Halderman Frame. Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Baker have two children, namely: Harry Franklin, born April 24, 1882, and Helen Augusta, born June 6, 1888.

WILLIAM RHOADS, who died March 17, 1903, and was a prominent man of affairs of Newtown Square, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, came of an old time Pennsylvania family, he being the sixth generation in direct line of descent. The progenitor of the family in this country was John Rhoads, a native of Winegroves, Derbyshire, England, who, after the death of his wife, Elizabeth, came to America in 1684; he purchased land at Darby, Pennsylvania, where he lived until his death, which occurred on August 27, 1701. His wife, Elizabeth, bore him nine children, Joseph being the ninth child in order of birth.

Joseph Rhoads, upon attaining his majority, became the owner of a fine place at Marple, where he established a tannery, enlarging the estate from time to time by the purchase of an additional two hundred and fifty acres lying between the original property and Crum Creek. He married July 2, 1702, Abigail Bonsall, daughter of Richard Bonsall, and they became the parents of four sons and three daughters, of whom James was the youngest. Joseph Rhoads died in 1732, at the age of fifty-two years; his wife survived him eighteen years, passing away November 9, 1750.

James Rhoads was born, reared and spent his entire life upon his father's estate in Marple, and at the age of twenty-eight years became sole owner of that splendid property, which he continued to improve and extend by acquiring additional land. His was a refined and gentle nature, he was loving and generous in his domestic relations, and, like most men who have followed the plan of doing unto others as they would be done by, he was successful in his business undertakings. His wife, to whom he was married in 1745, was Elizabeth Owen, daughter of John and Hannah Owen; she was born November 20, 1722. Their family consisted of eight children, of whom Joseph (grandfather of William Rhoads) was the second in order of birth. James Rhoads, died in 1798, and his wife, Elizabeth, in 1795.

Joseph Rhoads was born in Marple, December 3, 1748; he married Mary Ashbridge in 1779; she was born in 1758, and died in 1830. Joseph died in 1809. Of their seven children, William (father of William Rhoads) was the youngest.

William Rhoads, Sr., was born in Marple township, April 2, 1797. His education was acquired in the boarding schools at Burlington and Westtown. Upon finishing his education he engaged actively in farm pursuits, which he carried on throughout his entire life. In 1822 he took up his residence in Newtown township, where he became actively interested in all matters pertaining to the welfare and advancement of his town. In politics he was an old line Whig, and later became an adherent of the Republican party; as such he had many important public offices conferred upon him, but cared very little for the excitement of political life, yet he filled these positions of trust with interested fidelity, as a citizen thoroughly alive to the needs of his township, and as one capable of carrying out plans for its improvement. His reputation as a man of honesty, good judgment and intelligence, won for him considerable influence in the township. He acted in the capacity of president, from the date of its construction until his death, of the West Chester & Philadelphia Turnpike Company. Mr. Rhoads was always a consistent member of the Orthodox Society of Friends. His marriage occurred March 14, 1822, to Annie P. Levis, daughter of William and Esther Levis, of Springfield township. Their children were: George, William, Esther L., wife of Nathan Garrett, Phobe, Mary Ashbridge, wife of Hibbard Yarnall, Anna and Elizabeth L. Rhoads.

William Rhoads was born in Newtown, August 4, 1824. His early education was acquired in the public schools, and he also enjoyed the advantages of private school instruction. When his studies were completed his attention was required on the old homestead farm, of which fine property he became possessed at his father's death. He had so far won the confidence of his townspeople that upon the death of his father he was elected to succeed him as president of the West Chester & Philadelphia Turnpike Road Company, which position he held until 1879, when the company was merged into the present trolley company. He also took an active part in the Harvest Home Company. He has served two years as supervisor, and one term as town auditor. Like his father he has always been a staunch adherent of the Republican party, and a member of the Orthodox Society of Friends.

About twenty years ago Mr. Rhoads disposed of his farm property, containing one hundred and ninety-two acres, to the Pennsylvania Hospital, he remaining on the place in the capacity of superintendent and general manager. Since purchasing the land the hospital authorities have continued to add to the property, until it now comprises three hundred acres.

Mr. Rhoads's first wife was Mary R. Evans, of Delaware county, granddaughter of Jonathan Evans, and daughter of Joel and Hannah (Rhoads) Evans. She bore him one child, Mary, born in 1850 and died in 1867. Mrs. Rhoads died in 1850.

Mr. Rhoads afterward married Hannah Scattergood, of West Chester, granddaughter of Thomas Scattergood, and daughter of William and Elizabeth (Comfort) Scattergood. She died about 1875, leaving no children.

Mr. Rhoads married his present wife, Miss Susanna S. C. Culin, of Philadelphia, October 27, 1886. She is a daughter of George and Rebecca (Hatch) Culin. They have no family.

JAMES ERSKINE, for many years one of the most respected citizens of Delaware county, was descended from a Scottish family, many of the members of which have been noted in the annals of their native country. John Erskine, father of James, was born in Scotland, and with his mother, brother and sister, came to America and settled in Philadelphia, William Erskine subsequently removing to Wheeling, West Virginia. His sister Unity married Samuel Bushfield. John finally settled, in 1818, in Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he purchased seventy-two acres of land which he divided into lots which now form the borough of Ridley Park. He married Margaret Eleanor Trainer, and was the father of ten children:

Robert Erskine, son of John Erskine, married Molly Bottomly, of Chester, Delaware county. William Erskine married Mary Mace, of Ross county, Ohio. John Erskine married Sarah Schooly, of Ross county, Ohio. David Erskine, M. D., died unmarried, in 1864. Samuel Erskine married Sarah Bunn, of Ross county, Ohio. Thomas Erskine married Margaret Griffith, of Ridley, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. George Erskine died unmarried. James, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Ebenezer, also mentioned at length hereinafter. Margaret married Nathan Steel, of Marple, Delaware county, and had six children—Thomas, died in infancy; Margaret Erskine; John, who died at the age of six years; William, who died at eight years of age; Isaac Perry, now living in Laurelville, Ohio; and James, died in infancy. Mr. Steel had by his second marriage eight children; Jonah, Mary Abbie, Emma, George, Samuel, Elwood, Nathan and Lizzie. Mr. Steel died in Charlestown, Maryland.

James Erskine, son of John and Margaret (Trainer) Erskine, was born July 12, 1818, in Ridley township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and passed his entire life in his native county. In 1846 he purchased the farm in Haverford, on which he resided until his death. He married Mary, daughter of David Henderson, by whom he had one child, who died in infancy. Mrs. Erskine died in 1844, and March 4, 1847, Mr. Erskine married L. Stackhouse, daughter of Asaph Stackhouse, of East Goshen, Chester county, and by this union had one child, who died in infancy. Mrs. Erskine died December 14, 1891, in the eighty-second year of her age, and the death of Mr. Erskine took place December 1, 1903.

The Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, who was for more than a quarter of a century an honored citizen of Cumberland county, was descended from ancestors who were prominent figures in the history of Scotland, to whom the clan Erskine has furnished many nobles, warriors, statesmen and theologians. Two of Dr. Erskine's ancestors, Ralph and Ebenezer, were among the most noted ministers in the Scotch Presbyterian church.

Ebenezer Erskine, son of John and Margaret Eleanor (Trainer) Erskine, was born January 31, 1821, at Ridley Park, near Chester. In 1843 he graduated from Jefferson College, and in 1848 from the Princeton Theological Seminary. At the time of his death he was the last surviving member of this class. His first pastorate was in Philadelphia, from 1849 to 1851, when he was called to the church at Columbia, where he remained until 1857. During his residence in Columbia that town was visited by an epidemic of cholera from which great numbers of the inhabitants fled. Dr. Erskine and a Roman Catholic priest, however, remained at their posts and heroically ministered to the sick and dying throughout the whole period of the terrible visitation. In 1858 Dr. Erskine accepted a call from Sterling, Illinois, where he remained until 1864, when he removed to Chicago and became editor of the Northwestern Presbyterian. In November, 1869, he became pastor of the Big Spring church at Newville, where he remained until his death. The same year the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by Central College. From 1864 to 1869 he was a director in the McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago, and at the time of his death was the senior trustee of Princeton Theological Seminary, having been on that board since 1878. In 1873 he was a member of the committee on conference with the Presbyterian church, South, the object being to unite the two bodies. In matters of doctrine he was a firm upholder of the Old School, and was strongly opposed to the agitated revision of the Westminster Confession of Faith. In the general assembly of 1890 he was chairman of the committee on revision, and was a member of the permanent committee which held its sessions in Washington from 1890 to 1893. At the last meeting of the assembly in Philadelphia he was the only speaker allowed to exceed the time limit, owing to the fact that he was regarded as the one best informed on the subject. The synod of Harrisburg honored him by making him its moderator, and when it was merged in the larger synod of Pennsylvania he was chosen to preside over that body. He was moderator of the Presbytery of Carlisle, and a frequent commissioner from that body to the general assembly of the church. The biographical part of the second volume of the "Centennial Memorial of the Carlisle Presbytery" was written by Dr. Erskine, the work being edited by Dr. George Norcross. In the establishment of the Pennsylvania Scotch-Irish Society he was much interested, and was among its earliest members. In 1899 occurred the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the ministry and the thirtieth anniversary of his pastorate in the Big Spring Presbyterian church, both occasions being fittingly and appreciatively observed.

Dr. Erskine married, in 1874, Helen, daughter of James and Margaret (Sharp) McKuhan, of Cincinnati. They were the parents of two daughters. The death of Dr. Erskine, which occurred November 24, 1902, was lamented not only as an irreparable loss to his family and near friends, and as a grief to his parishioners, but as causing a vacancy in the ranks of the Presbyterian ministry which will not soon be filled. He was deservedly respected and esteemed by his brethren in the Presbytery, and was regarded as one of the ablest preachers and theologians in the Presbyterian church.

HARRY SCHOFIELD. A native son of the old Keystone state, Mr. Schofield has throughout his entire business career been identified with its business interests, and for many years he was one of the well known agriculturists of Delaware county. He is a grandson of James and Hannah (Walker) Schofield, who came to this country from England in 1827, taking up their abode in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Four children were born to this worthy couple, as follows: Hiram, who became the father of our subject; Mary Ann, who was born in England May 2, 1822, and became the wife of John Pitt Smith, by whom she had three children; her death occurred on the 17th of December, 1893; and John and Robert, deceased.

Hiram Schofield was born in England, November 8, 1820, and seven years later, in 1827, he accompanied his parents on their emigration to America, their first location being in Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he attended the public and private schools. His father was both a manufacturer and farmer, and he assisted him in his operations until his marriage, when he removed to Elwyn, Pennsylvania, and there he still resides. He has always followed the tilling of the soil as a life occupation, and his homestead originally consisted of one hundred and twenty acres, but he has since sold seventy-eight acres of the tract to the Williamson school. In political matters he is independent, and the only office which he has been prevailed upon to accept is that of school director. In his fraternal relations he is a member of Benevolent Lodge, No. 40, I. O. O. F., in which he has passed all of the chairs, and he is also a member of Chester Lodge, No. 235, A. F. & A. M.

May 20, 1844, Mr. Schofield was united in marriage to Esther Burke, who was born in August, 1822, the daughter of William and Martha (Cooper) Burke. Her death occurred on the 12th of July, 1902, after becoming the mother of eleven children, five of whom, Frank, Orion, Mary Elizabeth, Nellie and Scott, are deceased. Those living are: James, who was born February 27, 1845, and was married to Mary Pearson, by whom he has two children: Martha, who was born November 26, 1847, and is at home; Thomas, born May 19, 1854, and is also at home; Harry, the subject of this review; Hiram, who was born May 8, 1860, and married Maud Crout, by whom he has one child, and they reside at Germantown, Pennsylvania; and Emma, who was born November 30, 1862, and married David Wilmot, by whom she has three children, and the family reside in Chester, Pennsylvania.

Harry Schofield, whose name introduces this review, was born at Elwyn, Pennsylvania, on the 12th of July, 1856, and to its public school system he is indebted for the educational privileges which he received in his youth. When the time came for him to engage in the active battle of life for himself, he chose the vocation of farming, and that continued to be his occupation until 1901, since which time he has been employed as iron inspector for the Testing Laboratory, limited. In political matters he is independent, but his preference is for the principles embraced in the Democracy, and religiously he is identified with the Episcopal church.

On the 27th of September, 1882, occurred the marriage of Mr. Schofield and Miss Ella Hudson. She was born November 26, 1857, and is a daughter of William and Hannah (Lister) Hudson, the former of whom was born on the 4th of January, 1824, and died in August, 1895, while the latter was born December 29, 1819. Three children have been born unto the union of Mr. and Mrs. Schofield, namely: Grace Lister, who was born November 21, 1883, and died January 23, 1897; Marion Bettie, who was born July 28, 1886, and died on the 30th of August of the same year; and Mary Lillian, born February 26, 1889.

SAMUEL TRIMBLE. The Trimble genealogical tree is of great length, but, as it is important to preserve the records of our old families, no apology is made for presenting the record in somewhat elaborate form. John Palmer, the first maternal ancestor, came to Pennsylvania from England in the ship "Providence," about 1674, and four years later was married to Mary Southery. William Trimble, first direct paternal ancestor in this country, was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1705, arrived in America in June, 1719, with several of his brothers, was married September 13, 1734, to Ann, daughter of John and Mary (Southers) Palmer, died August 5, 1795, and was buried at the Concord Friends' grounds. The children of William Trimble, all of whom were born in Chester (now Delaware) county, Pennsylvania, are thus recorded in the family register: 1. John, born June 24, 1735, and died June 25, 1772, was married November 24, 1762, to Lydia, daughter of Richard and Phebe (Ashbridge) Thomas, who was born December 4, 1740, and died in November, 1780; 2. William, born September 19, 1737, and died February 6, 1821, was married September 11, 1766, to Grace Thomas, sister to Lydia, who died September 14, 1781; William married his second wife, Ann Taylor, June 27, 1785, she being the widow of Benjamin Taylor and daughter of George and Ann Edge, and was born December 26, 1748; 3. Joseph, born August 17, 1739, and died October 16, 1824, was married May 14, 1783, in Concord Meeting House, to Hannah Thomas, sister of Lydia and Grace, who was born May 15, 1749, and died May 2, 1829; 4. Samuel, born July 17, 1741, and died July 13, 1818, was married April 15, 1767, in Concord Meeting House, to Esther, daughter of John and Margaret (Williamson) Brinton, who was born in 1742, and died May 30, 1821; 5. Hannah, born July 22, 1743, and died May 8, 1834, was married September 18, 1766, to Isaac, son of John Jacobs, who was born April 13, 1741, and died March 3, 1815; 6. Daniel, born January 17, 1745, and died February 2, 1807, was first married June 20, 1776, to Mary, daughter of Richard and Mary (Edge) Downing, who was born July 31, 1752, and died January 30, 1779. Daniel's second wife was Phebe Jones, born March 5, 1759, and died August 12, 1786. The third wife was Ann Warner, born January 30, 1758; 7. Rachel, born April 11, 1748, and died September 27, 1832, was married March 21, 1787, to Amos, son of Isaac Garrett; 8. Ann, born January 19, 1752, and died September 30, 1827, was married May 20, 1789, to Joshua, son of Benjamin and Martha (Mendenhall) Sharpless, she being his second wife.

The children of Samuel Trimble, fourth son of William and Esther (Brinton) Trimble, were as follows: 1. Margaret, born June 8, 1769, and died April 30, 1850, was married March 18, 1794, in Concord Meeting House, to Thomas ninth child of Caleb and Ann (Mendenhall) Peirce, who was born September 5, 1770, and died November 1, 1826; 2. Ann, born July 16, 1771, and died October 16, 1857, was married April 10, 1811, to George, son of Hezekiah and Grace Williams, who died in 1850, in his eighty-sixth year. 3. John, born July 29, 1773, died young. 4. Joseph, born December 4, 1775, and died July 19, 1840, was married October 22, 1801, to Jane H., daughter of George and Christiana (Hill) Brinton, who was born September 19, 1780, and died May 29, 1854. 5. Samuel, born October 27, 1782, and died April 1, 1843, was married to Rebecca, daughter of Stephen and Margaret (Farlow) Mendenhall.

The children of Samuel and Rebecca (Mendenhall) Trimble, are as follows: 1. John B., born February 23, 1809, and died October 29, 1809. 2. Stephen M., born April 10, 1810, and died September 12, 1898, was married November 9, 1836, to Lydia, daughter of John and Ruth (Martin) Sharpless, born January 2, 1812, and died October 16, 1891. 3. Samuel, born March 19, 1812, and died September 17, 1824. 4. Esther, born May 14, 1814, died September 29, 1824. 5. Margaret M., born July 31, 1818, died January 9, 1854. 6. George W., born December 14, 1820, died July 12, 1846. 7. Samuel, born March 5, 1825, died December 17, 1854. 8. Ann, born August 25, 1827, and died August 14, 1890, was married February 6, 1850, to George Martin, M. D., son of George and Edith (Sharpless) Martin, born April 29, 1827, and died October 28, 1886.

The children of Stephen Mendenhall and Lydia (Sharpless) Trimble are as follows: 1. John, born May 6, 1838, spent all his adult life in Concordville, and died July 31, 1886, at Lima, Pennsylvania. 2. Rebecca, born May 22, 1840, was married March 3, 1869, to Samuel Bennington, a farmer who resides near Chariton, Iowa. 3. Samuel, the subject of this sketch, is noticed fully below. 4. George, born July 12, 1845, and died June 10, 1889, unmarried. 5. William, born August 19, 1847, was married May 4, 1887, in Concord Meeting House, to Jane Mendenhall, and they reside at Concord, Pennsylvania. 6. Ann, born January 25, 1851, is unmarried and resides at the old homestead in Chester township. 7. Henry, born May 22, 1853, and died August 24, 1898, at St. David's, Pennsylvania, married Mary Jenkins Warrington and had three children: He was professor of analytical chemistry at the College of Pharmacy in Philadelphia. His widow lives at Moylan, Pennsylvania. 8. Ruth Anna, born September 8, 1855, died unmarried February 27, 1876. 9. Joseph, born July 12, 1857, was married September 18, 1889, to Emma Forsythie, who was born December 20, 1858, and died November 12, 1895; issue three children.

Samuel Trimble, M. D., third child of Stephen M. and Lydia Trimble, was born near Chester, Pennsylvania, February 26, 1843, and received his early education at Westtown school. After finishing in 1863, he began the study of medicine with Dr. George Martin as his preceptor, and entered the University of Pennsylvania, and received his diploma as doctor of medicine with the class of 1867. Immediately thereafter he began the practice of his profession at Lima and has pursued it steadily from that day to this. He has an extensive patronage and is highly esteemed by his patients and neighbors. Dr. Trimble is an ardent scholar, well informed on almost every subject, and possess a library whose contents are very select and valuable. Aside from his profession his talents have led him into botanical research, in which science he possesses practical skill, allied with much theoretical knowledge. In fact it is seldom one meets in private life one so well informed on such a variety of subjects as Dr. Trimble.

He married Mary L. Evans, who is a descendant in direct line from William and Ann (Palmer) Trimble, her ancestry being traced as follows: William Trimble, second son of the above mentioned William and Ann Trimble, married Grace Thomas, and his daughter Grace, who was born December 24, 1789, and died August 17, 1867, married Joseph, son of Jonathan and Hannah (Bacon) Evans, who was born September 28, 1789, and died February 10, 1871. Ann C. Evans, daughter of Grace (Trimble) and Joseph Evans, born March 21, 1815, and died September 30, 1888, was married May 6, 1847, to Isaac C., son of Isaac and Mary (Conard) Evans, of Lampeter, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, born March 23, 1818, and now residing in Media, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Mary L. Evans (Trimble), wife of Dr. Trimble, is the eldest daughter of the last mentioned couple.

Dr. Trimble and wife have had four children, whose vital and mortuary records are as follows: 1. Joseph Evans, born at Lima, March 3, 1871, and died unmarried April 5, 1896. 2. John, born April 2, 1877, is at present settled on a farm in Newton township and is unmarried. 3. Grace, born March 14, 1881, died March 17, 1881. 4.

George Martin, born April 11, 1883, is living on a farm in West Bradford, Pennsylvania.

The family, like their ancestry before them for many generations, are affiliated with the Orthodox Friends Society. Dr. Trimble has always been a member of the Republican party and a warm advocate of its leading principles.

CHARLES SALTER WELLES, of Elwyn, Pennsylvania, is a representative of the American branch of the ancient De Welles family, of Lincolnshire, England, which traces its origin from the French house of Vaux, one of the most illustrious in history. The record of the family begins in 794; from which period they held the highest rank, personally and by royal intermarriages. The name ramifies in many directions and among many different families, some of its forms being: Vallibus, Welles, Lee, Milburn, Molbeck, Mollineaux (or Miller), D'Everaux, Wassa, Washbourn (afterward Washington), Burn, Hurtburn, Heburn, Waterton, Waters, and Beck. These are only a few of the forms of the same name, many of which have become historical. Following the genealogy of the English branches of the Vaux family mention may be made of Bertrand de Vaux: Harold de Vaux; Baron Hubert de Vallibus, born 1090; Baron Robert de Vallibus, born 1115; Baron William de Vallibus, born 1120; Robert de Welles, eldest son of above, born 1145; Simon de Welles, born 1145, Crusader, 1191; Thomas de Welles, born 1175; Henry de Welles, born 1200; Thomas de Welles, born 1240; Walter de Welles, born 1270, whose estate passed to his daughter, etc.

Of the Lincolnshire branch of this distinguished family were the two eminent prelates, Bishop Hugo de Welles of Lincoln, and Bishop Joscelin de Welles, of Bath and Glastonbury, who obtained the signature of King John to Magna Charta, June 15, 1215, the seals of both being affixed to the great charter of British freedom.

The founder of the Welles family in America was Thomas Welles, fourth governor of Connecticut, born in 1598, in Essex county, England, a lineal descendant of the Welles family in that country. He came to Connecticut in 1636, as private secretary to Lord Saye and Sele. From the first he was prominent in the affairs of the colony, holding various offices, and was deputy governor and governor for a period of five years—from 1655 to 1659, inclusive.

John Welles (2), second child of Thomas (1), was born in 1621, in Northamptonshire, England, and came to America with his father in 1636, landing at Saybrook, and thence removing to Hartford. In 1645 he went to Stratford, Fairfield county, Connecticut, where he resided until his death in 1659. The generations during the next two centuries may be briefly mentioned:

Captain Robert Welles (3), son of John (2), was born in 1651, at Stratford, Connecticut, and died at Wethersfield, in the same state, June 27, 1714.

Captain Gideon Welles (4), son of Robert (3), was born in 1686, at Wethersfield, and died there March 28, 1740.

Solomon Welles (5), son of Gideon (4), was born October 6, 1721, and was of the class of 1739, Yale. He died at Wethersfield in 1802.

General Roger Welles (6), of Revolutionary memory, son of Solomon (5), was born December 29, 1753, at Wethersfield, and was of the class of 1775, Yale. He resided at Newington, Connecticut, where he died May 27, 1795.

Hon. Martin Welles (7), son of Roger (6), was born December 7, 1787, at Newington, and was of the class of 1806, Yale. He was a member of the legislature of Connecticut, serving in both the senate and house of representatives, and also acting as speaker of the house. He was associate judge on the bench of the Hartford county court with the Hon. Thomas Day and the Hon. John M. Niles. He married Fannie Norton, of Farmington, Connecticut, who was born January 18, 1790, and died October 2, 1875. Mr. Welles died January 18, 1863, at Martin, Ohio.

Charles Roger Welles (8), son of Martin (7), was born August 26, 1812, at Farmington, Connecticut, and was of the class of 1834, Yale. He was a highly esteemed member of the bar of the Sangamon circuit, Springfield, Illinois. He married Mary Louisa Salter, July 8, 1841, and they were the parents of six children: Julia Norton, born May 30, 1842, died January 22, 1857; Thomas Mather, born June 17, 1844, died August 31, 1845; Charles Salter, mentioned at length hereinafter; Mary Frances, born January 4, 1849, died January 28, 1857; Helen Susan, born February 8, 1851, died January 11, 1857; John Martin, born February 4, 1853, died August 22, 1854. Three of these children died in January, 1857, within seventeen days, of scarlet fever. Charles Roger Welles, the father of the family, died July 23, 1854. At a meeting of the court held in November of the same year, and presided over by Judge Davis, the following named were appointed a committee to draft resolutions of respect to his memory: James C. Conkling, John T. Stewart and Abraham Lincoln.

Mary Louisa (Salter) Welles (twin with Julia R.), mentioned above as the wife of Charles Roger Welles, the daughter of Cleveland Jarman and Susan Clarinda (Benham) Salter, was born in New Haven, Conn., February 24, 1819, and died March 7, 1900. The former, who was the son of Daniel Salter, was born in New Haven, Connecticut, and died January 27, 1878. Daniel, who was the son of a wealthy London banker, was born in Honiton, Devonshire, England, and in 1794 came to New Haven, Connecticut, with his wife and two children, John and Rebecca. His wife, whom he had married December 9, 1785, was Sarah Davey, born September 13, 1761, daughter of John Davey, mayor of Tiverton, whose wife was a daughter of Sir Thomas Wynne, the lord of a manor in Wales. Her brother was Thomas Davey, who entered the British navy, and became governor of Van Dieman's Land.

Susan Clarinda Benham was born February 11, 1796, died October 14, 1820, and was the daughter of Eliakim and Susannah (Bontecou) Benham. The latter was a descendant in direct line from Pierre Bontecou, a Huguenot fugitive, who, in 1684, fled with his wife and five children from the Isle of Re, going first to England, and thence, in 1689, to New York. His wife was Marguerite Collinot, and their descendants may be briefly traced: Timothy Bontecou, son of Pierre and Marguerite (Collinot) Bontecou, born January 17, 1693, in New York, died in New Haven, February 14, 1784; Timothy Bontecou, Jr., son of Timothy and Mary Bontecou, born in 1723, died in May, 1789; Timothy Prout Bontecou, son of Timothy, Jr., and Susannah (Prout) Bontecou, born August 20, 1748, died November 28, 1785; Susannah Bontecou, daughter of Timothy Prout and Elizabeth (Upson) Bontecou, born January 24, 1774, died May 11, 1848.

Charles Salter Welles (9), son of Charles Roger (8) and Mary Louisa (Salter) Welles, was born September 13, 1846, at Springfield, Illinois, and was educated principally in New Haven, Connecticut. He was a student at Yale, but by reason of impaired health, occasioned by a severe attack of typhoid fever, took an honorable dismissal during his second term as sophomore. On June 5, 1869, he took up his abode in Media, Pennsylvania, and, with the exception of two years passed in Burlington, New Jersey, resided there until 1881. In that year he moved to a farm in Elwyn, Pennsylvania, which he had purchased in 1871, and where he now resides. His property interests in various parts of the country require a large part of his time and attention in a business way, in addition to his farm, which is devoted to stock and general farming.

Mr. Welles is a life member of the Academy of Natural Sciences, the Pennsylvania Historical Society, and the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, to the council of which he belongs at the present time. He is a member of the Delaware County Historical Society, the Delaware County Institute of Sciences, and the Yale Alumni Association of Philadelphia. His political affiliations are Republican. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and has always taken an active interest in benevolent and church work. During his residence in Media, he was, for a number of years, an elder in the Presbyterian church of that place, and now holds the same office in the Middletown Presbyterian church.

Mr. Welles married, October 19, 1871, at Media, Pennsylvania, Susie Parrish, born February 17, 1850, daughter of Dr. Joseph Parrish, of Philadelphia, born November 11, 1818, died January 15, 1891, and Lydia (Gaskill) Parrish, born September 4, 1820, died May 21, 1885. Dr. Joseph Parrish was a son of "the famous Quaker surgeon," of the same name and city, born September 2, 1779, died March 18, 1840, and Susannah (Cox) Parrish, the only daughter of John Cox, a prominent minister of the Society of Friends. Dr. Parrish was an authority upon the subjects of imbecility and inebriety, and was often called upon to give his opinion in cases of insanity and nervous diseases. He, together with Dr. D. G. Dodge, of Binghamton, New York, upon the solicitation of the Hon. Dr. Donald Dalrymple, M. P., and F. R. G. S., of England, appeared before parliament in 1872 to give evidence upon the subject of inebriety.

Mr. and Mrs. Welles were the parents of one child: Susie Homes, who was born January 1, 1881, and lives at home. Mrs. Welles died March 4, 1883, and on October 7, 1885, Mr. Welles married Maria H. Pancoast, born July 18, 1859, daughter of Thomas Pancoast, born June 1, 1825, and Susan Pennell (Hannum) Pancoast, born November 7, 1829. Mr. and Mrs. Welles have had two children: Helen Pancoast, born August 29, 1890, died August 29, 1890; and Louise Ives, born February 16, 1895.

Thomas Pancoast traced his descent from Bartholomew Coppock, Sr., who, with his wife Margaret and family, came from Cheshire, England, to Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He settled at Springfield in 1685, and two years later purchased of John Nixon four hundred and forty-eight acres of land in Marple township. For the tract he received a deed from William Penn, with the great seal of the province affixed, and bearing the signatures of his commissioners,—Edward Shippen, Griffith Owen, Thomas Story, and James Logan—the conditions of this grant being that the borough of Chester, on the first day of the first month in every year, pay to the heirs of William Penn, for each and every year, the sum of four English shillings and threepence, or value thereof in coin current, to such person or persons as shall be appointed to receive the same. This deed, in excellent preservation, is still in possession of the Pancoast family. Bartholomew Coppock, Sr., resided on this land until his death in 1719, when his son, Bartholomew Coppock, Jr., to whom he had deeded the estate, came into possession of it, and in 1732 built a brick house, which is a part of the present edifice, and the Springfield Friends' meeting was regularly held at this house until a meeting house was erected in 1738, on two acres deeded by him for the purpose in 1703. Bartholomew Coppock was for many years a member of the provincial council, and frequently represented Chester county in the assembly. He married, in 1710, Phœbe, daughter of Robert Taylor, of Springfield, and one of their daughters, Esther, married, in 1741, Seth, son of William and Hannah Pancoast, of Mansfield, Burlington county, West Jersey. Their son, Samuel, who inherited the homestead, married Mary, daughter of John and Rebecca (Davis) Levis, and they were the parents of a son, also named Samuel, who married Tamar, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Bishop, of Upper Providence township, Delaware county. One of their twelve children was Thomas, mentioned above as the father of Mrs. Welles. He and his wife were also the parents of a son, Edwin H.

GEORGE W. BROWN, a highly respected citizen of Wayne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, belongs to one of the oldest families of the Keystone state, a family which for more than two centuries has been numbered among the useful and honored citizens of the youngest but one of the thirteen original colonies.

The founder of the Brown family in America was connected with the family of William Penn, the "courtly Quaker," whose record as the founder and governor of the colony of Pennsylvania places him among the benefactors of the human race. The Browns are also connected with the family of "Randolph of Roanoke," that brilliant and in many respects paradoxical statesman, who boasted that in his veins flowed the blood of the Indian princess, Pocahontas. The Brown family, in the earlier generations, were large land owners in Philadelphia, one of its members being also at one time the proprietor of a saddlery shop in Market street, near Second.

George W. Brown, father of George W. Brown, of Wayne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, followed the trade of a shoemaker in Darby, Pennsylvania, and numbered among his patrons Stephen Girard, who was for many years the richest, and perhaps the most eccentric man in the United States. A sufficient proof of his contradictory character (although many more might be cited) is furnished by the fact that in providing for the founding of Girard College, an institution the benevolent work of which can hardly be measured, he stipulated that no ecclesiastic, irrespective of denomination, should, while the college remained in existence, be admitted under any pretext whatever within its walls. In politics Mr. Brown was a zealous and active Democrat, exerting himself greatly in the interests of his party. He was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he was a class leader. He married Elizabeth Kates, and was the father of five children, two of whom are living: Thomas Howard, and George W., mentioned at length hereinafter. The immediate cause of Mr. Brown's death, which occurred in 1845, was a sudden and violent fit of excitement which, in his weakened physical condition, he was unable to endure.

George W. Brown, son of George W. and Elizabeth (Kates) Brown, was born May 27, 1843, in Darby, Pennsylvania, and while still very young, engaged in the trade of a butcher, but did not follow it long owing to the outbreak of the Civil war. It was in Philadelphia that Mr. Brown followed his trade, and it was in that city that he enlisted, July 4, 1861, in the Twenty-ninth Pennsylvania Regiment. During his period of military service Mr. Brown took part in no fewer than fifty engagements, one of the most notable being the battle of Lookout Mountain, where his regiment was the first to open the fight and ascended the mountain to a greater height than any other body of troops engaged in the conflict. At Gettysburg, he had a narrow escape from capture. Sergeant-major William Letfort had been shot in both legs and was unable to move. Mr. Brown was helping him from the field, and his enforced retirement from the scene of action took place just in time to prevent his being made prisoner. The achievements of the regiment to which Mr. Brown belonged, in this battle, have been commemorated by the erection of two granite tablets, Mr. Brown having served as a member of the committee authorized to purchase them. In December, 1863, Mr. Brown re-enlisted, his regiment having been the first to respond to the president's call for troops to re-enlist as veterans. At Resaca, Georgia, Mr. Brown was shot three times and sustained the loss of an arm.

After the war Mr. Brown returned to business, and his old employer offered to establish him in the trade of a butcher, but was deterred by the fear that the loss of Mr. Brown's arm would render it impossible for him to perform the duties which would be required of him. It was soon proved, however, that Mr. Brown's energy and ability were sufficient to compensate for the physical loss which he had sustained. For having obtained work at the Philadelphia navy-yard, he was reported and censured by superiors for performing an excess of work. June 1, 1869, Mr. Brown was appointed gatekeeper at the Philadelphia mint, where he was afterward made head doorkeeper. In 1885 he went to reside in Wayne, Pennsylvania, and in 1888 purchased the Wayne Times, which he has since edited, publishing it simultaneously at the three places, Wayne, Berwin and Ardmore, all of Pennsylvania.

A striking evidence of the high esteem in which Mr. Brown is held in the community was given when he applied for the office of postmaster, his petition being signed by ninety per cent. of his fellow citizens. He received his first appointment to the office in November, 1897, and on January 10, 1902, was appointed for the third time. When his third application was presented two thousand four hundred out of two thousand five hundred people signed the petition.

Mr. Brown holds the office of recording secretary in the military organization to which he belongs. He takes a practical interest in everything which effects the welfare of the community, having been the chief organizer of the Wayne Public Safety Association. Although distinguished by his public-spirited earnestness as a citizen, Mr. Brown could never be induced to accept office, believing that he could better discharge of his duties untrammelled by political obligations. He was one of the founders of St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal church, of which he is an active member.

Mr. Brown married, December 24, 1865, Anna West Dubersee, both of whose parents were natives of Wales. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are the parents of two children: William T., who married Carrie Davis, of Wayne, and has two children, viz: William and Eugenia; and Annie E. Brown.

ISAAC BRIGGS, of Broomall, Pennsylvania, is the representative of a family that has long been connected with this section of the State, and whose interests have been interwoven with the development and progress of the county. The first ancestor to settle here was Richard Briggs, who came to this country from Ireland, settled near Media, and for the greater part of his life was engaged in the occupation of farming. He was also an active participant during the progress of the Revolutionary war. He was united in marriage to Miss Jones.

Richard Briggs, grandfather of Isaac Briggs, was born near Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and after his education was completed, he devoted his time and attention to the cultivation of the soil. He enlisted as a private in the war of 1812, and displayed great bravery on the field of battle. He was united in marriage to Miss Amy Morrall, and the following named children were born to them: Isaac, Richard, William,

Isaac Briggs

Emily, Jane, Mary, and Amelia Briggs. The father of these children lived to a mature old age.

William Briggs, father of Isaac Briggs, was also born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and his boyhood days were spent in attendance at the village school, and in assisting his father with the management of his estate. When quite a young boy he learned the stone mason trade, which he followed for a number of years; later he purchased property near Media, engaged in mercantile business and by his ability and industry gained an enviable reputation as a progressive and reliable merchant. Honor and integrity were synonymous with his name, and he enjoyed the respect, confidence and high regard of all who knew him. He married Miss Hannah Morrall, daughter of Abel Morrall, of Marple, Pennsylvania, and their children were: Isaac, Richard, Rachel, Amy, William, Hannah and Mary Briggs. Mr. Briggs died at the age of sixty years, and his wife passed away in 1898, at the age of eighty years.

HOME OF ISAAC BRIGGS.

Isaac Briggs, eldest son of William and Hannah Briggs, was born near Media, Pennsylvania, February 2, 1833. He acquired his education in the common schools of the town which he attended until he was sixteen years of age, after which he learned the trade of mason. He worked at his occupation for a number of years in his native town, and in 1861 he located on a farm in Newtown, where he remained until 1865, when he purchased his present farm, which consists of one hundred and fourteen acres which he has cultivated to a high state of perfection and supplied with commodious farm buildings. In his political affiliations, Mr. Briggs is a firm supporter of the measures adopted by the Republican party, and he has faithfully served the township in the capacity of auditor for a number of years. He is a director of the Charter National Bank of Media, and also of the Delaware Trust and Savings Association.

17 x

On May 5, 1858, Mr. Briggs married Miss Sarah C. Morrall, who was born in Media, Pennsylvania, September 13, 1834, a daughter of William Morrall, and their children are: Susan Elva, born March 9, 1859, died March 7, 1870; Alice W., born August 12, 1860, became the wife of William M. Power, and their children are: Susan W., Sarah B., and Isaac B. Power; Morrall, born February 3, 1862, died in infancy; Penrose, born August 13, 1864, died March 2, 1872; Sally R., born January 5, 1867, became the wife of Charles Coppel, of Media, and their children are: Alice B., and Isaac Coppel; Oscar B., born September 12, 1870, died in 1872; and Maud Ella, born July 3, 1875, died October 17, 1875. Mr. Briggs is upright and honorable in all his transactions, easily wins the confidence and friendship of those with whom he is brought in contact, and no man in the community is held in higher regard or more richly deserves the esteem of his fellow townsmen.

JOSEPH L. QUIGLEY, justice of the peace of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a well known representative of its agricultural interests, was born in that township, February 6, 1855.

Louis Quigley, father of Joseph L. Quigley, was born in the township of Bethel, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, November 11, 1825. In the schools near his home Mr. Quigley obtained a good practical education, and at an early age removed to Concord township where he learned the trade of shoemaker. He continued working at this occupation until 1870, when he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits in which he was very successful, possessing a good knowledge of everything essential for success in the tilling of the soil. Mr. Quigley's interests in the affairs of the town were of that practical character that prompted him to put forth every effort for the good of the community and for the adoption of measures which would lead to its upbuilding and substantial improvement. He was united in marriage to Eliza A. Fisher, daughter of Joseph Fisher of Chester county, Pennsylvania, the ceremony being performed in 1849. Their children were: William H., died in childhood; Martha W., wife of George Paling; they are the parents of two children; Annie, wife of Lorenzo T. Hunter, who have one child; Frank H., married Annie Potter and three children have been born to them; Mary E., deceased, was the wife of James Hughes and mother of two children; Wesley H. married married Rose Devonshire, and they have one child; Beulah E., wife of George T. Aikens, and two children have been born to them; Robert C., married Gretta Perry; Edward I. married Mary Miller, and they are the parents of two children; Howard W., married Josephine Welsh; and Joseph L. Quigley.

Joseph L. Quigley attended the public schools of the neighborhood, and through the summer months assisted in the development and cultivation of his father's farm, so that when he began farming on his own account he was well qualified for the work by practical experience. He is the owner of a fine farm of ninety acres in Concord township and also owns the old Quigley homestead in Concord township, which has been in the possession of the family since its original purchase from William Penn. He has a dairy of twenty-five cows; his place is well improved, neat and thrifty in appearance and is furnished with all modern conveniences and accessories. He is widely known throughout the county and enjoys the respect and consideration that are merited by every man of worth and integrity. In politics Mr. Quigley is a staunch Republican, and has served his township in the capacity of school director, auditor, constable and supervisor, and at the present time (1903) is the incumbent of the office of justice of the peace. He is actively affiliated with the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and the Grange.

On December 21, 1881, Mr. Quigley married Elizabeth Place, daughter of John B. Place, who is engaged in farming interests near West Chester, Pennsylvania, and by this union the following named children were born: Mary J. and Elizabeth Quigley, who reside with their parents. The parents of this family are faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

CHARLES C. BILES, an experienced and prosperous farmer and highly respected citizen of New London township, Chester county, is a grandson of Charles Biles, who was born in Bucks county, where he was educated in the common schools, and then engaged in farming. Subsequently he moved to Chester county, where he settled in New London township, on a tract of land which is still in the possession of his descendants. His marriage took place after his arrival in Chester county.

Samuel Biles, son of Charles Biles, was born in 1804, on the homestead, and received his education in the common schools. His life was passed on the home farm, where from early youth he was constantly engaged in agricultural pursuits. His character was such as to command the highest respect of his townsmen, by whom he was several times elected to fill the office of supervisor. In politics he was a Republican. He married Ann, daughter of John Clawson, a farmer of Bucks county, and they were the parents of the following children: Pamela J., who died unmarried; Sarah F., who married Davis Spencer, and was the mother of seven children; John P., who married Ihebe Spencer, and has three children; Amos T., who married Rebecca Kennedy, who has since died, leaving one child; Charles C., mentioned at length hereinafter; and Anna M. Biles. Mrs. Biles, the mother of this family, died in 1887, and her husband survived her two years, passing away in 1889.

Charles C. Biles, son of Samuel and Ann (Clawson) Biles, was born in 1839, on the homestead. He received his primary education in the public schools, afterward attending the New London Academy. After leaving school, being convinced that the life of a farmer for which he possessed an inherited taste, would be more congenial to him than any other, he settled on the homestead where he has since remained. His knowledge of agriculture, joined to many years of practical experience, has caused him to be regarded as an authority among the farmers of the township. Although constantly mindful of the duties of a good citizen, and ever ready to aid to the utmost of his ability any project which in his judgment has a tendency to promote the welfare of the community, Mr. Biles has always steadily refused to accept any of the various offices which he has been urged by his neighbors to assume. His political principles are those of a sincere and earnest Republican.

Mr. Biles is unmarried. His sister, Miss Anna M. Biles, shares his home, and presides over the household.

MOORE FAMILY. The progenitor of the American branch of the Moore family was Charles Moore, who emigrated to this country from England in 1682, and was granted a tract of land in what is now known as Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, by William Penn, the founder of that state. Here he established a home, in which members of the Moore family have since resided, the sixth generation now occupying the homestead. Charles Moore was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Baker, and they are the parents of the following named children: William, born January 1, 1739, died in September, 1768; Hannah, born February 24, 1741, became the wife of Mr. Godfrey; Margaret, born June 4, 1744, became the wife of William Brooks; Rachel, born August 4, 1746, became the wife of Mr. Halstine.

Philip Moore, son of Charles and Elizabeth Moore, was born March 18, 1749, and was united in marriage to Miss Mary Morris, and their children were: Hannah; Elizabeth, who married Joseph Vodg; William, united in marriage to Miss Mary Massey; Jane; John M., and Phoebe Moore, who became the wife of John Worthington. After the death of his wife Mr. Moore contracted an alliance with Miss Mary Jones, and their son, Alexander H., was born January 22, 1805, died September 8, 1807.

John M. Moore, son of Philip and Mary Moore, was born February 26, 1781, and married Miss Elizabeth Jones, who was born May 25, 1790, a daughter of Hugh Jones. Their marriage was solemnized November 12, 1807, and their children were: Philip, born February 27, 1808; Charles, born February 11, 1810; Mary, born August 16, 1812; William, born February 27, 1815; Phoebe M., born March 3, 1817; John M., M. D., born July 9, 1819; Hannah, born February 9, 1822; H. Jones, born February 7, 1824; J. Hunter, born April 22, 1826; Elizabeth J., born May 22, 1828; and Margaret B., born December 5, 1830. Of these children Phoebe M. and Elizabeth J. still survive. John M. Moore died March 18, 1865, in the eighty-fifth year of his age. After his death the homestead reverted to his eldest son, Philip Moore.

Philip Moore, eldest son of John M. and Elizabeth Moore, was born February 27, 1808, and married Miss Hannah Hale, who was born October 8, 1817, a daughter of Samuel Hale, who was a native of New Jersey. Their children were: Sarah Jane, born September 11, 1837, and in 1867 was united in marriage to George F. Black; her decease occurred in 1893; Charles, born September 21, 1839; Sophia Hale, born November 6, 1841, now the widow of Alexander Johnson; John Morris, born February 9, 1844, died July 25, 1882; Samuel Hale, born November 7, 1847; Philip, born March 27, 1852; George William, born September 10, 1855; James Hunter, born July 21, 1858. The father of these children died in 1892; his wife died the same week and year, and they were both interred in the same grave.

Philip Moore, son of Philip and Hannah Moore, was born March 27, 1852, reared on a farm and resided there until 1872, when he engaged as clerk in the store of Ebenezer W. Curtis, of Maple, where he remained until March 21, 1875. The following three years were spent on the old homestead, and then in partnership with his brother, Samuel H. Moore, established a general store at Broomall. This connection continued until 1881, when Philip purchased his brother's interest in the store and has since conducted it alone. He is an enterprising, progressive man, possessing determined energy and resolute will, and he carries forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes. He was appointed postmaster of the town of Broomall in the spring of 1878, and so faithfully has he performed his duties that he is still the incumbent of the office. He also served as town clerk from 1878 to 1902. He is courteous, genial and obliging, these qualities render him popular, and therefore his circle of friends is very extensive. On March 21, 1879, Mr. Moore married Miss Lizzie Gertrude Childs, who was born March 14, 1858, where Wayne is now situated, in Radnor township. Three children were born to them: Helen Gertrude, Philip and Helen Ray, the two former named having died in infancy.

NATHAN BROOKE MOORE, a prominent resident of Broomall, Pennsylvania, was born November 29, 1868, a son of Hugh Jones Moore, who was a son of John M. and Elizabeth (Jones) Moore; John M. was a son of Philip and Mary (Morris) Moore, and Philip in turn was a son of Charles Moore.

Hugh Jones Moore, father of Nathan Brooke Moore, was born in Marple township, February 7, 1824. He was reared upon a farm and resided with his parents; his education was acquired in the common schools of the vicinity, and after completing his studies he settled on a portion of the old homestead where he followed agricultural pursuits and erected a commodious residence. On January 7, 1868, Mr. Moore was united in marriage to Miss Anna Rebecca Brooke, daughter of Benjamin and Sabilla (Adams) Brooke, natives of Montgomery county, and direct descendants of an old and respected Pennsylvania family. Their children are: Nathan Brooke, born November 29, 1868; Sabilla Phebe, born February 25, 1870, became the wife of John F. T. Lewis on December 15, 1892, and their children are: Benjamin Jones and Andrew Lindsay Lewis; Anna Mary, born March 20, 1872, and October 14, 1896, she became the wife of Dr. Warren L. Rhodes, D. V. S., of Lansdowne, Pennsylvania; they had three children, Nathan Brooke, died in infancy, Catherine Ott, and Owen Brooke Rhodes; Hannah Brooke, born March 7, 1874. The father of these children died September 11, 1896, and his death was mourned by a host of friends who had known him in life and esteemed him for his sterling worth, his fidelity to duty and adherence to principle.

James Hunter Moore, brother of Hugh Jones Moore, was born April 20, 1826, and acquired an excellent education in the common schools of his native town. In later years he made his home with Hugh Jones Moore, the two brothers being almost inseparable companions. He took a prominent part in all matters that pertained to the welfare and advancement of his town, and his influence had been felt as a strong steady force in the social, moral and industrial movements of the community and he was an important factor in the life of Broomall, Pennsylvania. His death occurred May 16, 1902.

SAMUEL HALE MOORE, of Manoa, Pennsylvania, the third son of the late Philip and Hannah (Hale) Moore, was born in Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, November 7, 1847. He received a good education in the public schools of his native town and after he had finished his studies, he went to Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and in connection with his brother-in-law began farm work and continued this occupation for nine years. In 1879 he went to Broomall, and became associated with his brother Philip in mercantile business, remaining there until 1881, when he sold his interests in the business to his brother and removed to Manoa, Haverford township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he bought a store, and soon secured a lucrative trade.

His success in all business ventures has entitled him to the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens who have elected him to many important offices. He is a director of the West Chester Turnpike and is also a director of the First National Bank of Media. He has served as auditor of the township, and in 1881 received the appointment of postmaster at Manoa, which office he has held since that date.

He was married February 22, 1883, to Mary, the daughter of John and Hannah (Worrell) Leedom. They have two children, J. Leedom, born April 19, 1884, and Marion S., born October 1, 1889.

J. HUNTER EWING, a leading business man of Philadelphia, residing in Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, belongs to one of the old families of the state, the founder of the American branch having emigrated from Scotland in the year 1716. It is possible that the reason of this ancestor for leaving his native land lay in the fact that he was one of the adherents of the unfortunate house of Stuart, whose disastrous attempt, in 1715, under the leadership of the Pretender (or James the Third, as he was styled by his followers), to regain possession of the British throne, resulted in the loss of many valuable lives and the banishment or voluntary exile of some of the best families in the Kingdom. The emigrant ancestor of the Hunter family settled at Villa Nova, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. The house built by himself is the home of the present representative of the family, whose grandmother was Jane Hunter, and her father bought and settled on the place at Villa Nova in 1753.

Maskell Ewing, the grandfather of J. Hunter Ewing, was a well known lawyer who, for years, filled the office of mayor of Trenton, and was also for a considerable period a member of the New Jersey legislature.

Maskell Ewing, father of J. Hunter Ewing, graduated from West Point in the class of 1831, and was an officer in the United States artillery. He was also a noted engineer officer, being one of those who built the aqueduct at Washington in 1840. He married Cornelia Lansdale, of Havre de Grace, Maryland, whose mother was a daughter of General Moylan, a major-general in the Revolutionary war, and who served on Washington's staff. Maskell Ewing died in 1850, and his widow is still living at the age of eighty-three years.

J. Hunter Ewing, son of Maskell and Cornelia (Lansdale) Ewing, was born in Alexandria, Virginia, and lives in the house in which four generations of his ancestors had first seen the light, and which is now his own residence. He attended school for six years in West Chester, and was also a student at the Polytechnic College. Early in his business career he formed a connection with the old-established firm of Townsend, Whelen & Co., bankers and stock brokers of Philadelphia, and has maintained this connection for twenty years, having been for the last sixteen years a member of the firm. Mr. Ewing is not only prominent in the business circles of Philadelphia, but is active in the affairs of Radnor township, having served for six years on the school board. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, in which he holds the office of warden.

Mr. Ewing married in December, 1880, Hannah C., daughter of Henry Whelen. One child has been born to them, a daughter named Amy.

JACOB EBRIGHT, prominently identified with the agricultural and political interests of the town of Cartertown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born May 20, 1825, in the town of Villagegreen, Pennsylvania, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Ebright.

Jacob Ebright, father of Jacob Ebright, was a native of New Jersey, and acquired his educational advantages in the common school of his neighborhood. After attaining young manhood he removed his place of residence to Marcus Hook, Pennsylvania, purchased a farm and the remainder of his life was devoted to the cultivation of the same. He was an active participant of the war of 1812, and served his country with bravery and loyalty. He was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Mace, and eight children were born to them, three of whom are now living. Mr. Ebright died in 1843, and his wife also passed away in the same year.

Jacob Ebright was a student in the local schools of Villagegreen, where he acquired an excellent literary education, and his youth and early manhood were spent in the occupation of farming. In 1858 he purchased his present farm which consists of fifty-two acres, and the success which has attended his efforts is due to his thorough experience of the vocation, and his energy, ability and good management. His well cultivated farm with its ample and commodious buildings stands as an excellent monument to his perseverance and thrift. In his political views he adheres to the Democratic party and is an earnest advocate of its distinctive principles. On this ticket he was elected school director of the town and for eighteen years was the incumbent of that position; he also acted in the capacity of supervisor and president for a period of eight years, and has always taken a keen and active interest in all worthy enterprises.

Mr. Ebright was united in marriage to Miss Mary Ann Ward, a daughter of Elijah Ward, and the following named children were born to them: Joseph W., associated with his father in the management of the farm; Abraham; Mary Ann; Manda and Frank Ebright. The mother of these children died in 1880, survived by her husband, who is in the enjoyment of excellent health, notwithstanding his advanced years.

JOHN S. FREEMANN, a well known lawyer of Philadelphia, residing in Wayne, Delaware county, belongs to a German family which has been for more than half a century represented in the United States.

John Freemann, father of John S. Freemann, was born in Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, and came to America in 1848, that year so memorable for revolutions on the continent of Europe. He settled in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he followed the occupation of a farmer. He was a member of the Lutheran church. His death took place in 1891.

John S. Freemann, son of John Freemann, was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he was educated in the local schools, subsequently becoming a student in Lafayette College, from which he graduated in the class of 1876. He selected for his profession the practice of the law, and was admitted to the bar in Philadelphia in 1881. He is also a member of the bar of Montgomery and Delaware counties. He was engaged in general practice until several years ago, when he devoted his entire time to the business of several large corporations for whom he was general counsel.

For a period of eleven years Mr. Freemann has been an active member of the Wayne Presbyterian church. He is ever ready to devote himself to the utmost of his power to the advancement of the public welfare, having been for six years president of the Wayne Public Safety Association.

Mr. Freemann married, in 1876, Mary, daughter of the Rev. Henry Graybill, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Their family consists of four children: Edith G., Anna M., Buena V. and J. Edward.

CHARLES TEMPLE, deceased, for many years a prominent factor in the agricultural and political affairs of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he was the owner of a large and well cultivated farm of one hundred and twelve acres, was born in Pennsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 4 mo., 1, 1836, and is a son of Norris and Susan L. (Smith) Temple.

Norris Temple, father of Charles Temple, was a son of Edward and Sidney Hill Temple. Edward Temple was a farmer in Pennsbury township, was a consistent member of the Society of Friends, and of good social and moral character. He had by his union in marriage an only child, Norris Temple, who was born and reared to manhood on the Temple homestead in Pennsbury township. He was born 5 mo., 2, 1808, and died 3 mo., 23, 1872. His wife, Susan L. (Smith) Temple, was born 11 mo., 12, 1806, and died 11 mo., 13, 1891. They were the parents of six children, namely: Edward, who married Mary Gunton; Charles; George B., who married Lydia Marshall; Sidney; Mary A.; and Jane B. Temple; neither of the three last named had married. Norris Temple was a farmer by occupation. Both he and his wife were members of the Society of Friends.

Charles Temple obtained his educational advantages in the Westtown boarding school, and after completing his studies he turned his attention to farming. Subsequently he purchased a tract of land in Concord township, which he devoted to general farming and dairying and his well cultivated fields and dairy of forty cows yielded him a handsome income. In his political affiliations Mr. Temple was a Republican, broad and liberal in his views, and for a number of years served his township in the capacity of supervisor, performing the duties of the office in such a manner as to win the approval and approbation of the citizens of the community. In his religious belief he was a member of the Society of Friends.

On 3 mo., 4, 1869, Mr. Temple married Philena Marshall, daughter of Thomas and Emily (Paxson) Marshall, th.: former being a native of Concord township, Delaware county, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Mr. Marshall and his wife, Emily (Paxson) Marshall, a daughter of Jacob and Mary Paxson, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, were the parents of two children: Philena, widow of Charles Temple; and Mary, wife of Alban Harvey and mother of three children: Evans, Emily, and Edmund S. Harvey. Mr. and Mrs. Temple were the parents of the following named children: 1. Mary M., born 3 mo., 28, 1870, died 4 mo., 6, 1870; 2. Edward Brinton, born 8 mo., 28, 1871, married Lucy F. Bartram on 10 mo., 17, 1895, and they have one child, Charles, born 11 mo., 17, 1896; 3. William Paxson, born 6 mo., 15, 1873; 4. Horace, born 11 mo., 10, 1874; 5. Jacob Paxson, born 11 mo., 18, 1880, married, 5 mo., 10, 1902, Ada Underhill. Charles Temple, father of these children, died in the year 1892, survived by his widow, who resides on the old homestead in the township of Concord, respected and esteemed by all who have the honor of her acquaintance.

WILLIAM WATKIN. The Watkin family has been long established in the historic old county of Delaware, Pennsylvania, and its members are well known and highly respected citizens. For the purpose of this biography we shall begin with Lewis Knoll, who was the maternal great-grandfather of our subject, and Enoch Watkin, who was the grandfather of our subject. The latter married Hannah Knoll, and their son, Lewis Watkin, was born in Haverford township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He learned the milling trade on the Wissahickon creek, near Philadelphia, with Jacob Wise, and about 1826 he came to Upper Darby township. Here he purchased the old Nathan Sellers mill property, and for a number of years conducted a successful trade. He died March 9, 1870. His wife, Rachel (Moore) Watkin, daughter of William Moore, died in 1872. During the latter years of their lives they were regular attendants of the Swedenborgian church. The last named parents had two children, Mary, who died at an early age, and William.

William Watkin, was born in Upper Darby, March 21, 1833, and after the usual preliminary preparation in the public schools began to learn the business of a miller with his father. He worked in this under-capacity until he became of age, and then on the retirement of his father he assumed entire control of the mill. He was very successful in his business transactions, but close attention to work impaired his health so that in 1870 he was forced to lease his mill and retire from active life. Previous to this he had bought a nice farm property, consisting of a portion of the old Sellers place, and he has since found enough to do in the management of this to escape the tedium of idleness, which is abhorrent to one of his disposition.

Mr. Watkins was first married to Miss Mary Shoester, a daughter of Jacob and Phebe Shoester, by whom he had four children: Mary Emma married Frank T. Johnston, and their two children are Sally and Mary; Sally P., the wife of Harry Dubbs, had three children, Clara, Bertha, and Fanny; an only surviving son of this union was Lewis K., who married Alverda Lister, to whom were born William and Harry; Clara married Lewis W. Zell, and Anna E. and Maud are their children. For his second helpmate on life's journey Mr. Watkin chose a sister of his first wife, Phebe, and Frank Garfield Watkin is the only one born of this union.

Mr. Watkin has been particularly interested in the progress of education in his township, and with the exception of one year has had a continuous term of thirty years on the board of education of Upper Darby township. He is one of the few surviving charter members of the Senior Order of the United American Mechanics, No. 204. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion he is an adherent of the comforting and ennobling doctrines of the Swedenborgian church.

JOHN WESLEY CLYMER, retired farmer and prominent citizen of Llanerch, Delaware county, was born in Doylestown township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, June 8, 1838, and the son of Henry and Hester (Meredith) Clymer. He received his education in the public schools of the neighborhood, at the same time assisting upon the farm until his marriage.

At the time he came to Upper Darby, Delaware county, and February 18, 1865, he enlisted for a year in the Second Regiment, Pennsylvania Cavalry, with which he served until the close of the war, being honorably discharged May 23, of that same year. During the time he was in the army he was stationed at Camp Cadwalader, and was detailed to act as nurse in one of the hospitals, being in full charge of the ward. One of the sad recollections of that sorrowful time which remains with Mr. Clymer is of one week when he buried twenty-one of his men who died of what was called spotted fever. On his return from service he engaged in the milk business and later commenced dairy farming at Llanerch, continuing it with marked success until 1900, when he sold his interest to his son-in-law. In 1895 he erected his present residence at Llanerch, and has one of the most attractive places on the Darby and Radnor road. Fraternally he belongs to the orders of Odd Fellows and United American Mechanics, and is senior of the Golden Eagles. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and his religious affiliations are with the Methodist church. His standing is of the very best in the community in which he has made his home for so many years, and he has many friends among the residents of this county.

On January 16, 1861, Mr. Clymer was married to Miss Sarah W. Wagner, born December 6, 1840, a daughter of William and Mary (Williams) Wagner. One child was born of this union, Mary Emma, born February 18, 1862; she married Wilmer J. Fielding, and has three children, Howard, Elsie and Emma. Mrs. Clymer was one in a family of seven children, namely: Sarah W., Emma, Elizabeth, Amanda, Catherine, Lottie and Henry.

Henry Clymer, father of our subject, was a son of John and Rebecca (Wilgus) Clymer, and one in a family of ten children, namely: Mary, Elizabeth, Margorie, Sarah, Jacob, Benjamin, Henry, Martha, Richard and Thomas. Hester Clymer, the mother of our subject, is a daughter of Hugh and Phœbe (Bradshaw) Meredith, and one of a family of six children, namely: Moses, Aaron, Simon, Harriet, Hester and Hannah. Henry and Hester Clymer had eight children, as follows: Mary, who married Tobias Durney, and to whom were born four children; Sarah who married John Jacoby, and to whom were born two children; Meredith, who married Elizabeth Stagner, and to whom were born three children; Harriet, unmarried, who died at the age of twenty-eight years; John Wesley, who is our subject; Matilda, who married John Wilkinson, and to whom were born five children; Sophia, who married Ira Hyde, and to whom was born one son; Alfred, who was killed at the battle of Fair Oaks, Virginia, during the Civil war, and is buried at Arlington Heights cemetery.

JAMES VERNER, one of the highly respected citizens of Garretford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, September 22, 1848, and is a son of Matthew and Jane (Young) Verner.

In 1874 Mr. Verner emigrated to this country, landing in Philadelphia, where he secured a position in the zoological gardens as gardener, and where he remained for six years, studying the customs of his new home, and adding to the knowledge he had acquired in his native land. Owing to his original ideas and natural taste for landscape gardening, Mr. Verner's skill has always been in demand, and after he left his first position until 1886, he was employed by several of the leading citizens of Philadelphia, to beautify their grounds and attend to their green-houses.

In 1886 he went with the late A. J. Drexel to take care of his summer home Runnymede, at Lansdowne, in the township of Upper Darby, remaining with him until 1895, when he purchased his present property of the Leighton heirs. This consisted of one acre, one-half of which he now has under glass, divided into four houses, which he devotes exclusively to the propagation of roses. In 1902 Mr. Verner added two acres more land to his original purchase, which he proposes to use with his establishment. This plant is thoroughly equipped with steam heating appliance of fifty-horse power, and as he grows only rare and very desirable varieties, which he places upon the market at reasonable prices, the demand for his product is steady and increasing in volume.

Mr. Verner was married to Maggie Crozier, daughter of John and Mary (Rowland) Crozier, of Ireland, and they have two living children: James Alexander and Daisy. Mr. Verner is a first-class example of what can be accomplished through energy and thrift, combined with a natural taste for the business in question, and his success is well merited. He stands very well in the community, and has made many friends who esteem him for his numerous excellent qualities.

RICHARD LLOYD JONES, JR., one of the prosperous men of Upper Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born January 6, 1852, and is a son of the venerable Richard Lloyd Jones, of Upper Darby township, the latter of whom was born in Darby, September 22, 1820, and he in turn is a son of William and Martha (Lloyd) Jones. William Jones is a son of Robert E. and Ann (Garrett) Jones, and Martha Lloyd is a daughter of Robert Lloyd. William and Martha Jones had a family of eight children, as follows: Anna, deceased; Mary; Elizabeth; Martha, deceased; William, deceased; Richard L., Sr., Robert and Marshall, deceased.

Richard L. Jones, Sr., was educated in the public and private schools of Darby and Upper Darby, after which he engaged in farming on his father's farm, remaining at home until he was twenty-one years of age, when with his brother, William, he went to Montgomery county, and commenced farming for himself. After a year, still in partnership, they took charge of another farm and continued their operations together for four years, and then dissolved their partnership. In 1847 he took charge of the old Jones homestead and operated it as a general farm until 1886, when he turned the property over to his son, Richard Lloyd Jones, Jr., and located at Springton on a much smaller farm, starting in the dairy business. In 1900 he retired from all business and now enjoys a well earned competence.

Richard Lloyd Jones, Sr., married Mary Fryburg, of Delaware county, a daughter of John and Eliza (Phillips) Fryburg, and eight children were born of this union, namely: 1. Martha, who married Van Leer E. Bond, and they have four children, Elizabeth L., Richard J., Van Leer E., and Marion B.; 2. William H., single; 3. Richard L., Jr., our subject; 4. Eliza F., unmarried; 5. J. Walter, who married Agnes McLeod, and they have four children, Elsie Russell, J. Walter, Mildred M., and R. Lloyd; 6. Howard Erwin, married Georgie A. Muth, and they have three children, Willie H., Anna Gertrude and Howard E.; 7. Mary A., deceased; 8. Marshall, unmarried.

During the Civil war the father enlisted in the Sixteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was under Colonel Wilcox and in Captain Amos Bonsall's company. While only out for six weeks, the company took an active part in the battle of Antietam. In politics he has always been a staunch Republican and Prohibitionist, and by birthright is a member of the Society of Friends. Although somewhat advanced in years, he is in full possession of his faculties and is a bright and pleasing conversationalist.

Richard Lloyd Jones, Jr., married Sophia Amanda Owen, a daughter of Jones and Sarah (Bowen) Owen, who were the parents of ten children, namely: 1. Mary, married William H. H. Garrett; 2. Rachel, married George McDermond; 3. Samuel, married Sarah Harris; 4. Rebecca, married William Snyte; 5. Sophia, married Richard L. Jones, Jr.; 6. Sarah Jane, married Jesse Able; 7. Elizabeth, unmarried; 8. Joseph, unmarried; 9. Hannah, married William H. Swain; 10. Penelope, deceased.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lloyd Jones, Jr., are as follows: Mary Fryburg, born December 22, 1876; Sarah Jennie Jones, born August 7, 1879; William Henry Jones, born January 28, 1881, now deceased, and Richard Lloyd Jones (3), born January 29, 1884; Eliza Fryburg Jones, born April 3, 1888; and Elwood Owen Jones, born December 10, 1889.

Mr. Jones is one of the prosperous farmers of this locality, and enjoys the respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends. His life has been spent in farming, and he brings to bear upon his operations a thorough knowledge of all the details of the work, combined with a genuine liking for his calling, and with these two qualifications success has attended his efforts.

HORACE S. GRIFFITH. The record of Mr. Griffith is that of a man who has worked his way upward to a position among the substantial men of the community in which he lives. His life has been one of industry and perseverance, and the systematic and honorable methods he has followed have won him the support and confidence of many.

His father, Hayes P. Griffith, was born at Wawa, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in June, 1829. After obtaining a common school education he went to work in the woolen mills at Rockdale, where, as the result of his efficient service, he was promoted to various positions until he eventually became one of the superintendents of the works. At the present time, he is quietly living retired from the active cares of life, surrounded by the comforts that earnest labor has brought to him. When the Civil war swept over the land, Mr. Griffith nobly offered his services to the Union cause, and in 1861 entered the Pennsylvania Reserves, from which, after a five months' service, he was discharged on account of lung trouble. Shortly after his return to his home, however, the Rebels threatened an invasion in this section, and Mr. Griffith mustered together a company of sixty men, which he took to Media, where they were joined by forty more volunteers, and the company went out for five months' service. In his fraternal relations he is a prominent member of the Masonic order. His wife bore the maiden name of Elizabeth France, she being a native of Glen Riddle, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a daughter of William and Dorinda France, a prominent mill owner. This union resulted in the birth of fifteen children, but six of the number died in infancy. Those living are: 1. Dorinda, who became the wife of E. F. Pierson, and they have had five children; 2. J. Frank, who married Mary Andrews and has five children; 3. George, who married Mary Marshall, by whom he has two children; 4. Richard, who married Annie Gunning, by whom he has two children; 5. Hayes P., who married Irene Stringfield and has four children; 6. William E., who married Mary Yost, by whom he has three children; 7. Bessie, the wife of Frank E. Lees; 8. Charles, who married Isabella Webster; and 9. Horace S. Griffith.

Horace S. Griffith, of the last named family, was born in Aston township, Delaware county, February 24, 1855. His educational privileges during his youth were extremely limited, for at the early age of nine years he was obliged to enter the woolen mills, as his father was then absent in the defense of his country, and it was necessary for the son to assist in his own maintenance. Later, however, he was enabled to enter a school in Philadelphia, and on his return to his home he engaged in the weaving business, soon rising to the position of loom superintendent. In 1884 he purchased a paper route, which, under his careful management steadily grew in size, but eventually he abandoned that occupation and engaged in the sale of stoves and furniture, this still continuing to occupy his time and attention. He has, however, added many other lines to this industry, and is now the owner of a large warehouse, and in company with his son is engaged in the undertaking business. In 1903 Mr. Griffith became a member of a corporation, organized for the purpose of manufacturing tapestries, table covers, etc., under the name of the Penn Tapestry Company, at Glen Riddle, and is now engaged in that pursuit, giving employment to about fifty skilled operatives. Mr. Griffith occupies an enviable position among the men of prominence in the county of his nativity, and in political, social and business circles he is widely and favorably known, his salient characteristics being such as to command confidence and respect, and awaken the favorable consideration of all with whom he comes in contact. He gives his political allegiance to the principles of Democracy, and has been honored with the position of school director and tax collector. He is a member of Concord Lodge, F. & A. M.; Benevolent Lodge, I. O. O. F.; Lemmi Tribe of Red Men; Chester Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and Rockdale Council, Jr. Order of United American Mechanics.

Harace S. Griffith

Mr. and Mrs. Griffith are consistent members of Cavalry Protestant Episcopal church at Rockdale, which Mr. Griffith has served as rector's warden for a number of years.

In 1877 Mr. Griffith was united in marriage to Miss Mary F. Bennett, a daughter of Elisha I. and Rachel (Hyde) Bennett, the former a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The children of this union are: Horace B., now married to Miss Ella Bishop; they have one child, Anna Florence; 2. William E., who is founder and editor of the "Rockdale Herald;" he married Ida M. Null, and they have one child, Sarah Stinson; 3. Harry B., who died in infancy; 4. Arthur Brown; 5. Mary Florence; 6. Richard Ingram; 7. Rachel; 8. Atwood, died in infancy; 9. Herbert H. Griffith.

WALTER T. HIBBERD, one of the leading young business men of Ward, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a representative member of a family whose settlement in Chester county antedates by some months the arrival of William Penn. The pioneer ancestor of the family was Josiah Hibberd, a native of England, who purchased an extensive tract of land in Pennsylvania April 5, 1682, took up his residence in Darby township, Delaware county, married, November 9, 1698, Ann Bonsall, and they are the ancestors of nearly if not all the Hibberds in the United States, some families of whom spell the name Hibbard.

Thomas F. Hibberd, father of Walter T. Hibberd, was born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, near White Hall, now Bryn Mawr, September 21, 1829, the son of Benjamin Hibberd, a millwright of that locality, who died early in life, leaving a widow and four small children. Thomas F. Hibberd obtained a practical education in the common schools adjacent to his home in Springfield, and after laying aside his text books learned the trade of butcher. He followed this occupation for a short period of time, after which he turned his attention to farming interests, which proved a profitable source of income. He was a self-made man, beginning life on the farm of his relative, Samuel Johnson, at an early age, and by good habits, perseverance and pluck won for himself an enviable position among the residents of the community in which he resided. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Thomson, who was born in 1830, a daughter of Joseph and Jane Thomson, of Willistown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: 1. John H., born in 1854, married Susan Twaddell and five children have been born to them; 2. Mary, born in 1855, who became the wife of Hiram Twaddell, and is now the mother of two children; 3. William, born in 1857, married Adete Haswell, and they are the parents of two children; 4. Norris, born in 1860, married Catherine Watkins, and two children are the issue of this union; 5. Walter, mentioned hereinafter; 6. Laura, born in 1864, unmarried, and resides in Media, Delaware county; 7. Thomas B., born in 1866, married for his first wife, Elizabeth Poole, and one child was born to them; two children have been born of his marriage to his second wife, Minnie (Horner) Hibberd. It is worthy of mention here that the five sons above mentioned weigh in the aggregate over one thousand pounds. Mr. and Mrs. Hibberd were members of the Baptist church, the former named having served as deacon in that faith for a quarter of a century. Mr. Hibberd died in 1901, having survived his wife several years, her death occurring in 1892.

Walter T. Hibberd, fourth son of Thomas F. and Elizabeth Hibberd, was born in Easttown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1862. He received the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of the neighborhood, and since attaining young manhood has taken an active interest in the commercial affairs of his township, being recognized as one of the prominent and public-spirited citizens of the community. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and has been the incumbent of several of the local offices. In religious sentiment he adheres to the doctrines of the Baptist church, and in fraternal matters he is an honored member of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry.

On March 23, 1893, Mr. Hibberd married Hattie B. Poole, of Bethel township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, who was born February 22, 1868, a daughter of C. Wesley and Mary Poole.

CHARLES PLUMMER GRANT was born in Morton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, June 6, 1827, the son of William and Susanna (Worral) Grant, whose family consisted of the following children: James Grant, unmarried; William, who married a Miss Horn; Hannah, married Thomas Pond; Ann, wife of William Wershing; Elizabeth, wife of Isaac Lincoln; Charles Plummer, to be further mentioned below; Sarah (Mrs. Schapley); Susan, wife of Lewis Free; Phœbe, unmarried; Frederick, who married Esther Moore and Joseph, unmarried.

Charles Plummer Grant, a member of the above family, received his education in the public schools of Morton, and upon finishing his studies he entered the employ of the Rev. Dr. Griffith, with whom he remained until old enough to learn a trade, when he was apprenticed to a Mr. Bonsall, of Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, under whose instruction he became proficient in all branches of blacksmithing. Upon mastering his trade, young Grant returned to Morton, where he established business on his own account; here he remained for two years, and in 1843 removed his business to Upper Darby. In 1851 he purchased the property he had up to this time rented, at Llanerch and continued his business with marked success until 1871. He had carried on this one line of trade for so many years that he began to feel rather tired of wielding the hammer, and he looked about for some other occupation which would prove more congenial. He thereupon went to Germantown, where he opened a grocery store which he conducted for two years, at the end of which time he disposed of his interests and returned to Upper Darby, where he bought a farm of sixty-four acres, then owned by Hannah Bacon, and tried his hand at farming. This he carried on until 1881, when he closed it out and retired from active business pursuits. In politics Mr. Grant's views were enlisted on the side of the Republican party. He always attended the Presbyterian church. Mr. Grant's blacksmith establishment is still conducted at the old stand in Llanerch by his son-in-law.

Mr. Grant's wife, Mary Jane (Litzenberg) Grant, was the daughter of Vincent L. and Lydia (Soley) Litzenberg; her father was the son of Jacob L. and Margaret Litzenberg, who had a family of eight children, as follows: John Lit-zenberg, who married Ellen Thomas and had three children, Vincent, who died in infancy, Vincent (2) and Roland; Ann, wife of Charles Hatcher, whose family consisted of eight children: John, M. Force, Sarah, Roxanna, Lillie, Thomas, Jennie and Edward; Sarah, wife of Jonathan Suydam had four children—Lillie, Frank, Eugene and Josephine; Vincent and Eliza, twins; Vincent died in childhood, and Eliza married Sydney Suydam, and had two children, Mary and Charles; James, unmarried; and Edward, who married Susan Litzenberg, and upon her death married Annie Robertson. By his first wife he had one child, John, who died in childhood.

The children of Charles Plummer Grant and Mary Jane, his wife, are as follows: Eliza Ann, who married William Morad; they have no family; Vincent L. died at the age of twenty-nine years; Hannah Elizabeth, wife of David Brooke, has three children—James, and Lida and Annie, twins; Charles Anderson married Rebecca Carpenter, and has two children, William N. and Kate; Charles Anderson, the father, died in his twenty-ninth year; Leonia, died in infancy; and Gurdon Hotchkiss. Charles P. Grant, the father of this family, died January 1, 1889.

Gurdon H. Grant, of Llanerch, Pennsylvania, was educated in the public schools of his native town. He married Mary Corlies, daughter of Thomas and Rachel (Newlin) Corlies, by whom he has three children—Mary Gertrude, William Charles and Corlies.

PATRICK JOSEPH KELLY, one of the leading milkmen of Upper Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a highly respected citizen, was born in county Galway, Ireland, March 13, 1854, and is a son of William and Mary (Lannahan) Kelly, who had a family as follows: Annie, who married Richard Brogan and has six children; Catharine, who married John Kenna, and has two children; Martin, deceased; Nora, who married Daniel Carlin, and has five children; John, who married Ellen Cullinan, and has four children; Maria, unmarried; William, who married Marie Kinney, and they have five children; and Patrick J., who married Sally L. Rigney, who is a daughter of John and Mary (Travers) Rigney, and they have these children, all living, as follows: Mary E., William A., Helen L., Gertrude P., Ignatius B., E. Milton, Aline, John J., Richard, and one child, Pauline, who died in childhood. Mrs. Kelly is one of a family of three children, namely: Kate, unmarried; Mary Ellen, who married John French and has seven children; and Mrs. Kelly.

Patrick Joseph Kelly emigrated to America in November, 1870, and started to work for John Lannahan, with whom he remained two years, and then he removed to Conshohocken, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, engaging in a rolling mill. Tiring of the confinement of this business, he returned to farming, engaging with Nicholas Hart, but in 1875 he started a milk route, in which he is still employed, owning from thirty to thirty-five cows, and selling in the neighborhood of two hundred quarts daily to private patrons. When he first started in the business he rented a farm, but in 1887 he purchased his present home from Catherine Kelly, since which time his business has increased very materially. He has one of the best routes in this part of the township, and all of his time and energy is devoted to his business, so that while he is a good citizen he has not had an opportunity to give much thought to political questions. Mr. Kelly and his family are communicants of the Roman Catholic church, attending services at Haverford. A straightforward business man, honorable in his dealings and hardworking and thrifty, he has steadily advanced in his business and firmly established himself in the confidence of the community, holding his customers for years.

WILLIAM COWAN CLARK, one of the leading grocers of Garrettford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and one of the successful business men of the village, was born in Clifton September 2, 1837, a son of Robert and Christina (Cowan) Clark, and the latter is a daughter of Jonas Cowan.

Robert Clark had the misfortune to lose his parents when he was only seven years of age, and he was bound out to a man in Reading, Pennsylvania, with whom he was to live until he was twenty-one years. During the time of his service the war of 1812 broke out, and Robert's employer was drafted. As he did not wish to go, he offered the boy his freedom and one hundred dollars in money if he would enlist in his stead, and Robert eagerly embraced the chance and served bravely through the war and acquitted himself with honor. Robert Clark had a family of six children, as follows: Morton, John, Charles, Robert, all deceased; Mary, who married George Hoffstittler, and they had two children, viz: Charles, who married Annie Gormly and had no family, and Mary Ann, who married Samuel Griffith and they have five children; and William Cowan Clark.

William Cowan Clark received his early education in the public schools of Darby township and Upper Darby, and at the close of his school days he went to work for Dr. Anderson, with whom he remained three years. At the expiration of that time he engaged with John L. Force, with whom he learned the trade of custom shoe making, and there remained four years and nine months. His next location was in West Philadelphia, where he remained until 1862. He then resided in Reading, Pennsylvania, a short time, later returned to Philadelphia and in 1864 came to Garrettford, Delaware county, where he has since resided the greater part of the time. He was a manufacturer of custom made boots and shoes until 1888, when he embarked in his present enterprise, in which he has met with unqualified success, having one of the leading grocery establishments in the village.

Mr. Clark was married to Bettie Groves, daughter of George and Mary Ann Groves, on January 1, 1860, and they have four children, as follows: Frank, who married Barbara Ehinger, and they have five children—William, Edward, Frank, Russell and Emma; Ella, who married Fred Gretz, and they have four children—Henry, Herbert, Fred and Etna; Mary, who married Harry Snape, and they have one child, Leroy; Maggie, who married Thomas Wooding and they had one child, Clark Wooding. While Mr. Clark has never had sufficient time to take any active part in local politics, in national matters he supports the candidates of the Republican party. Both he and his wife are highly esteemed in the community in which they make their home and are excellent representatives of the best interests of Garrettford.

RICHARD LLOYD JONES, SR., now living retired, and one of the substantial citizens of Upper Darby township, was born in Darby township September 28, 1820, a son of William and Martha (Lloyd) Jones, and a grandson of Robert E. and Ann (Garrett) Jones and Richard Lloyd. William and Martha Jones had a family of eight children as follows: 1. William, who is deceased; 2. Richard, who is our subject; 3. Robert E.; 4. Annie, who is deceased; 5. Mary, L.; 6. Elizabeth G.; 7. Marshall L., who is deceased; and 8. Martha W., who is deceased.

Richard L. Jones was educated in the public and private schools of Darby and Upper Darby, after which he engaged in farming on his father's farm, remaining at home until he was twenty-one years old, when with his brother William he went to Montgomery and commenced farming for himself. After a year, still in partnership, they took charge of another farm and continued their operations together for four years, then dissolved their partnership. In 1847 Richard L. Jones took charge of the old Jones homestead and operated it as a general farm until 1886, when he turned the property over to his son Richard L., Jr., and located at Springton on a much smaller farm, conducting the dairy business. In 1900 he retired from active business and now enjoys a well earned competence.

Richard Lloyd Jones married Mary Fryburg, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of John and Eliza (Phillips) Fryburg, and eight children were born of this union, namely: Martha, married Van Leer E. Bond, and they have four children, viz—Elizabeth L., Richard J., Van Leer E. and Marion E.; William H., single; Richard Lloyd, Jr., who married Sophia Owen, and they have five children, viz—Mary F., S. Jennie, Richard Lloyd (3), Lidie F. and Edwood; Eliza F., unmarried; J. Walter, who married Agnes McLeod, and they have four children, viz—Elsie Russell, J. Walter, Mildred M. and R. Lloyd; Howard Erwin married Georgie A. Muth and they have three children, viz—Willie H., Anna Gertrude and Howard E.; Mary A., deceased, the seventh child in order of birth; Marshall is unmarried. The faithful wife and mother of these children died April 24, 1900.

During the Civil war Richard L. Jones enlisted in the Sixteenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry and was under Col. Wilcox and in Capt. Amos Bonsall's company. While only out for six weeks, the company took an active part in the battle of Antietam. In politics he has always been a staunch Republican and by birthright is a member of the Society of Friends. Although somewhat advanced in years, he is in full possession of his faculties and is a bright and pleasing conversationalist. Throughout the entire community he occupies a high place in the confidence and respect of the people and is a representative of the best interests of the county.

MICHAEL BURNLEY, a prominent agriculturist of Garrettford, Pennsylvania, was born December 2, 1859, in Tuscarora, Upper Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, the grandson of John and Mary Burnley, who were from Yorkshire, England, where the former named was engaged in a blanket manufactory.

George Burnley, father of Michael Burnley, was born December 28, 1804, in Littletown, near Leeds, Yorkshire, England, where his youth was spent. After receiving a limited education in the district school, at an early age he entered a neighboring factory, and after acquiring a thorough knowledge of the business of a manufacturer, came to this country in 1825, and at once located in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. He then entered into the manufacture of carpets in Philadelphia, but this enterprise not proving very successful, he removed to Haverford, rented a mill on Cobb's creek, and began the manufacture of cotton goods. In 1844 he removed to Darby Creek, in Upper Darby township, and erected the Tuscarora Mills, in which he manufactured cotton goods and also spun yarn. Mr. Burnley continued in this line of business until 1861, when, having accumulated a sufficient competence from his many years of labor, he retired from its active management, and was succeeded by his brothers, John and Charles, and his son, George E. Burnley. In politics Mr. Burnley was formerly a Whig, but upon the formation of the Republican party he cast his vote with that body. In religion he was a Swedenborgian, being a member and trustee of that church. On December 31, 1838, he was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Lomas, daughter of James Lomas, of England. Ten children were born to them, five of whom are now living.

1. George E. Burnley, born February 9, 1840, attended the public schools of his native town, and subsequently went to a private school in Media, conducted by Thomas Griffith, where he completed his education. He then assisted his father in the management of his mill, remaining with him until his retirement from business in 1861; he then continued with his two uncles for a short period of time, and upon their retirement he continued the business alone until 1868, when he closed the mill and purchased the farm portion of the property, consisting of twenty-seven acres, on which he now resides. He represents the Delaware County Mutual Fire Insurance Company, also the Penn Mutual Fire Insurance Company of West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He is a Republican in politics, and has served as school director for twenty-three years, and as justice of the peace for eleven years. He married Sarah A. Wilkes, a daughter of the Rev. Thomas Wilkes, of Swansea, Wales.

2. Rev. Charles W. Burnley, married for his first wife, Annie Corson, and they had one son, George Corson Burnley; he was then united in marriage to Miss Updegraph, and three children have been born to them: Lucy, Cloyd and Charles Burnley.

3. Washington Burnley, a resident of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, married for his first wife Anna Rively, and for his second wife he chose Anna Clitick.

4. Michael Burnley, and 5. Alice, wife of Dr. W. A. Fries, of Philadelphia, where she now resides. The father of these children died August 9, 1864, in the sixtieth year of his age.

John Burnley, uncle of Michael Burnley, was born in Littletown, Yorkshire, England, May 14, 1820. After completing his studies he learned the trade of spinner, and on September 12, 1838, left his native country to seek a larger field of labor in America. His first employment was with his brother, George, in the manufactory at Cobb's Creek, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he remained until May 2, 1844, when he removed to Darby Creek, Delaware county, and became a partner with his brother in the manufacture of jeans. He then entered into business relations with George Mallison and George Gladhill, under the firm name of Burnley & Co., removed to Lenni, rented the Parkmount Mills, and began the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods. In 1870 he retired from the active pursuits of a business life, but two years later, together with George Mallison and Francis Butterworth, resumed his business relations under the style of Burnley & Co., which, in July, 1878, was changed to the "Parkmount Cotton and Woolen Company, Limited." Mr. Burnley acted in the capacity of secretary and treasurer of the company until his death, which occurred November 26, 1883. Mr. Burnley was twice married, his first wife having been Maria Lomas, daughter of James and Mary Lomas. Mrs. Burnley died August 1, 1881, and Mr. Burnley then married Alice Lomas, sister of his first wife, the ceremony being performed March 1, 1883.

Charles Burnley, uncle of Michael Burnley, was born in Levisage, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, June 21, 1808. He obtained his literary education in the common schools of his vicinity, and later entered a blanket manufactory, where he learned the trade of spinner. He devoted his attention to this line of business in his native country until 1842, when he came to this country and at once settled in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. For two years he was engaged in spinning with his brother, John, after which he removed to Upper Darby and pursued his vocation in connection with his brother, George. At a later date the three brothers, George, John and Charles, formed a co-partnership for the manufacture of cotton goods, which was continued until 1865, when Charles purchased a farm in Middletown township, to which he devoted his entire attention. Mr. Burnley was an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and interested in all movements for the advancement and spiritual growth of the community. In 1838 he married Miss Susanna Woodcock, a daughter of James and Mary Woodcock, of Hightown, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England. Mr. Burnley died October 13, 1881, aged seventy-four years.

Michael Burnley, son of George and Hannah (Lomas) Burnley, obtained his preliminary education in the public schools of his native town, and this was supplemented by a three years' course in Swarthmore College, but owing to ill health he was forced to return home. He then attended the West Chester Normal School, and for two seasons was a student at the Bryant and Stratton Commercial School in Philadelphia. Upon the completion of his studies he returned home, and in 1882 purchased the property known as the Marker farm, which consisted of sixty acres of well cultivated ground. Since that time he has devoted his attention to the dairy, having an output of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred quarts of milk a day, for which he always finds a ready market. Like his ancestors, Mr. Burnley is a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and he was elected on that ticket to serve in the capacity of supervisor of roads, which position he has filled for three years.

Mr. Burnley was united in marriage to Anna Snape, by whom he had one child, Anna Burnley. Mrs. Burnley died December 13, 1882, and he then married a sister of his former wife, Jane Ellen Snape, and their children are: George Michael, Elsie Dinsmore and Michael Clarence Burnley.

WILLIAM DAVIS JONES, a successful farmer and one of the leading men of Garrettsford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Lower Merion, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, September 16, 1838, and is a son of Joel and Hannah (Price) Jones, and grandson of Paul and Tacie (Roberts) Jones.

Hannah (Price) Jones was the daughter of Thomas and ——— (Jones) Price. Paul Jones had a family of eight children, as follows: Tacie, who married Isaac Heston, and they had nine children; Esther, who married Lewis Yerkes, and they had four children; Susan, who married Paul Frye, and they had three children; Emily, who married William Warner Roberts, and they had one child; William Davis, who married Frances Lockwood Lloyd, and they had one child; Isaac T., who married Mary Bowen, and they had one child; Justis P., who married twice, his first wife being Mary Irving, by whom he had one child, and his second wife was Margaret Yerkes, no issue.

Joel Davis Jones, son of Paul and Tacie (Roberts) Jones, and the father of our subject, married and had these children, viz: Amanda Price, who married Reuben Bailly, no family; William D., our subject; Mary Thompson, who married William Francis Davis, and they had two children; Lydia Warner, deceased; Isaac Thomas, who married Mary Eastwick, and they have two children; Emily, who married George Williamson, and they have four children; Paul, who married Mary Williamson, and they have three children; Edward, who married Elizabeth Fornance, and they had four children.

William Davis Jones received his early education in the Lower Merion Academy, and later learned much in the school of life. After his school life was finished, he located upon the farm with his father and learned to be a practical farmer. In 1861 he came to Delaware county and rented a farm of sixty-five acres, which he operated for himself for seven years, devoting it to general farming. His next change was made to the Abraham L. Pennock property, which he rented for twelve years, and still later he bought the Joseph Allen farm of sixty acres, which he now occupies, and successfully operates. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and for twenty-one years he acted as town auditor, discharging the duties of that office with faithfulness and strictest integrity. In religious connections Mr. Jones belongs to the Society of Friends.

William D. Jones married Ann Louise Baily, daughter of Joel J. Baily, and they have two children, viz.: Joel B., who married Jane P. Alexander, and they have one child, Ann Louise; and William D. Jones, Jr. The Jones family stand very high in the community, their word being considered as good as their bond, and they are always to be depended upon to support all measures tending toward the advancement of the interests of the public at large. Of this family, William Davis Jones is an excellent representative, and both as a private citizen and public official he has done his full duty, and has many friends not only in the township, but throughout the county as well.

GEORGE W. URIAN. Enterprise, energy, and honesty in business, patriotic devotion to country and fidelity to every duty of public and private life, these are the distinguishing characteristics of George W. Urian, of Sharon Hill, that have guided and controlled his destiny and given him rank among the substantial and valued citizens of Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

The progenitor of the American branch of the family was Urian, who settled in Pennsylvania about the year 1682 and obtained a large tract of land by virtue of grant from William Penn, the founder of that colony. His son, Israel Urian, who was the grandfather of George W. Urian, married Jemima Plumley, a descendant of a New Jersey family, and their son, George Urian, father of George W. Urian, was the owner of an extensive tract of land in Darby township, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits during the active years of his life. He took a prominent part in the local affairs of the township. George Urian was united in marriage to Phebe Reed, and ten children were born to them, namely: Andrew, who married Abbie King; Austin, who married Margaret Vautier; William, who married Mary Ann McCollough; Harry, who married Sallie Maxwell; Lewis, who married Ella Porter; Abbie, wife of John F. Gaul; Rebecca, wife of William McKissick;

Eliza, wife of James Marshall; Rachel, wife of Newkirk Boyer, and George W. Urian.

George W. Urian was born in Darby township September 30, 1838. He acquired a practical education in the common schools of the neighborhood, after which he assisted his father with the management of the home farm, remaining there until 1878. In that year he was offered a position with the Turnpike Company of Delaware county, which he accepted, and has both creditably and acceptably filled up to the present time (1903). He was stationed at Sharon Hill, and having resided in this locality for so many years he has become quite familiar with the history of the borough of Sharon Hill and Ridley township, being recognized as an authority on this subject. Mr. Urian is well informed on the issues of the day, and takes an active and personal interest in all borough affairs that have for their object the advancement and improvement of the community in which he resides.

On June 14, 1871, Mr. Urian married Sallie J. Rively, daughter of Frederick and Emeline (Price) Rively, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Emma, who died in childhood; Elizabeth K., who is now the wife of William Richardson, a son of William and Sarah (Wiser) Richardson, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and who have one son, George W. Richardson. The youngest child of this union was Phoebe Urian, who died in childhood. The mother of this family, Sallie J. (Rively) Urian, died April 18, 1902.

ALLAN McCULLOUGH, a leading farmer of Marple, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is of Scotch-Irish ancestry, his grandfather, Allan McCullough, having emigrated from Scotland to Ireland, where he settled on a farm which was inherited by his eldest son, James McCullough.

Allan McCullough, son of James and Elizabeth (Glenney) McCullough, was born May 8, 1834, in county Armaugh, Ireland, and passed his early life on the homestead. In 1857 he emigrated to America, coming on the old ship "Columbia," which made the voyage in five weeks, a long time even for those days. He had an uncle, Robert Glenney, in Philadelphia, and through him was brought to the notice of Eli Lewis, of Newtown, for whom he engaged to work for one year, at eleven dollars a month. After remaining nearly two years in this position, he contracted to work for Milton Lewis, a brother of his former employer, retaining this place for a period of seven years. He then engaged in the milk business, building up a route in serving which he disposed of three hundred quarts per day. About this time he had a severe illness, and after recovering he engaged for a time in the manufacture of sausage and scrapple. Deciding to return to the agricultural pursuits in which his youth had been spent, he rented a farm in Radnor township for one year, and at the expiration of that time hired the old Crossley farm near Media cemetery for another year. His third change of abode was to the farm known as the "old George Lobb estate." This he rented for one year with the refusal of four additional years. He managed the farm successfully until the death of Mr. Lobb, when he came into possession of the estate which comprises one hundred and sixty acres. Owing to the skillful management of Mr. McCullough, this land is maintained in a high state of cultivation, the owner making a specialty of dairying, a department of agricultural industry which is conducted by him in the most efficient manner and according to the most improved methods. In politics Mr. McCullough is a Republican. He holds the office of an elder in the Presbyterian church at Broomall.

Mr. McCullough married, in 1864, Miss Elizabeth Gordon, who was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, and came to this country at the age of sixteen. Mr. and Mrs. McCullough are the parents of fifteen children, of whom twelve are living: James, born in May, 1865, died in infancy; Elizabeth, born May 9, 1866, died at the age of two years; Sarah, born December 9, 1867, married James Boyd; Allan, born August 9, 1869, at home with his parents; Anna Mary, born May 10, 1871, now engaged in teaching; Hannah, born March 31, 1873, married George Watson; Emma, born February 17, 1875, died at two years old; George L., born November 19, 1877, now at home; Emma, born October 5, 1879; Lydia, born December 5, 1880; Milton, born November 8, 1882; Margie, born November 19, 1884; John Thomas, born May 31, 1887; Edith, born January 15, 1889; and Louisa, born November 29, 1892.

HARRY L. HIPPLE, a prosperous and popular agriculturist of Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in that town in 1856, a descendant of Henry Hipple, a native of Germany.

Henry Hipple, grandfather of Harry L. Hipple, was born in Germany and acquired his education in the common schools. After attaining young manhood he came to this country, accompanied by his two brothers, and settled in Chester county, where he purchased a farm and spent all his life in the cultivation of the soil. He also took a prominent part in the public affairs of the town and served in several of the local offices. He was united in marriage to Miss Jane Garrett, a member of an old and respected Chester county family, and the following named children were born to them: Elijah; Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Able; Lawrence, Margaret, Jesse, Henry, George, Sarah, wife of Enos Garrett; and Garrett, who died in childhood. In his early life Mr. Hipple was a member of the Presbyterian church, but, his wife being a member of the Society of Friends, he attended the services of that church with her. His death occurred at the age of eighty-five years, and his wife lived to the mature old age of ninety-two years.

Henry Hipple, father of Harry L. Hipple, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1816, and was reared upon the paternal farm. His early life was spent in attendance at the village school and assisting his father in the work upon the farm, where he remained until he had attained his majority, when he purchased the farm on which Harry L. Hipple now resides. This he carefully cultivated and supplied with commodious farm buildings and all necessary improved machinery, and his efforts were well repaid by the excellent crops he obtained. For many years he served the town in the capacity of school director. He married Miss Rachel Roberts, daughter of Amos and Mary (Ellis) Roberts. Amos Roberts was born in Montgomery county, a son of Moses and Ellen (Lee) Roberts, the latter named being a native of England. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Roberts: William, Sarah, Lydia, Rachel, Jane, Joseph, Mary and Isaac Roberts. The father of these children died at the age of fifty years, and his wife passed away at the age of eighty-six years. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hipple, namely: Mary J., Margaret, Elizabeth E., Jesse, A. Retta, Harry L., and William P. Hipple. Mr. Hipple and his family were consistent members of the Society of Friends. His death occurred in the year 1878.

Harry L. Hipple, son of Henry and Rachel Hipple, acquired his preliminary education in the common schools of Marple, and later pursued the regular course of study in Swarthmore College. After completing his studies he settled upon the homestead, which consists of one hundred and fifty-six acres, and is situated in Marple township, four miles from the town of Media. He is engaged in the production of general farm produce, but makes a specialty of dairying, at which he has been eminently successful, there being always a constant demand for these products. The farm is celebrated for the superior quality of spring water, which cannot be equalled in that section of the state. In his political affiliations Mr. Hipple is an adherent of the Republican party, and in 1890 was elected county commissioner. He performed the duties of this office so faithfully that he was re-elected in 1893, serving two terms of three years each. At the present time (1902) he is serving in the capacity of school director. William P. Hipple, brother of Harry L. Hipple, was elected to the office of county commissioner in 1899, after the term of office held by Harry L. had expired. He married Miss Hannah M. Bartram, daughter of William Bartram, of Marple, and their children are: Bartram and Henry Hipple. Jesse Hipple, another brother of Harry L. Hipple, married Miss Fanny Hannum, and their children are: Harry, Leroy and Rachel. After the death of his wife he was united in marriage to Miss Rebecca Maris, and two children were born to them: George M. and Emma Hipple.

JACOB HABBERSSETT. The Habbersett family has long been established in Delaware county. Isaac Habbersett, father of Jacob Habbersett, was born in Middletown township, Delaware county, September 19, 1810. He was a son of Jacob and Susanna Habbersett. Jacob Habbersett was born in August, 1770, and of his marriage were born the following children: 1. Sarah, born October 26, 1794; 2. William, born November 23, 1796; he took up the study of medicine and removed to Ohio, where he practiced his profession; 3. John, born September 6, 1799; 4. Mary, born June 14, 1803, and died January 11, 1806; 5. Susanna, born November 2, 1805; 6. Hannah, born September 20, 1808, died December 10, 1808; 7. Isaac, who became the father of Jacob Habbersett, the subject of this sketch. The father of this family died July 24, 1851, and his wife died October 12, 1885.

Isaac Habbersett began his education in the common schools. After putting aside his text books he began learning the trade of a carpenter, but did not follow that pursuit, turning his attention instead to farming. In his political affiliations he was a stalwart Democrat. He wedded Priscilla Pyle, a daughter of Joshua and Susanna Pyle, a farmer who came to Pennsylvania from the state of Delaware. Their union was blessed with the following named children: Joshua, born November 12, 1835, who wedded Mary Derrick; 2. Susanna, born May 11, 1837, the wife of James W. Taylor, by whom she has two children; 3. Mary J., born March 22, 1839, the wife of Wright Turner, by whom she has four children; 4. Sarah, born February 1, 1842, the wife of George Faulkner, by whom she has six children; 5. Jacob, our subject; 6. Henry, born April 28, 1846; he died April 15, 1850; 7. Rebecca, born April 26, 1848, who married Pratt Baldwin and has two children; 8. Martha E., born December 20, 1849; 9. Esmonde H., born October 19, 1853; wedded Hannah Whittaker and has nine children.

Isaac Habbersett died September 28, 1881, and his wife Priscilla (Pyle) Habbersett, who was born August 31, 1814, died July 25, 1903. Both were most worthy people and bore the respect and esteem of all who knew them.

Jacob Habbersett, fifth child and second son of Isaac and Priscilla (Pyle) Habbersett, was born in Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, August 18, 1844. After obtaining his education in the public schools he began farming, which occupation he has followed continuously since. Everything about his place is indicative of the careful supervision of a practical and enterprising owner. In politics he is a staunch Democrat, doing everything in his power to promote the success of the party and he has held the office of supervisor and tax collector, acting in the latter capacity at the present time. His social relations connect him with the Knights of the Golden Eagle and also the ladies' branch of that organization. In his religious faith he is a Methodist, and his religious belief permeates his entire life and shapes his conduct toward his fellow men.

Mr. Habbersett has been twice married, his first wife having been Jane Booth, a daughter of James and Jane Booth, of Delaware county. She died October 18, 1885. Her children were Robert, born February 11, 1878; and James, born September 22, 1884; both of whom are unmarried; and Anna M., born September 15, 1874, died December 12, 1875, and Annie S., born September 14, 1881, died September 5, 1891. For his second wife Mr. Habbersett married Zelda Daniel, of West Chester, Pennsylvania, a daughter of a prominent resident of that place. By this marriage there is one son, Harry, born October 12, 1900.

ANNIE C. SHILLINGFORD, wife of John H. Shillingford, was born in Upper Providence township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1847. She is a daughter of Luke and Beulah (Palmer) Cassin. Her husband having died, Mrs. Cassin was united in marriage to Judge Thomas Reece, whose ancestors were of Welsh origin, and were members of the colony who came over with William Penn, in 1682. Thomas Reece was born May 4, 1811, in Middletown township, Delaware county, where his youth, until his eleventh year, was spent. He then removed with his parents, to Upper Providence township, where after limited educational advantages he learned the trade of mason and builder, which he pursued with vigor for several years, when, having inherited the paternal acres, he became an agriculturist and continued this vocation until his removal to Media, in 1880, on retiring from active business. Judge Reece was interested in the political issues of the day, and was elected on the Republican ticket in 1860 as county commissioner, which office he filled for one term. In 1866 he was the successful candidate for associate judge of Delaware county, and re-elected in 1871, serving a continuous term of ten years. This official position obliged him to resign the directorship of the First National Bank of Media, with which he had for several years been connected. He was a faithful member of the Society of Friends, as was also his wife and daughter.

Jacob Hubbersett

John H. Shillingford, husband of Annie C. Shillingford, obtained a liberal education at the Central School of Springfield township, and was graduated from the private school conducted by Joseph Shortlidge at Media, Pennsylvania. He is a worthy descendant of an old and honored Welsh ancestry. Mr. and Mrs. Shillingford are the owners of a well cultivated farm of forty-five acres, which is located about four miles from Philadelphia and about four hundred yards from the Baltimore pike. Mr. Shillingford is extensively engaged in the butchering of cattle, disposing of his supply in Philadelphia, to which city he ships fresh meat daily. He conducts a large and remunerative business, and is recognized as one of the foremost men of his section of the state, his success and prosperity being the result of well applied effort. Mr. Shillingford has never taken an active interest in politics, but his tendencies are all in favor of the principles of the Republican party. He is a prominent member of the Knights of Pythias.

In 1884, Mr. Shillingford married Annie C. Cassin, and the following named children were born to them: William Durall, Ella D., deceased, Bessie R., Beulah P., and Edmond C. Shillingford. The children are now acquiring their education in a private school.

JAMES TOWNSEND, JR. He whose name introduces this review is a son of James Townsend, Sr. The father was born in England, and to the schools of that country he is indebted for the educational privileges which he enjoyed. Coming to this country he engaged in the dyeing business, and worked his way upward to the position of boss dyer in the Rhoades Woolen Mills at Aston Mills, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His wife was Jane Leach, a native of England.

Among his children was James Townsend, Jr., who was born November 28, 1868. He was provided with liberal educational privileges, spending some time as a student in Parkmount school, in Delaware county, and then joined his father in the mills in order to learn the dyeing business. He has by his faithful work risen to the position formerly occupied by his father, being now boss dyer in the Rhoades Mills. He has the confidence and respect of his employers and the esteem of those who work under him, and his thorough understanding of the business and his capability well qualify him for the position.

James Townsend, Jr., was united in marriage to Hannah Monday, born in May, about 1871, a daughter of Charles and Eliza Monday, who were residents of Aston township, Delaware county. By this marriage there were born two children, but Charles, born March 15, 1886, died October 21, 1886. The surviving son is Harold, born March 17, 1898. Both Mr. and Mrs. Townsend are well known in the locality in which they make their home, and have many warm friends here. In politics he is an earnest Republican who does everything in his power to promote the growth and insure the success of his party. A member of the Methodist Episcopal church, he is also loyal to its interests, and is an active and valued member of the Order of Red Men.

C. J. ESSIG, D. D. S., for many years a leading dentist of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was descended from a family which emigrated to this country from Holland, the exact date of their removal being uncertain.

Dr. Essig was born in 1841, in Philadelphia, and was the son of C. S. Essig. His primary education was received in the public schools of his native city, and he afterward became a student in the Jefferson Medical College, from which he graduated in 1876, having received in the dental department of the institution, a thorough training for his future life-work. In his native city of Philadelphia he entered upon a career of active practice as a dentist. In 1878 he became a demonstrator in mechanical dentistry at the Philadelphia Dental College, from which institution he had received, in 1870, the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. In February, 1878, he organized the department of dentistry for the University of Pennsylvania, of which he was made the first dean, filling that position until 1901, when he resigned. His lectures were full of instruction and inspiration for those privileged to listen to them. He was thoroughly acquainted with the subject which he taught, and was well adapted, both by nature and training, for the work of an educator, possessing, in addition to the advantages of learning and experience, those imparted by a commanding presence, dignity of manner, and personal magnetism. As a dental operator Dr. Essig was extremely successful, enjoying the highest esteem of his clients. He was honored by the dental fraternity for the disinterested spirit by which he was animated in the pursuit of his chosen calling. One notable instance of this quality may be cited: He bought a patent covering the method of attaching teeth to metal plates. This he held in trust, and, at his death, deeded to the public. This conspicuous example of benevolence well illustrates the spirit by which he was animated throughout his whole career. Dr. Essig's labors and influence were not confined to his work as an educator and operator, but he is widely known through his contributions to dental literature. These comprise not only papers for periodicals, but books containing the results of his long and varied experience in his profession.

Dr. Essig was secretary of the Association for the Protection of the Rights of Dentists. He possessed a cultivated taste for art, being a member of the Art Club and other similar organizations. He belonged to the Masonic order, and was a man of genial social nature. He resided for a time in Media, where he was a vestryman of Christ Protestant Episcopal church.

Dr. Essig married in 1868, Mary Augusta, daughter of George and Mercy Sturgis, of Maryland. Dr. and Mrs. Essig were the parents of two sons: Norman S. and George S., both of whom are graduates of the University of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Essig is a Daughter of the American Revolution, and a member of the New Century Club of Chester, Pennsylvania.

In 1893 Dr. Essig became a resident of Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where his death took place in December, 1901. He continued in practice until the last of his life, and his loss was keenly felt not only by his family and near friends, but by the large circle of his clients, the great number of those who had been privileged to enjoy his instructions, and the community in general, by whom he was respected as a public-spirited citizen, and an honorable and kindhearted man.

DAVID E. LEWIS, formerly for several years supervisor of Darby township, and for many years an active figure in Republican political circles in that locality, was born in Philadelphia, July 10, 1844, the son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Pierce) Lewis, and the grandson of Hugh and Mary Lewis. For many years both of these family names, Lewis and Pierce, and with them the Gauls, have been associated with the best history and interests of this part of Delaware county, and have always stood for integrity and honesty. The parents of Elizabeth Pierce Lewis were Joseph Hugh and Mary Pierce, both well known and highly respected wherein their acquaintance extended.

The young life of David E. Lewis was spent on his father's farm, and his early education was obtained in the Friends' School at Darby, but the young man apparently loved farm work as well as he did the school room, for much of his time was devoted to his father's service in conducting the dairy and in general agriculture pursuits.

In 1868 David E. Lewis married Harriet R. Gaul, daughter of Adam and Harriet (Rothwall) Gaul, both old and respected residents of the locality. In Adam and Harriet R. Gaul's family were these children: Sarah, wife of Edward Swain; Joseph, who married Mary Free and now lives in the west; John, who married Abbie Urian and lives in Philadelphia; Elizabeth, wife of Charles Hess, of Philadelphia; Emily, wife of Joseph Mehan, of Germantown; Adam, who married Ruth Eckert, of Philadelphia; Harriet R., wife of David E. Lewis; Jacob, who married Jean Wiley; Anna L., wife of Frederick Urian, of Delaware county; Franklin Pierce, who married (1) Emma Krider, and (2) Alice Tudor; and Laura, wife of John Wagenknight, of Philadelphia.

The children of David E. and Harriet R. Lewis are: Joseph C., born September 18, 1869, married Catherine Greene, of Darby, and their children are Mary Elizabeth and Joseph Elmer Lewis; Edward R., born February 10, 1871, married Minnie A. Rice; William S., who married Edna Greene, and their children are: Helen, David and Ida; Sarah S., now living at home; Elizabeth P., now dead; Harriet, wife of John Crauer, of Darby; and Annie G., now at home.

WILLIAM M. PARKER, for many years prominently identified with the commercial and political affairs of the township of Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Columbia county, Pennsylvania, in 1846, a son of Joel and Anna Parker.

Joel Parker, father of William M. Parker, was born in Columbia county, Pennsylvania, in 1816, a son of Thomas Parker, who came from New Jersey to Columbia county, and established a pottery. Mr. Parker was a very enterprising and energetic man, quick to note and take advantage of any opportunity in business, and above all was thoroughly reliable and honorable in all trade transactions, so that he won the confidence as well as the patronage of the public. After his death the business was conducted by his sons; Joel learned the trade of potter in his father's manufactory, and after thoroughly acquiring all the details of the business he commenced business on his own account, which he conducted successfully up to the time of his death. He was united in marriage to Miss Anna Johnson, daughter of William and Jerusha (Richart) Johnson, and the following named children were born to them: Ira A., of Lycoming county, who was formerly engaged in business in Delaware county; Mynerva May, deceased, who was the wife of Henry Cox, of New Haven, Connecticut; Grizzella, who died in childhood; William M., and Margaret M., wife of Davis Manning; they reside on the old homestead in Columbia county. The father of these children died in 1849, survived by his widow and four small children. Mrs. Parker died March 15, 1900, at the age of eighty-two years. They were both faithful and consistent members of the Society of Friends. William Johnson, father of Mrs. Parker, was born in the state of Pennsylvania; he was the son of a British soldier and a member of the Hussars. Being convinced that the cause of the colonists was just, he deserted from his own company, was captured but escaped and joined the colonial army. After the Revolutionary war he settled in Columbia county, Pennsylvania, where he followed the trade of tailor the remainder of his life.

William M. Parker, second son of Joel and Anna Parker, obtained his elementary education in various schools in the vicinity, and this was supplemented by a complete course in the West-town Friends' School. In 1866 he removed to Marple and engaged in the manufacture of the Darby Creek scythe-stones, which he continued for many years in connection with agricultural pursuits on his farm, which consisted of ninety-two acres of valuable land. The firm of Parker Brothers, which consisted of Ira J. and William M., succeeded to the business of Jonathan Rhoads, who established the manufactory more than a hundred years ago. The success which the brothers attained was secured through personal merit, honorable business methods, and by their natural aptitude for their calling, and they thus gained and retained the confidence and respect of all with whom they had business or social intercourse. In his political belief and association Mr. Parker is a Republican, and held the position of school director for thirty-one years. He was also a director of the Springfield Building and Loan Association for twenty years, and a director of the Media Title and Trust Company since its organization, and is a director of the Delaware Mutual Insurance Company. In his religious belief he is a firm advocate of the tenets of the Society of Friends.

On February 22, 1872, Mr. Parker married Miss Gulielina Dunwoody, daughter of John and Gulielina Dunwoody, late of Marple. Two children were born to them, but both died in infancy.

FRANK M. DRAKE, an enterprising citizen of Village Green, Delaware county, is a son of William B. and Mary (Ruffley) Drake, the former named having been born in Rockdale, Delaware county, where he received his education and then learned the spinning and weaving trade, which he pursued for a number of years. William B. Drake entered the army as a drummer boy and served during the entire period of the Civil war, and participated in the battles of Gaines Hill, Antietam and Fredericksburg. December 13, 1868, Mr. Drake married Mary Ruffley, born April 1, 1842, daughter of Francis and Ann (Roberts) Ruffley, both natives of England, who came to America in 1845. Mr. and Mrs. Drake were the parents of the following named children: Frank M., mentioned at length hereinafter; William P., born August 1, 1871, married Annie Littleton; and Robert S., born August 24, 1875, unmarried. William B. Drake, the father of these children, died October 10, 1899.

Frank M. Drake, son of William B. and Mary (Ruffley) Drake, was born November 6, 1869, at Rockdale, Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He received his primary education in the public schools of his birthplace, after which he attended school in Media, and subsequently became a student at the Drexel Business College in Philadelphia. After completing his education he learned the trade of a blacksmith, entered into business for himself, first at Rockdale and afterward in Philadelphia. In 1900 he went to Village Green, where he has since made his home and conducted a successful business. He is a member of Benevolent Lodge, No. 40, and the Chester Encampment, No. 99, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In the sphere of politics he is an earnest worker, being a staunch advocate of the doctrines of the Republican party. He and his family attend the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Drake married, November 24, 1897, Sarah A., daughter of Isaac and Mary (Holt) Wrigley, the former a weaver and spinner of Springfield. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Drake: Ralph W., born October 8, 1898, and Frank M., born August 25, 1901. Mr. and Mrs. Drake are the possessors of an extremely pretty and desirable home, and are deservedly popular with all who have the pleasure of knowing them.

CHARLES E. JOHNSON, a useful citizen of Aston township, Delaware county, is a descendant of Humphrey Johnson, an early resident of Delaware county. Joseph, son of Humphrey Johnson, married Amy Rodgers and they became the parents of ten children: Ann, Humphrey, Robert R., Phineas, Abraham, Amy, Mary, Jethro, Sarah and Hannah.

Humphrey, eldest son in the family, was a carpenter in early life, and later removed to Cecil county, Maryland, and became a prosperous farmer. He married Mary, daughter of John Slaughter, and to them were born Jamima (now Mrs. Thos. Donega) Joseph, Charles, Anna M., (Mrs. I. P. Dutton) and Amy.

Charles, third child and second son of Humphrey and Mary (Slaughter) Johnson, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, November 9, 1817, and in early youth removed to Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he received his education in the district schools of the neighborhood. On laying aside his text books he learned the trade of a blacksmith, which he followed for some time, and then turned his attention to the tilling of the soil. He was originally a Whig, and he connected himself with the Republican party on its organization, and on its ticket he was elected to many offices of trust and honor, serving his county efficiently as treasurer and as county commissioner. He adhered his life through to the faith of the Friends, in which he was reared. As a companion on the journey of life he chose Mary S. Mancill, a daughter of Joseph Mancill, a prominent farmer of Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. The following children were born of this union: 1. Clementina, who married William H. Pratt, and became the mother of four children, all living; 2. Anna M., who became the wife of Evans Eachus, and to whom were born six children, of whom four are deceased; 3. H. Winfield; 4. L. Emma, who is unmarried; 5. Charles E.; 6. William, deceased; 7. Laura F., who married Albert Ogden, and to whom were born two children. The father of this family died August 2, 1902, and his wife died March 19, 1901.

Charles E. Johnson, fifth child and second son of Charles and Mary (Mancill) Johnson, was born in Village Green, Aston township, Delaware county, April 6, 1854, and received his elementary training in the schools of the neighborhood and the Friends' Central School in Philadelphia, and completed his education in the Normal school. On completing his studies he took up the life of a farmer, but subsequently (in 1878) engaged in milling at Camp Ground, and industriously followed that business until the spring of 1902. At the present time he is devoting the greater part of his attention to the raising of mushrooms, in which enterprise he has been very successful. His capable management and enterprise, with well directed efforts and honorable dealing, have been the important factors in his business career and have brought to him a very handsome competence.

Mr. Johnson was married on March 11, 1885, to Sallie P. Bishop, daughter of Henry C. and Mary (Plankington) Bishop. Of this marriage were born two children: Henry C., born September 8, 1888, and Charles J., born December

2, 1896. The mother died October 24, 1900. Mr. Johnson occupies a pleasant home at Camp Ground, in Aston township.

DANIEL LEES, deceased, who was during a long and active career one of the most prominent of the early cotton manufacturers of Pennsylvania, was a fine type of the old English weaver, industrious, persevering and absolutely conscientious, and he was, besides, a man of excellent business judgment.

He was born in Oldham, near Lancashire, England, June 28, 1828. He received but limited educational advantages, and in his youth began the earning of his own livelihood. He acquired a practical knowledge of cotton spinning and weaving, and before he had attained to man's estate he decided to come to the United States, hoping here to find a broader field for his effort. On his arrival here, he located at Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he found employment at his trade in the Lewis cotton mills, and in which after two years he came to the position of manager. He subsequently removed to Chester, Delaware county, where he embarked for the first time in the weaving business for himself. He next spent some time in Philadelphia, in the cotton goods manufacturing line, but again returned to Delaware county, where he pursued the yarn spinning business at Carey's Bank for some time, and again at Chester and Philadelphia. He finally established himself at Leiperville, Delaware county, where he remained fourteen years, part of the time in the cotton spinning business, and later in the worsted yarn business. He sold out his interests in 1883 and removed to Philadelphia, where he was engaged for three years in the manufacture of plush cloths. In 1885 Mr. Lees came to Lenni, Delaware county, where he leased the present establishment (now conducted by his heirs) from the Ann Sellers estate, and entered upon a successful career in the manufacture of mohair and worsted yarns, velours and plush goods. This enterprise, having had its inception in a modest beginning, has attained large proportions. The business constantly increased under Mr. Lees' masterly management, and engaged his attention until his death, May 30, 1901, when it passed into the hands of his heirs. It is to be said in entire truthfulness that Mr. Lees, during his career as a manufacturer, accomplished much for the material advancement and progress of Lenni and other places where he resided. He was a self-made man in the truest sense of the word, and throughout his long and varied career his name was everywhere regarded as a synonym for honesty and straightforward business principles and conduct.

Daniel Leeds

Mr. Lees married Sarah Greenwood, a daughter of John and Bettie Greenwood, of Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. The children born of this marriage were Elizabeth, Alice, Hannah (deceased), George (deceased), T. Frank and Mary J. Lees.

T. Frank Lees, only surviving son of Daniel and Sarah (Greenwood) Lees, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, February 11, 1868. He attended the Leiperville school of Delaware county, and the Bryant & Stratton Business College of Philadelphia, and the advantages received there prepared him for the active duties of a business career. At an early age he entered his father's mill at Leiperville, and by close and steady application he soon became thoroughly familiar with all the branches of the business. The plant was disposed of in 1883, and the following two years they were engaged in the manufacturing of plush in Philadelphia; after the expiration of this period of time they returned to Delaware county, and leased the mill at Lenni, which is one of the landmarks of the county. It was built about 1798, and an addition was made to it in 1857, and during that time it was the property of several owners. After the death of his father, T. Frank Lees assumed charge of the plant, which affords employment to fifty skilled operatives, occupied in the manufacture of velours, turning out ten thousand yards a week, the product commanding a ready market in New York City, Chicago, Boston and Cleveland. Mr. Lees is a man of broad business ability, of untiring energy and sound judgment, and he has gained a prestige in commercial circles which is only accorded to those who have gained success in an honorable manner. Politically he is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, and fraternally he is a prominent member of the Order of Free and Accepted Masons. He has spent some time in travel and has visited the various places of note and interest throughout the county.

Mr. Lees was united in marriage to Mary Scott, daughter of Joseph U. and Martha Scott; a native of Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

ULYSSES G. CORNOGG, who has served as supervisor of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant on the paternal side of the Cornogg family which first settled in Chester county, and is said to be of Welsh descent. His grandfather was Isaac Cornogg, of Haverford. His father, also Isaac Cornogg, was born at Haverford, 6 mo., 26, 1816, but later resided in Concordville, Delaware county, and eventually became one of the best known carriage builders in the county. He married in Philadelphia, 3 mo., 15, 1853, Matilda Sharpless, born 3 mo., 3, 1828, daughter of Samuel and Ruth (Idings) Sharpless, of Edgemont, and to them were born eight children, namely: 1. Albert A., born in Concordville, 7 mo., 20, 1856; married at West Chester, 1881, Emma F. Henthorn, daughter of Oscar and Rebecca (Pyle) Henthorn; children, Rupert Morton, born 5 mo., 28, 1882; Duane Henthorn, born 8 mo., 22, 1884. 2. Samuel S., unmarried. 3. Anna, born 11 mo., 23, 1858, deceased. 4. Margaret, born 12 mo., 20, 1859; 5. Isaac, born 8 mo., 28, 1861; married Lillian Patton, issue, two children, Isaac Clyde and Everett Lindsay; 6. Fannie, born 11 mo., 14, 1863; married Samuel Smedley, issue, two children, Samuel and Paul. 7. Ulysses G., further mentioned hereinafter. 8. Bertha, born 9 mo., 2, 1868, married Horace Darlington, and has children, Hannah Worrall and Dorothy Darlington. Isaac Cornogg, Sr., died 7 mo., 3, 1882, at Concordville, where his widow now resides.

The maternal grandfather of Ulysses Grant Cornogg was Samuel Sharpless (5), son of Joel (4), who was born in Middletown township, Chester county, 11 mo., 14, 1785, and was a carpenter by trade as well as a farmer. He inherited and lived upon the homestead of his father, which was built on the tract of land bought by his grandfather early in the eighteenth century from one Thomas Grisell, and which is now the residence of Joel, the eldest son of Samuel. He married in Philadelphia 1 mo., 5, 1807, his first cousin, Ruth Iddings, born at Nantmeal, Chester county, 1 mo., 16, 1791, and to them were born twelve children, as follows: 1. Beulah, born 7 mo., 14, 1808, married George Garrett; 2. Joel, born 3 mo., 9, 1810, married Hannah Minshall and Ann Green; 3. Hannah, deceased; 4. Lydia, born 11 mo., 6, 1813, married James A. Bonsall; 5. William, deceased; 6. Amy Darlington, born 1 mo., 8, 1818, married Enos Edwards; 7. Sarah, born 11 mo., 1, 1819, who married William Green; 8. Thomas Jefferson, born 12 mo., 18, 1821, who married Susanna Plankinton; 9. Ruth Anna, born 12 mo., 18, 1823, who married John Rogers; 10. Tamzen, born 12 mo., 26, 1825, who married Seneca W. Ottey; 11. Matilda, born 3 mo., 3, 1828, mother of Ulysses G.; 12. Samuel, born 3 mo., 27, 1830, who married Sarah Jane Campbell. The death of Samuel Sharpless (5) occurred at Edgemont, 4 mo., 21, 1866, and was the result of a fall from a horse; he survived his wife, Ruth Iddings, by twenty-five years, her decease having occurred in the 6th mo., 22, 1841; they are both interred at Middletown.

Ulysses Grant Cornogg, the seventh child and fourth son of Isaac and Matilda (Sharpless) Cornogg, was born in Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, 11 mo., 12, 1865. When through his education, which he obtained at the public schools of the county, he turned his attention to farming and owns a finely cultivated farm in Concordville. Mr. Cornogg is an adherent of the Republican party, an active member of the order of Odd Fellows, and, as supervisor of his township, is particularly alert to all its interests, material and civic. He and his family are members of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Cornogg married Sarah D. Pyle, a descendant of the distinguished family of that name, and daughter of Walter and Mary (Chetam) Pyle; her father was a farmer of Thornbury township, Delaware county. Mr. and Mrs. Cornogg are the parents of the following children: Margaret C., born November 27, 1894; Adelaide D., born May 2, 1897; Walter P., born November 19, 1899; and Rebecca P., born November 19, 1901.

PASCHALL. Thomas Paschall, of Bristol, England, "pewterer," was a purchaser of five hundred acres of land from William Penn, by deeds of lease and release, dated 26th and 27th of September, 1681, and arrived in Philadelphia in the 12th month, February, following. The name of his wife was Joanna, and from a letter written by her son in 1728 it appears that she was the sister of one Simon Sloper, who, about twenty years before that date, had written to Thomas Paschall, Sr., stating that he had a son, William Sloper, then living in London, who was paymaster-general to the Queen's foreign forces. Thomas Paschall, Sr., died 7 mo., 15, 1718, aged eighty-three years and four months. Joanna Paschall, his wife, died 7 mo., 2, 1707, aged seventy-two years and nine months, according to entries made by their son in his Bible. Besides a son Thomas they had a son William, who died in 1696, and a daughter Mary, who married Thomas Say.

Thomas Paschall, Jr., of Philadelphia county, bachelor, and Margaret Jenkins, of Haverford, in the county of Chester, were married 9 mo., 15, 1692, at Haverford Meeting. She was the eldest child of William Jenkins, late of Tenby, in Pembrokehire, Wales, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Lewis Griffith, and was born in Wales 3 mo., 23, 1674. They settled in Blockley township, Philadelphia county, where Margaret died 11 mo., 17, 1728, and about a year later Thomas married Abigail Golden, a widow. She died 3 mo., 1, 1736, and he about 1743, the father of eleven children:

1. Thomas, b. 7 mo., 22, 1693; m. Margaret Jones, 10 mo., 6, 1716.
2. Joanna, b. 12 mo., 19, 1695; m. John Marshall, of Darby, 1716.
3. William, b. 1 mo., 8, 1697; m. Grace Hoopes and Hannah Roberts.
4. Joseph, b. 1 mo., 23, 1699; m. Elizabeth Coates, 1720.

5. Elizabeth, b. 2 mo., 19, 1701; m. Jacob Jones, 1730.

6. Benjamin, b. 11 mo., 4, 1703; d. 2 mo., 12, 1707.

7. John, b. 9 mo., 5, 1706; d. 1779. See below.

8. Benjamin, b. 2 mo., 16, 1709.

9. Samuel b. 5 mo., 2, 1711; d. 12 mo., 11, 1728.

10. Stephen, b. 8 mo., 3, 1714; m. Martha Humphrey, 2 mo., 24, 1738.

11. Jonathan, b. 3 mo., 11, 1718; d. 2 mo., 3, 1782; m. Mary Fisher.

John Paschall (7) was married 2 mo., 25, 1728, to Frances Hodge, born 4 mo., 15, 1710; died 1 mo., 29, 1781; daughter of Henry and Hannah Hodge and granddaughter of Christopher Knight, of the island of Antigua. They settled in Darby township, where, in addition to becoming possessed of considerable real estate, he was extensively known as a medical practitioner. He was not regularly educated in the profession, but (as a contemporary alleges) by the superior powers of his mind and his own application he acquired a medical and chemical knowledge sufficient to render him conspicuous. He was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1768, and was a shareholder in the Philadelphia Library. He prepared a popular nostrum which he called "the Golden Elixir," and which was widely known by advertisement in the newspapers under the name of "Paschall's Golden Drops." He had nine children:

12. Margaret, b. 6 mo., 28, 1731; d. 8 mo., 15, 1820; m. Ebenezer Worth, of East Bradford, but left no children.

13. Mary, b. 11 mo., 9, 1732; m. James Pearson, 10 mo., 1758.

14. Frances, b. 8 mo., 24, 1734; d. 6 mo., 1, 1739.

15. Elizabeth, b. 9 mo., 11, 1736; m. Richard Armitt, 5 mo., 27, 1762.

16. John, b. 4 mo., 4, 1738; d. 1776.

17. Frances, b. 12 mo., 27, 1740; d. 5 mo., 2, 1812; m. 8 mo., 1761, at Darby Meeting, John Ladd Howell. But it appears by records of St. Michael's and Zion churches, Philadelphia, that they had been secretly married March 1, 1761.

18. Ann, b. 11 mo., 26, 1742; d. 5 mo., 20, 1781.

19. Benjamin, b. 11 mo., 25, 1744; d. 8 mo., 10, 1818; m. ——— Rudolph.

20. Henry, b. 8 mo., 28, 1746; d. 5 mo., 13, 1835.

Henry Paschall (20) was married 5 mo., 24, 1770, at Darby Meeting, to Ann Garrett, born 9 mo., 24, 1752; died 12 mo., 1, 1820; daughter of Nathan and Ann (Knowles) Garrett, of Darby. Like his father he was a physician. They appear to have resided in Wilmington, Delaware, 1770-

1773, and 1783-1790, after which they returned to Darby. He was married a second time, 11 mo., 1821, to Catharine Lincoln, born 9 mo., 5, 1792; died 3 mo., 23, 1876; daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Shrum) Lincoln. By the first marriage he had eleven and by the last two children:

21. Frances, b. 2 mo., 24, 1771; d. 8 mo., 27, 1857; m. Charles Lloyd.
22. Margaret, b. 9 mo., 13, 1772; d. 11 mo., 22, 1871; m. Robert Hopkins.
23. Mary, b. 12 mo., 3, 1775; d. 12 mo., 23, 1827, unmarried.
24. Ann, b. 12 mo., 7, 1777; d. 5 mo., 9, 1844; unmarried.
25. Elizabeth, b. 1 mo., 11, 1780; d. 2 mo., 4, 1852; m. Gustavus Cox.
26. Hannah, b. 3 mo., 25, 1781; d. 9 mo., 14, 1860; m. Joseph Warner.
27. John, b. 4 mo., 7, 1783; d. 1 mo., 17, 1864; m. Sarah Horne.
28. Thomas G., b. 5 mo., 27, 1785; d. 9 mo., 13, 1865; m. Elizabeth Scot.
29. Sarah, b. 7 mo., 14, 1787, d. 5 mo., 25, 1873 (?); m. Moses Adams.
30. Martha, b. 10 mo., 27, 1789; d. 12 mo., 4, 1808, unmarried.
31. Beulah, b. 11 mo., 16, 1791; d. 2 mo., 28, 1866; m. Samuel Worth.
32. Joseph, b. 3 mo., 23, 1823; m. Eliza Lincoln.
33. Henry L., b. 4 mo., 8, 1829.

Henry L. Paschall, last named, was born at Paschallville, near Darby, and married Anna T. Pancoast, of Philadelphia county, by whom he had the following children: 1. Hannah B., married to Ellwood Hannum, has two children; 2. Joseph, married to Laura Mattson; 3. Elizabeth, married to Frank Willits, has two children; 4. Catharine R.; 5. Susan, who is unmarried.

Catharine R. Paschall was married 6 mo., 10, 1880, to Jacob J. Styer, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, who was born 11 mo., 7, 1856, and of this union were born five children: Elizabeth, born 5 mo., 21, 1881; John F., born 9 mo., 18, 1882, died 8 mo., 21, 1899; Henry Paschall, born 3 mo., 12, 1884, died 12 mo., 10, 1896; Mildred, died 2 mo., 23, 1895; J. Franklin, born 11 mo., 27, 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Styer are members of the Friends' Meeting.

JOSEPH H. PASCHALL, prominent among the farmers of Delaware county, is a grandson of Dr. Henry Paschall, who was for years a well known and skillful practicing physician of Paschallville. He married Ann Garrett, and, after her death, Catharine Lincoln, a member of the same family as the martyred President. Dr. and Mrs. Paschall resided on the old homestead, which is still standing in Paschallville, immediately east of the Roman Catholic Institution.

Henry Lincoln Paschall, son of John and Catharine (Lincoln) Paschall, was born April 8, 1829, at Paschallville, Kingsessing township. He was by trade a carpenter, but in 1853 purchased the old Hannum farm in Concord, Delaware county, and turned his attention to agriculture, in which he was very successful. He was interested in the insurance business, serving for twenty-five years as a director of the Delaware County Mutual Insurance Company. He took an active part in local affairs, and several times held the office of school director. He was a member of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church. He married Anna T. Pancoast, a member of the well-known Pancoast family of New Jersey, April 5, 1854. Mrs. Paschall was a member of the Society of Friends. Mr. Paschall died on his farm, July 19, 1901, in the seventy-third year of his age.

Joseph H. Paschall, second child and only son of Henry Lincoln and Anna T. (Pancoast) Paschall, was born July 5, 1856, in Concord township, Delaware county. He was a student at Maplewood Institute, and after completing his education was for some time a successful teacher. He then took up his abode on the old homestead, where he has since resided, devoting himself to agricultural pursuits. His farm consists of 200 acres, and he has a dairy of sixty cows. His land is kept in a high state of cultivation, and his dairy furnishes butter to the Chester market. He is possibly the best authority on fruit culture in Delaware county. He is a prominent Granger, filling many important offices in the order. He was a member of the Good Templars, in which he once held the office of district deputy. He is president of the Chester Market Company, and a director in the Delaware County Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the Media Rural Cemetery Company. It will be seen that Mr. Paschall is a man whose range of interests is not bounded by the duties and claims of his calling, notwithstanding the fact that these receive from him the strictest attention, but that he is ever ready to bear a part in whatever tends to promote the welfare of the community. In politics he is a Prohibitionist, and received from his party on one occasion the nomination for Congress. He is an earnest political worker, and has a well earned reputation as a speaker at institutes. He is a member of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, in which he holds the office of vestryman.

Mr. Paschall married, April 18, 1883, Laura T., daughter of Peter W. and Evalina (Hannum) Mattson, of Concord township. Mr. and Mrs. Paschall are both active workers in the cause of temperance. They have no children.

H. H. SCOTT. Joseph Scott was born in Manchester, England, and, desiring to enjoy better advantages in the new world, he crossed the Atlantic to America in 1850, settling in Upland, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He was educated in his native country and after putting aside his text books he learned the trade of a Designer. Ere he left England he was married to Martha Howard and she accompanied him on the emigration to the new world. On coming to Upland he began following the weaver's trade and was made superintendent of the mills at Rockdale, Delaware county, since which time he has been well known as a representative of industrial interests here. In his political views he is a Republican and his fraternal relations connect him with the Odd Fellows Society. The following children were the issue of his marriage: Lewis, who was born in England, wedded Agnes Sinex and they have seven children; Elizabeth, who was also born in the mother country; Benjamin, who married Amy Thomson and they had a child Mary, who became the wife of T. Frank Lees; Charles, deceased; and Martha completes the family with the exception of Harry H. Scott, who was united in marriage to Elmira Ford, a daughter of Neemiah and Martha (Husbands) Ford. Unto this union have been born two daughters: Nellie and Mary, who are at home; the mother of these children, died December 12, 1892.

Harry H. Scott was born in Upland, Delaware county, November 12, 1863, and at the usual age began his education as a student in the public schools, while later he pursued his studies in Chester Academy. He is now devoting his time and energies to merchandising, having a large store in Lemmi, Delaware county, where he is enjoying an extensive patronage that is well deserved because of the carefully selected line of goods which he carries and his honorable business methods. Mr. Scott is a Republican in his political views, strongly endorsing the principles of the party. He is recognized as a leader of the local organization and has held the office of school director, while for nine years he capably filled the position of county auditor. He is a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

WRIGHT TURNER is a native of Aston township, Delaware county Pennsylvania, where he was born November 8, 1840, and where has been his life-long residence.

Samuel Turner, father of Wright Turner, was born in the northern part of England, but came to this country when quite young; he acquired a fair education in the common schools of his native land. Shortly after the completion of his studies he learned the trade of weaving, and followed that occupation for many years in Aston township. He died in 1871, aged about seventy-one years. He was united in marriage to Ellen E. McCartney, daughter of William and Ellen McCartney, and they became the parents of the following named children: 1. James, who was killed during the progress of the Civil war in 1862; 2. Wright Turner; 3. Margaret A., widow of Isaac Dunn; 4. Samuel C., who married Alice Blagg; 5. Joseph R., who married Hannah Ann Rhodes; 6. Henry C., who married Sarah A. Townsend; 7. George, deceased, who was survived by his widow, Jane (Faulkner) Turner, and six children.

Wright Turner was reared in his native county and obtained a practical education in the common schools, after which he followed the occupation of farming for several years. Later he turned his attention to the weaving trade, having for a number of years engaged as loom fixer and weaver. He has always been an industrious worker himself, giving close personal attention to every duty in his work, thus insuring the best service and rendering satisfaction to all his employers. At the present time (1903) he is living a retired life upon a fine farm of fifty-three acres in Aston township, enjoying the fruits of his many years of toil. In politics Mr. Turner has always been an ardent Republican.

On July 3, 1861, Mr. Turner married Mary J. Happersett, born March 22, 1839, daughter of the late Isaac and Priscilla (Pyle) Happersett. Her father was long prominent in the agricultural interests of Middletown township, Delaware county. Mr. and Mrs. Turner's children were: Ella J., born August 10, 1862, wife of R. C. Ormsby; they are the parents of one child, Ethel Turner; James H., born February 5, 1866, who married Lydia M. Daley, and one child has been born to them, Ramond Daley; Hiram E., born June 2, 1870, who married Laura West; Marietta, born May 3, 1879, who resides with her parents. Mr. Turner and his family are earnest and loyal members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Aston township.

THOMAS PANCOAST, prominently identified with the agricultural, political and social affairs of Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of Seth Pancoast, who married Esther Coppock, a daughter of Bartholomew Coppock, Jr., who was a son of Bartholomew and Margaret Coppock, who were among the early settlers of Delaware county, emigrating from Cheshire, England. Bartholomew Coppock, Sr., settled in Springfield in 1685, and two years later purchased four hundred and forty-eight acres of land in Marple township of John Nixon; for the tract he received a deed from William Penn, with the great seal of the province affixed, and bearing the signature of his commissioners, Edward Shippen, Griffith Owen, Thomas Story and James Logan. The conditions of this grant were that the borough of Chester on the first day of the first month in every year, pay to the heirs of William Penn, for each and every year, the sum of four English shillings and threepence, or value thereof in coin current, to such person or persons as shall be appointed to receive the same. The deed is still in the possession of the Pancoast family.

On June 22, 1719, Mr. Coppock deeded the tract of land to his son and heir, Bartholomew Coppock, who erected a brick residence on it in 1732. The Springfield Friends' Meeting was regularly held at this house until a meeting house was erected, in 1738, on two acres deeded by him for the purpose in 1703. Mr. Coppock married Phœbe Taylor, daughter of Robert Taylor, of Springfield, and their daughter, Esther Coppock, was united in marriage to Seth Pancoast, son of William and Hannah Pancoast, of Mansfield, county of Burlington, West Jersey. Seth Pancoast had all the plantation lying and being in Marple township, containing one hundred and eighty-eight acres, including the homestead, bequeathed to him by the will of his father-in-law, Bartholomew Coppock. To Seth and Esther Pancoast were born the following named children: Sarah, Phœbe, Samuel and Seth Pancoast. Samuel Pancoast, eldest son of Seth and Esther Pancoast, inherited the homestead upon the death of his father and became one of the prominent men of the community. He was an elder of Springfield Particular and Chester Monthly Meetings of Friends, and was held in high esteem by the society. He married Mary Levis, daughter of John and Rebecca (Davis) Levis, and four sons and one daughter were born to them.

Samuel Pancoast, son of Samuel and Mary Pancoast, and father of Thomas Pancoast, was born July 12, 1787, on the homestead in Marple township, where his entire life was spent. He attended the common schools of the vicinity, and during his leisure hours assisted his father in the cultivation of the farm. On the death of his father, in 1834, he became the owner of the estate, which he continued to cultivate up to the time of his decease. In his political convictions Mr. Pancoast was formerly a Whig, but later became a Republican. In his religious belief he was a member of the Society of Friends, and a regular attendant at the services at the Springfield meeting house. Mr. Pancoast was an intelligent reader and kept himself well informed on the current events of the day; he was also interested in the cause of education and served in the capacity of school director. In 1817 he married Tamar Bishop, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Bishop, the former named being a prominent farmer of Upper Providence, Delaware county. They were the parents of twelve children, nine of whom are living at the present time (1903). Mr. Pancoast died May 23, 1873, survived by his widow, who passed away September 28, 1877.

Thomas Pancoast, son of Samuel and Tamar Pancoast, was born on the old homestead June 1, 1825. He acquired his preliminary education in the common schools of the township, and this was supplemented by a course at the West-town school. His entire business career has been devoted to the cultivation of the soil, having gained a thorough knowledge of that occupation during his early life. His farm is situated in Aston township, and is one of the most productive in that section of the state. Mr. Pancoast is a Republican in his political views, and has been chosen by his fellow citizens to serve in the offices of school director and town clerk.

On February 23, 1853, Mr. Pancoast married Susan P. Hannum, a daughter of Edwin and Maria (Miller) Hannum, the former named being prominently connected with the agricultural interests of Aston township, Delaware county. Their children are: Edwin H., who married Laura Dutton, and three children have been born to them—Florence D., Mary L. and George; and Maria Hand, wife of Charles S. Welles, to whom were born two children—Helen Louise, who died in infancy, and Louise J. Mr. Pancoast and his family are consistent members of the Presbyterian church of Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS HOOPES THATCHER. The ancestors of Thomas Hoopes Thatcher were intimately and prominently identified with the early history and settlement of the state of Pennsylvania. He is in direct line of descent on both sides of his house from the Thatcher and Sharpless families, and his progenitors on the Sharpless side were among those who received the original grants of land, termed "first purchase," from William Penn.

His emigrant ancestor was Richard Thatcher (1), who came from Uffington, in Berkshire, about 1685, and settled in Pennsylvania with his wife Jane and two children, Jonathan and Jane.

Jonathan (2) was born 12 mo., 15, 1677, and died in 1750; he married Hannah, daughter of Peter Dicks. They resided in Thornbury township, and their children were Ann, Jane, Jonathan, Hannah, Esther, Richard, Mary, Martha, Elizabeth and Deborah. Their sixth child,

Richard (3) married at Chichester Meeting, 11 mo., 25, 1734, Edith Grubb, daughter of Emanuel Grubb, of Brandywine Hundred, New Castle county, Delaware. He died in 1763, and his wife in 1771. Their children were: Thomas, William, Ann, Hannah, Mary, Jonathan, Samuel, Stephen, Sarah and Phebe, all of whom were doubtless born in Thornbury.

William (4), second son of Richard (3), was born 12 mo., 7, 1736-7, and died 2 mo., 1, 1807. He married at Sadsbury, Montgomery county, Sarah Dickinson, born 1 mo., 9, 1734, died 8 mo., 7, 1817. She was a minister and a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Miller) Dickinson, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The children of William Thatcher were: Elizabeth, Hannah, Joseph, Edith, Richard, William, Sarah and Phebe.

Joseph (5), third child and first son of William (4) was born 3 mo., 5, 1763, and died 4 mo., 18, 1836. He was twice married, first to Abigail Worrall, of Aston, and then to Mary Marshall.

William (6), son of Joseph and Abigail (Worrall) Thatcher, was born 9 mo., 20, 1789, and died in Aston, 10 mo., 23, 1855, and was buried at Chichester. He married Beulah, born 4 mo., 19, 1793, daughter of Daniel Sharpless (3) and Hannah (Thomas) Sharpless; she died 3 mo., 10, 1871, at West Chester, Pennsylvania. Her father was Daniel Sharpless, a descendant of the first Daniel Sharpless, whose family came to America about the middle of the seventeenth century and settled on the shores of Pennsylvania. The pioneer Sharpless family, composed of John, his wife Jane and their seven children, settled upon the banks of Ridley creek, two miles north of the city of Chester, and made their first home near a steep bluff known as "Sharpless Rock." The name Sharpless (first spelled Sharples), means "skilled in labor," and the most imposing relic of the "Sharpless" handicraft is the fine old mansion on the hill which was built by the pioneer's youngest son Joseph, about the year 1700. It is filled with curious old cupboards and closets, and the floor is secured to the joists by wooden pins. The wife of Daniel Sharpless was a daughter of Isaac Thomas and Mary (Townsend) Thomas, and her father was a cabinet-maker, who manufactured old-fashioned long eight-day clocks.

William Thatcher (6), settled in New London township, Chester county, but finally removed to Birmingham, where all of his children were born except the oldest and youngest. The children were: 1. Sarah, born 8 mo., 16, 1813; married Joseph Dutton; 2. John, born 5 mo., 28, 1815; died May 31, 1815; 3. Phebe, born 4 mo., 30, 1816, died 5 mo., 3, 1816; 4. Daniel S., born 2 mo., 25, 1818; 5. Edith, born 4 mo., 7, 1820, died 1 mo., 12, 1872, in Goshen, unmarried; 6. Enos, born 8 mo., 7, 1822, died 12 mo., 22, 1881; married Deborah G. Tyson; 7.

Joseph, born 10 mo., 10, 1829, in Lower Oxford, died 4 mo., 18, 1836.

Daniel S. Thatcher (7), second son and fourth child of William (6) and Beulah Sharpless Thatcher, at an early age came to Delaware county and settled in Middletown. His education was received in the common schools of the town and county and his vocation was that of a farmer. He married, April 11, 1844, Mary Hoopes, born September 11, 1820, daughter of Joseph Hoopes and Jane (Ferrel) Hoopes, of Chester county. Their children were:

1. Jennie H., born March 25, 1845, died at Village Green, March 20, 1868; unmarried. 2. Joseph, born April 29, 1849, died August 21, 1853; 3. William P., born at Village Green, February 1, 1854, unmarried. 4. Thomas Hoopes, born February 1, 1854; 5. Edward, born December 22, 1857, died January 27, 1862. The father of this family, Daniel S. Thatcher, died November 26, 1901.

Thomas Hoopes Thatcher (8), son of Daniel S. and Mary (Hoopes) Thatcher, was educated in the public schools of the county and at Maplewood Institute. He has always been a farmer, and owns a fine farm of one hundred and three acres, and is interested in the Thatcher homestead farm and one in Upper Chester of one hundred and six acres, and owns a dairy of seventeen cows. Like his father and forefathers, he is a member of the Society of Friends, is a Republican in his political principles, and has held local offices, among them that of town clerk.

Mr. Thatcher was married June 14, 1883, to Susan B. Peters, daughter of William R. Peters, a miller and farmer of Aston township, Delaware county. They have two daughters, Mary F., born October 11, 1886, and Anna D., born October 13, 1893, who are both unmarried, and live with their parents.

HENRY FAUCETT, prominently identified with the agricultural, political and social interests of the township of Birmingham, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, traces his origin to George and Isabella Faucett, the former named being probably the founder of the family in Pennsylvania.

Henry Faucett, grandson of the above mentioned George Faucett, and grandfather of Henry Faucett, was a prominent citizen of the township of Westtown, Chester county, where the following named children were born to him by his marriage with Hannah ———: Ebenezer, born January 28, 1783; Margaret, born October 17, 1784; George, born October 15, 1786; Rebecca, born November 25, 1788; Sarah, born July 29, 1792; Hannah, born April 11, 1796; Anna, born

HENRY FAUCETT.

PRUDENCE G. FAUCETT.

November 18, 1800, and Margaret, born November 9, 1807.

George Faucett, second son of Henry and Hannah Faucett, and father of Henry Faucett, was born on the old homestead in Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 15, 1786. He was a farmer by occupation, and resided in this vicinity during his entire life time. He was united in marriage to Mary Yearsley, and their children were: Nathan, born December 27, 1823; Hannah N., born August 6, 1825; Henry, born January 12, 1828; George, born August 1, 1830; Mary Jane, born December 1, 1833; Ebenezer, born April 2, 1836; Joseph, born August 16, 1838, and Elizabeth, born June 6, 1840. The five eldest children were born in Westtown township, and the three younger members of the family were born in Birmingham township.

Henry Faucett, son of George and Mary (Yearsley) Faucett, was born January 12, 1828, in the township of Westtown, Chester county, and his education was acquired in the common schools of the vicinity. After completing his studies he turned his attention to farming, which occupation he has followed with a large degree of success up to the present time. After his marriage, Mr. Faucett removed to Birmingham township, Delaware county, and he is now the owner of a fine farm of fifty-six acres, with dairy included. Politically Mr. Faucett is a staunch Democrat. While he has been frequently solicited to accept public office, he has always declined, preferring to give his time to his private interests.

Mr. Faucett was united in marriage, December 19, 1850, to Prudence G. Smith, a daughter of Isaac and Annie (Grubb) Smith, a successful farmer of Newcastle county, Delaware. Their children are: Sallie, born April 6, 1852, died November 29, 1856; Henry Pudens, born August 21, 1862; he is associated with his father in the management of the farm, and has on his father's farm an extensive apiary, consisting of ninety-five colonies of bees, the product of which is shipped to all parts of the country; he married Ida Mathues, daughter of Charles Wilson and Mary Amanda (Graham) Mathues, residents of Delaware county, March 16, 1898, and they have one child, Henry M. Faucett, born January 2, 1899. Prudence G. (Smith) Faucett died November 2, 1898.

ISRAEL R. SCOTT. The first ancestor of the branch of the Scott family to which Israel R. Scott, a prosperous agriculturist of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, belongs, was Alexander Scott, who was born in England, subsequently came to the United States and settled at Gwynedd, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he was united in marriage to Jane Evans, a native of that county. Mr. Scott and his wife were members of the Society of Friends.

Israel Scott, son of Alexander and Jane (Evans) Scott, married Edith Lukins, a descendant of Edward Foulke, who with his wife and nine children emigrated from Wales and settled at Gwynedd, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, in 1698. Edward Foulke was a descendant of the twenty-sixth generation from King Alfred, and one of his descendants, Matilda, of the eighth generation, married Henry, first King of England, and the ancestry is traced thence through the Royal line of the Plantagenets to Edward First, King of England. Eleanor Foulke, daughter of Edward Foulke, married Henri Count De Barr, and Edward Foulke was a descendant of theirs in the twelfth generation, all connecting links of both sexes being on record. Edward Foulke, a resident of Gwynedd, Pennsylvania, was born in 1707, the son of Thomas and Geneve Foulke, and was united in marriage to Gainor Roberts, daughter of Edward Roberts, of Gwynedd.

Alexander Scott, son of Israel and Edith Scott, was born in Worcester, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, August 15, 1815, followed the occupation of farming during his active business career, was a Friend in religious sentiment, and a Republican in his political affiliations. He married Sarah Rhoads Jones, who was born in Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, September 13, 1821, a daughter of Norris and Hannah (Rhoads) Jones, and a descendant of John Blunston and his wife, Elinor (Brantmon) Blunston, whose daughter, Katharine Blunston, married Adam Rhoads. John Blunston held several prominent offices, and was appointed a member of the assembly of Pennsylvania by William Penn, counsel of state for the government of Pennsylvania, and served in that capacity from 1683 to 1701. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Scott are: 1. Norris J., who married Rebecca Smedley and two children have been born to them, viz: Philena, who married Charles Jacob and has one child, R. Hildegard Jacob; and Norris Alexander Scott; 2. Israel R., the subject of this sketch; 3. Margaret J., unmarried.

Israel R. Scott, son of Alexander and Sarah Rhoads (Jones) Scott, was born in Worcester, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, September 27, 1846, but at an early age accompanied his parents to Delaware county, where his education was acquired at the Westtown school. After completing his studies he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and is now the owner of a farm of one hundred and thirty acres of productive land in the township of Concord, where he resides with his sister, Margaret J. Scott.

Politically Mr. Scott is a firm advocate of the principles of the Prohibition party, always taking an active interest in the cause of temperance. Both he and his sister are prominent members of the Society of Friends.

JAMES H. TYSON. The Tyson family of Pennsylvania is of old Delaware county stock, the first of the name being among the early settlers to establish homes in this part of Pennsylvania, and has a representative in the present generation in the person of James H. Tyson, of Aston township, Delaware county.

His great-grandparents were James and Margaret Tyson, the former born 4 mo., 4, 1738, and the latter in 7 mo., 1741. James and Lydia Tyson, the grandparents of James H. Tyson, had by their marriage the following children: James Shelly, born April 4, 1802; he married Phoebe Mendenhall and (second) Hannah Dutton; 2. Lydia Ann, born April 9, 1804; she married Lewis Williams; 3. Mary P., born March 12, 1806; she married Charles Heacock; 4. Isaac H., born October 5, 1807; he married Lydia Thomas; 5. Isabella S., born February 20, 1810; she married David Craig; 6. Deborah G., born March 18, 1813; she married Enos Thatcher; 7. Judge, who was the father of James H. Tyson, of this review, and to be further mentioned; 8. Elwood, born April 16, 1819; he married Elizabeth Hannum.

Judge Tyson was born in Aston township, at what is now called Aston Mills, September 22, 1815. He was a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and he pursued his studies in the common schools of the district. On completing his education he began farming in connection with his father, and followed that vocation throughout his entire life. He married Suzanna Patterson, born February 22, 1827, a daughter of William and Suzanna (Trimble) Patterson, her father being a cattle dealer of Middletown township, Delaware county, and to them were born the following children: 1. Suzanna, the wife of Levi Roberts, by whom she has one child, Etta Marion; 2. James H., who resides on the homestead near Village Green, in Delaware county; 3. Mary E., the wife of Casper Faucett; 4. Lydia E., who died unmarried; 5. William F., deceased. The father died February 15, 1897, and his wife, Suzanna Patterson, died December 25, 1902. She was possessed of many excellencies of character and esteemed by all who knew her for her benevolence and kindness; she was a consistent member of the old Middletown Presbyterian church.

James H. Tyson was born in Aston township, Delaware county, January 26, 1851, and was educated at Chester and Concordville Academies. From the beginning of his active career he has devoted his energies to agricultural pursuits, being well known as a progressive and enterprising farmer. He is also a strong Republican in his political affiliations, but has refused to become a candidate for several township offices when solicited to do so by his fellow townsmen. He occupies a beautiful home standing in the midst of a valuable tract of land of ninety-eight acres.

GEORGE RUSH, a prominent business man of Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and for forty consecutive years the incumbent of the office of postmaster of Concordville, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 26, 1821, the son of Stephen and Margaret M. (Printz) Rush.

Stephen Rush, father of George Rush, was born at Reading, Pennsylvania, in 1779. He was related by cousinship to Dr. Benjamin Rush, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and he was a descendant of Capt. John Rush, who commanded a troop of horse in Cromwell's army. Stephen Rush acquired a liberal education in a private school of that city, and from the completion of his studies up to the year 1810 he was engaged in the coal and lumber business near Reading. He then became the proprietor and owner of the White Swan Tavern at Evansburg, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, which he successfully conducted for nine years, and at the expiration of this period of time he removed to Philadelphia, leased the hotel, now torn down, known as the "Sign of the Black Bear," which was situated at Third and Willow streets. He continued his management of this hotel up to the year 1822, when he leased another old landmark hotel known as "The Bull's Head," and under his capable and efficient control this became one of the leading and best patronized hotels in the city. In 1824 he returned to Evansburg where he continued to reside until 1836, when he retired from active pursuits of a business life and took up his residence in the city of Philadelphia. Politically Mr. Rush has been a lifelong Republican, and has been active in furthering the interests of his party in the various cities in which he has resided.

In 1800 Mr. Rush married Margaret M. Printz, daughter of John Printz, a prominent resident of Reading, Pennsylvania, whose ancestry dates back to Colonel John Printz, the first Swedish governor of New Sweden, on the Delaware river. The children of Stephen and Margaret (Printz) Rush were: 1. Catherine, deceased, was the wife of William Sugden; 2. Elizabeth, wife of the Rev. Samuel Seibert, and mother of ten children; 3. Mary, wife of Jacob Drinkhouse and they are the parents of ten children; 4. Margaret, united in marriage to Isaac Casselberry, and four children have been born to them; 5. Sarah, wife of David Heebuer, and four children have been born to them; 6. Lydia, wife of Charles Zeigler; 7. one unnamed who died in early childhood; 8. John, who married Catharine Yeager, and they are the parents of eight children; 9. Stephen, who married Miss Ketcham, and three children have been born to them; 10. Jacob, who married Sarah Bullock, and they have seven children; 11. George, further mentioned below; 12. Henry, who married Emma Moore and had sons and daughters; 13. Samuel, who married Sarah Lane and one child has been born to them. The father of these children died in 1856, leaving an honorable record and an untarnished name, and his wife, Margaret M. (Printz) Rush, passed away in the autumn of 1846.

George Rush, eleventh child of Stephen and Margaret M. (Printz) Rush, acquired his educational advantages at the private schools in Montgomery county. He then served an apprenticeship with his brother-in-law, Charles Zeigler, at Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, to learn the harness-making trade. He pursued his trade up to 1843, when he removed to Concordville, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and here continued in the same calling up to 1867, when he established a general store and successfully conducted the same up to 1892, when he retired from mercantile business and at present is engaged at the harness-making trade. During this period of three score years his name has stood as a synonym for honesty and integrity, and he has maintained the character of a sagacious business man, being noted for the display of judgment, prudence, honesty and foresight. In politics he is an advocate of the Republican party. He received the appointment of postmaster at Concordville in 1844, under a Democratic administration, and has held the office for the long period of forty consecutive years, thus demonstrating the esteem in which he was held by his friends and neighbors.

On November 17, 1845, Mr. Rush married Hannah (Wilkinson) Shee, born 10 mo., 1, 1820, a native of Rose Valley, Delaware county, and a daughter of Parke and Rachel (Wilkinson) Shee. Her father was a well known paper manufacturer of Delaware county. He was a son of Bertles and Cecelia (Parke) Shee. Bertles Shee served with high rank during the Revolutionary war and Cecelia Parke was a sister of John and Daniel Parke of Revolutionary fame. Daniel Parke, mentioned above, had a son who married Martha Dandridge, and after his death his widow married General George Washington. She had by her first husband two children.

The children of George and Hannah L. (Shee) Rush were: 1. Stephen Parke, born 9

mo., 29, 1847; he died 2 mo., 6, 1849; Charles Zeigler, born 9 mo., 27, 1849; he died 8 mo., 17, 1852; George Parke, born 5 mo., 13, 1852; he married Onida Hazelton, and resides in Chicago, Illinois, and they have two children, June and Hazel Rush; Henry Parke, born 4 mo., 9, 1854. died 4 mo., 14, 1863; John Shee, born 6 mo., 24, 1856; he married Ida Carswell, and they have two children, Natalie Carswell and John Shee Rush, Jr.

ROLPH M. HARVEY, a well known resident of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, who has been engaged in agricultural pursuits through his active business career, was born in Birmingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 12, 1843, a son of Evans and Hannah G. (Marsh) Harvey.

Evans Harvey (father) was born in Birmingham township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, 12 mo., 11, 1813, a son of Alban and Elizabeth Harvey, of the above named township. He attended the district school, where he obtained a good education which prepared him for the duties of life. He then engaged in farming on an extensive scale, and being a man of good judgment and great energy of character, his labors met with abundant reward so that he was enabled to accumulate a competency which he enjoyed in later life. Mr. Harvey married, 4 mo., 5, 1837, Hannah G. Marsh, who was born 12 mo., 14, 1816, a daughter of Dr. Rolph C. and Deborah (Hill) Marsh, of Concord township, and four children were born to them: Elizabeth, wife of Edward R. Gilpin, and they are the parents of four children; Alban, who married Mary P. Marshall, and two children have been born to them; John M., who married Mary Hannum; and Rolph M. Harvey. Evans Harvey died 10 mo., 8, 1871, and his wife died 6 mo., 26, 1889. Dr. Rolph C. Marsh, father of Mrs. Harvey, was born 6 mo., 17, 1783, a son of Christopher and Ann Marsh, was married at Friends' meeting house, Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, 1 mo., 7, 1808, to Deborah Hill who was born 10 mo., 12, 1781, a daughter of John and Mary (Gibbons) Hill. Dr. Marsh died 6 mo., 13, 1872, and his wife died 9 mo., 18, 1853.

Rolph M. Harvey obtained a practical education in the common schools of Concord township and after completing his course he devoted his energies to farming, which occupation he has continued up to the present time (1903). He operates a well cultivated farm of two hundred and fifteen acres, the estate of Ellis P. Marshall, deceased, and owns a fine dairy of sixty-five cows, from the proceeds of which he derives a goodly income. Mr. Harvey is energetic and capable in management, conscientious and thorough in his business transactions, and he has obtained a large share of the patronage in his line in that section of the state. Politically Mr. Harvey is an Independent Republican and inclined to be liberal in his views; he takes little part in political matters, preferring to devote his time and attention strictly to business, but has served in the capacity of school director.

On March 12, 1868, Mr. Harvey married Anna P. Marshall, a daughter of Ellis P. and Anna B. (Bartram) Marshall, the former named having been a prosperous farmer of Delaware county. The children born of this marriage are: 1. Dr. Ellis M., born February 5, 1869, a graduate of Swarthmore College and Pennsylvania University; he married Phoebe Scarlett, a daughter of Joel and Jane Scarlett, and they are the parents of three children: Jane S., born November 17, 1896; Anna Bartram, born July 25, 1899; and Ellis Marshall, born June 28, 1900; 2. Charles E., born July 24, 1871, unmarried; 3. Bartram R., born September 15, 1885, unmarried; both Charles E. and Bartram R. Harvey reside at home. Mr. Harvey and his family are regular attendants at the meetings of the Society of Friends, contributing liberally to its support. Mr. Harvey has traveled quite extensively during the past few years.

MARSHALL A. INGRAM. Among the prominent and prosperous business men of Elam, Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of Marshall A. Ingram, who, in 1877, established his present business, which has since grown to such an extent that it is now recognized as the best in its line in this section of the county. He was born in Darby, Pennsylvania, in 1850, and is one of a family of seven children born to Peter and Mary (Atmore) Ingram, their names being as follows: Sarah J., wife of Joseph R. Burner, and they are the parents of three children—Mary, Joseph and Sarah, all unmarried; Annie C., unmarried; J. Taylor, married B. Ella Larkin, and they have one child, Joseph T., now deceased; Joseph, unmarried; Letitia P., wife of Harry Gould, and mother of three children—Joseph, Taylor and Amy, are unmarried; Harriet, deceased, and Marshall A. Ingram.

Marshall A. Ingram acquired a practical education in the public schools of Concord township, whither his parents removed from Darby when he was only six years of age. After laying aside his school books he learned the trade of blacksmith and wheelwright, which he continuously followed up to the year 1877, when he engaged in business on his own account in Elam, and from the beginning met with a large degree of success. Some years later he added carriage making to his business, and now he is the proprietor of an extensive establishment which is noted far and near for the excellent quality of the work performed there and for the prompt manner in which orders are executed.

Mr. Ingram is a man of high moral character, the strictest integrity and a large degree of intelligence, and consequently his influence has been felt in the community. His political preferences are in accord with the principles of the Democratic party, and he has been chosen to serve in several local offices. He is a prominent member of the Knights of Pythias, the Improved Order of Red Men and the Senior Order of United American Mechanics.

On May 7, 1884, Mr. Ingram was united in marriage to Mary L. Pyle, daughter of Joseph L. Pyle, who is engaged in the carpenter trade in Elam, Concord township, Pennsylvania. Three children have been born of this union, namely: John, unmarried, Mary, unmarried, and Katherine Ingram, who died in childhood.

JOHN W. CARTER, a veteran of the Civil war, and serving in the capacity of supervisor of the township of Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, was born in Dilworthtown, Chester county, August 14, 1842, the son of Amos P. and Ann Carter.

Amos P. Carter, father of John Carter, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1812, educated in the common schools, and after completing his studies learned the trade of stone mason, which he followed for a number of years. He then devoted his energies to farming, and being an indefatigable worker met with gratifying success in this enterprise, and his careful supervision of the place made it one of the most thrifty and desirable farm properties in the locality. Mr. Carter married Anna Mershon, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and twenty-one children were born to them, the following named being the surviving members of the family at the present time (1903): Emma, wife of Eli Smith, who have one child; Mary, wife of Samuel Pyle, who are the parents of three children; De Maers, wife of Andrew Mathews, whose family consists of three children; Amos, who married Lydia Russ and four children have been born to them; Dilworth, who married Emma Branson, and they have three children; Joshua, who married Mary Stuckles, and three children have been born to them, and John W. Carter.

John W. Carter spent his boyhood days in Dilworthtown, Chester county, and enjoyed such educational advantages as the common schools afforded. He then assisted his father with the development and cultivation of the home farm until 1861, when he enlisted in Company D, Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Regiment, and served until the close of the war in 1865. He was twice wounded while participating in various engagements, and for his brave and heroic conduct at the battle of the Wilderness he was promoted to the rank of corporal and performed the duties of that position with credit and efficiency. After peace was declared, Mr. Carter returned to his home in Chester county, but the following year removed to Concord township, Delaware county, purchased a tract of land from his father and commenced farming operations on his own account. He is now the owner of a well cultivated farm of sixty acres devoted to the production of a general line of garden produce, for which there is always a large and constant demand. In his political views Mr. Carter is a Republican, and he was elected by that party to serve as supervisor of the town, a position which he is filling at the present time (1903). He is an active member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

On January 6, 1869, Mr. Carter married Lydia Cloud, daughter of Foulk and Margretta (Heacock) Cloud, and five children have been born to them: Amos D. died in childhood; Orlando F. married Emma Hinkson, and they have three children; William L. married Laura Pyle, and one child has been born to them; Margaret C. died in early youth, and Anna M. also died when quite young. Mr. Carter and his family are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

FRANCIS PARVIN WILLITS. Strong of purpose, persevering in effort, honorable in all business transactions, Francis P. Willits has won and maintained a position of prestige as a representative of the agricultural interests of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and at the same time commands the unqualified regard and confidence of those with whom he has been associated. He was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, November 3, 1856, the son of David and Charlotte (Parvin) Willits.

David Willits was born in Berks county, Pennsylvania, November 12, 1827, and he enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the district schools of that vicinity. Subsequently he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, continuing in this line of industry throughout his entire business career which was very successful. He was united in marriage to Charlotte Parvin, born 7 mo., 1833, a daughter of Francis Parvin, a practical and progressive farmer of Berks county. The following named children were born to this union: 1. William, born 10 mo., 4, 1852, married Amanda Yoder and they became the parents of four children, two of whom are now deceased; 2. Ellen, born 2 mo., 17, 1859, unmarried; 3. Sarah L., born 12 mo., 4, 1861, who died in infancy; 4. Francis P. Willits. The father of these children died at his home in Berks county, Pennsylvania, 3 mo., 9, 1863, and his wife, Charlotte (Parvin) Willits, died 1 mo., 29, 1863.

Francis P. Willits obtained his preliminary education in the public schools of Lower Oxford township, Pennsylvania, and this was supplemented by a thorough course of study at the Maplewood Institute, Delaware county, which qualified him for the active duties of life. He began his business career by conducting a store in Berks county, but in 1885 abandoned this enterprise and purchased a farm of ninety-five acres in Concord township, Delaware county, where he conducts general farming and dairying, having for the latter purpose thirty-five cows of a select breed. He is also interested in the cultivation of mushrooms, furnishing the New York markets with extensive shipments, and finding in this industry a very profitable source of income. The products from his gardens are of such excellent quality that they always find a ready sale, the fact that they came from his farm being a guarantee. In politics Mr. Willits is an Independent Republican, and has served in the capacity of school director for a number of years. He is an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Grange.

February 18, 1885, Mr. Willits married Elizabeth Paschall, born February 19, 1859, a daughter of Henry and Annie (Pancoast) Paschall, the former named being a practical and successful agriculturist of Concord township, Delaware county. Their children are Paul Lincoln, born March 23, 1887, and Joseph Henry, born June 16, 1889, both of whom reside at home with their parents. The family are regular attendants of the Episcopal church of Concord township, Mr. Willits being a member of the vestry.

OSBORN BOOTH, a veteran of the Civil war and one of the prominent citizens of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, traces his ancestry back to the year 1713 when, if tradition be correct, two brothers of the Booth family emigrated from England. One of them, whose name was Robert Booth, married and had among his children a son, Robert, who settled in Bethel township. His son, Thomas Booth, grandfather of Osborn Booth, was an extensive land owner in what is now Bethel township, Delaware county, where he resided for many years. He rendered material service to the patriot army before and during the battle of the Brandywine, having transported supplies with his own teams for Washington's army. He, however, took no aggressive part in the campaign, owing to conscientious scruples, but was zealously loyal to the cause of freedom. He married Phœbe Cloud, and the following named children were born to them: James, Joseph, Robert, Nathaniel, Jemima, John and Isaac Booth.

Isaac Booth, father of Osborn Booth, was born in Bethel township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in November, 1807. He received his early educational training in the schools of the neighborhood and after completing a course in a commercial school at Wilmington, Delaware, took up the practical duties of life. His first undertaking was to erect a store at what became known as Booth's Corner, of which he was the founder and owner for many years, and he here conducted a mercantile business and became known as a successful and enterprising merchant. He afterwards taught school for some years in Bethel township and was known as a useful and valued citizen. He married Mary McCay, of Concord township, Delaware county, a daughter of James and Elizabeth McCay, and five children were born to them: Phœbe A., who became the wife of Stephen Pierce, and nine children have been born to them; Elizabeth, died in early childhood; Osborn, to be further mentioned hereafter; Isaac Lee, who married Sarah Davis and has seven children; William, who married Mary Doyle, and they are the parents of two children.

Osborn Booth was born in Bethel township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, March 13, 1837, and received his education in the common schools of that vicinity. At an early age he began learning the carpenter trade, and being endowed with a fine receptive mind and by giving close attention to every detail he was soon master of the art of carpentering, which occupation he has followed with a large degree of success up to the present time (1903). In 1863 Mr. Booth enlisted in the One Hundred and Eighteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, otherwise known as the Corn Exchange Regiment, which was organized under the auspices of the Corn Exchange of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He participated in all the battles in which the regiment engaged, and was twice slightly wounded but he did not absent himself from duty in the service of his country. In his political affiliations he is an adherent of the principles and measures adopted by the Republican party. He has refused several offers of political positions, preferring to devote his time and attention strictly to business.

March 13, 1861, Mr. Booth married Catherine Pierce, daughter of Joseph C. and Mary

W. (Donaldson) Pierce. Her father was a prosperous farmer of Brandywine Hundred, New Castle county, Delaware. The children born of this marriage were: Mary, born August 28, 1862, who is the wife of W. H. Harrison, Jr., and they are the parents of three children: Catharine L., Wilda H. and Freda B.; Greta, born August 7, 1866, now deceased, who was the wife of Percy May; Elizabeth, born March 27, 1870, who is unmarried, and Oda, born July 11, 1872, wife of Dr. J. H. Fleming. Mr. Booth and his family are regular attendants of the Protestant Episcopal church of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

HOWARD TAYLOR MARVEL, a man of enterprise and ability, whose successful career in business has been characterized by abundant energy and sound judgment, traces his ancestry to Josiah Marvel, who was an esteemed and prominent resident of Sussex county, Delaware, where he reared a family of four children, who were born to him by his first wife—Raymond, Nutter, Peter P., and one name unknown.

Peter P. Marvel, son of Josiah Marvel, was born January 6, 1805, in Sussex county, Delaware. His boyhood and early manhood were spent in that state, from whence he removed to New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he became a useful and active citizen. He married Mary Vernon, daughter of Mordecai and Deborah Vernon, and the following named children were born to them: Josiah, born in 1831; Thomas, born September 10, 1833, died October 3, 1863; Henry Vernon (father), born in 1834; and Rebecca, born in 1839, died October 17, 1903, who became the wife of John Wilson, and they became the parents of one child, Mary Wilson, deceased. Peter P. Marvel, father of these children, died at the age of eighty-eight years. Mordecai Vernon, father of Mrs. Marvel, settled in Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his death occurred about the year 1792. He was a son of Thomas Vernon, who in turn was a son of Thomas Vernon, who was a resident of "Stanthorne," county Palatine of Chester, England, from whence he came to this country in 1682, and settled in Nether Providence. The monthly meetings of the Society of Friends were held at his residence, he being one of the prominent members of that organization. He served as juror at the first court held for the county of Chester.

Henry Vernon Marvel, son of Peter P. and Mary Marvel, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1834. He was united in marriage to Rebecca Hoopes, a native of York county, Pennsylvania, and a descendant of one of the oldest and most honored families in the state. They were the parents of two children, namely: Howard Taylor and Mary Marvel.

Howard T. Marvel, only son of Henry Vernon and Rebecca Marvel, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His father died when he was four years of age, and he then resided with his grandfather, Peter P. Marvel, until the death of the latter. He attended the common schools of Chester county, and acquired a good English education which prepared him for the responsible duties of manhood. In the spring of 1885 he settled on his present farm, which was known as the old Jones farm, situated near Chesterville, Franklin township; this property consists of one hundred and five acres of improved land, whereon Mr. Marvel conducts a general farming business, which has provided a profitable source of income. In politics Mr. Marvel is a Republican, and always gives his party an earnest and hearty support. In religion he adheres to the tenets of the Presbyterian faith, holding membership and serving in the capacity of elder in the Presbyterian church of Avondale.

Mr. Marvel was united in marriage, March 30, 1886, to Maggie J. McAllister, a native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and a daughter of James and Martha (Kay) McAllister, formerly of York county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: J. Ralph, born in 1887; William T., born in 1889; and Helen M., born in 1895.

◆◆◆

NATHAN L. PRATT. Abraham De Pratt came from France in the early part of the eighteenth century. He obtained a deed of land in Dublin, Pennsylvania, where he settled. Nothing more with reference to him is narrated except the fact that he died in 1709, leaving a will which was recorded October 24, of that year, and in which are mentioned his wife, Jane, and children—Thomas, Joseph, John, Jeremiah and Elizabeth.

Joseph Pratt, son of Abraham De Pratt, seems to have dropped the prefix which his father used, for the family name from his time appears as Pratt. May 9, 1717, he married Sarah Edwards, who was a daughter of William Edwards, of Middletown, Pennsylvania. They had six children, Alice, Ann, Sarah, Rose, Priscilla and Joseph. He bought a farm in Edgemont, Delaware county, and there established the Pratt homestead which at his death he bequeathed to his son. This property remained in the Pratt family to the fourth Joseph, when it was sold to James Davis.

Joseph Pratt, the only son of Joseph and Sarah (Edwards) Pratt, married Jane Davis, the daughter of David and Jane (Jones) Davis, and granddaughter of Ellis Davis, and brought her to Edgemont homestead. They had nine children: Abraham, Sarah, who died when six months old, Jane, Joseph, David, Mary, Priscilla, Thomas and Sarah (2). In 1768 Joseph Pratt bought at sheriff's sale two hundred and fifty acres of land in Marple, the property of Joshua Pennell, Jr., which he willed to his sons, David and Thomas. This property was a part of the section of land that William Penn called "Manor of Springtown," and David's portion was afterward named "Springton Farm." He died at his old home in Edgemont.

David Pratt, son of Joseph and Jane (Davis) Pratt, was born June 12, 1756. After his father's death, he settled on the Springtown homestead and changed the name to Springton. He laid out an extensive farm, and devoted his time to the improvement and cultivation of the land. He belonged to the Quaker element of that section, and was an elder in the Newtown Friends' Meeting. He married Lydia Hoopes, daughter of John and Christina (Reynolds) Hoopes, of Goshen, now West Chester, Pennsylvania. They had eleven children: 1. John, born December 6, 1779, died March 1, 1837; 2. David, born December 9, 1780, died October 26, 1823; 3. Joseph, born February 18, 1783, died February 1, 1835; 4. Jane, born March 5, 1785, died March 19, 1856; she married Nathan Garrett, and to them were born two children—Lydia, who became the second wife of George Allen, and Nathan, who married Esther, daughter of William Rhoads; 5. Abraham, born February 24, 1787, died October 12, 1858; he married Esther Hibbard; 6. Jeremiah, born May 18, 1789, died August 22, 1881; 7. Henry, born September 1, 1791, died March 4, 1866; 8. Lydia, born May 28, 1794, died September 28, 1877; she married (first) John Roberts, and (second) Paul Jones, both of whom had been married previously; 9. Christina, born August 30, 1796, died September 17, 1828; 10. Orpha, born December 4, 1798, died August 24, 1856; Christina, Orpha and David died single. 11. Randal, born September 30, 1801. David Pratt died February 20, 1844.

Randal Pratt, youngest child of David and Lydia (Hoopes) Pratt, was born on the Marple homestead and attended school in the neighborhood during his boyhood. He was, however, in a large measure, a self-educated man and developed a taste for scientific study which he put to practical use in many ways, the most important of which perhaps was that of inventing the first steel spring-tooth horse hay rake that was generally adopted by farmers in all parts of the country. He was a man of retiring and unobtrusive nature, and was never ambitious to become widely known as an inventor. He was a trustee of the Newtown Friends' Meeting for several years. He died April 3, 1866. He was married April 5, 1837, to Mary G. Lewis, a daughter of Nathan and Hannah (Goodwin) Lewis. The Lewis family was of Welsh origin, and could trace its genealogy back for several generations. Nathan, a son of Didymus and Phebe (Matlack) Lewis, was born in 1782, and died in 1868. Didymus, the son of Nathan and Margaret (Thomas) Lewis, was born in 1748, and died in 1811. Nathan, who was born in 1705, and died in 1788, was the son of William Lewis, born in Wales in 1682, and who died in 1731; William was a son of William and Ann Lewis, who were the first ancestors of the American branch of the Lewis family of which we have any authentic account.

To Randal and Mary G. (Lewis) Pratt were born the following named children: 1. Hannah L., born January 23, 1838, died November 8, 1840; 2. David, born April 8, 1839, died October 29, 1840; 3. Nathan L., born March 1, 1841; 4. Lydia, born February 3, 1843; 5. Randal H., born April 18, 1845, and died August 22, 1861; 6. Anna M., born March 15, 1847, died August 8, 1847; 7. Mary L., born October 27, 1848; 8. Margaret, born April 26, 1853. Of these children, Lydia married, in 1867, T. Dillwyn Dutton, born January 10, 1842, and died August 2, 1878. He was a son of Edmund and Tacy (Matlack) Dutton, and grandson of Thomas Dutton, the centenarian of Delaware county. Of this marriage were born three children: Randal P., born March 15, 1869; Edmund N., born February 24, 1877, and Mary T., born July 20, 1878. The eldest of these three children, Randal P. Dutton, owns the Rockwood truck farm in Newtown township. May 24, 1894, he married Elizabeth L., daughter of George and Anna (Thomas) Paschall, and to them were born two children: T. Dillwyn, December 24, 1896, and Edna L., November 28, 1901.

Nathan L. Pratt, son of Randal and Mary G. (Lewis) Pratt, was born and brought up on the Marple homestead that had been in the family for seventy-four years. He was educated at the Friends' Central School in Philadelphia, and on leaving school he returned to the farm in Marple. On his father's side, Mr. Pratt can claim as ancestors the Huguenots, whose illustrious descendants bore a conspicuous part in the early government of the Republic, for three of the presidents who were at the head of the Congress of Philadelphia during the Revolution were of Huguenot parentage. On his mother's side he is descended in a direct line from the Welsh who originated from the Britons, and who in the early days of the Pennsylvania colony were prominent in many industrial enterprises. His wife was Phebe L. Bartram, daughter of Israel L. and Mary Ann Bartram, and they had one son who died in infancy. Mrs. Pratt died January 17, 1898.

The mother of Mr. Pratt is still living, and at the advanced age of eighty-eight years is a remarkable example of the well-preserved woman of a past generation.

SAMUEL M. RITTER. The career of Samuel M. Ritter, a prominent agriculturist of the township of Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, stands in evidence of the fact that farming, if properly conducted, can be classed among the occupations that bring success to those who follow it. He was born in Baltimore county, Maryland, September 23, 1854, the son of George W. and Eliza (Wallace) Ritter.

George W. Ritter, father of Samuel M. Ritter, also claimed the state of Maryland as his birthplace, having been born in Baltimore county in 1809. After receiving a rudimentary English education he devoted a brief period of time to farming, and then learned the trade of blacksmith, which he continued to follow during his active years. He was united in marriage to Eliza Wallace, a native of Baltimore county, Maryland, and the following named children were born to them: Annie M., wife of Jarett Lee; George H., who married Louise Hollbrook, and they are the parents of one child; Rebecca J., who is the wife of John L. Tucker and they have a family of six children; John S., who married Rebecca Armstrong, and three children have been born to them; William W., who died, aged nineteen; Mary L., who is the wife of Isaac Hollbrook; Samuel M., the subject of this review, and Millard Fillmore, the youngest of this family. The father of these children died December 31, 1882, and his wife, Eliza Wallace, about 1868.

Samuel M. Ritter, second youngest son of George W. and Eliza (Wallace) Ritter, was educated in the public schools of Baltimore county, Maryland, and after completing his studies began life as a farmer in his native county. In 1880 he removed to Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he continued to follow the congenial pursuits to which his early life was devoted. He is the owner of a well cultivated farm of fifty-five acres and a dairy of twenty head of animals, and by giving his personal supervision to the work is able to realize a goodly income from his labor. In his political convictions Mr. Ritter is an adherent of the principles of the Republican party. He has served his township in the capacity of school director for three years. He is prominently affiliated with the Knights of Malta, the Knights of Pythias, the Patrons of Husbandry and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

On January 31, 1882 Mr. Ritter married Rosa A. Place, born November 23, 1853, a daughter of John and Jane (De Ruis) Place. Her father was for many years a resident of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The children of this marriage are: Howard Wallace, born January 9, 1883; Jennie A., born March 4, 1884, and Katharine L., born May 14, 1889. The family attend the Methodist Episcopal church.

HENRY B. PRATT, an intelligent, successful and highly respected citizen of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and a worthy representative of a family whose history dates back to colonial days, was born in Thornbury, October 7, 1832.

Joseph Pratt, grandfather of Henry B. Pratt, was born July 14, 1779, and received his education in the country schools of the neighborhood. He learned the trade of carpenter with his cousin Jesse Reece, and continued at this occupation for a number of years in Middletown, but later in life removed to New London township, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was twice married, his first wife having been Priscilla Calvert, who was born December 15, 1781, daughter of Nathaniel and Mary (Worrall) Calvert, residents of Upper Providence, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Nathaniel, born September 28, 1803, died September 17, 1882; Daniel L., born January 21, 1805, died April 9, 1891; Esther, born December 31, 1806, died April 16, 1841; Lydia, born January 26, 1809, died March 5, 1894; John, born April 15, 1812, died June 12, 1832; Abraham, born November 25, 1814, died in childhood; Mary C., born January 10, 1816, long a resident of West Chester, Pennsylvania, and now deceased; and George, born March 29, 1818, who died in 1901. Mr. Pratt, with his wife and six minor children, were admitted into membership at the Goshen Monthly Meeting, January 28, 1818. Mrs. Pratt died September 25, 1820, and was buried at Middletown Meeting. On March 7, 1821, Mr. Pratt married Ruth Logan, who was born September 2, 1795, daughter of William and Jane (Way) Logan, and her death occurred in Kemblesville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 31, 1878.

Nathaniel Pratt, father of Henry B. Pratt, was born in the township of Edgemont, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, September 28, 1803, and was reared and received his education in the district school of that locality. He learned the trade of blacksmith which he followed at Chelsea, Bethel township, until the year 1851, when he removed to Concord and turned his attention to farming interests. During the Civil war he served as president of the board of county commissioners, and in this capacity carried as much as fifty thousand dollars to the front to pay soldiers' bounties. In 1866 he was a candidate for congress, but was defeated by his opponent, John M. Broomall. He was united in marriage to Susanna Baker, born in Middletown, March 23, 1805, daughter of Henry and Susanna (Fox) Baker. Their children were: Henry B., born October 7, 1832, and Joseph, born September 24, 1834. Mr. Pratt died in the town of Thornbury, September 17, 1882, survived by his widow who passed away at Concord, December 9, 1893.

Henry B. Pratt, eldest son of Nathaniel and Susanna (Baker) Pratt, was educated in the common schools and the academy of Unionville, Chester county, and subsequently took up different branches of mechanics, being at the present time (1903) well versed in this lore. For a number of years he was the proprietor of a store in Avondale, Chester county, but of late years he has given his entire time to the cultivation and improvement of his farm of sixty acres and dairy of twenty head, which is situated in Concord township. He is an interested observer of events, an independent thinker, for many years was a great reader and writer, and has traveled extensively throughout the United States. In politics he is an Independent; he has persistently refused to accept the local offices which have been tendered to him.

In Middletown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, on March 16, 1859, Mr. Pratt married Amy Darlington, who was born in Middletown, February 20, 1837, daughter of Jared and Mary (Dutton) Darlington, of Middletown. Their children are: Susanna, born April 1, 1860, became the wife of Charles Stiles and they are now the parents of six children; Mary D., born August 2, 1861, became the wife of John Rhodes and they have three children; Sarah D., born December 1, 1863, wife of Chauncey J. Buckley and mother of seven children; Emily, born September 19, 1865, died September 21, 1865; Albert Darlington, born May 3, 1867, unmarried, and Nathaniel Calvert, born August 26, 1872, unmarried.

SWITHIN CHANDLER WALKER, a well-established business man of Pennsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is known throughout the section as a dealer in wagons, carriages and agricultural implements. He was born in Newcastle county, Delaware, January 21, 1871, a son of William H. and Annie P. (Shortlidge) Walker.

William H. Walker (father) was born in Newcastle county, Delaware, March 21, 1828, the son of John and Edith (Sharpless) Walker, the former named having been born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1773, and died in 1860 at the advanced age of eighty-seven years, and the latter was born in 1790, and died in 1869 aged seventy-nine years. William H. Walker was educated in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, and since attaining manhood has been recognized as one of the most substantial citizens of the community in which he resides, and stands for the most progressive methods in agriculture. In 1858 Mr. Walker married Annie P. Shortlidge, who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 10, 1834, a daughter of George and Martha (Hutton) Shortlidge, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. George Shortlidge was born in 1800, and died in 1874 in the seventy-fifth year of his age; his wife, Martha (Hutton) Shortlidge, was born in 1802, and died in 1886 aged eighty-four years. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Walker are the parents of nine children: 1. Edith, who became the wife of Henry Thompson of Wilmington, Delaware, and died November 25, 1898, leaving two children—Harold E. and Henry H. Thompson; 2. Professor J. Eugene, of Media, Pennsylvania, who married Eva Hannum, and they are the parents of one child—Evelyn Walker; 3. Phœbe, who became the wife of Wilson Barnard, and their family consists of four children—J. Chandler, Eugenia, Anna and Julian Barnard; they reside in Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania; 4. John S., a resident of Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, who married Elizabeth Shortlidge, and they are the parents of one child—Robert M. Walker; 5. Julian C., an attorney-at-law of Wilmington, Delaware; 6. William H., Jr., a resident of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; 7. Swithin Chandler, mentioned hereinafter; 8. Elizabeth H., who resides in Hockessin, Delaware; 9. Sharpless, an attorney-at-law of Miles City, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Walker are members of the Society of Friends.

Swithin C. Walker, seventh child and fifth son of William H. and Annie P. (Shortlidge) Walker, was educated at Shortlidge's Academy, a well known school of Media, Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1891. His first opportunity in the way of employment was in the lumber business in Florida. He did not, however, remain long in the south and upon returning home he became a bookkeeper with A. & W. Bernard at Chadds Ford Junction. In 1896 he purchased the establishment and has since conducted it under the name of S. C. Walker & Co., achieving a fair degree of success in the management of the same. He deals largely in wagons, carriages, harness, agricultural implements, lumber, coal, grain, hay, feed, plaster and cement. While not an active politician, Mr. Walker is interested in the success of the Republican party and an advocate of its principles. He bears his part in local public affairs, and is now serving a second term as justice of the peace in Delaware county, where he resides. He is an honored member of the Grange.

Mr. Walker married, June 20, 1900, Esther Collins Davis, who was born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, July 4, 1878, a daughter of Charles and Mary (Coulter) Davis, the former named being a retired gentleman of Chadds Ford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Walker acquired her education at Darlington Seminary, from which institution she was graduated in 1897, and she is now a member of a valued worker in the Protestant Episcopal church of Chadds Ford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

PENNOCK SPENCER, a leading farmer of Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the descendant of an old and honored family who have occupied the original home for several generations.

Samuel Spencer, his great-grandfather, born about the middle of the eighteenth century, came from Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, at some time during the latter part of this period, and settled on a six hundred acre tract of land in New London township, now Franklin township. Here in 1802 he built the home which is still standing in a good state of preservation, and is occupied by the great-grandson, Pennock Spencer.

Samuel Spencer had one son, Jonathan, born February 20, 1778, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a member of the Society of Friends. He married Lydia Michner, daughter of Mordecai Michner. She was born November 12, 1788, and died June 25, 1868, having long survived her husband, who passed away December 29, 1841. They were the parents of the following named children: Alice, born November 22, 1815; died in childhood; Samuel, born August 4, 1816; Phebe, born August 6, 1818, died young; Jesse, born July 22, 1820, died in childhood; Sidney, born October 13, 1822, died in childhood; Jesse, born October 2, 1824; Rachel, born October 15, 1826; Alice, born September 1, 1829; David, born August 29, 1831; Phebe, born August 7, 1834.

Samuel, first son and second child of Jonathan and Lydia (Michner) Spencer, received his education in the public schools. He inherited the homestead from his father, and he followed farming during his life. Like his father his religious views were those of the Quakers, and he was an elder in the West Grove Friends' meeting. In politics he belonged to the Whig and Republican party, and served in many of the local offices of the township. His wife was the daughter of Nathaniel and Ruth (Woodrow) Pennock, and their children were: Jonathan, born January 7, 1842, died in childhood; Ruth

Bennoch Spencer

Anna, born August 29, 1843, who resides at the old homestead; Pennock, born February 6, 1845; Lydia, born August 30, 1846, on the homestead; Joel, born March 30, 1848, residing in Lenni, Delaware county, Pennsylvania; Emma, born June 4, 1850, died at three years of age. Mr. Spencer died May 22, 1890, several years after his wife, who passed away January 1, 1882.

Pennock Spencer, second son and third child of Samuel (2) and Phebe (Pennock) Spencer, was born February 6, 1845. He was educated at the public schools of his native township, and at Kennett Square. He resides on the old homestead in the house built by his great-grandfather, Samuel Spencer, in 1802. Mr. Spencer, while actively engaged in agriculture, has also taken considerable interest in politics, having held many of the local offices in the township under the Republican party. He is also an elder and overseer in the West Grove Friends' meeting. He was first married October 4, 1873, to Susan B. Woolston, a daughter of Thomas Woolston, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. She died in January, 1875. He married again, April 3, 1884, Susan Way, daughter of William and Mary A. Way, of New London township. There was born to them a son named De Leon, January 28, 1885, who is at home. This second wife died January 8, 1887. His third wife was Elizabeth Barber, daughter of William Barber, of Camden, New Jersey. They were married March 23, 1892.

THOMAS WALLACE. The first ancestor of the Wallace family of whom there is any authentic information was Thomas Wallace, who emigrated from Scotland with his wife Elizabeth soon after the year 1800. They settled in the district known as Germantown, Philadelphia, and here they reared their family of six children who were as follows: 1. William Henry, who married Katherine Kaiser; 2. Thomas, who was the father of the subject of this sketch; 3. Elizabeth, 4. Anne, 5. Mary, all unmarried; 6. Susan, who married Crawford Dawes, of Philadelphia. The mother of these children, Elizabeth Wallace, was the first of the parents to die, and she is buried with her husband, Thomas Wallace, in the family plot in Woodlands Cemetery, Philadelphia.

Thomas, second child and second son of Thomas and Elizabeth Wallace, was born in Philadelphia in 1817, where he received a good education in the public schools. He went into the dry goods business in that city and was a well known merchant for many years. He was twice married, the first wife being Elizabeth McClure, whose children were: 1. Frank, who died in infancy; 2. Charles, who also died in infancy; 3. Laura, who married E. W. Keene, and had one child, Edward, who died in early life; 4. Elizabeth, who died in 1884, married Albert F. Tenney and had two children, Frank and Laura, of whom the former is now deceased; 5. Stuart, who died in 1892, married Ella Foazer and had one son Frank; 6. Thomas, whose name appears at the head of this article. The mother of this family, Elizabeth (McClure) Wallace, died August 20, 1860, and Thomas Wallace married Emily Bodine, who is still living. Three children were born of the second marriage, namely: Isabel and Emily, both deceased, and Bodine. Thomas Wallace died in 1877. He was known as a just and conscientious man in all the affairs of life, and it has been truly said that he bore the ill-will of no man.

Thomas, Jr., was born in Philadelphia, March 22, 1854, and attended the Germantown Academy, where he gained a thorough fundamental training. On leaving school he learned telegraphy, and on showing his proficiency in this line was given a position by the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was a trustworthy and efficient employe, and he soon won promotion, and in 1884 he was given charge of the railroad station of the company at Chaddsford, the duties of which he has faithfully discharged up to the present time. But he has also shown himself to be a man of varied capability, and his popularity was recognized in 1885 by his selection for the office of postmaster of the town, and for eighteen years he has been the capable servant of Uncle Sam as well as the worker for the railroad corporation.

Mr. Wallace married, April 7, 1888, Miss Annie D. Laferty, born December 24, 1864, the daughter of Lewis and Mary (Dickinson) Laferty, a farmer of Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and four children were born to the union: Arthur P., born February 19, 1889. Thomas Lewis, born May 10, 1891. Mary, born July 2, 1893. Emily B., born March 18, 1896.

The family are members of the Baptist church and are well liked in social circles. Mr. Wallace has voted the Republican ticket and shows his interest in education by serving on the school board.

HARRY K. GALLAGHER, prominent among the younger business men of Chadds Ford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is proprietor of one of the largest general merchandise stores in the town. He is active in all public concerns of the village, and a popular member of various fraternal orders.

His father, George C. Gallagher, was born in Maryland, where he grew up and was educated in the public schools. He began the mercantile business as a clerk, afterward engaging in business independently at Avondale and at Toughkenamon, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was diligent and foresighted, and prospered as a merchant, and it was with him that his son, Harry K., received his training in business. George C. Gallagher married Phœbe H., daughter of Thomas and Martha Humes, of Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher were members of the Presbyterian church of Avondale, and Mrs. Gallagher especially was an earnest worker in all church and charitable undertakings. She was instrumental in establishing the Presbyterian church at Toughkenamon, and since her death her interest and enthusiasm have been greatly missed among her co-workers. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher were as follows: Harry Kirk, who has already been mentioned; Bertha E., who married William Pierson; Mabel H., who became the wife of Harry Mock; Raymond T., who is married; Ethel M., who married George Kirby; and Paul, who is single.

Harry K. Gallagher, oldest child of George C. and Martha (Humes) Gallagher, was born at Toughkenamon, New Garden township, 5 mo., 2, 1869, and educated in the public schools of the village, taking a later course in Miss Hannah M. Cope's academy at the same place. After leaving school he was employed as a salesman at various places up to 1901, when he felt that his experience warranted him in establishing himself in business. He opened the store at Chadds Ford, and the venture has proved successful. In his business career he has been dependent on his own efforts from the beginning, and his energy and prompt response to all demands have brought him a gratifying share of the public patronage. He is a member of Concord Lodge No. 625, Free and Accepted Masons, Birmingham Lodge No. 940, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Winona Tribe, No. 75, Improved Order of Red Men.

Harry K. Gallagher and Nellie G. Arment were married 4 mo., 24, 1895. Mrs. Gallagher was a daughter of John and Elizabeth J. (Crossgrove) Arment. One child, Curtis H., was born to Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher, 1 mo., 20, 1896.

CHEYNEY. John Cheyney was a resident in Middletown township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania as early as 1715. He died near the close of the year 1722 and by will devised all his estate to his two sons, John and Thomas, except £5, which was to be paid to Cheyney Waldron, in England. The sons soon after this returned to England, presumably to their native parish, and on January 16, 1724, John Bellers, of London, merchant, conveyed to John Cheyney and Thomas Cheyney, late of Middletown, in the county of Chester, in Pennsylvania, but now of Upper Lamborne, in the parish of Chipping Lamborne, county of Berks, England, 1500 acres of land in Pennsylvania, for £360. This land had been purchased from William Penn, perhaps as a speculation, but the owner had never come to settle thereon. It was located in Thornbury township, at and near the present Cheyney Station. The new purchasers returned to Pennsylvania to occupy the land, and early in 1726 Thomas Cheyney married Elizabeth Hickman, daughter of Benjamin and Ann (Buffington) Hickman, of Westtown. He died in August, 1728, leaving two daughters, Mary and Ann. The latter married James Jefferis, and they with their children were living at Jefferis Ford, on the east branch of Brandywine, at the time of the Revolution. Elizabeth Cheyney, the widow, was married April 20, 1730, to Jacob Vernon, of Thornbury, by whom she had children, Abraham, Lydia, Elizabeth; Phebe, who became the wife of Major John Harper, and Jacob Vernon, Junior.

John Cheyney, Jr., was married at Christ church, Philadelphia, November 3, 1730, to Ann Hickman, born February 14, 1713, daughter of Benjamin and Ann Hickman, of Westtown. They settled on a part of the Cheyney tract in Thornbury, where he died in 1745. The Hickman women were members of Concord Friends' Meeting, and were disowned for marriage by a minister to those not Friends. After John's death his widow made an acknowledgment for her offense and was received into membership again, 9 mo., 6, 1749. Her son John Cheyney was also admitted 3 mo., 5, 1761, and continued in membership until his death. The children of John and Ann Cheyney were five in number, all young at their father's death, as follows:

Thomas, b. December 12, 1731; d. January 12, 1811; see below.

John, b. June 20, 1733; d. October 8, 1806; m. 5 mo., 20, 1761, Deborah Townsend, widow of John Townsend and daughter of Richard Jones.

Joseph, b. January 12, 1735; d. August 10, 1794; m. Edith Mendenhall and had fourteen children, Lydia, Samuel, Esther, Jesse, Mary, Joseph, Anne, Curtis, Abel, Jane, Elizabeth, Hannah, Phebe, Waldron.

Mary, b. February 1, 1737; d. September 30, 1820; m. Richard Riley, Esq., March 18, 1757.

Richard, b. March 23, 1739; d. June 17, 1791; m. September 16, 1765, Mary Hamum, and had children, John H., William, Charles, Jane, Elizabeth and Mary.

Thomas Cheyney, the eldest son, married, December 26, 1755, Mary Taylor, widow of Philip Taylor and daughter of John and Margaret Riley, of Marcus Hook, formerly from England. She died in 1766, a few hours after the birth of her son John, and in 1769 Thomas married Mary

Vernon, widow of his cousin Abraham Vernon, and daughter of William and Deborah (Woodward) Bennett, of East Bradford. She was born 8 mo., 24, 1731, and died 7 mo., 9, 1819; buried in the Cheyney family burial ground, established by her husband. By both wives he had nine children:

Ann, b. March 29, 1756; d. September 30, 1829, unmarried.

Lucy, b. October 2, 1757; d. January 25, 1802; m. Benjamin Hickman.

Richard, b. January 16, 1759; d. 1825; m. and settled in Redstone.

Thomas, b. January 7, 1762; d. July 23, 1809; m. Ann Wilson.

Mary, b. 1763; m. Abraham Johnson and removed to Virginia.

John, b. June 2, 1766; removed to Redstone; m. Tacy Graves.

Alice, b. October 28, 1769; d. April 10, 1855; m. Francis Hickman.

Elizabeth, b. October, 1771; d. April 18, 1847; m. James Hickman.

William, b. November 18, 1773; d. May 1, 1831; see below.

Thus, at the outbreak of the Revolutionary war, Thomas Cheyney was a man of about forty five years of age, with a large family of eleven children, and some of them quite young. The following anecdote has been preserved in history, but at what time it was first committed to paper is unknown to the writer:

"While Washington was in a state of painful uncertainty respecting the movements of the British army on the morning of the day of the battle of Brandywine, Squire Thomas Cheyney, a citizen of Thornbury township, rode up to the forces under Sullivan with intelligence that the main body of the British army had crossed the Brandywine and was already at hand, approaching from the north; and, being uncourteously received by that General, demanded to be led to the commander-in-chief. This was done, and, although Washington was at first disposed to doubt the correctness of the information, he was at length convinced of its truth, and immediately disposed of his troops to meet the emergency. It is said that some of the General's staff spoke rather sneeringly of the rustic Squire's information, which roused his temper. 'If you doubt my word,' said he to the commander-in-chief, 'put me under guard until you can ask Anthony Wayne or Persie Frazer if I am a man to be believed,' and then, turning to the General's attendants, he indignantly exclaimed, 'I would have you to know that I have this day's work as much at heart as e'er a blood of you!'"

It was doubtless this incident that brought him into public notice, and we find that a little more than a month after this event he was appointed a sub-lieutenant for Chester county, October 16, 1777, and in that capacity he was active in organizing and equipping the militia for defense. On the same date, in supreme executive council, "An order was drawn on David Rittenhouse, Esq., treasurer of the state, in favor of Col. Thomas Cheyney, sub-lieutenant of the county of Chester, for the sum of two thousand dollars, to be charged to Colonel Smith, lieutenant of the said county, for the purpose of paying substitutes and purchasing blankets, for which sum he is to account." (Colonial Records, xi, 321.)

On October 21, 1777, he was appointed a commissioner to seize the personal property of those supposed to be unfriendly to the American cause (xi, 329).

October 24, 1777, it is represented that he and Colonel William Gibbons had written to council respecting Jonathan Hunter and George Hunter, who were suspected of loyalty to King George (xi, 360).

October 31, 1777, President Wharton wrote to Colonels Cheyney and Gronow, urging them "to take all prudent & effectual measures to form three of four Troops of Light Horse out of your Militia; taking herein the advice & direction of General Potter, on whom they greatly rely. These you are to put under his direction, subordinate however to the Comr-in-Chief and Gen. Armstrong." (Archives, v. 732.)

December 16, 1777, Thomas Cheyney was appointed, with others, to take subscriptions for the Continental Loan. (2d Archives, iii, 711.)

May 6, 1778, he was appointed an agent for forfeited estates, to seize and dispose of the real estate of persons attainted of treason to the colonies. (Colonial Records, xi, 503; 2d Archives, iii, 737.) In Council, June 4, 1778, the following letter was read:

"June ye 2d, 1778.

"To the Honorable the Executive Council of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania Humbly Sheweth:

"Whereas the Enemy in their Rout from the Head of Elk to Philadelphia Committed Many Roberies and Plundering on the Inhabitants of they several Townships in my District as they Pass'd through, (To Wit:) the Townships of Newgarden, Kennett, Newlin Town, Pennsborough, East and West Bradford, Birmingham, Concord, Ashtown, Middletown, Edgmont, Thornbury, West Town, seizing Horses, Cattle, Sheep & Swine, and Goods, Grain & Provisions of all kinds, and in many Places What they Could not Carry off they wantingly Destroyed, Which has Greatly Distressed said Inhabitants: Therefore, as the Law is silent in Respect to the Inhabitants Under the above Circumstances, it would be Granting a Particular favor to your Humble servent if your sentiments Upon the above Particulars Could be made known to me.

"THOMAS CHEYNEY."

(2d Archives, iii, 201.)

On the same day, in council, it is noted that "Colo. Hannum & Colo. Cheyney having represented that they are very confident that the Guard of Men ordered on the 22nd ultimo, is necessary for the purpose of Collecting the fines due for non-service in the Classes of Militia called out by order of Council in the County of Chester, and as the difficulties attending that duty is evidently greatly lessened by the preparations made by the Enemy for leaving the City of Philadelphia," it is therefore ordered that this guard do proceed to camp with the classes from which they were to be drawn. (Colonial Records, xi, 507.)

March 30, 1780, Thomas Cheyney was again commissioned a sub-lieutenant for Chester county, and as such signed the returns of officers for some of the battalions, May 10, 1780. (2d Archives, iii, 736, xiv, 93, 120.) He was appointed a Justice of the Peace on October 9, 1784, and commissioned a Judge of the Common Pleas, October 13, 1784. (2d Archives, iii, 733.)

In an alphabetical list of Revolutionary Soldiers (2d Archives, xiii, 35) we find the names of Richard Cheyney and Thomas Cheyney. It appears that Richard was in the Seventh battalion of lighthorse, Col. George Pierce, 1780-1. (2d Archives, xiv, 127.) Richard Riley, who married the only sister of Thomas Cheyney, took an active part in the cause of independence, being a deputy to the provincial convention, July 15, 1774, and a member of the Provincial convention, July 15, 1774, and a member of the Provincial Conference, June 18, 1775. (Hist. Chester County, 711; 2d Archives, iii, 678.)

About 1793 a correspondence was revived between Thomas Cheyney and relatives in England, and several letters or copies of letters written by him are among the possessions of the Pennsylvania Historical Society. Their rustic, jovial style would indicate a mind on good terms with his surroundings, and the use of the plain language shows the influence of Quaker associations. His principal correspondent was Ann (or Nancy) Westbury, whose grandmother was Elizabeth Waldron, perhaps a sister to the first John Cheyney, as she named her son Cheyney Waldron. Her other children were Thomas, William, Elizabeth and Ann, of whom Elizabeth married Richard Pinnell and was the mother of Ann Westbury. In one of his letters Thomas Cheyney writes thus: "Thee tells me if thee hadst the advantage of the feather's race thee should direct thy Corse this way. My dear Nancy, if thee was Drest in Feathers thee wouldst make a Drole appearance indeed. The whiggs some years ago used to dress the Torys in feathers with the addition of Tar. They would make them Look Prity slick, quick time, but that is Gone quite out of fashion."

William Cheyney, youngest son of Thomas and Mary, married Elizabeth Jones, born 1772; died 9 mo., 2, 1850; daughter of Richard and Hannah (Harper) Jones. He inherited the homestead with 150 acres of land and was called farmer William to distinguish him from another of the same name. His children who lived to marry were four in number:

Rufus T., d. July 3, 1841. See below.

Alice, m. February 23, 1832, Nathan Gheen, and October 31, 1839, Garrett Scott. She died February 9, 1872.

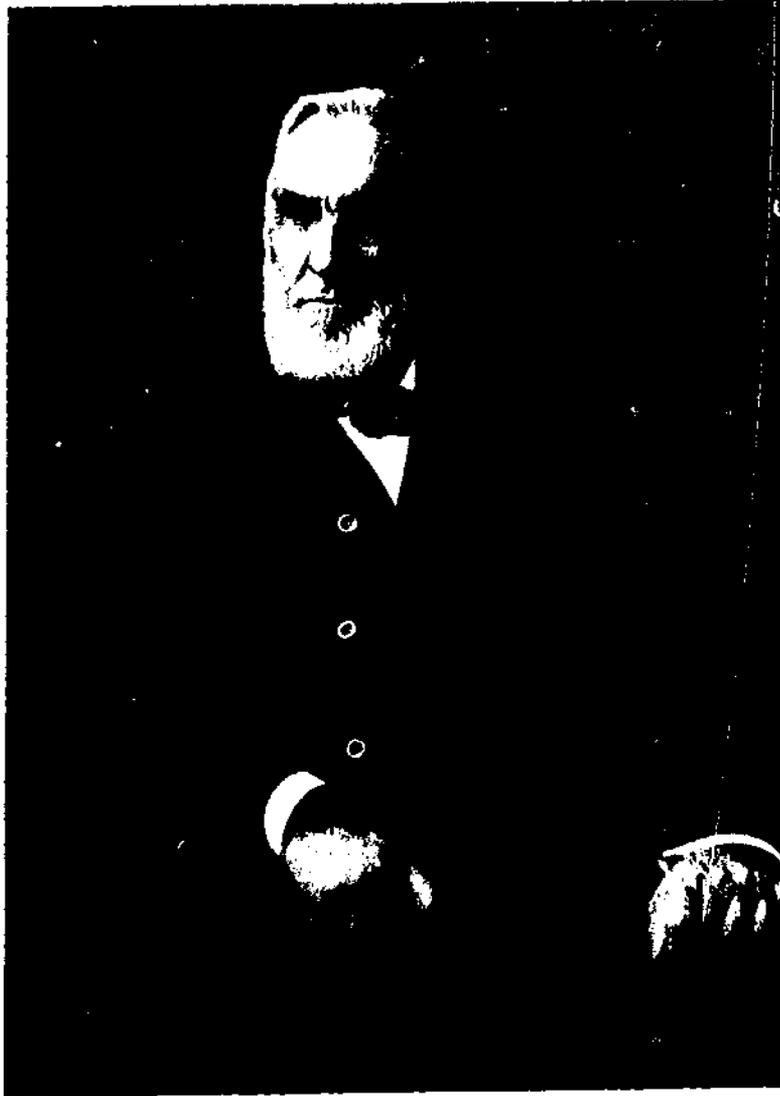

Maria, m. to William Haines, of New London, had fourteen children.

Thomas W., b. March 10, 1814; d. June 1, 1866; m. Jane B. Ashbridge. Like his grandfather he was known as Squire Cheyney. He was collector of internal revenue for the U. S. government and died suddenly, sitting in his office, in West Chester, leaving several children.

Rufus T. Cheyney, son of William and Elizabeth, was married February 23, 1832, to Sarah Gheen, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Osborne) Gheen, and sister to Nathan Gheen, who married his sister Alice. The two couples were married on the same day. He died of consumption and his widow was buried by his side, October 22, 1843, at the family burial ground in Thornbury.

William G. Cheyney, son of Rufus T. and Sarah, was born in Thornbury, Chester county, November 8, 1832; was educated at the public schools and at Jonathan Gause's famous boarding school, in this county. He then entered a flour and grist mill in Westtown township, but after working here for twenty-seven months he took up the trade of painting, which he has since followed. He was married at Media, August 21, 1856, to Louisa E. Baker, born in Edgemont, January 8, 1837; daughter of Abel and Ann (Sill) Baker, of the latter place, and they have had eleven children: 1. Sarah Jane, died in infancy; 2. Abel, married Mary Hipple, and has two children; 3. Rufus Clifton, unmarried; 4. Anna Louisa, married John Hipple, and has five children; 5. Hannah Ann, died in infancy; 6. Harvey, died in infancy; 7. Samuel S., married Anna Brinton, and has three children; 8. Jacob Berstler, married Mary Getty, and has one child; 9. Effic Florence, unmarried; 10. Wellington Hickman, unmarried; 11. Clifford, unmarried.

William G. Cheyney is a Democrat in politics, and has served in the offices of school director, justice of the peace and constable. He is a member of the Red Men, and of the Junior Order United American Mechanics. His business is now conducted by his sons, and he lives quietly in a beautiful home in Thornbury, Delaware county.

P. H. Hoagler

ROBERT HENRY HODGSON. A notable event in the history of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a centennial family reunion, held September 7, 1892, at the residence of Robert Henry Hodgson, at Pleasant Garden Tract. Upon that occasion Mr. Hodgson, in referring to his family estate, remarked that "this land is an old patent tract taken up by our forefathers, and never since has it been owned out of the name of Hodgson. My father was born here, and here we have been permitted to remain." A history of the Hodgson family was read by Ellis P. Hodgson, and from it is drawn what follows.

The history of the Hodgson family in America begins in 1665, the year following the assertion of English authority under Sir Richard Nicolls. In that year Robert Hodgson landed in New Amsterdam, now New York. He was an Englishman and a Quaker, and, according to a story of the day, he was, on account of his religion, tied to a darkey and flogged, by order of Peter Stuyvesant, the governor during the brief Dutch rule. Traditions as to his later settlement differ somewhat. The Virginia branch of the family contend that he settled at Philadelphia, while members of the Hodgsons of Pennsylvania assert that he settled at or near Chester, on the Delaware river. The records of Chester county show that in 1692, prior to its division, Thomas Bright assigned to Robert Hudgeson fifty acres in Concord township, and little doubt is entertained of this being the immigrant Robert Hodgson, the name, as others, frequently appearing in different forms. Five years later he bought fifty acres in Springfield, which he sold in 1699, and the deed shows him to be of Chester. In 1714 Robert Hodgson was a taxpayer in Chester; he moved away, and a certificate was granted him and his wife Sarah and their family, dated 8 mo., 28, 1717, and directed to Newark monthly meeting. This Robert is thoroughly accounted for from 1714 until his death in 1733, and the question has been raised, was he the immigrant Robert, or his son? The family historian (Ellis P. Hodgson), after careful study and research, is convinced that he was the former.

Robert Hodgson became an extensive land owner. December 14, 1714, he patented a tract of two thousand acres, and on the next day, with James Hendricks, another of one thousand five hundred acres, both in old Chester county, on Conestoga creek, and both under Penn patents. In 1715 a two hundred and fifty acre tract in East Nottingham township was patented, and was known as "Hodgson's Choice," and in 1728 another patent was granted for a tract of six hundred and sixty acres called "Pleasant Garden." Family tradition asserts that Robert Hodgson, after leaving Chester, settled on the Conestoga tract, which he abandoned on account of trouble with the Indians, and located on Bohemia Manor, in Maryland. The latter region was fertile but malarial, and he again moved to Pleasant Garden, which, as has been heretofore observed, has been since uninterruptedly in possession of his descendants, and is now the home of Robert H. Hodgson. It is curious to note that this tract was obtained under a Maryland patent, and was held to be in Cecil county in that province.

Robert Hodgson would appear to have died at about the age of eighty-nine years. His will, made in 1732, was proven November 28, 1773. In it he names his wife Sarah, and the following children: Joseph, John, David, Richard, Phineas, Matthew, Rachel Scott, Sarah Hodgson, Jona and Robert. To Phineas he gave two hundred acres on the south side of Pleasant Garden, and the undisposed of remainder to Joseph. Joseph conveyed his interest, December 9, 1745, to Phineas, who died intestate, leaving three sons, the older of whom, Robert, inherited the property. Robert settled in Frederick county, Virginia, about 1745. In 1771 he gave one hundred and thirty acres of Pleasant Garden to his brother John, who sold it in 1773 to William Shearer. In 1771 Robert, with his wife and mother, deeded another one hundred and thirty acres of Pleasant Garden to his youngest brother Abel. Two years later, Abel bought of Jonathan Hodgson, of Philadelphia (his cousin, and a grandson of Robert, of Cecil county) the two hundred and fifty acres known as "Hodgson's Choice." The will of Robert, brother of Abel, shows that the one hundred and thirty acres of Pleasant Garden deeded to Abel was the northeast part of the tract situated in New London township, Chester county, and it is that portion which is now occupied by his great-grandson, Robert Henry Hodgson.

Abel Hodgson was the father of two sons, Robert and James; and three daughters, Mary, Elizabeth and Hannah. From the sons came numerous descendants. Robert, the eldest, married, January 3, 1793, Sarah Alexander, and to them were born eight children—Mark, born October 5, 1793; Elizabeth, 1795; James, 1797; Harriet, 1799; Robert, 1803; Sarah, 1806; Henry, 1810; Alexander, 1814. The father married (second) Catherine Evans, March 24, 1831. James, second son of Abel Hodgson, married (1798) Margaret, a daughter of Judge James Boyd, and her grandchildren now occupy the old Boyd homestead. To them were born five children—1. James B., died 1838; 2.

Judge Joseph Hodgson, of Elk View, who became an associate judge, and was a man of great mental vigor and sterling integrity; and daughters Eliza, Jane and Mary.

James, third child and second son of Robert and Sarah (Alexander) Hodgson, was born August 5, 1797, and died December 17, 1880. He married, February 8, 1827, Elizabeth E. Gillespie, born in October, 1797, and died April 18, 1845. Their children were: Sarah Alexander, born November 3, 1827; Mary Evans, born April 21, 1829; Robert Henry, born October 31, 1830; Elizabeth Gillespie, born July 12, 1832; George Gillespie, born September 19, 1834; Matilda Brown, born August 21, 1836; James Wallace, born June 11, 1838; Norris Kirkwood, born April 10, 1842.

Robert Henry Hodgson, third child and eldest son of James and Elizabeth E. (Gillespie) Hodgson, owns and cultivates the ancestral Pleasant Garden property, upon which he yet resides. He married, October 7, 1856, Maggie A. Sproul, and their children were: 1. Annie Sproul, born January 1, 1860, married (May 24, 1884) Robert D. Morrow, and to them were born Nellie H., March 12, 1885; Herbert S., born December 15, 1887; Robert Hodgson, born July 29, 1890. 2. Bessie Gillespie, born May 25, 1862, died September 2, 1883; 3. Charles S., born August 29, 1864.

Elizabeth G., daughter of James and Elizabeth E. (Gillespie) Hodgson, married (November 12, 1857) Robert M. Pierce, and to them were born: George Hodgson, July 30, 1859; Norris Appleton, born December 28, 1861; James Hodgson, born May 2, 1864; Sarah E., born August 24, 1867; Bessie Gillespie, born July 21, 1872.

Matilda B., daughter of James and Elizabeth (Gillespie) Hodgson, married (November, 1862) Thomas Budd, and their children were: May Hodgson, born January 13, 1864; William Trites, born May 31, 1865; Bessie Gillespie, born July 9, 1867; died August 19, 1887; Lillian Hodgson, born June 17, 1870; Helen Johnson, born June 9, 1872; died May 27, 1886; John Thomas, born December 7, 1875, died July 21, 1889; Henry Garrison, born February 23, 1877.

Mr. Hodgson, his wife and children are members of Rock Presbyterian church, Mr. Hodgson being an elder for forty years, and in 1903 he represented New Castle Presbytery at the general assembly at Los Angeles, California.

EUGENE C. SPENCER, an industrious and highly respected citizen of Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was actively engaged in agricultural pursuits, is a descendant of Samuel Spencer, who was born about the middle of the eighteenth century in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, from whence he removed to Franklin township, and settled on a six-hundred-acre tract of land, whereon in 1802 he erected a house which is still standing in a good state of preservation, and is occupied by his great-grandson, Pennock Spencer.

Jonathan Spencer, son of Samuel Spencer, was born February 20, 1778, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He spent his entire life in this vicinity, and was prominently and actively interested in its various interests, and was a prominent member of the Society of Friends. He married Lydia Michner, who was born November 12, 1788, a daughter of Mordecai Michner. They were the parents of the following named children: Alice, born November 22, 1815, died in childhood; Samuel, born August 4, 1816; Phebe, born August 6, 1818, died in early life; Jesse, born July 22, 1820, died in childhood; Sidney, born October 13, 1822, died in childhood; Jesse, born October 2, 1824; Rachel, born October 15, 1826; Alice, born September 1, 1829; Davis, born August 29, 1831, and Phebe Spencer, born August 7, 1834. Jonathan Spencer, father of these children, died December 29, 1841, and his wife, who survived him for many years, passed away June 25, 1868.

Jesse Spencer, fourth son of Jonathan and Lydia Spencer, was born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 2, 1824. He was reared on his father's farm, educated in the common schools of the neighborhood, and up to the time of his marriage, in 1850, to Margaret Chalfant, a daughter of William Chalfant, of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, he resided with his brother. Shortly after his marriage he located on a farm in his native township, and being an industrious and reliable man, was enabled to secure a comfortable home for his family, which consisted of four children, John, Eugene C., Minnie, and Elwood Spencer. He adhered to the religious faith of his forefathers, that of Quaker, and for many years was a member of the Society of Friends. His death occurred March 1, 1902.

Eugene C. Spencer, second son of Jesse and Margaret Spencer, was born on the old Spencer homestead in Franklin township, Chester county, November 26, 1855. His early education was obtained in the public schools of Franklin township, and this was supplemented by attendance at the New London Academy. For a number of years he assisted with the work on the home farm, but later he purchased a ninety-seven-acre tract of land upon which he has resided ever since. The ground is under a high state of cultivation, and is considered one of the best and most productive pieces of property in that section of the state. Mr. Spencer succeeded his father to the office of school director of Franklin township, in which capacity he is serving at the present time (1903). He is a Republican in politics, and a believer in the doctrines of the Quaker faith, of which Society he and his family attend.

On March 6, 1884, Mr. Spencer married Kate A. Moore, daughter of William Moore, born February 27, 1815, and Katherine (Steel) Moore, and one child has been the issue of this union, namely: Jesse Harlan Spencer.

William Moore, father of Mrs. Spencer, is a descendant of Charles Moore, who emigrated to this country from England in 1682, was granted a tract of land in what is now known as Marple township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, by William Penn, and here he established a home in which members of the Moore family have since resided, the sixth generation now occupying the homestead.

JOSEPH GHEEN WEST, M. D., now retired from the active practice of his profession, which he successfully followed in the town of Kemblesville, Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, from 1860, the year of his graduation, until 1889, was born in East Pikeland township, Chester county, May 2, 1834, a son of David and Elizabeth (Gheen) West, and grandson of David and Margaret (Brinton) West.

David West (grandfather) was for many years a prominent resident of Wilmington, Delaware, where he spent his declining years. He was a blacksmith by trade, and pursued that occupation during his residence in both states. He was married to Annie Pierce, by whom he had one son, David West, Jr., born January 1, 1802. Mr. West died when his son was a young child, and his widow subsequently married Thomas Gheen.

David West, Jr., (father) was born in Wilmington, Delaware, January 1, 1802. He acquired a good English education in the schools of that early day, and by a judicious course of reading became one of the most intelligent men of the community, being well informed on almost any subject. Upon attaining young manhood he engaged in farming in Goshen township, where he resided until 1828, when he purchased a farm in Pikeland township, which he cultivated until the spring of 1851, when he left the management of the property to his two sons. He then purchased a farm in East Vincent township, consisting of one hundred and forty-two acres of rich and arable land, and here he continued operations up to the time of his decease. He was a Democrat in early life, but upon the formation of the Republican party he changed his views and thereafter strictly adhered to the principles of that organization. He served as justice of the peace for a number of years in East Pikeland township, also as school director and being a man of strong will and good judgment he was called upon to serve as administrator of many estates and guardian for children, and in addition to these duties he performed a large amount of clerical work for his neighbors. He was an active and influential member of the Society of Friends.

In 1820 Mr. West married Elizabeth Gheen, a daughter of Thomas Gheen, his stepfather, and the following named children were born to them: Anna Mary, who died the wife of Levi Penny-packer; Thomas Gheen, who married Edith Green. She is now deceased; Joshua Pierce, deceased, who was a farmer and justice of the peace in Chester county; William, who died at the age of two and a half years; Wilmar Worthington, a prominent farmer of Sheeder, and Dr. Joseph Gheen West. The father of these children died January 1, 1869, aged sixty-seven years, and his wife passed away in the year 1871.

Joseph G. West, youngest son of David and Elizabeth West, attended the common schools of the neighborhood, the private school of Joseph Strobe, and Oakdale Seminary, where he completed his literary education. He then taught school for one winter in Lebanon county, after which he took up the study of medicine with Dr. Maurice Fussell, of Chester Springs. Subsequently he matriculated in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1860 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He located at Kemblesville, Chester county, in the fall of 1860, and at once entered upon the active practice of his profession. In addition to the duties of his extensive and lucrative patronage, Dr. West established a drug store which he conducted until 1889, when he retired from active business pursuits and was succeeded by his son, Dr. Frederick West.

Dr. Joseph G. West is a Republican in politics and in 1862 was appointed postmaster of Kemblesville, which office he held for twenty-five years, and, with the exception of President Cleveland's administration, he and his son, who is the present postmaster, have been the incumbents of the office. In 1890 he was elected by the Republicans of Chester county as a member of the house of representatives of Pennsylvania, and was re-elected in 1892 without any effort on his part, running ahead of his ticket.

While Dr. West was a member of the house of representatives he was ever looking and acting for the best interest of his constituents and the public generally. He was especially interested in securing the passage of the compulsory school attendance bill, as well as the free text books bill, and was instrumental in the defeat of the book bill, providing for a uniform series by a state compiling and publishing board, which was intended simply as an opportunity for jobbery. He served on the following committees: Health and sanitation, military, printing, vice and immorality, and fish and game, and was the chairman of that last named.

On January 9, 1862, Dr. West married Ella Maria Haines, a daughter of William E. and Maria (Cheney) Haines, of Franklin township. Their children were: Maurice Fussell, born January 19, 1863, a druggist of Newark, Delaware; Frederick B., born July 31, 1866, a physician at Kemblesville, and Ida, born February 25, 1875, died June 15, 1875. Dr. and Mrs. West adopted Eva L. Kemble, when a child, whom they reared and educated as their own child; she is now the wife of Wilber P. Watson, of Avondale, Pennsylvania. Mrs. West, mother of these children, died in 1891. On October 11, 1897, Dr. West was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary S. Mercer, of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Caleb and Martha Stackhouse.

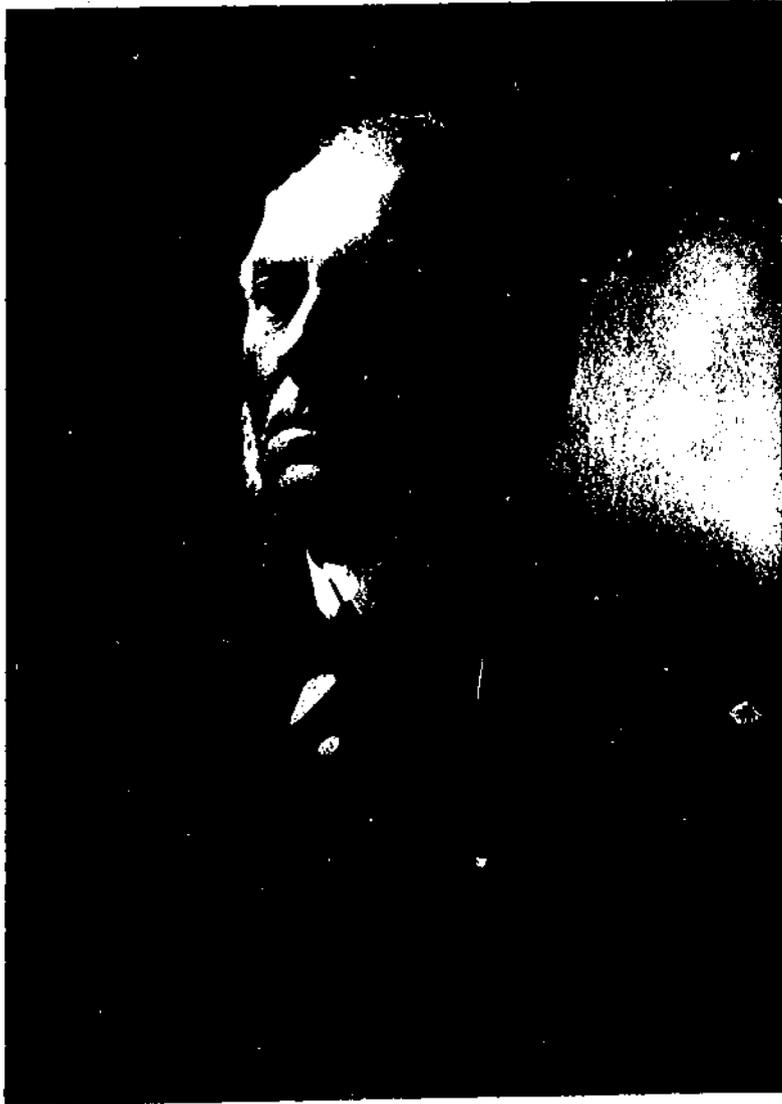

JAMES FULTON, M. D., a well known and skillful physician of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he enjoys in an eminent degree the confidence of the community and the esteem of the medical profession, is a lineal descendant of John Fulton, a native of Lanarkshire, Scotland, the year of his birth being 1713. His marriage occurred in 1743 and his wife, Eleanor Fulton, bore him six children—Mary; Elizabeth; James; John; Jane; and Susan Fulton. The three eldest children were born in Scotland, and in the year 1753, when Mary was eight years old, Elizabeth five years old and James two years old, their parents set sail from Glasgow, Scotland, for this country. Tradition has it that the family landed at New Castle, Delaware, or Baltimore, Maryland, but in 1762 they removed to Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he purchased a two hundred and sixty acre tract of land. He was one of the elders of the Oxford Associate Presbyterian church, having donated a portion of the ground on which it was located. His death occurred March 20, 1796.

James Fulton (grandfather) was born February 2, 1751, in Lanarkshire, Scotland, but was reared and educated in this country. On November 25, 1781, he married Margaret Miller, who was born January 20, 1757, and the issue of this union was six children—John, born March 23, 1783, died in Petersburg, Virginia, in 1854; Rachel, born April 9, 1787, died March 15, 1864; Joseph, born March 3, 1785, married, March 2, 1809, Martha Watt, and his death occurred Deember 27, 1844; Eleanor M., born November 23, 1793, became the wife of Fulton Hutchison; Miller, born December 13, 1797, died September 16, 1859; James Jefferson, born February 18, 1801, mentioned at length hereinafter. James Fulton, father of these children, died February 15, 1833, aged eighty-two years; his wife, Margaret (Miller) Fulton, died July 20, 1816.

James J. Fulton (father) was born February 18, 1801, and for a number of years was a prominent resident of Bartville, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He was united in marriage June 7, 1827, to Nancy Ann Ramsey, who was born August 22, 1802, and they became the parents of six children—Rachel Maria, born March 30, 1828, died in Lancaster, June 19, 1832; Margaret Jane, born October 1, 1830, died in Lancaster August 16, 1831; James, born November 12, 1832, mentioned at length in the following paragraph; William Thompson, born February 27, 1835, married, April 5, 1865, Hannah A. Kirk; his second marriage occurred October 19, 1876, to Annie E. Neep; Joseph Miller, born January 11, 1840, married Sarah Anna Brown, and his death occurred February 21, 1892; and Hugh Ramsey, born November 16, 1843, married November 15, 1871, Sallie Thompson Kerr. James J. Fulton, father of these children, died April 28, 1864, aged sixty-three years; his wife, Nancy A. (Ramsey) Fulton, died January 7, 1870, in the sixty-ninth year of her age.

James Fulton, eldest son of James J. and Nancy A. Fulton, was born in Bartville, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, November 12, 1832. His educational advantages were obtained at the public schools of the neighborhood, at the academy of Evan Pugh, at Delaware College, in Newark, Delaware, and at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In 1855 he entered the office of Dr. Thomas H. Thompson, of Chester county, pursued a four years' course of medical reading with that eminent physician, and in 1859 was graduated from that office with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He immediately began the active practice of his profession at Jennersville, Penn township, Chester county, but two years later went into the army in the capacity of assistant surgeon of the One Hundred and Forty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, which position he held until his resignation, April 4, 1864. He was captured at the battle of Gettysburg, in the first day's fight, when the Union forces were driven back through the town, and reported to General A. P. Hill, who directed him to go back to the hospital and do the best he could for the sick and wounded. This was a difficult proposition as the wounded soldiers were within the enemy's lines, and the trains with the provisions far to the south of the town. He tried to procure food for the soldiers by begging from house to house, but this was a slow operation; he was then advised to visit General Ewall, a rebel officer, who promised a supply of flour but instead of keeping his word he sent the flour to Virginia as fast as the rebel teams could take it. He finally found a baker who furnished him sixteen barrels of crackers, which Dr. Fulton distributed to the different hospitals and these served the purpose until the enemy retreated.

James Fulton

Dr. Fulton now resides in New London township, Chester county, attends to the wants of a large and select practice, and ranks among the representative members of the medical profession in that section of the county. He was the examining surgeon of the government for the Pension Department in Chester county, for sixteen years, is a member of the Oxford Medical Society, and president of the Chester County Medical Society. Fraternally he is an honored member of the Free and Accepted Masons, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Grand Army of the Republic, in all of which he has taken a prominent part.

On May 16, 1861, Dr. Fulton married Anna M. Johnson, daughter of Hoopes Johnson, a well known hotel proprietor of Jennersville, Chester county. The following named children were born to them—Rebecca, wife of Charles E. McKillips; they are the parents of three children; James, deceased; Mary, unmarried, resides at home with her parents; Caroline, unmarried; William, unmarried, and Gertrude, unmarried.

WILLIAM WILLARD, for the past twenty-five years successfully engaged in business pursuits in the town of Kemblesville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has occupied a number of positions of responsibility and trust, was born in London, Britain township, Chester county, May 6, 1852, a son of Benjamin F. and Mary Willard.

Benjamin F. Willard (father) was a native of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred there in the year 1817. He was reared in his native township and during his boyhood attended the common schools, where he obtained a good English education. Subsequently he turned his attention to the trade of carpenter and after becoming proficient in that branch of industry, he established a business which he followed in that section of the country for many years. Mr. Willard was united in marriage to Mary Ginlan, and the issue of this union was eight sons and three daughters, namely: Nathan, deceased; Elizabeth; Benjamin F., Jr., Henry, deceased; Daniel, deceased; Susan, deceased; William and John, twins; Lewis; Nevin, and one child who died in infancy. Mr. Willard died April 19, 1869; his widow survived him for many years, her death occurring in February, 1889, at the age of seventy-five years.

The boyhood and early youth of William Willard, one of the twin sons of Benjamin F. and Mary Willard, was spent on a farm in Franklin township and his educational advantages were obtained in the common schools of the vicinity. At the age of sixteen years, having decided to follow the occupation of carpenter, he became an apprentice and after continuing in this capacity for five years, he was thoroughly qualified to establish a business on his own account. He accordingly located at Kemblesville, Chester county, and his business abilities have been demonstrated by the fact that his trade has constantly increased during the past twenty-five years, and he is now classed among the successful business men of the town. Mr. Willard was largely instrumental in the organization of the National bank of Avondale, which has been a valuable acquisition to the town, and he has served on the board of directors from its organization up to the present time (1903). Politically Mr. Willard is a staunch Democrat and an earnest worker for the success of his party, and he has acceptably filled a number of local offices.

On February 7, 1877, Mr. Willard married Laura S. Kennedy, a daughter of Robert Kennedy, of Kemblesville, Chester county. Their children are: Clarence R., a carpenter by trade; Mamie E., wife of Arnold Hewing; Maggie; and Helen Willard. The family are active members of the Methodist Episcopal church, Mr. Willard acting in the capacity of trustee for many years.

MOSES E. ROGERS, a prominent citizen of Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in Harford county, Maryland, December 26, 1844. His parents were Elisha Hartshorn and A. Pennock Rogers. His grandfather, Levi Rogers, was a pump manufacturer, and he spent his life in Maryland.

Elisha H. Rogers, father of Moses Rogers, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, in 1818, and he was engaged in the manufacture of shoes. He married the daughter of Solomon Pennock, of Cecil county, Maryland. There were six children born to them, five of whom lived to be grown, namely: William Pennock, Moses Evans, Solomon T., Ruben Pusey, and Maria Cloud, who died at the age of seven years. The father, Elisha H., died when he was seventy-two years old, and his wife passed away at the advanced age of eighty-three years.

Moses Evans learned the trade of a carriage maker, and worked as a journeyman for twenty-seven years in Cecil county, Maryland. In 1889 he came to Chester county, Pennsylvania, and settled on a part of the old Pennock homestead, in Franklin township. Here he has been engaged in the cultivation of his land, an honored and respected citizen. On March 13, 1889, he married Margaret B. Pennock, daughter, of Joseph E. and Sarah Pennock. Mrs. Rogers died May 30, 1902.

MARSHALL S. CROSSAN, an estimable citizen of Franklin township, Chester county, is a descendant of William Crossan, who was a resident of Landenburg, Lower Britain township, Chester, and who was a man of means and unusual ability, an extensive and prosperous farmer, general merchant and freighter of merchandise between Landenburg and Wilmington and Baltimore.

Kennedy Crossan, son of William and Margaret Crossan, was born in the homestead farm, December 24, 1815. In his young manhood he assisted his father in the freighting business, and subsequently engaged in farming on the fine tract just south of that upon which his son, Thomas E. Crossan, now resides. Kennedy Crossan served as township supervisor and in other local offices. He passed his last days with his son, and died August 17, 1898. Not a church member, he was a man of exemplary character, and worshipped with the Presbyterians. In politics he was a Democrat. April 18, 1844, he married Margaret Nichols, who was born January 8, 1822, a daughter of Thomas and Mary Nichols, of Landenburg. The children born of this marriage were: 1. Samuel D., born March 2, 1845, who resides in Wilmington, Delaware; 2. Mary E., born October 10, 1846, now deceased; 3. Thomas Edmund, born February 4, 1848, who is a prosperous farmer at Landenburg; 4. Phebe Ann, born March 31, 1851, now deceased; 5. Kennedy, born May 25, 1852, who resides in Philadelphia, where he conducts an extensive contracting business; 6. Calvin J., born July 2, 1854, who is a farmer residing in London, Britain township; 7. William H., born July 28, 1856, who is a farmer and resides in Franklin township; 8. Marshall S., who is to be written of hereinafter; 9. Margaret E., born June 22, 1861, who became the wife of George Smith, and they reside upon the Crossan homestead, and with them the widowed mother of Mrs. Smith.

Marshall S. Crossan, eighth child and sixth son of William and Margaret (Nichols) Crossan, was born on the homestead farm, December 29, 1858. He was educated in the common schools, and was engaged in farming on the home place for five years, when he removed to Virginia. After a brief sojourn in that state, he returned to Pennsylvania and took up his residence on the home place for nine years, and then took up his abode upon the place where he now resides, and where he has passed a successful and useful life. With his family he attends the Presbyterian church, and his political affiliations are with the Democratic party. He has occupied several local offices, to the duties of which he has given most capable attention.

Mr. Crossan was married, November 22, 1886, to Miss Margaret Greenwalt, born in 1866, a daughter of William and Sarah (Hallet) Greenwalt; her father was a native of Delaware, and a farmer by occupation. The children born of this marriage were: Kennedy, born 1887; Harvey, born 1889; Pearl, born 1893; Irvin, born 1894; Rena, born 1895; Lawrence, born 1896; Sarah, born 1901, died 1902.

JOHN SCATCHARD, a substantial and prosperous agriculturist of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has served in various important political offices, and is a highly esteemed and useful citizen, was born in Yorkshire county, England, in 1835, the son of Joseph B. and Betty (Heap) Scatchard.

Joseph B. Scatchard (father) was also a native of England, his birth occurring there in the year 1808. After obtaining a practical education in the common schools of his native county, Mr. Scatchard entered a woolen goods manufactory where he thoroughly acquired the trade in all its branches. In 1841, having decided that the new world offered better opportunities for a successful business career, he emigrated from his native land, and two years later his family set sail on the ship "Hibernia." He took up his residence in Trenton, New Jersey, engaged in the manufacturing business, but the same year decided to remove to Brandywine township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he entered an extensive woolen mill. He operated there until 1850, when he rented the Rhinehart Woolen Mills in East Coventry township, Chester county, which he conducted for three years. At the expiration of this period of time he located in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in the same line of industry until 1855, when he purchased the Rhinehart Woolen Mills which he operated until 1865, when he purchased the Germantown Woolen Mills, and he remained proprietor of this plant up to the time of his decease, which occurred in 1872.

In 1827 Joseph B. Scatchard was united in marriage to Betty Heap, a native of Yorkshire county, England, and the following named children were born to them: William, who married Mary Ann Rhinehart, and they are the parents of two children. Benjamin died in early life.

George, who married Anna Whitehead, and four children have been the issue of this union. Elizabeth, wife of Hiram Hoffman, and one child has been born to them. Joseph B., Jr., who married Annie Ladley, and they are the parents of four children. Henry F., who married Lucy Bounceer, and five children have been born to them. Sarah A., who died in early life. Anna, wife of Robert Cartlidge, and mother of six children. Ellen, wife of George Grayson. Lydia, deceased, was the wife of George Grayson, and had six children. John, our subject, and four other children, all of whom died in infancy. The mother of these children survived her husband six years, her death occurring in the year 1878.

The educational advantages enjoyed by John Scatchard were obtained partly in the schools of his native county of Yorkshire, England, and partly in East Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, whither his parents removed when he was a young boy. His early business career was spent in the various manufactories operated by his father; later he learned the engraving trade and after becoming efficient in this branch of industry, he secured employment in the city of Philadelphia, where he remained for five years. In 1878 Mr. Scatchard purchased his present home in New London township, Chester county, consisting of one hundred and one acres of productive land, a portion of the Conard estate, where he now conducts a general dairy farm of twenty head of carefully selected cows. By closely adhering to legitimate business methods, Mr. Scatchard has achieved a large degree of success in this undertaking and has acquired a comfortable competence for his declining years. He has always been loyal to the interests of his adopted country, enlisting in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Volunteer Pennsylvania Regiment, which was under the command of Colonel Alex McClure, in 1863. His regiment was not called to the front but served on picket duty at Gettysburg, and the same year of his enlistment he received an honorable discharge from the service of the United States. Mr. Scatchard is a Republican in politics, and has served his township in the capacity of judge, supervisor, school director and auditor. He is a member of the Masonic Order of Pottstown, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

In 1863 was solemnized the marriage of John Scatchard and Lydia Ann Brooke, a daughter of William and Lydia (Boreman) Brooke, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: J. Burdette, who married Elizabeth Jacobs; W. Brooke, died in childhood; Grant, died in early life; Garfield, died in childhood; Ellen, died at an early age; Edwin N., who married

Florence Pennock; Elizabeth, wife of Elmer G. Pierce and they are the parents of one child; Alice, unmarried; J. Brooke, unmarried; May, wife of Howard Morris and mother of one child; and Hiram, who died at an early age. Mr. Scatchard and his family are members of the Baptist church, and they take a deep and active interest in the work of the various societies connected with it.

HOWARD C. WEBSTER. Energy, determination and thrift have been the chief characteristics in the business career of Howard C. Webster, a prosperous agriculturist of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has gained prominence and success in his vocation by means of exercising his practical and progressive ideas in the cultivation and improvement of his estate. He was born in Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1860, a son of Daniel and Beulah (Moore) Webster and grandson of Jesse Webster, who was also a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, a farmer by occupation, and a man of integrity and honor whose influence had always been used for the advancement and well being of the citizens of his community.

Daniel Webster (father) was born in the vicinity of Bird in Hand, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1831. He obtained an excellent English education at Unionville Academy in Chester county, and after completing the course there he returned to Lancaster county. His tastes and inclinations led him to choose the quiet but useful calling of agriculture, which line of business he successfully pursued in the township of Sadsbury. He was an industrious and reliable man, and was considered one of the best farmers in that section of the county. In 1857 he married Beulah Moore, daughter of Joseph Moore, a farmer, who resided near Bird in Hand, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The issue of this union was the following named children: Cnanning, who married Maryetta Fell, and they are the parents of two children; Florence, wife of John Janney, and one child has been born to them; J. Harold, who married Mary Roher; Walter, who married Lillian Long; Lorena, wife of Jason Moore; and Howard C. Webster. Daniel Webster, father of these children, died in 1899, survived by his wife, Beulah (Moore) Webster, who is living at the present time (1903).

Howard C. Webster received his educational training at the famous Ercildoum Academy, which is situated in the village of Ercildoum, Highland township, Chester county, and has an enviable reputation among the institutions of learning in that county. He began his active career by assisting with the work on the old homestead, where he remained for a short period of time, later becoming the owner of a farm located near Five Points, Lancaster county, where he conducted extensive and profitable operations for five years. In 1899 he removed to his present farm in New London township, Chester county, which consists of forty-two acres of fertile and arable land and was formerly the property of Mr. Russell. Mr. Webster firmly believes in the policy and principles of the Prohibition party, to which he gives an active and loyal support. He is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, also a member of the Order of Good Templars.

In Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, March 24, 1892, Mr. Webster married Anna Moore, born August 16, 1852, daughter of Walker and Anna (Smedley) Moore, the former named having been born January 14, 1810, died September 29, 1890, and the latter was born September 4, 1818, died January 13, 1876. Mr. Moore learned the trade of carpenter, but for many years was engaged in farming in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Webster was educated in the schools of Westtown; her religious sentiments are in accord with the tenets of the Society of Orthodox Friends.

The mother of Mrs. Webster, Mrs. Anna (Smedley) Moore, was born in Little Britain township, Lancaster county, a daughter of Joseph and Rachael (Ballance) Smedley. The grandfather, Joseph Smedley, was a blacksmith and farmer, at which he was employed during his active life in Little Britain township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and he belonged to the Society of Friends. Mr. and Mrs. Smedley were the parents of two children: Anna, mother of Mrs. Howard C. Webster, and Joseph; the latter was a farmer of Little Britain township, in early life, later removed to Iowa, town of Lewis. He married Ann Buckman, and they had the following children: Hording B., Mercy B., Rachael, Edward, Benjamin, and Anna Mary Smedley.

HON. THEODORE KIRK STUBBS, Burgess of the borough of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a representative member of its legal profession, who served as a member of the state legislature from 1881 to 1886, and enjoys the distinction of being the first man in the history of the county to be re-elected to that position for three successive terms, is the eldest son of Daniel and Rachel A. (Kirk) Stubbs, and was born in East Nottingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 8, 1847.

The family is of Scotch extraction, and the earliest ancestor of whom there is any record was Isaac Stubbs (grandfather), a son of Daniel Stubbs (great-grandfather). Isaac Stubbs was a native of Scotland, acquired his education in the schools of that country, and after attaining young manhood decided to locate in the United States. After a long and tedious voyage across the Atlantic ocean in a sailing vessel, he settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania, where the remainder of his life was spent in following the occupation of farmer. By his marriage to Hannah Brown, daughter of Judge Jeremiah Brown, nine children were born, all of whom were reared to lead lives of usefulness and activity. Mr. Stubbs died in 1832, at the advanced age of seventy-five years.

Daniel Stubbs (father), was born on the old homestead in East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 17, 1812. He acquired a liberal education at the private schools and an academy in Chester county, and after completing his studies, he engaged in general merchandising in Lancaster county, but later returned to Nottingham township, where he established a general merchandise store, his stock consisting of dry goods, groceries and various other lines of trade, and in addition to this enterprise he was actively interested in a grain, lumber and coal warehouse, and also in the operation of an extensive flour and feed mill. These various pursuits proved a profitable source of income for a number of years, after which he disposed of the business to his sons, Theodore Kirk and Isaac Franklin. He was a thorough-going business man and conducted his extensive operations on a sound and practical basis. Mr. Stubbs was one of the first directors and also served as treasurer of the Baltimore Central Railroad Company, a projector of the first steam railroad in his section of the county, a director of the Oxford National Bank, and also filled a similar position in the Oxford Fire Insurance Company. For many years he served as a director of public schools, and was a staunch supporter of all measures advocated for higher education and more high schools in the community. He was a consistent member of the Society of Friends, and in politics was formerly an adherent of the old line Whig party, but later became an enthusiastic Republican.

On October 3, 1844, Mr. Stubbs married Rachel A. Kirk, and the issue of this union was the following named children: Theodore Kirk, born June 8, 1847; Isaac F., born December 29, 1848, died February 27, 1877; Phoebe M., born July 1, 1850, died January 22, 1875; she was the wife of the late Gilpin Reynolds; Daniel A., born June 29, 1852, married Anna McHenry, and they are the parents of one child; and Ida E., born October 23, 1853. Mr. Stubbs died April 29, 1869.

Theo. R. Stubbs.

in the fifty-seventh year of his age; his widow, Rachel A. (Kirk) Stubbs, was born July 21, 1818, and died June 4, 1871.

Josiah Kirk, father of Mrs. Stubbs, was born in Chester county, August 17, 1784, and died September 8, 1821, at the early age of thirty-seven years. He was a farmer by occupation and also owned and operated flour and paper mills. His wife, Phoebe (Passmore) Kirk, bore him a family of four children, three sons and one daughter. Captain Roger Kirk, father of Josiah Kirk, was a prominent merchant and miller, served with distinction in the Revolutionary war and was elected and served as a member of the State Assembly at Philadelphia, representing Chester county. He was re-elected at the close of his first term, and secured among other enactments the passage of a bill to locate and grade the old State road, known as the Christianna or "Christeen" road. Roger Kirk was a son of Timothy Kirk, who in turn was a son of Roger Kirk, who was born in the north of Ireland, and settled in East Nottingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Theodore K. Stubbs, eldest son of Daniel and Rachel A. Stubbs, pursued his studies at the public schools of Oxford, Oxford Academy, Wyer's Military Academy, at West Chester, and the University of Michigan, where he began the study of law. He continued his legal studies in the office of the late Judge J. Smith Futhey, at West Chester, Chester county, passed a creditable examination, and was admitted to the Chester county bar in the year 1875. He at once established an office in Oxford, Pennsylvania, for the active practice of his profession, and now enjoys the patronage of an extensive and select clientele. As a successful jury lawyer he is without a peer; he is forceful, eloquent, logical and convincing in statements, and possesses a comprehensive understanding of a wide scope of legal principles and technicalities. Mr. Stubbs was one of the promoters of the Institutes and Lyceums in southern Chester county, also of several railroads and manufacturing plants which have added considerably to the growth and development of the borough of Oxford, and giving employment to a large number of its residents. He is a director of the Mason Multiple Plate Washer Company.

Mr. Stubbs is active and influential in the ranks of the Republican party. He served in the capacity of a member of the State legislature for three terms, and in recognition of his industry and ability was appointed a member on nearly all the important committees, including those on appropriations, judiciary, labor, industry, corporations and apportionment. He had charge of the temperance education bill in the house, introduced the normal school bill, and was an active supporter of the anti-oleomargarine bill and that for the equalization of taxation. He also introduced and championed several other general bills, and a number of local bills in the interest of his county and constituents. He was the leader of the delegation from Chester county to the house of representatives. He has served as postmaster, auditor and at the present time (1903) is serving his second term as burgess of Oxford.

Mr. Stubbs is a member of the Society of Friends, a member of the Bible class of the First Presbyterian church of Oxford, president of the Funeral Benefit Association, for twelve years the efficient secretary of the Oxford Agricultural Society, and secretary of the Oxford Board of Trade. He is also a leader of an orchestra. Mr. Stubbs is the Grand Chief Templar of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Good Templars; a member and councilor of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics; president of the Citizens' Corps, Grand Army of the Republic; and a member of the Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the Revolution. He is a prominent campaign speaker, debater and platform lecturer, and while serving in these capacities has traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, Canada and Europe.

JAMES W. WAY, of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, well known as a successful farmer and public-spirited citizen, is descended from ancestors who were resident in the county before the Revolutionary war. William Way was born in 1769, in Kennett township, where he was educated in the common schools, and then engaged in farming, an occupation which he followed all his life. He married Elizabeth Millhouse, also of Kennett township, and they were the parents of a number of children.

William Way, Jr., son of William and Elizabeth (Millhouse) Way, was born in 1797 on the homestead, received his education in Kennett township, and then learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for some time. In 1839 he moved to New London township, and purchased 160 acres of land, which is still in the possession of his descendants. He was much respected by his townsmen, by whom he was at different times elected supervisor and school director. In politics he supported the doctrines and measures upheld by the Republican party. He married Mary Ann Heald, of Hockessin, Delaware, and they were the parents of two children: Susan, who married Pennock Spencer, and is now deceased; and James W., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Way, the father, died in 1881, leaving the memory of a man upright and conscientious in all the relations of life.

James W. Way, son of William Jr. and Mary Ann (Heald) Way, was born in 1842, in New London township. He received his education in the common schools of his birthplace, and at Kennett Square, and on leaving school he decided without hesitation to follow the calling of his ancestors, and therefore remained on the homestead, where his entire life thus far has been passed in agricultural pursuits. His land, by the high state of cultivation in which it is maintained, testifies to his ability as a farmer, and his activity in local affairs bears witness to his zeal as a citizen, as does also the fact that at one time he held the office of school director. He is a member of the Grange, and active in the order of the Good Templars. In politics he is a Prohibitionist. He and his family are members of the Baptist church.

Mr. Way married, in 1868, Emma, daughter of John and Philena Bing, the former a farmer of East Fairfield township. Mr. and Mrs. Way are the parents of two daughters: Florence B., who lives in Paris, as assistant to her uncle, Dr. Bing, the famous dentist; and Marian G., who is the wife of Dr. Cortland F. Quimby, and has one child, Cortland, Jr., of West Grove, where he enjoys a lucrative practice. The eldest daughter, Florence B., is a graduate of West Chester Normal, taught school three years, has crossed the ocean thirteen times, and is now in Paris, France.

HERBERT D. FELL was born on the old homestead in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1872, this being the birth place of his ancestors for many generations, and his entire life has been spent in this community where he has gained and retained the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens.

David Fell, grandfather of Herbert D. Fell, was born on the old homestead in the township of New London, Chester county, in 1792, and after acquiring the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of that day he turned his attention to the quiet but useful calling of agriculture. He was united in marriage to Sarah Moore, a native of New London township, Chester county, her birth occurring there in the year 1792. Several children were the issue of this union, among whom was a son, David Fell, Jr.

David Fell, Jr., father of Herbert D. Fell, claims the township of New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania, as his birth place, and the date September 11, 1829. He received an excellent literary education in the New London Academy, and for a number of years after the completion of his studies he was engaged as a teacher in the various schools of the neighborhood. Later he established a nursery business near the town of West Grove, Chester county, which proved an agreeable and profitable source of income, but the latter years of his life were spent in the cultivation and improvement of the ancestral estate. His political support was given to the candidates of the Republican party, and his religious views were in sympathy with the Society of Friends. In 1857 Mr. Fell married Amy Hicks, a daughter of Thomas and Rachel (Hillis) Hicks, the former named being the son of Edward and Hannah Hicks. Thomas Hicks was born May 9, 1793, was a farmer of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, married Amy Wilkinson, and after her death, Rachel Hillis. Mr. and Mrs. Fell were the parents of five children, namely: Hannah M., died unmarried; Rachel S., who became the wife of Chester Fell, and two children have been born to them; Anna S. unmarried; Thomas H., who married Harriet Palmer, and Herbert D. Fell. The father of these children died in 1883; his widow survived him several years, her death occurring in the year 1890.

In the common schools of New London township, Chester county, Herbert D. Fell obtained an education which has qualified him for the responsible duties of active life. He is now engaged in farming pursuits on the old homestead, which consists of sixty acres of valuable farm land, with dairy attached. He is a man of broad business ability and untiring energy, and by the exercise of these qualities has gained a prestige in the community which is only accorded the man who is honorably successful. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and at the present time (1903) is serving in the capacity of school director and secretary of the board. Socially he is a member of the Heptasophs and the Roosevelt Club of West Grove, Chester county, and his religious affiliations are with the Presbyterian church, in the work and services of which organization he takes a deep and abiding interest. Mr. Fell is unmarried.

THOMAS P. CONARD, a representative agriculturist of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has achieved financial success in various enterprises, is a lineal descendant of Dennis Conard, who was a native of Crefeld on the Rhine, Germany, from whence he came to America and settled at Germantown, Pennsylvania, in 1683. His second son, Matthias Conard, was the father of Cornelius Conard, of Horsham, and he was the father of Everard Conard, who married Margaret Cadwalader, and about the year 1784, removed to New London township, where he purchased three hundred acres of land. The children born to Everard and Margaret Conard were: Isaac, Cornelius, Abraham, Everard, Jesse, Sarah, Mary, and Margaret Conard.

Everard Conard, grandfather of Thomas P. Conard, was born and reared on the old homestead in New London township, Chester county. The early years of his life were spent in attendance at the New London Academy where he obtained an excellent English education, and in acquiring a thorough knowledge of the many details of farm work. He followed the occupations of farmer and miller throughout his entire business career. He married Ann Steele, and amongst the children born to this union was a son, Edwin Conard.

Edwin Conard, father of Thomas P. Conard, was a native of New London township, Chester county, his birth occurring on the old homestead in 1818. He received a practical education at the New London Academy, and from boyhood up was inured to the varied and arduous tasks connected with farm life. Upon attaining young manhood he chose that occupation for his vocation in life, and throughout his active career devoted his best energies to it. He was a Republican in politics, was offered several township offices but always refused the honor, preferring to devote his time to business pursuits. In 1849 he married Phoebe Phillips, daughter of Thomas and Edith Phillips, who were prominent residents of New London township, Chester county, where Mr. Phillips was engaged in farming. Their children were: Mary, unmarried; Emma, unmarried; Everard, married Emma Good, and Thomas P. Conard. Edwin Conard, father of these children, died in 1900.

Thomas P. Conard, son of Edwin and Phoebe Conard, was born on the ancestral estate in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1852. His early education was acquired at the schools of Wilmington, Delaware, and at New London Academy, and this instruction was supplemented by a regular course at the West Chester State Normal School. The following two years he engaged in farming on the home farm, after which he removed to Wickerton, Chester county, where he followed the same occupation for three years. He then located in West Grove, Chester county, and for a number of years was employed in the creamery business, and after abandoning this line of trade he changed his place of residence to Philadelphia, where he was interested in the express business. He then returned to his old pursuit of farming, conducting his operations in Lansdowne until 1892, when he returned to New London township, and purchased the old Jackson farm consisting of one hundred and sixty-six acres of rich and arable land, where he is now conducting general farming with a fine dairy attached, equipped with well selected cows. Politically Mr. Conard is a Republican, and holds the office of school director. Fraternally he is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry.

In 1880 Mr. Conard married Mary Ella Mercer, daughter of Thomas and Margaret Mercer, the former named being a farmer of Kennett township, Chester county. Their children are: Helen P., Gula M., Walter T., Horace, Roland, Marion, and Philip Conard. Mr. Conard and his family are consistent members of the Society of Friends.

WILLIAM S. CALDWELL, a well known resident of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has been successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits for over twenty years, was born in Farmington, Maryland, in 1858, the son of John W. and Elizabeth Caldwell.

Robert Caldwell, grandfather of William S. Caldwell, was also a native of Maryland, and his educational advantages were obtained in the public schools of that state. He was a farmer by occupation, and in all his business transactions he displayed great judgment, prudence, honesty and foresight. He married and reared a family of children, all of whom became useful citizens. The death of Mr. Caldwell occurred in his native state.

John W. Caldwell, father of William S. Caldwell, was born on the old homestead in Maryland, acquired his education in the public schools, and subsequently devoted his attention to the calling of his forefathers, that of agriculture. Later he changed his residence to Farmington, Maryland, where he established a general store which he conducted for many years, and finally he located in the state of Virginia, remaining there until his death in June, 1902. In his political affiliations he was a Democrat, and an earnest and indefatigable worker for the advancement of the interests of his party. Mr. Caldwell was married twice, his first wife having been Elizabeth Dance, a native of New London township, Chester county, and the following named children were born to them: Mary, wife of Charles Chandler, and they are the parents of three children, and William S. Caldwell. For his second wife Mr. Caldwell chose Anna Dimmick, a native of New York, and their children are: Carroll, unmarried, and Robert, also unmarried.

William S. Caldwell received a practical education in the public schools of Farmington, Maryland, and the New London Academy, Chester county, Pennsylvania. In 1879, having attained his nineteenth year, Mr. Caldwell went to California and after being a resident of that state for two years, he returned to New London township and purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty-three acres, with a dairy of twenty head attached. He is practical and progressive in his ideas and by keeping a careful supervision over his entire estate, he reaps a fair return from his arduous labors. He is widely and universally esteemed in the community for his many excellent characteristics, has held the office of justice of the peace for twelve years, and also that of school director for a number of years. Politically he is a Democrat, and fraternally he is a member of the Masonic Order, New London Lodge, No. 545.

In 1884 occurred the marriage of William S. Caldwell and Ella Dance, a daughter of Isaac Dance, a prominent agriculturist of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Florence D., Sarah E., Mary L., J. Harold, Anna M., and Ella M. Caldwell, all of whom are unmarried. Mr. Caldwell and the members of his family attend the Presbyterian church, and give an earnest and loyal support to the work of the various societies connected with it.

CAPTAIN ALEXANDER H. INGRAM, a prominent citizen of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is one whose varied career, with its many thrilling incidents, would be a proper theme for the pen of a Maryatt or a Lever.

He is Irish by nativity and ancestry, and was born in county Donegal, Province of Ulster, November 1, 1841. His father, Richard Ingram, a native of the same county with himself, left Ireland in 1856, settling in Oxford, Pennsylvania. He was a farmer by occupation, an exemplary Presbyterian in religion, and a Republican in politics. He died in April, 1887, at the advanced age of eighty-six years. He was married in 1828 to Anna Irwin, also a native of Ireland, and to them were born, all in Ireland, seven children: 1. Ellen, deceased; 2. Elizabeth, who married Richard Scott, of Philadelphia; 3. Thomas, who became an engineer on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and made his home in Parkersburg, West Virginia; 4. Jane, who married Thomas Settle, of Frankford, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; 5. Mary, who married Charles Adams, of Philadelphia; 6. Alexander H., of whom further mention hereinafter; 7. Margaret, deceased. The mother of this family, Anna (Irwin) Ingram, died at Oxford, Pennsylvania. Four of the children, Elizabeth, Alexander, Thomas and Jane, came to the United States before their parents.

Alexander H. Ingram, sixth child and second son of the parents named, received a common school education. He early evinced a liking for adventure, and when twelve years old, without asking consent or giving his parents knowledge of his intention, left home and articulated himself as a cabin boy on a ship sailing from Glasgow, Scotland. His first voyage lasted a year, during which time he visited Liverpool, Havre and other ports. In 1854, when he was fourteen years old, he sailed for America in the ship "Superior," and landed in New York. Thence he went direct to Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he worked upon a farm for one year. He then went to Philadelphia, where he entered the law office of Constance Gilleon, with whom he remained for eighteen months. He then went to Sussex county, Delaware, where he bound himself to a farmer. His connection with his new employer lasted only until the following year, when he was refused a much needed pair of shoes, whereupon he terminated his contract without formality and returned to Oxford. There he became a painter apprentice to William Smith, in whose employ he stayed until all business was practically suspended owing to the panic of 1857, and this marked the beginning of his military career.

Enlisting in the United States army, he was sent to Governor's Island, in New York Harbor, and thence, in turn, to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and Santa Fe, New Mexico. At the last named post he was assigned to Company D, Third Regiment United States Infantry, which was dispatched to the Rio Grande. In 1858, at the breaking out of the so-called Mormon war, his regiment was ordered to join General Loring, in Utah, and he participated in that famous march from Northern Mexico, a distance of one thousand one hundred miles, which was accomplished in the marvelously short space of forty days, an average of nearly twenty-eight miles a day. The site of the present magnificent city of Denver, over which the troops passed, was then a waste of sand without a sign of human habitation. It was upon this expedition that gold was first discovered in Colorado. After the Utah difficulty had been adjusted, the troops returned to New Mexico, where Mr. Ingram was assigned to duty in the transportation department. He performed duty in the south until the second year of the Civil war (1862), when he was ordered east, and there joined the New Orleans expedition under General N. P. Banks. On arriving in New Orleans he was appointed chief of transportation of the Nineteenth Army Corps, and performed arduous duty in moving troops and supplies up the Mississippi river and elsewhere. After participating in the battles about Port Hudson, Louisiana, he was captured by a band of guerrillas and was taken to the horrible prison pen of Andersonville. He was there held for ten months, during which period he escaped three times, each time being recaptured, and was finally paroled at Savannah, Georgia, and taken to the parole camp at Annapolis, Maryland. After a sojourn there of six weeks he was furloughed and returned to Oxford, Pennsylvania. On the expiration of his furlough he returned south and at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, joined the troops then enroute for Pensacola Bay, Florida, to prepare for the campaign against Mobile. He was engaged in the operations against that famous stronghold, and after its fall he was with the military expedition sent to the Mexican frontier under General Phil H. Sheridan, to circumvent the Emperor Napoleon in his endeavor to erect a monarchy in Mexico, and served there until this design was frustrated and Maximilian came to his unhappy death. Captain Ingram had now been a soldier for nine years, covering the most eventful period of the nation's history, and he had borne his part as a faithful and gallant soldier in some of the most arduous and momentous campaigns and battles of the country. Peace was now reigning, at home and abroad. To sit down in a quiet garrison with no duty but to guard stores, was not suitable to him after serving amid stirring scenes, and he took an honorable discharge from the army.

Alexander H. Ingram

In 1866 Captain Ingram returned to Oxford, Pennsylvania, where his parents resided, and resumed his former trade as a painter, and a year later entered upon a contracting business, which led (in 1880) to his being given the painting for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, of which he had charge for several years. He had at the same time a paint and wall-paper store, which he conducted until he removed to his farm near Oxford. A man of marked force of character and enterprise, he has taken an active part in advancing the interests of the community along various lines. In 1877, at the time of the great riots in Pittsburg, he accepted the command of the Oxford military company which aided in quelling the disturbance. A Republican in politics, he was elected sheriff in 1893 and discharged the duties of the office with ability and integrity. In religion he is a Presbyterian, a member of the First Church of Oxford. He is prominent in Masonic circles, having held the highest position in Oxford Lodge, No. 353, F. & A. M., and Oxford Chapter, No. 223, R. A. M., and he has attained to the thirty-second degree, Scottish Rite. He is also a member of Lulu Temple, Mystic Shrine, and of the Knights of the Golden Eagle. He is a member and past commander of Thompson Post, No. 132, Grand Army of the Republic, and an aide on the staff of General Stuart, commander of the Department of Pennsylvania. In 1903 he was chief marshal of the Pennsylvania division in the parade of the Grand Army of the Republic at San Francisco, California.

Captain Ingram was married December 5, 1866, to Miss Anna Clark, a daughter of James and Margaret (Harvey) Clark, her father being a farmer of Lower Oxford township. Her death occurred July 17, 1903.

WILLIAM D. EVES. Among the leading agriculturists of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who have gained an honest and profitable livelihood from the cultivation of their estates, may be mentioned the name of William D. Eves, a native of that township, his birth having occurred in the year 1845. He is the son of James Eves and grandson of William D. Eves, being also a namesake of the latter named.

William D. Eves (grandfather) was born in New Castle county, Delaware, and his educational advantages were obtained in the common schools of that vicinity. He learned the trade of tanner which he followed to some extent, but the greater part of his business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He came to New London township, Chester county, about 1820, spent a number of years there, and about 1861 removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where he died. His wife, Bertha (Ferris) Eves, a native of New Castle county, Delaware, bore him a number of children, all of whom were reared to lead lives of usefulness and to become good citizens of the United States.

James Eves (father) was born on the old homestead in New Castle county, Delaware, in 1818. He was a student at the old New London Academy, and upon the completion of his studies learned the trade of tanner with his father, and remained in that line of business until 1844. In that year he changed his residence to New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, purchased a farm, and the remainder of his days were devoted to the management and cultivation of the same. His political views were in accord with those advocated by the Republican party, and he was chosen to serve in several minor offices in the township. In his religious belief he adhered to the Presbyterian doctrines, holding membership with that body for many years.

In 1844 occurred the marriage of James Eves and Martha Strawbridge, a daughter of Joseph Strawbridge, a farmer residing near Elk View, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The following named children were born to them: Dr. James S., who married Margaret Hutchison, and they are the parents of three children; Albert A., deceased; and William D. Eves. The death of Mr. Eves occurred in 1890; he was survived two years by his widow.

William D. Eves, eldest son of James and Martha Eves, acquired an excellent literary education at New London Academy and Wyers Academy, in West Chester, Pennsylvania, and after his graduation from the latter named institution he returned to the old homestead in New London township. The old farm consists of one hundred and fifty acres of rich and arable soil, with a dairy of twenty-five head of well selected cattle attached and being a man of considerable experience and progressive ideas, he has managed his affairs in such a manner that they yield him a profitable source of income. Mr. Eves is a Republican in politics, and for many years was the incumbent of the offices of school director and auditor, fulfilling the duties of the positions with credit and efficiency. He is a valued member of the "Hep-tasophs."

Mr. Eves was united in marriage, in 1876, to Anna Hutchison, who was born in New London township, Chester county, in 1855. Their children are: James F., unmarried; Madge D., wife of Malcolm Chambers; and Anna H., unmarried. Mr. Eves and his family are earnest and consistent members of the Presbyterian church, and in the social events of the community they take an active and leading part.

JOHN H. TITUS. Among the representative citizens and agriculturists of Chester county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of John H. Titus, a native of Trenton, New Jersey, his birth having occurred on the old homestead in the year 1845.

George B. Titus, father of John H. Titus, was also born on the old homestead which was located in Trenton, New Jersey, the year of his birth being 1821. He obtained a practical education in the public schools of New Jersey, after which he chose the quiet but useful calling of agriculture for his life work, and this occupation he followed both in his native township and also in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, whither he removed in 1876. He is a staunch and loyal adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and during his many years residence in Trenton, New Jersey, he was the incumbent of several minor township offices. Mr. Titus married Sarah Primer, a native of Trenton, New Jersey, and by this union the following named children were born: Mary; Sarah, who was united in marriage to Hiram Clements, and one child was born to them; after the death of Mr. Clements his widow married Henry McVeagh; and John H. Titus. The death of Mrs. Titus occurred in 1902, and since that date Mr. Titus has resided with his son, John H. Titus, in New London township, Chester county.

The educational advantages enjoyed by John H. Titus were acquired at private schools in Chester county, and he then pursued a business course at Poughkeepsie, New York. He located in Elk township, Chester county, where he conducted extensive agricultural operations for eight years, and in 1876 he changed his place of residence to New London township, Chester county, where he purchased a fine farm of one hundred and fifty acres of rich and arable land with a dairy attached. Mr. Titus is a thoroughgoing farmer, practical and progressive in his ideas, attending to every detail of the business in a careful and methodical manner, and thus he has achieved remarkable success in his chosen line of calling. He is a Republican in politics, and is serving his township in the capacity of school director.

On February 23, 1870, Mr. Titus was united in marriage to Emma Windle, daughter of William and Sarah Windle, the former named a prosperous farmer of New London township. The family hold membership in the New London Methodist church, Mr. Titus being a member of the board of trustees.

JAMES N. HUTCHISON. The Hutchison family, prominent in the agricultural, political and social interests of Chester county, Pennsylvania, James M. Hutchison being one of its representative members, was established in this state by James Hutchison (grandfather), who was a practical and successful farmer of Nottingham township, Chester county. By his marriage to Miss Watt, a native of Nottingham township, several children were born and reared to manhood and womanhood, leading lives of usefulness and activity.

J. Hervey Hutchison (father), a son of James Hutchison, was born in East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1818. He acquired an excellent education at the New London Academy which qualified him for the position of teacher in the common schools of his native township, in which capacity he served for several years after his graduation. He then turned his attention to agricultural pursuits in the township of New London, whither he removed at an early age, and this line of industry he followed up to a few years prior to his decease, which occurred in 1888. Politically he was an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and for a number of years was the incumbent of the office of school director. Mr. Hutchison married Nancy Dickey, a daughter of John Dickey, now deceased, for many years a prominent citizen of Oxford, Pennsylvania. The following named children were born to this union: Elizabeth, deceased, was the wife of the late Dr. Patterson; Jennie died unmarried; Susan, died unmarried; Margaret D., wife of Dr. Eaves, and mother of three children; Annie, wife of William Eaves, and they are the parents of three children; Ida, unmarried, and James M. Hutchison. The mother of these children died in 1891.

James M. Hutchison, only son of J. Hervev and Nancy Hutchison, was born in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1852. He was reared on the old homestead and his educational advantages were obtained at the public schools and New London Academy. During his boyhood he thoroughly learned the varied and arduous duties pertaining to farm life, and upon the completion of his studies chose that occupation for his business career. He has conducted his operations on the home farm, which is cultivated to a high state of perfection, and under his excellent management his broad acres yield a plentiful harvest which amply repays him for his labor. In politics Mr. Hutchison casts his vote with the Republican party, and has served his township in the capacity of supervisor and auditor.

In 1880 Mr. Hutchison was united in marriage to Dora S. Gibson, a daughter of William and Elizabeth Gibson, the former named being engaged in agricultural pursuits in New London township, Chester county. Their children are: J. Hervev, William G., J. Melville, and Helen W., all of whom are unmarried. Mr. Hutchison and his family are consistent members of the Presbyterian church, and take an active part in the social affairs of the community.

JONATHAN E. WOODBRIDGE. While Rev. Timothy Woodbridge, D. D., in his "Autobiography of a Blind Preacher," states that a genealogist of distinguished reputation has asserted that the family is descended from the great Earl of Warwick, "the King Maker," the hero of Bulwer's "Last of the Barons," the New England family finds as its first representative the Rev. John Woodbridge, of Stanton, Wiltshire, England, whose wife was a daughter of Rev. Robert Parker.

Their son John Woodbridge, born at Stanton, 1613, when he attained manhood in 1634, emigrated to the colonies, locating at Newbury, Massachusetts, and in 1638 married Mercy Dudley, daughter of Thomas and Dorothy Dudley, the father having served three terms as governor and a like number of terms as deputy governor of the colony. John Woodbridge entered Harvard University, and graduated therefrom with honors. For a number of years he was a justice of the peace, and elected repeatedly first magistrate of the colony. He died in March, 1695. To John and Mercy (Dudley) Woodbridge, among other children, was born John Woodbridge, the third, and to John (3) was born a son John (4), and to the latter (John 4) was born a son, Jahleel Woodbridge.

Hon. Jahleel Woodbridge graduated from Princeton College, New Jersey, in 1761, located at Stockbridge, Massachusetts, where he became a man of position, serving in both houses of the legislature, was a captain in the Revolutionary struggle, an associate judge, and afterward president judge of the court of common pleas, and for many years held the office of judge of probate for the county of Berkshire.¹ While a student at Princeton he became enamored with Lucy Edwards, daughter of Dr. Jonathan Edwards, president of Princeton College, who was then a young lady in her twenty-fifth year. She was born August 31, 1736, and died in October, 1786. They were married in June, 1764. The eldest son of that marriage was Jonathan Woodbridge.

Jonathan Woodbridge was born at Stockbridge, Massachusetts, in 1766, and married Sarah Meach. He was a man of affairs in his native place, and was brigadier general of the militia of the state. He died in 1808. His son

Rev. George Woodbridge, was born in Worthington, Massachusetts, in 1804, his father dying when his son was an infant of only four years. When about sixteen, George Woodbridge was admitted to the United States Military Academy at West Point, and graduated therefrom the sixth in the fourteenth class sent forth from that institution July 1, 1822. He was breveted second lieutenant in the First Artillery; July 1, 1826, he was commissioned second lieutenant, Third Artillery; resigned from the service June 30, 1828.² He studied theology, received holy orders, and was rector of Monumental church, at Richmond, Virginia, for forty-five years. Rev. Dr. Woodbridge was one of the trustees of William and Mary College, was one of the examiners of the Alexandria Theological Seminary and president of the Virginia Bible Society. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by William and Mary College. Rev. George Woodbridge died February 14, 1878. He married Rebecca Nicolson, and among the children born to that ¹Edward Bellamy, in his novel, "The Duke of Stockbridge," describes the two-story red house of Squire Jahleel Woodbridge (the great-grandfather of J. Edwards Woodbridge, of Chester, Pennsylvania), and gives him prominence in the story, as he also does to Timothy Edwards, Aaron Burr, Justice Elijah Dwight and other historical characters, whose lines of ancestry are those of J. Edwards Woodbridge. William Woodbridge, the second governor of Michigan, runs in the main the same ancestral descent.

²See Heitman's "Historical Register and Dictionary of United States Army," Vol. I, p. 1056.

union was Jonathan Edwards Woodbridge, of Chester, Pennsylvania.

The Dudley line is one that extends back into the Saxon period of English history. The family is said to trace descent from King Athelstan, the grandson of Alfred the Great, who was also known as "Dudo," hence Dudley Castle, built by him early in the ninth century, the oldest ruins in Great Britain, was so called because located at Dudo's lea or leigh, which finally assumed the name Dudley, and became the surname of the branch of his descendants to whom that estate belonged. The title is the Earldom of Leicester. It was Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, who entertained Queen Elizabeth at Kenilworth, as related by Sir Walter Scott in his famous novel of that name. Captain Roger Dudley, a Huguenot adherent, was slain in France in an engagement antedating the battle of Ivry seven years. His son Thomas Dudley was born in Northamptonshire, in 1576. The latter and his wife Dorothy Dudley were passengers on the ship "Arbella," landing at Salem, Massachusetts, June 12, 1630. He settled at Newtown, afterwards known as Cambridge. From him Oliver Wendell Holmes is descended. Governor Dudley's daughter Ann married Governor Simon Bradstreet, and she holds place in our literature as the first American poetess. Mercy, another daughter, became the wife of John Woodbridge as already stated. Governor Thomas Dudley died July 31, 1654, aged seventy-seven years.

The Edwards family is of Welsh origin. The first of the name known in that line is the Rev. Richard Edwards, D. D., of London, whose widow Ann married James Coles, and with her husband, accompanied by William Edwards, then a young man, her son by her first husband, emigrated to the colonies, settling in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1645. William Edwards married, in 1645, Agnes Spencer. But one child was born to the marriage, Richard Edwards, whose birth occurred in May, 1647. He was a merchant in Hartford. Their son Richard was twice married, first to Elizabeth, daughter of William and Elizabeth Tuttle, of New Haven, and (second) to Mary Talcott, of Hartford. Richard Edwards died April 20, 1718, in his seventy-first year. Among the children born to the first marriage was Timothy Edwards, who married Esther Stoddard, of Northampton, Massachusetts, November 6, 1694. He graduated at Harvard in 1691, became a clergyman, settled at East Windsor, Connecticut, in 1694, and continued in one pastorate for over sixty years. He died January 27, 1758, aged eighty-nine years, and his wife on January 19, 1770, aged ninety-eight years. To that marriage was born ten daughters and one son, the latter being Jonathan Edwards, who Dr. Chalmers, Sir James Mackintosh and Dugal Stewart unite in declaring the most eminent metaphysician America has ever produced, a rank that is still accorded him.

Jonathan Edwards was born October 5, 1703, at East Windsor, Connecticut. He began the study of Latin when a child of six years. He graduated at Yale College in 1720, and before he was twenty years old he was assistant pastor of a Presbyterian church at Northampton, Massachusetts, of which his grandfather, Rev. Mr. Stoddard, was in charge. He subsequently was pastor, but gave the congregation offense, for which he was dismissed. He then became a missionary among the Stockbridge Indians, and while so employed prepared his treatise on "The Freedom of the Will," which Mackintosh asserts is the greatest metaphysical work in any language. Mr. Edwards married, July 28, 1727, Sarah Pierrepont, of New Haven. He was inaugurated third president of Princeton College, New Jersey, February 16, 1758, and died from smallpox, March 22 of the same year. His fourth daughter, Lucy, married Jahlleel Woodbridge, as before stated.

In the Stoddard line J. E. Woodbridge is descended from Anthony Stoddard, who came from the west of England, locating in Boston. He had four wives, the first being Mary Downing, a sister of Sir George Downing. To that marriage was born in 1643 a son, Rev. Solomon Stoddard, who, succeeding to the church of which Mr. Mathers had been pastor, married his predecessor's widow, Esther Mathers, the daughter of Rev. John Warham. To that marriage was born Esther Stoddard, who in 1694 became the wife of Timothy Edwards, and mother of the distinguished Jonathan Edwards.

Mrs. Rebecca Woodbridge, mother of Jonathan Edwards Woodbridge, was a daughter of Andrew Nicolson, of Richmond, Virginia, owner of the Clover Hills Coal Pits in Chesterfield county, Virginia, whose wife, Judith Diggs, was the granddaughter of Dudley Diggs, of Bellefield, a member of the house of burgesses, and who held many places of trust and honor in colonial Virginia. Dudley Diggs was a grandson of Edward Diggs. (See genealogical sketch accompanying this.)

Jonathan Edwards Woodbridge, son of Rev. George and Rebecca (Nicolson) Woodbridge, was born in Richmond, Virginia, January 16, 1844, and when seventeen, in 1861, entered as a cadet the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, from which he graduated in the class of 1865. While in attendance there, the cadets were called to the field by President Davis, to repel the advance of General Sigel up the valley of the Shenandoah, and were ordered to join the column commanded by General John C. Breckenridge. At the battle of New Market, young Woodbridge, who was sergeant major of the Battalion of Cadets of the Virginia Military Institute, exhibited conspicuous gallantry.¹ The cadets, who fought with the utmost bravery, capturing a Union battery in a splendid dash in which they lost heavily, were complimented by General Breckenridge, while the veteran soldiers of the South cheered "the baby boys," as the battalion had been termed when it first reported for duty in actual war. The cadets served during the remainder of that struggle, taking part in several engagements, and were the last troops withdrawn from the fortifications below Richmond when that city was evacuated by the Confederate forces, Sunday night, April 2, 1865. During the entire campaign Mr. Woodbridge was in active service and took part in every battle in which the battalion was engaged. After graduation Mr. Woodbridge removed to Chester, Pennsylvania, where he entered the drafting department of the shipbuilding yards of Raney, Son & Archibald, and continued in the same employment after the plant was purchased by the late John Roach, when it obtained world-wide reputation as the Delaware River Iron Shipbuilding and Engine Works, in all covering twenty years. In 1885 Mr. Woodbridge entered the U. S. government service in civil capacity and was employed at the noted Cramp shipbuilding establishment in Philadelphia. For nearly forty years he has been employed as a naval architect and mechanical engineer, during which time he has been engaged in the construction of many of the largest and finest vessels in the American merchant marine, as well as most of the great fighting ships of the United States navy.

May, 1876, Mr. Woodbridge married Louise, only daughter of John Odenheimer Deshong, an influential and wealthy citizen of Chester. The private residence of Mr. Woodbridge is by many persons regarded as the best specimen of modern house architecture in the city.

THE DIGGS LINE. Edward Diggs, a descendant of one of the most ancient and distinguished families of English gentry, and son of Sir Dudley Diggs, of Chilham, Kent, Master of the Rolls, was bred to the bar, being admitted to Gray's Inn on May 19, 1637, and came to Virginia in or before 1654, and November 22 of that year was chosen a member of the Council, the House of Burgesses declaring that he had "given signal testimony of his fidelity to this Colony and the Commonwealth of England." On March 30, 1655, he was elected governor, and served until March 13, 1658, when he was sent to England as one of the agents of the colony. In a letter to Cromwell the assembly praised him for the "moderation, prudence and justice with which he had conducted the government." The restoration did not affect his position, for he remained a member of the council until his death. In 1664 he was again one of the agents of Virginia in England, and in 1670, when a vacancy occurred he was appointed auditor general, the reversion of which he had been long before granted. He was active in promoting the prosperity of the colony, and was especially interested in the silk culture, "importing two Armenians who were skilled in the business." He lived at Bellefield, York county, where his tomb remains. He married Elizabeth Page. Colonel John Page in his will names his sister Elizabeth Diggs.

¹John S. Wise gave this account of the incident: "At-ten-tion-n-n! Battalion forward! Guide center-r-r! shouted Shipp, and up the slope we started. From the left of the line, Sergeant Major Woodbridge ran out and posted himself forty paces in advance of the colors as directing guide, as if it had been upon the drill grounds. That boy would have remained there, had not Shipp ordered him back to his post, for this was no dress parade."—"The End of an Era," p. 298.

The eldest son William, after being a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses, removed to Maryland and became a prominent member of the council of that colony, while a younger son, Dudley Diggs (1663-1710) inherited Bellefield, and was appointed a member of the council in 1698, and auditor and surveyor-general in 1705. By his wife Susanna, daughter of Colonel William Cole, of "Bolthorpe," Warwick county, he had a son Cole Diggs, of "Bellefield" (died 1744), who was appointed to the Council in 1719, and became president of that body.

His son, Dudley Diggs, of York county and Williamsburg, was one of the leading men during the Revolutionary period in Virginia. He was a member of the House of Burgesses from York county from 1753 to 1772, continuously; member of the conventions of 1775 and 1776; of the committees of safety and correspondence; and elected to the first state council, a member of which he remained during the war. He married Martha Armstead, and was the father of Martha, born August 10, 1757, who married Captain Nathaniel Burwell.

Dudley Diggs married twice; his second wife was Judith Wormley, of Rosegill. Judith Diggs, daughter of Dudley Diggs and Judith Wormley, married Andrew Nicolson. The third daughter of Andrew Nicolson and Judith (Wormley) Nicolson was Rebecca Nicolson, who married the Rev. George Woodbridge, the parents of Jonathan Edwards Woodbridge, of Chester, Pennsylvania, their fourth child.

WILLIAM ARCHER IRVING, prominently identified with the commercial and social interests of Chester, Pennsylvania, was born on the old homestead near the site of his present extensive manufactory in 1856, a grandson of John and Jeannie B. Irving, who emigrated from Glasgow, Scotland, and settled in this section of the state in the year 1811. John Irving was an uncle of Washington Irving, the distinguished American author, who was born in the city of New York, April 3, 1783, the son of William I. Irving, who emigrated from Scotland and settled in New York, where he was engaged as a merchant before the Revolutionary war. At the age of sixteen years, Washington Irving entered a law office, but not having an inclination for the art he soon abandoned the idea of becoming a lawyer; in 1804 he traveled extensively in Europe, returned in 1807, and contributed a series of genial and humorous essays to a periodical called "Salmagundi." In 1809 he wrote "A History of New York, from the Beginning of the World to the End of the Dutch Dynasty, by Diedrick Knickerbocker," and in 1813 edited the "Analectic Magazine" in Philadelphia. He was also the author of "History of the Life and Voyages of Columbus," "Voyages of the Companions of Columbus," "The Conquest of Granada," "The Life of Goldsmith," and "The Life of Washington." He died at Sleepy Hollow, on the banks of the Hudson, near Tarrytown, November 28, 1859.

James Irving, father of William Archer Irving, was born in 1817, in New York, but subsequently removed with his parents to Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he was apprenticed to Bethel Moore, then one of the largest woolen manufacturers in the state, and with him learned the trade. In 1845 Mr. Irving removed to Delaware county and established woolen mills at Irvington, in connection with his brother David Irving, under the firm name of J. & D. Irving. This partnership continued until the death of David Irving, which occurred in 1862; previous to this the two brothers, in partnership with Thomas I. Leiper, established in Chester, Pennsylvania, a mill for the manufacture of cotton yarns, under the firm name of Irving & Leiper, which later was known as the Irving & Leiper Manufacturing Company. In his political affiliations Mr. Irving was formerly a Henry Clay Whig, and actively participated in the political issues of the day; later he became a conservative Republican. He acted in the capacity of director of the First National Bank of Chester, and for a number of years was an active trustee of the University of Lewisburg, Union county, Pennsylvania. In his religious views he was a devout adherent of the tenets of the Baptist church, being a member of the North Chester Baptist church.

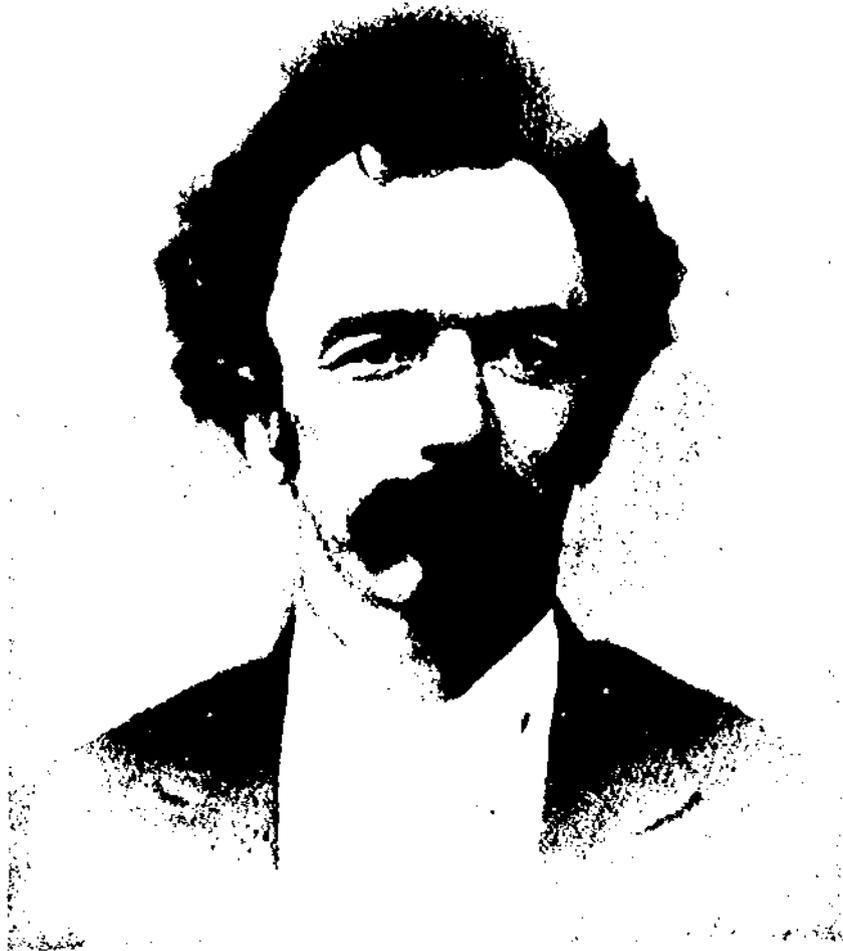

In May, 1839, Mr. Irving married Miss Christiann Berry, daughter of John Berry, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and their children are: M. Jeannette, wife of Hugh Lloyd, of Darby, Pennsylvania; E. Matilda, wife of W. H. Starbuck, of New York city, William A., and D. Edward Irving.

William A. Irving, eldest son of James and Christiann Irving, acquired his preliminary education in a private school of Philadelphia, and this was supplemented by a three years' course in the University of Pennsylvania. Upon the completion of his studies he entered the mill at Irvington, then owned and operated by his father, and in due course of time became thoroughly familiar with all the branches and details of the business. In 1878 he was admitted as a partner in the business, and this high position was secured through personal merit, honorable business methods and a natural aptitude for the work. Since his connection with the firm the business has steadily increased from year to year, the goods manufactured being woolen cassimeres. Mr. Irving is also a director of the First National Bank of Chester, holds a similar position in the Chester Shipping Company, is president of the Irving & Leiper Manufacturing Company, treasurer of the James Irving & Son (Limited) and a large stockholder in many other corporations. He is a prominent member of the Union League Club of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

On January 12, 1881, Mr. Irving married Miss Ella Lloyd, daughter of Samuel Lloyd, of Philadelphia, and two children have been born to them: S. Lloyd and C. Jeannette Irving.

MRS. MARY J. HUNT. Since her husband's death the lady above mentioned has carried on the farming operations on her place in West Brandywine township, and has shown herself fully equal to all tasks imposed. She comes of a family originally of German descent, which has long been resident in Chester county, and her people have figured creditably in the business and agricultural development of this productive portion of Pennsylvania.

George Jasinsky, grandfather of Mrs. Hunt, was an old resident of West Caln township and a farmer by occupation. He married Rachel, daughter of Daniel Schrack, and reared a family of six children: Frederick, the eldest, married a Miss MacIntyre; Susan, wife of Aaron Davis, of West Chester, has three children: Rachel, who married Daniel Clark, has seven children; Maria, wife of Samuel Matthews, has six children; Elizabeth married Wilson Mauland. William Jasinsky, whose name is necessary to complete the list of his father's six children.

J. P. Hunt

was born in West Caln township, educated in the usual way and trained to farm work. Later in life he was engaged in agricultural pursuits on his own account in West Caln township. He married Mary, daughter of Captain John Powell, who fought in the war of 1812 and lived on Dove Run in Chester county. The children by this marriage were: Mary; Preston, who married Mary Stevens and has three children; and William, who is single.

Mary Jasinsky, the eldest of her father's three children, was born on the homestead in West Caln township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and educated after the usual manner of young ladies in her walk of life. In 1882 she was united in marriage with Hiram Hunt, son of a man of the same name who resided at Green Hill, in Chester county. Mr. Hunt was a well known resident of West Chester, where he had lived for fifty years, was Democratic in his political affiliations, and altogether a citizen without reproach. His death occurred in 1896, and his mortal remains were laid in the old manor church graveyard in the presence of many sincere mourners. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt had four children, but two of them died while young, the survivors being Hiram and Mabel, both of whom are attending school. As previously stated the widow is residing upon and managing the farm, consisting of one hundred acres and situated in West Brandywine township.

CHARLES RAMSAY LONG, an enterprising business man of Chester, Pennsylvania, comes of Scotch-Irish ancestry, the family having been founded in America by Kennedy Long, who emigrated from northern Ireland to America in the eighteenth century. Kennedy Long was the eldest son of William Long, who married Mary Kennedy, a member of the Kennedy family, a family of note in the north of Ireland. He was graduated for the Presbyterian ministry, but established himself in the soap business in Baltimore, and met with marked success. About the year 1791 he sent for his youngest brother, Henry Long, from whom Charles R. Long traces his descent.

Jesse Green Long, father of Charles R. Long, was born in 1823, in Baltimore, Maryland, and was the eldest son of Henry Long, aforementioned.

Charles R. Long, son of Jesse G. Long, was born November 4, 1872, in Pike county, Illinois, and was graduated from the public schools of Pittsfield, in that state. He removed to Chester in 1890. For two years he studied civil engineering under private tuition, and in August, 1892, formed a connection with the "Times," the leading journal of that city. His ability and faithfulness in the discharge of his duties met with deserved recognition, and in 1896 he was made business manager. In this important position he has acquitted himself in such a manner as materially to advance the interests of the paper. Mr. Long is a member of the Penn Club.

December 5, 1895, Mr. Long married Hannah H., daughter of Charles Hinkson, of Chester. Mr. and Mrs. Long are the parents of two children: Caroline H., and Frederick R. Long.

WILLIAM I. SCHAFFER. Among those who have attained to positions of distinctive pre-ferment in connection with the practice of law, is William I. Schaffer, who is recognized as one of the foremost and distinguished lawyers of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He has ever been an earnest and discriminating student, and holds a position of due relative precedence among the legal representatives in the county.

William I. Schaffer, son of George A. and Mary H. (Irwin) Schaffer, was born February 11, 1867, in Germantown, Pennsylvania. In 1874 the family removed to Chester, Delaware county, where William I. passed his boyhood days and received his elementary education in the public schools. Upon leaving school he became a clerk in a store and while filling this position he thought of studying medicine, but abandoned the idea from lack of means sufficient to pass through a standard medical college. A vacancy occurring in the law office of William B. Broomall, and his application for the position proving successful, he decided to qualify himself for the profession of law. During his first year with Mr. Broomall he studied shorthand, became a very expert stenographer, and reported many important trials. At the age of seventeen years he passed successfully a rigid preliminary law examination, after which he read for four years with Mr. Broomall. On February 11, 1888, he was admitted to the bar of Delaware county, having passed his examination with great credit, and one year later was admitted to practice in the supreme court of Pennsylvania, being one of the youngest attorneys ever admitted. He became first assistant to Mr. Broomall in his large law practice, and this association was maintained for many years, during which time he had excellent opportunities to familiarize himself with the law in almost all its branches. Mr. Schaffer first came into prominence as a trial lawyer in the famous "Firebug" trial, in which he was one of the counsel for the defense. Since that time he has figured in many prominent cases, both civil and criminal, and is noted for his consummate skill and admirable tact in the presentation to the jury. He now holds the position of reporter of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, and is editor of the Pennsylvania State Reports.

In politics Mr. Schaffer is a staunch Republican, and at an early age his services as an organizer and speaker were in demand by his party. He served at different times as a member of the county committee and as its chairman, and delegate to county conventions, and he was elected a delegate to the gubernatorial convention of 1890. In this convention he supported General Hastings for governor, and seconded his nomination in a speech that won golden encomiums throughout the state. In the Scranton convention, and in the convention at Williamsport he placed Hon. John B. Robinson in nomination for president of the State League of Clubs, and at the Harrisburg convention of 1894 for lieutenant governor and in the convention of 1903 nominated William L. Mathues for state treasurer. In the state convention of 1891 he was nominated for one of the delegates-at-large to the constitutional convention, and, although the convention was voted down, was elected throughout the state by the full Republican majority. From January 1, 1894, to January 1, 1900, a period of six years, he filled the office of district attorney of Delaware county with singular efficiency and success, his energy, sound judgment and legal talent, joined to his abilities as a speaker, fitting him in a peculiar manner for the duties of the office. His talents as an orator are frequently called into requisition during political campaigns, not only in Pennsylvania, but also in other states. He is a member of the Masonic Order and of the Union League Club of Philadelphia.

Mr. Schaffer married, December 23, 1893, Susan A. Cross, daughter of Charles F. Cross, of Towanda, Pennsylvania.

JOHN FRANK CHALLENGER, a well known business man of Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is the son of S. M. Challenger, who was born in England, and was the son of S. M. Challenger, a mill-owner. The junior bearer of the name, when an infant, was brought by his parents to the United States, and in 1886 settled in Chester, where he opened a gentleman's furnishing store, which he still conducts. For three years he held the office of county treasurer, and is active in Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, serving as treasurer and superintendent of the Sunday school. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity. He married Jennie, daughter of John Campbell, who is now deceased. They were the parents of three children, two of whom are living: John Frank, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Ella, who is the wife of the Rev. Horace Story.

John Frank Challenger, son of S. M. and Jennie (Campbell) Challenger, was born May 25, 1873, and was educated in the schools of the neighborhood. At the age of fourteen he entered the employ of the Delaware County Trust Company, as an errand boy, and by industry, assiduity and ability, combined with scrupulous honesty and devotion to the interests of his employers, steadily advanced until in 1900 he was made secretary of the company. He belongs to the Masonic order, the Society of Elks, the Penn Club, and the Keystone Club.

Mr. Challenger married, June 9, 1896, Helen S., daughter of A. H. Tyson, of Delaware county. They have three children: John F., Jr., Barclay R., and Elizabeth T. Mrs. Challenger is a member of the New Century Club.

MISS BALDWIN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS. Among the many excellent educational institutions near to Philadelphia, is Miss Baldwin's Day and Boarding School for Girls, Preparatory to Bryn Mawr College. It is of nationwide fame, and its graduates, occupying high positions in educational institutions and in society, are to be found in almost all the more important cities in the country.

The school is situated in one of the most attractive and healthful suburbs of Philadelphia, and is surrounded by a beautiful, rolling country. It is easily reached from the city, as it is distant but a half-hour's ride by the local trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which leave Broad street station every half hour during the day. The building occupied by the advanced classes and the boarding department is a fine gray stone building, surrounded by twenty-five acres of lawn. It is thoroughly fire-proof, heated by steam, lighted by electricity, and connected with the Waring sub-surface system of drainage.

Water is supplied from deep artesian wells. Spacious halls, well-lighted assembly rooms, and large gymnasium, attractive studio and recitation rooms with open fire places, offer unusual advantages for a delightful school life, full of healthy activity of mind and body. The large grounds afford ample space for tennis, basket ball, golf, and all out-door sports, and the wide verandas around three sides of the building give an opportunity for exercise even in stormy weather.

The building directly opposite, on Morris avenue, is occupied by the primary and intermediate grades. It contains pleasant, well-lighted recitation and study rooms with open fire places, a studio and a gymnasium. Both buildings are within five minutes' walk of the station.

The school offers a course of study designed for pupils who do not intend to go to college, as well as for those who are preparing for college examinations. The same course of study is pursued by all students until the fifth year. The college preparatory course has been arranged with special reference to the entrance examination of Bryn Mawr College, and within eleven years more than one hundred and forty-five pupils from this school have been admitted to the college. The general course is designed for those who do not intend to go to college. It offers two languages instead of three, and the time devoted in the college preparatory course to a third language is here given to a more extended study of French and German, of English literature, and of history, including the history of art. The two courses represent the same amount of work, and the school diploma is granted upon the completion of either.

In addition, special instruction is given in French, German, art and music. In the latter department unusual advantages are offered. The head of the department was formerly the assistant of Herr Robert Teichmüller, now of the Leipsic (Royal) Conservatory, and uses his methods of instrumental instruction. The pupil is made to feel that a firm, solid touch, soft and yet capable of being moulded, is a requisite for producing a pleasant tone. The chief aim of the course is to develop a pure, singing tone, artistic playing and technique; to educate the ear and brain as well as the fingers.

Primary and intermediate departments are also maintained, and are conducted with as great diligence and thorough conscientiousness as are the higher departments.

The underlying idea of the school is the mutual good understanding and sympathy between teacher and scholar which can arise only through personal knowledge and intercourse. Every effort is made to provide a sensible and happy life for girls who are doing a proper amount of study without overworking, but neither the home life nor the school curriculum is designed for girls who are below the average in health or in ability. Parents are therefore advised not to make application for the admission of a girl who from lack of health or mental ability cannot perform the full duties of the school. The healthfulness of the location and of the mode of life in the school is shown by the fact that the girls usually gain in health while in residence. Daily walks and practice in the gymnasium are required of all pupils except those excused upon a physician's certificate stating that such exercise would be injurious. The gymnasium is in charge of an experienced and thoroughly trained instructor, and the work is carefully adjusted to the individual needs of the girls. Since experience shows that it is necessary both to arouse enthusiasm in outdoor sports and to check immoderate exercises, the director of the gymnasium has the general oversight of the athletics of the school.

The infirmary is in charge of a trained nurse who has the general oversight of the health of the girls.

The school building is absolutely fireproof, and is furnished throughout with every convenience for comfort and health; the most careful attention has been paid to the sanitary arrangement. A special feature of the building is the main hall, into which the entrance hall of the rotunda opens; hospitable open fireplaces and attractive furnishings make it a delightful gathering place for the girls. Leading from this hall is a broad stairway, beautifully lighted by large windows on the first landing. The dining hall, reception and reading rooms have open fireplaces. The bed rooms are all of good size, and are completely and comfortably furnished; each occupant has her own bed and bureau.

Miss Baldwin and Miss Brownell, the associate principal, reside in the school and have the general supervision of all the departments. Miss Evelena W. Morford has charge of the girls in their home life. Her assistants are Mrs. H. L. Morris, Miss Susan Morford and Miss Laurie Harriss. The nurse in residence is Miss Anne Yewens. The teaching corps numbers thirty-two.

GEORGE WOODWARD, an old and highly respected citizen of New London township, belongs to a family of English descent which has been identified with the history of Chester county from early colonial times. Richard and Robert Woodward, who were brothers, were residents of the county as early as 1687, and from them are descended all the old families of their name, and Dr. Lewis Woodward, of Carroll county, Maryland, writing in 1888, estimated that the descendants of the two brothers named, nearly as could be ascertained, then numbered 974, extending through eight generations and scattered throughout nearly all the state of the union.

Richard, son of Richard, previously mentioned, in 1695 married Esther Davis, who bore him twelve children. Their son William married Eliza Marshall, and they reared a family of six children, among whom was a son William, born August 8, 1743. He was a country merchant, and eventually became a farmer in West Bradford township, near Marshalltown, where he died in 1825.

Of this stock was James Woodward, who was born in West Bradford township, in 1798. He was educated in the common schools, and learned carpentering, which trade he pursued for some years, then abandoning it to engage in farming, an occupation to which he devoted himself during the remainder of his life. He married Mary Price, a daughter of Jacob Price, who was a farmer. Of this marriage were born four children—Eber (deceased), William, Elizabeth and George.

George Woodward, son of James and Mary (Price) Woodward, was born on the ancestral homestead in West Bradford township, in 1827. He received his early education in the common schools of Marshalltown, and afterwards came under the excellent instruction given by the revered Jonathan Gause, at Unionville. At the age of nineteen and after leaving school he engaged in blacksmithing in West Bradford, and labored in that calling for a period of four years. He then worked at his trade for a time in Kennett Square and Unionville, and subsequently opened a business of his own at New Garden. He thence removed after a time to Avondale, where he successfully pursued his calling for thirteen years. After subsequent residence at New London and Kelton, he retired from active pursuits, in 1891, and took up his residence on the old Ford farm in New London township, which he had purchased and where he resided during the remainder of his life. With his family, Mr. Woodward attends the Presbyterian church. He is an Independent in politics, and a member of the fraternity of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Woodward was married, in 1850, to Miss Lydia Nichols, who was born in East Marlborough township, in 1827, a daughter of William and Susan Nichols. Her father was a prosperous farmer. Of her marriage were born the following children: 1. Sarah, who became the wife of Lewis Smith, and to whom were born seven children; 2. Anna, who became the wife of Turner Kennedy, and to whom were born eight children; 3. Augustus, who died young; 4. Harmony, who died young; 5. Clara; 6. Eva, who is a teacher; 7. Etta, who became the wife of Rodman Lovett, and to whom were born four children.

THOMAS E. AGNEW, of New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, comes of substantial farming stock, and in his own calling has held to the family traditions. He is well known in political circles in his community, and well-liked as a member of various fraternal organizations. He is a native of Kennett township, where his father and grandfather were also born.

John Agnew (grandfather) was educated in the public schools and made farming his life interest. He was a man of energy and character and raised the standard of his calling. He married, and among the children born to him was Lewis Agnew.

Lewis Agnew (father) was born on the old homestead farm in Kennett township, Chester county, in 1832. He obtained his education in the common schools of the town, and then took up farming as his occupation. After an active and laborious life, he retired to enjoy the fruits of his well spent years in Kennett borough, Chester county, where he now resides. He was twice married, the first wife being Louise Taylor, daughter of Neilson and Sarah Taylor, a farmer of Kennett township, Chester county. From the marriage came the following children: 1. Mary, who married Charles Bower, and had one child; Ellen, who became the wife of Moses Johnson (deceased) and is the mother of two children; 3. Martha, who married Henry McMullen, but has no children; 4. Thomas E., into whose life we enter in some detail hereinafter. For his second wife, Lewis Agnew married Lydia Walter, who is still living, as is the one child, Martha, who was born to them.

Thomas E. Agnew, the fourth child and first son of Lewis and Louise (Taylor) Agnew, was born in the home of his father in 1862. After gaining his education in the public schools of Kennett borough, he went back to till the parental acres. He continued farming here until 1890, when he bought a farm in New London, where he now resides. He is an enthusiastic member of the Masonic fraternity, the Order of Odd Fellows, the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and the Heptasophs. He is an ardent Republican, and takes the liveliest interest in local politics as well as in the national issues of the party.

In 1890, Mr. Agnew married Ellen Hanson, daughter of William and Elizabeth Hanson, the former named having been a merchant of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and the following children resulted from the marriage: Louis, Hanson, Thomas, Jr. (deceased), Elizabeth and Sidney. None of the children are married.

MISS LETITIA JACKSON, an estimable lady of rare good sense and judgment, beloved by all who have the honor of her acquaintance for the many excellent characteristics which she displays in her every day life, was born in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 22, 1837.

The earliest ancestor of the family to reside in this country was David Jackson, great-grandfather of Letitia A. Jackson. He was born in the north of Ireland, county Antrim, came to this country, and after marrying Elizabeth Reed here, returned to Ireland, remaining there some years. He returned to this country with his wife and four children—Mary, Hugh, Robert and James—and settled on a farm near Edenton, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and lost one arm in the battle of Trenton. His wife having died in 1767, he made his home with his youngest son James, of Coleraine, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, who was the grandfather of Letitia Jackson.

James Jackson received his education in the common schools of his county. He became well and favorably known in the community, stood high in the regard of his many friends, and was the first and for many years the only elder of the Union Presbyterian church of Colerain, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. James Jackson and his estimable wife, Rachel (McCalmant) Jackson, were the parents of the following named children—David, Samuel, Ebenezer, Hugh, James, Robert, Mary and Elizabeth Jackson.

Hugh Jackson, father of Letitia Jackson, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, July 27, 1801. He received a common school education and upon leaving school learned the trade of blacksmith, which he followed for a number of years prior to his removal to New London township, Chester county, which occurred in the year 1831. From that date up to the time of his decease on October 1, 1883, he devoted his attention to farming, which under his careful and judicious management proved a profitable source of income. He was a strong adherent of the principles of Democracy, and his religious affiliations were with the Presbyterian church, in which he held membership for many years. He was faithful in the discharge of his duties, and in all relations of life commanded the confidence and esteem of all with whom he was brought in contact.

In November, 1827, Mr. Jackson married Mary J. Wilson, who was born September 10, 1808, and died in October, 1891, having attained the extreme old age of eighty-three years. She was a daughter of James and Isabella (Patterson) Wilson, of Lower Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson were: 1. James P., died May 9, 1903, in his seventy-fifth year; 2. Ebenezer, died in early life; 3. William W., also died in early life; 4. David, married Clara J. Marshall, and their children are—Hugh M., Mary L., and Letitia J., all of whom are unmarried; 5. Letitia; 6. Rachel F.; 7. Samuel W., died in childhood; 8. Mary E., died in 1896; she was the wife of Joseph S. Wilson and mother of four children—William C., Frank J., Harry, and Mary B., of whom the second and fourth are living; 9. Harriet R., died March 12, 1881; 10. Nancy E.; 11. Isabella W., died in 1902; she was the wife of James W. McFadden, and their family consisted of two children, George J. and Mary J.

CONARD FAMILY. The ancestors of the Conards stand among the best of the old families in the important part the Friends have borne in the history of Pennsylvania. Those early generations, steadfast in the self-denying effort to attain the realities of life, have left a goodly posterity that is a foe of all pretense.

David Conard was born in New London township, in 1804, on a farm enriched by the labor of his ancestors. He was educated in the common schools, and took up farming on the old place. Later on he opened and operated a saw-mill which is still standing. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and a most worthy citizen. He was a Republican, and actively interested in the affairs of his party. He married Mary Speakman, daughter of a farmer living near Chatham, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Of this marriage were born Ann H., Susanna Elizabeth and Mary W., all of whom are unmarried; Emarine, who married William Power, and became the mother of three children, all of whom are now deceased; Lydia, deceased; Amos, deceased; and Joel P. Conard.

Joel P. Conard, third child and second son of David and Mary (Speakman) Conard, was born at the old homestead in New London township, May 6, 1834. He was educated at the old Ercildoum Academy, conducted at that time by the Hon. Smedley Darlington. On leaving school his inclinations led him back to the old farm, which his father had purchased in 1849. He took charge of the mill which his father had operated, but the business of the farm has not obscured his interest in outside affairs. He served as secretary and treasurer of the New London Detective Association for twenty years, served as first lieutenant in the Home Guard, served as justice of the peace for the unusual period of thirty years, and as school director for fifteen years. He is a member of the Presbyterian church at New London, serving in the capacity of elder for more than twenty years, and he has represented his church at the Synod and General Assembly. In politics he stands with the Republican party on the larger issues.

Mr. Conard has been twice married. His first wife was Emma Wherry of Maryland, born in 1834 and died in 1883. The following children were born of the marriage: 1. Estelle, unmarried, resides at Altoona, Pennsylvania; 2. Corinne, deceased; 3. Myra, deceased; 4. Margaret, who married William Henry Johnson and became the mother of two children—Marriott Conard and Alexander Shand; they reside in Altoona, Pennsylvania. The second wife of Joel P. Conard was Mary S. Kennedy, whom he married in 1889. She was born in 1841, a daughter of William and Sarah (Quillin) Kennedy, the former named being a farmer and mechanic of New London township. No children were born of this marriage.

AGNES G. PARKE. The lady whose name introduces this sketch is a granddaughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Bowen) Parke, in whose family were the following children: Robert T., who married Henrietta Huling; Mary Ann, who became the wife of William Miller and had one child; Sarah, Elizabeth and Jane, who all died unmarried; Harriet, who wedded James McConnell and had six children, 1. Ellen, 2. Emma, 3. Edward, 4. Mary, 5. Laura, 6. Florence; and Richard B., the father of our subject.

Richard B. Parke was born in Downingtown, Pennsylvania, and during his boyhood acquired a good practical education in the common schools. By occupation he was a farmer, and was a man of retiring disposition. As a companion and helpmate on life's journey he married Miss Ellouisa Grier, a daughter of Rev. J. N. C. Grier, and the children born of this union were as follows: A. G. B., who is a physician and married Mary L. Black; John G., who married Helen I. Black and has four children; T. Henry, who wedded Mary Jane Liggett and has three children; R. Baxter, who married M. Annie Wise and has eight children; Jane the wife of Charles Kennedy; and Agnes G., of this review.

Agnes G. Parke attended the public schools near her childhood home and never left the parental roof but still lives on the old homestead in West Brandywine township, which comprises upwards of one hundred acres of rich and arable land under a high state of cultivation. She is a devout and active member of the Presbyterian church, taking a great interest in the different missionary societies connected with it, and is a most estimable lady whose circle of friends and acquaintances is extensive.

SAMUEL PASCHALL WEBB. The earliest ancestor of the Webb family of whom there is any authentic record was Richard Webb, who came from the city of Gloucester to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1700, and four years later became one of the pioneer settlers of the township of Birmingham. His wife, Elizabeth, a noted minister, had visited this country in 1697 and 1698, and in the year 1710 paid a religious visit to her native land. Richard Webb was an active, public-spirited citizen, served as justice of the peace, and his death occurred in 1719. Their children were: William, Mary, Esther, Sarah, Daniel, Benjamin, Elizabeth and James Webb.

William Webb, great-grandfather of Samuel P. Webb, was born December 23, 1738, obtained a common school education, and later became interested in the various pursuits of his native township. He was united in marriage to Hannah Harlan, who was born January 1, 1747, the daughter of Isaac and Hannah Harlan.

Stephen Webb, grandfather of Samuel P. Webb, was born November 29, 1776, and after acquiring a practical education at the village school, devoted his attention to industrial pursuits. He married Mary Harvey, born September 12, 1779, a daughter of Amos and Hannah Harvey, and among their children was a son, Stephen Webb, Jr.

Stephen A. Webb, father of Samuel P. Webb, was born June 18, 1815, educated at the common schools of Westtown, and his business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He was one of the prominent and respected citizens of the township, was frequently chosen to serve as executor and administrator of estates, and guardian for minor children, performing these trusts with scrupulous fidelity. He was united in marriage to Margaretta P. Worth, daughter of Samuel Worth, on September 20, 1838, and his death occurred April 6, 1884. His wife, Margaretta P. (Worth) Webb, died March 14, 1881.

Samuel P. Webb, son of Stephen and Margaretta (Worth) Webb, was born July 18, 1839, reared on a farm near Parkersville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his education was acquired at the Westtown school. In 1860 Mr. Webb went west, settled in the state of Michigan, and up to the year 1876 was engaged in the lumber business. After the expiration of this period of time, he returned to the Webb home farm, in Pennsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and the remainder of his life was devoted to the cultivation and improvement of the same.

On October 20, 1863, Mr. Webb married Cornelia A. Kent, a daughter of Julius and Martha (Bentley) Kent, of Chagrin Falls, Ohio. Their children are: 1. Bentley Kent, born January 26, 1866, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, acquired his education at the Normal School, Hillsdale College, which he attended for one year, and Overland College. He is now engaged in the wholesale commission business in the city of Philadelphia, where he resides with his wife, Ada P. (Sager) Webb, a daughter of John and Kasiah Sager. Their children are: Harry S., born December 21, 1889; Bertha K., born February 1, 1893; Winifred B., born April 11, 1899; Samuel B., born March 11, 1901. 2. Harry Stephen, born December 25, 1868, died August 6, 1871; 3. A son, who died in infancy; 4. A daughter, who died in infancy; 5. Samuel Archie, born August 20, 1875, obtained an excellent education at the Friends' high school, and at the present time (1903) is engaged in the occupation of farming. 6. Charles Bentley, born August 14, 1879, acquired his preliminary education at the Friends' high school, and this was supplemented by a course at a business college in Philadelphia. He is now engaged in the commission business with his brother, Bentley Kent Webb. The father of these children died December 4, 1895, leaving surviving his widow and three sons. Mr. Webb was a progressive and enterprising citizen; he took an active interest in educational affairs and served on the school board of Pennsbury township. He was a just and conscientious man in all his business transactions, was a good citizen, an indulgent father and loving husband, and a consistent Christian. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, as is also his wife. He was a birthright member of the Society of Friends.

John Smith

Bonnie L. White

MAJOR WILLIAM THOMPSON FULTON. The Fulton family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, members of which have distinguished themselves by their bravery and devotion to their country during the Revolutionary and Civil war periods, also in religious, political and commercial affairs, is of Scotch extraction, and their crest taken from Fairbarne's Book of Crests of Great Britain and Ireland, found in the State Library at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, consists of a stag lodged on a mount, regardant, resting, yet watchfully looking around; and the legend, "Things which we ourselves have done", and the motto, "Rest is attained by labor."—suggestive of laborious watchful industry, and of safe escape from the hounds of the enemy. A work on Heraldry in America, by Engene Zerber, claims that the fact that arms were borne here in Colonial times creates of them American arms, and that fact is a sufficient authority for their use by descendants of the old families. Another writer, Cussans, remarks that "It is no matter of surprise that Americans, particularly those in the eastern states, with all their veneration for republican principles, should be desirous of tracing their origin to the early settlers and of proving their descent from these single-hearted God-fearing men who sought in a foreign land that religious liberty which was denied them at home."

John Fulton, the pioneer ancestor of the family, was born in Lanarkshire, Scotland, in 1713. He was reared, educated and married in his native country, and, prior to the year 1753, John Fulton and his wife Eleanor Fulton were the parents of three children—Mary, born in 1745; Elizabeth, born in 1748; and James, born February 2, 1751. It is probable that John Fulton and his family, in the year 1753, set sail from the seaport town of Glasgow, Scotland, and landed either at New Castle, Delaware, or Baltimore, Maryland. In 1762 he removed from the latter named state to Chester county, Pennsylvania, and purchased a tract of two hundred and sixty acres of land from John Hawthorn, for fifty-five pounds, which was located on the Big Elk creek and the Oxford and New London road. Here he erected a fulling and paper mill, several farm buildings, and reared a family of six children, three of whom were born in Scotland and three in America. He was one of the elders of the Oxford Associate Presbyterian church, being also one of the donors of the ground on which it was erected. His will, of which his sons James and John Fulton were the executors, was dated February 6, 1796, and proven at West Chester, March 24, 1796.

The children of John and Eleanor Fulton, the pioneer ancestors, were: Mary, born in 1745, who became the wife of the Rev. James Proudfit, of Salem, New York; Elizabeth, born in 1748, who became the wife of James Hutchison in 1767, and died June 12, 1812; James, born in 1751, died February 15, 1833, aged eighty-two years; he married Margaret Miller, who was born January 20, 1757, and died July 20, 1816; John, who married Margaret Dickey for his first wife, and for his second wife chose Esther Cooper; Jane, became the wife of Matthew Wilson, August 27, 1792, and died January 19, 1797; and Susan, born in 1760, who became the wife of the Rev. James Clarkson, of York county, and her death occurred at Troy, New York.

James Fulton, eldest son of John and Eleanor Fulton, was born February 2, 1751, in Scotland. In 1776 he entered the Colonial army, and on July 3rd of that year was commissioned by John Morton, speaker of the house of representatives of Pennsylvania, as lieutenant of militia for two months' service, in the company commanded by Captain Joseph Gardner, in the regiment of Colonel William Montgomery, Lieutenant Colonel Evan Evans, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The regiment joined General Washington in New Jersey, marched to Trenton, to Princeton, to New Brunswick, to Perth Amboy, and thence to Woodbridge. In December, 1776, he was mustered into service as a lieutenant under General Putnam, about Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was on duty at Burlington and Crosswicks, and in the battle of Trenton, New Jersey, in the battalion of Colonel Evan Evans. On October 1, 1777, he was appointed lieutenant, acting as captain of the company, under General Potter, and served at Reading and Philadelphia. Mr. Fulton was an excellent scholar, an active and public-spirited citizen, and was a member of the political organization known in his time as the Republican party. In 1802 they adopted the name of Republican Democrats, but the prefix was finally abandoned, and those of their political faith are now the Democratic party. In his fall of 1802 he was elected to the legislature of Pennsylvania, which held its sessions in the old court house, Penn Square, Lancaster; he was also re-elected by a strong vote to the succeeding sessions of 1803 and 1804, and again in 1804 and 1805. During his incumbency of office he was active and aggressive, and was elected to serve on several important committees.

On November 25, 1781, James Fulton married Margaret Miller, daughter of Colonel Josoph Miller, of Bartville, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: John, born March 23, 1783, unmarried, died at Petersburg, Virginia, in 1854; Rachel, born April 9, 1787, unmarried, died March 15, 1864; Joseph, born March 3, 1785, died December 27, 1844; on March 2, 1809, he married Martha Watt, born January 15, 1786, died December 4, 1869, aged eighty-four years; Eleanor M., born November 23, 1793, became the wife of Fulton Hutchison; Miller, born December 13, 1797, unmarried, died September 16, 1859, in the sixty-second year of his age; James Jefferson, mentioned at length in the following paragraph. James Fulton, father of these children, died February 15, 1833, aged eighty-two years; his wife passed away July 20, 1816, aged fifty-nine years.

James Jefferson Fulton, fourth son of James and Margaret Fulton, was born February 18, 1801, on the old homestead located on Big Elk creek, Pennsylvania. He received a common school education, and in early life learned the trade of paper making. For four years, from 1823 to 1827, James J. and his brother, Miller Fulton, were in partnership in the operation of the fulling mill and paper mill on Big Elk creek. James J. continued to manufacture paper at Elk mills, McCrery's mill, and Eshleman's mill in Lancaster county. During the years 1831, 1832 and 1833, James J. Fulton and Samuel Bahill were partners in the management of a paper making business, and occupied a two-story frame building which stood on the corner of East King and Duke streets, Lancaster, the present site of the court house. Mr. Fulton possessed more than the ordinary natural talent, had a wonderfully retentive memory, and his powers as a historian were unequalled. While residing in Lancaster, Mr. Fulton and his wife, Nancy Ann (Ramsey) Fulton, born August 22, 1802, were members of the Presbyterian church and later of the West Nottingham Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Fulton was a trustee and elder for twenty-five years, and during this long period was always attentive and consistent in the performance of his duties. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fulton were active and zealous in their denunciation of intemperance, gambling and slavery, Mrs. Fulton holding many heated discussions about the time of the breaking out of the Rebellion with her lady acquaintances of pro-slavery and secession ideas on the border lands. Their residence was within half a mile of Mason and Dixon's line.

The children born to James J. and Nancy Ann Fulton are as follows: Rachel Maria, born March 30, 1828, died in Lancaster, June 19, 1832, in the fifth year of her age; Margaret Jane, born October 1, 1830, died in Lancaster, August 16, 1831; James, born November 12, 1832, married, May 16, 1861, Anna M. Johnson, and became a noted medical practitioner; William Thompson, mentioned at length hereinafter; Joseph Miller, born January 11, 1840, married Sarah Anna Brown, born December 3, 1845, and his death occurred February 21, 1892; Hugh Ramsey, born November 16, 1843, married, November 15, 1871, Sallie Thompson Kerr. James J. Fulton, father of these children, died April 28, 1864, aged sixty-three years; his wife passed away January 7 1870, in the sixty-ninth year of her age.

William T. Fulton, second son of James J. and Nancy A. Fulton, was born in West Nottingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 27, 1835. He pursued his studies at the public schools of the neighborhood and at Jordan Bank Academy, conducted by Dr. Evan Pugh, late president of the Pennsylvania State College. He imbibed the sentiment from his preceptor that every boy should learn a trade, and accordingly served an apprenticeship with a blacksmith. He then established a business at Hildans, in East Nottingham, which he successfully conducted for a period of almost two years. Finding, however, that increasing business allowed him but very little time for reading and study, which was his ambition, and having a desire to become a member of the legal profession, he resolved to apply himself to teaching and study. After passing a creditable examination, Dr. Franklin Taylor, the county superintendent at that time, gave him a teacher's certificate. He was appointed to a school in his native township, where he taught for two years, and during this period he utilized his spare time by a systematic review of his former studies, mathematics and English classics, with the addition of the Latin and French languages. He then registered as a law student with the late Hon. Thaddeus Stevens of Lancaster, and when Mr. Stevens was elected to Congress, Mr. Fulton entered the office of the Hon. J. Smith Futchey, where he completed his law studies, and was admitted to the West Chester bar in 1861. He established a law office at Oxford, Pennsylvania, and since then has given his undivided attention to the practice of his profession, in which he has achieved a large degree of success. He is a public-spirited citizen and an influential factor in all measures advocated for the public welfare and advancement of the community in which he resides.

In August and September, 1861, Mr. Fulton was instrumental in aiding the organization of Company E, Purnell Legion, Maryland Infantry, composed of bordermen of Pennsylvania and Maryland, and he was chosen captain of the company. After about a year's service he was promoted to the rank of major of the regiment, but the many hard marches and great exposures of the campaigns of 1861 and 1862, and particularly those incident to the rebel invasion of Maryland and the battle of Antietam, brought on a fever which disabled him for active service. He continued at his duties for several months, but was finally ordered before a board of surgeons, examined and discharged. General Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania and the battle of Gettysburg found Major Fulton again in the field as a member of Company C, Twenty-ninth Regiment of Pennsylvania Militia. He was elected a justice of the peace in 1863, re-elected in 1868 and again in 1873, resigning November 1, 1876, to accept a seat in the legislature, to which he was that year elected, and he was re-elected in 1878. In the legislature he was a member of the general and local judiciary committees and chairman of the federal relations committee. In religion he adheres to the tenets of the Presbyterian church, and in politics is an earnest and active Republican, having cast his vote for Abraham Lincoln, the first Republican president of the United States. He is also an earnest advocate of the cause of temperance. He is a member of Fairview Lodge, No. 334, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; a past commander of Thompson Post, Grand Army of the Republic; a director in the Oxford National Bank and was associate counsel of the Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad for a number of years.

April 5, 1865, Major Fulton married Hannah A. Kirk, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Scott) Kirk, of West Nottingham, and two children were the issue of this union: Kirk, born August 25, 1866, married, March 25, 1891, Sarah Kimble, born September 3, 1870, and his children are: H. Jeannette, Robert, Hugh Hodge, Florence M. and William F.; Annie E., born June 15, 1873. The mother of these children died April 12, 1875.

On October 19, 1876, Major Fulton married for his second wife Annie E. Neeper, daughter of Samuel and Eliza (Clark) Neeper, of Oxford, and they are the parents of one daughter, Eleanor Jane, born August 28, 1877. The mother Annie E. (Neeper) Fulton, died April 10, 1902.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM H. SNYDER, an accomplished educator, whose success in his calling is attested by his occupancy of the position of principal of the public schools of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, for the unusual period of thirty years, is a native of the state, and a descendant of an honored family of colonial times.

His ancestors came from Germany, and among their descendants were three brothers, Casper, John and Peter, who were living in Pikeland, Chester county, during the Revolutionary war. Peter, his great-grandfather, was father of Henry, who was born in 1785 in East Pikeland, where he was reared. He was a farmer and blacksmith, a capable mechanic, and an industrious and upright man. He sold his farm and removed to Valley Forge, and thence, about 1830, to Norristown, Montgomery county, where he died at an advanced age. He was a member of the German Reformed church, and a Democrat in politics. His wife was Catharine Carl, of Chester county, and to them were born eight children.

Abraham Snyder, second son of Henry and Catharine (Carl) Snyder, was born near Zion Lutheran church, in East Pikeland, February 15, 1812. His parents removed, while he was a boy, to Norristown, where his active life was passed. He learned blacksmithing, and followed his trade until advanced age obliged him to retire from active labors. He was a man of excellent ability, and an exemplary member of the Presbyterian church. He was a Democrat until the formation of the Republican party, to which he attached himself, voting for its first presidential candidate, John C. Fremont, and giving it his support throughout his life. His wife was Catherine Wolmer, of Montgomery county, and to them were born eight children.

William Henry Snyder, eldest son of Abraham and Catherine (Wolmer) Snyder, was born in Norriton township, Montgomery county, May 16, 1839. He began his education in the public schools, and was preparing for college at the Washington Hall Institute, at Trappe, Montgomery county, conducted by Professor Abel Rambo, at the outbreak of the rebellion. Animated by patriotic spirit, he dropped his text books and enlisted as a member of the regimental band of the Second Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves, in the splendid division commanded by General McCall. With this command he participated in the famous Peninsular campaign under General George B. McClellan, including the bloody seven days battles beginning with that at Mechanicsville, or Ellison's Mills, and ending with historic Malvern Hill. A month later (August, 1862), regimental bands were discontinued by Act of Congress, and young Snyder received an honorable discharge. Later the same year, when the rebel General Lee attempted a northern invasion, Mr. Snyder volunteered for the defence of his state, and was commissioned second lieutenant in the Seventeenth Regiment State Defenders, and in 1863, when Lee marched to Gettysburg, he was commissioned first lieutenant of Company C, Thirty-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Militia, but served during the greater portion of his term as adjutant of the regiment.

In 1863 Mr. Snyder was appointed deputy collector of internal revenue at Norristown, by Collector David Newport, and he was re-appointed to the position in 1865 by Collector Benjamin Hancock, father of General W. S. Hancock. He subsequently retired from this position to become editor of the "Norristown Independent," in which he held an interest for a short time. It is to be here noted that while thus engaged he displayed such excellent journalistic ability as to afford assurance of his success in the newspaper field had he chosen it for his life work. He was determined, however, upon an educational career. In 1867 he resumed teaching, and in 1870 he was appointed an instructor in the academical department of Ursinus College, at Collegeville, in which station he acquitted himself most creditably for three years, and until 1873. In that year he was appointed principal of the public schools of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania. In this position he developed his powers so constantly and broadly that through successive re-appointments his term of service has been extended to the present time (1903), covering a period of thirty years. This splendid success has been due to no fortuitous circumstance, but has been achieved through persistent industry and a genuine talent for educational work. So long as Professor Snyder has been a teacher, he has also been a student, constantly advancing himself beyond the requirements of whatever position he occupied at the time. Thus, after coming to the principalship of the Oxford schools, he pursued advanced studies, including a vacation course in the West Chester State Norman School, and in 1877 he passed the examination of the state board of examiners at that institution and received a state certificate. While he has brought the Oxford schools to a leading place among those of Pennsylvania, keeping them entirely modernized, and inspiring his teachers and pupils alike with his own enthusiasm, he has also gained the hearty recognition of educators throughout the state, and is frequently called upon to speak before bodies of teachers upon topics relating to their profession.

Professor Snyder is a Presbyterian in religion, and has been an elder in the church at Oxford for twenty-two years, and superintendent of its Sunday school for twenty-six years. He is a talented musician, and for thirteen years past the music of both church and school have been under his direction. In politics he is a Republican.

Professor Snyder was married, September 7, 1864, to Miss Martha A. Bevan, born February 28, 1842, a native of Delaware county, eldest daughter of Jackson and Serena (Malin) Bevan, who were then living in Montgomery county. Of this marriage was born November 29, 1865, a daughter, Bella B., who, May 20, 1891, became the wife of Wilmer K. Bird, of Rising Sun, Maryland, and to whom was born, September 12, 1895, a daughter, Malva Snyder Bird.

SANDERS McCULLOUGH, deceased, whose many years of active business life were devoted exclusively to the useful calling of agriculture, was a man of exemplary Christian character and his death which occurred at his home in Oxford borough, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 26, 1885, was sincerely deplored by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He was a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, born in 1809, a son of Hugh and Grace (Bell) McCullough.

Hugh McCullough (father) was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and remained a life-long resident of that section of the state. He acquired a practical education at the public schools of the neighborhood, and throughout the many years of his active life he farmed on the old homestead. He conducted his operations on an extensive scale, and by exercising prudence and industry his efforts were eminently successful and profitable. He was a firm adherent of the principles of Democracy as advocated by Thomas Jefferson, and from young manhood gave that party his active support. Mr. McCullough was united in marriage to Grace Bell, a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and the following named children were born to them—Jane, who became the wife of Samuel Maxwell; Grace, who was united in marriage to Thomas Collins; Margaret L., who became the wife of James Long; Amelia, who married James McSparran; and Sanders, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. McCullough, the father of these children, died at his home in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, May 3, 1848.

Sanders McCullough was reared to manhood on his father's farm in Lancaster county, and the early years of his life were spent in obtaining a liberal education which was acquired at the public and private schools of Lancaster county. For a number of years he assisted with the cultivation and management of the old homestead, and thus gained a thorough knowledge of agricultural pursuits which proved of great benefit to him in the operation of his own farm. He was the owner of a fine piece of property in his native county where he conducted general farming pursuits until April, 1874, when he removed to Oxford, Chester county, where he resided until his death. He was practical and progressive in his ideas and methods of conducting work, energetic and persevering in the carrying out of plans, and therefore his business efforts were crowned with a large measure of success.

During the latter years of his life he was enabled to live in retirement from active duties and to enjoy the rest and quiet which was a fitting sequel to his many years of activity and usefulness. Mr. McCullough was an active worker in the ranks of the Democratic party, but steadfastly declined to accept the offices of trust and responsibility which were tendered to him, preferring to devote his entire time to the management of his private affairs.

Mr. McCullough was married twice. His first union was to Sarah Marid Rowlands, who died leaving no issue. He then married Jeanette Smith King, who was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, February 11, 1828, a daughter of John and Isabella (McSparran) King, prominent residents of Lancaster county. Both Mr. McCullough and his wife held membership in the Presbyterian church of Chestnut Level, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, he being a ruling elder for many years. Mrs. McCullough resides in a handsome and commodious house in Oxford borough, and is surrounded with all the comforts and luxuries of life. She is a regular attendant at the services of the Presbyterian church, takes a keen and active interest in the temperance cause, and is greatly beloved and esteemed for the many acts of benevolence which she performs in an unostentatious manner.

THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, one of America's most famous poets and painters, was born March 12, 1822, in what is now East Brandywine township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was left fatherless at a tender age, and his widowed mother apprenticed him to a tailor. The occupation proving uncongenial to the lad, he ran away to Philadelphia, where he became a cigar-maker. At the age of fifteen he left that city for Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was taken into the home of the sculptor, Clevenger, under whose instruction he learned sign and portrait painting. He was occupied in such work for about nine years, during the same period adding to his income by contributing to different newspapers.

In 1846, when twenty-four years old, he opened a portrait studio in Philadelphia. In 1850 and again in 1853 he visited Europe, and he subsequently took up his residence in Rome, returning to the United States occasionally for brief visits, and it was on one of these that his death occurred, in New York city, May 11, 1872. Perhaps his best known literary composition is "Sheridan's Ride," written shortly after the incident depicted, and which he himself recited on various occasions, and once (as was witnessed by the writer of this sketch), in presence of Sheridan himself, with Grant, Sherman, Logan, and other gallant leaders of the Union army, about him. Other writings of Mr. Read were "Poems," "Female Poets of America," "The House by the Sea," and "The Wagoner of the Alleghanies." His best known paintings were "The Spirit of the Waterfall," "The Lost Pleiad," and "Sheridan and His Horse." His only piece of sculpture was a bust of General Sheridan, which attracted much attention. His poetry is marked by a fervent spirit of patriotism, and by artistic power and fidelity in the description of American scenery and rural life. His paintings are full of poetic and graceful fancy, but show somewhat careless technical treatment. His friend, Henry C. Townsend, in writing of him, said: "The distinguishing characteristics of Read's nature were purity of thought, refinement of feeling, gentleness of manner, generosity of disposition, geniality, and unselfish devotion to others."

BIRTHPLACE OF THOMAS B. READ.

MARY JANE DORLAN. The homestead in West Brandywine township where Miss Dorlan lives has been in the possession of her family since 1831. It is a valuable farm, consisting of one hundred acres, and has been the scene of the trials and successes, joys and sorrows of several generations of the Dorlans who have gone forth at various periods to fight the battle of the world. Most of the older generation have passed away, but there are many of the younger still living and established in business in various parts of the county. It is not too much to say that the Dorlans have constituted a worthy part of the citizenship of "Old Chester," and the members of this social connection have always borne well their parts in the growth, progress and development of the county. George Dorlan, grandfather of Miss Mary Jane, was a man of more than usual strength of character, who deserved well of his day and generation. In politics he was a staunch Whig of the old-line, and served with credit during the war of 1812. His occupation was that of a farmer, but he took a deep interest in public affairs, and was usually found at the front when any move was on for the betterment of state, county or nation. This old patriot married Elizabeth Nesbit, of West Nantmeal township, and had the following named children: Nathan, who married Sarah Lewis, of West Brandywine; John, who married Rachel Horner, of Philadelphia; Thomas and George, who died unmarried; Katherine, who lived single; and James.

James Dorlan, the last mentioned in the above list of children, was originally a distiller, but eventually gave up that business to become a farmer. He was educated in the Manor school of West Brandywine township, and spent several years of his early life in teaching in various parts of Chester county. This occupation gave place to milling, and finally Mr. Dorlan established himself on the farm which has ever since been the homestead of his family. He married Susana, daughter of Peter and Mary Wagner, of West Caln township, and became the father of seven children, of whom four are living. Robert married Anna Chambers and died leaving six children; John A. married Rebecca Freeman and has two children; Elizabeth married Thomas Doan and died leaving four children; Mary Jane, Frances and Maria Louisa are living on the old home farm; and George is numbered among the deceased. Near by the farm house is the manor church graveyard, and in this cemetery all the dead of the Dorlan family have been buried for generations. The Dorlan sisters dispense old-time hospitality at the ancestral home of their family, and enjoy general respect as representative women of the county. They are members of the Presbyterian church, have long been interested in religious and charitable work, and it is safe to say that no worthy applicant is turned away from their door unrelieved.

THE EPRIGHT FAMILY of Pennsylvania, which has as a representative Hannah Epright, principal of the high and grammar school in Berwyn, had as its founder in the United States, so far as known, Philip Epright, who came to America prior to 1763, and was a landowner in Tredyffrin township, Chester county, in 1774. He was a Saxon, who came with his wife Sarah in a redemptioner ship, and they served for five years to repay their passage money, he as a farm hand and she in a kitchen. They had brought some money with them, which they kept secreted, and with it, at the end of their servitude, they bought the farm (near Diamond Rock) upon which they had labored. They afterwards removed to Montgomery county. They were Lutherans in religion.

The children of Philip and Sarah Epright were Henry, John, Jacob, Rudolph, Sarah, Christian, Mary, and another daughter, name unknown, who married one Fimple, and went to Western Virginia. They left a daughter, Margaret, who was adopted by her uncle Henry Epright, and married Johathan Crozier, a soldier of the war of 1812, and this couple became the ancestors of the Dewees family, in Chester Valley. All the children of Henry Epright, with the exception of the one named and two others, were farm people who brought up families and died in Chester, Delaware and Montgomery counties; the two remaining exceptions were Sarah, who married Zachariah Long, and removed to Northampton county, and Mary, who died unmarried in 1848.

Henry, the eldest child of Philip and Sarah Epright, was born August 27, 1763. February 5, 1793, he married Frances Fimple, who was born September 22, 1768, daughter of John Fimple, who, with his brothers Michael and Richard, served in the colonial wars, and are buried in the old Lutheran cemetery in Ardmore. Four of the Epright family, two males and two females, married four of the Fimple family, and from them are descended all of the Fimple name in Chester and Delaware counties. The family record beginning in 1761, written in German, is in possession of Miss Hannah Epright.

Henry Epright and his wife removed to Germantown. Their children were Samuel, born April 29, 1794; Mary, born October 27, 1795, who married William Schofield; Catherine, born March 2, 1798, who married John McClelland, of Delaware; Juliann, born March 26, 1800, who married Archibald Gray; Rudolph, born February 24, 1802, who married Damaris Frederic of Bryn Mawr; Sarah, born March 6, 1804, who married Henry McConnell, (all five sons of the last named couple lost their lives during the Civil war): Henry, born April 12, 1806, who died in infancy and was buried in the old Eagle graveyard; and Charles, born December 26, 1807, who married Anne Jacobs.

Samuel, eldest child of Henry and Frances (Fimple) Epright, was born in Germantown, and was stolen by the Indians while a child, and was afterwards restored to his people. He acquired a common school education, was a farmer by occupation, a Lutheran in religion and a Democrat in politics. He was a man of exemplary habits and much force of character. He served in the war of 1812. As a member of the Pennsylvania Guards he was present at the unveiling of the first monument at Paoli, in 1817, and he also attended the unveiling of the second monument sixty years afterwards, in 1877. He died August 17, 1883. He had lived under every president from Washington to Arthur, and cast his last vote for R. E. Pattison for governor. He distinctly remembered the death of Washington, and for three months wore crape for him.

Samuel Epright married Hannah Neilley, who was born March 31, 1801, at Berwyn. She was the daughter of John and Esther (Downey) Neilley. John Neilley was born on the day of the battle of Brandywine; he served in the war of 1812, and was fifer on the day of General Wayne's funeral. His parents were James and Mary (Roberts) Neilley. James Neilley was born in the county Antrim, in the north of Ireland, in 1750, came to America in 1768, and set up weaving in Berwyn in 1775. He espoused the cause of the Revolution, and it was his boast that, unaided, he took prisoner four British soldiers and marched them to Washington's camp at Valley Forge and received the commendation of his General, who said, "You did well." When asked how he did it, he would modestly reply, "While they were stealing the chickens I surrounded their guns." James Neilley aided in burying the dead at Paoli, the morning after the massacre, his wife cutting up her linen sheets to cover their faces, and all through the winter of 1777 the two, husband and wife, fed the soldiers from Valley Forge with mush and cider, which they carried down to the cellar, that they might eat in safety. The house is yet standing. Esther Downey, wife of John Neilley, was born in 1768. He traced her ancestry through the MacDowneys' MacDonoughs and Marshalls to Scotch-Irish who fought in the battle of the Boyne. Her father and mother, John and Mary Downey, are buried in the old Seceder graveyard at Brandywine Manor. Her nephew, William Marshall, was one of the very early publishers of the "American Republican," while one of his brothers, John, was a soldier in the United States regular army and saw the national flag raised over the soil of Louisiana when that great domain passed out of the possession of France. The ancestral stock of this family were linen weavers and fine mechanics.

The children of Samuel and Hannah (Neilley) Epright were John, Henry, James, Robert, Esther, Samuel, William, Hannah, Mary and Robert.

Hannah Epright, daughter of the parents last named, was born July 23, 1841, at Gulf Mills, in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and was educated in the common schools there and in an academy in Chester county. She began teaching in the public schools of Chester county at Ship school, in West Whiteland, in 1860, receiving her first teacher's certificate (and the first which he issued) from Superintendent W. W. Woodruff, at Kimberton, on June 9th of that year. She commenced to teach in Easttown township, at the Ogden school, in 1875, and in March of the following year she received her permanent certificate as a teacher. In 1883 she began her engagement with the Glassley school. When the "Daily Local News" offered a library of twenty-four volumes as a prize for the best map and history of Chester county, this school received the award. Subsequently, when came opportunity to Hon. Smedley Darlington, member of Congress, to nominate a candidate for a scholarship in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, he signified his intention of naming him after an open competitive examination. Two pupils of the Glassley school entered the contest, Howard Huffington and Harry E. Pennell, and they passed the examination as first and second, respectively, and the former named received the appointment. In this examination were pupils from high and select schools. It took place in West Chester, in April, 1888, and the late J. Hunter Worrall was one of the examiners.

Miss Epright was the last teacher in the Glassley school, in 1888, when it was removed to Berwyn, and she was the first grammar school teacher in the new building. She was one of the originators of the graded school and of the graded course of study in Easttown, and she was the first to introduce the study of civil government in that district. She was appointed principal of the public school in Malvern in 1891, and at the present time (1903) she is principal of the high and grammar school. Widely known as a most accomplished instructor, she is also honored for her conscientious devotion to duty. She has never been idle during a teaching term since she entered upon her profession, and she has taught as much as twenty years without missing a day.

Miss Epright became a member of the Baptist church in 1866, and it has been her remarkable experience to have been a Sunday school teacher for thirty-four years, and a teacher in one Sunday school, that of the Great Valley Baptist church, for twenty-one years. For a number of years she led the Junior Mission Band connected with this church, and she has always been active in home and foreign mission work.

The death of Miss Epright occurred September 13, 1903, after the foregoing sketch had been prepared. The funeral occurred on September 15th and was attended by a large concourse of sorrowing friends, who held the deceased in tender affection for her graces of character and usefulness in life.

THOMAS WILSON EMERY, a successful business man and respected citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is a son of Levi Emery, a native of West Pikeland, who married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Wilson, a farmer of West Vincent. The Wilson family was represented in the army during the Civil war by Addison Wilson, who served as a soldier for a term of nine months. Mr. and Mrs. Emery were the parents of the following children: Preston, Rebecca, and Sarah, who all died in infancy; Robinson, who is a carpenter in business in Phoenixville; Thomas Wilson, mentioned at length hereinafter; Augustus, who is a laborer; Matilda, who is the wife of Harman Friday, a farmer of East Pikeland township. Mr. Emery, the father, was a man who never enjoyed robust health, and in consequence was to a certain extent handicapped in the race of life.

Thomas Wilson Emery, son of Levi and Margaret (Wilson) Emery, was born April 12, 1854, in West Pikeland township, and obtained his education in the public schools of West Vincent township. He was afterward apprenticed to Mr. Custor of Norristown, to learn the trade of carriage-building, and after serving his time engaged in business for himself in East Vincent, where his success was such that he remained for ten years. At the end of that time he moved to West Vincent, where for twenty-five years he has conducted a flourishing business, building all kinds of light wagons and carriages. His ability and worth have earned the esteem and confidence of all who know him, and his townsmen at one time intrusted him with the office of school director. He is a member of the Protective Order of Sons of America, Camp No. 275, of Chester Springs. His political principles are those advocated and upheld by the Democratic party, and he and his family are members of the Baptist church.

Mr. Emery married Martha, daughter of Joseph and Susan Sheeler, of Coventry. The former, who was a saddler by trade, is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Emery are the parents of five children: Harry, who resides at home, and is engaged with his father in the carriage-building business; Mary Ella, who also lives at home, where she devotes herself to the occupation of a seamstress and dressmaker; Edith; Lillian May, and William Park, an infant.

THOMAS W. JOHNSON. Among the representative agriculturists of Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of Thomas W. Johnson, who is progressive and enterprising in character, public-spirited in his aims and patriotic in disposition. He was born at Elam, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, January 9, 1833, and is a son of William and Eliza A. (Talley) Johnson. William Johnson, father of Thomas W. Johnson, was a son of Robert, whose father served in the patriot army and was killed at the battle of White Plains, Westchester county, New York. Robert Johnson was then but three or four years of age, and became the ward of strangers. In that way much of the family record has been lost sight of.

He began his education in the common schools of his native township and then attended two terms at Pine Grove Academy in Chester county, and this was supplemented by a course of study at Norristown and at the New York Conference Seminary at Charlotteville, Schoharie county, New York. He entered upon his active career as a teacher in Wilmington, Delaware, and being well qualified for this vocation he achieved gratifying success in the discharge of his duties. In 1860 he abandoned this occupation, and applied himself to that of farming at the old homestead in Delaware county. This comprises one hundred and seventeen acres of highly cultivated land with dairy attached, containing twenty-five head of carefully selected stock. He is the owner of several other farms in the county, from which he derives a handsome competence, and in the conduct of his extensive enterprises he has given the strongest evidence of unusual ability, which combined with his energy and probity has been the factor of his success. In politics he is Independent. An ardent friend of education, his interest and ability have found recognition in his being retained in the position of school director for the long period of thirty years. Always ready and willing to promote the welfare and advancement of the community, he has aided at all times in advancing community interests. The grounds of the Brandywine Summit Camp-Meeting Association were located on the property of Mr. Johnson, but in the summer of 1884 an association was formed and a charter granted by the court of Delaware county. At the breaking out of the Civil war, Mr. Johnson offered his services in defense of his country but was rejected on account of his impaired eyesight.

Thos. W. Johnson

Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Sarah A. Pool, a daughter of Wesley and Mary (Williams) Pool, a prosperous farmer of Delaware county. Their children are: Mary E., wife of Lewis C. Weldin, and they are the parents of three children; Harriet E., wife of John K. Hipple, and mother of one child. Lottie, wife of George Drayton; Margaret A., wife of George Palmer; two children have been born to them; William, married Cornelia Watkins, and one child has been born to them, who is now deceased; Laura, wife of the Rev. Dr. Baird; Martha, wife of Howard Ely, and of the two children born to them, one is now deceased; and Thomas W., Jr., unmarried, who possesses fine literary attainments. The latter named was formerly a resident of Wilmington, Delaware, but at present lives near Millington, Queen Anne county, Maryland, where he occupies a responsible position in a cotton manufacturing establishment.

CHARLES JONATHAN MENGEL, an enterprising and prosperous agriculturist of East Pikeland, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, November 8, 1866, the son of Henry Mengel and grandson of Mathias Mengel, who for many years was an eminent attorney-at-law, and also served in the capacity of alderman for the city of Reading, Pennsylvania, for thirty years; he is now living a retired life and enjoying the fruits of his years of professional labor.

Charles J. Mengel acquired a practical education in the common schools of Berks county, Pennsylvania, and this course of instruction thoroughly qualified him for the active duties of manhood. After laying aside his school books, he assisted with the work on his father's farm, which was located in Berks county, until about the year 1898 when he accepted a position as manager of the farm he now owns and operates, which was formerly the property of the Grimes family. The farm consists of one hundred and thirty-seven acres, which is under a high state of cultivation, and the neat and thrifty appearance of the entire place gives ample evidence of the careful supervision exercised in every detail of the work. In addition to general farming, Mr. Mengel has a dairy of ten head of cattle and the product of this enterprise is readily disposed of to the various creameries in the neighborhood. Mr. Mengel is a man of unquestioned integrity and straightforward business principles, and throughout the community he is held in the highest esteem for his fidelity to every duty of public and private life. His fraternal affiliations are with the Royal Arcanum Society, and his religious sympathies are in accord with the doctrines of the Lutheran church.

On December 25, 1895, Mr. Mengel married Catherine Walker, a daughter of David and Rachel Walker, the former named being a descendant of Joseph Walker, the pioneer ancestor of the family in the United States. The issue of this marriage was two children, both of whom died in early life. Mr. Walker conducted a farm in East Vincent township for several years, after which he pursued the occupation of a school teacher at the old Christman School House, and after resigning from that position he again turned his attention to agricultural pursuits in East Vincent township, where the remainder of his life was spent. The house in which Mr. and Mrs. Mengel reside was purchased April 15, 1794, by John Shurman; the great-grandmother of Mrs. Mengel was born in this house and her death also occurred there, and the birth and death of six generations of this family have also occurred there. During the Revolutionary war the house was used as a hospital for the sick and wounded soldiers. In 1903 Mr. Mengel purchased the interests of all the heirs in the farm and he and his wife now own and reside on the property.

GEORGE B. McCLELLAN SMILEY, an enterprising and successful business man of West Vincent township, Chester county, is a son of Samuel Smiley, who was born September 6, 1830, in Tredyffrin township. For a few years he followed the trade of a blacksmith, but during the remainder of his life he engaged in farming. He was drafted for service during the Civil war, but owing to poor health he was obliged to furnish a substitute. He married Mary Ann, daughter of John Loomis, a farmer of West Vincent township, and was the father of the following children: Llewellyn, who is a farmer of Douglassville, Berks county; John, who is a clerk in the store of Elmer Heistand at East Vincent; Maggie, who is the wife of George Gordon, a farmer of Uwchlan township; George B. McClellan, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Joseph, who is clerk in the store of F. Stieler, having succeeded to the position formerly held by his elder brother.

George B. McClellan Smiley, son of Samuel and Mary Ann (Loomis) Smiley, was born July 26, 1866, in Wallace township, Chester county. He was educated in the public schools, attending the evening sessions as he grew older. After leaving school he entered the store of F. S. at Byers, Uwchlan township, where he remained for twelve years, at the end of which time he gave up his position to his brother Joseph to engage in business for himself. Mr. Smiley opened a general store at Font, Chester county, where for three years he conducted a flourishing business. In 1896 he came to Birchrunville and established himself in the building formerly owned and occupied by T. B. DeWees, and the present store, in its appointments and management, testifies to the business ability of the owner. To the store is attached a creamery, known as the "Excelsior Creamery" which bears out its name in the superior quality of its products. In 1894 Mr. Smiley received from President Cleveland the appointment as postmaster of Birchrunville, and the fact that he still holds the office is the best testimonial of the ability and fidelity with which he has discharged the duties connected with it. In politics he is a Democrat. He is a member of Mt. Pickering Lodge, No. 446, Free and Accepted Masons, and of Royal Arch Chapter, No. 198, of Pheonixville. He also belongs to the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, No. 298, of Byers.

Mr. Smiley has been twice married, the first wife being Florence M. Cook of East Nantmeal township, to whom he was married December 22, 1887. Mrs. Smiley died July 22, 1895, and George B. McC. Smiley and Cecelia Pearce were married January 12, 1899. Mrs. Smiley is a daughter of Ephraim and Mary Louisa (Buzzard) Pearce. Mr. Pearce is a farmer, who finds sale for his products in the Philadelphia market. He served during the Civil war in Company I, One Hundred and Nineteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, in which he held the rank of sergeant. Three of the brothers of his wife served as Union soldiers, one of whom was killed at the battle of Cold Harbor, Virginia. Mrs. Smiley has one sister living, who is the wife of Llewellyn Smiley, a brother of her husband. Mr. Smiley had two children by his first marriage, John, born March 27, 1890, and Maurice, born September 13, 1891. A daughter, Marion, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Smiley July 5, 1901.

ISAAC NEILER SHOFFNER, an experienced farmer and citizen of West Pikeland township, Chester county, is a great-grandson of Martin Shoffner, who was a native of Alsace, Germany, whence he emigrated in 1767 to America, settling in Bucks county, and later moved to Charlestown township, Chester county. Here he bought a tract of land, and began his life in the new world as a farmer. His son, John, was a soldier in the war of 1812, serving at Marcus Hook.

George Shoffner, son of John, was born in West Pikeland township, on the homestead purchased by his father. He took an active part in local affairs, holding the offices of supervisor and school director. He married Esther, daughter of Samuel S. Neiler, who belonged to a family of Welsh origin, which traces its history through several generations. In accordance with the traditions of his ancestors, Mr. Neiler was at different periods of his life both a farmer and a miller, having been for many years engaged in the milling business at Chester Springs, his transactions being conducted on an extensive scale. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Shoffner: Isaac Neiler, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Ellen, who died at a very early age.

Isaac Neiler Shoffner, only son of George and Esther (Neiler) Shoffner, was born July 8, 1837, on the homestead, and received his primary education in the public schools of West Pikeland, afterward spending two terms at the Oakdale Seminary, and one term at the West Chester Normal School. After finishing his course of study, he devoted himself for three terms to the profession of teaching, two of these terms being passed in West Pikeland, and one in East Vincent. Deciding to follow the example of his forefathers in making agricultural pursuits the business of his life, he applied himself thenceforth to the labors of a farmer, in which he has been successful, and now resides with his mother on the old homestead. The estate consists of forty-seven acres, having a dairy attached, in which are maintained seven cows. A certain portion of his early life was spent in discharging the duties of a soldier, he having served for a short time during the Civil war as a member of the company commanded by Captain George R. Guss, of Chester county.

Mr. Shoffner does not allow his assiduous attention to agricultural pursuits to render him unmindful of the duties of a public-spirited citizen, but takes an active interest in all that concerns the welfare of the community in which he resides. His sterling traits of character are so highly appreciated by his townsmen that he has been more than once called upon to serve them in positions of honor and trust. In 1892 he was chosen justice of the peace and from that year until 1897 held this office, and was supervisor for one year. He was elected by the Republican party, of which he is a member and with which he is deservedly popular.

JOHN HARRISON THOMAS, an old resident and highly respected citizen of West Vincent township, belongs to a family of Welsh origin, and is, tradition says, a direct descendant of one of the early settlers of East Nantmeal township. On the maternal side he comes of Revolutionary stock.

Jesse Thomas was a native of Chester county, and was by trade a shoemaker, but during the summers became, for lack of work, what was then known as a mason tender. He married Susanna, daughter of Felix Christman, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary army, and was one of those who survived the terrible sufferings of the winter at Valley Forge, when many of the soldiers were without shoes, and their footsteps could be tracked by blood-stains on the snow. In after life Mr. Christman was wont to say that the best meal of which he ever partook was composed of the entrails of the beeves which the British had killed and then used for food. He was among those who marched from Valley Forge to Paoli, where they encamped in a buckwheat field. On the occasion of the massacre, he with two others found a place of concealment in a chestnut tree, and afterward escaped to Brandywine, there to encounter new dangers. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas were the parents of the following children: Morgan, who was a miller by trade, but is now engaged in farming; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Benjamin Haines, a farmer of Birchrunville; John Harrison, mentioned at length hereinafter; James, who was a farmer and is now deceased; Sarah, who married John Sturgis, a farmer of West Vincent, and is now deceased; Rachel, who became the wife of Daniel S. Beeler, of West Vincent, who travelled extensively in the far west; Deborah, who married Weaver Keller, a farmer of West Vincent; and Hugh, who is a farmer in West Vincent.

John Harrison Thomas, son of Jesse and Susanna (Christman) Thomas, was born May 22, 1837, in East Nantmeal township, Chester county, and received his education in the public schools of Nantmeal village, after which he was apprenticed to Mr. James Lumis for the purpose of learning the blacksmith's trade. He served one year with

Mr. Lumis, and the remainder of the time with Mr. Jonathan Snyder, finishing his apprenticeship about the year 1857. Before coming of age, he went to Birchrunville, and engaged in business for himself, remaining ever since in the same place, and conducting the same shop. April 1, 1903, he completed the forty-fifth year of his independent business career. He has always possessed in the highest degree the respect and confidence of his neighbors, who have intrusted him from time to time with various township offices, among them that of justice of the peace, to which office he was several times elected. He is a member of the Improved Order of Red Men and the Knights of Pythias Lodge, No. 232, of Birchrunville, also of the United American Mechanics. Politically he is a Democrat, and his church affiliations are with the Baptist denomination.

Mr. Thomas married Martha, daughter of Daniel S. and Elizabeth Beeler, of East Coventry, the former being by trade a journeyman carpenter. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are the parents of two daughters: Annie, who is the wife of Willis Hofficker, a carpenter and wheelwright; and Ella, who married Wesley Cook, a farmer. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cook are now deceased, as is also their eldest child, Elsie. There are two younger children: Eva, who resides with her grandparents; and George Ralph, who is a student at Girard College. Mr. Thomas is the possessor of some very interesting and valuable Revolutionary relics, transmitted to him by his maternal grandfather; among them a steel which the soldiers used in conjunction with the flint to light their fires. He is also the owner of a powder mill which stands on the site of the old mill in which powder was made to supply the patriot army of the Revolution. He also owns the burrs with which the powder was ground.

JOHN CLARE FUNDERWHITE, a prosperous and venerable citizen of Chester Springs, Chester county, is the son of Frederick Funderwhite, who was born November 14, 1798, and for many years led the life of a farmer in Chester Valley, his services as superintendent of farming being much in demand. He married Mary Clare, who was born September 17, 1796, in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Funderwhite was a man much respected both for ability and character.

John Clare Funderwhite, son of Frederick and Mary (Clare) Funderwhite, was born May 28, 1828, in Charlestown, Chester county, and received his education in the public schools of his native place. At fourteen years of age he found employment as a driver of a team of six horses, an occupation which he followed for a period of four years, and at the age of eighteen purchased a thrasher, which he worked by horse-power for six years. At the end of that time, feeling that this method of work was too primitive, he bought a steam-thrasher, which he operated successfully for six years more. He was also employed on the Chester Valley railroads. By dint of thrift and industry he had by this time placed himself in a position to enter upon the life of a farmer, for which he had a decided preference, and thenceforth devoted himself to agricultural labors, combining with these his business of thrashing. From that time forth, until about nine years ago, when he retired from active life, Mr. Funderwhite was known as an enterprising and successful farmer. He and his wife are members of the Pikeland Lutheran church.

Mr. Funderwhite married Martha J., daughter of Charles and Jane Colter, the former a farmer of Chester Valley. Mr. and Mrs. Funderwhite are the parents of the following children: Frank, who is a farmer in West Vincent; Mary Jane, who is a graduate of the Valparaiso High School, and now resides in New York city; it is rather remarkable that Miss Funderwhite should, in a certain sense, belong to three sections of the Union, having been born in Pennsylvania, educated in Indiana, and being now a resident of New York. The third child of Mr. and Mrs. Funderwhite is William Lockwood, who is engaged in farming with his brother Frank, in West Vincent township; and the fourth and youngest is Ira L. Sankey, who served three years in the United States army, holding, during the latter part of his term, the rank of corporal. He is now employed in Pittsburg by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. After the death of his wife, Mr. Funderwhite married Mary E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell, of Philadelphia, both of whom are natives of Chester county, the former, who is a carpenter by trade, having followed the business of a contractor in Coatesville.

CHARLES A. BROOME. Among the substantial and highly respected citizens of Chester county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of Charles A. Broome, whose birth occurred in Minersville, Schuylkill county, April 29, 1852, the son of Charles M., who was also born in Minersville, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, and was a butcher by trade, and Annie (Kline) Broome, who was born in New Castle, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, in 1832, a daughter of Reuben Kline, a lumberman of that county.

The greater part of Charles A. Broome's early life was spent at the home of his grandparents, and his education was acquired at the public schools of his native city. He began his business career in the Wolf Creek Diamond Coal Company mines, where he remained for two years, after which he was employed on various railroads that were in course of construction at that period. He followed this line of industry for seven years, and during that time served in various capacities, first as cart driver, then stableman, and finally time keeper. The following twelve years he was employed with John Oberholtzen, in a general store, groceries, grain and lumber, after which he secured employment in the Pikeland Creamery, with which enterprise he was actively interested for nineteen years, twelve of which were spent in the capacity of superintendent. After the expiration of this period of time, he removed to Chester Springs, Chester county, and at the present time (1903) is engaged as superintendent of the laundry department of the Soldiers' Orphans' School, erected for the accommodation of the orphans of the soldiers who risked their lives for their country. Mr. Broome is widely known throughout the section of the county where he resides, and enjoys that respect and consideration that are merited by every man of worth and ability. Politically he is an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, and fraternally he is a member of Mt. Pickering Blue Lodge, No. 446, Free and Accepted Masons, Phoenix Chapter, No. 75, Phoenix Council, No. 8, and Commandery, Knights Templar, No. 15.

Mr. Broome was united in marriage to Lizzie F. Knerr, a daughter of Peter and Mary Ann Knerr, residents of the section known as the Seven Stars, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where Mr. Knerr conducts a successful wheelwright business. Their children were: Mary L., born February 19, 1873, died November 16, 1876, and Annie Bell, born June 21, 1875, died of scarlet fever on November 30, 1876.

THOMPSON M. CLOUD, a prominent farmer and political leader of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is of ancient English stock. His great-grandfather, Jesse Cloud, was the first American ancestor. He settled in Chester county, married there, and passed his life there as a farmer. Among his children was James, born in New Garden township, who followed the occupation of blacksmith and farmer. He married Marjorie Mason, and had a son called James, born in 1817, in Kennett township, Chester county.

James Cloud, son of James and Marjorie (Mason) Cloud, was born in 1817. His education was acquired in the public schools, and was as good as was afforded by the times. He turned to farming as an occupation, which to him was a field for much intelligent effort. He was a man of decided views and strict principles, and enjoyed the confidence of his circle. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and in politics a Whig. His wife was Sarah Webb, a daughter of Thomas and Esther (Paxson) Webb, the former named a farmer of East Marlborough township, Chester county. James Cloud died May 8, 1899, and his wife died August 5, 1900. The children born to them were as follows: 1. Thomas A., who died unmarried; 2. Mary M., deceased, unmarried; 3. William J., who married Amanda H. Fulton, and had four children: 4. Thompson M.; 5. Sarah A., died unmarried; 5. Edward P. married Roselda Kester, and has three children; 7. Mary B., married Joseph P. Cloud, and is the mother of two children.

James Blady

Sarah Bloud

Thompson Mason Cloud, son of James and Sarah (Webb) Cloud, was born in Kennett township, Chester county, November 11, 1850. He was given the best school advantages of the section, his work in the public schools being supplemented by instruction in the Swayne school at Kennett Square. His active life was spent as a farmer, and he brought to his work the energetic business management essential to financial success. He holds to the ancestral tradition, and attends the Friends' Meeting. He is a prominent Republican, and a member of the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Cloud is unmarried.

HERBERT THOMAS TAYLOR, prominent among the citizens of Charlestown township, Chester county, is the grandson, on the paternal side, of an officer in the British army, whose son, Thomas Taylor, was born in 1809, near Coventry, England. He was a weaver by trade, and at one time worked in a silk and ribbon factory. At the time of his death he was conducting a flour and feed business. The family to which he belonged was of good standing, and Mr. Taylor, who took an active part in public affairs, occupied a high place in the esteem of his fellow townsmen. A convincing proof of this is the fact that he once rejected the nomination for mayor of Coventry. It is possible that one reason for this action on his part may have been that acceptance of the office would have interfered with the indulgence of his poetical tastes and inclinations, a feature of his character which was very prominent, and which made him the author of a number of poems which were never given to the world in his lifetime, but are now in the possession of his son, and ready for publication. He married for his first wife, Rose Compton, and they were the parents of the following children: David, Thomas, Charles, Caroline and Ann. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Taylor married Mary Ann daughter of John Morbey, by whom he was the father of one son: Herbert Thomas, mentioned at length hereinafter. The death of Mr. Taylor took place in the year 1881.

Herbert Thomas Taylor, son of Thomas and Mary Ann (Morbey) Taylor, was born January 1, 1859, in Coventry, England, and received his education in Manchester, after which he was apprenticed to learn the trade of a carpenter. After serving seven years, he came in March, 1881, to the United States, and settled in Wilmington, Delaware, where he worked in the shops of Harlan & Hollingsworth, and also in those of Jackson Sharp. After remaining several years in Wilmington, he obtained a position as general carpenter in the University of Pennsylvania, and for three terms during illness of the regular instructor, taught the students in the principles of model building. He then engaged in business for himself as a contractor, and at the end of four years accepted the position of carpenter in Girard College, where he remained for seven years. In 1897 he came to Charlestown township, where he bought the farm known as the "Nelson Peck farm." At the end of three years he sold this estate, and purchased the place known as the "Sowden farm," consisting of eighty and one-half acres. In connection with this valuable farm he has a dairy of twenty-two head of cattle, and disposes of his very superior products in the Philadelphia markets, where they command a ready sale and high prices. Mr. Taylor, though never found wanting in any of the qualities of a good citizen, has had neither time nor inclination for great activity in public matters. His politics are those of the Republican party.

Mr. Taylor married Ellen Insley, and their children are: Lillian, who is the wife of Herbert Hopwood, living on the home place; Herbert T., who is now deceased; Howard L., who is at home on the farm; Bertha and Mabel. The two last named are still attending school. Mrs. Taylor is a daughter of Charles Insley, of Birmingham, England, who conducted all his life the business of a saddler and harness-maker. His family consisted of the following children: Clara; Maud; Ellen, mentioned above as the wife of Herbert Thomas Taylor, Laura; Emma, and Louisa Insley.

CHARLES WESLEY McCURDY, who holds an honored place among the citizens of Charlestown township, Chester county, is a representative of one of the oldest and most respected families of the township. He is the grandson of Daniel McCurdy, a native of county Antrim, Ireland, who emigrated to the United States at the beginning of the nineteenth century, and served in the war of 1812, being among those who were encamped at Marcus Hook. He took a leading part in local affairs, holding the office of justice of the peace for twenty years. He married Ann Wright, who was a descendant of John Bartram, a representative of the well-known historic family.

of that name. He organized the first Methodist church in his locality, and was always an active member.

John W. McCurdy, only son of Daniel and Ann (Wright) McCurdy, was born October 16, 1809, in Stroudsburgh, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and was a man of great prominence in the community in which he resided. His business, which was that of a farm surveyor, he followed with signal success, and being possessed of remarkable intelligence joined to an uncommonly wide range of knowledge and much experience, he was resorted to from all sides by his neighbors for advice on a variety of subjects. He was consulted in regard to the settling of estates, and other questions of a legal character. For twenty years he held the office of justice of the peace. He was also active in the church, being well known as a local minister. He married Magdalene H., born April 26, 1812, daughter of John and Susan (High) Latchow, of Pikeland township. The Latchows were a prominent race of farmers, and were supposed to be of Holland descent, the family name in old deeds being spelled Latcha. The Highs were an old and respected family of Coventry township, Chester county. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy: 1. Ann Elizabeth, who was born December 20, 1839, and has always resided at home. 2. Daniel W., born August 30, 1841, who was an attorney of Clearfield county, and a member of the law firm of McEnally & McCurdy, a firm which was widely known throughout the state and county for its great ability and undoubted integrity. He married, May 18, 1875, Miss Annie C. Paine of Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and they are the parents of one son, John Paine. Mr. McCurdy became a partner in the firm in 1872, although it was only since 1868 that he had been a member of the bar, the senior partner being Judge J. B. McEnally of Clearfield. Mr. McCurdy was prominent in Masonic circles, serving for twenty-five years as treasurer of the Blue Lodge. He was very active in the church to which he belonged, in which he held for twenty-eight years the offices of treasurer and secretary, serving for twenty-five years as superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. McCurdy, who is now deceased, has left behind him the memory of an able lawyer and a truly good man. 3. Susanna L., who died, as she had always lived, at home. 4. John L., who took an active part in the affairs of the township, and was also active in church affairs. 5. Charles Wesley, mentioned at length hereinafter. It will be seen at a glance, from this brief mention, that the honorable reputation established by Daniel McCurdy has been worthily sustained by his descendants.

Charles Wesley McCurdy, son of John W. and Magdalene (Latchow) McCurdy, was born on the homestead in Charlestown township, where he has always continued to reside. This estate, tradition says, has been in the possession of the family since 1820. It is said that this house was the scene of the first Methodist Episcopal meetings ever held in this neighborhood. His political principles are those promulgated by the Republican party, but he has always held aloof from an active participation in public affairs.

Of unimpeachable integrity, cultivated tastes, liberal sentiments, and social gifts of a high order, Mr. Charles W. McCurdy is sincerely respected and cordially liked as the worthy representative of an old and honored family.

MILLARD FILLMORE SHUPERT, one of the prosperous and energetic agriculturists of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, has achieved that success, in his business career, which is the logical result of enterprise, systematic effort, resolute purpose and straightforward dealings. His birth occurred in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, March 10, 1858, the son of Daniel and Musey (Davis) Shupert, who were the parents of the following named children: Daniel, Jr., a milk dealer in the city of Philadelphia; Sarah, unmarried, resides at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania; Charles, a farmer of Haverford, Pennsylvania; Anna, unmarried, residing at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania; William, a farmer and dairyman; Florence, wife of Roger Burns, a carpenter, and they are the parents of one child, Roger S. Burns, and Millard Fillmore Shupert. Daniel Shupert was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and his death occurred in the year 1873.

Millard F. Shupert acquired his preliminary education at the public schools of Delaware county, and this was supplemented by attendance at the Spring Garden Institute, located at Broad and Springgarden streets, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. After completing his studies, Mr. Shupert accepted a position as superintendent of a high class farm at Radnor, Pennsylvania, the property of John K. Valentine, who was United States attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, and served in this capacity for two years. He then returned to Montgomery county and began farming on his own account, first renting a farm which he operated until the spring of 1892, when he removed to Upper Darby township, again renting a farm which he cultivated and improved up to the year 1896, when he returned to John K. Valentine, where he remained for eleven years. After four years of farming, he purchased the David Patrick farm, consisting of one hundred and eleven acres. He makes a specialty of dairying, having thirty-five head of cattle, many of which are the famous Jersey and Guernsey breed, and the products of this dairy, being of a superior quality, always find a ready market. He also conducts general farming, his broad acres yielding a good harvest and fully repaying him for the labor bestowed upon them.

Mr. Shupert was united in marriage to Sarah N. Latch, a daughter of Charles and Mary Latch, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where the former named was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Mr. Shupert takes a deep interest in everything pertaining to the social, moral or material welfare of the community and lends an active support to all measures for the public good.

DAVID Y. PECK, a business man of practical ability and experience, who has successfully conducted his affairs and gained the respect and confidence of his business associates, was born in Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 31, 1855, the son of Nelson and Mary (Young) Peck.

He acquired a limited education at the public schools of his native township, owing to the fact that he was obliged to earn his own living at an early age, but by careful observation and reading he improved his mind and so overcame this deficiency to a large extent, being now a well-informed man on all subjects. He learned the trade of carpenter, gaining a thorough knowledge of this trade with William Hughes, a successful business man of Chester county, with whom Mr. Peck was subsequently employed as a journeyman for four years. After the expiration of this period of time, Mr. Peck engaged in the carpentering business for George W. Bavis for about eight years. He then turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, conducting operations on his father-in-law's farm until 1892, when he purchased his present farm in Charlestown township, which was formerly the property of George Fetters. This farm consists of one hundred and seven acres of rich and arable land, upon which he raises a general line of farm produce which he disposes of in the near by markets. He has also a dairy of twenty-two head of cattle, and his products being of superior quality are always purchased by the Pikeland Creamery. Mr. Peck has always been prominently identified with all measures that tend toward the progress and material prosperity of his community, takes an active interest in the primary elections of the Republican party, and has served his township in the capacity of constable for seven years, and school director for three years.

In 1879 occurred the marriage of David Y. Peck and Eliza Stine, a native of Charlestown township, Chester county, and a daughter of Christian and Emily Stine, representatives of old and well known families of this section of the state. Mr. Stine was a mason by trade, and was honored by his fellow citizens by being chosen for the position of constable of Charlestown, an office which he filled for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Peck are the parents of one son, Harry C. Peck, born December 12, 1885, who resides at the old homestead.

JOHN FRANKLYN MARCH, prominently and actively identified with the agricultural and social interests of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a native of East Pikeland township, his birth having occurred there April 21, 1867.

John March, father of John F. March, was a native of West Pikeland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his education was acquired in the public schools, and where he followed the occupation of a farmer during his entire active career. He married Margaret Pennypacker, a daughter of Joseph and Margaret Pennypacker, the former named being a prosperous farmer of Chester county. Their children were: Joseph, now deceased, was a section foreman for seven years and overseer for four years on the North Pennsylvania Railroad; Henrietta, wife of George Deery, a farmer of East Pikeland township; Alice, wife of William Pennypacker, of Berwyn, Pennsylvania, a plasterer by trade and a noted contractor; Jane, wife of Addison Free, of Morristown, Pennsylvania, engaged as freight agent at that town; Clara, wife of Howard Davies, of Charlestown township; Orlando, married Sadie Moses, and is now engaged in farming pursuits on the old homestead in East Pikeland township, and John Franklyn March.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by John F. March were obtained in the public schools of his native township, after which he pursued a course of study at the Morristown and Chester Springs Academies, where he remained for two years. Having decided to follow the quiet but useful calling of agriculture, in 1882, Mr. March began his operations in Schuylkill township, remaining there for four years; he then removed to East Pikeland township, successfully conducted operations there for two years, and in 1890 he located on his present farm in Charlestown township. This property which consists of one hundred and twelve acres was formerly owned by Mr. McBride, and is considered one of the most productive in this section of the county. Mr. March conducts general farming and dairying, making a specialty of peach growing, having many fine trees in his extensive orchard. In his political affiliations Mr. March adheres to the principles of the Democratic party.

Mr. March married Mary Patrick, a daughter of Robert and Susan Patrick, the former being an enterprising farmer of Charlestown township. Their children are: Orville, born at Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, in 1885, educated at the Hopewell school, and now resides at home; Mary, born in 1889, a student at the Phoenixville school; Arthur, born in 1891, receiving his education at the Hopewell school, and Vernja, born in 1893, also attending the Hopewell school.

MAJOR-GENERAL GEORGE A. McCALL, a distinguished soldier of the Civil war, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, March 16, 1802. He graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point when twenty years of age. From 1831 to 1836 he served as aide-de-camp upon the staff of General E. P. Gaines. He saw service in the Florida and Mexican wars, and received the brevets of major and lieutenant-colonel. From 1850 to 1853 he was inspector-general of the regular army. At the outbreak of the Civil war he was a resident of Chester county, Pennsylvania, occupying a country seat at West Goshen, in the suburbs of West Chester. He tendered his services to Governor Curtin, who appointed him major-general of militia, and assigned him to the command of the Division of Pennsylvania Reserves, and when this body was mustered into the service of the United States General McCall received from President Lincoln the commission of brigadier-general of volunteers and became its commander in the field. He commanded in the battle of Mechanicsville, June 26, 1862, and repelled greatly superior forces. He was taken prisoner shortly afterward, and was confined for some weeks in Libby Prison, the imprisonment resulting in such impairment of health that he was obliged to resign shortly after his exchange. He wrote (1868) "Letters from the Frontier," based upon his military service in that region. He died in West Chester, February 26, 1868, and his remains rest in Christ church burying ground, Philadelphia. His grave is decorated every Decoration Day by comrades of General George A. McCall Post No. 31, G. A. R., of West Chester, which organization was named in his honor.

HON. WASHINGTON TOWNSEND. The Townsend family, one of the oldest in Chester county, Pennsylvania, has been conspicuous in its many generations for men of sterling character and unusual capability, who have rendered services of great usefulness to their community and to the state.

Joseph Townsend (1), a son of William and Mary Townsend, was born in Berkshire, England, November 18, 1684. He married Martha, daughter of Julian and Esther Wooderson, and they received a certificate from Newbury Monthly Meeting, November 15, 1711. In 1720 they removed to Chester. Joseph Townsend was a weaver by trade. In 1725 he bought 800 acres of land in East Bradford, Chester county, upon which he settled at that time. He died April 9, 1766, and his wife died March 2, 1767; both were buried at Birmingham. Their children were William, Mary, Joseph, John, Hannah, Martha, Richard and Esther.

Joseph (2), third child of Joseph (1), was born April 8, 1715, and died October 3, 1749. He received a portion of the paternal estate, upon which he built a house. He married Lydia Reynolds, and their children were: Francis, Benjamin, Esther, Joseph and Elizabeth.

Francis (3), eldest child of Joseph (2), married Rachel, daughter of Joseph and Hannah Talbot, of Middletown, and their children were: Joseph, Samuel, David, Lydia, John, Benjamin, Hannah, Jacob, Isaac, Talbot and Rachel.

Samuel (4), second child of Francis (3), settled in Coventry. He was a justice of the peace, and it was his constant effort to have people adjust their differences privately and avoid courts. He married Priscilla, daughter of David and Sarah Yarnall, and their children were David, Sarah, Rachel, Lydia, Priscilla, Franklin, Jane, Susan, Eliza and Thomas.

David (5), eldest son of Samuel (4), was born in Pughtown, December 13, 1787. He was brought up on the paternal farm, and received a common English education and some advanced instruction in mathematics. He was a man of great industry and ambition for learning, and he became one of the most intelligent and useful men of his day. On account of his excellent penmanship, when twenty-three years old he was appointed to a clerkship in the office of the register and recorder of Chester county, in West Chester, which was thereafter (one year excepted) his place of residence during the remainder of his life. For a time he was a conveyancer and a merchant. In 1813 he was elected a county commissioner, and at the expiration of his term he was elected county treasurer. He was one of the first directors of the Bank of Chester county at its organization in 1814; and during its first two years. October 1, 1817, he was appointed cashier, and he served as such for nearly a third of a century, and resigned in 1849 on account of sustaining a brain injury which disabled him and materially shortened his life. Under his sagacious management this institution enjoyed a phenomenal and uninterrupted prosperity. He was a trustee of the West Chester Academy from 1821 to 1826, when he became treasurer and financier of the board, and retired from the position in

GEORGE A. M'CALL.
WASHINGTON TOWNSEND.
JAMES BOWEN EVERHART.

ADDISON MAY.
ISAAC I. HAYES.
HENRY CLAY NIELDS.

ROBERT E. MONAGHAN.
WILLIAM D. HARTMAN.
WILMER WORTHINGTON.

1854, by which time he had fully extricated the institution from all its financial embarrassments. In 1827 he was appointed county prothonotary to fill a vacancy, but he resigned within a fortnight in order to give his attention solely to his bank duties.

Mr. Townsend left behind him two enduring monuments to his love for the beautiful. The one was the banking house, of fine classical design, built in 1835-36, on plans drawn by Thomas U. Walter, in which his fine architectural taste was most manifest. The other was the Chester County Cabinet of Natural Science.

As was said by his biographers (Messrs. Futhey and Cope), "to unite the useful with the agreeable was his constant aim. Trained in the philanthropic tenets of the Society of Friends, though without their exterior peculiarities, he was a noble scion of that estimable stock." He aided in the founding of the Cabinet of Natural Science, was its secretary and treasurer from its inception until the failure of his health, and was at all times a liberal contributor to its support in money, books and museum material. About the time of the organization of the Cabinet, his attention was attracted to botany, and from that day he was an enthusiastic and discriminating student of flower and herb. He made familiar acquaintance with the flora of Chester county, which he arranged with great carefulness in his widely known herbarium. In recognition of his industry and exactness in identifying and arranging a genus of plants allied to the asters, Sir William J. Hooker, in 1833, gave the series the name of "Townsendia," in his monumental work, "Flora of North America," subjoining to his description the remark that Mr. Townsend, out of an ardent love of botany, had devoted his leisure hours to the science with eminent success. After Mr. Townsend retired from active business pursuits he found congenial employment in the various branches of horticulture, more particularly fruits and ornamental plants. He died December 6, 1858, at the age of seventy-one years.

Mr. Townsend married, April 16, 1812, at Birmingham Meeting, Rebecca Sharpless, born June 9, 1789, died July 22, 1836, a daughter of William and Ann Sharpless, of West Chester. Of this marriage the following named children were born: Washington, Franklin, Priscilla Ann, Gulielma Maria, Albert, Ann Eliza and Sharpless.

Washington Townsend, eldest child in the family above named, was born in West Chester, January 20, 1813. His education was principally obtained in the West Chester Academy, then under the charge of Jonathan Gause, an accomplished teacher. At the age of fifteen he became a bookkeeper in the Bank of Chester county, and he subsequently was made teller. His service with this institution continued for sixteen years, and until 1844. In that year he completed his law studies in his leisure and night hours, under the preceptorship of William Darlington, and he was now admitted to the bar. In 1848 he was appointed prosecuting attorney by Attorney General James Cooper, and was reappointed by Attorney General Darragh. In 1849 Mr. Townsend withdrew from his profession to succeed his invalid father in the cashiership of the Bank of Chester County. The close confinement necessitated in the latter position worked impairment of his health, and in 1857 he resigned and returned to the practice of law, in which he was thenceforth busied during the remainder of his life. He was a lawyer of great ability, and saw longer service at the bar than any practitioner of his day, with a single exception in the person of James H. Bull.

It was, in his public life, however, that Mr. Townsend displayed his highest abilities and gained his greatest fame. A Whig of the Henry Clay school, he was a delegate in the last national convention of the party, in Baltimore, in 1852. In this body he strongly advocated the right of a congressional district to express itself through its delegates upon national questions, and he steadfastly opposed an attempt to commit the Pennsylvania delegation to a unanimous support of the fugitive slave law, a measure which he unsparingly condemned. Four years later he aided in the organization of the Republican party, and in 1860 he was a delegate in the national convention in Chicago, and in that body he antagonized a movement to commit the state delegation to Cameron as the presidential nominee, and, with three or four others, supported Lincoln from the first ballot until the last. During the Civil war he was an unflinching supporter of the national administration, and aided vigorously in providing men and means for the suppression of the slaveholders' rebellion.

In 1868 Mr. Townsend was nominated for congress after a determined struggle in which he had a most resourceful opponent, Hon. Wayne McVeagh. In the election he defeated Robert E. Monaghan by a vote of 12,771 to 9,481. He was three time re-elected, and his period of service was co-extensive with the two presidential terms of President Grant, whom he greatly admired and with whom he was on the most friendly terms. During his long continued service in congress Mr. Townsend was most industrious and conscientious. He scrutinized closely every proposed enactment, and favored or opposed it as his judgment warranted, with all his boundless energy and pertinacity. He succeeded General John H. Ketcham as chairman of the committee on public lands, and in that capacity his conduct was splendidly useful. He aided in formulating and he supported various salutary homestead laws in the interest of soldiers of the Civil war and of bona fide agricultural settlers, and the legislation providing for the construction of the Pacific railways, and he was particularly instrumental in the setting apart of the Yellowstone region as a national park. He was also a member of the committee on education and labor, on freedmen's affairs, and on banking and currency, and he afforded substantial aid in the formulation of the national bank legislation. He made many speeches on all the various topics above enumerated, and some of these were given wide publicity through the newspaper press or as campaign documents. His unselfishness and integrity were unquestioned, and it was no more than was expected of him when he vigorously opposed the odious "back salary grab bill," and, after its passage, he at once refused to receive the amount voted to each and every congressman. It was also worthy of interest to record the fact that he would never consent to use a railway pass, his fine sense of honor forbidding that he should place himself under a shadow of obligation to any corporation which might desire the enactment or defeat of laws at any time.

After returning to private life, Mr. Townsend devoted himself almost entirely to local and personal affairs. He was at once elected to the presidency of the National Bank of Chester County, the leading financial institution of the county, and he occupied the position until his death. At various times he served his fellow-citizens in the capacity of assistant burgess, borough treasurer and school director, was a member of the West Chester Fire Company. He was always a student, with decided literary tastes. In his youth he wrote verse of considerable merit, and in his later years he gave to the press much matter upon financial and economic topics, in which he was recognized as an excellent authority. An enthusiastic botanist, it was most natural that he should be a useful member of the American Philosophical Society and the Pennsylvania Forestry Association.

Mr. Townsend was married in young manhood to Miss Elizabeth B. Price, a niece of Major Isaac D. Barnard, of West Chester. Three children were born of this marriage: Rebecca, Frank Evans, and Harriet Elizabeth. The mother of these children having died, Mr. Townsend married Miss Elizabeth Gibbons, daughter of Dr. William Gibbons, of Wilmington, Delaware. Their children were Margaret Gibbons, Elma Anita, and Bertha Donaldson.

Of the children of Mr. Townsend, four are now living. Franklin E., the only son, is in business in Philadelphia. Three daughters, Harriet E., Marguerite G. and Bertha D. Townsend, reside in the paternal homestead in West Chester, a fine old edifice which contains the books, historic documents and works of art collected by Mr. Townsend during his busy career.

Mr. Townsend died March 18, 1894, in his eighty-second year. Despite his advanced age he had kept closely in touch with the community about him, and his demise was mourned as a personal affliction to all, while some of the most fervent tributes paid to his memory were uttered or written by those who had been his political opponents. All bore testimony to his absolutely unblemished character and to his many virtues. It was said of him that his name was synonymous with the graces of private integrity and public spirit to a degree which ever commanded trust and confidence. His one predominant trait was his perfect integrity. He was a man of great breadth of mental vision, a close thinker, and an eminently practical advocate in all public affairs. Vigorous in debate, no personalities crept into his utterances, but he was at all times a dignified considerate gentleman in the full meaning of the words. The prominence he gained in legislative circles was due solely to his excellent qualities of heart and mind, and no taint of self-seeking ever attached to him. His intercourse with his fellows was genial and sympathetic, based upon a conviction that all had come up over troublesome, if not sorrowful, paths. He attained success through no fortuitous chain of circumstances, but he had made his own way by industry, thrift and probity. He was never happier than when aiding those who needed help or encouragement, and his benevolences, bestowed simply and in secret, were countless. And so he passed into his later years, loved and honored by all, and sincerely mourned when the hour of his departure came.

JAMES BOWEN EVERHART, orator, statesman and patriot, whose distinguished service in public life and in letters stamped him as a man of high attainments and lofty purpose, was born July 26, 1821, in West Whiteland township, Chester county. His American ancestors came from Germany in early colonial days. His grandfather, James Everhart, served in the Revolutionary war. His father, William Everhart, was a surveyor by profession; and for forty years was a merchant in West Chester; he was a Whig, and was elected to the thirty-third congress, in which body he delivered an effective speech on the Kansas-Nebraska bill; he married Hannah Matlack, and they were the parents of James B. Everhart.

James B. Everhart was educated at Bolmar's Academy and Princeton College, graduating from that last named on attaining his majority. He studied law in West Chester and at the Cambridge Law School, and was admitted to the bar in 1845. Prior to entering upon practice he took special law courses in the universities of Edinburgh and Berlin. In 1862 he recruited Company B, Tenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, which he commanded with ability, and he displayed great courage at Antietam. When Lee invaded the state in 1863, he served as major in the Twenty-ninth Emergency Regiment. He was a Republican in politics, and was state senator from 1876 to 1882; in the latter year he was elected to congress, and succeeded himself by reelection, serving in both sessions with great usefulness.

Mr. Everhart was referred to as "the courtly poet scholar," on account of the refinement of his language in conversation, and his polished diction as a writer. His eulogies upon Bayard Taylor, William Penn and Anthony Wayne, pronounced in the state senate, are remembered as the most splendid memorials ever delivered in Pennsylvania. His speech in congress on the River and Harbor bill attracted attention throughout the country. His "Fox Chase," miscellaneous poems and speeches are volumes of great interest. He died August 22, 1888, and the press and literateurs of the state paid due honor to "his memory, which will be always held sacred in the county of his birth."

ADDISON MAY, held in admiration for his scholarly attainments and his nobility of character, was born December 18, 1811, in South Coventry township, Chester county, son of Robert and Ruth (Potts) May. His father was a Pennsylvania ironmaster of large means, owner of several large works, and his maternal grandfather was one of the first to develop the mineral interests of the state.

When a year old, Addison May was made fatherless, the elder May coming to death by falling from his horse, and the mother of the lad passed away when he was but seven years old. He was now taken into the home of his eldest sister, the wife of Governor Samuel Stevens, of Maryland, a woman of cultivation and beauty of character. At a proper age he entered Jefferson College, in Western Pennsylvania, where he took high rank in the classics. A year after his graduation he began the study of law in the office of William H. Dillingham, of West Chester, and after he was admitted to the bar entered upon practice in Erie, Pennsylvania. Here he married Elizabeth Shafer, and removed to Norristown, where he built up an excellent practice. While located here he served upon the board of education. His health failing, he and his wife retired to the home of his father-in-law, Judge Shafer, and while there he devoted himself to his books and to botanical studies, at the same time gratuitously affording legal advice to the people about him as they solicited him. After the death of Judge Shafer, Mr. May removed to West Chester, which was thereafter his home. There he busied himself with public and humanitarian affairs. For several years he was a school director, and subsequently he served several years as a trustee of the State Normal School. He was a trustee of the State Hospital for the Insane at Norristown, resigning after a time at the solicitation of his family, but not before he had suggested and procured the appointment of a woman physician to be given the charge of the female patients. He was for several years an inspector of the Chester county prison. In addition to these many public trusts, he was frequently called upon to act as guardian of orphans, and to manage estate affairs. He was one of the organizers of the West Chester Trust and Relief Society, and was president until two years prior to his death, when he resigned.

Mr. May was for many years a vestryman of the Church of the Holy Trinity (Protestant Episcopal) at West Chester, and when the new edifice was erected he was treasurer of the building fund, and contributed liberally to the building fund. In politics he was originally a Whig, and was afterwards a Republican. He possessed rare social qualities, and attached to himself all with whom he came in contact. He was a man of fine literary tastes, and rarely read a translation of a Latin author, preferring the original text. He died January 8, 1892, surviving his wife, who died in April, 1878. Their only child was a daughter, Martha E., who became the wife of Dr. Joseph T. Rothrock.

ISAAC I. HAYES. Among the many men of high renown who are proudly claimed as natives of Chester county, none is more widely known than Isaac Israel Hayes, scientist, author and Arctic explorer. He was born March 5, 1832, son of Benjamin Hayes, of West Chester.

In the year of his attaining his majority he was graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania. In the same year, in the capacity of surgeon, he accompanied Dr. Elisha Kane on the second Grinnell expedition in search of Sir John Franklin, and Dr. Hayes was the first civilized man to put foot upon Grinnell Land. In 1860 he sailed in command of the schooner "United States," and reached a point nearer the North Pole than any previous explorer. The Civil war in the United States worked a cessation of exploration, and Dr. Hayes entered the medical corps of the volunteer army with the rank of major and surgeon, and was brevetted lieutenant-colonel. To him was committed the building and equipment of the great army hospital in West Philadelphia, of which he had charge until the restoration of peace. In 1869 he again entered the Arctic circle in the "Panther." He was elected to the Assembly of New York in 1876 and served until 1879, holding place on important committees. He received gold medals from the Geographical Societies of London and Paris. He published several works which had a wide circulation—"An Arctic Boat Journey," "The Open Polar Sea," "Cast Away in the Cold," "A Story of Arctic Adventure for Boys," and "The Land of Desolation." He died in New York city, December 17, 1881.

HENRY CLAY NIELDS, U. S. N., was one who during the Civil war served in the navy of the United States with conspicuous gallantry. Born in 1839, he shipped as a boy on board a merchant vessel, and rose to the position of mate. He entered the navy in 1863, and served under the eye of the great Farragut, who witnessed his heroic deed following the blowing up of the Union monitor "Tecumseh" by the explosion of a torpedo. All on board the fated vessel were lost excepting five, who owed their lives to Nields. Lowering a boat, he rowed away to their rescue as they were floating in the waters of Mobile Bay, and the enemy was so filled with admiration for his daring deed amid the storm of shot and shell that they withheld their fire that he and those whom he had rescued should not be further imperilled. Admiral Farragut complimented Nields in general orders and recommended his promotion. He rose to the rank of lieutenant-commander, and was serving as such at the time of his death, in 1880. He was liberally educated and had visited almost all maritime countries, and wrote and conversed entertainingly of his adventures and experiences. He married Rebecca, daughter of Samuel S. Heed.

ROBERT E. MONAGHAN, for many years a leading lawyer and politician of Chester county, was born in West Fallowfield township, July 24, 1822, son of James and Catherine (Streeper) Monaghan. His father, a native of Ireland, was engaged in the Irish rebellion led by Robert Emmet, and was secretary of one of the associations of United Irishmen. When the rebellion failed, Monaghan, then a youth of nineteen, came to America, and landed at New Castle, Delaware, a stranger and destitute of means. He was well educated, and found employment as a school teacher, both in Delaware and in Chester county, Pennsylvania, to which he soon removed. He subsequently engaged in farming. He took an active part in public affairs, and was a pronounced Democrat. He served for many years as a justice of the peace, but was defeated as a legislative candidate. He was twice married; first to Hannah, a sister of Hon. William Jackson, and (second) to Catherine Streeper, and reared a large family.

Robert E. Monaghan was educated in the schools and academies in the home neighborhood, and was for some time a teacher. He took a position as canal collector at Liverpool, Pennsylvania, and while so engaged read law under the preceptorship of Hon. Hamilton Aldricks, of Harrisburg. On being admitted to the bar he entered upon practice in West Chester. A Democrat in politics, he soon came into prominence in his party, and was at various times a delegate in state and national conventions, was a member of the state central committee in 1860, and in 1880 was an elector-at-large on the Hancock ticket. He represented his county in the legislature in his early years, and was a candidate for congress in 1868, but was defeated by Hon. Washington Townsend after a canvass in which they stumped the district in joint discussion with equal credit. He was defeated by Hon. Wayne McVeagh for the district attorneyship. He was twice voted for in the state convention for the gubernatorial nomination. In 1890 Governor Beaver appointed him to membership on the joint commission from Pennsylvania and Delaware to fix the boundaries between the two states, and later Governor Pattison appointed him on the commission for the promotion of the uniformity of legislation in the United States. He was for twelve years a trustee of the West Chester State Normal School, and during a part of the time was president of that body. He was prominent in all local institutions. He died in West Chester, in 1895.

WILLIAM D. HARTMAN, M. D., physician and scientist, was born in East Pikeland, December 24, 1817, son of George and Edith W. (Weaver) Hartman. He was educated in the local schools and studied for his profession in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating in 1839, when he entered upon practice in West Chester. While ranking high as a physician, he achieved great distinction as a scientist, especially in conchology, entomology, geology and mineralogy. His taste for this pursuit came with his boyhood, and when he was but seventeen Dr. William Darlington spoke of him as "a zealous and promising young botanist." His collection of partula and achinella exceeded those of the British Museum and the Jardin des Plantes of France, and he published bibliographic and synonymic catalogues of his genera collections. In 1874 Dr. Hartman and Dr. Ezra Michener issued an illustrated treatise of the fresh water and land shells of Chester county, under the title "Conchologia Cestrica." Dr. Hartman made numerous contributions to periodical literature, and for many years maintained a correspondence with leading scientists of Europe. Dr. Darwin, in his "Descent of Man," quoted from Dr. Hartman's published observations on the cicada septendecim, or seventeen year locusts of America. In his later years Dr. Hartman gave particular attention to insect life, and communicated his observations through the columns of the West Chester Local News. He died in 1899. His wife was Mary Jane Kabec, of Jefferson county, West Virginia.

WILMER WORTHINGTON. The annals of the great state of Pennsylvania contain no more highly honored name than that of Wilmer Worthington, physician, philanthropist and statesman.

The Worthington family originated in Lancashire, England. After the custom prevailing in the long-ago, the name was derived from that of the locality where the first known progenitor appeared. Etymologically, it is from three Saxon words, Wreath-in-ton, or Farm-in-Town. About a score of miles to the northeast of Liverpool, in the hundred of Leyland and parish of Standish, is the township of Worthington, where resided for centuries the family of Worthington, and the old ancestral hall known to have had an existence for seven centuries, was razed only a few years ago. The principal branch of the Worthington family is traced to Worthington de Worthington, in the reign of Henry III, anno 1236.

In 1699, about the time of William Penn's second coming to America, a Worthington sailed from England and died on the voyage. Three sons came with him—John, Samuel and Richard. The last named settled in Maryland. John and Samuel Worthington, both members of the Society of Friends, settled in Byberry, Bucks county. John was a farmer. He died January 14, 1777, aged about eighty years. In 1719 he married Mary Walmsley, born July 12, 1701, and died February 12, 1754. She was a daughter of Thomas and Mary (Paxson) Walmsley, and a granddaughter of William Paxson, born in 1633, who came from Buckinghamshire, England, in the ship "Welcome." John and Mary (Walmsley) Worthington were the parents of eleven children. Their seventh child and fourth son

Isaac (2) was born June 13, 1735 and died in 1801. He took up 217 acres of land in West Goshen township, Chester county, April 1, 1783, paying therefor £1,100. He was a farmer by occupation. He married Martha Carver, a daughter of John Carver, of Bucks county, and seven children were born to them. Their fourth child and second son

Amos (3) was born September 2, 1773, and died January 3, 1834. He was a farmer, and a man highly respected in the neighborhood. He married Jane Taylor, who was born March 14, 1780; she survived her husband many years, and died September 26, 1873, at the phenomenal age of ninety-three years and six months. To Amos and Jane (Taylor) Worthington were born eight children, of whom Wilmer Worthington was the third.

Wilmer Worthington (4) was born in West Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 22, 1804. He began his education in the public schools and completed a course in the West Chester Academy. He read medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. William Darlington, and subsequently attended the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1825, the year of his attaining his majority. He entered upon practice at Byberry, but at the end of six months removed to West Chester, where he resided until the close of his life. It is to be said of him that he was a model physician. Skillful, benevolent and sympathetic, he was untiringly devoted to his patients, and regardless of personal discomfort, responded with alacrity to whatever call, without regard to remuneration. In 1863 his public duties so pressed upon him that he relinquished much of his practice, and in 1865 he abandoned it altogether.

His services in behalf of the general public and his profession were of conspicuous usefulness. For three years (1839-1841) he was physician at the Lazaretto, under appointment by Governor Porter, and while occupying that position almost forfeited his life from typhus fever contracted in the line of his duty. Dr. Worthington was a pioneer in the work of medical organization. He was primarily the founder of the Chester County Medical Society, which was organized February 5, 1828, the first society formed in the state looking to the general organization of the profession, and he frequently presided over the body, and on various occasions delivered before it addresses replete with instruction. He led the first movement toward the formation of a State Medical Society by introducing before the County Society (December 1, 1847) a resolution calling for the holding of the convention which procured the formation of the Medical Society of the state of Pennsylvania. He also aided in the organization of the American Medical Association, and he was a delegate to its initial meeting in Baltimore, in 1847. He was frequently a delegate to both the state and the national societies, and always took a prominent part in their proceedings. He was president of the state society in 1850, and on his retirement from the position he delivered an able address which was published in the first volume of the "Transactions." In this he pleaded earnestly for a system atic and thorough organization of the profession, for a higher culture upon the part of those seeking to enter it, an extended term of study and a higher standard of requirement for graduation. He took an active part in enlisting the effort of the County Medical Society to secure more efficient medical attendance at the almshouse. The humane measures contemplated were defeated, but the effort bore fruit afterward in the institution of the Board of Public Charities, in the organization of which Dr. Worthington took an active part. Dr. Worthington was one of the editors of the Medical Reporter, a quarterly journal published by the medical societies of Chester and Delaware counties, during the three years of its existence, and he contributed liberally to its pages. He was industrious in the work of preparing biographical matter concerning deceased practitioners in Chester county, and his articles were given to the public through the general and professional press.

The public services of Dr. Worthington were of conspicuous usefulness. He was an early trustee of the West Chester Academy, and one of the organizers of the Chester County Academy of Natural Sciences, of which he was a trustee during its entire existence, and he delivered a course of lectures on chemistry before it during the winters of 1835-36-37. He was a director in the Bank of Chester County, and in the West Chester and Philadelphia Railway Company, and he was president of the Board of Managers of Oakland cemetery.

In 1833 Dr. Worthington was elected to the lower house of the state legislature, and during the ensuing term acquitted himself most creditably. He strongly advocated the new common school law, and was influential in securing the adoption of a measure which lies at the foundation of the present public school system. He was also industrious in promoting the legislation under which a geological survey of the state was soon afterwards made. In 1863 he was elected to the state senate, and he was re-elected in 1866, serving six years in all, and as speaker in 1869. He took his seat at the crucial period of the Civil war. Previously a Democrat and a warm admirer of Stephen A. Douglas, he was an earnest supporter of the national administration, and rendered splendid service in the work of recruiting troops and providing for their equipment and in caring for the families of volunteers. To his effort was due the passage of a provision for the Soldiers' Orphans' Schools after it had once been defeated. Among the many beneficent measures to which he afforded his earnest support were the following: The law providing for the supply of dissection material to medical colleges; the law providing for the proper treatment of the insane, more especially the insane poor; and all measures looking to the establishment and maintenance of educational and charitable institutions. During his entire senatorial term he served upon the educational committee, was during a large portion of the time its chairman, and he was conspicuously instrumental in the establishment of State Normal Schools. At the end of his legislative service he received from his colleagues, without respect to party, a handsome testimonial in token of their appreciation of his services.

While serving as a senator; Dr. Worthington was chairman of the senate committee appointed to visit the charitable and penal institutions of the state, and to enquire into the expediency of appointing a board of public charities. The report made by the committee was so clear and convincing that the board was appointed the following year (1870), and Dr. Worthington was appointed a member, and soon afterwards he was made general agent and secretary of the body. During the first year of his service in that capacity he travelled more than eleven thousand miles, and his report at the end of the year was a remarkably clear and comprehensive account of a majority of the prisons and almshouses in the state. He was actively engaged in this work until May, 1873, when failing health compelled him to tender his resignation. This was accepted by the board with the utmost reluctance, and the body adopted a series of resolutions in which he was proclaimed a faithful, conscientious and devoted servant in the cause of humanity and practical reform.

Dr. Worthington was married, September 28, 1826, to Elizabeth, a daughter of William and Ann (McClellan) Hemphill. Eight children were born of this marriage: 1. William Hemphill, a physician, who was an army surgeon during the Civil war and died in 1865; he married Phebe Gheen, and two children were born to them; 2. Ann Jane, who became the wife of Henry B. Pepper, of Philadelphia; he died the year following, leaving with her a son Henry B., who is deceased; she then married Elijah J. Dallett, of Philadelphia, and to them were born five children; 3. Amos Edward, who died young; 4. Emily Elizabeth, who married Charles A. Wood, of Pittsburg, and to whom were born five children; 5. Antoinette Bolmar, who died young; 6. Malinda Marshall, who married Abner Hoopes, of West Chester; their children were: (a) Sarah Andrews, who married Louis C. Baker, Jr., of Philadelphia, and to whom were born six children, all daughters; and (b) Wilmer Worthington, who is in business with his father; he married Martha Lippincott; 7. Kate Dallett, who married Thomas W. Marshall, of West Chester; 8. Caspar Pennock.

Dr. Worthington died September 11, 1873, in the sixty-ninth year of his age, and his widow died May 10, 1875, aged sixty-five years.

Notwithstanding Dr. Worthington displayed wonderful activity and energy almost to the very last, he could not be regarded as a rugged man, and his accomplishments were only possible through the display of an indomitable resolution. Mention has been made of his serious illness while physician at the Lazaretto. In 1826 he experienced a severe attack of dysentery, and in 1859 another attack of the same ailment was well nigh fatal. In 1838 he was ill for several weeks with inflammation of the brain. In 1864 he was seized with chest pains, and a second attack in 1867-68 left him with a settled heart difficulty. Early in 1873 he was taken with a violent paroxysm of angina pectoris, and this finally resulted in his death.

The Chester County Medical Society, in a meeting held October 28, 1873, adopted suitable resolutions and appointed Dr. Jacob Price, Dr. John B. Brinton and Dr. Isaac Massey a committee to prepare and publish a tribute to the memory of their illustrious colleague and friend. In this were epitomized the principal events of his life, and a fervent eulogium closed with the following well merited words:

"The life and character of Dr. Worthington are worthy of our careful study, whether we follow him as the child, honoring his parents; as the husband and father, meeting the trials and responsibilities of domestic life; as the physician, incurring the toils and anxieties of his arduous profession; as the citizen, striving to do his whole duty to his neighbor; as the legislator, mindful of the rights of the weak, the sufferings of the distressed, the training of the young, unscathed by the corruptions of place; or as the Christian, earnestly seeking to discharge every duty, we find this good man, without pretention to genius, at the insatiate reachings of ambition, steadily doing the work he found for his hands to do, and doing it so well that the world is wiser, better and happier for his having lived."

EVAN HIGHLEY, an enterprising and popular citizen of Charlestown township, Chester county, is a son of Joshua K. Highley, who was a native of Schuylkill township, and followed until within a period of ten years the trade of a blacksmith. Although taking the interest of a good citizen in public affairs he could never be induced to participate actively in politics. He married Mary Ann, daughter of Evan Griffith, a woodchopper of Chester county, and they were the parents of fourteen children, seven of whom are now living, scattered through different portions of Chester county, one living at the historic Valley Forge, another at West Chester, a third at Spring City, and the others at various places in the county.

Evan Highley, son of Joshua K. and Mary Ann (Griffith) Highley, was born November 16, 1863, in Schuylkill township, being one of the large family of fourteen mentioned above. He was educated in the public schools of Chester county, and at Frogg College, and on leaving school selected for his life work that of a farmer. Throughout the agricultural season, he devoted himself to his chosen calling, and during the winters worked in the paper mills, holding for six years the position of engineer. This course of life he continued for fifteen years, and at the end of that time reaped the reward of his industry and perseverance in finding himself able to purchase the farm which is now his home, and on which he can devote himself without interruption to the work most congenial to his tastes. In his preference for agriculture Mr. Highley differs from most of the other male members of his family, who are all engaged in the milling business. Mr. Highley's estate was known, at the time he purchased it, as the "James Ritchie farm," and is maintained by its present owner in a high state of cultivation. Mr. Highley's extreme popularity is attested by the fact that neighbors have repeatedly intrusted him with posts of honor and responsibility. He has been thrice elected supervisor,—in 1897, 1898 and 1901, in addition to having served one term as town clerk. He was once elected to the latter office the same year that he was chosen supervisor, and in order to serve in the last named capacity, resigned the town clerkship. He is a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Politically he is a Republican.

Mr. Highley married Annie, daughter of Phillips and Mary Hauck, of Vincent township. The former was for many years a miner, being actively engaged in his calling until a short time previous to his death. Mr. and Mrs. Highley are the parents of six children: Ida May, Frank, Llewellyn, Grace, Norris and Evan. Of these, all but two are attending school in Charlestown township.

WILLIAM C. MACKEY, an enterprising and prosperous business man of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and the present justice of the peace in the borough of Avondale is of Scotch-Irish descent and traces his ancestry to three brothers who came from Ireland, probably early in the eighteenth century, one settling in Pennsylvania, one in Maryland and the other in the western section of the United States.

Squire David Mackey, great-grandfather of William C. Mackey, was born in Chester county, and subsequently served in the capacity of private in the Revolutionary war. He was united in marriage to Agnes Curry, and the following named children were born to them: Robert, married Jane Kimball; John; Rachel, who became the wife of John Fulton; Susan, married John Allison; George; Mary; Elizabeth, who was united in marriage to David Pury, and Letitia Mackey.

John Mackey, grandfather of William C. Mackey, was actively identified with the various interests of Chester county, where his marriage to Amy Crooks occurred. Their children were: 1. David married Eliza Pyle, and their children were: Joshua; Amy, deceased; Oliver, who married Amelia Broghan; and Mary, deceased. 2. John married Amy McClenathon, and among other children born to them were the following named: Samuel, married Jane Myers, and Jane Miller; Louisa; Mary; Horace, married Fanny McClennon; Francis; Anna; and Belle, wife of Newton Chambers. 3. Thomas, married Hannah Hamill, and they were the parents of eleven children, namely: William, died in childhood; James; William (II); Elisha and Robert, twins, the former married Sarah McClenathon, and the latter died in early life; Emma, wife of Thomas Good; Clara; Edward, married Addie Brown; Wilson, married Minnie Spencer; and Lorena Mackey. 4. James. 5. Margaret, wife of William Thompson and their children are: John; James; William, married for his first wife Lizzie Lyons, and for his second wife Carrie Ramsey; Samuel, married Anna Wickersham; George, married Anna Brown; and Ella, wife of John Going. 6. Amy, wife of Thomas Townsend, and the issue to this marriage was: Sarah, wife of Joseph Moore; John, married Grace Doren; Letitia; Thomas, married Elizabeth Dance; and Francis Townsend.

James Mackey, father of William C. Mackey, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in June, 1812. He received a good practical education and after arriving at manhood's estate devoted his attention to farming interests in the township of Penn. By his marriage to Eleanor Kelton, who was born in London Grove township, July 23, 1821, a daughter of Squire John and Elizabeth (Curry) Kelton, were born the following named children: Mary, born May 28, 1846; James, born June 19, 1848; Josephine, born April 28, 1852; Robert, born March 29, 1856, and William C., born October 9, 1857.

William C. Mackey, youngest son of James and Eleanor Mackey, was born on the old homestead in Jennersville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 9, 1857. He was reared to manhood in his native township, his early education was acquired at the common schools and this was supplemented by a thorough course of study at Cope's Seminary. He then learned the trade of paniting and paper hanging in which he has been interested up to the present time (1903), and being an active and enterprising man, of sound judgment and good business ability, he has succeeded in building up a large and lucrative trade. He is also the incumbent of the office of justice of the peace for the borough of Avondale, discharging his duties in a highly creditable and efficient manner. Mr. Mackey is unmarried.

DAVID RICKABAUGH HARTMAN, one of the representative farmers and respected citizens of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a native of what is known as Valley Creek, East Whiteland township, Chester county, his birth having occurred September 2, 1826.

Peter Hartman, father of David R. Hartman, was born in Pikeland, Chester county, Pennsylvania, obtained a common school education, after which he learned the trade of shoemaker. He followed this line of industry for many years, but subsequently abandoned it and turned his attention to farming pursuits, which he conducted for the remainder of his life. Mr. Hartman was united in marriage to Margaret Fetters, a daughter of George and Margaret Fetters, and the following named children were born to them: Elizabeth, wife of John Gunkle; George Harman, deceased; Margaret, wife of David Rickabaugh; Sarah Walley, who resides in Charlestown; Caroline, deceased; Mary and Peter, twins, both deceased; Kate, wife of William Sheldrake, formerly a resident of Charlestown, but now residing in Kent county, Delaware; and David Rickabaugh Hartman.

David R. Hartman, youngest child of Peter and Margaret Hartman, attended the public schools of West Whiteland township, his first teacher being Miss Mary Jones, and later he completed his studies in the public schools of Charlestown township. The first two years of his business career were devoted to agricultural pursuits; the following two years he served as a butcher in Charlestown township, and at the expiration of this period of time he returned to his former occupation, conducting operations in the valley in West Whiteland township for two years. In 1857 Mr. Hartman purchased his present farm, which is located in Charlestown township, about one mile from the village of Charlestown, formerly known as the Peter Young farm. The property consists of one hundred and forty-two acres of ground, which is neat and thrifty in appearance, and by using the latest improved machinery the fields yield good harvests. Mr. Hartman is a Democrat in politics, and has served his township in the capacity of school director for a number of years. He was chosen president of the Montgomeri, and Chester Live Stock Insurance Company, which office he has filled for many years.

On December 23, 1855, Mr. Hartman married Francina Sheldrake, a daughter of John and Jane Sheldrake, of Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: John S., engaged in farming pursuits; Charles C., also engaged in farming; William, by profession a druggist, having served in that capacity for a number of years in the city of Philadelphia; Dr. George, who graduated from the University of Philadelphia in 1886, and at the present time is successfully engaged in the practice of his profession at Port Kennedy; Hiram, who married Louisa Curry, and resides at home, assisting his father with the work of the farm. The family are members of the Lutheran church.

ALEXANDER KELLY McCLURE, journalist, and for many years prominent in public affairs, is a native of Pennsylvania, born in Sherman's Valley, Perry county, January 9, 1828. He is of Scotch-Irish descent. He was reared upon a farm and his education was limited to that afforded by the neighborhood schools. He was possessed of studious habits and an ambition for learning, and became so well equipped that he filled many useful places in life, and in 1888 received from Washington and Lee Universities the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws in recognition of his learning and public services.

Early in life he served an apprenticeship to a tanner and currier, but he soon forsook that calling to engage in newspaper work, a field in which he came to high prominence. In 1846, when eighteen years of age, he became editor and publisher of the "Mifflin Sentinel," which he established, and he maintained his connection with that journal until 1852, when he took charge of the "Chambersburg Repository," which he conducted until 1856. He had meanwhile studied law under the preceptorship of William McLellan, of Chambersburg, and in 1856 he was admitted to the bar and entered into practice in association with his preceptor. He soon, however, withdrew from the law in order to give his attention to journalism and official duties committed to him, but returned to it later, and practiced in Philadelphia from 1868 to 1873. From 1862 to 1868 he again published the "Chambersburg Repository." In 1875, in association with Frank McLaughlin, he purchased the "Philadelphia Age," then in its thirteenth year, and founded the "Philadelphia Times," the first number of which appeared March 13. The "Times" subsequently issued a daily, and in 1876 erected the fine Times Building on Chestnut street. With this paper Mr. McClure was immediately associated until 1901, and under his management it attained a national prominence and has long exerted a potent influence in the country at large. A deep thinker and pungent writer, Mr. McClure made his journal his first care, but he has also contributed much matter to the periodical press, and has written two volumes of permanent value, "Life and Services of Andrew G. Curtin," and "Our Presidents, and How We Make Them."

Mr. McClure was originally a Whig in politics, and in 1853 he was the candidate of his party for auditor-general of Pennsylvania, but was defeated by Ephraim Banks. Anticipating the disruption of the party through its inability to grapple with the new anti-slavery extension issue, he became one of the members of the Pittsburg convention which organized the Republican party in Pennsylvania in 1855, and he was a delegate in the first Republican national convention which nominated John C. Fremont for the presidency in 1856. He was chairman of the Republican state committee in 1860, and performed splendid service in organizing the Republican forces for the campaign of that year which resulted in the election of Abraham Lincoln to the presidency.

In 1863 he declined the chairmanship of the Republican central committee in order to give his undivided effort toward the re-election of Governor Curtin. In 1864 he was a delegate-at-large in the Republican national convention, and was solicited by three-fourths of the state central committee to accept the chairmanship of that body, but declined to enter upon what he deemed a more important service. He was chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation in the Republican national convention which nominated General Ulysses S. Grant for the presidency in 1868, and he delivered addresses in that campaign in Rhode Island and Massachusetts at the solicitation of the national Republican committee. In 1872 he was chairman of the Liberal Republican state committee, and he was also chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation in the national convention of that party which nominated Horace Greeley for the presidency. His subsequent affiliations were again with the Republican party.

Mr. McClure has been repeatedly called to public positions, in various of which he performed services of peculiar usefulness. His entrance upon official life was in 1850, when he served as governmental census enumerator. In 1853 he was the Whig candidate for auditor-general of Pennsylvania, but was defeated by Ephraim Banks. In 1855 he was appointed by Governor Pollock as superintendent of public printing, but resigned after having served eight months. In 1856 he was appointed by the same executive to the superintendency of the Erie & Northeast Railway, with a view to suppressing serious riots, and succeeded in adjusting all difficulties. He was elected as a Republican to the legislature in 1857, and in 1858, and in 1859 he was elected state senator, taking his seat in 1860. In the same year he declined to become a candidate for United States senator, giving his support to Mr. Wilmot. When the Civil war broke out, he was made chairman of the senate committee on military affairs, and rendered efficient aid in organizing the military forces of the state. In 1862 he was solicited by President Lincoln and Secretary of War Stanton to supervise the draft in Pennsylvania, and in order to give him needed authority he was commissioned assistant adjutant general of United States Volunteers. With the aid of only two clerks he made a full enrollment of the armsbearing population, adjusted credits on quotas previously filled, and placed seventeen regiments in the field within sixty days, resigning immediately after this highly important work was accomplished. In 1864 he accepted the nomination for the legislature from a new and strongly Democratic district, and was elected by a majority of four hundred. In October following he went to Philadelphia at the request of President Lincoln to further the organization of the Union Party (Republican and War Democrats) for the presidential campaign, and he also aided in the equipment of the state forces to repel the rebel invasion at the time of the burning of Chambersburg.

Mr. McClure delights in rural life, and passes his summers upon a beautiful farm near Wallingford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He is a member of various literary, political, scientific and social organizations in Philadelphia.

ISAAC K. ROOT, of West Vincent township, Chester county, standing high in the best regards of his neighbors, both as farmer and citizen, is a representative of one of those old families which for generations have maintained the agricultural interests of their native county.

David Root was born January 4, 1796, in Chester county, and all his life labored with credit to himself and advantage to the community as an enterprising, successful farmer. He served in the patriot army during the war of 1812, being one of those encamped at Marcus Hook. For many years he acted as supervisor of the township, his neighbors feeling that their interests could not be intrusted to better or more able hands. He married Sarah Knerr, born August 21, 1803, and their children were: 1. Catharine, who married Joshua Crater, a native of Chester county, who moved in 1850 to Illinois, where he became a farmer, and at his death was survived by his widow and four children. 2. Elizabeth, who became the wife of John Emery, who spent his life as a farmer in Spring City, and is now deceased. He is survived by his widow and three children: Sarah Ellen, Hannah E. and David. 3. Isaac Knerr, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Root, the father of these children, died respected by all who knew him, ending his days on the homestead, where he had passed his entire life.

Isaac K. Root, son of David and Sarah (Knerr) Root, was born July 27, 1837, on the homestead, in West Vincent township, and received his education in the schools of his native township and in those of Chestnut Grove. He afterward assisted his father in the labors of the home farm, and at the age of twenty-two entered upon an independent career as a farmer. In addition to devoting himself with assiduous skill and indefatigable industry to the work of general farming he conducts a dairy of fifteen head of cattle, sending his produce to the Philadelphia markets. He has been elected at various times to the minor offices of the township, which he has filled in such a manner as to justify the confidence reposed in him by his friends and neighbors. His political principles are those advocated and promulgated by the Democratic party, and his church affiliations are with the Lutheran denomination. Among the services rendered by Mr. Root to the community in which he resides, the marked interest which he has always displayed in the cause of education deserves special mention. This interest he has ever manifested in a practical manner, serving as a member of the school board, and doing all in his power to promote and facilitate the best means of instruction, and the advancement in all useful knowledge of the younger portion of the community, believing that attention to these matters is likely to insure the best and most satisfactory results to society and to build up the fabric of the commonwealth.

Mr. Root married Hannah, daughter of John and Maria Shick, of Chester county. The former was a farmer and the owner of the property now possessed by Mr. Root. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Root consists of the following children: 1. John Warren, who is an enterprising business man, being agent for a number of well known companies, both in Philadelphia and Chester county. He is also highly esteemed as a public-spirited citizen, holding the offices of auditor and justice of the peace. In the community in which he resides he is respected as one who has already achieved much, and is at the same time looked to with expectation by those who regard his past as giving promise of a still more noteworthy future. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, affiliating with Phoenixville Lodge. 2. David Harris, who was employed in the planing mill of the sash and blind works, and is now deceased. 3. Clarence, who is with a firm at Pottstown. He married Harriet, daughter of Harry Hallman, of Spring City. They have no children.

WILLIAM SWINEHART, of West Vincent township, Chester county, where he is respected and esteemed both as farmer and citizen, is descended, on the paternal side, from old residents of the county, and numbers among his ancestors men who did much for the upbuilding of the community in which they lived.

John Swinehart was born in 1817, on the old homestead, and followed through life the occupation of a farmer. He married Mary Jane, daughter of John Patrick, a native of Ireland, who emigrated early in life to the United States and settled in Pennsylvania, finding a home in Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Swinehart were the parents of eleven children, only four of whom are now living: Josiah, who is a farmer on the homestead; Foreman, who lives in Philadelphia, and is a draughtsman in the service of the Reading Railroad Company; William, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Emma, who is the wife of Harry Fetters, of West Chester. It is worthy of note that Mrs. Swinehart, though of Irish descent, was a native of Chester county, having been born in 1819 in Charlestown township.

William Swinehart, son of John and Mary Jane (Patrick) Swinehart, was born December 13, 1841, on the homestead in West Vincent township, and has always followed his ancestral calling of a farmer, in which he has met with merited success. During the Civil war he was among those drafted for military service, but furnished a substitute, feeling that duty required his presence at home. Although taking the interest of an intelligent citizen in public affairs, he has never been willing to accept office, the demands of his chosen calling absorbing the greater portion of his time and attention. His political opinions are those advocated and upheld by the Republican party. He and his family attend the Methodist Episcopal church of Nantmeal village.

Mr. Swinehart married Rebecca, daughter of Francis and Ann Potts, and they have one son, Robert, who lives with his parents and assists his father in the care and management of the farm.

WILLIAM L. MATHUES, a public-spirited and influential citizen of Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of a family of German extraction who came to this country and settled in the state of Pennsylvania prior to the Revolutionary war, in which struggle the paternal great-grandfather of William L. Mathues took an active part.

William Mathues, grandfather of William L. Mathues, was born in Baltimore county, Maryland, in 1795, and when only eighteen years of age enlisted in the American army and served as a private during the war of 1812. After his return from the war he removed to Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he resided for many years, and subsequently he located in Media, Delaware county, where his death occurred in 1878, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. He was united in marriage to Miss Susan McHenry, and seven sons and one daughter were born to them.

William F. Mathues, father of William L. Mathues, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1825. He received a good common school education, and after attaining young manhood he removed to Delaware county, where for a number of years he pursued his trade of carpenter. He enlisted as a private in the Fifty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry, later was promoted to the position of hospital steward, and for three years of the Civil war served his country with credit and distinction. After his return home he was elected treasurer of Delaware county by the Republican party, and he discharged the duties of that responsible position for two years. From 1885 to 1888 he served in the capacity of sheriff of the county, and for a number of years previous to his election to that office served as deputy sheriff. He was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he also held membership in Bradbury Post, No. 149, Grand Army of the Republic. In 1849 Mr. Mathues married Miss Emeline Willis, who was born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1826, a daughter of Allen Willis. The following named children were born to them: William, Susanna, Mary J., Alice, Emma K., William L., Charles W. and Allen C. W. Mathues.

William L. Mathues, second son of William F. and Emeline Mathues, was born March 24, 1862, in Middletown township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He acquired an excellent education in the public schools of Media, and upon attaining the age of eighteen years, in 1880, he entered the law office of John M. Broomall, the nestor of the bar of Delaware county, and pursued a course of study in order to prepare himself for a professional career. In due course of time he passed the usual examinations and was admitted to practice in the courts of Delaware county on November 10, 1884. The following year he accepted the position of deputy sheriff under his father, who was then acting as sheriff, and he was the incumbent of that office for two years. On January 1, 1887, he was appointed deputy prothonotary and deputy clerk of the courts of Delaware county, and served in that capacity until the first Monday in January, 1892, at which time he took the oath of office as prothonotary and clerk of the court of quarter sessions, having been elected thereto on the Republican ticket in the fall of 1891. He was re-elected in 1894, 1897 and 1900, and was renominated for a fifth term in 1903 without opposition, but declined in order to accept the nomination for state treasurer, to which responsible office he was elected in the fall of 1903 by a majority of 285,000, which was the largest majority ever given a candidate for that office in Pennsylvania. He assumed the duties of the office on May 1, 1904. At all times and in all these various positions his official conduct has been blameless, and he has acquitted himself with the highest capability and conscientious devotion to his duties and the trust reposed in him. He is also an active and prominent factor in every movement that has for its object the material prosperity of the people and the industrial development of the county. He is affiliated with Lemni Tribe, No. 86, Improved Order of Red Men; Chester Lodge of Elks, No. 488; Aerie No. 159, Fraternal Order of Eagles; Media Lodge, No. 749, Junior Order of United American Mechanics; and Captain Johnson Camp, No. 18, Sons of Veterans, having served as captain in the latter named organization. He is also a member of several political associations, and he has served as aide on the staff of the commander-in-chief of the United States Sons of Veterans.

Handwritten signature in cursive script, likely reading 'J. W. Matthews'.

September 24, 1884, Mr. Mathues married Miss Charlotte E. Goodley, a daughter of Charles Goodley, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: William Franklin, born October 29, 1885; Samuel G., born September 29, 1887; and Ernest P., born January 2, 1889. The mother of these children died in 1891. May 17, 1893, Mr. Mathues married for his second wife Miss Marguerite R. Loudon, a daughter of P. B. Loudon, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. One son was the issue of this marriage, T. J. Clayton, born May 4, 1897.

DAVIS E. ALLEN. Energy, enterprise and perseverance have been the main attributes in the success which has attended the well directed efforts of Davis E. Allen, a prominent and respected citizen of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a son of William and Ruth Ann Allen, and a descendant of a family who have made their home in that section of the state for several generations.

Ellis Allen, grandfather of Davis E. Allen, was born in London Grove township, Chester county, July 27, 1783, a son of William Allen, a son of Isaac Allen. Ellis Allen acquired a good English education and subsequently learned the trade of wheelwright, which line of industry he pursued for many years in connection with extensive farming interests which he conducted in New Garden township. He was united in marriage to Rebecca White, and five children were born to them: Reuben, Ellis, Sarah, Hannah and William Allen. Both Mr. Allen and his wife were active members of the Society of Friends.

William Allen, father of Davis E. Allen, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, October 16, 1813. He was reared on his father's farm, attended the common schools of the neighborhood, and after attaining his majority he rented a farm adjoining the one owned by his father. Here he successfully conducted a general farming business for eight years, and after the expiration of this period of time he settled on a portion of the original Allen homestead and after four years moved to Newlin township, where he spent eight years. He then returned to the homestead for four years, after which he went to New Garden for seven years and then moved to Londonderry township, where he died. In politics he was formerly an old line Whig and later an adherent of the Republican party, and served his township in the capacity of school director and supervisor. He was a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Allen was married three times, his first wife having been Ruth Ann Passmore, a daughter of Levi and Hannah (Woodward) Passmore, and six children were the issue of this marriage: Hannah P., born December 20, 1844, Rebecca W., born December 20, 1844, died at the age of six months; Davis E., born February 14, 1846; Mary C., born September 23, 1849; Sally D., born May 23, 1851; and Lydia R., born May 28, 1853, died January 21, 1869. Ruth Ann Allen, mother of these children, died October 21, 1854, and was buried at Marlboroughville. Mr. Allen chose for his second wife, Phebe Hoopes, and after her decease, which occurred in 1865, he married Lydia C. Conner, and the following named children were born to them: Caleb H., born August 31, 1868; Anna J., born November 21, 1870; George T., born November 24, 1871; and James M., born February 25, 1875. Mr. Allen's death occurred June 7, 1897, and he was buried at London Grove.

Davis E. Allen, eldest son of William and Ruth Ann Allen, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1846. His boyhood was spent in attendance at the public schools of the county, at the private school of Isaac Martin, then at Milton Durnall's private academy at Unionville, later at Fairville, and finished at West Chester, Professor Worrall. He chose the quiet but useful calling of agriculture for his vocation in life, and at the present time (1903) is conducting operations upon a well cultivated farm in London Grove township. He is widely known and respected in the community, is a member of the Society of Friends and also a member of the Patrons of Husbandry.

On March 6, 1877, occurred the marriage of Davis E. Allen and Mary Wood, a daughter of James and Mercy Wood, of Kirks Mills, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Her death occurred December 21, 1877. In March, 1887, Mr. Allen contracted an alliance with Elizabeth D. Gray, only child of William and Mary Jane Gray, and the issue of this marriage was: William G., born June 28, 1888; Ellis P., born November 25, 1889; Jessie D., born May 9, 1891; Rebecca E., born November 7, 1892; and Robert E., born September 7, 1895, died at the age of nineteen months. Mrs. Allen passed away September 17, 1895, sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

JOSEPH BECKER. Among the prominent farmers of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who have gained success in this line of industry, may be mentioned the name of Joseph Becker, who has spent his entire life in this section of the state and is recognized as one of its respected and esteemed citizens.

Melchoir Becker, father of Joseph Becker, was born near the fortress city of Mainz, on the historic river Rhine, in Germany, August 3, 1829, acquired an excellent education in the institutions of that country, and in 1857, after having decided in his own mind that there were better opportunities for an active business career in the United States, he came to this country and took up his residence in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, but later removed to Kennett township, Chester county. He was united in marriage to Mary Corman, daughter of Stephen Corman, of Philadelphia, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Charles, who married Sophia Rotthouse, and four children have been born to them; 2. William, who married for his first wife Mary McFadden, and one child was born to them, and for his second wife he chose Louisa Daly; 3. Eugene, who died in infancy; 4. John who married Augusta Rotthouse, and they are the parents of five children; 5. George, married Eva Hanna; 6. Theodore, married Anna Crook; 7. Joseph; 8. Melchoir, Jr., unmarried; 9. Alfred, married Laura Eastburn, and one child has been born to them. Melchoir Becker, the father of this family, died August 25, 1903.

Joseph Becker was born in Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 27, 1872, and was an attendant at the common schools of the vicinity where he acquired a practical education. After leaving school he turned his attention to milling, which occupation he pursued for a number of years, but subsequently he devoted his energies to agricultural pursuits, in which he has been successful. He now owns a fine farm containing one hundred and three acres of choice land, all well improved and in the best state of cultivation, and his farm buildings and residence are substantial and pleasantly situated. Politically Mr. Becker is a Republican, and gives his party an earnest and steady support on all leading questions. He is a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

On September 9, 1896, Mr. Becker married Mary S. Dixon, a daughter of Isaac and Susan (Holmes) Dixon, a successful agriculturist of Ashland, New Castle county, Delaware. Two children have been born to them, Harriett G., born May 8, 1897, and Florence P., born May 4, 1900, who died August 9, 1901. Both Mr. Becker and his family are attendants of the Presbyterian church of Kennett township, and contribute liberally to the support of its various interests.

JOHN WASHINGTON FRIDAY, a well known farmer and respected citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is a son of William Friday, who has all his life been a farmer in the county, and now cultivates an estate in West Vincent township. He married Mary A., daughter of William and Catharine Ortlips, whose farm had, during the Revolutionary war, been the scene of an encampment. It was situated in Birchrunville, and remained for many years in possession of the family. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Friday were: John Washington, mentioned at length hereinafter; William J., who is an agent for the Prudential Life Insurance Company of Newark, New Jersey; Rebecca R., now the wife of George W. Henwood, who is engaged in the laundry business in Philadelphia; Joseph R., who is a clerk in the store of Croft, of Phoenixville; E. Watkins, who resides on the home farm; and Herman, who also lives on the homestead.

John Washington Friday, son of William and Mary A. (Ortlips) Friday, was born March 10, 1863, in West Vincent township, in the house he now owns and occupies. He was educated in the Birchrunville public schools, never attending any others, and after leaving school spent some years in working for his father on the homestead. In 1888 he entered upon an independent career as a farmer, and has since devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, with marked ability and success. Since 1896 he has resided on the farm which he now owns, and which under his cultivation has yielded profitable results. He is a member of no orders or societies of any kind. His political connections are with the Democratic party, and his religious affiliations are with the Lutheran church.

Mr. Friday married Rebecca R. Miller, a member of the well known family of that name. They have no children. Mrs. Friday is a daughter of Isaac and Teressa Miller, of West Vincent. The former in his youth followed the carpenter's trade, but later in life engaged in farming. He has a military record, having served during the Civil war in the Union army.

WILLIAM BINDER, a prosperous farmer and highly esteemed citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is a grandson of Michael Binder, a native of Montgomery county, who, tradition says, was a soldier in the Revolutionary army. His son Jacob was born in Chester county, and all his life followed agricultural pursuits. He was a man much respected by his townsmen, and for many years held the office of school director. In 1855 he settled on the farm which has since been in possession of his descendants. He married Margaret Simms, and they were the parents of the following children: Moses, who is now deceased; Mary; Sarah, who is the wife of Lewis Platt, a merchant of Springfield; William, mentioned at length hereinafter; Jacob, who was a carpenter, and died at the age of twenty-one; Margaret, who married Bernard Neyman, a carpenter, who is still working at his trade; Ellen, who became the wife of Nimrod Lumis, a blacksmith, who is now deceased; Reuben, who is a farmer in Spring City; Dallis, who is a farmer in Berks county; and Clarissa, who is the wife of George Evans, of Spring City. It is a noteworthy fact that the mother of this family was also a native of Chester county, having been born in West Pikeland township.

William Binder, son of Jacob and Margaret (Simms) Binder, was born June 25, 1833, in West Vincent township, where he received his education in St. Matthew's school, where the course of instruction was so thorough as to render attendance at any other school unnecessary. He has made agriculture the business of his life, and now lives on the homestead, reaping the reward of his skillful labor and assiduous exertions in a gratifying degree of material prosperity, and in the appreciative regard of his neighbors, who have further testified to their confidence and esteem by electing him to the office of township assessor. His church connections are with the Lutheran denomination.

Mr. Binder married Elmira Lumis, and the following children have been born to them: Alberta, who is unmarried, and resides at West Chester; Lizzie May, who is the wife of William Kring, a farmer, and has two children, Arthur and Grayson; Eva, who resides at home, and is the wife of Maurice Mack, a farmer.

Mrs. Binder is the daughter of John Lumis, of East Nantmeal township, who during the greater part of his life followed the trade of a blacksmith. He married Rebecca Davis, and their family consisted of the following children: Elmira, mentioned above as the wife of William Binder; Nimrod, who is a blacksmith; Davis, who was the prothonotary of West Chester and is now deceased; Grace A., who is the wife of Cyrus Keim, an undertaker and cabinetmaker; Allen John, who is a blacksmith; James Thomas, who has recently become a farmer; Charles A., who is a carpenter; and Emma, who is now deceased.

JOHN BROWNBACK RALSTON, a veteran farmer and leading citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is the son of George Ralston, who was also a farmer, and a man who took a prominent part in local affairs; for some years he held the office of justice of the peace, in addition to other minor offices of the township. He adopted the profession of law, which he practiced for many years in West Chester, and at one time served as judge of the Chester county court. His politics were Democratic. He married Hannah, daughter of John Brownback, a farmer of West Vincent, and they were the parents of three children: Delilah, who became the wife of Nathan McVeagh, who was a teacher, and also a hotelkeeper at Phoenixville; John Brownback, mentioned at length hereinafter, and Sarah, who became the wife of Louis Woodward. The death of Mr. Ralston, the father, took place in 1873, at an advanced age.

John Brownback Ralston, son of George and Hannah (Brownback) Ralston, was born June 14, 1828, on the homestead, and received his education in the public schools of the township. Deciding to make agriculture the business of his life, he remained on the home farm, assisting his father in the care of the estate, which in the course of time he inherited, and on which he now resides. Like his father, he holds to the political principles upheld by the Democratic party. He has never desired office, but consented to serve for a short time as school director.

Mr. Ralston married Mary Ann, daughter of John Elsler Kraiser, a farmer of Glen More, East Nantmeal township. Three children were born to them: George, who resides in Norristown; Emma, who is now deceased; and a child who died in infancy. After the death of his wife, Mr. Ralston married Rebecca Minerva Miller.

Mrs. Ralston belongs to a family distinguished in the annals of the Revolutionary war. Her father was Levi Miller, who in early life followed the carpenter's trade, but was for many years engaged in business as an undertaker in Chester county. He was highly esteemed by his neighbors, and held a number of township offices. In politics he was a Republican, and in religion a member of the Lutheran church, to which his family also belonged. Mr. Miller's wife was a daughter of a member of the well known Christian family, and their children were: Isaac, a carpenter by trade, who is now engaged in business for himself in Philadelphia; and Rebecca Minerva, mentioned above as the wife of John Brownback Ralston.

SPROUL. In this age of tremendous progress, when each passing decade sees more changes than a century would witness in any other period of the world's history, the versatility of American men of affairs and their capability of thought and action in many and differing lines is an increasing characteristic of the nation. In times not very remote, men of achievement confined themselves closely to their particular professions or avocations, and the lines were closely drawn between the various callings. To-day, however, great lawyers are often great business men; bankers and merchants are enlisted as leaders in the army of industry; and political and commercial affairs are guided by men of varied trainings and diversified accomplishments.

Few men, however, in any community, have attained successful rank in more numerous and as important lines, especially while still far under the prime of life, than William C. Sproul, of Chester, president of the senate of Pennsylvania, editor, manufacturer and business man, an active leader, and a distinctive power in the political, social and commercial affairs, not only of the city of Chester and Delaware county, but of the commonwealth.

Senator Sproul comes of typical Pennsylvania stock, the blood of all three of the great race factors which have built up this mighty state—the English Quaker, Scotch-Irish and German elements—each being represented in his ancestry. Charles Sproul, a farmer, residing on a comfortable little farm near Castlederg, in the county Tyrone, Ireland, and the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, came to the United States in 1786, bringing with him a demit from the Royal Arch Chapter of Masons at Magheracreggan, commending him to good and faithful brethren in all parts of the world. His family was a prominent one in Ulster, and the oldest gravestone in the cemetery about the ancient Presbyterian church in the village of Castlederg is is above the remains of Robert Sproule, who emigrated from Scotland, and died in 1680. Charles Sproul lived in Montgomery and Chester counties, Pennsylvania, and was engaged in farming and in the operation of small iron forges. He married Margaret Nelson, also of county Tyrone.

Their son, James Sproul, who was born in Castlederg in 1780, came to this country with his parents when six years old. He was well educated and went early to work in the forges, and became one of the more notable of the early Pennsylvania iron founders. He was a man of strong personality and excellent business ability, and prospered greatly in his business. For many years he carried on a chain of three forges and a bloomery on the Octoraro creek, in Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, and West Fallowfield township, Chester county, and had a large trade in finished iron, his principal store house being in the city of Lancaster. He was one of the wealthiest men in Lancaster county and one of the largest landowners in the entire section. He died suddenly on January 7, 1847. James Sproul had been twice married, his first wife, a cousin, dying without issue. He was again married, in 1830, to Anne Johnson, the daughter of William and Nancy Dunlap Johnson, of Steepleville, Chester county, who likewise were of North of Ireland stock. Left a widow in early life, with a family of four boys and six girls to rear, Mrs. Anne Sproul survived until December 21, 1889. She was a woman of strong convictions and much ability, and she handled her large property with great judgment. Her dower rights, lasting for nearly forty-three years after the death of her husband, covered much real estate in the two counties. She lived for more than thirty years in the village of New London, Chester county.

William Hall Sproul, son of James and Anne (Johnson) Sproul, was born at Sadsbury Forge, November 6, 1837. He was educated in the public and private schools of the neighborhood, and at White Hall Academy, near Harrisburg. Before he was of age he went to Kansas, and remained in that section for some time, eventually returning to Lancaster county, where he engaged in business in the town of Christiana, near his old home. He moved in 1866 to a farm in Cole-rain, an adjoining township, and remained there until 1874, when he went to Negaunee, in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, where he was connected in an executive position with a large iron mining and smelting industry. In 1882 Mr. Sproul returned to Pennsylvania and connected himself with the Chester Rolling Mills. He retired from business a few years ago, and leads a quiet life, giving his attention to various business and philanthropic concerns. He is a member of the Chester City Park Commission, a member of the Board of Port Wardens of Philadelphia, chairman of the executive committee of the Chester Hospital, a director in the Delaware County National Bank, and a trustee of the Second Presbyterian church.

James C. Brown

He married, March 5, 1862, Deborah Dickinson Slokom, daughter of Samuel and Mary Walker Slokom, of Christiana. Samuel Slokom, who was the son of Thomas and Susan Miller Slokom, was born in Sadsbury, Lancaster county, in 1817. He was a man of great force of character, and in early life became a leader in his neighborhood. He was a farmer, banker and capitalist, and attained an extraordinary position of influence in the great county of Lancaster. He died November 13, 1889, and at the time was reputed to be the wealthiest individual in the county. His estate of several hundred thousands of dollars was almost exclusively made up of mortgages and judgments against property in the neighborhood in which he lived. Samuel Slokom's father was of English Quaker origin, his family, the Slokoms and Slocombs having been early immigrants among Penn's people. His mother was a Pennsylvania German, her people coming here with the Amish movement, about 1728. Samuel Slokom married, in 1837, Mary Walker, of Sadsbury, daughter of Isaac Walker and Anna Dickinson, and a descendant of Andrew Moore, who settled in Sadsbury in 1723. Mary Walker Slokom was of sturdy Quaker stock on both sides of her family, and during her long life she was a strong influence in the religious Society of Friends and figured in the great reform agitation which culminated in the abolition movement prior to the Civil war. She died in Chester, April 20, 1893, aged eighty-seven years, and was laid away in Old Sadsbury Friends' Burying Ground, beside the unmarked graves of her plain Quaker ancestors, and almost within sight of where she and her people and her husband's people for generations, and all her children and her grandchildren, had been born.

The three children of William H. and Deborah D. Sproul were all sons. Samuel Everett was born December 30, 1862, in Christiana; Charles, born in 1865, died in infancy; and William Cameron Sproul, the subject of this sketch, was born on the farm near the village of Octoraro, Cole-rain township, Lancaster county, on September 16, 1870. In 1874 the family moved to the little city of Negaunee, in the great iron range along the southern shore of Lake Superior, in the northern peninsula of Michigan. So his early boyhood was spent in the Northwest, and his early schooling was in that energetic and progressive section, where hustling activity seems to be in the very air. Before his sixth birthday he entered the private school of Mrs. Harris, in Negaunee, and after a year went to the school conducted by Miss Louise N. MacIntyre, a young woman who came to Negaunee from Saranac, New York, and who returned there to die several years later, after having made a record as a remarkably successful teacher. To the excellent beginnings made under Miss MacIntyre's direction, Mr. Sproul says his subsequent desire for a higher education were largely due. He entered the Negaunee High School in 1881, at the age of eleven, and remained there until the fall of 1882, when his parents returned to Christiana, and a winter was spent at the Christiana High School. In March, 1883, the family moved to Chester, and young Sproul immediately went into the public schools, and finished the course, graduating from the Chester High School with the normal or teacher's degree of that excellent institution, in the class of 1887.

William C. Sproul entered Swarthmore College in the fall of 1887, with the class of 1891, and after four years graduated with commencement honors in June, 1891. His course in college was of the greatest advantage to him, and his career there, in the social and political life of the institution and the affairs of its various organizations, as well as the mind-training and academic learning which he acquired, had much to do in shaping his life's work. His studies embraced the full scientific course, and he took the degree of bachelor of science, but with broad classical electives. During his college days, Mr. Sproul was editor of the "Swarthmore Phoenix," the very creditable publication of the students; was editor of the college annual, the "Halcyon;" was a member of and manager of the successful foot-ball team; was president of the Eunomian Literary Society, and archon of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity, a strong intercollegiate fraternal organization, of the Swarthmore Chapter of which he was a charter member. He was winner of one of the oratorical prizes in the college, and took part in all of the student movements.

Immediately upon leaving Swarthmore, Mr. Sproul bought an interest in the Franklin Printing Company, associating himself with his college-mate, Edward Lawrence Fell, in that old-established Philadelphia house. But his natural bent was toward journalism, and a few months later, in March, 1892, he acquired a one-half interest in the "Chester Times," then, as now, the leading daily newspaper of Delaware county. Young Sproul had early given evidence of his liking for journalistic labors. In 1881, before he was eleven years of age, he had formed a partnership with Fred Dougherty, a schoolmate in Negaunee, and, investing in a small printing press, published for some time a little paper called "The Amateur." The lads learned to set type and do the work of getting out the paper, and their afternoons and evenings were spent in printing this sixteen-page monthly journal, with pages the size of a postal card. But "The Amateur" earned money, and Mr. Sproul remembers to this day the pride he and his partner felt when, in counting the proceeds of their subscriptions and advertising, they found that the cost of their printing press and outfit had been earned, and there was more than ten dollars beside to divide as the result of the first six months' publication. Later, in Chester, in 1883 and 1884, he published "The Sun," an amateur paper, and belonged to the Pennsylvania Amateur Press Association.

In 1884, while in his first year at the High School, young Sproul began to do work for the "Chester Times," of which he is now an owner, and soon his work attracted the attention of John A. Wallace, the proprietor, who decided that the boy should be encouraged and offered to compensate him. Asked to fix his own salary for work done after school and in the evenings, Sproul suggested that twenty-five cents a day would be about right, and so entered upon his work in earnest. In the following year he became the Chester correspondent for the "Philadelphia Press," and Mr. R. E. A. Dorr, then the news editor of that paper, and afterward publisher of the "New York Mail and Express," loved to tell in later years how on one occasion, in 1885, he sent for the Chester correspondent of his paper to give him some instructions, and of his surprise at seeing a fifteen-year-old boy come into his office in answer to his summons. While he was in college, Mr. Sproul kept up his journalistic work on the college publications, and conducted the general college departments in several of the metropolitan journals, earning what to a college lad was a large monthly stipend. When he acquired his interest in the "Times," and began his partnership with his early friend and employer, John A. Wallace, Mr. Sproul went into the work with all his energy, and learned the business thoroughly, developing into a forceful writer as well as a capable business manager.

Always inclined toward the study of politics, and an active political worker and strong partisan before he was of age, now, with the prestige of his newspaper interests to aid him, Mr. Sproul began to be talked of for political preferment, and in 1895, just after passing his twenty-fifth year, the constitutional limit for the office, was named by the political organization within the Republican party in Delaware county, then dominated by Hon. John B. Robinson, for the office of state senator, to succeed Hon. Jesse M. Baker. Complications which threatened to precipitate a contest for the nomination gradually cleared away, and he was unanimously nominated by the convention in March, 1896, being elected in the following November by a majority of almost ten thousand votes. In the senate, although by far the youngest man in that body, a distinction which he held for six years, and inclined toward independence of action, he soon attained prominence. He was assigned to the more important committees, and was connected with much notable legislation. In 1900 he was renominated and elected for a second term without serious opposition. In the session of 1901 he took grounds in strong opposition to the so-called "ripper" legislation for changing the form of government of cities, and, though closely affiliated with the regular Republican organization in the state, strenuously labored to defeat the "Pittsburg ripper," which was the political sensation of that time. In 1903 Senator Sproul, having devoted much time and attention to the study of the question of road improvement, drafted the bill for the general plan of state aid in highway construction, which, combined with some features of a bill introduced by Senator A. B. Roberts, of Montgomery county, was passed in the session of 1903, and forms the beginning of a movement which the friends of highway improvement in Pennsylvania believe will be the most important reform inaugurated in the state for many years. In April, 1903, Senator Sproul was the unanimous choice of the Republican members of the senate for the office of president of that body, and was elected on a party vote. He is unopposed for the nomination for a third term in the senate, at the convention to be held in March, 1904.

In 1895 Mr. Sproul was elected a director in the First National Bank of Chester, and in 1898 became vice-president of the Delaware River Iron Shipbuilding and Engine Works, or Roach's Shipyard, but resigned the position in 1899, and immediately set to work to interest capital in the organization of a large steel foundry, the result of which was the incorporation of the Seaboard Steel Casting Company, with a capital of a half million dollars. Mr. Sproul became president of the corporation, and during 1900 the extensive plant was erected at the foot of Jeffrey street, in the Tenth ward of Chester, and on December 31, 1900, the last day of the nineteenth century, the first heat was poured from the furnaces. This industry has been very successful under the management of Senator Sproul and his brother, S. Everett Sproul, who is the general manager, the directors being Isaac H. Clothier, and Joseph Wharton of Philadelphia; John B. Roach, of Chester; Senator J. Henry Cochran, of Williamsport; Thomas H. Savery, of Wilmington, Delaware; Morris L. Clothier, of Philadelphia and Mr. Sproul. Joseph W. Cochran is treasurer, and David G. Stokes comptroller. In 1900 Mr. Sproul, associated with William J. McClure, W. I. Schaffer, Josiah Smith and others, was instrumental in organizing the Chester Shipping Company, which operates a line of steamers on the Delaware River very successfully, and is the president of that corporation, as well as of the River Front Improvement Company and the Niagara Hydraulic Engine Company. He is also vice-president of the Henry Roeber Company, a large glycerine and soap manufacturing corporation in Chester, which he was largely instrumental in organizing; is a director and member of the executive committee of the Mobile, Jackson & Kansas City Railroad; is treasurer of the Seaboard Fuel Company, of West Virginia; a director in the Fayette Manufacturing Company and the Delaware County Trust Company of Chester, and the Franklin Printing Company, and is interested in other business enterprises in this and other states.

Senator Sproul is a member of the board of managers of the Swarthmore College, his alma mater, and in 1903 was elected president of the Alumni Association of that institution. He is also a trustee of the Pennsylvania Training School for Feeble Minded Children, at Elwyn, and in the senate has given much time and thought to the system of public aid for the various philanthropies. He is also identified with many social organizations, being a member of the Union League and the University Club of Philadelphia; the Corinthian Yacht Club, of Philadelphia; the Rose Tree Fox Hunting Club; the New York Athletic Club and the Engineers' Club, of New York; the Harrisburg Club, and was one of the organizers of the Penn Club, of Chester, and the Springhaven Country Club, of Delaware county. He belongs to a number of the political organizations of the city and county.

On January 21, 1892, Senator Sproul was married to Emeline Roach, the daughter of John B. Roach, the shipbuilder of Chester, and his wife, Mary Caroline Wallace Roach. They have two children—Dorothy Wallace Sproul, born November 4, 1892, and John Roach Sproul, born January 30, 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Sproul live in a handsome home at the corner of Ninth and Kerlin streets, in Chester, and in summer reside at their country place, Lapidia Manor, a historic and beautiful farm in Nether Providence township, just beyond the city limits.

OWEN LEWIS WOODWARD. The Woodward family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, represented in the present generation by H. Bell Woodward, who, since the death of her father, Owen Lewis Woodward, which occurred January 21, 1894, has successfully managed his large estate which is located in West Vincent township, trace their ancestry to Richard Woodward, son of Robert Woodward, of Rockland Manor, New Castle county, Delaware, and Birmingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who married, in 1705, Mary Nayle, the only heir of Henry Nayle of Thornbury, and they were the parents of seven children—Henry, John, Richard, Thomas, Deborah, Mary and Alice Woodward.

Thomas Woodward, fourth son of Richard and Mary Woodward, was born in East Bradford township, Chester county, November 7, 1722, or 1723. By deeds of conveyance he became the owner of one hundred acres of land in the neighborhood of his birth place, resided on Street road, and was engaged in bookbinding, also in surveying and conveyancing. He was the owner of a large number of negro slaves, whom he liberated after listening to an address of John Woolman, a noted Quaker preacher and an anti-slavery adherent. Mr. Woodward was a member of Concord Monthly Meeting, and obtained his certificate of removal to New Garden Monthly Meeting, dated April 5, 1749, which was about the time he settled in East Marlborough and became a member of Londongrove Particular Meeting. On October 26, 1745, he married Elizabeth Jacobs, widow of John Jacobs, and daughter of Roger and Elizabeth (Richards) Kirk, the ceremony being performed at East Nottingham Meeting. Elizabeth Woodward was born February 15, 1721; her father, Roger Kirk, a native of Lurgan, North Ireland, was among the pioneers of Nottingham, and located in East Nottingham as early as 1712, where he purchased large tracts of land. About 1714, Mr. Kirk married Elizabeth Richards, daughter of Nathaniel and Mary Richards, of Aston township, and granddaughter of Joseph and Jane Richards, who came from England and settled in Chichester township, now Delaware county. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Woodward were—Rebecca, Elizabeth, Samuel, Thomas, Deborah, Timothy and Susanna Woodward. The father of these children died June 15, 1785; the mother passed away January 25, 1812.

Thomas Woodward, second son of Thomas and Elizabeth Woodward, was born in East Marlborough, March 17, 1753, acquired a common school education, and his entire life time was spent on the old homestead where he conducted general farming operations. Mr. Woodward married, October 15, 1777, at Londongrove, Mary Pusey, who was born March 12, 1756, and died August 16, 1838, a daughter of Ellis and Susanna Pusey, of West Fallowfield. Their children were—Deborah, Susanna, Elizabeth, Ellis, Thomas, Mary, Joshua, Ann and Lydia Woodward. The death of Mr. Woodward occurred on the old homestead, June 2, 1837.

Joshua Woodward, third son of Thomas and Mary Woodward, was born February 9, 1792, was reared on his father's farm, and during the early years of his life attended the district school. On April 1, 1829, he removed to West Vincent township, and purchased of Henry Kurtz a farm containing one hundred and thirty-four acres, to which he later added six acres, this being the same property on which the widow and daughter of Owen L. Woodward now reside. At London-grove, October 17, 1821, Mr. Woodward married Rebecca Nutt, daughter of John and Mary Nutt, and her death occurred December 17, 1822. His second wife was Rebecca Lewis, who was born September 17, 1797, and died December 19, 1833, a daughter of Isaac and Sarah Lewis. His third wife was Ellen Todd, who died September 20, 1853. Three children were the issue of these marriages—Mary, born December 8, 1822, became the wife Caleb Wood, January 9, 1855; Owen Lewis, mentioned at length hereinafter; Sarah Ann, born October 26, 1831, became the wife of Nathan G. Buckwalter, son of Christopher and Mary Buckwalter, December 30, 1858. Joshua Woodward, father of these children, died December 30, 1852.

Owen Lewis Woodward, only son of Joshua and Rebecca Woodward was born August 12, 1829, received a common school education, and after laying aside his school books he chose the occupation of a farmer. His operations were conducted on an extensive scale, and the general appearance of his broad acres and commodious outbuildings indicated the careful supervision of a practical and experienced man. He possessed a large degree of sound judgment and ability, and therefore was chosen as one of the directors in the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank of Phoenixville and for ten years also filled a similar position in the Iron Bank of the same borough. His political affiliations were with the Republican party, and he served eight years on the executive county committee.

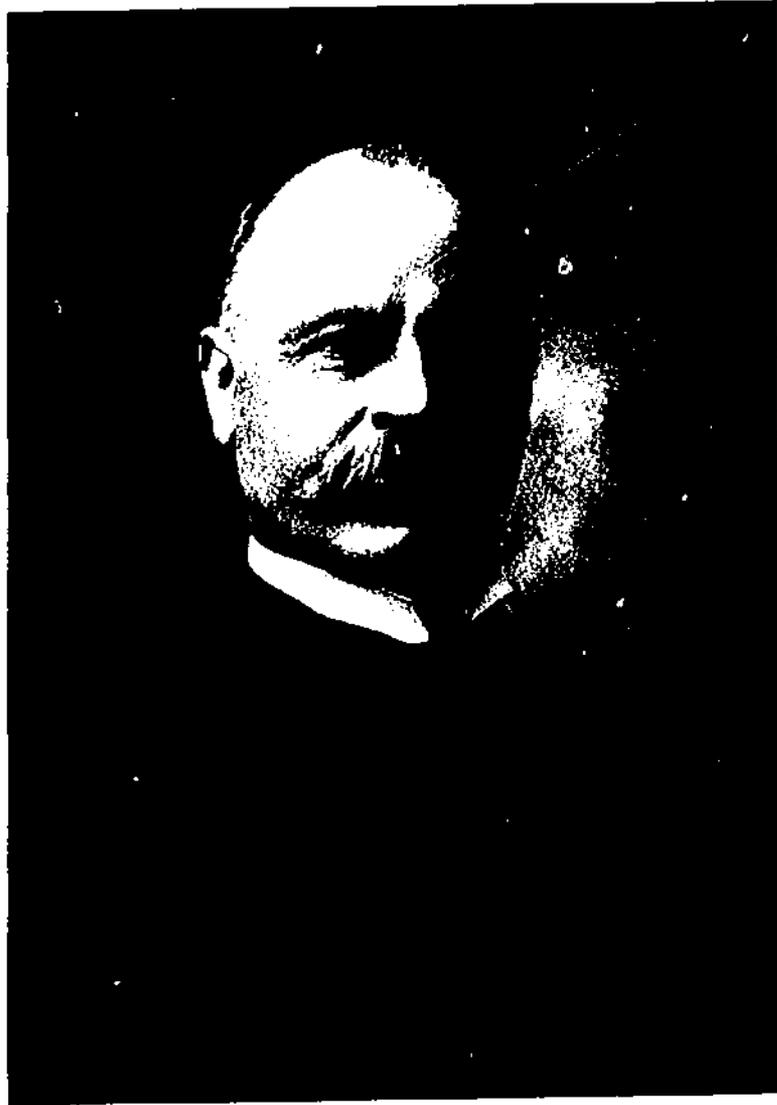

On October 2, 1855, Mr. Woodward married Sarah Ralston, who was born February 13, 1831, a daughter of George and Hannah Ralston, and granddaughter of John Ralston. One child was the issue of this union—H. Bell, born July 14, 1856. The family hold membership in St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal church of West Vincent township. Miss Woodward was educated at Oakland Seminary under the principalship of Dr. Ralston, and since the death from heart trouble of her father has managed the property, which is now the estate of Owen L. Woodward, and ministered to the wants and wishes of her mother, who has been in ill health since the death of her husband. They employ a man to work the farm, and in addition to other improvements made in recent years they have erected a new dwelling house for the farm hand and his family. The remains of Mr. Woodward were interred in St. Andrews Protestant Episcopal cemetery in West Vincent township.

JOSEPH MOSTELLER. The Mosteller family of which Joseph Mosteller, an enterprising and successful business man, is a worthy representative, is of German origin, but have been residents of the United States since the Revolutionary period, and of Chester county Pennsylvania, for several generations.

The earliest ancestor of this family of whom there is any record was Frederick Mosteller, who followed the occupation of farming and was supposed to have been a resident of Mayer Town. He married Bessie E. Keeley, and they were the parents of the following named children: Esther King; Mary, wife of the Rev. J. B. Knipe, who was a minister of the Gospel for fifty years, his faith being that of the German Reformed church; and Frederick, grandfather of Joseph Mosteller, who followed agricultural pursuits in Pennsylvania.

Henry Mosteller, father of Joseph Mosteller, was born in West Pikeland township, in 1796, and after attaining man's estate located in West Vincent township, devoted his attention to farming; and in due course of time became one of the large land-owners of the community. He was a Democrat in politics, and took a keen and active interest in all that pertained to the development and material welfare of the section of the county in which he resided. He was united in marriage to Margaret Shenman, daughter of Benjamin Shenman, and through this union there were born eleven children, eight sons and three daughters—Abram, a farmer and lumber dealer in West Vincent township, who supplied at one time the Phoenix Iron Company. John, who through the loss of his eyesight was compelled to retire from active business pursuits. Burnham. Sarah A., wife of William Ralston, who conducted farming at Ralston Corner, West Vincent township. S. S., now deceased, was a resident of Ralston Corner. Henry, deceased, followed agricultural pursuits during his entire business career. Jacob, deceased, was a prosperous farmer in West Vincent township. Benjamin S., in early life was a carpenter and merchant, but the latter years of life were devoted to farming. Joseph. William, a farmer in West Vincent township. Margaret E., unmarried. Henry Mosteller, father of these children, died at his home in West Vincent township at an advanced age.

Joseph Mosteller, son of Henry and Margaret Mosteller, was born in West Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 6, 1838. He received an excellent English education in the school at Freeland, Montgomery county, now known as Collegeville, and at a private school conducted by Mr. Allen. He gained his first business experience in the store of his brother, S. S. Mosteller, where he remained from 1856 to 1862. He then entered the employ of Levi Bingaman at Coventryville, served in the capacity of clerk for one year, after which he purchased the business which he successfully conducted up to 1866. He then purchased a store at Ludwigs Corner, formerly the property of Samuel L. Fertig, and from that date up to the present time (1903) his trade has steadily increased in volume and importance. He is a man of good judgment and recognized business ability, active and clear-headed in the carrying out of any enterprise, and he has won an enviable reputation among the business men of the community. Mr. Mosteller firmly adheres to the principles of Democracy, and has served his township in the capacity of school director and auditor for a similar period of time, almost twenty years. He is an honored member of the order of Patrons of Husbandry, and the Improved Order of Red Men.

P. McDonald

On December 4, 1865, Mr. Mosteller married Sarah E. Jones, daughter of David and May (West) Jones. David Jones was a wheelwright by trade, and this occupation he followed for many years in connection with farming at Guthrieville; later he removed to West Vincent township, where his death occurred in the eighty-second year of his age. A brother of Mrs. Jones was a soldier in the war of 1812, was honorably discharged from the service of his country, but his death occurred shortly after his return home. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Mosteller: Allen Jones, engaged as a brakeman and assistant conductor on the Reading Railroad. Mary Elma, wife of David Hunthorn, manager of the Craig Biddle farm located near Wayne, Pennsylvania. Margaret E., a professional nurse, was graduated from the Womans Hospital in Philadelphia in 1896, has filled several important appointments in this country and is now in Germany, attending the wife of Professor Heiman. Lillian M., wife of H. C. Stauffer, of Reading, Pennsylvania, who is employed as a freighter on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad. Morris Fussell, a farmer, resides at home with his parents. Herman J., engaged in farming on the old homestead. Charles Raymond, employed as clerk at Chester, Pennsylvania, for the Reading Railroad Company. Sallie E., deceased.

PATRICK McDONALD, the assistant supervisor of the Baltimore Central Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who has risen to this responsible position from a very humble beginning, was born in Dublin county, parish of Bray, Ireland, in 1845, the son of Peter McDonald, one of the prominent and honored citizens of that section of the Emerald Isle.

After enjoying the educational advantages afforded by the schools in the vicinity of his birthplace, Mr. McDonald turned his attention to farming but later engaged in mercantile pursuits up to the year 1867, when he sailed on the steamship "Pennsylvania" for the United States, landing in New York. Shortly after his arrival he located in Virginia, that section of the country, at that time, was just recovering from the effects of the Civil war, and assumed charge of the extensive estate of United States Senator Barber. After remaining in that capacity for a short time Mr. McDonald removed to Philadelphia, and later to Chester creek, Delaware county, where the Pennsylvania Railroad has just begun the laying of their rails. He secured a position as laborer on the road, and by faithfully and conscientiously performing his daily work won the approbation of the superintendent, who soon promoted him to the position of foreman of the force of laborers. Then, step by step, he steadily advanced until he was appointed to the office he now fills, that of assistant supervisor of the whole Baltimore Central Division, and in the discharge of his duties he displays an executive ability of a high order.

Although Mr. McDonald pays close attention to his business interests, he is not unmindful of his duties as a citizen, giving earnest and hearty support to the candidates of the Democratic party. He is also ready and willing to advance the welfare and development of the town of Avondale, where he is the owner of a beautiful and modern residence equipped with all the appliances for comfort and enjoyment. He is a member of the Roman Catholic church of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

In 1866 Mr. McDonald married Mary A. Grant, a native of Little Bray, Wicklow county, Ireland, and the following named children have been born to them: Mary, unmarried; Margaret, wife of Luke M. Flaherty, and they are the parents of one child, James Joseph; Katherine, wife of Edward J. Robinson; Patrick, unmarried; Anna, unmarried; James, unmarried; Alice McDonald, who died in childhood, and Peter J., who died in 1890, in the sixteenth year of his age.

CHRISTIAN FRIDAY, an experienced farmer and highly esteemed citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, traces his descent from a German family, which has been for several generations represented in Pennsylvania. The orthography of the name has doubtless undergone many alterations since the family left their native land.

John Friday, a native of Lancaster county, and a life-long farmer, removed at some time prior to 1835 to Chester county. He married Magdalena, daughter of Mr. Yeager, by whom he was the father of two children: Jacob, who died young; and Elizabeth, who became the wife of Owen Posey, a farmer of North Coventry. After the death of his wife Mr. Friday married Catherine, daughter of John Bush, a farmer, whose wife, a native of Germany, had landed in Philadelphia on November 26, 1793. Among the sixteen children of Mr. and Mrs. Bush may be mentioned the following: Christian, Jacob, Peter, William, Charles, Frederick, Philip, Catherine, mentioned above as the wife of John Friday, Maurice, Elizabeth, who became the wife of Adam Stine, a shoemaker by trade, but in the latter part of his life a farmer, and Mary, who married Daniel Wumder, of Reading. The seven sons all became farmers. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Friday: 1. Jacob, who was in youth a farmer, but afterward engaged in teaching; subsequently he graduated from Getty's College, and became a minister in the Lutheran church. 2. John, who engaged in farming, and died in the seventeenth year of his age. 3. Christian, mentioned at length hereinafter. 4. Joseph, who was a farmer. 5. William, also a farmer. 6. Davis, who died at the age of seven years. 7. Annie, who became the wife of Mr. Morris, a machinist. 8. Mary, who married George Eagley, a farmer. 9. Dorothy, who became the wife of George Miller, a farmer, and was the mother of several children, all of whom died young.

Christian Friday, son of John and Catherine (Bush) Friday, was born August 16, 1835, in Coventry township, and received his education in the old Birchrunville schoolhouse. His youth was spent in assisting his father on the home farm in West Vincent township, where in 1859 he became an independent farmer, and has since devoted himself with zeal and energy to the labors of his chosen calling. His assiduity, directed by a thorough knowledge of the best agricultural methods, has been crowned by successful results. Although keenly alive to everything relating to the welfare of the community in which he resides, and ever ready to lend his aid to any worthy cause, Mr. Friday has judged it best to remain aloof from the field of politics. In matters of religious belief, he follows in the footsteps of his ancestors, he and his family being members of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Friday married Mary Jane, daughter of David and Mary Edwards, the former an agriculturist. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Friday: Emma K., who is the wife of John Moyer, of Nantmeal village, and has two children: Mary Ella and Sophia, both of whom are at home with their parents; Lizzie L., who is the wife of William Mosteller, a farmer of West Vincent, and is the mother of one child; Chester; and Laura Bell, who died in infancy. Mrs. Friday died in 1878. In 1890 Mr. Friday married Mrs. Ella Keeley Hamor, of Birchrunville, who was the mother of a son, by her first husband, Sylvantus Hamor, by name, who is a farmer in Chester county. The father of Mrs. Ella Keeley (Hamor) Friday was a native of Reading, Pennsylvania.

EUGENE CLIFFORD EMERY, a sterling citizen of Chester county, Pennsylvania, belongs to a well-known line of farmers who have given an impetus to improved agricultural methods in West Vincent township.

Jacob Emery, grandfather of Eugene Clifford, was born in Chester county, probably in East Pikeland, where he died in 1863. He was a farmer of prominence, an active Democrat, and a member of the Lutheran church. He married Abby Sloyer, and reared a family of six children, three boys and three girls. Of these children, Jacob was born in 1832. He attended the country schools, and grew up in the life of the farm. Becoming a farmer himself, he took his father's place in the confidence and esteem of the community where both their lives had been spent. He has held most of the local offices within the gift of his townspeople, having served twenty-three years as justice of the peace, and ten years as school director, as well as a term as supervisor of West Pikeland township. He married Annie Moses, daughter of John Moses of West Pikeland township. Seven children resulted from this union, namely: Eugene Clifford, who receives fuller mention further on; Keturah; Reuben; John; William, who became a school teacher, and afterward conducted a shoe business in Spring City; Alda Irene, who lives with her parents; Clarence K., a bookkeeper for the Standard Oil Company at Pittsburg. Of this family, only Eugene Clifford, and the last two named, are still living.

Eugene Clifford, first child of Jacob and Annie (Moses) Emery, was born in East Pikeland township, January 3, 1859. His early instruction in the local public schools was supplemented by a course in the Ivy Institute at Phoenixville. But a part of the education of a country boy that is not to be ignored is that which he gains from the practical work and various activities of the farm, and after finishing school he began work with his father on the home place. He has made farming the occupation of his life, and energy and industry have brought him a large measure of success and satisfaction in his work. He has held various local offices, having served for many years as school director. The family are connected with the Lutheran church, and like his father Mr. Emery is a Democrat.

He married Annie Ralston, daughter of William and Sarah (Mosteller) Ralston. She is a lineal descendant of the Hon. John Ralston, a prominent patriot of the Revolution, who was of the second generation in this country of a family that came originally from the north of Ireland. He was in the military service both as captain and as colonel, and at one time was a dependence of General Washington. He was a magistrate and an important personage in the local life of Chester county. Hon. John Ralston had a son Robert, born in West Vincent township, who became the father of William, father of Annie (Ralston) Emery. William Ralston was a farmer, and his children were as follows: 1. H. Frank, a farmer, who represented the northern district of Chester county in the state legislature for one term, being elected on the fusion ticket, and who also served four terms as school director; 2. Annie M., wife of E. C. Emery; 3. William E., a farmer who occupies the homestead. In the family of his father, Robert Ralston, were also the following named children: Elizabeth, who died in infancy; George, a merchant and farmer; Maria, who became the wife of Hoy Buckwalter, recorder of deeds of West Chester; Sophia, who died young; John, a merchant and farmer; Robert, a merchant and farmer; Catherine, wife of Issac Evans, a farmer. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Clifford Emery. Alda May, born May 29, 1883, single and at home; Florence Edna, born March 7, 1889, died September 20, 1889.

JOSEPH P. RAPP, a member of the enterprising and successful firm of G. W. Rapp & Sons, conducting business in East Pikeland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of a family who have made their home in the state of Pennsylvania since the early colonial days.

The earliest ancestor of the Rapp family of whom there is any record was Barney Rapp, great-grandfather of Joseph P. Rapp, whose birth occurred near Valley Forge, in Schuylkill township, where he was reared and educated, and followed his trade of blacksmith in connection with agricultural pursuits. He was a prosperous and influential business man, and was regarded as one of the foremost citizens of the community. He was the father of a family of seven children, namely: Barney, John, Joseph H., Hannah, Esther, Rachel and Benjamin Rapp.

Joseph H. Rapp, grandfather of Joseph P. Rapp, was born in Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 19, 1803. His boyhood was spent in obtaining an education in the common schools of the vicinity, and subsequently he learned the trade of coachmaker, which he followed successively at Phoenixville, Kimberton, and in the vicinity of the latter named town. His political views were in harmony with those of the old line Whig party, and his religious belief was in accord with the tenets of the Baptist church, in which he held membership and served as deacon for many years. He married Margaret Supplee, a daughter of Peter and Hannah (Easton) Supplee. Their children were: Benjamin F., Joseph E., George W., Silas S., Peter S. and Eliza J. Townsend. Mr. Rapp died at his home in Chester county, in March, 1883, aged eighty-two years.

George W. Rapp, father of Joseph P. Rapp, was born on the present site of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 31, 1837. After obtaining a thorough practical education, he removed to Kimberton, being then eighteen years of age, and learned the trade of miller with Benjamin Prizer. He was employed at his trade in that vicinity for four years, after which he spent several years in Canada, and upon his return to his native state secured employment with Joseph Fronfield, the proprietor of the mill which subsequently became his own property. He devoted four years of his life to farming, then rented the mill from Mr. Snyder for twelve years, and in 1880 purchased the property which he now owns and operates. He immediately refitted and enlarged the mill, which is situated on French creek, and has excellent water power. It is four stories high, forty by fifty-five feet in dimensions, and fully equipped with modern machinery, its daily capacity being fifty barrels. He is a wholesale and retail dealer in and manufacturer of roller flour and all kinds of feed, runs a flour wagon to Spring City and Phoenixville, and ships constantly to Philadelphia, where his brands are well known and in great demand. His farm contains seventy-five acres of fertile and well-watered land, French creek passing directly through his property, thus making it one of the most productive tracts of land in that section of the county. In addition to his flouring mill, Mr. Rapp is the proprietor of a wheelwright shop, equipped with water power, whose base of supply is French creek. Mr. Rapp is a Republican in politics.

On December 28, 1862, George W. Rapp married Andora Yeager, daughter of Peter and Barbara (Taney) Yeager. Their children are: Joseph P.; U. S. Grant, who married Mary Detwiler, and is now engaged in farming in East Pikeland township; Anna Margaretta, wife of Irvin Moyer, a farmer of East Vincent township. Peter Yeager, father of Mrs. Rapp, was a prosperous farmer of East Pikeland, served as a private in the war of 1812, and his widow, who is living at the present time (1903), receives a pension from the United States government.

Joseph P. Rapp, eldest son of George W. and Andora Rapp, was born in East Pikeland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 27, 1864. He attended the public schools of his native town and his education was completed at the Phoenixville high school. He then entered his father's mill where he became thoroughly familiar with all the details of the trade, and from that date up to the present time (1903) has continued the same line of industry, being now a member of the firm. He is a man of clear and vigorous intellect, and possesses those characteristics which make the successful business man. In politics he is a Republican, and in fraternal matters he is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, Phoenix Lodge, No. 75, Chapter, No. 198, and Commandery, No. 15, Free and Accepted Masons, and the Jerusalem Council, No. 8, of Phoenixville.

In October, 1886, occurred the marriage of Joseph P. Rapp and Mary E. Brower, who was born April 9, 1867, a daughter of John H. and Eve Ann (Griffith) Brower. Three children have been the issue of this union, namely: George B., Grant S., and Ora E. Rapp. Mr. Brower, father of Mrs. Rapp, was a native of the state of Pennsylvania, and his wife was a native of Chester county. He was a carpenter by trade, and during the Civil war enlisted as a private in Company F, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, later being promoted to the rank of lieutenant and regimental quartermaster.

MORRIS FUSSELL GRIFFITH, a thriving farmer and esteemed citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is descended from a family of Welsh origin, which was founded in America by Stephen Griffith, who left his native land, and made his home in Pennsylvania, settling in Chester county.

Stephen Griffith, son of Stephen, the emigrant ancestor, was born April 1, 1815, near Chestnut Hill, Chester county. In early life he followed the calling of a stone mason, and subsequently turned his attention to farming, at the same time conducting a store. For twenty-three years during the latter part of his life, he combined agricultural and mercantile business with what may be justly termed satisfactory results. He took an active part in local affairs, holding at different times all the township offices, among which may be especially mentioned those of school director, constable, and supervisor, which last-named position he held for many years. He was a life-long member of the Democratic party. He married Anna, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. Rhodes, of Lancaster county, and they were the parents of ten children: Sarah R., born August 1, 1836; Rebecca L., born October 23, 1837; Eliza E., born October 21, 1839; Lewis, born August 12, 1841; Davis, born April 3, 1843; Oliver, born May 11, 1845; George W., born September 11, 1847; Sophia C., born August 30, 1850; Emma L., born June 3, 1853; and Morris Fussell, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Griffith, the father of this large family, left behind him at his decease, the memory of an upright citizen and an estimable man.

Morris Fussell Griffith, son of Stephen and Anna (Rhodes) Griffith, was born April 12, 1855, in West Vincent township, and received his early education in the public schools of Upper Uwchlan township, afterward attending the Edgefield Institute. After finishing his education he decided to become a farmer, and has thus far spent his life in energetic and intelligent devotion to his chosen calling. His efforts have been crowned with success, and he is now the owner of a desirable farm of two hundred and seven acres in West Vincent township, which he cultivates in a thoroughly scientific manner. He also has a dairy of twenty-five head of cattle, and his products always command ready sales and high prices. He is a director in the Fairmount Creamery. He is ever ready to act the part of a good citizen in public affairs, and his townsmen have testified to their appreciation of this trait in his character by placing him for the last eight years in the office of school director. His politics, like those of his father, are Democratic. He was, at one time, a member of the Protective Order of Sons of America, Camp 298. He is connected with the Lutheran church.

Mr. Griffith married Anna May, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Handwerk) Miller, the latter a daughter of George Handwerk, a farmer of West Nantmeal. Mr. and Mrs. Griffith are the parents of the following children: Rose, who is the wife of William Miller, a blacksmith; Oscar Stephen; Maggie M.; Emma May, who is attending school; as are all the younger members of the family; Morris Griffith; Harris; Cora Malvina; Mary Rebecca; and William M. Griffith.

COOPER FAMILY. In the record book of Darby township we find a list of the early settlers, with dates of arrival, and among them "James Cooper from Bolton in the county of Lancaster in 1675, and from Mayfield in the county of Stafford in the year 1683." Whether he came to this country in 1675 and returned to England, or whether he removed from Bolton to Mayfield in that year is matter for conjecture. He probably married his first wife, Hannah, about 1698, but her maiden name has not been discovered. It appears they had both come to this country as servants, doubtless for the purpose of obtaining the fifty acres each offered by William Penn to those who came in that capacity. In the minutes of the commissioners of property, under date of 11 mo., 21, 1701, we find this entry:

"James Cooper, Hannah Cooper, Robert Scothorn, Henry Giles, Francis Crompton, Dan'l Hybert, John Marshall, Robert Smith, Jno. Kirk, John Roads, Thomas Collier and John Ball, having all come in Serv'ts in the years 1682 and '83, as by Certificates from Jno. Blunston, &c. Does appear, Request their head Land according to the Prop'rs Engagem't. Ordered to the first six one Warr't and to the last six another for 300 Acres each, to be laid out in the Township allotted for Servants."

There was no township actually allotted to servants, and it has not been ascertained where this land was surveyed, but in 1703 James Cooper requested a patent for 300 acres, having purchased the interests of some of the others. A warrant was also granted 1 mo., 7, 1701-2, for the survey of 18,000 acres at Nottingham, to head off the Maryland encroachments, and of this James Cooper, of Darby, was to have 1,000 acres, at £8 per hundred. His first wife dying, he was married November 8, 1705, at St. Paul's church, Chester, to Mary Ludwidge, whom the court records show had been assigned to him as a servant, by Jasper Yeates, August 28, 1705. For this marriage he subsequently made an acknowledgement to Friends. He was a "clothworker" or fuller by trade, and in 1719 was styled of Woodborough, in the county of New Castle, when he purchased a farm of 150 acres on White Clay creek, called Musclicripple Plantation. He was alive in 1728, but probably died soon after. Issue:

1. "Mary Cooper Daughter of James Cooper & Hannah his wife was born the 3d day of ye 9th month 1699." She married James Johnson, of New Garden, in 1721.

2. "William Cooper, son of James Cooper and Hannah his wife was born the 11th day of the 5th month 1701." He married Mary Miller in 1732, and settled in Kennett township. He was a clothworker, as were his sons Robert and William.

3. Calvin, probably son of Mary Ludwidge, see below.

4. Hannah, married John Clark, 1 mo., 8, 1738, and had several children, of whom James married Hannah Hayes, of E. Fallowfield, and was the father of Hayes Clark and Abishai Clark.

Calvin Cooper (3) was married 4 mo., 29, 1732, to Phebe Hall, daughter of Samuel and Anna Elizabeth Hall, of Kennett. They resided at first in Birmingham, and he was one of the overseers of the poor in 1734. On January 28, 1734-5, he obtained a deed for a farm of 150 acres in Sadsbury, Lancaster county, and removed thither, and soon after this united with Friends. His wife died 6 mo., 18, 1757, and about a year later he married a widow, Elizabeth Jefferis. He was a fuller. In 1743 he and others were appointed to divide the township of Sadsbury; he was elected to the Assembly 1749 to 1754; was commissioned justice of the court of common pleas in 1759; was a county commissioner in 1747, and in 1756 was appointed, with others, by an Act of Assembly, to look after the poor Acadians, who had been driven from their homes and scattered through Pennsylvania and other provinces. His death occurred 9 mo., 15, 1779. He had eight children:

5. William, born 9 mo., 5, 1734; died 2 mo., 20, 1821; married Elizabeth Pyle.

6. George, born 2 mo., 28, 1737; died 1 mo., 14, 1820; married Susanna Truman.

7. John, born 12 mo., 9, 1739; died 2 mo., 25, 1811. See forward.

8. Hannah, born 10 mo., 3, 1742; died young or unmarried.

9. Mary, born 12 mo., 17, 1744; died 9 mo., 18, 1806; married John Dixon and James Philips.

10. James, born 2 mo., 14, 1747; married Rachel Moore and Catherine Powell.

11. Phebe, born 6 mo., 6, 1750; died young or unmarried.

12. Sarah, born 12 mo., 12, 1753; married Thomas Dixon.

John Cooper (7) was married 10 mo., 24, 1764, at Sadsbury Meeting, to Rebecca Moore, born 2 mo., 16, 1744; died 2 mo., 18, 1813; daughter of James and Ann (Starr) Moore, of Sadsbury, Lancaster county. He owned a farm at Cooperville, in Sadsbury, and also a fulling mill, and kept two large wagons which were employed in hauling goods to Pittsburg. Children:

13. James, born 6 mo., 30, 1765; died 10 mo., 25, 1817; see forward.

14. Calvin, born 12 mo., 13, 1766; died 10 mo., 19, 1820; married Sarah Paxson.

15. John, born 9 mo., 6, 1769; died 3 mo., 3, 1852; married Jane Yarnall.

16. William, born 3 mo., 24, 1772; died 5 mo., 5, 1846; married Elizabeth Reece.

17. Ann, born 3 mo., 14, 1775; died 3 mo., 19, 1850; married James Jackson.

18. Rebecca, born 7 mo., 25, 1777; died 7 mo., 29, 1852; married William Kirkwood.

19. Jeremiah, born 3 mo., 19, 1780; died 2 mo., 12, 1841; married Leah Morris.

20. Mary, born 9 mo., 12, 1784; died 10 mo., 20, 1787.

James Cooper (13) was married 6 mo., 2, 1790, at Sadsbury Meeting, to Mary Paxson, born 1 mo., 14, 1765, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania; died 8 mo., 28, 1856; daughter of Joseph and Mary (Heston) Paxson, of Sadsbury, Chester county, where they settled. He was a fuller but later in life engaged in farming. They had five children:

21. Joseph, born 9 mo., 17, 1791; died 7 mo., 23, 1864; married Sarah Brinton.

22. Gulielma, born 2 mo., 16, 1794; died 12 mo., 29, 1879; married William Brinton.

24. Aaron, born 11 mo., 23, 1795; died 5 mo., 8, 1852; see forward.

25. Cyrus, born 9 mo., 20, 1798; died 12 mo., 20, 1857; married Asenath Ann Cooper.

Aaron Cooper (24) was married 6 mo., 14, 1820, at Sadsbury Meeting, to Priscilla Rogers Morris, born 2 mo., 21, 1799; died 5 mo., 14, 1884; daughter of John and Hannah. (Rogers) Morris, of Easttown township. She was born at Newtown, Delaware county, and died at Toughkenamon, Chester county. Aaron was a woolen manufacturer in Sadsbury, Chester county, and after his death his widow and two younger daughters located in Parkersburg. About 1864 they removed to Philadelphia, and in 1867 to Toughkenamon. Aaron and Priscilla had five children:

26. James R., born 7 mo., 12, 1821; died 2 mo., 22, 1897; see forward.

27. Mary, born 8 mo., 3, 1823; died 1 mo., 3, 1892; married Caleb Hoopes.

28. Charles, born 3 mo., 1, 1825; died 11 mo., 18, 1899; married Phebe Hoopes.

29. Hanna M., born 9 mo., 2, 1827; died 8 mo., 9, 1900; married John Cope. She was principal of a boarding and day school at Parkersburg, 1853 to 1863, and again, in her widowhood, at Toughkenamon, from 1867 to about 1893. No children. She died in West Chester.

30. Anne, born 3 mo., 30, 1830; lived with her sister Hanna at various places, and now in West Chester; unmarried.

James R. Cooper (26) was married 11 mo., 23, 1843, at Bradford Meeting, to Elizabeth R. Pennock, born 12 mo., 15, 1821; died 3 mo., 3, 1897; daughter of Caleb and Mary (Dingee) Pennock, of East Marlborough. He carried on the fulling business in Sadsbury, Chester county, for a few years; then farmed in that township, in West Cal., Londonderry, and lastly in New Garden; and, like his forefathers, was a consistent member of the Society of Friends and highly esteemed by all for his sound judgment, kindness and integrity. He had eight children:

31. Caleb Pennock, born 6 mo., 30, 1845; married 3 mo., 10, 1870, to Sarah Moore, born 10 mo., 27, 1844; daughter of Sharpless and Rachel (Roberts) Moore, of New Garden. He was engaged in farming in New Garden, near Avondale, for several years, but is now a dealer in agricultural machinery at the latter place. No children.

32. Anna Mary, born 10 mo., 20, 1846; died 7 mo., 20, 1847.

33. Rebecca, born 6 mo., 24, 1848; married Thomas B. Hoopes, farmer of New Garden, 3 mo., 26, 1874; P. O., Landenberg, Pennsylvania.

34. Charles Parks, born 6 mo., 26, 1850; died 4 mo., 12, 1872, unmarried.

35. Annie A., born 6 mo., 19, 1854; died 2 mo., 21, 1857.

36. J. Morris, carpenter and builder, born 4 mo., 7, 1857; married 11 mo., 18, 1880, Emily Baily, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Whitson) Baily, of New Garden. They reside at West Grove.

37. Hanna M., born 11 mo., 12, 1858; married 10 mo., 22, 1890, D. Thompson Mitchell, of Mill Creek, Delaware. They reside at Lansdowne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

38. Edwin H., carpenter, born 3 mo., 30, 1861; married 1 mo., 23, 1890, Phebe J. Thompson.

HENRY PENNYPACKER STAUFFER.

The Stauffer family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, of which Henry P. Stauffer is a worthy representative, is one of the oldest and best known in that section of the state, many of its members having held high political positions and been actively identified with various commercial interests.

John Stauffer, father of Henry P. Stauffer, was born in Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, acquired a common school education, and subsequently chose agricultural pursuits for his life work, which occupation he followed during his entire career in his native township. He was united in marriage to Hannah Pennypacker, a daughter of Jacob Pennypacker, a prominent resident of Coventry township, and the following named children were born to them: Jacob, who pursued the occupations of butcher and carpenter; Samuel, also engaged in the same pursuits; John, a successful agriculturist; William, a prosperous farmer; Rudolph, a retired farmer; Joseph, deceased; Catherine, deceased; Henry Pennypacker; Margaret, unmarried; Benjamin, manager of a farm in Tredyffin township, Chester county; and Elizabeth, wife of Charles Keebler, a farmer, but at the present time (1903) actively connected with the Spring City National Bank.

Henry P. Stauffer, son of John and Hannah Stauffer, was born in East Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 16, 1837, and his education was obtained in the public schools of the neighborhood. He began his business career in the capacity of school teacher, serving in the schools of North Coventry and Berks counties for three terms. After resigning from this position, Mr. Stauffer rented a farm for fourteen years, and then purchased a farm in East Pikeland township, consisting of fifty-eight acres of rich and arable land, with a dairy attached, which is stocked with from eight to twelve cows. To their care he gives his personal supervision, the products are sold at wholesale to the creamery, and his capable management and excellent business ability have brought him good financial returns. In politics Mr. Stauffer is a staunch supporter of the Independent party, and in religion an adherent of the Brethren church. For one term he served in the capacity of school director for the township of East Pikeland.

Mr. Stauffer was united in marriage to Rebecca Rinchart, a daughter of Abraham and Mary (Reiff) Rinchart, and the issue of this union was three children, namely: Martha R., deceased; Edwin R., manager of the packing department of Clawson & Co., having under his charge about thirty-five employees; he was united in marriage to Agnie Gilbert, daughter of John and Anna Gilbert, and their children are: Ethel and Edwin Gilbert Stauffer. Mr. Edwin R. Stauffer resides at Merchantville, New Jersey. Mr. Gilbert was formerly engaged as a dyer in the paper mills, but at the present time (1903) is engaged in the dyeing department of W. C. Urner. Mary L., youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer, is unmarried and resides at home with her father. The mother of these children died March 17, 1900, after having spent a life of usefulness and activity.

CALEB FORREST McNEIL, extensively engaged in dairy farming in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, also serving in the capacity of agent for the Penn Mutual Insurance Company, was born in Christiana, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, April 4, 1863, a descendant of a family who has been actively associated with the various interests of Chester county since an early period.

Samuel McNeil, father of Caleb F. McNeil, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1822, the son of William McNeil, a native of Chester county, where he was reared to manhood and acquired his education in the common schools. The educational advantages enjoyed by Samuel McNeil were obtained in the district schools, and after completing his studies his tastes led him to follow the occupation of his forefathers, that of farming, in which he was eminently successful and which he conducted both in his native county and also in York county; to which locality he subsequently removed. He married Sarah Brinton, a native of Pequa Valley, Pennsylvania, and the following named children were born to them: Nettie, who married Jordan McKinley, and three children have been born to them; Margaret, wife of James Reburn, they are the parents of two children; William, died in young manhood; Brinton, who married Ella Russell; Caleb Forrest, and Charles A. McNeil, who married Flora White, and four children have been born to them. Mrs. McNeil, mother of these children, died in 1895.

Caleb F. McNeil, third son of Samuel and Sarah McNeil, grew to manhood on his father's farm and received a good practical education in the public schools of the neighborhood. He then learned the trade of stone cutting, but after pursuing this line of industry for a short period of time he turned his attention to the creamery business, locating first at Andrews Bridge, Maryland, from there he removed to Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in farming for seven years and, in 1900, finally settled at his present location in London Grove township. He is the operator of a large creamery farm, and the product, which consists of fifty hundred quarts of milk daily, finds a ready sale in the nearby markets. Mr. McNeil closely adheres to honorable business methods, and well merits the prosperity which has come to him as the result of his efforts. He is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Knight Templars. In politics he is an Independent Republican, casting his vote for the candidate who in his estimation is best qualified for the office.

On September 16, 1890, Mr. McNeil married Ida W. Bush, a daughter of Henry and Sarah Bush, the former named being a prominent representative of the farming interests of Ross's Fording, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Ralph W. and Henry O., both of whom are unmarried. Mr. McNeil and his family are members of the Presbyterian church at West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

JOSEPH M. THOMPSON, one of the enterprising and successful citizens of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and widely known for his progressive methods of conducting agricultural affairs in this section of the state, was born on the ancestral estate in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, July 16, 1858.

John Watt Thompson, father of Joseph M. Thompson, was born at Smyrna, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and is a son of Joseph M. Thompson. John Watt Thompson attended the common schools of his native township, and after attaining young manhood devoted his time and attention to agricultural and kindred pursuits on the home farm, where he is now spending his declining years in ease and comfort, free from the cares and anxieties of a business career. He married Sarah Jane Russell, a daughter of Joseph and Mary Russell, the former named being a prosperous farmer of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: William E., married Josephine McGowen; he is now deceased; John W., married Mary Cannon, and three children have been born to them; James F., married Annie Greenleaf, and they are the parents of two children; George A.; Hanford W., unmarried; Martin L., married Belle Pickel; they have one child; William S., married Annie Rice, and three children have been born to them; Elwood, unmarried, and Joseph M. Thompson.

Joseph M. Thompson received a common school education and was reared upon his father's farm, in the management of which he gave such material assistance and upon which he continued his operations until 1898, when he removed to London Grove township, Chester county, and purchased what is known as the Gray farm. This property consisted of seventy-one acres of productive farm land, and under his tireless and efficient management the product of his labors yield him a profitable source of income. He has remodeled the residence and farm buildings which were located on it, and it is now considered one of the most productive and best equipped farms in this section of the state. Mr. Thompson is a Republican in politics, and has been an important factor in promoting those interests which have led to the substantial development and improvement of the community.

On December 21, 1881, was solemnized the marriage of Joseph M. Thompson and Rebecca Ann Bush, who was born December 25, 1854, a daughter of the late Frederick, whose death occurred in 1899, and Rebecca A. (Sheeler) Bush, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Joseph M., born May 28, 1884, and Sarah Rebecca, born March 9, 1887.

FRANCIS WILKINSON HICKS. The earliest ancestor of the Hicks family of whom there is any authentic record was Charles Hicks, who married Mary Kimble, and among the children born to them was a son, Edward Hicks, whose birth occurred December 25, 1744. On November 8, 1769, Edward Hicks married Hannah Rattew, a daughter of William and Rebecca Rattew, and they resided on a farm in East Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, which was purchased from the Goodwins; their children were: Sarah, William, Rebecca, Hannah, Charles, Abigail and Thomas Hicks. The mother of these children died May 21, 1835, at the extreme old age of ninety-one years.

William Hicks, eldest son of Edward and Hannah Hicks, and grandfather of Francis W. Hicks, was born November 26, 1776, and subsequently ranked among the most prosperous and influential citizens and farmers of the township of Goshen, being also a consistent member of the Society of Friends. Mr. Hicks married, November 6, 1801, at East Goshen Meeting, Abigail Garrett, who was born September 26, 1776, a daughter of Jesse and Abigail Garrett, of Willistown, and the following named children were born to them: Edward, born May 21, 1802; Jesse, born April 22, 1806; William, Jr., born April 28, 1808, and John H., born January 26, 1813. William Hicks, the father of these children, died at his home in Willistown, August 18, 1850, in the seventy-fifth year of his age.

William Hicks, third son of William and Abigail Hicks, and father of Francis W. Hicks, was born in East Goshen township, Chester county, on what is now known as the Passmore farm, April 28, 1808. His early life was spent in acquiring a common school education and assisting with the duties of the home farm, upon which he remained until 1837, the year of his marriage, when he rented the Young farm, situated near the town of Coatesville, whereon he conducted extensive operations until the death of his wife in 1842, when he returned to the old homestead, which he rented from his father until the death of the latter, and from that date up to the time of his own decease, which occurred August 15, 1878, he resided on the estate. On December 13, 1837, Mr. Hicks married Mary Wilkinson, a daughter of Francis and Phebe (Pusey) Wilkinson, and a native of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. They were the parents of three children, namely: Jesse Garrett, who engaged in mercantile pursuits; Francis Wilkinson, and another child who died in infancy.

Francis W. Hicks, second son of William and Mary Hicks, was born near Coatesville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 24, 1840. At the death of his mother he as a child was taken to be brought up by his grandparents, Francis W. and Phebe P. Wilkinson on a farm close by Lamborntown, a village about three miles north of Stone Bridge (now Avondale). When he was thirteen years of age the grandfather died, and the property passed into other hands, and a few years were then devoted to working on neighboring farms by the month in summer and attending public school in winter. Finally as a finishing for three years he was in attendance at academies in Gwynedd, Montgomery county, and Attleboro, Bucks county. In the fall of 1861 he took a clerkship in the general store of his brother Jesse G., at Chatham, Pennsylvania.

After three years service there he went to Philadelphia and secured a position with Sausser

James W. Hicks

Wagner & Co., manufacturers of ladies', misses' and children's shoes, comparatively a new firm, at Nos. 413, 415, 417 Arch street, Philadelphia. Here he became especially successful in designing styles and meeting the wants of shoe dealers, and anticipating the wants of the trade in advance of the season. From such a natural or acquired taste and skill, the wants of the trade could be anticipated, and large stocks of goods could be manufactured in advance and stored for future orders. Finally he became a leader in designing styles of fine shoes for the firm. In 1866 the firm sent him west, and after visiting most of the large cities located an office in Chicago, which was ever afterwards a central point for mail orders for all shipments of shoes direct from the factory. Four years were devoted to this kind of work, establishing a roll of customers that ordered by mail and in person, his sales alone amounting in some years to one hundred and eighty thousand dollars, the largest sale of shoes by any one person in the city at that date, in one year. Learning that the Zions Co-operative Mercantile Institution at Salt Lake City, Utah, had difficulty in getting their women's and children's shoes made and supplied satisfactorily, he went to them and secured their confidence and trade, and their purchases amounted to many thousands of dollars annually, their efforts to make shoes for themselves not having been successful. These trips to the far west had been conducted in a spirit and manner that had proved satisfactory to the firm, and buyers alike, extending all the way to California, and to one large buyer in Honolulu, Hawaii Islands. The sales and mail orders of the firm's own manufacture of shoes reached one million dollars in 1871. During these years of intense business activities, he would return to the factory twice each year and remain during the months of June and December, designing styles.

The great fire in Chicago in 1871 (in which he had to abandon all his baggage) had the effect of creating within him a feeling of insecurity in city life, the great risk in large cities, and the great tendency to cultivate a desire for the things of this world only. One month after the fire was extinguished and accounts were settled up as secure as was possible at that period, he returned to Philadelphia for rest and retrospect with his employers, all of whom seemed to evince a feeling of "well done" and that a financial reverse had been averted and all fire claims had been made as secure as was possible. A large number of buyers had come from other cities into the stricken city. With these he had come in touch with his pencil and the result was such that after his letters were shown to the officers of the bank with which they did business in Philadelphia the firm's credit was extended and increased, and the factory run day and night for some time.

About this time the farm (on which he now lives) was up at public sale, which he attended, and purchased. The purchase of a block of ground at Avondale, the nearest station, soon followed, having in view the building of homes for shoe workmen from the city. Ground on which to build a factory was to be secured near the depot and plans generally were soon arranged; at the city end to start during the following year. Operators were to join the co-operative plan. Just here a portion of the old firm protested, and would not submit to such a separation. A dissolution of the old firm became apparent and inevitable, and resulted in the withdrawing of J. T. Wagner, the practical man of the firm. After weighing carefully the proposition from both factions he consented to give up his Avondale project and join J. F. Wagner and stay in the city, but retaining the farm for a home. The new Iron building, corner of Fourth and Cherry streets, was leased for five years, with steam power and heat furnished, at a rental of three thousand dollars per year. They formed a new co-partnership, under the name of Wagner, Hicks & Company, Mr. Wagner putting in fifty thousand dollars in cash and Mr. Hicks five thousand dollars, and to be equal partners. The senior partner was to receive legal interest for his excess of capital from the profits of the firm. Here the manufacturing of shoes was carried on successfully for five years, shipping from mail orders, as a very large following had been established and continued right along. Three resident agents in the west traveled to some extent to look after changes needing attention. In 1876 occurred his marriage, and he began to long for country life. Mr. Wagner, who was beginning to feel the weight of years, desired to withdraw and remain a silent partner. Mr. Hicks succeeded in selling out his interest to Mr. Wagner, obligating himself not to engage in opposition. This was in 1876, during the Centennial, when his time during the year was divided between the farm and factory. When his counsel and services were especially needed, he would serve Mr. Wagner for an hour or more a day.

After disposing of his interests in the firm Mr. Hicks removed to his present farm, which is located in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has since followed agricultural pursuits. In political sentiment Mr. Hicks is an independent. However, the cause of temperance and Prohibition receives his hearty co-operation. In the Prohibition party he has often served as delegate, and has also been selected as a candidate for various offices by that party. He has been one of the main factors in securing the abolition of the saloon from this part of Chester county. In religious faith he is a member of the Hicksite Friends' Meeting. In social matters he is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry and Farm Clubs, having been an active member of West Grove Farmers' Club for the past quarter of a century. Since 1876 Mr. Hicks has been one of the most active members of the Patrons of Husbandry, filling various offices in the organization, several times presiding officer, and representative at state meetings.

Mr. Hicks was united in marriage, May 2, 1876, to Margaret A. Hood, who was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, August 18, 1844, a daughter of Joseph and Rebecca (Brinton) Hood. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Hicks, Caleb Brinton, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, was among the first agitators of temperance and first to abolish the custom of having a bottle passed in harvest. Joseph Hood was a son of Thomas Hood, who was a son of Joseph, a son of Thomas, a son of John Hood, who came to the United States in 1683, settled in Upper Darby, now Delaware county, in 1686, was a member of the Assembly in 1684, and died in the year 1721.

Mr. and Mrs. Hicks are the parents of the following named children: Joseph H., born February 28, 1877, died in infancy; Mary R., born January 28, 1878; Phebe, born July 25, 1879, died in infancy; Laura L., born July 25, 1882, and Alice F., born December 6, 1886. In 1886 Mrs. Hicks was elected a member of the school board, in which capacity she served for twelve years. While Mrs. Hicks was a member of the school board she injected many new ideas into the school work in the way of reform, and three new school buildings were erected while she was a member of the board. She is also an active member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The family ranks among the best in Chester county and is widely known.

GEORGE L. BAKER, who for almost half a century has followed the quiet but useful occupation of agriculture, traces his ancestry to Joseph Baker, a resident of Edgemont, who married Martha Woodward, a daughter of Richard and Jane Woodward, of Middletown, Pennsylvania. Among their children was a son named Aaron Baker, who was born December 2, 1701, married Mary Edwards, September 23, 1727, and settled in West Marlborough; toward the latter part of his life he removed to London Grove township, where his death occurred about the year 1783. Among his children was a son, Aaron Baker, who married May 30, 1759, Sarah Hayes, daughter of James and Mary Hayes, of East Fallowfield, and their son, Aaron Baker, born August 14, 1767, married Hannah Harlan, a daughter of Michael and Susanna Harlan, February 10, 1790, and the following named children were born to them: Lewis, Reuben, Susanna, George, Jacob, Thomas, Samuel, Aaron, Hannah, and Harlan Baker.

Jacob Baker, father of George L. Baker, was the fourth son of Aaron and Hannah (Harlan) Baker, and his birth occurred January 13, 1797, at the old homestead in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. After completing his education which was obtained in the common schools of the vicinity, he turned his attention to farming interests near the town of Cochranville, Chester county, where he made his home for twenty-five years. In 1847 he returned to his native township, and purchased what is known as the old Morris farm, which consists of one hundred and twelve acres of valuable land, which he continued to cultivate and improve up to the time of his decease. In politics he was a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and in religion a firm adherent of the doctrines of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Baker was united in marriage to Lydia Lamborn, a daughter of George and Martha (Marshall) Lamborn, the former named having been born near Chadds' Ford, Chester county, where he learned the trade of blacksmith, but later followed the occupation of farming in Martic township, Lancaster county, subsequently removing to the state of Ohio. The children born of this marriage were: 1. Esther, wife of Benjamin West, and of the three children born to them two are now deceased; 2. Ruth, died in early life; 3. Martin, died in childhood; 4. S. Harvey, who was married twice, his first wife, Anna (Jackson) Baker, bore him one child; his second wife, Amanda (Mackey) Baker, bore him four children, two of whom are now deceased; 5. Hannah, who became the wife of Enos John and three children were the issue of this marriage; after his decease she married Milton Michener, and one child was born to them, now deceased; 6. Martha, wife of Norris Barnard and mother of seven children, one of whom is deceased; 7. Rebecca, died unmarried; 8. Reuben, married Jennie Fredd, and they are the parents of nine children; 9. Nellie, unmarried; 10. Lewis, married Mary Evans; 11. George L. Baker. The father of these children died in 1879, having survived his wife for many years, her death occurring in 1861.

George L. Baker, youngest son of Jacob and Lydia Baker, was born in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 18, 1841, and his education was acquired in the schools of Fairville. In early life he became thoroughly familiar with the routine work of a farm, so that he was well qualified to take up agricultural pursuits as a means of livelihood. He has always conducted his operations at the old home in London Grove township, which was purchased by his father in 1847, and by his industry, thrift and good management, he has succeeded in making his property one of the most productive and best cultivated farms in that vicinity. In his political affiliations he is an ardent advocate of the Prohibition party, and in his fraternal relations he holds membership in the Order of Good Templars.

In 1878, Mr. Baker married Amy Gawthrop, a daughter of Thomas and Susanna Gawthrop, who were residents of London Grove township, Chester county, where they were interested in agricultural pursuits. Their children are: Thomas, who married Florence Brosius, and one child has been born to them; Lydia, unmarried, and Helen, also unmarried. The mother of these children died in 1900; she was a true and faithful woman and her death was deplored by all who had the honor of her acquaintance. The family are faithful and consistent members of the Society of Friends.

LEWIS PALMER GOOD, a prosperous farmer of London Grove township, Chester county, is a grandson of Thomas Good, who was a farmer of West Grove township, and later moved to Penn township, where his son, Francis Good, Jr., was born in 1834. The latter was educated at the Westtown Friends' School, and afterward engaged in farming in West Fallowfield, where he remained three years. He then bought the "old Michener farm," which was included in what is now West Grove village. It was through the combined efforts of Mr. Good and Mr. Joseph Pyle that the village of West Grove was established, the former being known as the "Father of West Grove." He married Sarah, daughter of Joel and Rachel (Spencer) Thompson, the former a farmer of Toughkenamon, and by this union was the father of two children: Lewis Palmer, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Ella, who married Solomon Pusey, and has two children. Mr. Good died in 1902, and his widow is still living.

Lewis Palmer Good, son of Francis, Jr., and Sarah (Thompson) Good, was born in 1853, in West Fallowfield township, and received his education in the schools of Westtown and West Grove. His early manhood was spent in assisting his father on the home farm, and in 1885 he moved to London Grove, where he has since remained, devoting himself assiduously to agricultural pursuits, his industry and enterprise being rewarded with very successful results. In politics Mr. Good adheres to the Republican party. He and his family attend Friends' Meetings.

Mr. Good married, in 1885, Phoebe, daughter of Benjamin and Esther (Baker) West, of London Grove township. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Good: William, Esther, Frances, Spencer, and one who died in infancy.

HORACE H. LLOYD, prominent in London Grove township both as a farmer and a citizen, is descended from an old family of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, where he was born on the homestead, which was also the birthplace, in 1833, of his father, David Lloyd. The latter was educated in the common schools of the county, and throughout life followed the occupation of a farmer. He was a Republican in politics, and held several minor public offices, being a man who enjoyed both popularity and respect. He was twice married, his first wife having been Hannah Truman, who lived near Coatesville, Chester county. The children of this marriage were: William, who married Ella McIntire, and was the father of two children, both of whom are deceased; Truman, who married Mary Smith, and has a family of seven children; Hannah, who became the wife of Tryon Rodebaugh, had two children, and died in 1895; and Horace H., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mrs. Lloyd died in 1860, and some time after Mr. Lloyd married Elizabeth, daughter of George Cochran, a farmer of Cochranville, Chester county. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd: Alice, who is unmarried; George, who died young; Catherine, who is also unmarried; and David, who married Mary E. McMichel, and is now deceased. In 1898 Mr. Lloyd died on the old homestead, where his life had been passed.

Horace H. Lloyd, son of David and Hannah (Truman) Lloyd, was born in 1858, on the homestead in Lancaster county, where he received his education in the common schools, and then decided to devote himself to the ancestral calling of agriculture. Until reaching the age of twenty-three he assisted his father on the home farm, and then removed to London Grove township, where he purchased what was known as the "Linville farm," consisting of one hundred and twenty-two acres, where he now resides. As a farmer, Mr. Lloyd has been extremely successful, making a specialty of dairying, and he has twenty head of cattle attached to the estate. He takes a leading part in local affairs, and is now serving as a member of the county committee. His political opinions are those held by the Republican party. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Junior Order of American Mechanics. He and his family attend the Methodist church.

Mr. Lloyd married, in 1880, Emma, daughter of James and Rebecca (Walker) Cochran, of New London, Chester county, and they are the parents of two children; Frederick and Edna, both of whom are unmarried, and live at home on the farm.

CHARLES I. McNEIL, an intelligent, successful and highly respected farmer residing in the township of London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a worthy representative of a family whose residence in Chester county dates back to the early part of the eighteenth century, was born in York county, Pennsylvania, September 5, 1872, the son of Samuel and Sarah McNeil, and the grandson of William McNeil, who was born and reared to manhood in Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Samuel McNeil, father of Charles I. McNeil, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1822. He obtained his educational advantages at the common schools of the vicinity, and subsequently engaged in farming, to which occupation he devoted all the active years of his life. After being a resident of his native county for many years, he removed to York county, Pennsylvania. He was united in marriage to Sarah Brinton, a native of Pequa Valley, Pennsylvania, and their children were: Nettie, wife of Jordan McKinley, and mother of three children; Margaret, wife of James Reyburn, and they are the parents of two children; William, died in early manhood; Brinton, who was united in marriage to Ella Russell; Caleb Forest, married Ida W. Bush, and two children have been born to them, and Charles I. McNeil. The mother of these children passed away in the year 1895.

Charles I. McNeil, youngest son of Samuel and Sarah McNeil, acquired his early education in the public schools of York county, Pennsylvania, which he attended until he attained the age of ten years; his parents then removed to Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his education was completed. After attaining young manhood, he changed his place of residence to Upper Oxford, entered the employ of Mr. Joseph Brosius, the proprietor of an extensive creamery, and during his connection with this establishment thoroughly mastered all the details of the business, becoming quite proficient in all of its branches. He subsequently located in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he was in the employ of the creamery at Concord, which was the property of Pennock Sharpless, and after acting in this capacity for one year he removed to Franklin township, where he assumed full control of Mervell's Creamery for three years, then went to Strickersville, and started a new creamery for C. C. Von Rusen, and in 1897 moved to London Grove township, Chester county. He rented a farm of one hundred and sixty-five acres, which he has since devoted to general dairy farming; the ground is well improved and gives unmistakable evidence in its productiveness of the care and skill with which it is cultivated. Politically he is an Independent Republican, and fraternally he is a member of the United Order of American Workmen, taking an active interest in the workings of both organizations.

In 1895 Mr. McNeil married Flora White, a daughter of Asa S. White, a prosperous agriculturist of Franklin township, Pennsylvania. Their children are: William, Samuel, Nettie and George, all of whom are unmarried. Mr. McNeil and his family are loyal and consistent members of the Baptist church in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

DAVID J. CHAMBERS (Fair View Farm), deceased, for many years successfully engaged in the pursuit of agriculture on the old Chambers homestead, which is situated in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred June 22, 1863, in the house which was built in 1785, was a son of David P. and Lydia Ann Chambers, and grandson of John and Hannah (Dickinson) Chambers, the former named having been born October 5, 1777, and the latter on December 21, 1783, the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Dickinson.

David P. Chambers, father of David J. Chambers, was born on the old homestead, December 17, 1820, pursued his studies in the common schools of the neighborhood, and his business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits. Mr. Chambers was twice married, his first wife having been Emma Barnard, who was born June 10, 1826, and died March 4, 1854. His second wife, Lydia Ann (Herford) Chambers, was a daughter of Eber Herford, and the following named children were the issue of this marriage: Hannah Emma, born September 7, 1857, wife of Howard Pusey; Elizabeth, born July 9, 1860, died July 27, 1884; David J., born June 22, 1863, died January 29, 1902; Ella P., born March 24, 1866, died January 25, 1875; and Morris E., born August 8, 1868. David P. Chambers, the father of these children, died at his home in London Grove township, June 22, 1901.

David J. Chambers, eldest son of David P. and Lydia Ann Chambers, obtained his preliminary education at the Friends' School in West Grove township, and this was supplemented by a regular course of study at Shortledge's Academy, Concord, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Upon the completion of his studies he returned to the old homestead, assisted with the work thereon for several years, and subsequently succeeded to the property which he cultivated to a high state of perfection, and from the products of which he derived a handsome income. He was an earnest and conscientious worker, and his careful supervision of every detail made it one of the most thrifty and desirable farm properties in the locality. In politics Mr. Chambers was an independent Republican, in religion an adherent of the faith of the Society of Friends, and in social matters a member of London Grove Grange, No. 63, Patrons of Husbandry.

David J. Chambers

On June 8, 1891, Mr. Chambers married Anna T. Lippincott, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, who was born September 4, 1868, a daughter of George W. and Mary (Bell) Lippincott. Their children are: Harold David, born July 24, 1892, and Samuel Lippincott, born December 25, 1893. Mr. Chambers passed away January 29, 1902, and in his death the community lost a truly noble man and valued citizen.

MORRIS EBER CHAMBERS, successfully engaged in the quiet but useful calling of agriculture in his native township, London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a man of unimpeachable integrity and honor and his influence has always been exerted on the side of morality and truth. He is a son of David P. and Lydia Ann (Herford) Chambers.

David P. Chambers (father) was born on the old family estate in London Grove township, Chester county, December 17, 1820, attended the common schools of the vicinity and upon reaching man's estate devoted his attention to farming pursuits. He was a son of John H., born October 5, 1777, and Hannah (Dickinson) Chambers, born December 11, 1783, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Dickinson. Mr. Chambers was united in marriage to Emma Bernard, born June 10, 1826, and whose death occurred March 4, 1854. He then married for his second wife, Lydia Ann Herford, daughter of Eber Herford, and by this union they became the parents of the following named children—Hannah Emma, born September 7, 1857, now the wife of Howard Pusey; Elizabeth, born July 9, 1860, died July 27, 1884; David J., born June 22, 1862, died January 29, 1902; Ella P., born March 24, 1866, died January 25, 1875; and Morris E., born August 8, 1868. David P. Chambers, father of these children, died June 23, 1901, aged eighty-one years. He spent a long and useful life and at the time of his decease bequeathed to his children the legacy of a good name and untarnished reputation.

Morris E. Chambers, second son of David P. and Lydia Ann Chambers, was born on the ancestral estate, August 8, 1868. He pursued his studies in the common schools of London Grove township and Kennett Square Academy, and being studious and attentive he acquired an excellent education which thoroughly equipped him for an active and useful life. He assisted with the work upon the home farm until 1900, when he purchased what is known as the "Cook Farm" in London Grove township, which consists of one hundred and twenty-three acres of rich and productive land whereon he now conducts a flourishing dairy farm. Mr. Chambers is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, a member of the Patrons of Husbandry, and a Republican in his political affiliations.

In 1901 occurred the marriage of Morris E. Chambers and Mary Anna Clark, born in 1872, daughter of Even and Phebe (Cooper) Clark, the former named a miller of Londonderry township. They are the parents of one child, David P. Chambers, born June 27, 1902.

WILMER J. HAINES. The first ancestor of this branch of the Haines family of whom there is any authentic record was William E. Haines, grandfather of Wilmer J. Haines, who was engaged in farming in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and being thoroughly familiar with every detail and feature of this important industry, his judgment and counsel were often sought and he was regarded as one of the substantial and useful citizens of the community.

Jesse Haines, father of Wilmer J. Haines, was born in New London township, Chester county, in 1824. He was a regular attendant at the common schools of the neighborhood, where he obtained a practical education which prepared him for the active duties of after life. He was a resident of his native township up to the year 1856, when he purchased what was known as the old Baker farm in London Grove township, which consisted of seventy-one acres of highly cultivated and productive land, and this he operated up to the time of his decease, which occurred in 1891. He was united in marriage to Mary Springer, a daughter of the late John Springer, who was engaged in farming in the state of Delaware. Their children were: Charles E., married Ella Hill, and four children were born to them; Howell C., married Ida Mills, and they are the parents of five children; Willis, deceased; Calvin, unmarried; Wilmer J., mentioned hereinafter; and Elizabeth Haines.

Wilmer J. Haines, son of Jesse and Mary Haines, was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, December 19, 1865, and his educational advantages were acquired at the common schools of the vicinity, and at Fernwood Academy, where he pursued a course of study for one term. He then devoted his energies to assisting his father with the management of the home farm, where he has resided up to the present time (1903), and in the cultivation of the ground he uses the latest and most approved methods known to agriculturists. He possesses the characteristics of industry and thrift, and bears an enviable reputation among the residents of the community. In politics Mr. Haines is a pronounced and leading Republican, and has been chosen by his party to serve in several local offices. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which organization he takes an active interest, and he is also a consistent member and contributor to the Society of Friends.

On January 31, 1894, occurred the marriage of Wilmer J. Haines and Ella M. Cochran, daughter of James and Rebecca (Walker) Cochran, of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: J. Herman, and W. Milan Haines, both of whom are unmarried.

HARRY JOHN MILLER, a well known citizen and leading man of affairs of Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the bearer of a name which has been a familiar one in the county for more than a century and a quarter, the members of the family in the different generations having done much, by diligence in their respective callings and fidelity in the duties of citizenship, for the advancement and upbuilding of the community in which they resided.

John Miller was born August 16, 1771, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His education was of the quality usually received by farmers' sons in those days, when facilities for scholastic training were at the best scanty and restricted. Farming was the business of his life, and this he followed with industry and success in his native township. In politics he was a Whig, and in religion a member of the Society of Friends. He married, August 25, 1797, Mary Webster, and their children were: Lewis, born June 11, 1798, died September 5, 1885; Joseph, born October 3, 1799, died in 1880; James, born May 31, 1801, died August 8, 1824; Alban, born October 3, 1802, died October 8, 1867; Samuel, born September 28, 1803, deceased; Rebecca, born April 17, 1805, died June 17, 1805; Reuben, born May 3, 1806, died July 27, 1824; John, Jr., born August 27, 1807, died December 31, 1895; Mary, born November 17, 1808, deceased; Jane, born September 18, 1809, died September 26, 1809; and William, born August 8, 1817, died May 10, 1818. Mr. Miller, the father of this family, died December 22, 1834, and was survived many years by his wife, who passed away November 9, 1862.

Lewis Miller, son of John and Mary (Webster) Miller, was born June 11, 1798, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and received his education in the common schools of his native township. He first learned the trade of shoemaking, which he followed for several years, and then engaged in farming in New Garden township, moving after a time to Penn township, where he continued his labors as an agriculturist. In politics he was first a Whig, and later a Republican. He married, June 1, 1821, Keziah Hutton, who was born December 15, 1800. The following children were born to them: Lydia Ann, born June 16, 1822; Mary, born March 22, 1824; Ruth Anne, born December 17, 1826; William Lindley, born April 27, 1829; Robert Allison, born February 2, 1832; Eli H., born November 12, 1834; and Keziah Rebecca, born March 20, 1838. Mrs. Miller, the mother of these children, died May 6, 1838, and on February 28, 1839, Mr. Miller married Mary Ann Miller. Their children were: Keziah Jane, born October 2, 1839; George McGraw, born November 2, 1841; Sarah Elizabeth, born July 25, 1845; Ann Maria, born March 4, 1848; and Milton H., born September 1, 1850. Mr. Miller, the father of the family, died September 5, 1885, at his home in Penn township.

John Miller, Jr., son of John and Mary (Webster) Miller, was born August 27, 1807, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and married Lydia Orin, who was born April 2, 1804. They were the parents of the following children: Mary Webster, born November 16, 1835; Susan, born June 6, 1838; Rebecca Jane, born September 16, 1840; Sarah E., born May 21, 1843; and Benjamin H., born October 14, 1846. Mr. John Miller, Jr., died December 31, 1895, at the advanced age of eighty-eight.

William Lindley Miller, son of Lewis and Keziah (Hutton) Miller, was born April 27, 1829, in New Garden township, Chester county, six miles and a half from Avondale, in the same county. His education was received in the district schools, and at the age of thirteen he entered the employ of Mr. David Chambers, a farmer, with whom he remained for three years. On reaching the age of sixteen he entered the shop of Mr. George Watson, at Strickersville, for the purpose of learning the wheelwright's trade. At the end of six months, however, in consequence of a change in his plan of life, he went to Delaware, where he worked for two years at the carpenter's trade. He then returned to Pennsylvania, and to his native Chester county, where he settled near Avondale, and became a farmer. From that time to the present he has been engaged in agricultural pursuits, and for over sixteen years has resided in Avondale. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., affiliating with a lodge at New London, Pennsylvania. Politically he is a Republican. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Avondale. Mr. Miller married, May 13, 1857, Mary Webster, born November 16, 1835, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, daughter of John Jr., and Lydia (Orin) Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are the parents of the following children: Ella Rebecca, who was born December 27, 1858, and resides with her parents; Harry John, who was born April 22, 1860, and is mentioned at length hereinafter; and Elmer Eli, who was born October 18, 1862.

The last-named child and younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Miller married, July 14, 1885, Mary Elizabeth, born September 25, 1867, in Philadelphia, daughter of William and Mary Grace (Rudolph) Greenfield. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Miller are as follows: Mary Ethel, born October 20, 1886; William Lindley, Jr., born May 5, 1888; Ernest Elmer, born July 28, 1890; and Earl Gifford, born January 28, 1895. Mr. Miller and his family reside in Avondale, Chester county.

Harry John Miller, son of William Lindley and Mary Webster (Miller) Miller, was born April 22, 1860, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His education was received in the public schools, and he remained at home with his parents until reaching the age of sixteen, at which time he entered the service of Richard B. Chambers & Brother, hardware merchants of Avondale, Chester county, with whom he remained four years. He then entered the establishment of Cooper & Hill, machinists, also of Avondale, by whom he was employed for one year. At the end of that time he purchased the grocery store which was then conducted by Mr. George Dance of Avondale, and for several years continued the business in the old quarters. Subsequently he moved to the Watson Block, where he remained until the memorable fire of Christmas, 1896, when his place of business was destroyed by the flames. Undismayed by this disaster, Mr. Miller purchased the old Avondale Bank building, near the railroad station, which he converted into a store, and in which he conducted for some years a green grocery business in connection with a restaurant. He still owns the property, but since 1901 has rented it. Since 1900 he has been the proprietor of the Avondale Hotel, which he obtained by leasing that property of its owners. The success which has attended him in all his enterprises attests the energy, ability, and fidelity with which his undertakings have been prosecuted. In politics Mr. Miller is a Republican, though the engrossing nature of his duties leaves him little time for participation in public affairs.

Mr. Miller married, December 31, 1885, Mary Letitia, who was born January 9, 1863, in Chesterville, Franklin township, Chester county, daughter of Washington and Letitia S. (Gallagher) Ewing. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are the parents of two children, both of whom were born in Avondale, Chester county. Their names are: Austin Ewing, who was born July 25, 1887; and Ralph Graham, who was born January 12, 1893. Mrs. Miller is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

OSCAR F. PASSMORE. The progenitors of Oscar F. Passmore, were originally from the parish of Husk, in Berkshire, England, and settled in Chester county early in the eighteenth century, becoming active participants in the adjustment of affairs relating to the Society of Friends, and the early history of Chester county. Samuel W. Passmore, the father of Oscar F., was born in New London township, Chester county, in 1826, receiving his education in the common schools of the county, and later holding minor local offices in the township and county. He was a Republican, and held a birthright in the Society of Friends, as one of his progenitors, Augustine Passmore, had held a century before him. He married Emmeline S. Stubbs, the daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Stubbs, of York county, Pennsylvania, and they were the parents of ten children, namely: G. Birdsell, who married Elizabeth Preston, of Cecil county, Maryland, issue, one child; Mary, married to Newlin Mendenhall, issue, two children; Dora, unmarried; Phebe, married to Dr. William Taylor, issue four children; Isaac, married to Annie Darlington, issue three children; Samuel, married to Mary Armstrong; Benjamin, married to Margaret Trimble. Melvina, died unmarried; Sarah, married Frank Walter, and Oscar F., the subject of this sketch. The decease of Mr. Samuel W. Passmore occurred in 1900.

Oscar F. Passmore was born in 1857, in East Nottingham township, Chester county, and was educated in the public schools of the township and at the West Chester State Normal School. After leaving the Normal School he taught school for two years and then removed, in 1880, to his present home in London Grove township, where he is largely engaged in the cultivation of carnations, one of the noted industries of Chester county. He has adhered to the political principles of his father by his affiliation with the Republican party, and has, like his ancestors, a birthright in the Society of Friends.

Mr. Passmore married, September 20, 1883, Mary S. Pusey, a daughter of Jesse and Hannah Pusey, of London Grove township, who was born in 1860, and is a descendant of that eminent Quaker and early immigrant settler in Pennsylvania, Caleb Pusey, whose superior qualifications, and indomitable spirit and energy made him a leader in all the affairs, civil, religious and executive, which related to the first settlement and growth of a new country and a new home. It was from Caleb Pusey, who emigrated to this country in 1682, that Smith, the early historian of Pennsylvania, obtained much of the material which is found in his work. Two sons have been born to Oscar F. and Mary S. (Pusey) Passmore; Norris J., who was born in 1884, and is unmarried, and Howard S., born in 1888, and who is deceased.

CHARLES W. CHAMBERS. Among the prominent and successful agriculturists of London Grove township, who have achieved financial success through their own energy and perseverance, is Charles W. Chambers, whose ancestors were among the pioneer settlers of Chester county, Pennsylvania, their history being closely interwoven with its industrial activities and prosperity. He was born in West Bradford township, March 24, 1843, a son of Caleb W. Chambers, whose birthplace was on the old Chambers homestead in London Grove township.

Charles W. Chambers acquired his preliminary education at Kennett Square public school and this was supplemented by a thorough course of instruction at the Millersville (Pennsylvania) State Normal School. Upon the completion of his studies he returned to the old farm and assisted his father for several years with the labor and management of the same, thereby gaining a thorough knowledge of agricultural pursuits. He then located in what is now known as Whitford, West Whiteland township, Chester county, resided there for twenty-three years and during this long period of time was actively engaged in the cattle business. This industry proving a profitable means of livelihood, he continued to pursue it in the towns of Downingtown and Honeybrook in succession, being a resident of those localities until the year 1899. He then moved to Lenape, Pocopson township, spent three years there, then located in London Grove township and four years later purchased a seventy-five-acre farm which was formerly the property of Hannah Michener, whereon he has since conducted an extensive and general farming business. That this enterprise has proved successful and remunerative is entirely due to the excellent preparation he acquired on his father's farm in early life, and also to his own careful management and progressive business methods. Mr. Chambers is a Republican in politics, and has creditably filled the office of school director in West Whiteland township for a number of years.

Mr. Chambers was married, at Thorndale, Chester county, February 11, 1867, to Mary P. Smedley, who was born August 3, 1843, a daughter of Ezra and Esther Ann (Pratt) Smedley. Ezra Smedley was born April 21, 1812, married, at Willistown Meeting, November 3, 1842, Esther Ann Pratt, who was born at White Horse, Willistown, July 12, 1819, a daughter of Joseph H. and Mary (Lewis) Pratt, of Willistown. Mr. Smedley died at Honeybrook, Chester county, December 24, 1893, and his remains were interred at Goshen Meeting. The following named children were born to Charles W. Chambers and his wife, Mary P. Chambers: 1. Maurice L., born 2 mo., 21, 1868, married Alice E. Lloyd, and to them were born the following named children—Lloyd, born 10 mo., 22, 1899; Charles, born 7 mo., 5, 1901, died in 1902; and Mildred, born 12 mo., 5, 1902. 2. Ezra S., born 1 mo., 12, 1870, died 7 mo., 3, 1886, and was buried at Friends' Cemetery at West Chester. 3. Eugene M., born 4 mo., 28, 1872, married, in 1898, Sarah Snowden Rumford. 4. Caleb E., born 9 mo., 28, 1878, and upon attaining young manhood was engaged by his father to cultivate and improve the farm adjoining his property. Mr. Chambers and his family are members of the Society of Friends, and are active and regular attendants at their meetings.

ROBERT HOPEWELL HEPBURN, of Avondale, Pennsylvania, a prominent manufacturer, is of excellent American stock which came of blended Scotch and Huguenot blood. He has also the unique and patriotic inheritance of three of his four great-grandfathers, Thomas Huston, William McMeens and Robert Ritchey, having been captains in the Revolutionary army; one of the three was also an officer in the French and Indian war, and the fourth, James Hepburn, was prominently identified with the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania in relation to public affairs in the West Branch Valley, the then frontier of Pennsylvania, during the Revolutionary period. Both of his grandfathers saw service in the war of 1812. In the Civil war his father responded to his country's call, at the sacrifice of health, if not really life, and his uncles, cousins and other connections completed a phenomenally large family quota. His maternal uncle, Robert McMeens, a surgeon with the rank of colonel, was killed at the battle of Shiloh. To this splendid record of patriotic service may be added mention of Robert H. Hepburn, the immediate subject of this narrative, who, at the call for troops to protect Pennsylvania against invasion by General Lee, immediately before the battle of Gettysburg, ran away from home and passed some days (including his thirteenth birthday) with a company at Harrisburg and Camp Curtin, and was about to go to the front as a drummer boy when his father came and took him home.

The founder of the American branch of the

R. St. Stephen

Hepburn family was James Hepburn, born in Ireland, March 28, 1747. His ancestors were of Scotch Hepburns, Lords of Hailes and Earls of Bothwell. Samuel Hepburn, father of James Hepburn, was born in East Lothian, Scotland. He was out with "Prince Charlie," in 1745, fled to Ireland on the failure of the "rising," and subsequently (May 16, 1773) sailed for America. He died at Northumberland, Pennsylvania, January 11, 1795, in the ninety-seventh year of his age.

James, son of Samuel Hepburn, was twenty-six years of age when he accompanied his family to this country. After a temporary residence in Philadelphia he located in Northumberland, where he became a large landed proprietor, the records showing that in 1796 he was assessed for eight thousand acres of "unseated lands" alone. With his brother, Colonel Hepburn, he obtained the division of Northumberland county and the authorization of Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, notwithstanding the opposition of Robert Morris, "the financier of the Revolution," and other large Philadelphia owners, and also founded Williamsport, where he owned nearly all the land now embraced in the city limits proper. James Hepburn was prominently associated with the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania during the Revolutionary period, in connection with affairs in the West Branch Valley. He was the first elder of the First Presbyterian church built in Northumberland, and was also largely its founder, and he was one of the four elders participating in the organization of Northumberland Presbytery. He was a man of large knowledge, and was an intimate friend of Dr. Joseph Priestly, the discoverer of oxygen gas. He died in Northumberland, January 4, 1817. His wife was Mary Hopewell, of Mount Holly, New Jersey, who was born February 13, 1762, married December 27, 1781, and died March 2, 1826, at the home of her youngest child and daughter, Mrs. Judge James Armstrong, in Williamsport, Pennsylvania. Her mother, Mary Beckett Hopewell, was a great-granddaughter of Andre de Normandie, of Geneva, a descendant of the "princely family" of that name in France. She was, therefore, of Huguenot descent, and a Presbyterian.

Andrew Doz Hepburn, son of James and Mary (Hopewell) Hepburn, was born in Northumberland, Pennsylvania, March 10, 1784, and died in Williamsport, March 6, 1861. Meginnis, the historian of the West Branch Valley, says of him: "A broad-minded liberal man, a great reader and student. Early in life he made himself familiar with both law and medicine, and always gave these sciences much study and thought. People were in the habit of going to him, as long as he lived, for legal advice, and the afflicted often consulted him." In a new country this was invaluable and true eminence. His personal activities covered a broad field. He laid out "West" Williamsport, sold the first saw mill sites there from the Mount Joy tract inherited from his father, and founded the lumber business there. He was a large shipper of grain down the west branch of the Susquehanna river and down that stream in "arks" to Baltimore. He was brigade major of the First Brigade, Tenth Division, Pennsylvania Militia, under General John Cummings, in 1812. He was the first elder of the First Presbyterian church in Williamsport, donated its building site, largely bore the expenses of the first church edifice, and made provision in his will for a parsonage; he was also the first superintendent of the Sunday school. He married, in 1802, Martha Huston, who died February 6, 1852. She was a daughter of Thomas and Janet (Walker) Huston, and sister of Charles Huston, the distinguished jurist and justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Her father was a captain in the Revolutionary war, and her mother was of the famous legal family of Walkers in Ireland.

Andrew Hepburn, son of Andrew Doz and Martha (Huston) Hepburn, was born in Williamsport, December 15, 1814, and died June 18, 1872. He was a man of high character and excellent attainments. He graduated from Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and studied for his profession under his brother, Dr. William Hepburn, and at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1841. Soon after his marriage, in 1843, he located in Bellevue, Ohio, whence he soon removed to Tiffin, at which place he practiced until 1851. During the cholera epidemic in Tiffin he was the only physician who remained to minister to the sorely stricken people. He abandoned a successful and lucrative practice to obey what he deemed an imperative duty, when his father called him to return to Williamsport to care for his parents in their declining days. It was with a similar sense of duty that, at the call for surgeons after the bloody battle of Bull Run, he arose from a sick bed, went to Washington, and labored in the hospitals until the worst was over and an adequate hospital service had been created, returning in shattered health, never again to be a really well man. He succeeded his father as elder and Sunday school superintendent in what was then the only Presbyterian church in Williamsport. His wife was Elizabeth Sharon McMeens, a daughter of Colonel John McMeens. Colonel McMeens was commander of the First Brigade, Tenth Division, Pennsylvania Militia, in 1812; state representative, 1814-18; state senator, 1819-23; and voted for the manumission of slaves in Pennsylvania; he was one of the commissioners appointed to superintend the disbursement of the money appropriated to improve navigation on the Susquehanna river from Columbia to its mouth, and, deciding the effort futile, with a strong sense of integrity, difficult to appreciate in the present day, returned the money to the public treasury. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Hepburn was William McMeens, a native of South Carolina. He was an ensign (third lieutenant) in the command of General Boupuet during the French and Indian war, 1763, and was a captain in the Revolutionary war. He was one of the heads of the famous Fair Play Association whose edicts against injustice and wrong in property rights in the West Branch Valley of Pennsylvania, by wealthy land-grabbers, and whose physical support of their decisions the Supreme Court of the state afterwards approved and endorsed.

Robert Hopewell Hepburn, son of Andrew and Elizabeth Sharon (McMeens) Hepburn, was born in Tiffin, Ohio, July 2, 1850. He began his education in private schools in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and was a student at Princeton College, class of 1871. He was well up in scholarship, and belonged to the Whig Literary Society and Zeta Psi (Greek letter) fraternity. He also excelled in athletics, and was noted for daring. As a boy of nineteen he swam his horse under saddle across Lycoming creek, above Williamsport, during a flood, rather than take a long ride to reach a bridge. While at college he played on the football team and base ball nine; for several years he played on the Williamsport nine, pulled in the racing crews of the four and eight-oared shells of the Undine Boat Club of Philadelphia, and took part in all the athletic diversions of the Fencing and Sparring Club of the same city. From 1875 to 1883 he was abroad, engaged in engineering and construction work. His first trip was by way of the Isthmus of Panama, Central America and California to Japan and the east. In 1877 he went to Europe and thence to South America, traveling over the entire continent and returning over the Isthmus of Panama to New York. In 1878 he took the two tug boats "Brazil" and "Juno" from Philadelphia to Para, Brazil, via the islands of St. Thomas and Barbados, three thousand miles of ocean navigation. This was the first successful effort to sail such craft over such an expanse of ocean, and was at the outset pronounced reckless and hopeless even by many sailors. He operated these tugs for months in the dangerous and treacherous navigation of the Madeira river, when pilots, native steamboatmen and people along the banks declared that it was impossible to move vessels drawing more than four and one-half feet of water, while the draft of the audacious young American's boats was nine and one-half and eight feet respectively. Mr. Hepburn was in charge of the surveys on the Madeira and upper rivers and the transportation of materials and supplies from Para, Brazil, in tows by his tug boats, enduring great hardships and the dangers incident to a fever and reptile infested region, but his superb physical strength, powers of endurance and ambition were equipment which enabled him to surmount every obstacle and pass through every experience unscathed. After these experiences, in connection with what is officially known as the Collins Expedition, he again visited Europe, and in 1883 located in Avondale, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hepburn, besides his engineering accomplishments, had an excellent prior business experience. He had served as teller in the Williamsport National Bank, and as cashier in a broker's office in New York city. He now took charge of the operating business of what afterward became famous as the Avondale Marble Company quarries, and in the capacity of general manager he conceived, explored, opened up and developed the valuable fifty-foot vein of white marble underlying this property, and won thirteen law-suits (losing none) against conspirators in the Avondale Marble Company litigation. He subsequently came to his present position of president of the corporation, whose most valuable properties were of his own creation. He is also a director in the Lycoming Mining Company, and he is officially interested in various other enterprises.

Mr. Hepburn has long been actively connected with the military establishment of the state. He was for several years an officer in the National Guard, and served as lieutenant of Company I, Fourth Regiment, from the Lehigh Valley, during the riots of 1877, immediately after his return from South America. He was at Catauqua when the troubles broke out, and, the trains having stopped running, he was unable to reach his own regiment, the Twelfth, and performed duty with the Fourth, which received high praise from Governor Hartranft for its gallantry in the fight in "the cut" at Reading, and for its conduct at Allentown and its services in guarding the arsenal at Harrisburg. Mr. Hepburn is a valuable member of the Franklin Institute of the State of Pennsylvania and of the Pennsylvania Historical Society. He has attained high rank in the Masonic fraternity, having passed all the stations in lodge, chapter and commandery, and received the thirty second degree of the Scottish Rite. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and in politics a Republican.

Mr. Hepburn was married, October 3, 1877, at Catauqua, Pennsylvania, to Miss Elizabeth Hunt, and of this union were born the following children: 1. Gwenllian, born in Catauqua, September 19, 1878, died February 1, 1898; 2. Andrew Hopewell, born at Catauqua, March 6, 1880, who is now a senior, studying architecture, in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston; 3. George Hunt, born in Philadelphia, September 17, 1881, who is now assistant manager of a silver and lead mine near Bajan, state of Coahuila, Mexico; 4. Joshua Hunt, born in Avondale, August 28, 1889.

Mrs. Hepburn received a liberal education in private schools in New England and Philadelphia. Her parents were Joshua and Gwenllian (Thomas) Hunt. The "old Hunt mansion" at Downingtown, Pennsylvania, was the inheritance of Samuel Hunt, her paternal great-grandfather. Joshua Hunt was a very prominent ironmaster, superintendent of the Crane Iron Company, and largely interested in coal and mineral operations in the Lehigh Valley, and was a wealthy and influential citizen. He was captain of a company of one hundred day emergency men during the Civil war. He was an elder in the Presbyterian church of Catasauqua. David Thomas, maternal grandfather of Mrs. Hepburn, was in his day the most prominent and successful ironmaster in the United States. He came from Wales to experiment with the use of anthracite coal in the production of pig iron, after many had failed, and his success in face of what appeared to be insuperable obstacles reads as a romance of the Arabian Knights description. He was affectionately called "Father Thomas," and was known as "the father of the iron interests of Pennsylvania." He was the first elder of the First Presbyterian church built in Catasauqua, and he was to a very considerable extent its donor.

PHILIP C. PUSEY, one of the representative farmers and respected citizens of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a native of this township, his birth having occurred there September 7, 1870, he being a son of Jesse D. and Hannah D. Pusey, and grandson of Solomon and Sarah Pusey, the latter two named having been born and reared in the same township, where they resided during their entire lifetime.

Jesse D. Pusey, father of Philip C. Pusey, was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, July 6, 1830, and enjoyed the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of the neighborhood and at Swaynes Academy, in London Grove township, Chester county. After completing his studies he returned to the home farm, where until recently, when he took up his residence with his son, Philip C., he was engaged in the cultivation and improvement of the land, in the management of which he displayed a thorough knowledge of all the details of the work. He has always taken a deep interest in political questions, casts his vote with the Republican party, and has aided in the success of its measures to the best of his ability. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

In 1859 Mr. Pusey married Hannah D. Yeatman, a daughter of Marshall and Mary Dixon Yeatman, of Kennett township, Chester county. Their children were: Mary S., born in 1860, wife of Oscar Passmore, and mother of one child; Solomon J., born in 1862, married Ella Good, and two children have been born to them; Marshall Y., born in 1864, married S. Emma Coates; they have three children; Sarah J., born in 1866, now the widow of Edwin Livezey; they were the parents of one child; George W., born in 1868, married Florence Sharpless, and one child has been born to them; Philip C., born in 1870; Edgar L., born in 1872, died in childhood; Morris, born in 1874, also died in childhood; Elbert N., born in 1877, unmarried, and Anna L. Pusey, born in 1880, unmarried. Mrs. Pusey, mother of these children, died in 1895.

Philip C. Pusey, sixth child in order of birth born to Jesse D. and Hannah D. Pusey, was a pupil at the West Chester State Normal School, and after leaving that institution he devoted his energies to the work upon the old homestead, where he has resided ever since. In addition to general farming, Mr. Pusey is engaged in dairying, keeping for this purpose thirty head of fine select cows. The farm is one of the most productive in this section of the state, and the neat and thrifty appearance of the place indicates that it is under the personal supervision of one who is accustomed to the routine labor of agriculture. He is a Republican in politics, an active member of the Patrons of Husbandry, and holds a birthright membership in the Society of Friends.

In 1896 was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Pusey and Hannah H. Pusey, who was born in 1873, a daughter of Henry and Amy (Hoopes) Pusey, the former named having been an enterprising agriculturist of West Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania, but now a resident of Avon, and a dealer in implements. Their children are: Amy H., born in 1898, and Jesse D. Pusey, Jr., born in 1902.

W. HARRY LE FEVRE, a prosperous farmer of London Grove township, Chester county, was born in 1859, in Philadelphia, a son of the late Peter Le Fevre, a merchant of that city. The son received his education at the Friends' School, on the corner of Fifteenth and Race streets, Philadelphia, and on reaching manhood chose for his business in life, the calling of an agriculturist. In order to pursue this, he took up his abode on a farm in London Grove, which was then the property of his father. Here Mr.

Le Fevre has since resided, devoting himself to the duties of his chosen calling. He is a member of the Masonic order, and in politics a Republican. He attends the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Le Fevre married, in 1882, Gulielma Penn, daughter of Thomas and Mary A. (Kelso) Charlton, the former holding the office of county commissioner at one time. Mr. and Mrs. Le Fevre are the parents of the following children: Thomas C., Catherine M., George L., William H., deceased, Elmer P., also deceased, Elizabeth C. and Frederic C. Le Fevre. All these children, including those who have attained maturity and are unmarried, are still living at home.

GEORGE MOORE, a leading farmer and citizen of London Grove township, Chester county, is a grandson of George Moore, who was born in that part of Philadelphia county now known as The Neck. He was a farmer, and among his children was William, who was born in 1815, at The Neck, and received his education in private schools. He began his life as a farmer on the homestead, and then moved to Darby township, Delaware county, and later to Marple township, in both of which places he engaged in farming. He finally took up his abode in London Grove township, where he passed the remainder of his life in retirement. He was a Republican in politics and a man who enjoyed the confidence of his neighbors, being intrusted with the office of school director. He married Harriet Taylor, who was born in 1825, in Philadelphia, and they were the parents of the following children: Maria, who married Frederick Ramm, and both are now deceased; Mary, who became the wife of Charles Scott, and has two children; Hannah, who married Joseph Jenkins, and is the mother of one child; George, mentioned at length hereinafter; William; and Martha, both of whom died in infancy. The death of Mr. Moore took place in 1901, and his widow is still living.

George Moore, son of William and Harriet (Taylor) Moore, was born in 1848, at The Neck, Philadelphia county, and at an early age moved with his father to Paschallville and later to Darby, Delaware county, where he received his education. After assisting his father for a time in the care and management of the homestead, he served with the 100-day men in Company C, One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, then went to New Haven, Connecticut, where he learned the trade of a machinist. At the end of four years he returned to Darby, where he remained for a time, then resided in Haverford, Delaware county, until 1895, when he removed to his present home in London Grove township. He conducts in the most skillful and improved manner a flourishing farm, to which is attached a dairy of fifty cows. In politics he is an Independent Republican, and, by filling in the most efficient manner the office of school director, manifests the same interest in the cause of education which characterized his father, who so ably discharged the duties of that position. He is a member of the Masonic order at Ardmore, Pennsylvania, Cassia Lodge, No. 273, and also of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He and his family attend the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Moore married, in 1871, Hannah F., born in 1849, daughter of Charles and Rachel Singles, the former a pump manufacturer of Darby. Mrs. Singles died in 1884, and the death of her husband occurred in 1899. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Moore: Clarence, born in 1872, married Maud Buchanan, and has two children; George, Jr., born in 1873, married May Brotherson; William, born in 1875, married Bertha Jeffries, and is the father of one child; Charles, born in 1877, unmarried; Daisy, born in 1880, married William Davis; they have one child; Parker, born in 1882; Aubrey, born in 1884; Herbert, born in 1887; Helen, born in 1890; and J. Wesley, born in 1892. Of these five, the eldest, who has attained man's estate, is still a bachelor, and of the others, two are entering upon the independent duties of life, while the younger ones are still in the school-room.

BENJAMIN LADD WOOD, now retired from the active pursuits of a business career and in the full enjoyment of the ease and comfort which should always follow years of ceaseless toil and activity, belongs to that class of energetic and industrious men who have left their impress on the industrial history of their times. He was born in Steelville, West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 8, 1834, a son of Thomas and Massey Wood.

Thomas Wood, father of Benjamin L. Wood, was born about the year 1808, and was the son of John Wood, who in turn was supposed to be a son of Thomas Wood. Thomas Wood (father) was reared and educated in his native township, and by his own ability and indomitable industry made for himself a successful career and accumulated a competence for his declining years. He was the original slipper of the Chester White pigs, delivering them to all parts of the country. He was assisted by his son, Benjamin L. Wood. He was twice married, his first wife having been Massey Lamborn, to whom were born the following named children: Dr. Eliza Jane, born in 1832, became the wife of Henry Armitage, a prominent resident of Damascus, Ohio; Benjamin Ladd, born in 1834, and Amos, who died in childhood. After the decease of his first wife, Mr. Wood married Sarah Coates, and their children were: 1. Lydia, wife of Jesse H. Brinton and mother of four children, namely: Charles M., Laura, Almatina C., and Estelle Brinton. 2. Ellis P., married Rebecca W. Martin, and their children are: Walter T., born in 1872, and Mary E., born in 1876; 3. Eleanor, deceased; 4. Philena C., wife of David W. Jackson, and they are the parents of two children: Lindley C. and Elizabeth Jackson. 5. Morris T., married Margaret Weldon, and their children are: Leila M. and Elizabeth H. Wood.

Benjamin L. Wood, eldest son of Thomas and Massey Wood, attended the common schools of the neighborhood, where he acquired a practical education, which prepared him for the activities of life. He was a farmer by occupation, conducting his operations on an extensive scale, and by careful management and giving personal attention to every detail was enabled to derive a goodly income from his broad acres. His first location after starting on his own account was a farm of one hundred and ten acres, which was located in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and which he purchased from Jacob Good, Esquire. Here he erected a complete set of buildings and operated same until 1865, when he removed to Doe Run. He was a resident of that town until the spring of 1883, when he removed to Cedar county, Iowa, and from that year until 1899 was engaged in agricultural pursuits. He then returned to Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in 1902 erected a fine modern residence in Avondale, where he is now residing. He is a member of London Grove Grange, No. 63.

Mr. Wood has been married three times. His first wife, Annie C. (Wilson) Wood, bore him one child, Gertrude M. Wood; his second wife, Louisa M. (Fawcett) Wood, a native of Ohio, bore him two children, Anna F. and Mabel S. Wood; his third wife was Mary Martin, a daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Buffington) Martin. The latter was born June 22, 1813, a daughter of Joseph and Amy (Beaumont) Buffington, the former named having been born August 19, 1783, a son of Joseph, born June 21, 1759, and Hannah (Fling) Buffington, whose marriage occurred August 20, 1781; the death of Joseph Buffington occurred in July, 1841. The following named children were born to Joseph and Amy (Beaumont) Buffington: Hannah F., born June 22, 1813; Elizabeth Gilpin, born January 19, 1815; Sarah T., born April 3, 1817; Joseph M., born November 6, 1818; Ruth Anna, born July 24, 1820, and Ann M., born July 31, 1822.

Mr. Wood is a birthright member of the Society of Friends, in which organization he has always taken a deep and abiding interest.

SAMUEL F. SPENCER, a son of Davis and Sarah F. Spencer, was born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 19, 1863, and is now successfully engaged in farming pursuits in London Grove township, where he sustains a high reputation for reliability and enterprise.

His parents removed to London Grove township during the early years of his life and therefore his education was obtained in the public schools of that township. His first business experience was gained on the old homestead farm and he continued his operations there until 1890, when he purchased a seventy-six-acre farm in London Grove township which was formerly the property of Palmer Good. His land is improved and highly cultivated, yields a goodly profit for the labor bestowed upon it, and everything about the premises indicate the watchful care and supervision of the owner. He conducts general farming and his products, being of a high grade, find a ready sale in the nearby markets. Mr. Spencer is a Republican in politics, and takes an active and intelligent interest in all questions that effect the welfare of his community, state and nation.

Mr. Spencer was united in marriage, January 23, 1890, to Mary Walton, born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 13, 1866, a daughter of Joel N. and Lydia (Yetman) Walton. Three children were the issue of this union—Grace L., born July 3, 1891; Norman D., born May 23, 1892; and Sarah Ann, born July 18, 1893. Mr. Spencer and his family hold membership in the Society of Friends, and are regular attendants at their meetings.

RICHARD BELL CHAMBERS, who has for many years held a well recognized position among the respected citizens of Chester county, is descended from Joshua and Rebecca (Dickerson) Chambers, who were the parents of the following children: Isaac, John, Lee, David, mentioned hereinafter, Reuben, Patience and Rebecca.

David Chambers, son of Joshua and Rebecca (Dickerson) Chambers, married Phoebe Ann Bell, who was born in 1804, and their children were: 1. Richard Bell, mentioned at length hereinafter; 2. Lydia Ann, born in 1834; 3. Mary Elizabeth, who married John W. Bernard, had two children, Emma and Virginia, and is now deceased; 4. Joseph M., who married Isabel Warren, was the father of three children, and is now deceased; 5. Brinton Henderson, who born September 9, 1842, in New Garden township, on the old homestead. He married Sarah O., born January 22, 1852, daughter of John and Margaret O. Mitchell, of Manhasset, Long Island; 6. Melissa R., who was born in 1848, married Abram Bell, of Long Island, and they had the following children: William; Brinton, who married Helen Gillies; Mary Christy; Thomas Christy; and Edgar Thompson Bell.

Richard Bell Chambers, son of David and Phoebe Ann (Bell) Chambers, was born March 13, 1832, in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He has all his life followed agricultural and mercantile pursuits, but has now retired from active business. His neighbors, by several times electing him to fill various township offices, have borne ample witness to the respect and confidence with which his sterling traits of character have inspired them. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Chambers married Susan W., born June 6, 1839, daughter of John and Lydia Miller, of New Garden township, the former a son of John and Mary Miller. The Miller farm at one time included the greater part of New Garden township. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers have had the following children: 1. R. Lawrence, who married Sarah Holingsworth, and has had seven children; 2. Eva L., who married Chandler B. Walton, and to them the following children were born: Philip C., born April 20, 1884, now deceased; Chalkley J., born May 2, 1885, also deceased; Richard C., born August 20, 1886; Howell C., born February 6, 1890, now deceased; and Chandler B., born September 4, 1892. Mr. Walton died March 3, 1893. 3. Mary Phoebe, who became the wife of Crosby Black, ex-mayor of Chester, Pennsylvania, and had four children, Susan Morton, J. Frank, Margery and Crosby M. 4. Clara Rebecca, who married Arthur T. Park, of West Chester, Pennsylvania, and had two children, Arthur T., Jr., and William E. 5. Ethel Melissa, who is the wife of Harry B. McVaugh, of Hockessin, Delaware, and has one child, Harry. 6. Lillie Bell, who died in infancy.

EDWIN PUSEY. The Pusey family who are actively associated with the industrial, political and social affairs of the borough of Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, claim relationship with Caleb and Ann Pusey, who were numbered among the early settlers of the state of Pennsylvania, taking up their residence there about the year 1682. He was a last-maker by trade, and was largely instrumental in the establishment and management of several mills which were located at what was then known as "The Chester Mills." He served his township in the capacity of officer, juror, sheriff, justice of the county court, a member of the provincial assembly and the executive council, and was one of the prominent factors in the laying out of roads and negotiating with the Indians. He was an adherent of the true Quaker doctrine, frequently appearing in the ministry, and his pen was often employed in defence of the tenets of his sect. About the year 1717, Caleb Pusey and his family removed to Marlborough, where his death occurred December 25, 1726 or 1727; his wife died December 5, 1725 or 1726. They left no sons to perpetuate the name.

The progenitor of the branch of the family to which Edwin Pusey belongs was John Pusey, supposed to have been a brother of Caleb Pusey, who was a resident of London, England; he purchased land in Pennsylvania, but never came over to reside on it. William and Caleb Pusey, sons of John and Frances Pusey, came to this country upon attaining young manhood and resided with Caleb Pusey at Chester, and from these two are descended all the members of that name who reside in that section of the state.

Joseph Pusey, father of Edwin Pusey, was born in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a son of Jesse and Elizabeth Pusey. He was reared to manhood in his native county, and received a good common school education which qualified him for the duties of an active business career. He married Elizabeth Barnard, and their children were: 1. Anna Mary, born in 1840, became the wife of Mahlon G. Brosius and six children have been born to them, namely: Willis, died in early life; Elizabeth; Charles; Howard; Emma L., wife of Thomas L. Passmore, and Edwin Brosius; 2. Edwin, subject of sketch; 3. Henry B., born in 1843, married for his first wife Amy Hoopes and they were the parents of four children; after her death he married Annie T. Taylor; 4. Abigail B., born in 1845, wife of Harris Passmore, and their two children are: Benjamin and Pusey Passmore; 5. Howard J., born in 1848; 6. Philena S., born in 1851.

Edwin Pusey, eldest son of Joseph and Elizabeth Pusey, was born February 5, 1841, in the township of West Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a student in the common schools of the neighborhood, and from the completion of his studies up to a few years previously, when he retired from the active duties of business life, his energies were devoted to farming, stock raising and dairying, in which lines of industry he met with a large degree of prosperity. Mr. Pusey has always enjoyed the respect of his fellow townsmen, and bears the enviable reputation of being a public-spirited and useful citizen, honest and true in all relations of life.

On March 25, 1869, Mr. Pusey married Elizabeth Hoopes, who was born December 15, 1841, a daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Hicks) Hoopes. Their children are: 1. William J., born April 6, 1870; 2. Amy J., born November 15, 1871, became the wife of Edwin Buffington, October 21, 1897, and their children are: E. Pusey, born December 12, 1899, and Elizabeth F. Buffington, born December 11, 1901; 3. Samuel H., born October 3, 1873, married Mary Wood, December 27, 1900; 4. Sue E., born November 11, 1877; 5. Helen, born September 13, 1880; 6. Marion B., born April 24, 1882. Mr. Pusey is a member of the Society of Friends, taking a keen and active interest in its religious and business transactions.

J. HOWARD BROSIUS, now serving in the capacity of cashier of the National Bank of Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a birthright member of the Society of Friends, was born in the township of West Marlborough, Chester county, December 14, 1875, a son of Mahlon G. and Anna Brosius.

Henry Brosius, the pioneer ancestor of the family, accompanied his parents, when quite a small boy, to the United States from Germany, but after residing for a short period of time in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, his parents succumbed to the epidemic of yellow fever which prevailed in the city at that time. Henry Brosius married Mary Roberts, a daughter of Issac Roberts, a prominent resident of Bucks county. In 1793 they settled in the vicinity of Bucks county, but in 1805 removed to West Fallowfield where he purchased a large tract of land. Their children were: Issac, born in 1794; Benjamin; Mahlon; William, born in 1798; Harper; Mary Ann; Henry; Joseph; Abner; Nathan L.; Sarah, born in 1808; Charles A.; Agnes; Amos, and Ruth Ann Brosius.

Mahlon Brosius, third son of Henry and Mary Brosius, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and acquired a practical education in the common schools. Later in life he was a resident of Londonderry, and subsequently removed to Upper Oxford where he was a prominent and active citizen. He married August 17, 1820, Mary Kent and they were the parents of ten children, namely: Clarkson, Daniel K., Edwin; Esther Ann, John Conby, Joseph H., Ann Elizabeth, Lucretia M., Mary Jane, and Mahlon G. Brosius.

Mahlon G. Brosius, youngest son of Mahlon and Mary Brosius, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1838. He obtained a common school education, and during his entire career has been recognized as a progressive and honorable business man. He married Anna Pusey, and they reared a family of six children: 1. Elizabeth, born in 1867; 2. Charles, born in 1870, married Emma Ramsay and their children were: Sarah, born in 1896; Mahlon, born in 1898; Marriott, born in 1901, died in infancy; 3. Emma, born in 1872, wife of Thomas Passmore; 4. J. Howard, born in 1875; 5. Willis, born in 1880, now deceased; 6. Edwin Brosius, born in 1884.

J. Howard Brosius, second son of Mahlon G. and Anna Brosius, was born in West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 14, 1875. He obtained his literary education at the public schools of the vicinity, and since the completion of his studies has devoted his energies to the marking out of a successful business career. He is now the popular and efficient cashier of the National Bank of Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and much of the success and prosperity of this institution is due to the ability and faithfulness of Mr. Brosius.

On June 20, 1901, Mr. Brosius married Alice Brinton, who was born August 5, 1875, a daughter of William P. and Mary (Cooper) Brinton, of Christiana. They are the parents of two children, William Brosius, born May 29, 1902, and Willis P. Brosius, born October 9, 1903.

J. MORRIS WATSON, now deceased, for many years one of the most enterprising, successful and useful citizens of Avondale, where he served in the capacity of councilman from its incorporation as a borough up to the time of his death, was born December 14, 1837, in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a son of James and Rebecca Watson, and grandson of John Watson.

James Watson, father of J. Morris Watson, was born February 22, 1816, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and was universally regarded as one of the best, most public-spirited and useful citizens of the community in which he resided. On February 9, 1837, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Watson and Rebecca James, and the following named children were born to them: J. Morris, born December 14, 1837; Mary Ann, born July 25, 1839; Alice Jackson, born August 5, 1842; James B., born April 25, 1848, and Herbert K., born June 7, 1850.

J. Morris Watson acquired a practical education at the public schools of his native township, and after completing his studies turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. Later in life he abandoned this occupation and engaged in the meat business, gaining a large and lucrative patronage by his uniform courtesy and prompt attention to the wishes of his customers, and this line of industry he continued up to the time of his death. He took an active interest in the political affairs of the community, and at the incorporation of the borough of Avondale was chosen to serve as councilman, holding that office up to the time of his decease.

Mr. Watson was united in marriage to Lydia Phillips, who was born in London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1837, a daughter of Thomas and Edith (Chandler) Phillips, and a descendant of a Scotch-Irish ancestry. Their children are: Mary Edith, born November 30, 1862, and Wilmer Phillips, born July 23, 1868, married Eva West, a daughter of Dr. Joseph and Ella West, of Kemblesville. They have one child, Hazel Lydia Watson, born September 9, 1898. Mr. Watson died June 29, 1900, survived by his widow and children, the former named acting in the capacity of school director, and with the assistance of her son, Wilmer P. Watson, continues the business which was established by her late husband. She is a consistent member of the Society of Friends.

Thomas Phillips, father of Mrs. Watson, was born December 27, 1801, a son of John and Mary Phillips, and by his marriage to Edith Chandler the following named children were born: Phoebe, born November 15, 1820; John, born August 26, 1822, died July 14, 1890; Hannah, born September 3, 1825, died in infancy; Mary, born September 4, 1828, died April 3, 1881; Chandler, born March 1, 1831, died in 1889; Anna, born July 16, 1833; Margaret, born May 16, 1835; Lydia, born September 29, 1837, and T. Chalkley, born March 26, 1840.

CALEB PUGH, who is one of the well-to-do farmers of West Bradford township, is a member of an old Quaker family that has been identified for many generations with the history of Chester county. Only those who are well informed in the history of Pennsylvania know how much it has been indebted to the people of this faith who settled the state in large numbers at an early period and afterward were influential in controlling its domestic policy. The Quakers were always found on the side of peace, sobriety, education and morality in its broadest sense, and the country never had better citizens than the followers of Penn and their descendants. An examination of the records will show that the Pugh family had representatives in Chester county at an early period in the eighteenth century. Joshua Pugh, who was born in the county in 1780, married Mary, daughter of a farmer named John Churchman, and by her reared a large family of children. Sarah, married John McBride, and became the mother of five children; Jacob, married Mary J. Corbett, and had six children; Chandler, remained single as far as known; Jane, deceased; Hannah, married Jesse Woodward, by whom she had seven children; Merab, deceased; Franklin, died in infancy; Joshua, married Mary J. Conner, who bore him six children; Mary, became the wife of Capt. Frank Guss, and they had nine children.

Caleb Pugh, who completes the number of the children above enumerated, was born near Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1825, and it will be seen by this date that he is one of the oldest residents. His education was obtained in the schools of Lancaster county, and in early life he learned the trade of carpentering, which furnished him occupation and a livelihood for a number of years. Eventually, however, he became the owner of land in West Bradford township, and has devoted the latter years of his life to farming. He is a quiet, unobtrusive man who attends strictly to his own business, is regardful of the rights of others and fulfills conscientiously every obligation which enters into the duty of a good citizen. He has been connected with the Republican party since its first formation as a result of the slavery agitation, though never a seeker after political honors, his only office being that of supervisor of West Bradford township, which he held for fourteen years. He has long been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and has passed through all the chairs of that honored fraternity.

Mr. Pugh was united in marriage with Martha Ann, daughter of Tryon Rodeback, a contractor at Romansville, and has five children. Their names are Mary, Maria, Tryon, who married Rachel Rodeback; Frank, who married Annie Guthrie and has three children; and Elmer, who remained single. Mr. Pugh's religious belief, like those of his ancestry for generations, is summed up in the simple creed of the Quakers, which embodies the Golden Rule as the prime obligation for the guidance of men and inculcates the duty of doing justice, practicing virtue and abstaining from violence in all its forms.

THOMAS C. TOWNSEND is of English Quaker ancestry, and is connected through the different branches and generations of the Townsend family with the early settlers of that name in the state of Pennsylvania, among the first of whom was the Richard Townsend, who came over from England in the ship "Welcome," and was one of those concerned in the erection of the first mill at Chester, where he settled in the seventeenth century. The descendants of Richard were Joseph, David, John, William and Joseph. William Townsend, the great-grandfather of Thomas C., was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, married Elizabeth Matson, and both their deaths occurred in Upper Oxford. William Townsend, the grandfather of Thomas

Caleb Ruff

C., was born in 1777, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and died in 1839. Thomas Fell, an early ancestor of his paternal grandmother Letitia Fell, was among the number of settlers and inhabitants of Pennsylvania who signed "The Petition of the People called Quakers," for a settlement of the border difficulties in 1732, between Maryland and the "Province of Pennsylvania," and which was addressed to "George the Second, King of Great Britain." Among the two hundred and one signers of this "Petition," the names of Joseph Sharpless, and Joseph Townsend also appear. Through intermarriages, the Townsend family is connected with the old Pennsylvania families of Sharpless, Smedley and Lockwood.

Among the children born to William and Letitia (Fell) Townsend was Thomas, the father of Thomas C. He was born in December, 1804, in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was educated in the common schools of the county and later removed to Penn township, Chester county, where he became a farmer, and remained until his decease, December 15, 1889. He was a Republican, and held the local office of school director in the township. He married Amy A. Mackey, daughter of David Mackey, a farmer of Penn township, and they were the parents of six children: Sarah W., born in 1845, married Joseph G. Moore, had issue, ten children, died in 1900; John W., born 1849, married Grace Doran, and died in 1897; Letitia, born 1850, unmarried; William F., born 1857, died 1860; Frank, born 1862, died 1885, and Thomas C., born May 5, 1852, in Penn township.

Mr. T. C. Townsend has been a resident of London Grove and identified with the interests of the township since 1894, when he removed from Centre county, Pennsylvania, where he had been engaged in the milling business which he had previously conducted at Phoenixville, Chester county. Mr. Townsend was educated at the common schools and at Wyers Academy, West Chester. After he gave up the milling business and came to London Grove to reside, he turned his attention to farming, a vocation in which he is still engaged, and for several years he attended the Philadelphia market in connection with this pursuit. He is connected with the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Junior Order of American Mechanics. He is also active in local politics, and is a member of the West Grove Republican Club.

In 1875, Mr. Townsend married Elizabeth S. Dance (born in 1849), a daughter of William S. and Hannah (Strickland) Dance, of Lower Oxford, Chester county. They are the parents of four children, the fifth, Lillian, who was born in 1890, having died at the age of ten years, in 1900. The remaining children are: Florence

L., born in 1876, and married in 1900, to Morton Ivison; William C., born in 1878, and who is unmarried; and Francis R., born in 1888. Mrs. Townsend is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and her daughter, Florence L., is a member of the United Presbyterian church.

SAMUEL MORRIS JONES, extensively engaged in farming interests in the township of London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, also acting in the capacity of treasurer of the Conard & Jones Company since its organization in 1897, was born on the old homestead in Germantown, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1857, a son of Charles and Ann (Megargee) Jones.

Charles Jones, father of S. Morris Jones, was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, in 1817. He acquired his early educational advantages at the Westtown school, and this was supplemented by attendance at Haverford College where he completed a most thorough collegiate course. After serving a short period of time as teacher at Olney, Philadelphia county, he established a private school at Germantown which he conducted successfully for three years, and then accepted the principalship of the Friends Select School of Philadelphia, which responsible position he acceptably filled for many years. He then for a time devoted his attention to the manufacture of gold pens in the city of Philadelphia, but later engaged in a mercantile trade—that of stoves, heaters and furnaces—his store being located near the corner of Second and Vine streets, then the center of trade in Philadelphia. He strictly adhered to legitimate business methods and therefore well merited the prosperity which attended his enterprise. Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Ann Megargee, a daughter of Thomas Megargee, of Germantown, Pennsylvania, and the following named children were born to them: Hannah M., unmarried; John Barclay, who married Helen Hopkins, and they are the parents of two children; Samuel Morris, mentioned hereinafter; Edward M., unmarried; Mary Anna, unmarried; and Jane S., unmarried. The family reside in one of the handsome and modern houses in Germantown, a suburb of the city of Philadelphia. The father of these children died May 30, 1902, and his wife passed away in 1895, after a long life of usefulness and fidelity to duty.

S. Morris Jones, second son of Charles and Ann Jones, attended the Germantown Friends School and later was a student at the Westtown Boarding School, where he completed his studies in 1873. His first business experience was gained in the capacity of bookkeeper in the city of Philadelphia, and after resigning from this position he learned a trade. He removed to Colora, Maryland, where he followed agricultural pursuits up to the year 1882, when he changed his place of residence to London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has resided ever since. In connection with farming he is the owner of an extensive creamery, which is fully equipped with all modern machinery and appliances for the successful operation of this particular branch of industry. Upon the formation of The Conard & Jones Company, floral nurserymen, Mr. Jones was elected treasurer and is still serving in that capacity. The company was established for the purpose of growing roses and flowering plants, also bulbs and flower seeds, and they are now the most extensive growers of cannas in the United States, each year producing some new varieties. The business is conducted largely through the mail, orders being shipped to points as far as Australia, New Zealand, Japan, China, India and in fact covering the entire globe. Their plant covers thirty-five acres of ground, two of which are under glass, and by issuing annually a large illustrated catalogue which is distributed throughout the United States and various foreign countries, they keep in touch with the public and their patrons in all parts of the globe. Mr. Jones has been for years an active advocate of good roads, and has used every effort in that direction to bring about the desired result especially through the election of men to office who will carry out those principles. He is an Independent in politics, and holds a birthright membership in the Orthodox Society of Friends.

In 1880 was celebrated the marriage of S. Morris Jones and Jane C. Balderston, who was a daughter of Lloyd and Catherine (Canaby) Balderston, of Colora, Cecil county, Maryland. Their children are: Lloyd B., a member of the class of 1904 at Cornell University, where he is pursuing a course of mechanical engineering; Catherine B., a student at Wellesley College; Charles Barclay, a student at Westtown Boarding School; Marion H., a student at Westtown Boarding School, and Edward Morris, attending Friends Preparatory School at West Grove. The family are well and favorably known in the community where they have resided for almost a quarter of a century, and take an active part in all its social interests.

REBECCA WICKERSHAM. The Wickersham family, many members of which have been prominently and actively associated with the various interests of Chester county, Pennsylvania, for several generations, claim as their pioneer ancestor Thomas Wickersham, a native of Bolney, Sussex, England, who came to Pennsylvania in 1700, bringing a certificate from the Monthly Meeting held at Horsham, Sussex county, England, September 11, 1700.

Isaac Wickersham, grandfather of Rebecca Wickersham, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in the common schools of that vicinity he acquired a practical education. He engaged in agricultural pursuits on the old homestead throughout his entire active career, and during that time made improvements on the farm and additions to the buildings. He was united in marriage to Phebe Michener, and on the old homestead they reared a family of children to live lives of honesty and usefulness.

William Wickersham, father of Rebecca Wickersham, was born on the old homestead in New Garden township, Chester county, December 3, 1830. After completing a common school education he removed to Upper Oxford and devoted his attention to farming there until 1883, when he located in London Grove township, and continued the same line of industry. The farm was known as the "Moore Place" and consists of fifty-four acres of well tilled land which is devoted to general farming. Mr. Wickersham is highly esteemed in the community for his integrity, public spirit, and many estimable qualities which he displays in his daily life and conversation. In politics he adheres to the principles of the Prohibition party, and in religion he conforms to the tenets of the Society of Friends. On February 25, 1864, Mr. Wickersham married Rachel Moore, who was born in Sadsbury, Pennsylvania, August 7, 1841, a daughter of Walker and Anna (Smedley) Moore, the former named being a son of John and Mary (Walker) Moore, of Sadsbury, Lancaster county, where his birth occurred January 14, 1810; he died at Christiana, September 29, 1890. His wife, Anna (Smedley) Moore, was born in Little Britain, Lancaster county, September 4, 1818, and died January 13, 1876; she was a daughter of Joseph and Rachel (Ballance) Smedley.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wickersham were: 1. Isaac Walker, born August 10, 1865, in Upper Oxford township, was educated in the public schools, and since completing his studies has assisted his father with the work of the farm. On December 15, 1899 he married Martha K. Cope, who was born in East Bradford, February 5, 1875, a daughter of Nathan and E. Elva (Kaler) Cope, and their children are: Howard W., born February 13, 1900, and W. Clifford, born March 31, 1902. 2. John M., born August 12, 1867, married at Oxford, Pennsylvania, July 17, 1889, Eva L. Galloway, born in Chester, Pennsylvania, July 4, 1868, a daughter of William T. and Sarah S. (Miller) Galloway, of Oxford; their children are: John Horace, born October 13, 1890, and William Q. Le Roy, born June 3, 1897. 3. Joseph A., born December 5, 1868, married at Chesterville, Chester county, December 8, 1892, Emma L. Cullen, born August 7, 1869, a daughter of David and Mary E. (Steel) Cullen, of Cecil county, Maryland; they have one child, Leon M., born at West Chester, September 26, 1893. 4. Phebe A., born May 30, 1871, died December 15, 1873. 5. Mary A., born August 26, 1872, engaged as a teacher in Philadelphia. 6. Rachel C., born March 22, 1875, engaged in teaching in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. 7. Hanna A., born October 27, 1877, married at Old West Grove Friends' Meeting House, October 16, 1902, John W. Passmore of Chatham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, son of Lewis and Ellen (Cope) Passmore. 8. Rebecca E., born June 28, 1880, on the old homestead in Upper Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in the schools of London Grove township and Westtown Boarding School, she received a good business education.

Miss Rebecca E. Wickersham is dignified in bearing, refined in manner, intelligent and bright in conversation, and is always ready to assist heartily in any worthy or charitable enterprise to the best of her ability. She resides with her parents in their spacious and comfortable home in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

PENNOCK COOPER. Among the men who have achieved success in the quiet but useful occupation of farming, may be mentioned the name of Pennock Cooper, who is conducting extensive operations along that line on his farm in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His birth occurred in this township September 13, 1859. The pioneer ancestor of the family in the United States is supposed to have been James Cooper, a native of Lancaster, England, who removed to Mayfield, in the county of Stafford, about 1674, and ten years later came to Pennsylvania, settling in Darby township.

Truman Cooper, grandfather of Pennock Cooper, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and his educational advantages were those afforded by the common schools of the neighborhood. He was a farmer by occupation and followed this pursuit throughout his entire active career, which was spent on the old homestead. He married and reared a family of children, all of whom became prominent and law abiding citizens of this section of the state.

Horatio G. Cooper, one of the children born to Truman Cooper, was the father of Pennock Cooper, and his birth occurred on the old homestead in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1818.

After completing his education, which was obtained in the public schools of the vicinity, he entered a cabinet-making establishment where he thoroughly mastered the trade in all its branches, and for several years subsequent to the completion of his apprenticeship he followed that line of business, which proved both pleasant and profitable. In 1842 he changed his place of residence to London Grove township, Chester county, and purchased a farm of sixty-five acres of land which he cultivated and developed to a high state of perfection, from the products of which he derived a goodly income. In 1842 Mr. Cooper married Elizabeth Hoopes, born in 1818, a daughter of Benjamin and Phebe Hoopes, residents of New Garden township, Chester county, where they were engaged in farming interests. The issue of this marriage was three daughters and one son—Rachel A., who was the wife of Clarkson Moore, her death occurred in 1874; Sylvania, the widow of Thompson Frame; Lydia, unmarried; Pennock, mentioned hereinafter. The death of Horatio G. Cooper occurred in 1900, his wife having passed away in 1895.

Pennock Cooper, only son of Horatio G. and Elizabeth Cooper, attended the private schools of his native township and this was supplemented by a course of study at the Westtown Boarding School. His business career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits on the old homestead, where in addition to general farming he conducts a fine dairy of from fifteen to twenty cows, which is attached to his farm. In all transactions he is prompt, accurate and reliable, and has proven himself to be an intelligent man of business. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion a birthright member of the Society of Friends.

On May 14, 1890, was celebrated the marriage of Pennock Cooper and Deborah P. Chambers, who was born in 1853, a daughter of the late Joseph P. and Jael C. Chambers, of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. One child, who died in infancy, was born of this union.

JOSEPH MARLEY, a prosperous farmer of London Grove township, Chester county, was born in 1852, in county Donegal, Ireland, the son of a farmer who also bore the name of Joseph. Mr. Marley was educated in his native place, and assisted his father in the labors of the farm until 1871. In that year, having attained his majority, he came to the United States and settled at Doe Run, Chester county, where he worked for seven years on the farm of Enos Barnard. He then took the adjoining property, which he cultivated for thirteen years, and in 1893 purchased his present home, known as the "Caleb Hoopes farm," consisting of eighty acres. This estate is managed by Mr. Marley as a general dairy farm, and is maintained in a very flourishing condition. Sixty head of cattle form a part of the equipment of the farm. Politically Mr. Marley is a Democrat. He is a member of the West Grove Roman Catholic church.

Mr. Marley married, February 5, 1885, Mary, born in 1855, daughter of Giles and Mary (Twammey) Lahey. The former, who was a farmer of West Grove, Chester county, died in 1887, his wife having passed away in 1881. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Marley: Madge, who was born in 1886; Mary, who was born in 1888; and Rose, who died young.

MARCELLUS S. COOK. Prominent in the local history of West Chester is the name of Dr. Jesse W. Cook, the father of Mr. Marcellus S. Cook, who is believed to have been the first resident dentist in West Chester. He was also a physician, and was born in Baltimore, Maryland, but came in 1835, to West Chester, where he became active in his profession and as president of the Young Ladies' Seminary. He eventually removed to Ohio, and his interest in the science of dentistry was such that he was instrumental in founding the College of Dental Surgery in Philadelphia, and possibly one at Cincinnati, Ohio.

Born in York county, August 29, 1823, and having passed through Bolmar's Academy at West Chester, Marcellus S. Cook first entered upon the profession of his father, Dr. Jesse W. Cook. Subsequent ill health forcing him to give up dentistry, he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and was engaged for two years in the dry goods business. Not caring for a mercantile life, he next went to Warren county, Ohio, and tried farming for a period of four years, later traveling in the sale of hydraulic rams and patent rights. Later he moved to Indiana where he was engaged in farming for three years. In 1858 he returned east to Chester county, Pennsylvania, settling near West Grove, and at this time he became connected with Dingee & Conard's Nursery at West Grove, remaining with them until 1861, when he entered the nursery business for himself and continued it for ten years in the vicinity of Avondale. Since this period he has been less actively engaged in business, and leads the life of a retired farmer. He is an esteemed elder in the Society of Friends Meeting, a strict Prohibitionist, and a member of the Patrons of Husbandry and Farmers' Club of West Grove.

Mr. Cook has been married three times. His first wife, Harriet Whitaker, whom he married in 1845, was the daughter of Aguilla and Ruth Whitaker, of Ohio. She bore him two daughters: Harriet, born in 1848, who married Frank Schell, and became the mother of four children; and Esther J., born in 1846, who married Samuel Smith, and became the mother of three children. The decease of Harriet (Whitaker) Cook occurred in 1848, and Mr. Cook afterwards married his second wife, Eliza Branson (born 1826), the daughter of Thomas Branson, a farmer of Greene county, Ohio. Of this union four children were the issue: Anna B., born in 1851; Hadley S., born in 1853; Elizabeth, born in 1857, all of whom died young; and Thamine H., also born in 1857, who married Eugene Lehman, and had issue of three children.

The third wife of Marcellus Cook was Esther Hollingshead, born in 1835. She was a daughter of Charles Hollingshead (deceased), a farmer of Medford, New Jersey. Two sons were born of the marriage, viz: Harvey M., who married Jennie Dance, and Nathan J., deceased.

Harvey M. Cook is one of the foremost business men of Avondale. He was the founder of the water works in that village, and is president of the same and a controlling stockholder. He transacts a large insurance business. His two sons are Everett and Irving.

STEPHEN W. SAVERY, one of the leading farmers of Chester county, is descended on the paternal side from ancestors who were residents of Philadelphia, his grandfather, Thomas Savery, having been a carpenter and builder in that city, and at the time of the yellow fever epidemic he was one of the heroic few who were active in caring for the sick. Thomas Savery was descended from a family of French extraction. In 1795 he married Rebecca Scattergood, and they were the parents of the following children: 1. Sarah, who died young; 2. William, who married Rebecca Cresson, of Philadelphia; 3. Mary, who married Thomas Scattergood; 4. Thomas, mentioned at length hereinafter; 5. Elizabeth. Mr. Savery died in 1817, at the age of sixty-seven years. His widow survived him nearly forty years, dying in 1856, at an advanced age.

Thomas Savery, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Scattergood) Savery, was reared to his father's trade, but later engaged in the lumber business with his brother William. This he followed successfully until 1845, when his health failed, and he lived retired until 1854. He then removed to a farm in Chester county, which came to his wife from her father, Stephen Webb, and upon which he spent the remainder of his days. He was deeply interested in educational and religious affairs, and was a member of the building committee of the Westtown Boarding School, and clerk of the Friends' Monthly Meeting in Philadelphia and Kennett Monthly Meeting. He married Hannah H. Webb, born in 1810, daughter of Stephen and Mary (Harvey) Webb, and their family consisted of the following children: Stephen, mentioned at length hereinafter; Thomas; Sarah; Edward; William, deceased; Mary, deceased; Charles, deceased; and Elizabeth. Mr. Savery ended his long and useful life in March, 1860, and his wife survived him until August, 1890.

Stephen W. Savery.

Stephen W. Savery, eldest child of Thomas and Hannah H. (Webb) Savery, was born August 27, 1835, in Philadelphia, and was educated in the schools of that city, and at West-town Boarding School. He early evinced a preference for agricultural pursuits, and at the age of fifteen came to Chester county, to live with his uncle, Stephen Webb, with whom he remained three summers, and the fourth summer went to reside in the family of his grandfather Webb, whom he relieved of the responsibility and labor of farm management. In 1853 the death of his grandfather made it necessary for him to retain the charge of the Webb farm, and in 1854 his father, Thomas Savery, moved from Philadelphia to the farm, where he remained till he died in 1860. In 1873 his mother and sister removed to West Chester, and Mr. Savery continued to conduct the farm until 1892, when he bought the farm upon which he has since resided.

Mr. Savery was married, in 1873, to Miss Susanna Forsythe, daughter of William and Elizabeth P. (Pusey) Forsythe. Mrs. Savery is a lady of excellent attainments, and has for many years been an active and influential leader in educational and benevolent affairs, and her great ability and usefulness find abundant attestation in the numerous important positions to which she has been called, and her long continuance therein. She has served most acceptably in that of school director for eight years, and her influence is clearly discernable in the increased efficiency of the schools since she first entered upon her duties. For five years she has served as chairman of the Chester County Women's Christian Temperance League, and for a considerable period as honorary president of the Chester County Needlework Guild. She is also an active member of the Children's Aid Society, and is held in gratitude not only for her services in behalf of that beneficent organization, but for her aid in other humanitarian enterprises, and for her liberal personal benefactions.

Mr. and Mrs. Savery are the parents of six children—Susanna, deceased; Elizabeth, who is the wife of Charles Roberts, of West Chester; Charles W., who is engaged in the lumber business in North Carolina; Hannah E.; Miriam F., and Walter Savery.

26x

WILLIAM J. PUSEY. In the township of London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where William J. Pusey was born April 6, 1870, and where his name has long been associated with its agricultural pursuits, has also been the birthplace of his ancestors on the maternal side for many generations, they having been the owners of a productive tract of land known as the Locust Bank farm.

Joseph W. Pusey, grandfather of William J. Pusey, was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, Chester county, and he acquired a practical education at the Unionville Academy. Throughout the active years of his life he engaged in farming on the ancestral estate, and by dint of thrift and industry was enabled to provide a comfortable home for his wife, Elizabeth (Barnard) Pusey, a native of London Grove township, and their children, among whom was a son, Edwin Pusey.

Edwin Pusey, father of William J. Pusey, was born on the old homestead in the township of West Marlborough, Chester county, in 1841, and his educational advantages were obtained at the Kennett Square Academy. He began the active business of life in the capacity of a farmer, and the care and cultivation which he bestowed upon his fields were rewarded by a plentiful and remunerative harvest, which brought him in a sufficient income to allow him to lay aside a competence for his declining years. He is now enjoying the same, having retired some years ago from the activities of a business career. He has always been an earnest advocate of the Republican party, but has never sought or desired the honors of public office. He is a member of the Society of Friends, taking a deep and abiding interest in all the work connected with it. In 1869 he married Elizabeth Hoopes, who was born in 1841, a daughter of Samuel and Hannah Hoopes, residents of London Grove township, where Mr. Hoopes is engaged in agricultural pursuits. Six children have been born of this marriage, namely: William J., born in 1870, unmarried; Amy, born in 1871, wife of Edward Bufington and mother of one child; Samuel H., born in 1873, married Mary Wood, and they are the parents of one child; Susan, born in 1875, unmarried; Helen C., born in 1881, unmarried, and Marion B., born in 1882, also unmarried. Mrs. Pusey, mother of these children, died in the year 1898, after having lived a useful and honorable life of fifty-seven years.

William J. Pusey, eldest son of Edwin and Elizabeth Pusey, first attended the common schools of London Grove township, and later was a student at Ercildoun and Kennett Square Academies, where he obtained a liberal education. He subsequently located on his present farm known as the "Meadow View Farm," which consists of one hundred and three acres of highly cultivated farm land, and here he is extensively engaged in general farming operations, having every detail of the business under his personal supervision. In politics he is an Independent Republican, and in religion a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and he holds membership with the Patrons of Husbandry. Mr. Pusey is unmarried.

EDWIN GILBERT, a well-known farmer of London Grove township, Chester county, is a grandson of Daniel Gilbert, a native of Montgomery county, and for most of his life a farmer, though for a short time he was a tavern keeper. Among his children was a son, Peter H., born in 1816 on the old homestead in Montgomery county. He was educated in the public schools there and became a farmer, living in Montgomery county until 1854, when he moved to Chester county, settling in West Goshen township. He afterward moved to East Goshen township and thence to Malvern, where he passed the remainder of his life. He was a Whig in early life, but became a Republican on the organization of that party, and he was a member of the Lutheran church. In 1844 he married Mary Roberts, born in 1820, daughter of Amos Roberts, a farmer of Montgomery county. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert were the parents of the following children: 1. Daniel, deceased, who married Rebecca John; 2. Lydia, who became the wife of William Hunt and has three children; 3. Isaac, who married Margaret Meredith; 4. Mary, who married M. C. Cotton, and has one son; 5. Margaret, who married William Garrett; 6. Edwin, mentioned at length hereinafter; 7. Adeline, who died unmarried; 8. Alice, who is the wife of Howard Yearsley; 9. Ella (twin with Alice), who died in childhood. Mr. Gilbert died April 19, 1901. His wife, who survives him, makes her home with her daughter Margaret.

Edwin Gilbert, sixth child and third son of Peter H. and Mary (Roberts) Gilbert, was born February 24, 1857, in East Goshen township, Chester county, where he attended the common schools. After finishing his education he became a farmer at Malvern, at the same time engaging in business as a butcher. In a few years, however, he moved to East Brandywine township, where he turned his attention exclusively to farming. In 1884 he moved to his present home in London Grove township, where he carries on a dairy farm, having a herd of seventeen cows. Everything about the place is managed according to the most approved methods and with very satisfactory results. Mr. Gilbert has for the past twenty years also operated a mill located on his farm. He has improved and remodeled it, fitting it up with modern machinery, and has built up a large patronage. With the grist mill, which has two runs of burrs, is included a saw mill with both circular and upright saws, and a cider mill of the most improved hydraulic pattern. Both water power and a gasoline engine are used in the operation of the mill. For a number of years Mr. Gilbert has made a close study of domestic animals in health and disease, and has become something of an expert in veterinary science. He is active in township affairs, being at the present time auditor, an office he has held for two terms. He is a Republican, and stands high in the esteem of his party. He and his family attend Friends' Meeting.

In 1881, on May 4, Mr. Gilbert married Lydia J. Cox, born in 1859, daughter of Thomas S. and Mary W. Cox, her father being a farmer of Willistown township, Chester county. Mrs. Gilbert was educated in the public schools of Willistown and in the Friends' Ladies' Seminary at Malvern, where she remained for three years, finishing her studies at the Friends' high school at West Chester. She was a teacher prior to her marriage, and has always taken a deep interest in educational work. She has been a member of the London Grove township school board since 1896, and for the past five years has been its secretary. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert are the parents of two children, Abby W., born in 1883, and Jesse D., born in 1884.

DANIEL LAMONT TINGLEY, a well known resident of London Grove township, is the son of Benjamin W. Tingley, who was born in Delaware, in 1799. Benjamin Tingley received his education in the common schools of his county, but while still a young man, went to Philadelphia and entered into the commission dry goods business. A short time after, however, he turned his attention to banking, but finally returned to the commission dry goods business and continued in that line until 1865, when he retired. His death occurred in the year 1872. He married Elizabeth, daughter of James Wilson, a wholesale grocer of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Elenor Wilson; they were the parents of seven children: James, who died when young; Ellen, married to William B. Taylor, and they were the parents of five children; Clement, married to Louisa H. Scott, and they were the parents of two children; Benjamin, married to Lucy Hill, without issue; Elizabeth, married to William W. Hansom, parents of two children; Thomas R., who died unmarried, and Daniel L., the fourth and youngest son.

A native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Mr. Daniel L. Tingley, was born in the Quaker City on November 8, 1837. He was educated at various private schools, at the Polytechnic School and the Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia, and soon after he had finished his education, entered first the dry goods business, and then the banking business, in which he was associated with his father. Later on he became interested in the iron ore business in Virginia, in connection with ex-Governor John White Geary, of Kansas, afterward governor of Pennsylvania and major-general in the army; some time after this venture, however, he became proprietor of the Philadelphia shoe firm known as D. R. King Wholesale Shoe Manufactory. In 1884, Mr. Tingley came to Chester county and bought the old Way Farm in London Grove township, where he now resides with his family. Although he did not see active service, Mr. Tingley enlisted at the beginning of the Civil war in the Philadelphia Gray Reserves, now known as the First Regiment of Philadelphia. He is an adherent of the tenets of the Republican party, a member of the Presbyterian church, and an esteemed citizen of the township in which he resides.

Mr. Tingley married Emily Worrell, daughter of Albert Worrell, a prominent merchant and importer of Philadelphia, and Elizabeth Worrell, whose father, William Worrell, was also an importer; she is descended from one of the oldest and best known families of Philadelphia, one of her ancestors, John Worrell, a Friend, having emigrated from Oare, Berkshire, England, in 1682, and who settled in Chester. Mr. and Mrs. Tingley have been the parents of ten children, all of whom are living but one, Albert W., who died when ten years old. The children living are: Elizabeth W., married to H. M. Mackey; Emily, unmarried; Daniel Lamont, Jr., unmarried; Edward W., married to Emma Still; Caroline L., married to C. Sumner Pyle; Gurney P.; Helen; Jerome; and Clementine W., all of whom are unmarried.

JOEL B. PUSEY, an influential and respected citizen of Avondale borough, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who in addition to the operation of an extensive and flourishing dairy, is a potent factor in several important enterprises which have for their object the building up and advancement of the community in which he resides, was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 1, 1833, a son of Joshua B. and Maria Pusey.

The progenitor of the American branch of the Pusey family was William Pusey, a native of England, who came to America accompanied by his son Caleb Pusey in 1682; they settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and their first occupation was milling, which they later abandoned in order to devote their entire attention to agricultural pursuits. The old homestead was purchased by William Pusey in 1714, and the residence thereon was erected by Caleb Pusey in 1728. The majority of the mills in Chester county were doubtless erected by members of this family.

Joshua B. Pusey, father of Joel B. Pusey, was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, May 18, 1806, a son of Joseph and Sarah Ann (Bailey) Pusey. In early life Joshua B. Pusey learned the trade of miller in the mill owned and operated by his father, which was located in the vicinity of Parkesburg, but later he inherited the old homestead in London Grove township, and the remainder of his days were spent in its cultivation and improvement. On December 30, 1830, Mr. Pusey married Maria Spencer, born in Franklin township, Chester county, in 1806, a daughter of Asa and Hannah (Good) Spencer. Their children were: Lewis, born December 10, 1831, died May 5, 1891; Joel B., born May 1, 1833; Emily, born July 23, 1835; Sarah Ann, born December 1, 1838, died December 23, 1861; Isaac, born October 25, 1841; Louisa, born July 16, 1844, died September 7, 1852; Edith H., born March 15, 1848; and William J., born September 6, 1851. Mr. Pusey was an active member of the Society of Friends, and served as overseer and elder at the London Grove Meetings. He died at his residence in Chester county, October 4, 1870; his widow died June 23, 1883.

Joel B. Pusey, second son of Joshua B. and Maria Pusey, was educated in the schools at Westtown and the school near Jennersville, Chester county, which was under the efficient supervision of Thomas Harvey. For a number of years after the completion of his studies he assisted his father with the labor on the home farm, and in 1861 began farming on rented property and continued until 1868, when he removed to Avondale, engaged in the lumber business, and also coal yard, first in Avondale. During the period that elapsed between 1868 and 1878, by industry and frugality, he was enabled to accumulate sufficient money to purchase his present farm in the same borough which consists of two hundred and twelve acres and is known as the Ellicott farm. He has since sold fifty-eight acres. Here he conducts an extensive dairy of well selected stock and the proceeds from this branch of industry, being of a superior quality, are readily disposed of at a goodly profit. For twenty-three consecutive years Mr. Pusey served as president of the Building Loan Association of Avondale, being one of the founders of same, and for a number of years was a director of the West Grove Bank. Mr. Pusey is a Republican in politics, and has always given his party an active and loyal support. In 1894 he was elected county treasurer, was a director of the poor for three terms and served as president of the school board for thirty-three years, which position he still occupies.

Mr. Pusey was united in marriage, in 1858, to Matilda Wilkinson, daughter of Carver and Rachel (Mackey) Wilkinson, the former named having been a prosperous farmer of Franklin township, Chester county. Their children were: Louisa, unmarried, resides at home; James Carver, married Susan Conn and they are the parents of one child, J. Carver Pusey; Mary H., wife of William B. Seal; Edward, deceased; Charles, who is also unmarried and resides at home; and Maria, unmarried at home. Mr. Pusey is a member of the Orthodox Friends. Mrs. Pusey died May 13, 1900.

JOHN I. CARTER, a successful farmer and highly respected citizen of London Grove township, Chester county, is the grandson of John Carter, a native of England, who on coming to this country landed in Philadelphia. Later he moved to Maryland, where he engaged in farming. He was the father of two sons, John, Jr., and Henry. The latter, who was born in 1804, at Stafford Mills, Maryland, received his education at the Westtown Boarding School, and then assisted his father in the care of the homestead. He afterward bought a farm in Lancaster county, where he made his home. He was a Republican in politics, and served prominently in the constitutional convention. He married Mary A. Jackson, born in 1803, in London Grove township, daughter of Joel Jackson, a farmer of that place. Mr. and Mrs. Carter were the parents of the following named children: John I., mentioned at length hereinafter; Evan, who died unmarried; Alice, who married Alfred Brown, and has one child; Anna, who became the wife of Cooper Stubbs, and has five children; Harlan, who remained single, and was killed while serving in the army during the Civil war; Edith, who married Davis Scott, and has one child; Joel, who married Susan Haines; and Catharine, who is unmarried. Mrs. Carter, the mother of the family, died in 1895, and her husband passed away in 1896, both having attained the age of ninety-two years.

John I. Carter, son of Henry and Mary A. (Jackson) Carter, was born December 24, 1826, on the old homestead, in Lancaster county, and moved at an early age to Chester county, where he was educated in Kennett Square. He engaged in farming in Upper Oxford township until 1856, when he moved to London Grove township, and there conducted for eight years the State Experimental Farm. He then came to his present home, in the same township, where he has since lived. His fine abilities as an agriculturist are displayed in the management of his extensive dairy farm whereon he maintains fifty cows of superior breed, and to which he has a creamery attached. In politics he is an Independent Republican, and has been called by his neighbors to fill the office of county auditor. He is a member of the Grange, and attends Friends' Meeting.

Mr. Carter married Rachel Patterson, of Lancaster county, and the following children were born to them: Mary, who married Howard Johnson, and has three children; Willis, and Charles who both died unmarried; and Elizabeth, who became the wife of Ernest Brown, and is the mother of two children. Mrs. Carter died in 1860, and in 1863 Mr. Carter married Caroline, daughter of Abraham Rakestraw, a farmer of Lancaster county. By his second marriage Mr. Carter is the father of the following children, all of whom are unmarried: Alice, Harry, Morris and Clarence.

AMOS S. BAKER, a man of energy and thorough business experience, who is successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in West Fallowfield township, June 16, 1851, the son of Mifflin and Hannah E. Baker.

Mifflin Baker, father of Amos S. Baker, was born in Londonderry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1821, and acquired the advantages afforded by the common schools of Kennett Square. He began his business career as a farmer in West Fallowfield township, and being very successful in this undertaking he continued to make it his chief industry throughout his lifetime. In his political affiliations he adhered to the principles of the Republican party, and in religious matters he was a firm supporter of the doctrines of the Society of Friends. In 1845 he was united in marriage to Hannah E. Speakman, a daughter of Amos Speakman, who was engaged in farming pursuits in London Grove township, Chester county. Their children are: 1. Eugene, who married Mary A. Pyle and two children have been born to them; 2. Amos Baker; 3. Oliver, unmarried; 4. Nettie, wife of John Harris and mother of four children. The death of Mr. Baker, which occurred in 1894, was occasioned by a tree falling upon him in West London Grove township.

Amos S. Baker, second son of Mifflin and Hannah E. Baker, attended the common schools of Unionville, where he obtained a practical education. Later he adopted agriculture as his life vocation, following this on the old homestead until the present. He purchased a farm in London Grove township, in partnership with his brother, Eugene Baker, where the latter has since been continuously engaged in the cultivation and improvement of the ground, the inspection and well being of the stock, and the condition and appearance of his residence and out-buildings. The life of Amos S. Baker has been that of an industrious and progressive farmer, unmarked by any great changes, and in his daily intercourse with his fellow citizens he has always proved himself to be an honest and public-spirited man. Politically Mr. Baker follows the traditions of his father and is a Republican, although he has never taken any prominent part in local affairs. He is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, and the Masonic Lodge at Cochranville, Pennsylvania.

In 1891 Mr. Baker was united in marriage to Mabel Pyle, a daughter of Martin Pyle, a retired citizen of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Baker and his wife are regular attendants of the Presbyterian church, taking and active interest in the work of the various societies connected with it.

SAMUEL E. WORTH, extensively engaged in farming interests in the township of London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born March 24, 1863, at Chatham, Chester county, and traces his ancestry to Thomas Worth, a native of England, who was born in 1679, and emigrated to this country about the same time that William Penn made his first voyage here. Thomas Worth was united in marriage to Isabelle Davidson, and their children were: John Thomas, Samuel, and Sarah Worth.

Marshall Worth, father of Samuel E. Worth, was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 29, 1825. He was a pupil in the common schools of the locality, and after completing his education learned the trade of blacksmith at Embreeville, under the efficient direction of Ellis Patterson. He followed this line of industry for several years in his native township, after which he removed to Kennett Square and acquired the trade of carriage-maker. He gave his entire attention to that business in the new locality, where he remained up to the year 1850, when he located in Chatham and established a carriage making business, which he conducted up to a few years ago, when he retired from active business pursuits. He was a man of fine executive ability and a wonderful capacity for looking after details, and these characteristics were essential factors in the success which he achieved in his business enterprises. In 1847 he married Annie Snyder, a daughter of Fred and Adeline Snyder, the former named being a prosperous agriculturist of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: George, deceased; Joseph, deceased; Emmor, deceased; Adeline, wife of Eugene Acker and mother of two children; and Samuel E. Worth.

Samuel E. Worth, only surviving son of Marshall and Annie Worth, was reared to manhood in his native township of Chatham, educated in the common schools and subsequently devoted his attention to the trade of carriage painting, which he acquired under the personal supervision of his father. He then entered into partnership with Alfred McLearn, at West Chester, and for nine years they conducted a flourishing business which was the result of industry, perseverance, skillful workmanship, and strictly honorable business methods. After the expiration of this period he took up his residence in London Grove township, where he now resides, purchased a farm consisting of sixty-two acres of productive land with dairy attached, and up to the present time (1903) has been quietly and industriously engaged in agricultural pursuits. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and, while never taking an active part in local affairs, yet always gives deep and earnest consideration to the great political questions of the day. In fraternal relations he is a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, taking a keen and active interest in all the transactions of the organization.

In 1894, occurred the marriage of Mr. Worth and Edith Story, daughter of Samuel and Emma (Heston) Story, both of whom are now deceased, the former named having been a prosperous farmer of London Grove township. The following named children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Worth: Emmor, Emma, Annie, and Joseph, all of whom are unmarried. Mr. Worth and the members of his family are regular and consistent attendants of the Methodist Episcopal church of London Grove township.

REUBEN BERNARD. The family of which Reuben Bernard is a worthy representative claims one of the most ancient of surnames, it being first taken from Roche-Bernard, and old fortified manor-house of Normandy, but it has been in use as a baptismal name since the eighth century; it was originally derived from northern mythology, signifying boldness, literally, "bear's heart," from Bern, the bear, and the courage it implies, and an early ancestor bore upon his shield a bear rampant.

The pioneer ancestor of the families of this name residing in Chester and Delaware counties, was Richard Bernard, who was the owner of land near Chester, Pennsylvania, as early as 1683, served as a grand juror in the same town in 1686, and died previous to May 5, 1698. His eldest son, Richard Bernard, born in 1684, became the owner by purchase, of more than four hundred acres of the Simcock tract and, in 1726, purchased about two hundred acres in Newlin, also a tract adjoining in the township of East Marlborough. He married Ann Taylor, daughter of Abiah Taylor, about the year 1715, and resided near Doe Run, West Marlborough township, then known as Hilltown.

Richard Bernard, son of Richard and Ann (Taylor) Bernard, and great-grandfather of Reuben Bernard, was a resident of the township of Newlin. He married January 3, 1754, Susanna Eckhoff, daughter of David and Winnifred Eckhoff, residents of the same township. Two children were born to them, Jeremiah, mentioned at length hereinafter, and Rachel, who became the wife of Joseph Reynolds, of Nottingham. After the death of the mother of these children, Mr. Bernard married, March 16, 1763, Lettice Baker, daughter of Joseph and Mary Baker, of Goshen, and ten children were born of this marriage.

Jeremiah Bernard, grandfather of Reuben Bernard, was born December 2, 1754, in Newlin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his entire life was spent in the vicinity of his birth place. He was united in marriage, at London-grove Meeting, October 25, 1780, to Elizabeth Passmore, who was born March 13, 1759, daughter of George and Margaret (Strode) Passmore, of West Marlborough. Their children were: 1. Susanna, born September 25, 1781, married Vincent Baily; 2. Jeremiah, born January 20, 1783; 3. George, born May 1, 1785; 4. Margaret, born September 30, 1787; 5. Richard, born November 3, 1789, died January 31, 1850; 6. Mary, born January 31, 1792, married James M. Lewis; 7. Samuel, born May 13, 1794, died October 1, 1826; 8. Rachel, born August 5, 1796; 9. John, born November 11, 1798, married first Hannah Painter, second Lydia Ann Swayne, and third Martha Stubbs, nee Pennock; 10. Elizabeth, born June 26, 1801, became the wife of Nathan Walton; 11. Anna, born June 9, 1803, became the wife of Jacob L. Brinton. Jeremiah Bernard's death occurred January 27, 1837, and his widow died October 13, 1847.

George Bernard, father of Reuben Bernard, was born in West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 1, 1785, and received a good common school education. Being familiar with the routine work upon a farm, he chose that occupation which he pursued during his entire business career. He was very successful in his farming operations, which were conducted upon the old homestead of the Passmores, and being a public-spirited citizen took an active part in the local affairs of the township. In 1810 he married Susan Pennock, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Johnson) Pennock, of West Marlborough township. Their children were: 1.

Samuel P., married Sarah G. McCay and one child was born to them; 2. Vincent D. married Amy Wade, and they became the parents of three children, all of whom are now deceased; 3. Eliza A., widow of Calvin Russell and mother of one child; 4. Levis P., married Eliza Mitchell, they have one child; 5. Edith, born February 20, 1821, resides with her brother Reuben Bernard; 6. Mary L., whose death occurred in 1855, was the wife of Cyrus Hoopes and two children were born of this marriage; 7. Reuben, subject of this sketch; 8. Emeline, widow of Samuel Mitchell, whose death occurred in 1867; three children were born to them, U. Duffield Mitchell, only one living, engaged in the practice of law. Mr. Bernard, father of these children, died November 23, 1841.

Reuben Bernard, youngest son of George and Susan (Pennock) Bernard, was born in West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 27, 1826. He spent his boyhood, and Westtown Boarding School and up to education in the public schools of the neighborhood, and Westtown boarding school, and up to the year 1856 he assisted with the farm work. The following two years were spent in the western section of the United States, and after his return east he located in West Chester and was a resident of that city for twenty years, being chosen to serve in various important local offices. Mr. Bernard then went to Nova Scotia and, for two years, was engaged in mining pursuits, but at the expiration of this period of time he returned to the state of Pennsylvania, took up his residence in London Grove township and purchased what was known as the "Old Pyle farm." This property consists of one hundred acres of valuable farm land, and having excellent equipments for conducting the latter after the most approved methods, the estate is considered one of the most productive and profitable in the township.

Politically Mr. Bernard supports the men and measures advocated by the Republican party, and while a resident of West Chester served in the capacity of county treasurer for one term, deputy sheriff for one term, and clerk to the county commissioners for two years. He is a member of the Society of Friends, in which organization he takes a deep and true interest.

JAMES P. HOOD, an enterprising farmer and well known citizen of London Grove township, Chester county, is a son of James Hood, who was born in 1810, in Sadsburyville, in the same county. He was educated in the common schools and afterward learned the shoemaker's trade, at which he worked all his life in Parkersburg, Chester county. He went twice to the west, his first visit being made before railroads were known in that part of the country. He was therefore obliged to travel on horseback, and this journey through what was then in a great degree an unexplored region, furnished him with a store of recollections which became doubly interesting as the progress of civilization caused a partial forgetfulness of a more primitive state of things. Mr. Hood was twice married, his first wife having been Martha Quinn, of Parkesburg, by whom he was the father of the following children: Sarah C., who married James Ellis, and has two children; William T., who married Anna Williams, and has one child; and James P., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mrs. Hood died in 1849, and some time after, Mr. Hood married Deborah, daughter of Moses Windle, a farmer of Highland township, Chester county. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hood: Lydia, who died in 1880; Frank, who married Margaret McGurk, and has five children; Samuel, who married and resided in Philadelphia, he died in 1892; and Even, who is now deceased. Mrs. Hood died in 1885, and Mr. Hood passed away in 1893.

James P. Hood, son of James and Martha (Quinn) Hood, was born in 1849, at Parkesburg, Chester county, and received his education in the common schools of his native place. He learned the trade of pumpmaking, which he followed in Oxford until 1876, when he turned his attention to agriculture, rented a farm in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, until 1881, then bought a farm in Upper Oxford township, farmed there until 1888, and then purchased what was known as the "State Experimental Farm," in London Grove township. This farm which consists of one hundred and five acres was so called because it was used by the state for the purpose of testing the merits of different modes of farming. Under the skillful management of the present owner it has been made very remunerative. In connection with his farming he operates an extensive dairy, keeping from thirty-eight to forty cows and supplies milk to the residents of West Grove. Mr. Hood is active in discharging all the duties of a good citizen, and was at one time intrusted by his neighbors with the office of supervisor. His political sentiments are those held by the Democratic party. He is a member of the Heptasophis, and attended the Presbyterian church

Mr. Hood married, in September, 1873, Rebecca, daughter of William and Sarah McConnell, the former a farmer in Upper Oxford, Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Hood were the parents of two children, both of whom died young. Mrs. Hood died in 1876, and in 1878 Mr. Hood married Anna L., daughter of Joseph Valentine, a farmer of Schuylkill township, Chester county. By this marriage Mr. Hood was the father of the following children, all of whom with one exception are unmarried: Rebecca R.; Joseph B., who married Annabel Pierson, and has one child, Joseph B., Jr.; Mary L.; William T., and Roland. In 1885, Mr. Hood and his children suffered the severe bereavement in the death of the wife and mother, who was deeply lamented, not only by her immediate family, but by a large circle of relatives and friends.

EMNOR B. WOOD, serving in the capacity of director of the West Grove National Bank, and for eighteen years actively engaged in mercantile pursuits in Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a direct lineal descendant of Thomas Wood, who, accompanied by his wife Mary and son William, came from Warwickshire, England, and settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. A daughter was born to them on the voyage, whom they named Richmond.

Joseph Wood, grandfather of Emnor B. Wood, was born in Barren Hill, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, March 1, 1789. He engaged in various pursuits, first following the occupation of miller, later being the proprietor of a hotel, and finally devoting his attention to agricultural pursuits. He closely adhered to legitimate business methods, and well merited the success which attended his efforts. In the city of Stanton, Delaware, Mr. Wood married Mary Burn, who was born April 26, 1790, and their children were: 1. John Milton, born October 25, 1815, died May 10, 1868, who married for his first wife, Susan Underwood, and their children were: Mary Elizabeth, Evan Henry, Alice and Joseph Wood; by his second wife, Ruth Adams, one child was born, Theresa Wood. 2. Dr. James Bayard, born January 5, 1817, died June 14, 1889; he married Elizabeth Rogers, and their children are: Henry Clay, born in 1844, and Mary, who died in infancy. 3. Menander, born January 15, 1819. 4. Ferdinand P., born November 9, 1821, died in infancy. 5. Alfred, born February 1, 1823, died April 11, 1898; he married Martha Crippin and their children were: Mary, William and Margaret. 6. Hannah, born April 24, 1826, died April 13, 1894; she was the wife of William Rogers and they were the parents of four children, Frank W., Mary Rebecca, Katherine and Sallie Rogers. 7. Ferdinand, born August 15, 1828, married Elizabeth Sanders and their children are: Millard Filmore, Joseph and Henry Clay Wood. 8. Mary Jane, born July 30, 1832, unmarried. 9. Sarah S., born November 1, 1834. Joseph Wood, father of these children, died in Londonderry township, September 27, 1856, and his wife passed away in the same township, February 27, 1839. They were interred at London Grove Meeting.

Menander Wood, father of Emnor B. Wood, born January 15, 1819, acquired a common school education in his native county, and subsequently took a prominent part in its affairs. He was twice married, his first wife having been Lavina Keely, and his second wife, Anna Scheets. The children born of his first marriage were: Emma and Irene, twins, both of whom died in infancy; Emnor B., born December 14, 1853; Morris M., born May 31, 1849, who married Millie Young, and they are the parents of the following named children: James Bayard, died in infancy; Walter K., Frank and Lee Wood. Menander Wood's death occurred September 3, 1897.

Emnor B. Wood, eldest son of Menander and Lavina Wood, was born in Philadelphia, December 14, 1853, was reared there and acquired an excellent education in the public schools. In 1884 he removed to Avondale, Chester county, and at once established a coal and lumber business which steadily increased from year to year, until now it has assumed extensive proportions, this being the result of prudent management, keen discrimination and well directed effort. Mr. Wood is a progressive, straightforward business man, and has been chosen to fill the position of a director of the West Grove National Bank.

Mr. Wood was united in marriage to Nettie Miller, who was born February 10, 1861, a daughter of William and Lydia Miller. Their children are: Warren W., born June 9, 1885; Herbert H., born March 7, 1887; Linda B., born September 7, 1890, and William M. Wood, born November 9, 1899.

CHARLES T. WALTER, an enterprising and energetic agriculturist and public-spirited citizen of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has been prominently identified with the material progress and prosperity of that section of the state, is a son of Townsend Walter, who is now retired from active business pursuits and resides at West Chester, Chester county.

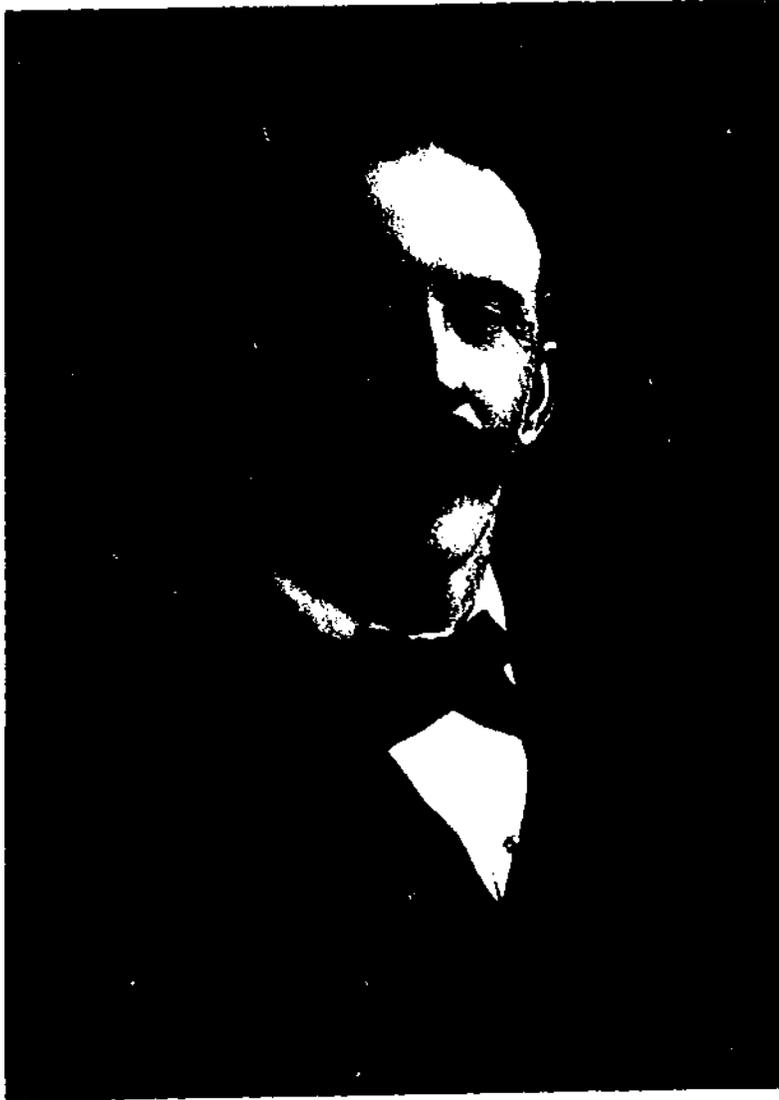

Charles T. Walter was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1852, and during his boyhood he attended the common schools of the neighborhood. In 1871, the year of the opening of the West Chester State Normal School, with Ezekial H. Cook, a graduate of Bowdoin College, as principal, and a strong faculty of teachers, Charles T. became a student, and in this noted institution he completed his education. His tastes and inclinations induced him to adopt agricultural pursuits as his vocation in life, and this line of industry he pursued in the following named places—Pocopson, the Johnson farm in Birmingham township, and the old homestead in Westtown township. The following two years he was engaged in the nursery business at Willowdale, but his former occupation being preferable to this, in 1900 he located in London Grove township on a sixty-four acre tract of the Swayne estate. This piece of property, known as Hope Glen Farm, is well improved and under a high state of cultivation, and in addition to the production of a general line of farm products he operated a dairy of twenty head of well selected stock. In politics Mr. Walter is an independent Republican, and he served as a member of the school board of Westtown township. He is a member of the Brandywine Grange and of the Order of Hep-tasoph.

In 1872, Mr. Walter married Margaret Barnard, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Swayne) Barnard, of Newlin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Three children have been born of this union, all of whom reside at home with their parents—Elizabeth, Mabel, and Townsend Walter. Mr. Walter and his family attend the meetings of the Society of Friends, in which they take an active and prominent part.

NATHAN SUPLEE. Among the men who are prominently identified with the commercial and political interests of Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of Nathan Suplee, who was born in the township of Radnor, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, December 10, 1862, the grandson of Nathan and Hannah Suplee, of Philadelphia. His father, William Suplee, was born in Philadelphia, January 13, 1834; and was united in marriage November 25, 1858, to Rebecca Green, who was born March 9, 1839, a daughter of Frazer and Lydia Green, of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Lydia Ann, born September 28, 1859, in Marple, became the wife of Milton D. Lukens on March 12, 1884; Nathan, born December 10, 1862; and William Frazer, born September 7, 1868. The father of these children died in the township of Radnor, September 17, 1888, his wife having passed away in the same township, January 11, 1884. They were both interred in the Newtown Baptist church cemetery.

Nathan Suplee attended the common schools of Cedar Croft, Marple township, Delaware county where he acquired a practical education. Later he learned the milling business and followed this occupation until 1889, when he removed to Malvern and entered the employ of Thomas & Haines, coal merchants, with whom he remained for the following three years. After the expiration of this period of time he located in Philadelphia, and by securing employment in a hardware store thoroughly mastered all the details of this business, after which he returned to Malvern, in 1892, and established a hardware store which he has continued to conduct up to the present time (1903). During the passing years he has built up an excellent trade, and his establishment now ranks among the leading business houses in the borough of Malvern. In his political preferences he is an ardent Republican, having filled the office of burgess and he is now acting in the capacity of councilman, being appointed to that position seven years ago. He is prominently affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Knights of Pythias.

Nathan Duplex

On February 28, 1884, Mr. Suplee married Lydia A. Dutton, who was born April 16, 1853, a daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Thatcher) Dutton. Their children are: Sara Thatcher, born in Milltown, October 31, 1884; Horace Branson, born in Willistown, February 23, 1887; Elizabeth Deacon, born in Willistown, April 21, 1889; Nathan Walter, born in Malvern, March 11, 1892, and Clarence Elbert, born in Malvern, June 4, 1895. Mr. Suplee and his family are members of the Baptist church of Newtown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

JOSEPH QUARLL MACKKEY, a graduate of the College of Pharmacy, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and the proprietor of a large select drug store at Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in that township, August 23, 1875, and is the representative of a family that has resided in this section of the state since the early part of the eighteenth century.

The earliest ancestor of whom there is any authentic record was John Mackey, son of Robert Mackey. He was a native of Chester county, a farmer by occupation, served in the capacity of lieutenant in the provincial forces of 1747-1748, was a member of the constitutional convention of July 15, 1776, a member of the council of safety from October 17, 1777, to December 4, 1777, a member of the supreme executive council from November 21, 1777, to October 23, 1779, and in March, 1777, was appointed a justice of the peace. He was a resident of New London township, and he left surviving him at his death, which occurred in September, 1787, a wife, Jane Mackey, and children: David, Robert, John, Margaret, Rachel and Mary Mackey.

Squire David Mackey, eldest son of John and Jane Mackey, was born in Chester county, and served his country during the Revolutionary period. By his marriage to Agnes Curry, they became the parents of the following named children: Robert, who married Jane Kimball; John; Rachel, wife of John Fulton; Susan, wife of John Allison; George; Mary; Elizabeth, wife of David Furey, and Letitia Mackey.

John Mackey, second son of Squire David and Agnes Mackey, was a prominent resident of Chester county, in the development and improvement of which he took a keen and active interest. He was united in marriage to Amy Crooks, and their children were: 1. David, married Eliza Pyle, and they were the parents of four children: Joshua; Amy, deceased; Oliver, who married Amelia Broghan, and Mary, deceased. 2. John, married Amy McClenathon, and the surviving children born to them were: Samuel, married Jane Myers for his first wife, and Jane Miller for his second; Louisa; Mary; Horace, who married Fanny McClennon; Francis; Anna, and Belle, wife of Newton Chambers. 3. Thomas, married Hannah Hamill, and their children were: William, died in childhood; James; William (2); Elisha and Robert, twins—the former named married Sarah McClenathon, and the latter died in childhood; Emma, wife of Thomas Good; Clara; Edward, married Addie Brown; Wilson, married Minnie Spencer, and Lorena Mackey. 4. James. 5. Margaret, wife of William Thompson and mother of John, James, William, who was united in marriage to Lizzie Lyons, and after her decease married Carrie Ramsey; Samuel, who married Anna Wickersham; George, who married Anna Brown, and Ella, wife of John Going. 6. Amy, wife of Thomas Townsend, and their children were: Sarah, wife of Joseph Moore; John, who married Grace Doren; Letitia; Thomas, who married Elizabeth Dance, and Francis Townsend.

James Mackey, fourth son of John and Amy Mackey, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in June, 1812, and after acquiring a common school education, began his business career as an agriculturist in the township of Jennersville, Chester county. He married Eleanor Kelton, who was born in the township of London Grove, July 23, 1821, a daughter of Squire John and Elizabeth (Curry) Kelton. Their children were: Mary, born May 28, 1846; James, born June 19, 1848; Josephine, born April 28, 1852; Robert, born March 29, 1856, and William C., born October 9, 1857.

James Mackey, eldest son of James and Eleanor Mackey, was born on the old homestead in Jennersville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 19, 1848, and was a life-long resident of that section of the state, being actively associated with its material and social welfare. He married Hanna Mary Quarll, who was born November 5, 1847, and one child was born to them, Joseph Quarll Mackey. Mrs. Mackey was born on the old homestead in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Joseph S. and Sarah M., (Vanderveer) Quarll. Joseph S. Quarll was born December 9, 1816, at Columbia, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, a son of William and Hannah (Sharp) Quarll, and the former named was, in turn, a son of William Quarll. William and Hannah (Sharp) Quarll were the parents of the following named children: Joseph, born December 9, 1816; Augustus, born November 9, 1818, and Elizabeth, who died in infancy. Joseph and Sarah (Vanderveer) Quarll were the parents of twelve children, namely: Hanna Mary, born November 5, 1847; William Baker, born March 19, 1849; Alice Vanderver, born March 31, 1851; Adelaide L., born October 16, 1852; Jessie S., born April 7, 1854; Oscar Thomas, born July 22, 1856; Sarah V., born December 5, 1857; Clarence H., born June 26, 1859, died in infancy; Josephine E., born February 22, 1861; Lillian M., born October 11, 1862; Phoebe, born September 30, 1864, and Ann Elizabeth Quarll, born November 9, 1865.

Joseph Q. Mackey, only child of James and Hanna Mary (Quarll) Mackey, was reared to manhood in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, acquired his preliminary education in the common schools and this was supplemented by attendance at the high school, from which institution he was graduated in 1896. He was then apprenticed to Lawrence C. Funk, and during this period he pursued a course of pharmaceutical study at the College of Pharmacy in Philadelphia, graduating from that institution with the degree of Doctor of Pharmacy, in 1900, and passing the state board examination in 1901. In October, 1902, Mr. Mackey established a drug store at Avondale, Chester county, which he stocked with the purest drugs and chemicals to be used in the preparation of prescriptions, also a large and carefully selected line of toilet articles and perfumes, and he is now enjoying a large and constantly increasing patronage.

EVAN SPENCER, a son of David Spencer, actively and prominently identified with the agricultural interests of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born October 20, 1865, in Franklin township, Chester county. His educational advantages were obtained in the schools of New London, and his business career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, first on the old homestead, where he remained until 1897, and since that date on the old Bernard homestead, which he purchased and on which he now conducts an extensive and profitable business. The farm consists of one hundred and forty-four acres of improved land, which is adapted to the production of a general line of garden produce, and this he readily disposes of in the nearby markets. In politics Mr. Spencer is a Republican, and contributes all in his power to the advancement and success of that party. In religion he adheres to the doctrines of the Society of Friends, the faith of his forefathers. In social matters he holds membership in the Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry.

Mr. Spencer was united in marriage, February 25, 1897, to Ella Pyle, who was born in London, Britain township, Chester county, November 25, 1867, a daughter of Samuel and Ann Pennock Pyle. Their children are: Viola, born February 2, 1898; Cranston B., born February 3, 1900, and Lawrence Evan, born April 10, 1902. Mrs. Spencer traces her ancestry to Jacob Pyle, whose son, Samuel Pyle, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, in 1773, was a stone-mason by trade, and a member of the Society of Friends. Samuel Pyle married Hannah White, a daughter of George White, and they were the parents of the following named children: Lydia, Mary, Rebecca, Samuel and Susan Pyle. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pyle died in the same year, 1859. Samuel Pyle, Jr., father of Mrs. Spencer, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, May 29, 1815, and his entire life was passed on the old homestead. In 1842 he was united in marriage to Anna Pennock Cravens, a daughter of William Cravens, of Delaware, and eleven children were born of this union, eight of whom still survive: Their children were: William C., Marshall J., Hannah M., Susan E., Lydia E., Alice W., Samuel S., Ella F., Pennock, Edward, and one child who died in infancy. Mrs. Pyle, mother of these children, died September 8, 1899.

JOSHUA B. PUSEY, deceased, for many years a resident of the old Pusey homestead in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, which he inherited, was a descendant of William Pusey, who, accompanied by his brother, Caleb Pusey, came to the United States from England in 1682, settled in Chester county, and engaged first in milling and later in farming. William Pusey purchased the old homestead in 1714, and the house in which the son and daughter of Joshua B. Pusey now reside was built by William Pusey in 1728. The children of Joshua B. Pusey are of the sixth generation. The members of this family were doubtless the builders of more mills in Chester county than any other family.

Joshua B. Pusey was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 18, 1806, a son of Joseph and Sarah Ann (Bailey) Pusey. He attended the common schools of his neighborhood, and there acquired an education which qualified him for the active and responsible duties of life. In early life he learned the trade of miller with his father, who was then operating a mill near the town of Parkersburg, Pennsylvania, and this line of industry he followed until he became the owner of the old homestead by inheritance. He then turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and in this new enterprise achieved an unusual degree of success, which was the result of careful and painstaking labor, judicious management, and perseverance.

On December 30, 1830, Mr. Pusey was united in marriage to Maria Spencer, who was born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1806, a daughter of Asa and Hannah (Good) Spencer. Their children were: Lewis, born December 10, 1831, died May 5, 1891; Joel Bailey, born May 1, 1833; Emily, born July 23, 1835; Sarah Ann, born December 1, 1838, died December 23, 1861, on the old homestead; Isaac, born October 25, 1841, resides on the old homestead; Louisa, born July 16, 1844, died September 7, 1852; Edith H., born March 15, 1848; William J., born September 6, 1851.

Mr. Pusey was an overseer and elder in the London Grove Friends' Meeting, and after a long life of usefulness he died at his home, October 4, 1870, survived by his wife, whose death occurred June 23, 1883.

JOHN HENRY HICKS is an enterprising and successful business man of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, whose birth occurred February 19, 1850, on the old Hicks homestead in East Goshen township, Chester county, where Edward Hicks, son of Charles and Mary (Kimble) Hicks, purchased a tract of land, in 1769, from Thomas Goodwin, this property having been in the possession of the family ever since. Edward Hicks married, November 8, 1769, Hannah Rettew, a daughter of William and Rebecca Rettew, and their children were: Sarah, William, Rebecca, Hannah, Charles, Abigail and Thomas Hicks.

Edward Hicks, father of John H. Hicks, was a son of Charles, second son of Edward and Hannah Hicks, and Mercy (Pickering) Hicks, and his birth occurred May 14, 1820, on the old homestead, where he passed his boyhood. He obtained his education in the private school which was under the personal supervision of Joseph Strode, a most celebrated teacher. He was prominently identified with the interests of the township, and was a consistent member of the Society of Friends, that being the faith of his forefathers. He married Amy Marshall, and they reared a family of eight children, namely: Charles, deceased; Kimball, deceased; Edward, a resident of East Goshen; John Henry, mentioned at length hereinafter; Anna, who became the wife of Edgar Tyler, and is now deceased; William H., a successful farmer of East Goshen; Emma, who became the wife of William Pratt, and is now deceased; and Lizzie, who died in early life.

Edward Hicks, father of these children, died in October, 1889.

John H. Hicks, fourth son of Edward and Amy Hicks, acquired a good English education in the public schools of East Goshen, Millersville, Kennett Square, and West Chester, and after laying aside his text books engaged in agricultural pursuits on the old homestead. After a short space of time he secured employment as a farmer on the extensive stock farm owned by Captain Charles W. Roberts, and during his five years' service there he made two trips to Holland and France for the purpose of purchasing Norman horses and Holstein-Friesian cattle to replenish the farm. In 1888 he purchased his present farm in London Grove township, which consists of seventy acres of rich and arable land, a portion of the old Pusey estate, and this he stocked with thoroughbred cattle which always command their value on the market. In connection with this extensive enterprise he owns and conducts a saw and grist mill which is also a profitable source of income. Mr. Hicks is a Republican in politics, and devotes considerable time and attention to the temperance cause, which he advocates at all times. He is a prominent member of the Patrons of Husbandry, having held all the offices in the order.

On October 4, 1883, Mr. Hicks married Rachel Lapp Price, a daughter of Paxon and Jane (Jackman) Price, of West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania. They are the parents of one child, Philip Marshall Hicks, born April 27, 1885.

THOMAS CARNEY, an esteemed resident of London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, belongs to that class of America's adopted citizens, who, seeking a home in the New World, have adapted themselves to the changed conditions and surroundings, and by the exercise of native ability, untiring energy and sound judgment have worked their way steadily upward.

His birth occurred in county Mayo, Ireland, in 1838, and in the common schools of that neighborhood he acquired a practical education which prepared him for the active duties of life. On February 2, 1851, he left his native country on the sailing vessel "Empire" and landed at New York city, March 18, 1851. Shortly after his arrival he located in New London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in farming pursuits until 1884, when he purchased a tract of land consisting of fifty-six acres in London Grove township, which was formerly the property of Daniel Lukens. All modern improvements and conveniences have been added to the farm by Mr.

Carney, who is a most progressive and practical agriculturist, and as a natural sequence great prosperity has attended his efforts. In politics he is an ardent supporter of the principles of Democracy, and in religion is an adherent of the Roman Catholic faith, being one of the originators of the Catholic church at West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, to the support of which he contributes liberally.

In 1853 was solemnized the marriage of Thomas Carney and Mary McLaughlin, a daughter of Francis McLaughlin, of county Galway, Ireland. Mrs. Carney came to this country in 1850. The following named children were born of this union: Thomas, Jr., died unmarried; Katherine, unmarried; John, who was united in marriage to Mary Mullin, and they became the parents of two children; William, unmarried; Anna, unmarried, and Mary, who became the wife of Edward Kelly, and four children have been the issue of this marriage.

ROBERT STRAHORN, a venerable and highly respected citizen of Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, traces his descent from Robert Strahorn, a Scottish dissenter, who left his native land in order to escape religious persecution, and landed in America in April, 1775, about the time of the outbreak of the Revolutionary war. He enlisted three times in the Continental army, serving through the entire war, and never receiving a wound. He participated in some of the most memorable events which marked the struggle for independence, and was a sharer in many of the greatest of the hardships which fell to the lot of the devoted patriot army. He accompanied Washington when the latter, on that never-to-be-forgotten Christmas night, crossed the Delaware in order to surprise the Hessians at Trenton, and he shared all the sufferings of the winter at Valley Forge.

Samuel Strahorn, son of Robert, married Hannah Gheen, and their children were: Jonathan, who married Martha Williamson; Jane, born January 1, 1801, married John Jacobs; Joseph and Elizabeth (twins), born February 6, 1805; the former married Eliza Alcorn, and the latter John Stephens; Hannah, born May 24, 1807, married Reuben Passmore; Samuel, born April 26, 1809, married Amelia Hill; Mary, born October 21, 1811, married Nelson Stephens; and Robert, mentioned at length hereinafter. This whole family, with the single exception of the youngest, are now deceased.

Robert Strahorn, son of Samuel and Hannah (Gheen) Strahorn, was born January 4, 1815, on the old homestead on Whitely creek, and for the greater part of his life has followed agricultural pursuits. He enjoys the distinction of having been the first circulating agent of the "West Chester Local News." It is now some years since he withdrew from active participation in affairs and retired to spend the evening of his days in the peaceful enjoyments of the family circle and in the company of his friends.

Mr. Strahorn married Mary Ann, daughter of David and Catherine Stephens, of London Grove township, Chester county. The following children were born to them: 1. Thomas, who married Margaret Brown, and had four children; Amy, who married Samuel Homes; Hallie, who became the wife of Albert Stevenson; Elinora, and Mary, who married Dr. Crosson. 2. Anna Mary, who married Thomas Bunting, and had two children; John, who married Miss Maggie Strickland; and Harry, who married Lily Finley. 3. Catherine, single. 4. Samuel, who married Elizabeth Elbright, and whose children are Edna and Robert. 5. Ruth Anna, who became the wife of Washington Gray, who died April 19, 1888, and had the following children: Joseph T., born January 13, 1875; Elizabeth, born February 21, 1877; R. Warren, born in April, 1882; and W. Norman, born in October, 1885. 6. Emma, who married Charles Henry, and is the mother of two children; Mabel, born April 12, 1881; and Arthur, born in 1883. The first home dwelling, a rough structure of logs, which was erected on the Strahorn homestead, is still standing, and forms an interesting link between the past and present fortunes of the family. Mrs. Strahorn died June 1, 1893.

ROBERT PYLE. Joseph Pyle (7), son of Robert and Ann Pyle, was born in Bethel township, 11 mo., 5, 1692, and was first married, 4 mo., 16, 1715, at Concord Meeting, to Sarah Dicks, daughter of Peter Dicks, deceased, of Birmingham, formerly of Cheshire, England. They settled in Bethel township, where his wife died, leaving children: Robert, Joseph, Ralph, Adam, Sarah and Rachel. He was married again, 11 mo., 10, 1732, at Concord Meeting, to Sarah Gibbons, widow of John Gibbons, and daughter of John and Mary Pennell, of Aston. She was the mother of Isaac, Ann, Abraham, Hannah, Esther and Martha Pyle.

Joseph Pyle removed from Bethel to Upper Chichester between 1740 and 1747, and thence in 1752 to Concord township, where he died in 1754. At the time of his death he was possessed of 354 acres of land in Bethel and in New Castle county, which he devised to his sons Isaac and Adam. To his son Joseph he gave £150 and some articles.

Joseph Pyle, Jr., was married 9 mo., 20, 1753, at Lampeter Meeting, Lancaster county, to Alice Smith, daughter of James and Alice Smith, of Lampeter, from Ireland. They settled in West

Prof. L. Pyle,

Marlborough township, near London Grove Meeting, where he purchased 125 acres of land. He was a joiner as well as a farmer. He was an overseer of London Grove Meeting from 1772 to 1783, took an active part in the enlargement of the meeting-house, and served on a committee to relieve Friends who suffered on account of conscientious scruples against war during the Revolution. He died in 1811, and his widow 8 mo., 9, 1818. They had twelve children:

Alice, b. 11 mo., 21, 1754; d. 2 mo., 6, 1822; m. Thomas Wilkinson.

Joseph, b. 7 mo., 17, 1756; d. 5 mo., 15, 1788, unmarried.

Sarah, b. 8 mo., 2, 1758; d. 12 mo., 25, 1834; m. Allen Chandler.

Rachel, b. 11 mo., 9, 1760; d. 11 mo., 22, 1763.

Ann, b. 11 mo., 24, 1763; d. 8 mo., 1801; m. Levi Baker.

James, b. 3 mo., 22, 1765; d. 3 mo., 1846; m. Mary Bunnell.

Betty, b. 4 mo., 19, 1767; d. in Greene county, Pennsylvania; m. John Thompson.

Rachel, b. 3 mo., 14, 1769; d. 12 mo., 31, 1774.

Jane, b. 12 mo., 13, 1771; d. 3 mo., 12, 1809; m. Jehu John.

Robert, b. 4 mo., 22, 1774; d. 2 mo., 22, 1859; see below.

Smith, b. 3 mo., 8, 1776; d. 5 mo., 21, 1801, unmarried.

Susanna, b. 2 mo., 6, 1779; d. 5 mo., 1818, unmarried.

Robert Pyle, son of Joseph and Alice, above, was married November 28, 1797, by the rector of the Old Swedes' church, Wilmington, to Hannah Clark, born 7 mo., 22, 1778, died 1 mo., 13, 1863, daughter of Abraham and Hannah (Chamberlin) Clark. He inherited the homestead and continued to reside thereon. His children were thirteen in number:

Joseph C., b. 5 mo., 18, 1799; d. 7 mo., 9, 1834; m. Eliza Woodward.

Sarah, b. 11 mo., 22, 1800; d. 7 mo., 16, 1895; in West Chester, unmarried.

Hannah, b. 11 mo., 18, 1802; d. 3 mo., 2, 1897; m. Sharpless Taylor.

Alice, b. 9 mo., 29, 1804; d. 1 mo., 6, 1884; m. Palmer Chamberlin.

James, b. 3 mo., 26, 1807; d. 5 mo., 20, 1808.

Lydia Ann, b. 9 mo., 1, 1808, d. 4 mo., 29, 1884; m. Jesse Cloud.

Jane, b. 12 mo., 4, 1809; d. 2 mo., 24, 1875; m. Henry M. Paxson.

Clark, b. 10 mo., 22, 1811; d. 6 mo., 30, 1825.

Lewis, b. 4 mo., 4, 1813; d. 5 mo., 9, 1896; see below.

Ann Eliza, b. 3 mo., 22, 1815; d. 1 mo., 21, 1903; m. Pennock Mercer.

Matilda, b. 1 mo., 27, 1818; d. 5 mo., 21, 1879; m. Thomas E. Bennett.

Susan, b. 9 mo., 12, 1819; m. Jesse Taylor, now of West Chester.

Rachel, b. 6 mo., 19, 1821; d. 1 mo., 19, 1877; m. Caleb H. Perdue.

Lewis Pyle, son of Robert and Hannah, above, was married 11 mo., 15, 1838, at Hockess Meeting, to Orpha Heald, born 12 mo., 4, 1817, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Mendenhall) Heald, of Mill Creek Hundred, Delaware. He inherited the homestead in West Marlborough, and his widow still survives. They had five children:

Joseph Haines, b. 7 mo., 29, 1840; m. Sallie Sharpless.

Robert Lewis, b. 1 mo., 29, 1842; see below.

Edward, b. 9 mo., 16, 1845; m. Josephine Kimble.

Hannah J., b. 12 mo., 6, 1847; m. Edwin Buffington, 5 mo., 5, 1870.

Pennock M., b. 3 mo., 2, 1851; m. Josephine Lancaster.

Robert L. Pyle, above named, was born in the state of Delaware, where his father resided, on the Heald homestead, for about eight years after marriage. He completed his education at Benjamin Swayne's School, London Grove township, and engaged in storekeeping at the village of that name. Through energetic efforts combined with careful management, his business has increased until at present he ranks as one of the leading merchants of Chester county, having four large stores in the villages of London Grove, Hamorton, Avondale and West Grove. He was one of the organizers of the West Grove National Bank, and is now president of that institution, after having served six years as vice-president. He has also taken a deep interest in the George school, situated near Newtown, Pennsylvania. He was chosen by the meeting as one of the committee to select and secure a site for the same, and is still a member of the committee on management.

Mr. Pyle was married 10 mo., 15, 1863, to Elizabeth D. Walton, born 7 mo., 6, 1841, died 3 mo., 5, 1884, daughter of David and Eliza (Pusey) Walton, of London Grove. He is a member of the Friends' Meeting and in politics a Republican. His children are five in number, Jessie, Frederick B., Ellen, Robert and Margery, of whom the second married Ellen Passmore and has two children, F. Lawrence and Elizabeth.

THE CLAYTON FAMILY. Among the peaceful towns of Chester county, Pennsylvania, there have lived for many decades the descendants of the original Quaker settlements of the new world, and among these worthy and ever respected people was the Clayton family, some of whose representatives are to be given a place in this sketch.

It was in 1794 that Uriah Clayton was born in West Bradford township, and his wishes never led him to stray from his native place. By trade he was a hatter, but in later life he followed farming. His ancestors had all been Quakers, and he was one of the devout followers of the faith, attended meeting regularly and conformed his life to his religion. It is remembered that he was a regular pupil in the Friends' School of the township during his youth, that school house is still standing, and he displayed there many of the characteristics which adorned his life in later years. He followed the general trend of political belief enunciated by the Whig-Republican parties. His death occurred in 1869, and his remains now rest in the Friends' burying ground. He was twice married. His first wife was Ann Fistler and the second was Sarah Woodward, a daughter of Richard Woodward, of West Bradford. Of these marriages the following children were born to him: 1. Emeline, the daughter of his first wife, who was the only one who lived to maturity, is the wife of Alexander Taggart, and the mother of six children; 2. Elizabeth A., who married Oliver P. Edwards, and became the mother of eleven children; 3. Mary J., the wife of Charles Rubican, to whom she bore two children; 4. Albino, who married Enoch Pennock and had five children; 5. The son Richard is deceased.

The youngest child in this family is Caroline, and she has been one of the well known citizens of West Bradford township for many years. She was born in 1838, and for a time lived in Newlin township, where she gained the large part of her education, although she has been one of those women who have always been interested in the higher things of life, and thus may be said to have been a student all her life. She has remained single and has devoted herself to the religious work of the Society of Friends; she is an earnest speaker and has done much good. She is also an active worker in the Woman's Christian Temperance Workers.

THE MILES FAMILY. The village of Mortonville, a pleasant little place of about one hundred and fifty inhabitants, situated about the center of Chester county, enjoys the advantage of the railroad, and is one of the supply places for the agricultural community which surrounds it. One of the progressive business men of this town, and the dispenser of Uncle Sam's mail, is Mr. Theodore F. Miles, who is popular with his customers and is much interested in all the affairs of the vicinity.

His father was John D. Miles, a resident of Newlin township, and he follows the trade of plasterer. He believes in the principles of Democracy, and in fraternal relations is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle of West Chester and the Heptasophs. His wife was Kate Rogers, whose father, Albert Rogers, was a merchant at Romansville and then a farmer of East Fallowfield township. There were three sons born of this marriage, and of these Roger and William, both unmarried, learned the trade of plasterer and worked with their father.

Theodore F. Miles has spent most of his life in this county and was educated in the excellent schools of West Chester. He early showed a decided bent toward the mercantile life, and after leaving school was a clerk in a West Chester store for some time. Having gained considerable experience he decided to make a start for himself, and accordingly established a general store in Mortonville, where the postoffice for the community was also located. He devoted most of his time to his business, but he is an interested worker for the cause of temperance and is prominent in the party representing that reform. The name of his wife was Clara Shoemaker, a daughter of Reuben Shoemaker, who was engaged in the occupation of mill worker in Harrisburg, and died twenty-five years since. Mr. and Mrs. Miles are attendants of the Baptist church, of which they are active members, and she is a zealous church worker.

THE YUNKIN FAMILY. The old soldiers of the Rebellion are becoming daily more rare, and soon the names of the last survivors of that great struggle may be named almost in a breath. But while we have them it should be the duty of this generation to honor them as they deserve, and one of these grand men of whom Newlin township, Chester county, is proud to possess, is Edward Yunkin. He is a native of this county, and after finishing a course at the public schools he took up the trade of shoemaker, but not having been altogether satisfied with this pursuit after he had followed it for some time, he began farming. He was diligently tilling the soil when the Civil war turned the thoughts of the patriotic from all such peaceful pursuits, and in 1862 he enlisted in Company H, Forty-second Pennsylvania Regiment, commanded by Colonel Taylor, of Kennett Square, Chester county. This regiment served throughout the war and won the name of "Buck Tails," and its achievements are now a part of history. Mr. Yunkin was present in several battles, but in the engagement at Fredericksburg he was in the heat of the conflict and during a fierce charge was shot in the leg; the bone was shattered and amputation was necessary to save the remainder of the limb. He was compelled to endure a long siege of illness in one of the army hospitals, and on his recovery he was honorably discharged, at which he returned to his farm and resumed the work where he had left off.

Mr. Yunkin became the husband of Miss Maggie Taylor, the daughter of a prosperous farmer of West Marlboro. Their children are: 1. Ella, who is trained nurse, and her services are in great demand in the county; 2. William, who married Sallie Downing, and they are the parents of three children; 3. Clara, who became the wife of William H. Mount and two children have been born to them. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mount are members of the Methodist church. The family live in a nice home in Mortonville. Mr. Yunkin is an active worker in the ranks of the Republican party, attends the Presbyterian church, of which both he and wife are active members, is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and receives a pension to partly recompense him for his loss in the war.

PASCHALL WORTH. Ambition, industry and perseverance have been the predominant factors in the success which has attended the well directed efforts of Paschall Worth, one of the substantial citizens of East Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has resided since his birth. He is a son of John and Hannah P. (Carpenter) Worth.

John Worth, Jr. (father) was one of the representative citizens of East Bradford township, Chester county, was the owner of an extensive and highly cultivated farm upon which he resided throughout the many years of his active and useful life, and on this estate he and his wife, Hannah P. (Carpenter) Worth, daughter of Francis and Sarah Carpenter, the former named a well known hatter of East Bradford township, reared a large family of children, most of whom grew to years of maturity and are occupying places of prominence in the various walks of life. Their children were: Samuel, who married Anne E. England; Francis, deceased; Ebenezer, who married Mary Pyle, and four children were the issue of this union, two of whom are now deceased; they reside in the state of Colorado; and Paschall, mentioned at length hereinafter.

Paschall Worth received a practical education at the Westtown Boarding School, and during his boyhood and early manhood became thoroughly familiar with the work and duties of farm life. He is now the owner of a fine farm of one hundred and forty acres of highly cultivated land in East Bradford township, which is devoted to the production of the many staple articles for which Chester county is noted, most of which are readily disposed of to the Philadelphia markets and being of a superior quality they realize a good price. Mr. Worth is well informed on all the leading questions of the day, and takes an active and keen interest in township affairs and all enterprises that affect the material growth and advancement of the community in which he resides.

Mr. Worth married Lydia D. Woodward, daughter of William and Rachel Woodward, the former named having been a prosperous merchant of West Bradford township. The following named children were born to this union: 1. Frances A., wife of Henry D. Allen, who is an employee of a wholesale rubber house in the city of Philadelphia; 2. Moses B., unmarried, assists his father in the management of the home farm; 3. William, who died in the twenty-first year of his age; 4. Bertha, wife of Franklin L. Hall, a banker of Providence, Rhode Island; they are the parents of two children; 5. Sarah C., wife of Edgar M. Scattergood, who is engaged in the wholesale boot and shoe business in the city of Philadelphia; their family consists of two children; 6. Mary E., unmarried; 7. Armit, unmarried, is engaged in mercantile business in Providence, Rhode Island; 8. Paschall Worth, Jr., deceased.

THE ROBINSON FAMILY. The family of Robinson has resided in Chester county for many generations and has been identified with much of its development. There is always much interest attached to people who have thus remained in one locality and have become, as it were, products of the soil. An examination into the records of such a family usually reveals the fact that the elements of stability and love of established principle are thoroughly implanted in their very natures, and all petty disturbances which often threaten the corporate existence of those less firmly rooted pass them by without effect. So it is, probably, that this family of whom we shall here give a brief biography has come to be numbered among Chester county's substantial citizens.

One of the members of this house is John Robinson, who for many years maintained his home in Newlin township and conducted a nice farm until his death, which occurred April 28, 1888. He was educated in the county public schools, and was very young when he was married to Miss Elizabeth Cavanaugh, and by this marriage the following children were born: 1. John, deceased; 2. Owen, who married Alice Snyder, and they are the parents of two children; 3. John T.; 4. Anna M., unmarried, and resides at home; 5. David, who married Rachel Booth, and they have two children; 6. Edward, who married Catherine McDonald; 7. William, who married Rose Gibson; 8. Joseph H. Robinson, who is now residing on the old home farm, conducting it according to his ideas of agricultural success. He has always lived in this county and acquired his education in the schools at Laurel. He is classed among the leading Republicans of the township, and his services in public matters are highly esteemed. He is a member of the Catholic church.

THE FULTON FAMILY. During the past century the United States has been taking a great part of the best of the Irish emigrants and in this land of opportunity they have become most loyal, industrious and capable citizens. It is a historical fact that the younger and sturdier part of the population, especially in the congested districts, of Ireland have made their way to America, and the Fulton family is an example of such people, and they are now numbered among the highly respected citizens of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The date of the immigration of the first member of the family was in 1817, when John Fulton, Sr. crossed the Atlantic and settled in Fallowfield township of this county. He afterward moved to Newlin township and lived there till his death. His first wife was Miss Jordan. By his second wife, whose maiden name was Mathilda Boyd, a daughter of Elizabeth Boyd of this county, he had the following children: William, John M., Mary Jane, Thomas Samuel.

John M. Fulton received his education in the schools of Fallowfield township, and then took up farming as a vocation. He resides on a valuable farm of seventy-one acres in Newlin township, and in addition to his general farming he manages a dairy and thus adds his quota to the products for which Chester county is noted. He is a Republican in politics, and his earnest work in his party's interest has made him a valued member of the community. His church membership is with the Presbyterian church, in whose affairs he takes an active part. He was married to Rhody Wilson, who is the daughter of Joshua Wilson, a farmer in Fallowfield township.

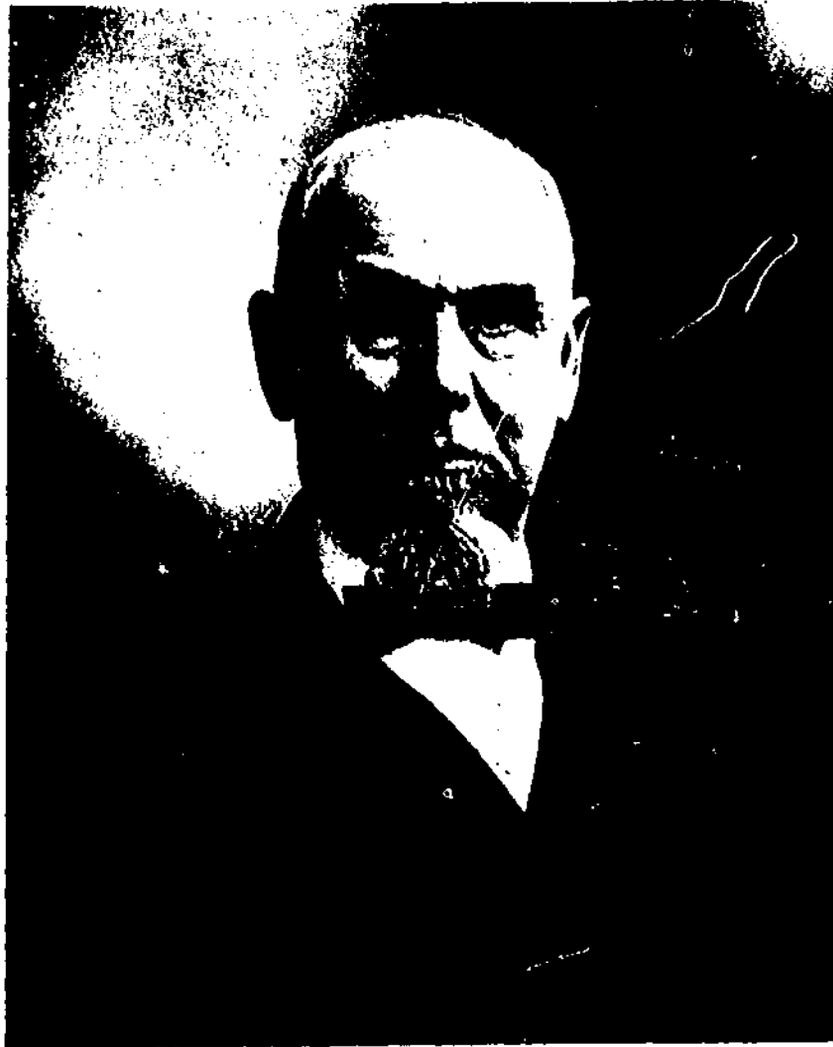

THE HARLAN FAMILY. Chester county, Pennsylvania, is one of the places in the east which abounds in historical associations. America as a whole is much too young a country to contain the reminiscences of the past that the countries of the old world have, being more favored in this respect. The farm which is the property of Mr. Henry Harlan, located on the southern boundry of the county and of the state, contains a part of what is perhaps the most famous line of survey in the world, and on the place is a stone marking the line which the surveyors, Mason and Dixon, made to designate the point at which the course started south, little dreaming as they did so, that it would play so prominent a part in the later history of the country.

Joel Harlan, the father of the owner of this farm, grew up in Newlin township, was educated in the public schools, and was then sent to enjoy the privileges of that justly famous academy at West Chester, established by Jonathan Gause. He afterward made farming his settled occupation, and attained an unusual degree of success in this calling. He accepted the Republican doctrine as his politics. He married Margaretta A., the daughter of Abram Bailey, a physician of Marshallton.

Henry was the son of these parents. He was permitted to enjoy an excellent education, for after he had completed his course in the common school he went to Collegeville, in Montgomery county, and attended the splendid institution in that place. He made farming his vocation, and at the present time operates the farm above mentioned which consists of fifty-six acres, and he also runs a profitable dairy. Mr. Harlan's first wife was Rachel A. Worth, and for his second helpmate he chose Miss Elizabeth, the daughter of William Glendenning, of Lancaster county. Three children were born of this union: John, who married Lizzie Shaw, and they have one child, Charles Henry; Mary, who married Frank L. Markle, has one child, Frank Harlan Markle; and Annie, single. Mr. Harlan is a Republican in political belief, and his interest in educational matters is shown by the fact that he has served for the past twenty years as school director, and has also held the office of secretary. He belongs to the Odd Fellows and the Masonic lodge, and holds to the Quaker faith of his ancestors.

JOHN P. THORNBURG. The family of this name has been connected with Chester county for several generations during which time its representatives have figured prominently in the industrial and political life of their respective communities. While mostly farmers, several of them have been successful in the various mechanical arts and always ranked as industrious and efficient workmen. Yearsley Thornburg will be remembered by some of the older citizens in the double capacity of farmer and stonemason, and in both pursuits he proved a success. He was a native of West Bradford township, and born there early in the nineteenth century. Trained up and educated in the usual way, he began in early manhood to learn the stonemason's trade but later in life followed farming also, to which occupation he devoted much attention for many years. He married Phoebe Valentine, by whom he reared six children, and they lived happily until their respective deaths, which occurred a number of years ago. Thomas, their eldest son, married Mary Price, but is now dead. Paschall, married a Miss Patterson, and has one child. Elizabeth became the wife of Joseph Mace, and had six children. Phoebe, who married George Massey, had one child, and Clarissa, the youngest daughter, remained single.

Jacob H. Deves

Sarah D Dimes

John P. Thornburg, sixth of the above enumerated children, was born in West Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1836, and received his education in the neighborhood schools. He engaged in farming upon arriving at years of maturity and has achieved noteworthy success in his ventures. At the present time he owns a large farm, which he rents and he is engaged in an extensive butchering business. He votes the Republican ticket, but is not especially active in politics, his only office consisting of membership on the school board and a term as township auditor. In 1860, Mr. Thornburg was united in marriage with Prudence, daughter of Washington Woodward, of Delaware, by whom he had ten children, but two of these have passed away. Those living are Thomas, who married Adele Cobb, of Philadelphia, and has one child; John, who is unmarried; Samuel, a dentist by profession; Mary; Anna Z.; Clara, who married William Jacquettee; Narcissa, a teacher, and Sadie, who married Walter E. Leedom. Mr. Thornburg is a member of the Presbyterian church at West Chester, and lives the life of a good and useful citizen and in consequence enjoys general esteem.

JACOB HAUSE DEWEES. The Dewees family, of which Jacob H. Dewees, a prosperous farmer and dairyman of Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a representative in the present generation, is of Welsh descent and they have been residents of this state since the early days of its history.

The earliest ancestor of the family of whom there is any authentic record was Waters Dewees, a native of Chester county, whose early life was spent in the vicinity of Doe Run, but later he removed to West Nantmeal township, where his death occurred at an advanced age. He was successful in his business undertakings, which consisted of the management of a hotel and agricultural pursuits, the latter named industry being conducted on the farm now known as the Marsh property. He was a loyal supporter of the principles of the old line Whig party. Waters Dewees and his wife, Ann (Bull) Dewees, were the parents of eight children—George, Edward, Thomas D., Sallie Clingan, Ann Wood, Rachel Roberts, Elizabeth Fries, and Mary McLain. The mother of these children attained the age of eighty-two years.

Thomas D. Dewees, father of Jacob H. Dewees, was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, in 1813, was reared on his father's farm and attended the schools adjacent to his home. He then engaged in farming and marketing in West Vincent township, being the owner of a farm of eighty acres of choice land. During the early years of his manhood he gave his political allegiance to the Whig party, but later he advocated the principles of Republicanism, taking a keen and active interest in all local questions. Mr. Dewees was united in marriage, in 1836, to Elizabeth Hause, daughter of Jacob Hause, a prosperous merchant of East Nantmeal township. Their children were—Anna, wife of William Leonard of Philadelphia; Jacob H., mentioned at length hereinafter; Sallie, wife of Preston Mosteller, a farmer in West Pikeland township; Thomas B., a resident of Buckrunsville; William, deceased; John, deceased; Jesse H., married Emma Nichols; Howard, deceased; Ella, wife of John Davis, for many years engaged in the business of manufacturing Saratoga chips in the city of Philadelphia, now deceased; Ada, wife of William Yeager, who is now living a retired life; Hannah, deceased; and Harry C., who was educated in the public schools of West Vincent township and Norristown, and is now engaged in farming pursuits. Thomas D. Dewees (father) died at his home in West Vincent township, March 5, 1876, in the sixty-fourth year of his age.

Jacob H. Dewees, son of Thomas D., and Elizabeth Dewees, was born in West Nantmeal township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 5, 1837. His studies were pursued in the public schools of the neighborhood and after laying aside his books, he chose the occupation of agriculture for his life work. He is now the owner of a one hundred and twenty-nine acre farm in Upper Uwchlan township, on which he resides, another in West Vincent township which consists of one hundred and fifty-six acres of productive land, and four acres of wood land on Mill hill. He conducts extensive general operations on both farms, and in addition he owns and operates a dairy of from forty-five to fifty head of cattle, disposing of the products in the city of Philadelphia. Mr. Dewees is a practical and progressive farmer, who has achieved prominence and financial success in his business undertakings. His church membership is with the Baptist denomination, and his political affiliations are with the Republican party. In 1863 Mr. Dewees was a member of an emergency regiment, which was formed to repel the advances on northern territory of General Lee's army.

Mr. Dewees married, December 13, 1866, Sarah Stiteler, daughter of Henry and Peninah

Stiteler, the former named a practical agriculturist of West Vincent township. Mrs. Dewees was born January 20, 1842, and educated in the public schools of West Vincent township. Their children are—1. Howard, who acquired his education in the public schools of Upper Uwchlan, and since leaving school has been engaged in farming on the old homestead; he married May Stietler, daughter of Elwood and Catherine Stietler of West Pikeland, and they are the parents of three children, among whom is J. Maurice Dewees, now entering upon his educational career, George R. and Irvin S. Dewees. 2. George S., a graduate of the West Chester State Normal School and the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, and now practicing his profession in West Chester, Pennsylvania. 3. Rosalind, wife of James Mosteller, a farmer of West Vincent township, and their family consists of three children—Dewees, Sarah, and Clinton Mosteller.

THE WAY FAMILY. Mrs. Sarah Ellen Way, whose life and that of her immediate relatives is the groundwork of this biography, is the daughter of William Penn Baldwin and Martha Emily Bane, the daughter of Eber Bane. The first child born to this marriage was Sarah Ellen who married Emmor R. Way, and the children born to them are as follows: Elva E., Mary J. and one who died in childhood. Mr. Way was educated at the Romansville public schools and then learned the carpenter's trade. At present they have a general store at the village of Romansville, and the postoffice is located in the store. He is a strong Republican, attends the Friends' Meeting, and is a member of the Red Men and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

TRYON J. PUGH, who is successfully carrying on agricultural pursuits in West Bradford township, has spent almost his entire life in Chester county, his birth having occurred in 1854, in the township where he now lives. His father, Caleb Pugh, is a retired and respected farmer of West Bradford. Here our subject was reared to habits of industry and honesty and was educated in the public schools and the Normal School.

After laying aside his text books, Mr. Pugh engaged in farming for a time, but subsequently went to Colorado where he became interested in gold mining and was quite successful in that venture. On his return to Pennsylvania, he resumed agriculture in West Bradford township, Chester county, and to-day owns and operates a good farm of sixty-six acres which yields to him a golden tribute in return for the care and labor bestowed upon it.

Politically Mr. Pugh is identified with the Republican party and he has been honored with various township offices, the duties of which he has most capably and satisfactorily discharged. He is a member of the Friends' Meeting, and is also connected with Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Junior Order of American Mechanics. His life has ever been an upright and honorable one, and he has the confidence and respect of all who know him.

Mr. Pugh married Miss Rachel Rodeback, a daughter of George Rodeback, who is also a farmer of West Bradford township, and three children were born to them, but two died when quite young. The only survivor is a son, Norman, who is with his father.

ALICE CHEYNEY. The family to which the above named lady belongs is one that has been long established in the county of Chester, Pennsylvania. Her grandfather was named James Woodward, and it is related that he was the first person to build a stone house in the county. He had taken land under the Penn Patent Land Lease, thereby becoming the owner of one thousand acres of valuable land in the county. Her father was James Woodward, Jr., and he had been one of the successful farmers of West Bradford township.

Alice Woodward was the descendant of these forefathers, and after she had grown to woman's estate she became the wife of Thomas W. Cheyney. He had learned the trade of shoemaker, but after prosecuting this occupation for a time he embarked in other pursuits and during the last years of his life conducted a flour and feed store at Marshallton. His death occurred in 1901, and his remains lie buried in the Marshallton cemetery. He had been a highly respected citizen of the locality, and his demise was felt to be a loss to the business and social affairs of the village. Mrs. Cheyney makes her home in Marshallton and is the owner of several houses, which pay her good returns in rent. She is the woman of earnest Christian character and takes much interest in the work of the Methodist church, of which she is a member.

GEORGE McFARLAND is a prominent and influential citizen of West Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has made his home since 1837, taking a very active part in public affairs. He was born in New Lynn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 17, 1820, and was educated in the public schools and also attended Jonathan Gause's school, which was one of the famous educational institutions during his boyhood.

After reaching manhood Mr. McFarland was united in marriage to Miss E. Pennypacker, a daughter of John Pennypacker, of Virginia, and they became the parents of seven children, namely: Harry J., the eldest, married Hannah Foster, by whom he has four children. Egbert, married Belle Buckes, and they have three children. Mary P., is single. Edwin P., is deceased. Fred L., married Emily J. Speakman, and to them have been born two children. George P., married Marie Ferree, and they have one child. W. Howard, the youngest of the family, is unmarried. The wife and mother died January 30, 1895, and was laid to rest in the Marshallton cemetery.

Since attaining his majority Mr. McFarland has taken a very active and prominent part in political affairs and uses his right of franchise in support of the Republican party and its principles. He has done all in his power to promote its interests, and his fellow citizens, recognizing his worth and ability, have honored him with local office. For fifteen years he acceptably served as supervisor of his township, and filled the office of auditor ten years to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. His religious faith is manifest by his membership in the Methodist church, and for half a century he has been a prominent member of the Odd Fellows society, in which he has passed through all the chairs.

GEORGE A. CUNNINGHAM. The family bearing this name have long been identified with Chester county affairs and have done their full share in helping along the development in various lines. Some of them have been mechanics, some farmers, but in whatever business they were found the Cunninghams always ranked as good neighbors and good citizens generally. It is men of this type, the solid yeomanry, who give every community its real strength and whose absence makes progress impossible. While the professions are well enough in their way they are the products of advanced civilization and may be dispensed with altogether in the pioneer period. It is the man with the ax, the adz, the plow who lays the first foundation, and it is the work of this kind, enlarged and improved, that ultimately build up the state and lay its foundations broad and deep. Joseph E. Cunningham, who passed his whole life in Chester county, was a carpenter by trade, and in the line of his work made a wide acquaintance. The highest compliment that can be paid any man is to say that he did well what was assigned him and what it was his duty to do, and this praise was earned by Mr. Cunningham, who conscientiously carried out every obligation. His quiet and blameless life was terminated by death in 1894, and his remains interred at West Grove, where repose those whom he had loved in life. Joseph E. Cunningham in early manhood was united in marriage with Lydia, daughter of Samuel Cloud, of West Grove, by whom he had nine children. The five of these now living are: Anna M.; James, who married Lydia Lovell; Joseph, Jr.; Emmor L.; and George A.

George A. Cunningham, mentioned last in the above list, is a native of Chester county, and all his time and energies have been expended within her limits. For the last thirty-two years he has been a resident of West Bradford township, where he has pursued his trade as a wheelwright. He is a good workman as well as a good manager, and conducts an extensive business. Aside from his own affairs he finds time to take part in the political and social life of his community. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party, but he is not ranked among the office seekers. He is a member of the Masonic lodge at Kennett Square, and is also a leading spirit in the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He is a member of the Presbyterian church and thoughtful in the performance of all duties which devolve upon him as an integral part of a populous and progressive community.

George A. Cunningham was united in marriage to Caroline Gross, who was born in Coatesville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of George Gross, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, who was always a farmer. There were three children born to Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham, namely: Valeria, born July 9, 1872, wife of John Lilly; Clarence, born January 3, 1875, married and lives in West Chester, a marble cutter by trade; and Eva, born January 6, 1876, is now employed as a stenographer.

JESSE JONES LATSHAW, a successful farmer and highly respected citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant on the paternal side of an honored German lineage. Jacob Latshaw (great-grandfather) was an eye-witness of one of the most thrilling episodes in our struggle for independence, having carried wheat to the starving patriots at Valley Forge. John Latshaw (grandfather) was born March 26, 1785, married Susanna High, born in 1786, and they were the parents of the following named children—1. Catherine, born January 20, 1810, was the wife of Rudolph Reiff, and at her death left three children; 2. Magdelene, born April 26, 1812, became the wife of John McCurdy and mother of four children; she is now residing at Devault, Pennsylvania; 3. Mary, born December 4, 1814, became the wife of Israel Beidler, and their son is Congressman Jacob Beidler of Ohio; 4. Jacob and 5. Susan, twins, born July 30, 1817; Jacob married Sarah Pennypacker and after her death married a sister to his first wife; he had one child by his first wife and six children by his second wife; Susan married Rudolph Harley and is still living; 6. John High, born June 30, 1820.

John High Latshaw (father) was born June 30, 1820. He taught school for a number of years after attaining young manhood, and the remainder of his business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He married, August 5, 1851, Elizabeth F. Jones, who was born in the house where Jesse J. Latshaw now resides, December 4, 1826, and was a daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth (Frick) Jones, the former named having been a cabinet maker and farmer during his lifetime. The Jones family resided in that vicinity for several generations, as their grandfather was also born in the same house. Mr. and Mrs. Jones were the parents of the following named children—1. Enoch L., born January 9, 1812, was a merchant at Altoona, Pennsylvania, died in February, 1901, leaving four children; 2. Hannah, born July 10, 1814, died in infancy; 3. Mary C., born May 12, 1816, died in infancy; 4. Catherine F., born July 22, 1818, died in early life; 5. Salinda, born April 7, 1821, died July 3, 1902; 6. Susan E., born December 2, 1823, died December 2, 1893, was the wife of Edwin Miles, and four children survived her; 7. Jessie, born December 4, 1826, died November 5, 1902; 8. Elizabeth F., born December 4, 1826. John High Latshaw, who died February 4, 1893, and his wife, Elizabeth F. (Jones) Latshaw, who died April 26, 1900, were the parents of two children—1. Alice M., born September 11, 1852, is the wife of Charles A. King, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and their two daughters—Mabel and Jessie—reside with them; Mabel King was born June 10, 1872, and is the wife of Ralph Henry Barbour of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and Jessie King was born June 8, 1874. 2. Jesse Jones Latshaw.

Jesse Jones Latshaw, son of John High and Elizabeth F. (Jones) Latshaw, was born February 9, 1857, on the old homestead. He received his primary education in the public schools of his native township, and subsequently attended two private schools, one at Chester Springs, presided over by Miss Ada Fussell and another at Kimberton, of which the principal was Miss Lida Wilson. He then spent two years at Tremont Seminary, which was at that time under the able leadership of Mr. John W. Loch. At the commencement of his business career, Mr. Latshaw formed a partnership with Mr. Theodore Griffith at Downingtown, Pennsylvania, under the firm name of Griffith & Latshaw, dealers in hardware, etc. At the expiration of two years, Mr. Latshaw felt a desire for a wider field of action and disposing of his interest in the business, he went to Colorado where he had six years experience of life on a ranch. During a portion of this period he was in partnership with Mr. Charles A. King, a brother-in-law, and their transactions were conducted on an extensive scale. He settled in Philadelphia on his return to the east, was employed for a time in the freight department of the Reading Railroad, and later became book-keeper for Mr. O. W. White, then a commission merchant on Front street. After remaining there seven years, he engaged in the wholesale butter business at 920 Dauphin street, which line of trade he conducted successfully for six years and then retired to Chester county, and in his native township sought relaxation from the cares of business in the life of a farmer. In 1895 he settled on the homestead, where he devotes his entire time to general farming and the management of a dairy of fifteen head of cattle, the products from the latter named branch of the business finding a ready sale at the Pikeland Creamery. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, affiliating with Mt. Pickering Lodge, No. 446, and in politics he supports the measures and principles advocated by the Republican party. He and his family attend the Baptist church.

Mr. Latshaw married, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April 17, 1889, Frances Evans Sperry, and their children are: Alice Elizabeth, born December 29, 1890; John High, born October 17, 1893; Sarah Miles, born October 28, 1897; and Christine Ashton, born December 24, 1902. The two last named children were born on the homestead which was the birthplace of three preceding generations. Samuel Sperry, father of Mrs. Latshaw, was in his youth a telegraph operator and resided in the city of Philadelphia. For a long period he held the position of manager for the Westingham Telegraph Company, and for nine years was receiver for the Union Traction Company. During the Civil war Mr. Sperry served in the Union army, participated in the battles of Frederic burg and Gettysburg, received wounds in each battle, and in consideration of which he was the recipient of a government pension. Mr. Sperry married Christine Ashton and they were the parents of two children: Frances Evans, wife of Jesse Jones Latshaw, and Walter Ashton, born April 3, 1876, paymaster for the Boston and Philadelphia Steam Ship Company.

JAMES G. FOX, one of the representatives to the state legislature from Chester county, Pennsylvania, has been an important figure for a number of years in the annals of the county. He has aided materially in its progress and welfare, been an active factor in administering the affairs of the government in his own community, and is widely recognized as a Republican leader who has labored earnestly for the success of his party. Close study has given him a keen insight into the important political problems, and his interest in the issues of the day that affect the national weal or woe is of the highest. He was born in Hummelstown, Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, November 3, 1858, a son of Dr. Thomas G. and Dianah (Hershey) Fox. His ancestry dates back to the early part of the eighteenth century when George, John and Thomas Fox came to this country from England, and settled in this section of the state of Pennsylvania where they became loyal and prominent citizens.

James G. Fox

Dr. Thomas G. Fox (father) was a native of Hummelstown, Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, where his father, George Fox, resided for many years, as did also his grandfather, George Fox, who settled there in 1780, participated in the capacity of drummer boy in the Revolutionary war, and his occupations were those of farmer, hotel keeper and merchant. Dr. Fox was for many years the leading medical practitioner of his native town, where he put to a practical test the theoretical knowledge he acquired during his collegiate course. He was a member of the state legislature in 1861 and 1863; was elected in 1873 to the office of prothonotary of Dauphin county, and at the expiration of his first term was elected to a second; was a member of the board of prison inspectors of the county, serving at one time as president of that body; and for many years was the incumbent of the office of school director. Dr. Fox and his wife, Dianah (Hershey) Fox, were the parents of the following named children: 1. L. Webster, who is a leading oculist in the city of Philadelphia and holds the chair of Ophthalmology in the Medico-Chirurgical College; 2. Elizabeth, who resides at home; 3. Robert T., who died in early life; 4. James G., mentioned hereinafter; 5. John E., who is a leading attorney of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and is filling a term as state senator; 6. Adelaide, wife of Jno. H. Gay, a carpet manufacturer in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. 7. Mary, also resides at home; 8. Carrie, wife of J. P. Nissley, a banker of Hummelstown, Dauphin county; 9. George H., a prominent medical practitioner in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

James G. Fox was educated in the public schools of Derry township, Dauphin county, and at Hummelstown school, and after laying aside his text books at the age of eighteen years he took up farming, which vocation he has followed ever since. He conducted his operations in Dauphin county up to the year 1892, when he removed to Chester county and assumed charge of the estate of his cousin, George F. Fox, which he has managed successfully up to the present time (1903).

The property is known as "Fox Croft," is located in the vicinity of Downingtown, and is one of the best estates in the county. Mr. Fox is a man of strong mentality, keen discernment, resolute will and perseverance, and is therefore entitled to the prosperity which has attended his business efforts, and also to the distinction of being classed among the leading agriculturists of Chester county.

While a resident of Dauphin county he served six years as school director, and after his removal to Chester county he at once took an active part in public affairs. In 1893 he was elected a member of the Republican county committee, and has served continuously up to the present time. In 1898 he was a candidate to the state legislature, but met with defeat owing to a fusion movement. He was a nominee for the same office in 1900, was elected by a substantial majority, and re-elected in 1902. He was appointed the chairman of the committee on public roads in session of 1901, and served as a member of the railroad committee, also forestry, military, new counties and county seats. In the session of 1903 he served on the committee on public roads in session of 1901, and agriculture. He introduced the bill asking for two hundred and eighty thousand dollars for the improvement of agriculture throughout the state, and the bill was passed with an appropriation of two hundred and thirty thousand dollars. He also passed the bill granting a rebate on taxes where wide tire wagons are used. He is a member and elder of the Lutheran church in Downingtown, a member of the Downingtown Republican Club, the Roosevelt Club of West Grove, the Patriotic Order of the Sons of America, which he joined in 1877, the Williamson Lodge, No. 309, Free and Accepted Masons of Downingtown, the Order of Elks, No. 854, of West Chester, Knights of the Golden Eagle, Windsor Castle, No. 92, Downingtown, the Patrons of Husbandry, and worthy master of Fox Croft Grange, No. 1220.

On February 9, 1881, Mr. Fox married Emma Strickler, a daughter of Adam and Sarah (Brightbill) Strickler, of Swatara Station, Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. They are the parents of the following named children: George F., born March 20, 1882, is now a cadet at West Point, New York; Robert T., born August 30, 1883, a student in Lafayette College; James W., born October 11, 1884, a student at West Chester State Normal School; Charles A., born March 27, 1886, a student in the Philadelphia Textile School; John E., born May 14, 1887; W. Webster, born March 24, 1889, killed on the Pennsylvania Railroad, August 6, 1903; M. Virginia, born June 29, 1891; Elizabeth, born October 19, 1893, died in January, 1894; Thomas, born February 8, 1896; and Sarah D. Fox, born January 5, 1899.

The younger children attend the public schools of Downingtown. Mr. Fox and his wife are among the leading residents of that section of the county, and enter heartily into the social interests and life of the community in which they have resided for so many years.

ROBERT G. SMITH, a representative of one of the old and prominent families of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, now resides in Newlin township and is distinguished as being the owner of the oldest flouring mill in the state, situated in the hamlet of Embreeville, on the Wilmington & Northern Railroad. He is also the owner of and holds in his possession a deed dated 1759 in the thirty-second year of King George II over Great Britain and made between Charles Wilson, of Newlinton township, and Robert Johnson of same township, giving title to a shad fishery located on the Brandywine about where his mill now stands. This fact proves that there was not at that time a dam anywhere in the stream.

Robert G. Smith was reared and educated in Delaware county, residing there until 1876 when he removed to Unionville, Chester county. He learned the trade of miller and this occupation has proved a very profitable source of income up to the present time (1903). He is the owner of thirty-eight acres of land surrounding his mill at Embreeville. When Pennsylvania sent forth a call for emergency troops, Mr. Smith was one of the first men to enlist, and served in a regiment of which Major Wilcox was in command until the disturbances were quelled. In politics he is an ardent Prohibitionist, doing all in his power for the advancement of the cause of temperance, and was recently nominated on the Prohibition ticket to serve in the state legislature. He is an esteemed member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Hep-tasophs.

Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Mary E. Sheward, a daughter of William and Diana W. Sheward, the former named having died of chronic diarrhea during his term of service in the United States army in the Civil war, and the latter named is now residing with her daughter, Mrs. Smith, at Unionville. Although Mrs. Sheward has attained the venerable age of ninety-five years, her faculties are perfect and her health excellent and she takes upon herself the daily care of her own room, she also manifests as much interest in the home and family affairs as though they were her own. Mrs. Sheward is a step-daughter of the leading character "Wilson" in the story of Kennett which was written by Bayard Taylor, and her daughter, Mrs. Smith, still retains in her possession much of the clothing which was worn by this character "Wilson" as well as a number of the original paintings made by Bayard Taylor while in Italy. Bayard Taylor, during his entire lifetime, was a faithful friend of the Wilson family, which was Mrs. Sheward's maiden name.

The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Smith—A. Lizzie, the wife of Charles F. Cutler; Mary R., who became the wife of Frank B. Chambers, and they are the parents of two children, Robert B. and Dana E.; Isaac H., who married Bertha Mercer, who bore him one child, Paul R. Smith; and Anna W., who became the wife of Joseph J. Hoopes, and two children were born of this union—Harold, who died in infancy, and Mary Roberta, now living; and Louis T., who died in his twentieth year, Mr. Smith and family, excepting his daughter Anna, who is a member of the Presbyterian church, are active members of the Baptist church. Mr. Smith is now a licensed minister of that denomination and officiates in the pulpit, at funerals and whenever called upon. He has served in the capacity of deacon in his church for thirty-two consecutive years, as superintendent of the Green Valley Sunday School for the past twenty-six years, and has been superintendent of a Union Sunday School held in the Presbyterian church of Unionville, Pennsylvania, for the past three years. The family reside in a beautiful and commodious home in the borough of Unionville, which has been the scene of much social activity.

WILLIAM JONES, a leading citizen of Birmingham township, is descended from a family which has long been resident in the county, having been planted there by William Jones, who settled on a two-hundred-acre tract of land in Birmingham township. It is probable that he also erected the mansion, which was built about the middle of the eighteenth century, and is still the residence of his descendants. He married and was the father of the following children: Phoebe, born May 5, 1739; Joseph, born June 25, 1741; Mary, born March 25, 1744; William, born November 22, 1745; Thomas, born April 25, 1750; Joseph, born August 21, 1754; and Samuel, who was born April 5, 1758, married and was the father of three children; Mary, who was born May 19, 1795, and married Townsend Sharpless; Brinton, mentioned hereinafter; William, who was born November 11, 1804, married, and was the father of four children; Harry, Charles, Lydia, and Mary. Samuel Jones died in 1829.

Brinton Jones, son of Samuel and Lydia Jones, was born December 17, 1797, and in course of time inherited the homestead. In 1858 he remodeled the family mansion, raising it one story.

This historic structure is identified in an interesting manner with the struggle for independence. During an engagement between the British and Continental forces previous to the battle of Brandywine, the house was struck a glancing blow by a British cannonball which left an indentation that is still plainly visible in the brick wall. Brinton Jones married Mary Woodward, and the following children were born to them: Thomas, Anna, William, mentioned at length hereinafter, Samuel, Mary, and George. The death of Brinton Jones occurred in January, 1863.

William Jones, son of Brinton and Mary (Woodward) Jones, was born August 12, 1842, on the homestead, to the ownership of which he succeeded on the death of his father. He devotes himself to agricultural pursuits, and his neighbors and fellow citizens have several times testified to the esteem in which they hold him by electing him to local offices. He is a staunch Republican, following in political matters the traditions of his ancestors, who were ardent Whigs.

Mr. Jones married, in September, 1873, Mary, daughter of James Painter, of Birmingham township. Mrs. Jones died two months after giving birth to a son, Harry Brinton, who is still unmarried, and resides in Cleveland, Ohio, where he is engaged in business as a florist.

GEORGE SPANGLER CHEYNEY. It is recorded on page 393 in Elton's Annals of Kent that Sir Thomas Cheyney, an ancestor of the family now under consideration, died in 1559, the owner of very large estates in Kent, England, the greater part of which he held by reason of his knight service. The ancestor and founder of the Pennsylvania branch of the family was John Cheyney, who came from England and settled in Middletown, Chester county. His last will and testament was made on October 30, 1722, giving and bequeathing his property to his sons, John and Thomas. These sons went back to England after their father's death, but returned to Pennsylvania in 1724 and purchased of Richard Bollars a large tract of land consisting of fifteen hundred acres in Thornbury township, Chester county, about twenty-eight acres of which still remains in the possession of their descendants. Thomas, one of these sons, married Elizabeth Hickman, and they had two children, Mary and Ann, twins, born February 21, 1727-8, of whom Ann was married to James Jeffers. John, the other brother, married Ann Hickman, a sister of his brother's wife; she was the daughter of Benjamin and Ann Hickman, and she died about 1745, having become the mother of five children, as follows: Thomas, born December 12, 1731, died January 12, 1811, was the famous Squire Cheyney of Revolutionary memory, who made the celebrated ride at the battle of Brandywine in order to convey information to General Sullivan in regard to the movements of Cornwallis's army; his remains now repose in the Cheyney burying ground. The second child was John, born June 20, 1733, and died October 8, 1806. Joseph was born January 12, 1735, and died August 10, 1794. Mary, born February 1, 1737, died September 30, 1820. Richard, born March 23, 1739, died June 17, 1791. He was united in marriage to Mary Hannum. Their son, William Cheyney, married Catherine Spangler, and William Hannum Cheyney, the son of the last named parents, married Ann Scott Sharpless, and their four children were as follows:

Charles Henry, born June 23, 1830, is a retired business man of Cheyney, Pennsylvania. He was married November 8, 1855, to Elizabeth Mary Cheyney, a distant relative, born November 9, 1835, and a descendant of Joseph Cheyney and the daughter of Joseph Cheyney and Mary Johnson. By this union there were born seven children, of whom five are living: 1. Henry Clay, born September 3, 1856, lives in Omaha, Nebraska; he married Mary Crowell and they have two children, Charles Crowell, born May 20, 1889, and Henry Clay, Jr., born May 6, 1895. 2. Arthur Stotesbury, born June 12, 1858, and died September 1, 1863. 3. Mary Ella, who was born October 2, 1860, died August 19, 1863. 4. William Irwin, born November 30, 1861, a resident of Media, Pennsylvania, married Edith Worrall Lewis, daughter of Isaac Lewis and Susannah Morton, and they have one child, William Irwin, Jr., born May 8, 1901. 5. George Spangler, who was born July 5, 1863, is unmarried and lives at home. 6. Anna Cornelia, born September 8, 1864, married William Abner Garrett, and they live at Wyncote, Pennsylvania, and have three children, Hibbard, born November 24, 1891, Elizabeth Cheyney, born March 17, 1893, and Catherine, born September 18, 1894. 7. Horace Lincoln, born February 27, 1866, is a practicing attorney in Philadelphia, and is unmarried.

The three remaining children of William Hannum Cheyney are George Spangler, Anna Catherine, and Mary Ann. George Spangler Cheyney is the one whose name heads this sketch, and he was born October 28, 1833, in Thornbury township, Chester county. When he was three years old his father moved to Thornbury township, Delaware county, and it was here that he received his education in the common schools. In 1860 he embarked in a general merchandise business at Cheyney, which he continued till 1895, when he sold out to Edward S. Hickman. He was appointed postmaster of the village in 1865 and has held the office for thirty-seven consecutive years. He is now also engaged in general farming and the coal business. He has been a life-long Republican, and although not a member of any church, he helped build the Union church at Cheyney. He did some military service in 1862, and in 1863 served in the Twenty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Emergency Regiment. He is now a member of Bradbury Post, No. 149, Grand Army of the Republic, at Media, Pennsylvania. Mr. Cheyney was married on March 3, 1875, to Miss Mary W. Price, the daughter of Paxson and Jane Price, and their four children are all living at home: Mabel Raymond, born April 13, 1876; Helen, born October 13, 1877; Georgianna, born April 30, 1880; and Eugene Price, born June 17, 1889.

JOSEPH FULTON. The very mention of this name will cause inquiry on the part of the intelligent reader who will desire to know what, if any, relationship it bears to the immortal inventor of the steamboat. The part of Pennsylvania with which these sketches are dealing was the scene of the famous inventor's life as he was born in Lancaster county in 1765. Little Britain township, the place of his birth, was afterward changed in his honor to Fulton township, and is now so known. There are many persons bearing this honored name in this section of the state and other parts of the country, all descended from three brothers who came from Kilkenny, Ireland, in the early part of the eighteenth century and settled in Lancaster county. It is not necessary to repeat here the story of Robert Fulton, which is familiar to every schoolboy, further than to say that the United States owes to him a debt of gratitude which it can never repay. But for the steamboat, the first rude sample of which was successfully run by him on the Hudson river in 1807, the settlement of the west must have been delayed much longer. It was by means of steamboats navigating great rivers like the Ohio, Mississippi, Missouri and their thousands of tributaries that the early pioneers were able to penetrate the interior long before railroads were constructed. For this reason one naturally feels like taking off his hat to a Fulton as soon as it is ascertained that the blood of the great inventor flows through his veins.

Among the descendants of one of the three brothers mentioned who came to this section about 1747 was Joseph Fulton, who had three children,—Ambrose, Edwin and Joseph. The latter married Annie Fulton, and his children were: Ambrose C., Mary Ann, who married Cyrus Hartley; Hannah, who became Mrs. Williamson by marriage; and Ambrose. Ambrose Fulton is at present a resident of Caln township, in Chester county, where he owns a farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres and is regarded as one of the substantial citizens. He married Annie, daughter of Townsend Moulder, ex-county commissioner of Chester county, and their children are Joseph, Fred, Edna, Ruth and Ambrose, Jr., all still at home. Mr. Fulton is a member of the Baptist church, and a school director of Caln township. Mr. Fulton in politics is a Republican, having filled the various township offices. He came from one of the leading and oldest families in Chester county.

MARGARETTA MARSHALL. As is well known the Quakers were prominent from the beginning in Chester county, and how much they have influenced its growth and development in every respect is a matter of history. It was from the silent meeting houses of these earnest people that ideas and principles went forth which exercised a profound influence upon the public mind and set in motion reforms that were destined to influence the whole human race. They were the inveterate foes of intemperance and slavery, and the sturdy upholders of religious liberty, positions which often brought them in conflict with the "powers that be" and the ruling majority, but as the snowflakes which drop so gently eventually make an avalanche and the sunbeam, rightly directed, will in time rend a mountain, so in the end "the spirit moves" all men to do his bidding. But it is not only in the great affairs of life that the Quaker influence has been felt making for righteousness. In the quiet social circle of the neighborhood, in all that affects conduct and morals in the relationship between man and man, in the sick-room, in times of trouble and in the solemn hour of death, the faith of these people taught them to act as aides and comforters. Thus most of the good done by them is not heralded to the world or written of in books; the only witness is the recipient of the favor and the only reward the consciousness of duty well performed.

Thomas B. Marshall, father of Margaretta Marshall, was born in West Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and was a representative of a family whose history was closely interwoven with that of that section of the state for many years. He was reared in that locality and received a practical education in the schools of the neighborhood, which thoroughly qualified him for a life of usefulness and activity. In early manhood he was united in marriage to Hannah Baily, daughter of Abram Baily, a well known resident of West Bradford. Their children were Jacob B., deceased; Joel C., deceased; Abraham, deceased; Richard, deceased, was the husband of Susan Denny; Emnor E., deceased; Thomas B., who married Elizabeth Cornete, and they are the parents of one child; and Margareta, who was born in Sadsbury township, reared in the influences of a Christian home, and acquired her education in the common schools of the township. She was formerly a regular attendant at the meetings of the Society of Friends. Miss Marshall now resides in a comfortable and pleasant home in Marshallton, West Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

A. C. Fulton.

THOMAS P. WORTH. West Bradford township is one of the most fertile districts of Chester county, and its farms situated on its pleasant hills and valleys form one of the beautiful sections of the state, not only furnishing sustenance for its inhabitants but exporting much grain, cattle and other products to the neighboring cities. One of the pretty farms of this township is that of Thomas P. Worth, who is esteemed for his efforts in a public direction and as a man who gives business-like attention to the affairs of private life. He has been engaged in farming for fourteen years, and the place consists of one hundred and sixty-seven acres, well stocked with cattle.

Mr. Worth was educated at New Salem, Massachusetts, and later at Martin's Academy in Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His marriage occurred in 1888, when he became the husband of Ella Worrell, the daughter of Elwood Worrell, a merchant of Kennett Square. Mr. Worth is a very prominent Republican of the county, and is at the present time the incumbent of the office of auditor for his township. He has also served as school director and has made educational matters an object of considerable study. He and his wife are both attendants at the Quaker meeting, and the doctrine of simplicity in all things has been characteristic of the family for many generations.

JOHN M. BANE. The Bane family is one well known in Chester county, and its members have been noted for their upright character in whatever fields of activity they have been found. They have always adhered to the religious teaching of the famous sect of which William Penn is the most conspicuous example.

This brief biography has to deal with one of the family who has been for the long period of forty years engaged in the carpenter's trade. But he has taken advantage of the necessary lapses of continuous work in this line of industry and has devoted himself to farming. Mr. Bane has made a considerable success in this dual occupation, and is highly deserving of a place in a historical volume of the nature of this.

Eber Bane, his father, was a resident of West

Goshen township of this county. He was educated in the Chester Creek school, was a farmer by occupation, and was a scrupulous follower of Quaker principles. When he passed away he was laid to rest in the Hepsibah cemetery. He married Eliza Price, and they were the parents of ten children, two of whom died when young; the living are: Martha E., who married William Baldwin, and they have six children; Josephine, the wife of John Walk and the mother of one child; Frank, who married Esther Marshall, to whom was born one child; Edwin W., who married Anna Woodward, and to whom was born one child; Annie, who married Ellis Gould, and has two children; Laurreta P.; the wife of William McCorkle, by whom she had three children; Harry H., the husband of Laura Marshall, to whom was born two children.

John M. Bane is the remaining one of the eight living. He married Marietta Romans. Her parents were Moses and Elizabeth G. Romans, and the town of Romansville was named after them. Mr. Bane remembers the old Five Points schoolhouse as the place where he gained his elementary schooling, and since leaving there he has been engaged in the more real duties of life. He attends the Quaker meeting, and his pleasant home is situated on thirty acres of land near Romansville.

ROBERT EMMETT RAMSEY. The family of this name has long been identified with Chester county, resident for the most part in the townships of Highland, West Bradford and the two Fallowfields. They have figured in various callings, as mechanics, tradesmen and farmers, but chiefly in the latter capacity. Robert Ramsey, a native of Highland township, was a wheelwright by trade, but at a later period of his life he engaged in farming and thereafter adhered to that capacity. He was a good workman, a good neighbor, a good citizen and a well informed man who enjoys general confidence and esteem. He married Margaret Reid of Philadelphia, who bore him nine children of whom Hannah, Charles P. and Annie are dead. The living are James, who married Amy Woodward and has five children; William R., who married Mary Binnix; Lizzie J.; Ellen M.; J. Frank, and the subject of this sketch.

Robert Emmett Ramsey was born in East Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and obtained his education in the public schools and Unionville Academy. When he reached the age of maturity he engaged in agricultural pursuits, and at the present time owns a farm of one hundred and thirty acres which he cultivates by modern and up-to-date methods. He married Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Squire David Young of East Fallowfield township, and has an only son, named Henry V. Mr. Ramsey has taken quite an active part in local politics and is recognized as the anti-Republican leader of the township. Being especially interested in the cause of education, the people have several times called upon him to serve as school director and at the present time he is filling the office of supervisor. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church, the latter being quite prominent in religious work. Mr. Ramsey is a member of the Order of Odd Fellows, the Red Men and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. No family stands higher in the community and none enjoys a more general regard.

CHARLES DALE. Chester county is essentially an agricultural county, and all the kindred pursuits thrive there. One of the most important adjuncts to a farming community is a blacksmith shop, and the blacksmith is almost as necessary to the tiller of the soil as the man who furnishes the supplies for his daily needs. The member of the family whose biography is to be given here is the "village blacksmith" of the town of Mortonville, and is a representative of much of the social and industrial life of the village and the surrounding country.

William Dale, his father, lived at Russellville in the southern end of this county, and there followed butchering as a means of livelihood, but later took up farming. He was twice married, and his first wife was Mary Ann Hickman, the sister of the late Hon. John B. Hickman, who was known throughout the county and loved and respected by all. He was married a second time.

Charles was the only child born of these unions and was the son of the first wife. After he had obtained his common school training he apprenticed himself to a blacksmith and became thoroughly versed in all the details of this trade. He now has a large shop, and his business is increasing so that he has a very good income. The maiden name of his wife was Anna Mary Simcox, who is the daughter of Addison Simcox, a prominent farmer of Goshen township. The one son born of this marriage, Harry A. Dale, is now employed in his father's large shop.

Mr. Dale is a very earnest and energetic man, and has come deservedly by the success which he is now reaping. He is one of the leading workers for the Prohibition cause in the county, and he was recently placed in nomination by his party for the office of coroner. He believes thoroughly in fraternal organization as a means of social help, and he belongs to the Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and the Heptasophs. His religious faith is that of the Presbyterian church. The pretty home in which the family reside adjoins the place of business, and is a model of neatness and housewifely care.

HARRY J. McFARLAND. In many of the older countries of the world it has been a custom which has become almost an unwritten law, that the son should follow the trade of the father, hence many families have known for many centuries only one pursuit, and have become known to history by some name indicative of their profession. This condition of affairs has not prevailed altogether in the McFarland family, and such a circumstance would hardly be possible in this new and ever changing country of America, but it is all the more a curious fact that for four generations some members of this family have been engaged in the manufacture of pumps. And there is hardly a farm within the borders of Chester county which does not bear evidence of the handiwork of some enterprising member of the house, and the old town pump, the farm pump and many other well known instruments of bringing water to the use of humanity have borne the name of McFarland as the maker.

Harry J. McFarland is the member of the present generation with whom this sketch has to deal, and he has for a number of years prosecuted the trade of pump making in the village of Marshallton with great success. He was born and reared in the county, and made use of the township schools for the advantages of educational training. He has been a Republican in politics, and has held different township offices in the gift of his party. The maiden name of his wife was Hannah Foster, who is the daughter of Frederick Foster, a prominent farmer in the township. They had four children, Gertrude, Marion, Warren and Carl, all of whom are single and living at the home place. Mr. McFarland and family are attendants of the Methodist church at Marshallton, and his wife is prominent in the work of the different societies of the church. He stands high in the estimation of his fellow men, and especially as a member of the fraternal organizations of the Odd Fellows and the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics.

JOHN W. THOMPSON. One of the differences between the agricultural sections of the east and the west which at once strikes the observer, is the small area of the farms of the east as compared with those of the west, and yet on the whole the farmers of the east are as prosperous as those of the west. This is undoubtedly due in large measure to the care and methodical cultivation and the working of even the smallest corners of the land, which is more prevalent among eastern than western agriculturists. One of the farms in Newlin township, Chester county, is evidence of this fact, for while it contains only fifty-four and one-half acres, it is one of the most productive farms in the county, and with the dairy is made to pay good returns to its owner, Mr. Thompson.

John W. Thompson, Sr., the father of the above mentioned gentleman, was a native of Willistown township, this county, and after gaining a common school education started at an early age in the work of farming. He lived during the times of the formation of the political parties of to-day, and he was a Whig and lived to cast two presidential votes for the candidates of the Republican party. His death occurred in 1861. He was twice married and by his second wife had one child, John W. Thompson, Jr.

Mr. Thompson has followed farming all his life and has made it a profitable occupation. For many years he also attended the market located at Second and Pine streets, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Following the example of his father, he votes the Republican ticket and has held the office of school director in Newlin township for some time. He is a member of the fraternal Order of Heptasophs. He married Susanna Tompkins, daughter of Peter Tompkins, who is a farmer of Easttown township. Annie, the first child born of this union, is the wife of Roland P. Windle, and they have one child; Bertha, married Clarence E. Copeland, and they are the parents of one child; Walter, is married and lives on his father's farm adjoining; and the following smaller children reside at home: Laura, Morton, Charles, Harry, Ida, and Eugene; one by the name of Florence died in childhood.

W. J. MONHOLLEND. One of the principal attractions of the village of Mortonville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the old grist mill. It has been in existence for many years, and many are the historic associations connected with it. It stands like a venerable monument of the past, reminding the inhabitants of the present of the flight of time, and affording a link that binds them to the days when the country was new and the cultivation of the land was not so peaceful as now. This mill has furnished the material for the staff of life to thousands of people in the county, and it still continues its operations, unabated with age, under the control of a member of the Monhollend family, a brief mention of whose history it is deemed proper to here insert.

Oliver, the father of the present operator of the mill, was an industrious farmer living in East Whiteland township of this county. In youth he received a fair education and then learned the trade of shoemaker, but never devoted himself to its prosecution, for his attention was rather attracted to the hardier pursuit of the tiller of the soil. He married Leah, the daughter of Mary Alexander, a retired lady living in East Whiteland township. The children of this union were: Samuel, who married Wilda Hoffman; Sarah, who died in youth; and W. J. Monhollend.

W. J. Monhollend was born and reared in this county, and after the usual vacillations of mind peculiar to youth, turned his attention to milling, where he has found ample rewards of his efforts. He has been married twice. By his first wife, whose name was Sarah Morrison, he had two children, Oliver and Jennie. His second wife was Margaret Lily, a native of Philadelphia, and one child was born to them, Paul, who is unmarried and lives at home. Mr. Monhollend plays a leading part in the Prohibition party of the county and at a recent election was the nominee on the ticket for the legislature. He is a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and in religion holds membership with the Presbyterian church.

THE KEECH FAMILY. Hannums Keech was for many years a familiar resident of East Bradford township. From his youth he had grown up in the pleasant community of this county and was allowed the privileges of a common school education. He had always manifested a keen interest in horses, and was an excellent judge of animals, and this led to his being appointed by the state to haul cars on the railroad before steam was introduced, and it is remembered that he exercised good judgment in this capacity. He was a member of the Republican party and held to the religious beliefs of the Society of Friends. His death occurred in 1852. His wife's maiden name was Sarah Young, and she was the daughter of James Young, a prosperous farmer of the county. Hannah, the first child of this union, married Elwood Scott and became the mother of six children; Downing died in his youth; Baldwin's first wife was Miss England, and by his second wife, Caroline Thomas, he had three children; Milton married Miss Martha Jones, and they have six children; Margretta died young; and James, whose life is deserving of particular notice.

James Keech is a native of this county and in his youth enjoyed the advantages of the public schools. He inherited some of his father's qualities as a judge of horses and when the Civil war broke out he was appointed horse inspector at Wheeling and rendered valuable service in that position. He also took active part as a soldier in several of the engagements of the war, one of these being the battle of Chancellorsville, under the command of General Kane, where he manifested his spirit of bravery. A call was sent out asking for volunteers to form a company of skirmishers to locate the rebels, and he was one of the number that responded. This was a very hazardous undertaking, and very few of that intrepid body who went forth ever returned. Mr. Keech received seven wounds in the performance of this duty, but he finally reached the Union lines. At the close of the war he returned and took up the work of the farm, and he now operates a fine place of one hundred acres and a first class dairy, located in Newlin township. His wife was Emily Webb, a native of this county, and a daughter of Jesse and May Marshall Webb, who were the parents of three daughters, of whom Mrs. Keech was second in order of birth. Mr. Webb was reared in Chester county and was a carpenter by trade. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Keech: George B., born March 12, 1865, unmarried, in business at Overbrook; Florence Jessie, born May 27, 1871, the wife of William Passmore of Embreeville, one child; Milton H., born March 14, 1874, unmarried, at home; Stella Webb, born October 4, 1877, wife of Walter C. Carroll of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

BARCLAY RUBINCAM. Chester county, Pennsylvania, is noted for its fine farms and its enterprising and up-to-date farmers, and as one rides through this prosperous section he is struck by the evidence of thrift that prevails on every side. One of the representative men of this agricultural class is found in the person of Barclay Rubincam. He cultivates a most fertile farm consisting of ninety-six acres and upon it maintains an excellent dairy. Mr. Rubincam was born in Newlin township of this county in 1858. His life went along in the customary channels of the farmer lad, and he learned the lessons taught in the neighborhood school, but at the age of sixteen began the actual work of life, assisting his father on the farm. He has made farming his steady pursuit, and the fact that he has never deviated from his first choice is largely responsible for the success he has made, for it has become almost a truism that perseverance in one line of industry is always rewarded.

Mr. Rubincam was married in 1880 to Annie M. Young, the daughter of Jacob Young, a farmer of this township. One son, Jacob, was born to them, and he is now at home with his father. Although a loyal Democrat in politics, Mr. Rubincam has not concerned himself enough in such affairs to care for office, and has, in fact, refused several proffers from his party. He takes an active part in the Odd Fellows lodge, and his religious tendencies are with the Society of Friends. The family reside in a beautiful home, and they command the respect of the entire community. Jacob Young, father of Mrs. Annie M. (Young) Rubincam, came from Wurtemberg, Germany, about the year 1855. He settled in Chester county, where he followed farming successfully until his demise in 1901. Mrs. Rubincam was the only child born to Jacob Young and his wife. Mrs. Young's death occurred two years before that of her husband.

DANIEL MEREDITH. The Meredith family of Chester county, represented in the present generation by Daniel Meredith, of West Caln township, is of mingled Welsh and German blood. His grandfather, Daniel Meredith, whose Welsh ancestors came to Pennsylvania in colonial days and were Friends, was born in the Chester Valley in 1745, and died in 1826. He married Mary Brown, who was a native of Germany, and they became the parents of five children: 1. George, who married Hannah White; 2. John, who married Hannah Sinnett, of Willistown township, and to whom were born five children—Isaac, George, John (deceased), Margaret and Ann; 3. Joseph, who married and reared a family; 4. Margaret, single; 5. Isaac.

Isaac, the father of our subject and the youngest child of Daniel and Mary (Brown) Meredith, was born in 1775 and died in January, 1861. He married Wylmuth Bayne, and to them were born ten children: Daniel, Joseph, Mary, Hannah, Isaac, William Cooper, Margaret, David, Annie and William (2), who died in youth.

Daniel, eldest child of Isaac and Wylmuth (Bayne) Meredith, was born September 20, 1828, in Whiteland township, Chester county. He was educated in the neighborhood schools, and was reared in the religion of his forefathers. The first twenty-five years of his life were passed on the paternal farm with his parents. In 1858 he was married to Margaret Lane, and for nineteen years afterwards he cultivated farms in Caln and Valley townships. In 1890 he removed to West Chester township, where he purchased the Sarah Lewis property comprising about one hundred and twenty-two acres, upon which he has since resided, and which he has made an ideal farm home. Mr. Meredith is a birthright member of the Society of Friends. He is a Republican in politics, but has never sought public office.

Mr. and Mrs. Meredith are the parents of ten children—Helen, Frank, Alice, Harry, who was married in June, 1902, to Miss Genevieve Spencer; Grace, Jessie, Arthur, Wilbur, Mary and Wylmouth. The two last named are deceased

Daniel Meredith

ALEXANDER JOHNSTON CASSATT, prominent in railroad affairs, and who maintains a splendid estate at Berwyn, Pennsylvania, is a native of the state, born in Pittsburg, December 8, 1839, a son of Robert S. Cassatt. The elder Cassatt was for a number of years closely identified with the financial and industrial interests of western Pennsylvania, and was first mayor of Allegheny City.

Alexander J. Cassatt received his primary education in the public schools in his native city. While he was but a lad, his father journeyed in Europe for some years, and the son obtained a knowledge of modern languages in various continental schools, among them the University of Heidelberg. After returning home he attended the Reusselaer Polytechnic Institute, from which he was graduated in 1859, shortly before attaining his majority. With an excellent knowledge of engineering, and a predisposition for railway affairs, he was occupied for two years after his graduation with a surveying corps in the location of a route in Georgia. In 1861 he became connected with the engineering department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in the capacity of roadman. In 1864, after the Pennsylvania had absorbed the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad, Mr. Cassatt was at Renovo, as superintendent of the Warren & Franklin Railroad, and with duties as resident engineer of the middle division. In April, 1866, he was transferred to Williamsport, as superintendent of motive power and machinery of the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad. In 1867 he was appointed to a similar position on the Pennsylvania Railroad, with his offices at Altoona. April 1, 1870, he succeeded Dr. Edward H. Williams as general superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Upon the leasing of the United Railroads of New Jersey, in December, 1871, Mr. Cassatt was made general manager, being the first incumbent of that office. September 30, 1882, he resigned in order to return to private life, but his retirement was of brief duration. In February, 1885, he was called to the presidency of the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk Railroad, and in 1899 he was elected president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, both of which positions he has occupied to the present time. His eminent abilities in transportation concerns have given him an international reputation, and his influence has extended far beyond the vast properties which he has under control. In the spring of 1891, when the projected Inter-Continental Railroad to connect North, Central and South America received the approval of the International American Conference, Mr. Cassatt was appointed by President Harrison one of the three commissioners on the part of the United States, and he was chosen president of the commission.

Mr. Cassatt makes his home and legal residence in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and has ever borne a full share in promoting the interests of the neighborhood, and he has, through uninterrupted elections, served in the position of supervisor since 1881. Near Berwyn, Chester county, he maintains his famous Chesterbrook Farm of seven hundred acres, devoted to the maintenance of his many splendid carriage and saddle horses, for which have been provided buildings almost palatial in their appointments.

R. PENN SMITH, of Berwyn, Chester county, Pennsylvania, manager of the famous Chesterbrook Farm, the property of Mr. A. J. Cassatt, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was born in the city of Philadelphia, in 1865. He is a grandson of William Moore, who was an early county judge when the counties of Delaware and Chester were one. His parents were R. Penn and Lucy P. (Woods) Smith. His father was also born in Philadelphia, in 1823, and was educated at Bolman's Academy, in West Chester. After leaving school he removed to New York city, where he engaged in a coal business which he conducted until his death, in 1889. His wife was a daughter of John Woods, a retired gentleman of Pittsburg. Of their marriage were born the following named children: 1. Kittie, who became the wife of Barclay Warburton, and is now deceased. 2. Morton W., who married Emma Janson, and to whom was born a child. 3. Edward G. Smith. 4. R. Penn Smith.

R. Penn Smith, oldest child in the family named, was educated in the schools of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. After completing his education he was associated with his father in the coal business until 1893. In that year he accepted the position of manager of the entire estates of Mr. Alexander J. Cassatt, at Haverford and Berwyn. These splendid properties comprise one thousand acres of beautifully situated land. The principal tract is the Chesterbrook Stock Farm at Berwyn, consisting of seven hundred acres, where are cared for all the fine horses belonging to Mr. Cassatt. This stud has made a marked impress upon the entire region, and two of the animals particularly, the hackney horse "Cadet" and the thoroughbred roadster "The Bard," noted prize winners, have been of great service in the improvement of the neighborhood strains. In caring for the very extensive and highly valuable property committed to him, Mr. Smith has systematized his business so as to attain the best results, devoting to his responsible duties not only the utmost fidelity but as real enthusiasm for the interests committed to him as though he were himself the owner. It is to his great credit, and affirms the value placed upon his services, that the relations subsisting between himself and Mr. Cassatt are far more intimate than is usual between employer and employe, and are of the nature of genuine friendship, in mutual appreciation of each other's kindness.

Mr. Smith is a recognized leader in the genteel sports of the Cheesbrough Farm region, and is president of the Chester Valley Hunt, the Devon Polo Club and a member of the Turf Club, and during the past ten years he has figured prominently in the New York Horse Shows, where he has exhibited Mr. Cassatt's finest animals. He is also active in the public affairs of his township. He and his family are communicants of the historic St. David's Protestant Episcopal church, and his political affiliations are with the Republican party.

Mr. Smith married Mrs. Cora Hobson, a daughter of A. H. Lazare. Two children have been born of this marriage: Kittie W. and R. Penn Smith.

JOHN SHEPHERD, Jr., the genial and popular proprietor of one of the leading general grocery and meat establishments in Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born October 26, 1848, in the township of Easttown, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Richard M. Shepherd, father of John Shepherd, was born in East Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, attended the common schools of the neighborhood, and, as was the practice then, he was required to do chores about the place in the hours not devoted to study. In this way he became familiar with the duties of farm life, which vocation he followed up to the time of his death. He was united in marriage to Minerva Ramsey, of Delaware county, now deceased, and five children were born to them: Mary, wife of William Hill, and they are the parents of five children; Benjamin R., married Mary Hibberd, and two children have been born to them; Albert, deceased; E. Price, married Mary Ross, and two children have been born to them; and John Shepherd.

John Shepherd, Jr., obtained his education in the public schools of Chester county, and after laying aside his text books he assisted with the work on his father's farm until he attained his majority, when he went to Philadelphia and learned the cabinet making trade. Owing to impaired health he returned home and engaged in the butchering trade for sometime. Later he removed to West Chester and established a grocery and meat market on his own account. Being very successful in this enterprise, he continued to conduct the store until the year 1889, when he changed his place of residence to Malvern, Pennsylvania, where he opened a general grocery and meat store which he has successfully conducted up to the present time (1903). Mr. Shepherd has made several important improvements to his property in recent years, and his establishment now ranks second to none in the county. His excellent business habits and honorable, straightforward methods were soon recognized by the public, who accordingly gave him a liberal patronage. Mr. Shepherd is a Republican in politics, has held several local offices and ever uses his influence to further those projects which have for their aim the advancement and well being of the town. He is an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, American Mechanics, and the Patriotic Order of the Sons of America.

On December 22, 1886, Mr. Shepherd married Almita Pechin, daughter of John A. and Elizabeth (Gross) Pechin, her father being a prosperous farmer of Chester Valley, Pennsylvania. Both Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd are regular attendants at the services of the Methodist Episcopal church of Malvern, to which he gives his hearty co-operation and support.

PHINEAS LEWIS, deceased, for many years actively engaged in business pursuits in the Tredyffrin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, traced his origin to an ancestry who were born, reared, educated and conducted their business affairs in the same county for many generations.

He was born August 15, 1843, and was a son of Evan and Priscilla (Eaclus) Lewis. The educational advantages enjoyed by Phineas Lewis were obtained in the common schools of Delaware county, and after completing his studies he learned the butcher trade in his native county. He continued in this same line of industry during the greater part of his active life, and being a man of sound business judgment, strict integrity, and of an unimpeachable character soon made a reputation for himself in the commercial circles of Delaware county, which he retained during his entire career. He served for three months in the state militia, and was a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Masonic fraternity, taking a keen and active interest in both organizations. He died May 4, 1892.

March 29, 1868, Mr. Lewis married Annie H. White, daughter of Richard and Phoebe (Worrell) White. Richard White was born in 1831, educated in the common schools of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and subsequently engaged in farming interests in Radnor township where he was recognized as one of the prosperous and progressive farmers; he was united in marriage to Phoebe Worrell, a native of the township of Raditor, and the following named children were born to them: Sarah, wife of Samuel Sutter, and mother of three children, and Annie H., widow of Phineas Lewis. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis became the parents of six children, two of whom are living at the present time (1903). The names of the surviving children are: Harry, who married Anna Ottey, and two children have been born to them, viz: Enoch and Harry Birdell Ottey and Pauline, wife of Charles B. Zimmerling; the names of the deceased children were: William, Daniel, Phineas, Jr., and Sarah Lewis. During his lifetime Mr. Lewis was a prominent member of the Baptist church of Malvern, and his family are also actively associated with the same church. Mr. Lewis died May 4, 1892, survived by his widow, who resides in a handsome and commodious house pleasantly situated in the select section of the borough of Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

BENJAMIN J. PASSMORE. One of the thoroughgoing business men of Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has climbed the ladder of success and gathered the fruit of honorable, earnest toil, is Benjamin J. Passmore, whose name is prominently connected with the commercial interests of the town. The salient points in his business career are resolute purpose, unflagging industry and unabating zeal, and to these are attributable the prosperity which crowns his work.

Samuel W. Passmore, father of Benjamin J. Passmore, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 18, 1824. His early education was acquired in the common schools of his neighborhood, and supplemented by a course of study at an academy near Wilmington, Delaware. He subsequently removed to Chrome, Chester county, Pennsylvania, pursued the occupation of farming and by his well-directed efforts accumulated a goodly competence. He was industrious and energetic and his well tilled fields and carefully repaired buildings indicated the oversight of a thrifty and painstaking manager. He married Emaline Stubbs, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Haines) Stubbs, an agriculturist of Chester and York counties, Pennsylvania, and their children were: G. Birdsall, married Elizabeth Preston, and one child has been born to them; Oscar F., married Mary Pusey, and they have two children; Mary E., wife of Newlin Mendenhall; they are the parents of two children; Dora, unmarried; Phoebe, wife of Dr. W. S. Taylor; they are the parents of four children; Isaac, married Annie Darlington; they have four children; Samuel, married Mary Armstrong; Melvina, deceased; Sarah, wife of Frank Walter, and Benjamin J.

Passmore. The father of these children died April 27, 1900.

Benjamin J. Passmore, youngest son of Samuel W. and Emaline (Stubbs) Passmore, was born at Chrome, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 17, 1870. He acquired an excellent education at the Friends' School at Rising Sun, Maryland, and also at the West Chester State Normal School. In the early part of his business career he entered the milling business at Oxford, and continued this line of industry for several years; later he changed his residence to Swarthmore, where he remained for four years, and in 1899, took up his residence in Malvern, where he established a florist business. He erected a comfortable brick dwelling house and also erected an extensive glass greenhouse covering ten thousand feet, splendidly adapted for the purpose, and his fine plants, with their many colored blossoms, present a most beautiful and delightful picture for the eye to rest upon. During the passing years he has succeeded in obtaining a liberal patronage, and the business is bringing to him excellent financial returns. In politics he is an ardent Republican, and in religion a faithful member of the Society of Friends. Mr. Passmore has traveled extensively, visiting many places of interest both in his own and other states.

Mr. Passmore was married January 21, 1902, to Miss Margaret B. Trimble, daughter of Thomas D. and Sarah (Robinson) Trimble.

WESLEY M. GRAHAM, proprietor and editor of the "Malvern Item," one of the weekly papers of the borough of Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born at Ephrata, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, May 9, 1870, the son of Richard and Clara (Gross) Graham.

Richard Graham, father of Wesley M. Graham, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April 23, 1843, and is a son of George and Jane (Higgs) Graham, the former of Scottish lineage and the latter of English descent, and received his educational advantages in the public schools of that city. He then turned his attention to telegraph operating, which art he soon became thorough master of, and when the Civil war broke out he entered the service of the United States in the capacity of military operator. He continued at this occupation during the entire period of that terrible struggle, and was an employe of the government for a number of years after the war terminated. He then entered the employ of the Reading Railroad Company and later was associated with the Pullman Company, but at the present time (1903) is assisting his son, Wesley M. Graham, in the newspaper business at Malvern, Chester county. Mr. Graham married Clara Gross, daughter of Martin Gross, who is now living a retired life in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The following named children were born of this marriage: William C., deceased; Jennie, deceased; Helen F., unmarried, and Wesley M. Graham.

Wesley M. Graham obtained an excellent literary education at the Friends' School, in West Chester, and the Friends' Central High School in Philadelphia, which prepared him for the active duties of life. The first years of his business career were spent in connection with the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, after which he served in the capacity of teller in a Philadelphia bank for seven years, discharging the duties of that responsible position with the utmost efficiency and fidelity. In 1896 he took up his residence in Malvern, Chester county, purchased the "Malvern Item," a weekly publication, from William Matson, and since that date has devoted all his energy and attention to making his paper the brightest, newsiest and most reliable journal to be found in that section of the state. In politics Mr. Graham is a staunch Republican, and has been honored by his fellow townsmen by being elected to the office of justice of the peace, which position he is filling at the present time. He is a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Brotherhood Protective Order of Elks, and the Pen and Pencil Club of Philadelphia. Mr. Graham has traveled extensively, visiting the different places of note and interest, and in this manner has gained much pleasure as well as valuable information.

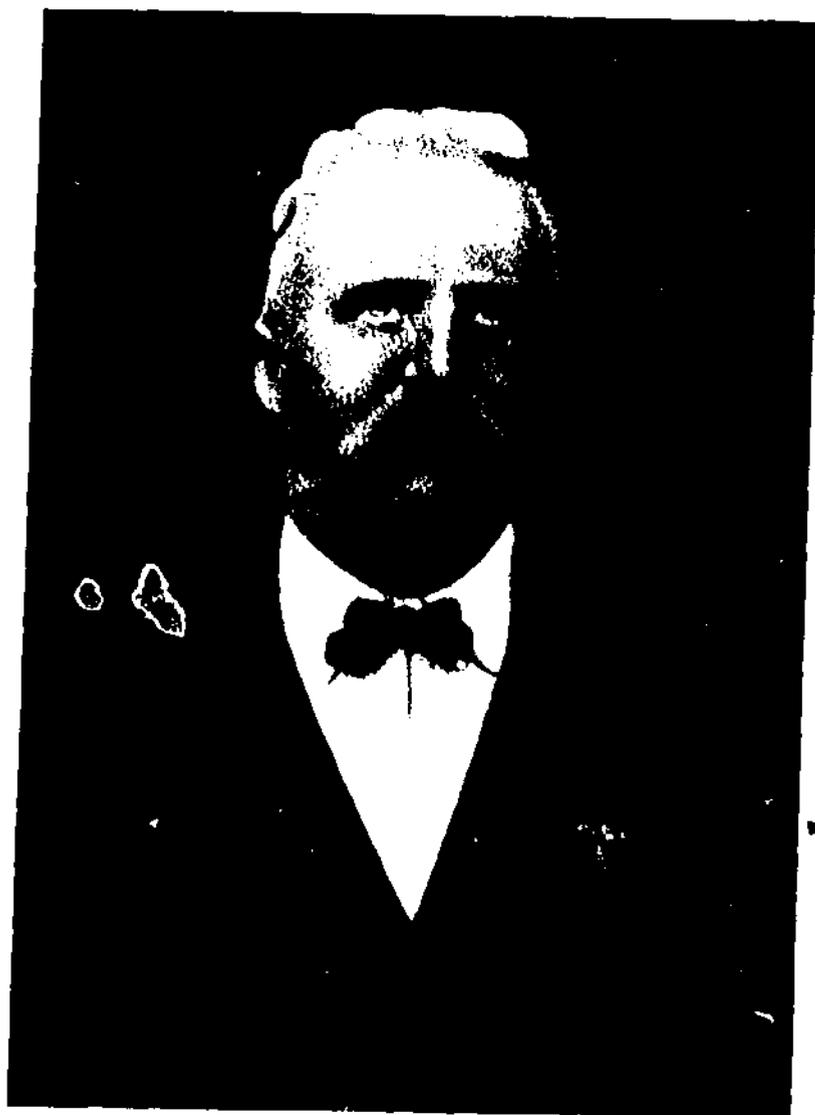

On October 19, 1893, Mr. Graham married Julia A. Kurtz, born June 24, 1871, daughter of Milton and Elizabeth (Ruth) Kurtz, the former named being engaged in agricultural pursuits in the township of Easttown, Chester county. Their children are: Marion H., Eleanor J., Dorothy G., and Louise E. Graham. The family are active and consistent members of the Baptist church of Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

PRESTON W. LOBB, who died November 25, 1903, was for many years a prominent resident of the borough of Berwyn, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where from 1869 till his death, he was engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was a grandson of Asha Lobb, who was born in Scotland but subsequently came to this country, settling in what is now Delaware county, where he became the owner of a large amount of real estate, also a woolen and cotton mill. In politics he was an old line Whig, and in religion he was a member of the Friends' Society. He married Catharine Cornog, and their children were: William C., Horatio, Ethelbert and Maria Lobb. Mr. Lobb's death occurred in the year 1842.

William C. Lobb, father of Preston W. Lobb, was born in Clifton, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in 1804, and after completing his studies in the common schools he accepted a position as teacher in a school in Upper Darby, Delaware county, where he was engaged for several terms. He then devoted his attention to farming in the township of Easttown, Chester county, and in addition to the varied duties of this occupation he engaged in real estate and broker transactions, continuing in this line of industry up to the time of his decease, which occurred in March, 1882. In his political affiliations he was a staunch Republican, and in his religious sentiments he was a Friend. Mr. Lobb married Elizabeth Levis, daughter of John Levis, a prominent farmer of Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: John, married Elizabeth Cody; they have two children; Clayton, married Elizabeth Heath, and four children have been born to them; Mary, who married for her first husband Henry Fritz and three children were born to them; her second husband was Hugh Steen and they are the parents of one child; Ethelbert A., married a Miss Marshall, and they have five children; Margaret, wife of Thomas Taylor; they have a family of three children; Maria, wife of Edward Dutton, and have eight children; Eliza, wife of Thomas Clegg and mother of four children; Henry, who married Sarah Leedom and three children have been born to them; Ida, wife of Charles Jones and mother of one child; Lewis, who married Mary Ottey and they are the parents of six children, and Preston W. Lobb.

Preston W. Lobb was born at what is now Darby, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, March 1, 1844, and acquired a practical education in the public schools of Easttown township. At an early age he removed to the borough of Berwyn, and after learning the trade of machinist in Philadelphia he continued at this occupation until 1869, when he embarked in the lumber business at Berwyn. He successfully conducted this enterprise up to the year 1886, when he disposed of it to W. H. Fritz, and then established his business of plumbing, stoves, tinware and tinsmithing. By careful attention to business, reinforced by the energy and enterprise necessary to success in any undertaking, he built up an extensive and lucrative trade. Mr. Lobb voted the Republican ticket after attaining his majority, and served in various township offices, the principal one being that of auditor, which he filled for the past thirty years. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, being a life member of Thatcher Chapter in which he attained the thirty-second degree. He was also prominently identified with the Berwyn Social Club.

Mr. Lobb was a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted on August 9, 1861, in an independent battery of flying artillery, that by an act of congress became Battery F, of the Fifth United States Artillery. He participated in seventeen general engagements during his term of service, and was also an active participant in the battle of Ball's Bluff, Antietam, Gettysburg, and the Peninsular campaign. His battery, which consisted originally of two hundred and ninety-five men, was so reduced in numbers by death and accidents that on the first day of the battle of Gettysburg, under command of General Reynolds, it did not number one hundred men, and when Longstreet's great charge was over on the second day, the battery had suffered the loss of thirty-five men and ninety-three horses. There were only five men, including Mr. Lobb, of the original organization, which terminated at Petersburg, Virginia, August 9, 1864.

Preston W. Lobb

On February 22, 1876, Mr. Lobb married Priscilla L. Barton, daughter of Alfred and Ruth R. (Watkinson) Barton of Philadelphia, a newspaper correspondent, who was killed at the battle of Antietam. Their children are: Caroline R., wife of Charles B. Shourds; Arthur B.; Preston Ole; Maurice K.; and Corinne B. Lobb. Mr. Lobb and all the members of his family were attendants of the Baptist church of Berwyn, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

CHARLES E. HIRES, well known throughout the United States as the manufacturer of Hires Root Beer, this industry being the most important in the borough of Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he is at present operating a two hundred and fifty thousand dollar plant, is a descendant of a family whose homestead is situated near Shiloh, Cumberland county, New Jersey.

The progenitor and founder of this family in this country was John Hires, who in company with his brother, Gunrod Hires, came from Germany some time prior to the Revolution. John Hires settled near Shiloh, Cumberland county, New Jersey, and there purchased a large tract of land and pursued farming for a number of years. He later removed to Salem county, New Jersey, where he spent the remaining years of his life and died aged ninety-eight years. He had by his union in marriage a family of ten children.

John D. Hires, father of Charles E. Hires, was born February 17, 1817, in Hopewell, Cumberland county, New Jersey, where his father, John Hires, engaged in agricultural pursuits and was one of the early settlers of the vicinity. John D. Hires acquired a common school education after which he turned his attention to farming and the buying and selling of cattle and other stock on commission. For eleven years he was a prominent resident of Salem county, but in 1862 he returned to Cumberland county and settled in Roadstown. He was a loyal adherent of the principles of the Democratic party, being chosen to serve in various important local offices, among them being tax collector of Hopewell. He was united in marriage to Mary Williams, a native of Port Elizabeth, New Jersey, and ten children were the issue of this union. Both Mr. Hires and his wife were members of the Cohansy Baptist church, taking an active interest in the work connected with it, and for many years Mr. Hires served in the capacity of deacon. His death occurred January 6, 1878, and his wife passed away January 8, 1880.

Charles E. Hires, son of John D. and Mary Hires, was born near Salem, Salem county, New Jersey, August 19, 1851, and his education was acquired in the public schools. He gained his first business experience while serving an apprenticeship of four years in a drug establishment in his native county, and after thoroughly learning the details of the various branches of this profession he located in the city of Philadelphia and established a retail drug business which he conducted for seven years. After the expiration of this period of time he established a wholesale drug house on Market street, Philadelphia, where in 1877 he commenced the manufacture of root beer of a superior quality, this beverage having since become famous all over the country. This enterprise proving such a decided success, Mr. Hires abandoned his drug business and devoted his attention entirely to the new industry which also included the manufacture of condensed milk. Having decided that the borough of Malvern, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a desirable site for his manufacturing plant, Mr. Hires in 1900 erected buildings and plant at a cost of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and at the present time (1903) gives employment to several hundred persons. The work is under the personal supervision of Mr. Hires, whose knowledge, experience, and natural fitness for the production of a pure and healthful beverage are of untold value to his employes. Mr. Hires is a director of the Merchants' Bank of Philadelphia, ex-president of the Drug Exchange, and a member of the Manufacturers' Club. In politics he is a firm supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and in religion he is a strong adherent of the tenets of the Society of Friends.

On January 5, 1875, Mr. Hires married Clara Smith, a daughter of Charles Sheppard and Rebecca J. (Keyser) Smith, the former named being a prominent Philadelphian, and the following named children have been born to them: Linda S., J. Edgar, Harrison S., Charles E., Jr., and Clara Hires.

JOHN MEREDITH. Among the old families of Chester county few are of greater antiquity than the Merediths, and none of more unquestioned respectability. They have ever been identified with whatever made for the best interests of the community, and both by precept and example have exerted an influence for good.

John Meredith, who for many years was an honored representative of the family, was born in 1788, in Chester county, and for a long time was a resident of Uwchlan township. All his life he belonged to that large agricultural class which has done so much for the upbuilding and prosperity of the county. In 1827 he moved to Upper Uwchlan township, and settled on the farm which is now in the possession of his de-

Smedley, representatives of two of the oldest families, not only in Chester county, but in Pennsylvania. Their respective founders, Samuel Sharpless and George Smedley, emigrated to America almost simultaneously, the former arriving in the company of William Penn, and the latter making the voyage at nearly the same time. Mr. and Mrs. Meredith were the parents of the following children: Phoebe, who died at twenty-two years of age; Lydia Smedley, who never married, and is now deceased; Peter, the only son, who likewise never married, and passed his life on the homestead; and Mary Ann, who was born December 11, 1822, in West Nantmeal township.

The death of Mr. Meredith, which occurred

UWCHLAN MEETING HOUSE.

scendants. By virtue of his lineage he occupied of necessity an influential position in the community, being descended from distinguished ancestry, not only on the paternal side, but also through his mother, Elizabeth Kirk, who belonged to one of the oldest families of the county. The respect which was universally paid to Mr. Meredith, was not, however, accorded to him simply on account of his inherited social status, but was a tribute to his own strong and estimable character and more than ordinary ability. Politically he was a staunch Republican, and his religious faith, in accordance with the traditions of his family, was that of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Meredith married Elizabeth, born in 1783, daughter of Peter and Phoebe (Sharpless) in 1870, removed from the community, where he had been so long a familiar figure, one who had been for many years a recognized leader, both in his chosen calling, and in the sphere of public affairs. An irreparable loss to his family, he was mourned by all as an upright and worthy citizen, and a truly good man.

The homestead is now the abode of Miss Mary Ann Meredith, who is passing the evening of her days amid the scenes endeared to her by the recollections of three quarters of a century. The old house, in addition to the store of associations which cluster around it, is the repository of rare and valuable relics. Among these is a clock which was the property of Miss Meredith's great-great-grandfather, John Meredith. Thivenerable timepiece is two hundred years old, and still more remarkable than its age is the fact that, during the lapse of two centuries, it has never ceased to perform its functions, but has faithfully recorded the passage of the hours. Miss Meredith is also the owner of another clock, still more ancient than the one just mentioned, probably belonging to the period when the art of making clocks and watches was in its infancy, and when these articles were rare possessions, falling only to the lot of the favored few. The Meredith house is one of those ancestral dwellings around which lingers an atmosphere of more than ordinary historic interest.

ROBERT FRANCIS MOORE, of Milford Mills, Chester county, highly esteemed both as farmer and citizen, is descended from the Rev. Charles Moore, who during the latter part of the eighteenth century was pastor of a Baptist church in Vincent. He married Margaret Carroll, by whom he was the father of a son, Robert, born November 29, 1797. This son, in the early part of his life, was an undertaker, but later, developing a fondness for agriculture, he adopted the calling of a farmer, which he followed to the end of his days. He married Rachel Smedley, who was born February 4, 1797, and they were the parents of eight sons: Charles Carroll; Thomas Mercer, mentioned at length hereinafter; William, who died in childhood; Lewis, who died young; Gideon S.; Francis J.; Leonard K.; and Joseph. Two of these sons, it will be seen, died early in life, and the six who survived all remained in their native county, where they devoted themselves to agricultural pursuits. In religious matters they adhered to the faith of their maternal ancestors, who were all members of the Society of Friends.

Thomas Mercer Moore, son of Robert and Rachel (Smedley) Moore, was born July 1, 1823, and obtained his early education in the public schools of his native place, afterward becoming a pupil at the Unionville Academy, the principal of which at that time was Jonathan Gause, of honored memory. After completing his education, Mr. Moore was for a time a teacher, but in 1853 returned to the homestead, and there spent the remainder of his life, dividing his time between farming and the management of a store which he conducted in Milford. He married Charity M. Love, who was born March 16, 1827, in East Goshen, where she was educated, being the daughter of Stephen and Hannah (Johnson) Love, the former a farmer of East Goshen. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Moore consisted of four sons and one daughter: Stephen L.; Robert Francis, mentioned at length hereinafter; William Mason; Thomas Elsworth; and Mary Ella. For several years previous to the death of Mr. Moore, which occurred in 1898, he had withdrawn to a great degree from the activities of life.

Robert Francis Moore, son of Thomas Mercer and Charity M. (Love) Moore, was born May 7, 1855, on the old homestead, and received his early education in the public schools of his birthplace, afterward attending the Edgefield Institute, presided over by Captain Abram Fetters. At the close of his school life he began to work on the home farm, and also learned the trade of a painter, which he followed for four years. In 1875 he entered his father's store at Milford Mills, and there remained until 1899, becoming proprietor of the business after the death of his father. On retiring from mercantile life he bought the farm which is now his home, known as the "old Andrew Buchanan farm." This estate, which consists of one hundred and thirty-five acres, is cultivated by Mr. Moore in a thoroughly scientific manner, and with the most satisfactory results, being conducted as a dairy farm. Mr. Moore takes an active interest in local affairs, and has received repeated proofs of the confidence with which he is regarded by his neighbors. From 1878 to 1902 he was postmaster of Milford Mills, his long tenure of office proving that the Federal Government recognized in him the same traits of character which had earned the esteem of his townsmen, who for the last six years have intrusted him with the office of school director, a position which he still holds. In politics he is a Democrat, thus following the traditions of his family. He is a member of Lodge No. 446, F. and A. M. His church affiliations are with the Baptist denomination.

Mr. Moore married Mary E., daughter of William and Susanna (Hartsell) Sheneman, the former acknowledged to be among the best farmers of Upper Uwchlan. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are the parents of the following children: Laura Mabel, Albert Earl, Harry Calvin, Thomas William, Bessie May, and Susan Anna. The younger members of the family are attending the public schools of the township.

HORACE HAUSE, an energetic farmer and esteemed citizen of Uwchlan township, Chester county, belongs to an old family, both his paternal and maternal ancestors having been resident in the county since the Revolutionary period. His grandfather, Jacob Hause, was a native of Chester county, and was the father of a son, John, who was born in West Vincent township, and was a well-known farmer. He married Louisa, born August 2, 1833, in Chester county, daughter of Simon and Margaret Groff of Birchrunville. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hause: 1. Margaret; 2. Jacob Henry; 3. Anna Mary; 4. John; 5. Amos; 6. Mary Martha; all of whom are deceased. The other children were: 7. Susanna, who became the wife of Daniel Lachman, and is now deceased; 8. Horace, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Lachman is also deceased, and is survived by his three children, all of whom reside in Pottstown: Charles Evert, who is employed in the Pottstown Bridge Works; Ella Ethel; and Mary Edith Lachman.

Horace Hause, son of John and Louisa (Gross) Hause, was born April 5, 1870, in Vincent township, and received his education in the public schools of Upper Uwchlan township. He has adopted farming as the business of his life and is now living on the farm of his father-in-law. The knowledge and ability with which he has applied himself to his chosen calling, while resulting in a gratifying measure of success, give promise of still greater and more substantial returns in the future. It is thought that Mr. Hause is rapidly advancing to a place in the front ranks of the agriculturists of the county. As a citizen Mr. Hause is conscientious and fearless in acting according to his convictions. In politics he is identified with the Prohibition party. His church connections are with the Baptist denomination.

Mr. Hause married, March 9, 1898, Anna Margaret, daughter of Samuel and Anna Cornog, of Upper Uwchlan township. The latter is descended from the deservedly distinguished Suplee family, which was represented in Chester county during the colonial period, and some of whose members took an active part in the Revolutionary struggle. Mr. and Mrs. Hause are the parents of one child: Samuel Evertt, who, inheriting as he does the traditions of a worthy ancestry, will, it may reasonably be hoped, amply fulfill the expectations justly founded on a knowledge of his antecedents.

J. ATWOOD PYLE. After a life of unusual activity and varied adventure, J. Atwood Pyle is passing his later years in retirement as one of the honored citizens of Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His family is of English origin, he being of the third generation of his line in America.

His grandfather, John Pyle, was born in England and came to Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he made farming his occupation. He married Alice Crosley, daughter of John and Rebecca Crosley of Aston. For being married by a Methodist preacher he was disowned by Friends. He lived after his marriage at Middletown, where his fifteen children were born. They were as follows: Israel, born 3 mo., 9, 1788, died 2 mo., 24, 1862, whose line is traced in this history; Elizabeth, born 1 mo., 21, 1790, died 2 mo., 11, 1863, was the wife of James Atwood; Phebe, born 1 mo., 9, 1793, married Joseph Pilkington; Rebecca, born 3 mo., 4, 1795, died 1 mo., 28, 1869, married William Ingram; Maria, born 9 mo., 21, 1797, died 2 mo., 7, 1853, married Albin Pyle; Lydia, born 7 mo., 1, 1800, died unmarried; Daniel, born 2 mo., 22, 1803, died 8 mo., 15, 1881, married Cindy Pyle; Charles, born 7 mo., 15, 1805, died 10 mo., 26, 1868, married Abigail H. Smedley; Esther, born 12 mo., 10, 1807, died 5 mo., 27, 1886, married Redman Ottey; Eliza Y., born 7 mo., 21, 1810, married Charles W. Carnell; Walker, born 5 mo., 15, 1813, died young; Samuel, born 6 mo., 20, 1815, died young; John, twin with Samuel, died in infancy; Crosiey, born 9 mo., 18, 1816, married Sarah Menagh; John S., born 12 mo., 25, 1818, was twice married, the wives being respectively Martha Mercer, Martha McFadden.

Israel, oldest child of John and Alice (Crosley) Pyle, was born 3 mo., 9, 1788. Though his educational advantages were not out of the common, his natural gifts were. Farming was the occupation of his life, but he had ability as a public speaker and he was widely known in the locality as a Methodist local preacher for fifty-two years. He had a circuit of nine churches, and he was one of the organizers of the Stony Bank Methodist Episcopal church, as well as a trustee of the church at Bethlehem. He married Annie N. Dailey, born 8 mo., 8, 1789, daughter of Henry and Hannah Dailey. He died in Thornbury, Delaware county, 2 mo., 24, 1862, and his wife died in West Nottingham 3 mo., 22, 1880. Their children were as follows: John W., born 7 mo., 11, 1809, died 2 mo., 24, 1838, unmarried; William, born 4 mo., 2, 1811, married Susan Bowers; Elizabeth A., born 8 mo., 28, 1813; died 9 mo., 4, 1881, married Jonathan B. Garrett; Mary A., born 1 mo., 10, 1816, married Wilson Marshall; Sarah F., born 3 mo., 13, 1818, married John Eldridge; Sarah, with three sons, wife of one son and two children were lost in the Johnstown flood; Samuel, born 10 mo., 6, 1819, died 4 mo., 22, 1820; Israel, born 5 mo., 14, 1821, died 8 mo., 31, 1882; Casper S., born 5 mo., 25, 1823, died 9 mo., 19, 1841; Reece, born 8 mo., 2, 1825, married Lydia Ann Colley; Phebe, born 9 mo., 5, 1827; died 8 mo., 22, 1855, married Joseph W. Towne; James Atwood, born 10 mo., 10, 1829, married Elizabeth Hodgson; Charles C., born 12 mo., 30, 1831, married Phebe A. Pyle.

J. Atwood, eleventh child and seventh son of Israel and Annie (Dailey) Pyle, was born at Ivy Mills, Delaware county, October 10, 1829. He was educated in private schools in Philadelphia, and learned daguerreotyping, the forerunner of the modern art of photography. He learned this business in Cincinnati, where he stayed for four years. Afterward he spent three years in Indiana, in the same business, which brought him to the beginning of the Civil war. He enlisted and served as quartermaster sergeant in the Eighteenth Regiment, Indiana Volunteers, commanded by Colonel Robert E. Pattison. After eight months he came to West Chester, Pennsylvania, and opened a shoe business. He remained in West Chester for four years, and continued the same line of business at Wilmington, Delaware, and at Media, Pennsylvania, successively. In 1869, he moved to a farm near Oxford, Pennsylvania, where he lived for eight years. He then went to West Grove, Pennsylvania, where for eighteen years he made his home, conducting a farm of forty acres. In 1895 he was appointed postmaster at West Grove, and served for one term. He then moved to his present home in Franklin township, Chester county, where he is held in high esteem. He attends the Presbyterian church, and is a Democrat, keenly interested in the affairs of his party, as well as a member of the Masonic fraternity, and being affiliated with Aurora Lodge, No. 51, in Aurora, Indiana.

July 4, 1853, he married Elizabeth, daughter of John Hodgson, a publisher of West Chester, and Mary, his wife. To J. Atwood and Elizabeth (Hodgson) Pyle, were born ten children, namely: Anna L., born in 1854, who married John W. Reburn, and had six children; Charles, born in 1856, who died unmarried in 1876; George A., born in 1858, who married first, Mary A. Carlisle and had one child; second, Miss Linda W. Miller; Elvena Viola, born in 1859, who is unmarried; Elizabeth, born in 1863, who married William Davis; Harriet N., born in 1865; Mary E., born in 1866, who died in childhood; John H., born in 1868, married May Lamborn, and had two children; Sarah R., born in 1869, who died young; Williette, born in 1871, who died in childhood.

On Saturday, July 4, 1903, Mr. and Mrs. J. Atwood Pyle celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at their handsome residence "Highland Farm," which stands on an eminence a little over a mile south of New London village. The beautiful evening sunset and twilight which clothed the surrounding landscape with a glow of beauty seemed like the blessing of heaven on fifty years of well spent life. Mr. and Mrs. Pyle extended a warm welcome to their guests which numbered about two hundred, and were gathered from widely separated homes. The Rev. H. W. Reiber, pastor of New London Presbyterian church, in his remarks gave expression to the feeling of good will that was shared by all present for the aged couple, and expressed the hope that the happiness and prosperity which they had enjoyed would continue with them to the end of their lives. The Rev. T. S. Minker, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of New London, led in a beautiful and expressive prayer, and during the evening an appropriate poem was read by M. Jennie Murray, entitled "The Golden Wedding." The five surviving children of the ten that were born to them were present, as were also a number of grandchildren and one great-grandchild, making four generations of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Pyle are both well preserved and judging by their appearance might live to see many more anniversaries of their wedding.

GEORGE DOWNING BUTLER, a highly esteemed farmer and citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a son of Joseph Butler, who for many years followed the calling of a farmer, and was known as a worthy citizen, regarded with confidence by his neighbors, who at one time elected him a member of the school board. He married Martha Downing, and they were the parents of the following children: 1. William, who died in infancy. 2. Mary, who died at the age of twenty-two years. 3. Emily J., who became the wife of Joseph Downing, a farmer, and died after their removal to the west. 4. Harvey, who is a farmer in Kansas, and married Henrietta Drey, of Schuylkill Haven. They have six children: Mary, who is a trained nurse; Edgar, who is a farmer; Alice; James, who is a merchant; Joseph, who is at home on the farm; and George, who also resides at home. 5. George Downing, mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Butler, the father of the family, spent the latter part of his life in West Chester, where he died in 1900, his wife having passed away in 1897.

George Downing Butler, son of Joseph and Martha (Downing) Butler, was born February 6, 1855, in Upper Uwchlan township, where he received his primary education in the public schools, afterward attending the Edgefield Institute at Feters Farm, presided over by the well-known educator, Mr. Abram Feters. Subsequently he spent some time at a manual school in Lancaster county. After completing his education he passed six years in assisting his father in the labors of the homestead, and then went to reside on the farm which is now his home, and which is situated near the Eage and Windsor school and church. Here for fifteen years he led the life of an energetic and successful farmer, and then desiring to engage in commercial pursuits removed to West Chester, where for two years he conducted a grocery and meat business. At the end of that time he returned to his farm and his hereditary occupation of agriculture, which he has since pursued with indefatigable zeal and gratifying results. Mr. Butler has never filled any office in the township or county, believing that he can best discharge his duty as a citizen by giving his undivided attention to his individual calling. His political affiliations are with the Republicans, to whom, while declining to accept public office, he extends his aid and support.

Mr. Butler married Catharine, daughter of George and Rebecca (Davies) Llewellyn. The former, who was descended from a Scotch-Irish family which had been resident in this country since an early period, was a landscape gardener. He was an expert in his profession, being employed by the city of Philadelphia. A short time previous to his death, which occurred while he was yet a young man, he had been admitted to the bar. His wife, who was the daughter of George Davies, a British officer, belonged to a family of unquestioned standing, several members of which had won distinction in the military service. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn, mentioned above as the wife of George Downing Butler, would seem, judging by the family names of both her parents, to be entitled to claim Welsh ancestry. Mr. and Mrs. Butler have no children.

NEWTON MILLER, well known as a leader among the agriculturists of Uwchlan township, Chester county, where he is also highly esteemed as an earnest and upright citizen, is a son of John Miller, a farmer, who successfully combined with his agricultural labors the practice of the carpenter's trade and the business of a contractor. During the greater portion of his life he was a resident of East Nantmeal township, where he erected a number of buildings which are now standing. He worked chiefly on farm buildings, and it was under his superintendence that the house now occupied by his son Newton was erected. He was regarded as a man of sound judgment in public affairs, and was elected by his neighbors to the office of school director. He married Hannah Christman, and they were the parents of the following children: Sarah A., who married Pitman Essick, a merchant in one of the western states; Newton, mentioned at length hereinafter; Mary M., who is now deceased; John, who is also deceased; Harriet, single, and makes her home with Lewis Miller; and Lewis, who is a farmer, and married Elma, daughter of Jesse E. Phillipps, who was county treasurer at the time of the failure of the Brandywine Bank.

Newton Miller, son of John and Hannah (Christman) Miller, was born April 5, 1834, in East Nantmeal township, where he received his primary education in the public school, afterward attending the Fremont Academy, presided over by Mr. Jesse E. Phillipps. After two years devoted to teaching in Vincent and Uwchlan townships, he decided to become a farmer, and the scientific skill and practical ability which he brought to the work which awaited him fully demonstrated, as time passed, that he had made no mistake in the selection of an occupation. He is now the owner of a farm of eighty-one acres, having connected with it a fine dairy of sixteen cows. The land testifies by its highly cultivated condition to the excellent care bestowed upon it by its owner, and the very superior products of the dairy find a ready sale in the markets of Philadelphia. In the sphere of public affairs Mr. Miller is known as one whose sound advice and efficient aid are ever at the service of his townsmen, by whom he has been chosen at different times to fill the offices of supervisor and school director. In politics he affiliates with the Republican party. He and his family are members of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Miller married Julia Maria, daughter of Dr. Jesse and Martha (Wollerton) Strickland. The former was a graduate of the medical schools of both Yale and Harvard Universities, and for a number of years was a resident of Upper Uwchlan township, remaining in active practice until he had reached the age of seventy years. Mrs. Strickland was a sister of Judge Wollerton of West Chester. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are the parents of one son: Edwin Francis, who graduated as a mechanical engineer from Lehigh University, and is now employed in the Camden Iron Works, in Camden, New Jersey. He married Martha, daughter of James and Agnes Dautman of Lionville, and the following children have been born to them: Allen and Julian (twins), who, although not yet ten years old, show great dexterity in handling the implements of farming; Herbert, who is now deceased; and William Roland, who died at the age of four months.

FREDERICK WILSON, a leading farmer of Lower Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a son of William Wilson, who was a native of that county, where he passed his life as a farmer, and was also engaged in business as an auctioneer. For many years he was the proprietor of the Brandywine Hotel, which was situated above Coatesville. He married Amanda Bickens. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson became the parents of the following children: Adelia, who married Lewis Hutton, who is now deceased; Charles, who is a resident proprietor of a restaurant in York, Pennsylvania, and married Sallie Nouse of Coatesville; Emma, who is the wife of B. F. Merrills, a farmer in Pomeroy, near Coatesville; Frederick, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Frank, who was at one time engaged in the restaurant business in Parkersburg, Pennsylvania.

Frederick Wilson, son of William and Amanda (Bickens) Wilson, was born August 29, 1856, in Honeybrook, Chester county, and received his primary education in the public schools, subsequently becoming a pupil at Mr. Jacob Harvey's school in Unionville. On leaving school, he decided to become a farmer, and in pursuance of this resolution has since devoted himself with marked success to agricultural pursuits. He is now the owner of a farm of one hundred and eighty acres in Lower Uwchlan township. This estate, which is kept by him in a high state of cultivation, is supplemented by a dairy of thirty-five head of cattle. The very superior products of this part of his establishment meet with a ready sale in the markets of Philadelphia. Although taking an earnest interest in whatever concerns the welfare of the community in which he resides, Mr. Wilson, owing to the absorbing nature of his duties as an agriculturist, takes no active part in public affairs. Politically he is a Democrat. He and his family attend St. Paul's Reformed church.

Mr. Wilson married Annie, daughter of James Dunlap, of West Calu township, the former being a farmer who combined with his agricultural labors the trade of a shoemaker. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson: William, Evans, Helen, Clare, Eva, and Esther. All these children are still at home with their parents, the sons acting as the assistants of their father in the care and management of the homestead.

◆◆◆

JESSE BENNER EVANS, a prosperous farmer, who holds an honored place among the leading citizens of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, belongs to a family of Welsh origin, which was founded in America by Lewis Evans, who left his native land in or about the year 1753, and settled in Pennsylvania, finding a home in that part of Chester county now known as East Vincent. He was accompanied by his wife, Sarah, and their son, Daniel. The career of Lewis Evans as a colonist was not a long one, but after making a home for his family in the New World, he died at a comparatively early age.

Daniel Evans, son of Lewis and Sarah Evans, was born in Wales, about 1743, and was ten years old when he crossed the sea with his parents to their new abode in the province of Pennsylvania. He learned the business of a surveyor, and in company with Mr. McVey surveyed a great number of farms. Mr. McVey afterward went to the west where he practiced civil engineering. Daniel Evans served as a soldier in the Revolutionary army, and was at one time stationed at Jersey City. The record of his services is preserved in Harrisburg. His son Ezra, married, in 1822, Eliza, daughter of Conrad King, of Uwchlan township, and their children were: Newton, who was a farmer, and is now deceased; and Jesse Benner, mentioned at length hereinafter. Thus, it appears that from the time of their immigration the family was numbered among those that have contributed to the welfare and advancement of the community in which their lot was cast.

Jesse Benner Evans, son of Ezra and Eliza (King) Evans, was born October 3, 1824, in Uwchlan township, and obtained his education in the public schools of the neighborhood. He studied dentistry, which he practiced successfully for many years in Phoenixville, and then feeling disposed for a country life and having an inherited taste for agriculture, he retired from business, and bought the farm which is now his home. The estate consists of ninety-seven acres, and has attached to it a dairy of sixteen head of cattle. The products of the dairy, which are of a very superior quality, are disposed of at the Fairmount Creamery. Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Evans has never sought any public office, preferring to devote himself without interruption to his chosen work, he has been twice elected justice of the peace, and has filled the office of school director for ten years. This record is sufficient evidence of the high regard in which Mr. Evans is held by his townsmen. In politics he is a Prohibitionist, but gave his vote to place Abraham Lincoln in the presidential chair. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity. He and his family belong to the Baptist denomination, and Mr. Evans was for many years treasurer of the church which they attend, in addition to holding other offices, among them that of trustee.

Mr. Evans married Sarah Wagon seller, and the following children were born to them: 1. Frank, who lives in Harrisburg, where he holds the office of timekeeper at the Capitol. He married Essie Guthrie, who was of Scotch parentage, and they have three children: Clarence, who is attending the State College; Bessie, who is a typewriter at Atlantic City, New Jersey; and Gertie, who resides at home. 2. Eliza, who is the wife of Clark Pierson, who was for twenty-five years the publisher of the "Lambertville (New Jersey) Record." They have two daughters: Jessie, who is editor and manager of the paper of which her father was publisher; and Grace, who is a typewriter in the service of the Lambertville Rubber Company. 3. Wilmer, who is a typesetter on the "North American," one of the leading papers of Philadelphia. He married a woman of German descent, and one child is living; Edina G., who is now attending school. 4. Mattie, who became the wife of William McKinley, a farmer of Chester Valley, near Pike-land township. They had one child, who died when eight years old, and Mrs. McKinley, also, is now deceased. 5. Abbie S., who died at the age of twenty-one, unmarried. 6. Gertie, who is also deceased. The three last-named all died within six weeks. On July 16, 1903, Mr. and Mrs. Evans celebrated the fifty-third anniversary of their marriage. The family to which Mrs. Evans belongs is of German and Swiss extraction. Jacob Wagonseller was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and for many years was a practising physician in Pottstown. At the time of his death he was a member of the state senate. He married Mary Richter, and their children were: 1. Richter, who was a practising physician in Union county up to the time of his death. 2. Sarah, mentioned above as the wife of Jesse Benner Evans. 3. Catharine, who died at three years of age. 4. Mary, who became the wife of Rev. Franklyn Gearhart, of the Methodist Episcopal church, who died at Williamsport, Pennsylvania. 5. Frank, who is a physician, practising in Selin's Grove, Union county. 6. Catharine (2), who became the wife of William W., son of Frederick Hallman, of Chester Springs. Mrs. Hallman, who is now deceased, left one son, Jacob. 7. Martha, who married Lloyd Sharpless, a merchant of Bloomsburgh, Columbia county, Pennsylvania. 8. John, who followed the occupation of a travelling salesman, and is now deceased. Dr. Wagonseller, the father of the family, ended his days in Union county, leaving behind him a name honorably distinguished in the ranks of the medical profession, his reputation being ably sustained by the two sons who adopted their father's calling.

JOHN JONES, a prosperous farmer and worthy citizen of Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a son of Abner Jones, who was born in 1812, in West Vincent township, and combined the trade of a millwright with the labors of a farmer. During the latter part of his life he was for twenty years proprietor of the Lionville Hotel, which he conducted successfully, at the same time continuing his former occupations. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Peter and Catharine Irej, of East Nantmeal. The former, who was all his life engaged in agricultural pursuits, served in the army during the war of 1812, being one of the number stationed at Marcus Hook. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jones: Sarah Ann; Mary Ann, who became the wife of H. C. Downing, a farmer of Lionville; John, mentioned at length hereinafter; James; Catharine; Olivia; Benjamin; and Ruth. All these children, with the exception of John, the eldest son, are now deceased, as are, also the father and mother of the family.

John Jones, son of Abner and Elizabeth

(Irej) Jones, was born October 6, 1843, in West Pikeland township, where he received his education in the public schools. For twenty-eight years he was engaged in business as a butcher in Lionville, and at the end of that time abandoned commercial pursuits in order to devote himself to farming. This calling he has followed with marked success for the last ten years, and his land is cultivated for the purposes of general farming. He also carries on a flourishing dairy business, being the owner of eighteen head of cows, and his products, which are of a very superior quality, find a ready sale at Malvern. Mr. Jones takes an active interest in public affairs, and has at various times been called upon by his neighbors to serve them in the minor offices of the township. His political principles and opinions are those of the Democratic party.

Mr. Jones married Deborah S., daughter of John and Margaret Townsend, the former a farmer of Upper Uwchlan. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are the parents of two children: Lizzie, who is the wife of John W. Mack, a farmer of West Whiteland township; and Walter, who is a graduate of the Uwchlan Academy, an institution of which Mrs. Ella M. Gordon is principal. He is now engaged in business as a butcher in Lionville. He married Ella, daughter of the late George and Etta Platt. He and his wife are the parents of three children: Jerraldine, John Paul and Rolland Jones.

JACOB RANCK, well known as one of the leading farmers of Uwchlan township; Chester county, is a son of Levi Ranck, who was born in Lancaster county, in or about the year 1817. For twenty-eight years he lived at Carnaeon, combining the trade of a shoemaker with that of a mason, and during the latter portion of his life he followed the occupation of a farmer. He married Catharine, daughter of John Solenberger, who was descended from an old family of German origin. According to tradition, one of the ancestresses was born during the voyage across the ocean. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ranck, of whom the following are now living: Jacob, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Edward, who served in the army during the Civil war, though, as it happened, he did not participate in any engagement. He was a good scholar and a fine penman, and was a clerk in the quartermaster's department.

Jacob Ranck, son of Levi and Catharine (Solenberger) Ranck, was born November 25, 1845, in Carnaeon, Lancaster county, and received his education in the old Smoketown school-house. At an early age he engaged in farming, and when about twenty-four years of age began his for himself. In 1875 he came to Chester county.

and settled in Honeybrook township, where he remained three years, steadily and energetically devoting himself to his chosen calling. About 1899 he removed to his present home, where he engages in general farming, and also conducts a dairy of twenty-three head of cows. The very fine products of his dairy he disposes of to advantage in the markets of Philadelphia. Although preferring not to mingle actively in public affairs, Mr. Ranck takes an interest in whatever concerns the welfare of the community in which he resides, and is faithful in all the duties of a good citizen. His political affiliations are with the Republican party. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Ranck married Emma H., daughter of William and Catharine (Gran) Doutrick. The former was a farmer in Berks county, whence he removed to Honeybrook, Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Ranck are the parents of the following children: Lydia Ann, who resides at home; William, who is a farmer on the homestead; Katie, who is the wife of L. Kaufroth, a farmer in Chester county, and has two daughters; Emma, who married Harry Todd, who is employed on the estate of Mrs. Dutton at Downingtown; and they are the parents of one son; Jacob; Amanda; Sadie; Charlie; and Herbert. These last named children all reside with their parents on the homestead.

JACOB RENNARD, one of the substantial and progressive farmers of Lower Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has resided for many years and taken an active interest in its material growth and advancement, was born in East Goshen township, in May, 1849, a descendant of a German lineage.

Jacob Rennard (grandfather) was a native of Schuylkill township, Chester county, where he spent a long and useful life devoted to agricultural pursuits. He was the owner of one hundred acres of rich and arable land, and he conducted his general farming operation on an extensive scale. Politically he was an old line Whig. Jacob Rennard and his wife, Mary (Walters) Rennard, were the parents of eight children—Joseph, Jacob, Adam, Mary, Rachel, Susau, Rebecca and Henry Rennard.

Adam Rennard (father) was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a farmer by occupation, and the owner of a large tract of land in East Goshen township, where he served for many years in the capacity of supervisor. The success he attained in his undertaking was attributed to his own energy and well directed efforts. He was united in marriage to Susau March, daughter of George and Catherine March, the former named being a representative farmer of Charlestown township, where the greater portion of his life is supposed to have been spent. Their children were: George, a farmer of Oxford borough; David, also a farmer, but during his residence in Philadelphia served in the capacity of clerk; Aaron, now engaged in farming on the old homestead in East Goshen township; Caroline, wife of Jacob Clemens, a prosperous farmer of Tredyffrin township; Emma, wife of Charles Clemens, a farmer, and now engaged as salesman for the Chase Nursery Company of New York state; Harriet, wife of John Z. Clark, a native of West Chester, now engaged in the butcher business at Coatesville; Jacob; Brinton was a farmer, now deceased; and William, a farmer in Montgomery county. The father of these children died at his home in East Goshen township in the year 1877.

Jacob Rennard received his education in the public schools of East Goshen township, and began his business career as a farmer, which occupation he has followed ever since. He is now conducting general operations on a one hundred-acre farm located in Uwchlan township, near the Anselma post office, with a dairy of about eighteen head of cows attached, and the products from this branch of the business are readily disposed of at the creamery. In political faith he has always been a Republican, and gives his party a loyal support on all leading questions.

Mr. Rennard married Hannah Moore, daughter of Eber and Elizabeth (Fritz) Moore, the two latter named being the parents of seven children—John G., deceased; Mary J., is the wife of William Reed, a farmer of East Whiteland township; Margaret, wife of John R. Pierce, a resident of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, and an employe of the United States government, serving in the capacity of clerk in the house of representatives at Washington, District of Columbia; Harriet, wife of Franklin Gottier, who was a butcher by occupation; he is now deceased and his widow and six children reside at Landenburg, Pennsylvania; Hannah E., wife of Jacob Rennard; Annie L., wife of Theodore Llewlyn, who is engaged in the mining business in Chester county, Pennsylvania; Frank D. Moore, a painter by trade, and a prominent resident of Media, Pennsylvania. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Rennard: Lillie M., wife of Jones Stine, a farmer of West Pikeland township, and their family consists of three children, George, Hannah and Ralph Stine; Arthur, a farmer by occupation, married Susan McCluskey, and they are the parents of six children, Ruth, Edith, John, Josephine, and two who died in infancy; Lottie, wife of George Longacre, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania; he is employed in the phosphate works; Cora, wife of Lewis Deery, of East Pikeland township, where he is engaged in farming pursuits; their family consists of three children: Rennard, Henry and Lottie Deery; Lacy, unmarried, resides at home with his parents; John, who married Bertha Dutton, and also resides at home. Mr. Rennard and his family hold membership in St. Paul's Reformed church and are well and favorably known.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN THOMAS. The family of which Benjamin F. Thomas, a successful and enterprising agriculturist of Westtown, Pennsylvania, is a member, trace their origin to Reese Thomas, paternal grandfather of Benjamin F. Thomas, who married Elizabeth Lobb, and the following named children were born to them: Jane, Esther, Isaac, Richard, and Mary Ann Thomas. His maternal grandparents were Jonathan and Susannah (Smedley) Hood. The former named was born October 17, 1777, and died May 17, 1861; he was a son of Jonathan and Mary (Lawkes) Hood, of Newtown. Susannah Smedley Hood was born November 11, 1779, and died December 18, 1858. Their children were: Lydia, Mary, Sarah C., Thomas, Joseph, Susanna, Edmund and Jonathan Hood.

Isaac Thomas, father of Benjamin F. Thomas, was born November 16, 1804, and was united in marriage at the Newtown Meeting House, December 9, 1829, to Miss Lydia Hood, who was born in Newtown, November 18, 1805. They were the parents of the following named children: Isaac Preston, born in 1830, married Elizabeth Garrett; Susanna H., born December 28, 1831, died in 1832; Jonathan, born January 10, 1833, died October 15, 1873; he married Sarah A. Leedom; William P., born March 30, 1835, married Sarah P. Bishop and Anna Matlack; Elizabeth L., born December 2, 1836, unmarried; Richard H., born October 3, 1838, married Eliza Boreman; Rebecca L., born October 9, 1840, wife of David Paiste; they have three children; Lydia Ann, born February 19, 1843, wife of William Evans; they have three children: Benjamin F., born June 27, 1845, unmarried; Susanna H., born June 27, 1845, deceased. The father of these children died in Newtown, August 10, 1854, and his widow passed away at West Chester, June 25, 1885.

Isaac Preston Thomas, eldest son of the above named parents, and brother of Benjamin F. Thomas, was born in 1830, in Newtown Delaware county, Pennsylvania. His early education was acquired in the public schools of Newtown, and this was supplemented by a thorough course at Carleton Seminary, Rutland county, Vermont. His entire business career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, and the manufacture of fertilizers, which latter named business he conducted in conjunction with farming from 1868 to 1897, his plant being located first in Pennsylvania, and later at Panesborough, New Jersey, where he carried on an extensive trade until 1897, when he disposed of the business. In 1856 Mr. Thomas took up his residence on Prospect Hill Farm, Thornbury township, Delaware county, where he has since resided. In recent years he has acquired other farms which he now owns and operates in addition to his Prospect Hill, which consists of one hundred and sixty acres; Hawthorne, which consists of one hundred and ninety-seven acres; Magnolia, which consists of seventy acres, and Primrose, which consists of two hundred and twenty-three acres. The first three named are in Thornbury, Delaware county, and the latter is in Westtown, Chester county. His principal business is dairying, to which he devotes the greater part of his time, being the owner of a modern and commodious creamery at Prospect Hill, which yields him a goodly return for his labor. In his political views Mr. Thomas was formerly an old line Whig, but is now a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, having been elected to the office of school director on that ticket. He is a prominent member of the Hicksite Friends Meeting at Goshen, and a member of Brandywine Grange, No. 60, Patrons of Husbandry.

In 1858 Mr. Thomas married Elizabeth Garrett, born November 28, 1831, at Vincent, Chester county, Pennsylvania, the daughter of Nathan Lewis and Lydia (Cox) Garrett, and granddaughter of Benjamin and Debbie (Lewis) Garrett. Their children were: Benjamin Franklin, born September 29, 1858, died October 17, 1864; Ella Velinda, born June 26, 1860, died October 7, 1864; Isaac Byron, born April 24, 1862, died November 13, 1891; he married Mary Viola Lawhead, a graduate of Swarthmore College in the class of 1881; their children are: Aubrey Lee, and Isaac Preston Thomas; Francis Garrett, born June 23, 1865, is now a prominent resident of Philadelphia, where he is engaged in the creamery business; he married Anna Fink, and two children were born to them: Elma, who died at the age of two and a half years, and Dorothy Thomas; Emma Elizabeth, born June 15, 1867, died February 14, 1891; she was the wife of Horace Roberts, and their children are: Emmor, Preston Thomas and Byron Roberts.

Benjamin F. Thomas, youngest son of Isaac and Lydia Thomas, was born in Newtown, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, June 27, 1845, attended the public schools of his native town and completed his education at Shortledge's Academy, Kennett Square, Pennsylvania. He has always been engaged in farming interests, for a number of years devoting his attention principally to the creamery business. For many years he resided in Newtown, but recently purchased the Hoopes farm in Westtown, where in the management of his business affairs he displays remarkable executive ability, energy and enterprise. His land is under a high state of cultivation and the improvements upon the place are in keeping with all those found upon a model farm of the twentieth century. He is a staunch adherent of the men and measures advocated by the Republican party, and in his religious views he follows the teachings of the Hicksite Friends Society. Mr. Thomas is unmarried.

RESIDENCE OF B. F. THOMAS, WESTTOWN, CHESTER CO., PA.

J. FRANK MARCH, an enterprising farmer and esteemed citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born July 1, 1856, on the farm which is now his home, a son of Jerome and Matilda (Steitler) March, and grandson of Henry and Elizabeth (Benner) March.

Henry March (grandfather) was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania. He resided in West Vincent township a portion of his life, after which he located on the farm in Uwchlan township now owned by J. Frank March. He was a carpenter and contractor, which business he followed the greater portion of his life in Chester county, but his declining years were devoted to the cultivation and management of his farm. He married Elizabeth Benner, a native of East Pikeland township, and the following named children were born to them: Catherine, who became the wife of Thomas Wilson; Eliza, unmarried; Rebecca, who became the wife of John Moses; Jerome, mentioned hereinafter; Sarah, who became the wife of John Bringham, and Mary, who became the wife of Jesse J. Rogers.

Jerome March (father) was a native of West Vincent township, Chester county. In early life he followed the trade of mason, but afterward turned his attention to agriculture and ended his days on the farm now owned and operated by his son J. Frank March. He took an active part in local affairs, and was much respected by his neighbors, who elected him to the office of supervisor for two terms. He married Matilda Steitler, a daughter of David T. and Hannah (Still) Steitler, the latter named having been a daughter of Henry Still, and she was reared on the farm now owned by J. Frank March. David T. and Hannah (Still) Steitler were the parents of the following named children: Rebecca, who became the wife of John March; Washington, who married Anna Keim; Hannah, who became the wife of Obadiah Shingle; Margaret, who became the wife of Uhmstead Wells; David, who married Lydia McCarrar; Mary, who became the wife of Albert Trainer; Matilda, a fore-mentioned as the wife of Jerome March, and George C. Steitler, who married Sarah Evans. Jerome and Matilda (Steitler) March were the parents of one son, J. Frank March.

J. Frank March received his early education in the public school of the neighborhood, and subsequently was a student in the Edgefield Institute, then presided over by Captain Abram Fetters. On leaving school he immediately devoted himself to farming, which he has made the business of his life, and is now the owner of the homestead, which consists of one hundred acres of rich and arable land. He conducts a general farming business, also a dairy of twenty head of cows, and the products of the latter branch of the industry find a ready sale in the markets of Philadelphia. A sufficient evidence of the high regard in which Mr. March is held by his townsmen is furnished by the fact that he has served a term of six years as auditor of the township, and for the last sixteen years as justice of the peace. Politically he is a Democrat, and in religious matters is connected with the Reformed church.

Mr. March married Tamzine L. Strickland, and two sons were the issue of this union: The elder, Edgar W., was educated in the public schools, and married Elizabeth C. John, a daughter of William H. and Abigail (Cox) John, the former a farmer of Upper Uwchlan township, and the latter the daughter of Franklin Cox, a miller of West Goshen. Edgar W. and Elizabeth C. March are the parents of one daughter, Mary Florence March. Chester S., the younger brother of Edgar W., also received his education in the public schools, is now a pupil in the West Chester State Normal School, presided over by Mr. G. M. Phillips, and is a member of the Patriotic Order of the Sons of America. Both brothers affiliate with the same political party as that to which their father belongs.

Mrs. March, wife of J. Frank March, is a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Loomis) Strickland, the former a farmer of West Vincent township. Their family consisted of thirteen children, the surviving members of which are as follows: Hannah, wife of William L. Rettew, a wheelwright by occupation; Sallie, wife of J. M. Nymen, a cabinetmaker; Tamzine L., mentioned above as the wife of J. Frank March, and Maggie, wife of Walter Rhodes, who is employed as dispatcher by the Union Traction Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

COPE. According to researches made in England by a member of the American branch of the Cope family, the earliest known ancestor was John Cope, Esquire of Denshanger, in the county of Northampton, who was twice high sheriff of the county and five times knight of the shire in parliament; he espoused the cause of Henry IV. and died in 1417. Joan, his widow, died in 1435. Next in line comes William Cope, Esq., who married a daughter of William Gosage, of Spratton, and she was living in 1487. Their son, Alexander Cope, was father to Sir William Cope, of Hanwell, in Oxfordshire, knight cofferer to Henry VII, buried at Banbury in 1513. By his first wife, Agnes, daughter of Sir Robert Harcourt, he had one son, Stephen Cope, of Bedhampton, county of Hants, Sergeant of the Poultry to Henry VIII, and Edward VI, living in 1552. His wife was Anne, daughter of William Saunders, of Banbury, by whom he had a son, Sir Anthony Cope, of Bedhampton, knight, living in 1573, while his widow, Anne, daughter of Sir Humphry Stafford, of Blatherwyke, survived till 1613. Next came Edward Cope, whose wife, Maud, was living in 1634. Their son, John Cope, died at Marden, in Wiltshire, in 1656, and Margaret, his widow, in 1670. This John Cope survived his son of the same name, who died at Chisledon, in Wiltshire, 1649, while Elizabeth, his widow, was living in 1681 at Avebury, Wiltshire.

OLIVER COPE, son of the last named named John Cope, purchased two hundred and fifty acres of land from William Penn in 1681, and with his wife, Rebecca, came to Pennsylvania perhaps the next year. He settled on Naaman's creek, near the Delaware river, and there died in 1697, leaving four children:

1. William, b. about 1672, m. Mary ——— and is supposed to have had a son Oliver, a daughter Rebecca, and perhaps other children.
2. Elizabeth, m. ——— Foulk, and a second husband, Hugh Blackwell, of Bethel, and died about 1765, leaving children by the first.
3. Ruth, m. Thomas Buffington, of Bradford, and died about 1728, leaving several children.

4. John, b. about 1691; d. 2 mo., 14, 1773.

JOHN COPE, last named, purchased two hundred acres of land in East Bradford, in 1712, and erected thereon a log house which stood for one hundred and fifty years. He is said to have married about this time but his wife did not long survive and even her name is unknown. He was again married, 9 mo., 30, 1721, at her father's house, to Charity, widow of John Evans and daughter of Robert and Jane (Chandler) Jeffers of East Bradford. She was born 4 mo., 11, 1695, and died about 1743, after which John married 12 mo., 23, 1748, Elizabeth Fisher, widow of Thomas Fisher, of East Caln. He appears to have united with Friends after his second marriage, and he was an active member of Bradford Monthly Meeting from the time it was established, in 1737, until his death. Beside farming he appears to have carried on the manufacture of malt. By his second wife he had eight children:

5. Hannah, b. 4 mo., 25, 1724; d. 10 mo., 10, 1817; m. John Carter.
6. Samuel, b. 1726; d. 9 mo., 15, 1817. See forward.
7. Mary, b. 1728; d. 2 mo., 6, 1813, unmarried.
8. John, b. 1730; d. 7 mo., 31, 1812; m. Grace Cloud and Mary Dickinson and had fifteen children.
9. Nathan, b. 1733; d. 12 mo., 3, 1820; m. Amy Bane.
10. Caleb, b. 11 mo., 4, 1736; d. 5 mo., 30, 1824; m. Mary Mendenhall. He was ancestor of the shipping merchants of the name in Philadelphia.
11. Joshua, twin with Caleb, d. 1818; m. Jane Brown.
12. Joseph, b. 6 mo., 1, 1740; d. 12 mo., 11, 1820; m. Ann Taylor.

SAMUEL COPE (6) was married 6 mo., 7, 1753, at Bradford Meeting, to Deborah Parke, born 6 mo., 5, 1734; died 1 mo., 13, 1774; daughter of Jonathan and Deborah (Taylor) Parke, of East Bradford, and settled on the eastern half of his father's farm. He also purchased other land in the vicinity. He was married a second time, 6 mo., 21, 1781, to Margaret (Dickinson) Smith, a widow who was buried 3 mo., 22, 1804. He was an active member of Bradford and West Chester Meetings, and by his first wife had ten children:

13. Charity, b. 4 mo., 8, 1754; d. 8 mo., 29, 1840; m. Caleb Baldwin.
14. Jesse, b. 10 mo., 10, 1755; d. 10 mo., 18, 1755.
15. Samuel, b. 10 mo., 1, 1756; d. 2 mo., 28, 1837; m. Elizabeth Blackford.
16. Abiah, b. 3 mo., 22, 1759; d. 10 mo., 5, 1826; m. Jane Morris.
17. Rebecca, b. 12 mo., 23, 1760; d. 3 mo., 5, 1764.
18. Jonathan, b. 12 mo., 22, 1762; d. 6 mo., 10, 1840. See forward.
19. Deborah, b. 3 mo., 17, 1765; d. 9 mo., 1770.
20. Mary, b. 3 mo., 15, 1767; d. 7 mo., 27, 1832; m. Jesse Green.
21. Sophia, b. 3 mo., 17, 1769; d. 11 mo., 13, 1776.
22. Deborah, b. 9 mo., 16, 1771; d. 8 mo., 16, 1837.

JONATHAN COPE (18) was first married to Susanna Mercer, who died leaving one child; married secondly, Zillah, daughter of John and Esther (Dicks) Darlington, of East Bradford; born 9 mo., 5, 1769; died 9 mo., 12, 1844. He settled a short distance northward from his father, on Broad Run, in East Bradford, where he owned one hundred and fifty acres of land. He had learned the trade of a blacksmith and edge-tool maker and established a tilt-mill on the stream. His augers and gimlets had a wide reputation. Upon the establishment of a Friends' meeting at West Chester he transferred his membership from Bradford and occupied the position of overseer for some years. By both wives he had twelve children:

23. Phebe, b. 4 mo., 28, 1790; d. 10 mo., 5, 1842; m. Joseph Gheen.

24. Elizabeth, b. 5 mo., 17, 1797; d. 3 mo., 31, 1819, unmarried.

25. Susan, b. 9 mo., 11, 1798; d. 1 mo., 11, 1846, unmarried.

26. Jesse, b. 12 mo., 31, 1799; d. 12 mo., 11, 1802.

27. John, b. 8 mo., 20, 1801; d. 9 mo., 14, 1884. See forward.

28. Margaret, b. 1 mo., 17, 1804; d. 11 mo., 24, 1848, unmarried.

29. Caleb B., b. 11 mo., 13, 1805; d. 1 mo., 27, 1872; m. Gulielma Maria Thomas.

30. Samuel, b. 6 mo., 12, 1807; d. 9 mo., 10, 1813.

31. Deborah, b. 10 mo., 23, 1808; d. 2 mo., 7, 1887; m. Thomas Hatton.

32. Jonathan, b. 8 mo., 10, 1810; d. 11 mo., 27, 1872; m. Gulielma Maria Thomas.

33. Chalkley, b. 6 mo., 10, 1813; d. 10 mo., 15, 1813.

34. Darlington, b. 6 mo., 13, 1815; d. 1 mo., 8, 1888; m. Sally Thomas and Ann Cope.

JOHN COPE (27) married, in 1826, Hannah Hayes, born 2 mo., 21, 1803; d. 11 mo., 26, 1882; daughter of Eli and Sarah (Ward) Hayes, of Newlin township. He took the farm of his father, but about 1848 removed to a newer set of buildings and there continued to reside. He and his wife were members of West Chester Meeting. Children:

35. Hayes, b. 12 mo., 27, 1826; d. 2 mo., 15, 1834.

36. Allen, b. 2 mo., 26, 1829; living at the homestead, unmarried.

37. Thomas Savery, b. 6 mo., 11, 1831; m. Hannah Carpenter.

38. Sarah H., b. 10 mo., 1, 1833; m. Robert Garrett.

39. Jonathan, b. 12 mo., 15, 1835; d. 6 mo., 20, 1849.

40. Eli H., b. 4 mo., 15, 1838; m. Lydia M. Woodward.

41. Zillah M., b. 10 mo., 12, 1840; d. 9 mo., 15, 1844.

42. Hillborn, b. 11 mo., 1, 1842; d. 6 mo., 20, 1844.

43. John G., b. 3 mo., 20, 1845; m. Sallie A. Woodward.

44. Josiah, twin with John G.

JOSIAH COPE, the last named, was born in East Bradford and educated in the public schools of that township, after which he attended Prof. Allen's school in West Chester and the State Normal School at Mansfield, Pennsylvania. For a few years he assisted his father on the farm, but in 1868 entered into mercantile life at Oxford and two years later engaged in the manufacture of fertilizers at Lincoln University, which he still conducts, having a branch store in Oxford. He was married March 11, 1869, to Josephine Sharpless, daughter of Joel and Sarah Ann (Green) Sharpless, of Middletown, Delaware county. They have no children.

In politics Mr. Cope has followed the example set by his forefathers, and is a Republican. He has held the position of a school director for twelve years and is a member of the Masonic Order and of the G. A. R. In 1864 he enlisted in the One Hundred and Ninety-Second Regiment at West Chester, under Captain Brooks, and served on garrison duty in Maryland. He and his wife attend the Presbyterian church.

THOMAS TAYLOR, an enterprising farmer and worthy citizen of East Vincent township, Chester county, is a grandson of Thomas Taylor. Thomas, son of Thomas, was born July 14, 1844, in Chester county, where he passed his life as a farmer. He married Elizabeth, born January 5, 1847, in Chester county, daughter of John and Sarah (Funck) Roberts, both of whom are deceased. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor: Josiah, who was born April 10, 1871, and is now a resident of Montgomery; Thomas, mentioned at length hereinafter, and Katie, who was born October 10, 1875. The death of Mr. Taylor occurred September 11, 1897, and his widow is still living.

Thomas Taylor, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Roberts) Taylor, was born January 11, 1873, in Chester county, as were also his brother and sister. He was educated in the schools of the township, and completed his course of study at the age of eighteen. Deciding to adopt as his life-work his father's occupation of agriculture, he immediately applied himself to the labors of that calling, which he prosecuted with such energy and perseverance as to insure for him a gratifying measure of success. As a citizen Mr. Taylor is not unmindful of his duties. He takes a sincere interest in whatever pertains to the public welfare, and his political obligations are discharged with a strict conscientiousness which commands the respect of his neighbors, by whom he is regarded as a representative of the younger and more aggressive element in the agricultural population, which has always been, and is still, so important a factor in the prosperity and well-being of his native county.

Mr. Taylor married, January 25, 1897, Laura, daughter of Moses and Elmira (Schultz) Halteman, of Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor are the parents of one child: Paul, who was born June 21, 1898, in the county of his ancestors. The family name of Mr. Taylor is, in one sense, the most distinguished in Chester county, being that of the world-renowned poet whose birthplace and home both lie within her historic boundaries.

ALFRED F. CONARD, senior member of The Conard & Jones Company of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, traces his ancestry to Dennis Conard, of whose name in German a great many different versions are given, who came from Crefield on the Rhine and settled at Germantown, a suburb of Philadelphia, in 1683. The line of descent is as follows: Matthias Conard, second son of Dennis Conard, was the father of Cornelius Conard, of Horsham, and he was the father of Everard Conard, who married Margaret Cadwalader, and about the year 1784 removed to the township of New London, where he purchased 300 acres of land. One of his sons, named Jesse Conard, married Ann Pennington, daughter of Thomas and Susana Pennington, and among his children was Thomas Conard, father of Alfred F. Conard, who for several years conducted a school in Philadelphia, and later a boarding school at West Grove, Pennsylvania.

Alfred F. Conard, eldest son of Thomas and Rebecca Shoemaker Conard, was born in the year 1835, and obtained his education in his father's school at West Grove and the Westtown Boarding School. Subsequently he settled at West Grove, Chester county, where he learned the nursery business under the personal supervision of Thomas M. Harvey. After acquiring a thorough knowledge of this vocation, Mr. Conard entered into partnership with Charles Dingee, under the firm name of Dingee & Conard, and devoted themselves to the culture of roses on a large scale. From the beginning this enterprise proved very successful. Mr. Conard was largely instrumental in organizing the mail order business, which subsequently extended all over the United States, and established a national reputation for the excellence of its famous roses and other ornamental plants.

A few years ago Alfred F. Conard retired from the Dingee & Conard Company, and established a new business at West Grove on the same lines as before, under the style of The Conard & Jones Company, for the special culture of roses, plants, bulbs and flower seeds. Owing to Mr.

Conard's large experience and well known honorable methods, this enterprise soon became a prominent and acknowledged leader in its line, and in addition to the duties of this large and constantly increasing patronage, Mr. Conard has for many years been a director in the National Bank of West Grove. He is a Republican in politics, and gives his support to all measures which tend towards the welfare and improvement of his county and community.

In 1862 Mr. Conard was united in marriage to Lydia C. Hughes, daughter of Samuel Hughes, an enterprising and progressive agriculturist of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Conard and his wife are regular attendants of the meetings of the Society of Friends.

HOOPES MARSHALL. One of the highly cultivated and therefore most productive farms for which Chester county, Pennsylvania, is noted, located in the township of Westtown, is the property of Hoopes Marshall, who was born October 11, 1827, in East Bradford township, now named Pocopson. He is a son of David and Hannah (Hoopes) Marshall. David Marshall traces his ancestry to the founder of the well known and prominent Marshall family, a full account of whose history will be found elsewhere in this work. The founder of the family was Abraham Marshall, a native of Gratton, in Derbyshire, England, who came to Chester county, Pennsylvania, in the year 1700, and seven years later settled in what is now West Bradford township, on Brandywine creek. Hannah (Hoopes) Marshall, wife of David Marshall, was the daughter of Stephen Hoopes, who was a worthy descendant in the ninth generation from Joshua Hoopes, the ancestor of the family in Pennsylvania.

Hoopes Marshall obtained a liberal education in the public schools of Westtown township, and being reared upon a farm he was thoroughly familiar and inured to the duties of that occupation, which he chose as his vocation in life and which he has successfully followed up to the present time (1903). In 1836, when Hoopes Marshall was in his tenth year, his parents removed to Westtown township and located upon the farm where Mr. Marshall now resides, this estate having been the property of members of the Hoopes family in whose possession it had remained for several generations. Mr. Marshall has followed general farming, cattle and stock dealing, and being a man of practical business ability and enterprise has gained a large degree of financial success in his undertaking. His religious sympathies are in accord with the doctrines advocated by the Hicksite Friends, but he does not hold membership in any meeting. His political allegiance is given to the Democratic party, and he has been the incumbent of the township offices of supervisor and collector. His fraternal affiliations are with Westmont Lodge, No. 495, Knights of Pythias and Tamemede Tribe, No. 192, Improved Order of Red Men, both of Tanguy, Pennsylvania.

In Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, December 25, 1861, Hoopes Marshall was united in marriage to Sarah L. Regester, born in Thornbury, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 7, 1831, a daughter of Abraham H. and Ursula (Marshall) Regester, residents of Kennett township, Chester county. Two children were born of this union, both of whom are unmarried and reside at home with their parents—J. Elden, born July 18, 1866, and Ida Ursula, born December 7, 1867. Abraham Regester, father of Mrs. Marshall, was born in Edgemont April 20, 1801, and married, January 2, 1823, Sarah Chalfant, who was born in 1804, and died January 9, 1829, a daughter of John and Sarah Chalfant. On November 4, 1830, Mr. Regester married Ursula Marshall, a daughter of James and Leah Marshall, and her death occurred in Kennett township, September 18, 1880. Mr. Regester and his wife were attendants of the Friends' Meetings. His death occurred at his home in Kennett township, June 19, 1873, and his remains were interred at Middletown, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

LAWRENCE FAMILY. Of Samuel Lawrence, founder of the Chester county branch of the Lawrence family, all personal record has been lost. It is only known of him that he came from Wales some time prior to the war of the Revolution and settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. It is supposed that he afterward removed to Chester county and settled in East Caln township, as he was buried there in the Friends' burying ground at Caln Meeting House. Nothing is known of his family save one son, John, who lived at Compass, West Caln township. That John Lawrence was a man of unusual enterprise is shown by the range of his activities. He owned a farm and besides overseeing that, he was in business as a carpenter and as an undertaker. He was widely known, for his services as a builder were in demand, and in the capacity of undertaker he was called upon throughout a radius of many miles. He married Ann Buchanan, of Wilmington, Delaware, and became the father of nine children, as follows: 1. Samuel, of Honeybrook township, who will be mentioned at greater length; 2. John, who married Ann Robinson, and spent his life as a farmer in West Caln township; 3. Jacob, well known throughout Chester county as a Baptist minister, died at Springfield; his wife was Elizabeth Hoffman; 4. Ann, who married Benjamin Supplee, lived and died in Honeybrook township; 5. Elizabeth, who married James Ottenkeck, died in Honeybrook township, as did her husband; 6. Hannah, who married Matthew Marple of Mount Joy, Lancaster county; 7. Mary, who married Benjamin Marple, died, with her husband, in Maryland; 8. Sarah, who became the wife of Samuel Schrock, and lived and died in West Caln township; 9. Lydia, who married Harmon Skiles, and passed her life in Sadsbury township.

Samuel, oldest child of John Lawrence, was born in West Caln township in 1801. He grew up on a farm and held to farming as his lifetime occupation. He was a trusted man in his community, and at different times held most of the township offices. He was supervisor of Honeybrook township for several terms, and served many years as school director. A Whig in his earlier years, he became a Republican after the organization of that party. He married Rebecca, a daughter of Andrew Brown, who came to West Caln township from Ireland in the latter part of the eighteenth century. Samuel Lawrence died in Honeybrook borough in 1880 and his wife died there in 1876. They are both buried in the Honeybrook Presbyterian churchyard. The children of the couple were as follows: 1. John, who became prominent as a contractor and builder; he married Ann Ash and removed to Coatesville, where he was engaged in business and where he died; 2. Mary, who died at the age of seventeen; 3. Andrew, who became a farmer in the west, settling near Kansas City, where he died; his wife was Theresa Miller; 4. Samuel H., of West Caln, of whom further mention is made in this article; 5. Margaret J., who married William Pimm, a stock dealer of Chester county; 6. Adley B., married Mary Hommer and lives in Salt Lake City; 7. Jacob, who was enlisted during the Civil war with the Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and died of typhoid fever during military service; he was buried at North Edisto, South Carolina; 8. George, a farmer of West Caln township, now deceased; his wife was Sarah Wright, and he served with the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; 9. Benjamin, who died at the age of ten.

Samuel H., fourth child and third son of Samuel and Rebecca (Brown) Lawrence, was born at the old homestead in West Honeybrook township, December 15, 1833. His schooling was not extensive but his education was of the best kind. The rigorous discipline of the old fashioned district school, where he was well grounded in the three R's, was supplemented by the varied activities of the farm more efficiently than it might have been in an expensively equipped modern manual training school. He had, moreover, inherited from his grandfather mechanical tastes which made any kind of constructive work a pleasure. He learned the carpenter's trade, and went into business with his older brother, John, who had a leading position as contractor and builder in Coatesville, Pennsylvania. He remained with the firm for five years, when he withdrew and in connection with Thomas H. Doan, he engaged in business at Wilmington, Delaware. The enterprise prospered highly, and Mr. Lawrence was soon conspicuous for ability among men of his craft. In 1874 he was called to Philadelphia to superintend the construction of the government building for the Centennial Exposition. This work led to his recognition in Philadelphia, where he was subsequently given important contracts. In 1877 he was engaged by James Smith & Company to superintend the construction of a seven-story building at the corner of Crown and Race streets. This structure, which was one hundred and sixty-five feet by two hundred and thirty feet, was destroyed by fire in the same year it was built, and Mr. Lawrence was called to supervise its re-construction. In 1877 he retired from the building business and bought a farm of one hundred and eight acres in West Caln township, where he still lives. He finds great satisfaction in the cultivation of his farm and the conduct of his dairy according to the most approved methods. He has a record as a soldier during the Civil war, having served in Captain James Eicholtz's Company, Twenty-ninth Regiment Emergency Volunteers, when the corps was organized to repel the advance of General Lee in 1863. Mr. Lawrence has always been identified with the Republican party, and has filled various local public offices. He was the first constable elected after Coatesville was incorporated, and he was at the same time a member of the council. He is a member of the Masonic Order, and connected with Goddard Lodge at Coatesville. He is a member of the Brandywine Presbyterian church, of which he has been a trustee for nine years.

Samuel H. Lawrence married Rachel, daughter of W. B. Maitland, of West Caln township. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence, five died in infancy. The others are: 1. George, now deceased; 2. Elizabeth, who became the wife of John McMin; 3. Clara, who married Robert R. Galey, secretary of the Chinese branch of the Young Men's Christian Association and is living at Tientsin, China, with her husband; 4. Anna, who became the wife of Charles McConnell, a farmer of Honeybrook township; 5. Isabel, now the wife of Brace Baxter, of Chester, Pennsylvania; 6. Ida; 7. Cora.

THOMAS KIRK, a prominent citizen and landowner of Newtown Square, Pennsylvania, was born in Upper Darby, Delaware county, November 8, 1826, a great-grandson of Samuel Kirk, whose son, Thomas, married Elizabeth Hamun, and his son, John, became the father of Thomas Kirk; he married Mary Ann Garrett, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Thomas; 2. John, married Sarah W. Bittles, and their children are: William, Garrett, Howard and John; their son Howard married and his children are: Elmer, Howard, Jr., Clifford and Jacob Earle; 3. Mary G., wife of Chalkley Duell; 4. William, married Ellen E. Worrall, and they have one child, Ethel; 5. Emma, wife of George Horner, and their children are: George, Jr., Mary P., Lewis D., and Elmer. George, Jr., married Emma Pancoast and their children are: Samuel, J. Kirk, Alice and Tacie; Samuel married Catherine Bond, and their children are: Harmon and Elizabeth; Mary P., became the wife of Hiram P. Eaves, and their children are: William and Elizabeth Kirk Eaves; 6. Elizabeth; 7. Debby.

Thomas Kirk, eldest son of John and Mary A. Kirk, acquired his early education in the public schools of his native town, and later he was a pupil in the Strode school, then considered the finest school in the county, where he took up the higher branches of learning to round out his preliminary instruction. Like most boys brought up on a farm it was necessary during vacation seasons to assist his father in the work, and this gave him the experience which made it possible for him to depend upon his own resources quite early in life. Upon finishing his studies he returned to his father's place at Upper Darby, where he spent about one year, and on November 8, 1849, he took up his residence on a farm owned by his father on the Darby road, which he cultivated for eighteen years. In 1867 he purchased from his father what was known as the Williamson farm, containing ninety acres of fertile land located at Newtown Square; Mr. Kirk has since made this his home, constantly improving both buildings and land until now he is the proud possessor of one of the finest farms in Delaware county.

While devoting himself to farm pursuits, Mr. Kirk has not been without prominence in the political field and as a faithful adherent of the Republican party has been honored by election to the board of school directors of Upper Darby, in which capacity he served for eight years. He is a firm advocate of education as the best foundation for a useful and successful career; in his opinion nothing is of such vital importance in the building up of human character in the best and broadest sense than educational advantages properly applied, and it is largely due to his instrumentality that the public schools of his section are so wisely and properly conducted. He was also supervisor of Upper Darby for two years, and since taking up his residence in Newtown Square has served for ten years on the board of education, and is still holding that office. While Mr. Kirk has given his interested attention to the duties incumbent upon these offices, he has never sought political prominence, being in fact a man of retiring disposition and greatly devoted to his domestic interests.

On November 8, 1849, Mr. Kirk was united in marriage to Miss Isabella B. Hannum, a daughter of Edwin and Maria (Miller) Hannum, the latter being a member of a family of ten children. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Kirk, four boys and two girls. Edwin H., died at the age of twenty-five years; Martha B., died at the age of twenty-three years; John, died in babyhood; John, the second, unmarried; Samuel married for his first wife, Abbie Garrett, and after her decease married Kate Bond, of Williston, Chester county, a daughter of Harmon Bond; they have three children, Harmon, Elizabeth and Nelson Kirk; Mary C., the sixth and last child of Mr. Kirk's family, resides with her parents. The family are regular and faithful members of the Friends Meeting House in Newtown Square, Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM ROBB. Prominent among the old and honored families of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is numbered that to which the subject of this review belongs. His father, Arthur Robb, made his home near Downingtown, this county, and with the interests of that community he was actively identified until his death, his remains being interred in the Grove church cemetery in this county. During his boyhood he attended the public schools near his home and after completing his education took up farming, an occupation which he continued to follow throughout life. Politically he was an ardent Republican, and socially was identified with the Masonic order.

In early life Arthur Robb married Miss Martha Chambers, whose girlhood was passed near Downingtown, and by this marriage were born the following children: James, who married Martha Morrison, and has five children; Henry, who married Sallie Hartman; John, who died single; and William, whose name introduces this sketch.

William Robb was born March 29, 1849, and passed the days of his boyhood and youth upon the home farm, early becoming familiar with all the duties which fall to the lot of the agriculturist. Since leaving school he has engaged in farming quite successfully, and is to-day the owner of a beautiful farm in West Bradford township, consisting of ninety-seven acres, which he has placed under a high state of cultivation and improved with good buildings.

In 1873 Mr. Robb was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Berstler, a daughter of Philip and Mary Berstler, the wedding ceremony being performed by the Rev. Dr. Kessler. Her father was a cabinet-maker by trade and a resident of Coatesville, this county. Unto our subject and his wife have been born three children, namely: Arthur, who married Martha Lefevre and has one child; and Charles and Anna, who are still with their parents.

By his ballot Mr. Robb supports the men and measures of the Republican party and is unswerving in his allegiance to its principles. In religious faith he is a Methodist, and holds membership in the Grove church. Straightforward in all his dealings and strictly honorable in all things, he has won the entire confidence of those with whom he has come in contact and has the respect and esteem of his friends and neighbors.

EMBREE. Samuel Embree appears to have settled on Long Island as early as 1671, according to the town records of Hempstead, which begin in 1654. On page 198 of the oldest volume preserved we find "A Lott of Meadow Recorded for Samuel Embree.

"Know all men by these Presents, That Timothy Halstead of Hempstead upon Long Island Husbandman, for a valuable consideration to him in hand already paid and received, and doth acknowledge therewith to bee satisfied & paid, And doth acquit and discharge Samuel Embree of the same place Husbandman, his Heirs and Assignes, of and from the same, Have given, granted, Bargained and sold, and by these presents, doth give, grant, bargain and sell, unto Samuel Embree, his Heires and Assignes, a certaine lot of Meadow Ground and premisses, containing about six Acres, be it more or less; Lying and being upon a Leek of Naud belonging to the Towne, commonly called and known by the name of Haybridge Neck; Bounded to the westward with Capt. John Seamons Meadow, and to the Eastward with the Meadow belonging to Abraham Smith. To have and to hold the said Lott of Meadow Ground and premises, unto the proper use and behoefe of the said Samuel Embree, his Heires and Assignes for ever.

"In witness whereof, the parties above mentioned, have caused this Entry to be Recorded, the 22d day of July, in Anno. 1671.

"RICHARD CHARLTON CLAR."

"At the . . . town Meeting held at Hempstead the 18 day of Eaperell in the yeare 1673 there was severall Parsels of Medow an Land let out to hire for the insuing yeare as follows To Samuall Emory the haybridge for oo: 14:6."

"June the 5: 1678. Samuall Emorys Ere mark is as followeth that is a crop on the Right Ere and two Necks under the seame Ere."

"At a townd meting Held in Hempstead the first day of Eaperell in the yere of our Lord 1679 Simon siring and samuel Emory was Chosen for Overseres."

On the 4th of March 1678-9 Richard Gildersleeve, Jr., executed a conveyance to Samuall Emory of Hempstead for a meadow lot at a "Neck commonly called Coess Neck," containing 18 acres. On the 15th of January 1780-1, George Balding of Hempsted placed on record, as a codicil to his will, that for "Severall good Reasons moaveing mee thereto I see Cause to Give unto my son Samuel Embrey of the same place one halfe of my Commonage I say I freely Give and make over to my above sd son in Law Samuall halfe my Right of Commuange from mee my Heires Executors administrators or assigned," &c. The term son-in-law in that day included step-sons, so that we are not certain as to the relationship.

"At a Jenerall townd Meting held in Hempsted the first day of November in the yere of our Lord 1676," there was a distribution made of town lots, and "To benjamen seamans and Solomon Semans and Thomas Semans an Jonathau semans and Moses Emory and Joseph Baldin was Given 3 akers of land a pese on the Est side of Mr. Semansis lott." In 1679 mention is made of land adjoining Moris Emry, probably meaning Moses Embree; and on May 24, 1682, Moses Emory appears in a list of those agreeing to support the minister, Jeremy Hubbard. Whether this Moses was a son or brother to Samuel, is unknown. The family do not appear to have been Friends in Long Island, yet they were in a Quaker community. The name is believed to indicate a French Huguenot origin, and was originally written Embree.

Moses Embree and Mary his wife next make their appearance at the Quaker settlement at Little Egg Harbor, New Jersey, a settlement largely made up of Long Island families. Whether this Moses was the son of Samuel or of another Moses has not been determined, but as he named his eldest son Samuel this would indicate the truth of the first alternative. He was a representative to the Quarterly Meeting in 1717, and his children's births are to be found in the Egg Harbor records. These were seven in number: Abigail, b. 12 mo., 18, 1711; Martha, b. 12 mo., 13, 1712; Sarah, b. 3 mo., 11, 1715; Samuel b. 8 mo., 15, 1717; Moses, b. 11 mo., 26, 1719 (?);

John, b. 11 mo., 12, 1721; Elizabeth, b. 6 mo., 12, 1724.

Moses Emmory and Mary, his wife, received a certificate 4 mo., 10, 1725, in order to remove into Pennsylvania, and the minutes of Abington Monthly Meeting, 5 mo., 26, 1725, state that "A certificate was produced by Moses Embree and wife from Little Egg Harbor, in order to settle within the verge of this Monthly Meeting." On 1 mo., 30, 1731, "Oxford Friends having made application for some relief for Moses Embree, this meeting orders each Particular Meeting to raise a collection for that purpose." 4 mo., 28, 1731: "Paid to Moses Embree for the relief of his family in the smallpox the sum of £4, 10s." On the 29th of 3d mo., 1732, Moses Embree and family received a certificate from Abington to Haverford, and on the 13th of 10 mo., 1739, one was granted for them to remove to Oley, or Exeter, in Berks county. Of their children, Abigail married Charles Townsend, of Philadelphia, in 1730; Martha married Thomas Thomas in 1736, and Sarah married John Hughes, of Merion, and a second husband, Owen Humphrey, 1738. Moses Embree, Jr., took a certificate from Abington direct to Exeter, in 1745, married Margaret Eleman in 1752, and removed to North Carolina the next year. John Embree was living near Wrightsborough, Ga., in 1778 and 1800.

Samuel Embree, son of Moses Embree, of Robeson township, Lancaster (now Berks) county, and Rachel Lewis, daughter of James Lewis, of Cumru township, in same county, were married 2 mo., 26, 1743, at Robeson Meeting. They settled in Cumru township and had three children: James, b. 4 mo., 10, 1744; d. 6 mo., 12, 1746; Moses b. 4 mo., 8, 1746; James, 2d, b. 6 mo., 3, 1748; d. 8 mo., 5, 1815. Of these Moses married Mary Richardson 7 mo., 7, 1773, and in 1786 removed to Virginia with children, Rachel, Moses and John. Samuel Embree died 2 mo., 24, 1777, and Rachel, his widow, 3 mo., 15, 1779.

James Embree was married 5 mo., 15, 1771, at Maiden Creek Meeting, Berks county, to Phebe Starr, born 8 mo., 8, 1750; died 2 mo., 15, 1778; daughter of Merrick and Phebe (Pearson) Starr, of Maiden Creek township, and granddaughter of Moses and Deborah (King) Starr. He was again married, 12 mo., 11, 1782, at Nantmeal Meeting, Chester county, to Rebecca Kirk, born 2 mo., 3, 1758; died 9 mo., 7, 1808; daughter of William and Sibbilla (Davies) Kirk, of East Nantmeal township. He purchased a farm in West Bradford, Chester county, about two miles westward of Marshallton, in 1791, and removed thereto on 4th mo., 1st, of that year. Here he followed farming and making malt. The family were members of Bradford Meeting.

of which James and his wife were both elders. It has been said of him that "he was a dignified, serious and earnest man, intelligent in business and in mechanical inventions; well informed and faithfully practical in the affairs of religious society. The weight of these and the responsibility of providing for fifteen children was a constant pressure upon him." By his first wife he had four children:

Samuel, b. 3 mo., 7, 1772; m. Hannah Richardson and went to Ohio.

Merrick, b. 9 mo., 7, 1774; d. 9 mo., 30, 1855; See forward.

James, b. 7 mo., 5, 1776; d. 4 mo., 4, 1861; m. Sarah Michener.

Phebe, b. 2 mo., 1, 1778; d. 10 mo., 10, 1814, unmarried.

By the second wife:

William, b. 9 mo., 16, 1783; d. 1 mo., 23, 1865; m. Sarah Jones.

Rachel, b. 8 mo., 15, 1785; d. 3 mo., 14, 1813, unmarried.

Davis, b. 6 mo., 9, 1787; m. Lydia Marsh and went to Ohio.

Hannah, b. 9 mo., 19, 1788; d. 1 mo., 15, 1867; unmarried.

Jesse, b. 1 mo., 2, 1790; d. 8 mo., 9, 1823; m. Mary Dickinson.

Daniel, b. 7 mo., 25, 1791; m. Sarah Dennis; died in Ohio.

Sibbilla, b. 4 mo., 1, 1793; d. 7 mo., 21, 1793.

Sibbilla, b. 4 mo., 12, 1794; d. 4 mo., 30, 1873, unmarried.

Rebecca, b. 1 mo., 31, 1796; d. 9 mo., 27, 1877, unmarried.

Elisha, b. 4 mo., 25, 1797; m. Lucy Jackson and went westward.

Anne, b. 5 mo., 22, 1799; d. 6 mo., 4, 1862; m. Eli K. Price.

Merrick Embree was married 5 mo., 7, 1801, at Little Britain Meeting, Lancaster county, to Lydia Brown, born 6 mo., 18, 1768; died 4 mo., 3, 1837; daughter of Joshua and Zillah (Walker) Brown, of Little Britain. He was a farmer and nurseryman on the southern part of the Embree homestead in West Bradford. It was said of the children of his father's first wife that they were constitutionally grave and correct. Merrick Embree was an elder of Bradford Meeting, and an obituary notice says of him, "This dear Friend was an example of upright walking and of patience and innocence. He acceptably filled the station of overseer for more than twenty years successively, wherein he was careful to watch over the flock, and to discharge his duty in the important trust." He had six children:

Zillah, b. 3 mo., 11, 1802; m. Joseph Ballance, 10 mo., 17, 1833.

Phebe, b. 6 mo., 28, 1803; m. Simeon Ballance, 5 mo., 24, 1832.

Deulah, b. 9 mo., 29, 1804; d. 5 mo., 5, 1880, unmarried.

Joshua, b. 8 mo., 14, 1806; d. 12 mo., 22, 1884; m. Sophia Glover.

James, b. 11 mo., 15, 1809; d. 2 mo., 16, 1875; see below.

Lewis, b. 12 mo., 18, 1810; d. 7 mo., 18, 1890; m. Lydia Ann Hawley.

James Embree, son of Merrick and Lydia, was born near Romasville and received his education in the neighborhood schools, after which he learned the trade of a wheelwright. He married Eliza Glover, born in New Jersey, daughter of William and Mary Glover. She died 7 mo., 7, 1880, in her 69th year. They resided in Marshallton, where, for several years, he manufactured scythesnaths and grain cradles extensively; and in connection with his business invented some valuable appliances. With the general introduction of mowing and reaping machines the demand for his wares declined and he purchased a farm adjoining the village, a few years before his death, and turned his attention to farming. He and his wife were strictly conscientious in their intercourse with others and earnestly endeavored to maintain the ancient testimonies of their religious society. They had six children: William G., b. 4 mo., 3, 1839; m. Emma Doan: Lydia, b. 8 mo., 23, 1841; Mary, b. 7 mo., 30, 1843; d. 2 mo., 3, 1875, unmarried; Sarah G., born 3 mo., 12, 1847; Phebe S., b. 7 mo., 7, 1851; Adaline Glover, twin with Phebe, d. 12 mo., 29, 1879, unmarried. William G. Embree is a farmer and dairyman in West Goshen, owning a milk route in West Chester. He has no children. He and his sisters were educated at the Friends' Boarding School, Westtown, where also he was a teacher for two years.

Lydia Embree and sisters possess the homestead with about 65 acres of land, where they live a quiet life and enjoy the respect and esteem of their neighbors.

THE KEENEN FAMILY. John Keenen, who is the father of the gentleman whose life forms the basis of this biography, is a native of East Nantmeal township, Chester county. After he had completed his preliminary training he decided to make the trade of millwright his means of obtaining a livelihood, but he later took a good position in a saw mill in Chester. He was a hard worker and was always loyal to his family and earnest in trying to rear them to be noble men and women. His remains repose in Mt. Hope cemetery. He was a worker in the ranks of the Republican party and served as school director. His wife was Susan Worriow, the daughter of Benjamin Worriow, of Village Green, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. James, the first child, married Annie Watkins, and they have three children; Mattie S. is the wife of John Farrady, and two children were born to them; Benjamin married Sallie Elliott, who bore him two children; Annie is deceased; Emma married John Remnick, and the one child born to them died; Winfield is deceased.

William J. is the last member of the family of the above parents. He was born in this county, was educated in the township schools, and then learned the trade of blacksmith. He has become a master of this hardy pursuit and has followed it for twenty-eight years. His shop is in Marshallton, and is well patronized by the citizens of the town and surrounding country, who have confidence in his skill. Mr. Keenen married Miss Ella Woodward, the daughter of Samuel Woodard, a farmer of Modena, Chester county. By this marriage they had the following children: Lester, who is an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad, being in the shops of that company at Altoona, Pennsylvania; Edwin, Nora, Winfield and Elizabeth are all living at home and are unmarried. Mr. Keenen has found the Republican party representative of his views in political matters, and is an Odd Fellow in good standing.

CALEB B. RING. The Ring family of Pennsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, of whom Caleb B. Ring was a worthy representative, trace their ancestry to Nathaniel Ring, who came to this country from England in company with his cousin, Thomas Jennings, before the time of William Penn. Nathaniel Ring was a cabinet-maker and lived by his trade in his native country, but on coming to America he bought large tracts of land from the estate of Peter Dix, lying on both sides of the Brandywine creek, and became a farmer living in Birmingham township. Later on he moved to London Grove township, where he lived and kept an inn. His wife, Elizabeth Vernon, died here, leaving two sons, Nathaniel and Benjamin. After her death he went to live near Atglen, Chester county, and a little later he bought a farm near West Chester, where he married a widow McNeil, who bore him two children,—a son and a daughter. Nathaniel Ring and his wife, Elizabeth Vernon, and his youngest son, are all buried in the Presbyterian churchyard at Octoraro, Chester county.

After the death of Nathaniel, his two sons, Benjamin and Nathaniel took possession of the lands in Birmingham (now Delaware county). Benjamin married a Miss James, and had a large family. Nathaniel was twice married. Of the first marriage there were two children, Nathaniel and Elizabeth; of the second marriage there were no children. Elizabeth married a Chandler and had one daughter, Elizabeth.

Nathaniel Ring of the last named family, settled on his father's land in Birmingham township, Delaware county. He married in June, 1767, Hannah, daughter of James and Mary Brinton, and they had a large family, among whom was Caleb B. Ring, Sr., whose line is traced in this article.

Caleb B. Ring, Sr., son of Nathaniel and Hannah (Brinton) Ring, was born February 7, 1782, in Birmingham township, and grew up there, becoming a representative citizen, largely concerned in the industrial affairs of the township. December 20, 1810, he married Lydia Brinton, daughter of Edward and Latitia (Dilworth) Brinton, and eleven children were born of the union, namely: 1. Phœbe Ann, who married Brinton Lewis; 2. Hannah B., who became the wife of Isaac Watkins; 3. Jane, who died in childhood; 4. Caleb B., Jr., whose name appears at the beginning of this article; 5. Sarah B.; 6. Nathaniel; 7. Edward B.; 8. Lydia Ann, who married Brinton King; 9. Brinton J., who married Phœbe Brinton and settled in Illinois; 10. Elias, who married Martha M. Bailey; 11. Mary Jane, who died in infancy.

Caleb B., Jr., fourth child and first son of Caleb and Lydia (Brinton) Ring, was born in Pennsbury township, on the Ring homestead, April 16, 1817. He received his education in the public schools of the neighborhood, with a supplementary course at Strodes's Academy in Chester county. He returned home on the death of his father and succeeded to the homestead. Farming was the one gainful occupation of his life, and in it he found scope for intelligent and discriminating effort. He was a most exemplary man in his private life, and he was recognized as just and conscientious in business relations.

He married Martha Ann Worrell, a descendant of Peter Dix, who has already been mentioned as an early landholder on the Brandywine. His land extended for a long distance on either side of the creek, and he opened and operated an iron forge above Chadds Ford. The ore was carried to the forge in sacks on the backs of Indians, and the melted metal was carried by water to another plant at Marcus Hook, on the Delaware river, to be finished and put upon the market. Peter Dix had a son Joseph who married Sarah Vernon, daughter of a member of the English House of Lords, and Ann, a daughter of this marriage, became the wife of Elisha Worrell, in 1776. Frederick, a son of Elisha and Ann (Dix) Worrell, born in 1777, married Sarah Hunter in 1811, and had the following family; Elisha, born in 1812; William and his twin sister, Martha Ann, wife of Caleb Ring, born in 1815; Joseph Lewis, born in 1818; J. Hunter, born in 1822, deceased; Elizabeth, born in 1826.

Coates to Bing

Maitha from Bing

The children of Caleb B. and Martha Ann (Worrell) Ring were the following: 1. William W., born in 1843, who married Esther W. Baker, daughter of Elias and Lydia Ann (Bailey) Baker, in 1875, and had four children, namely, Nathaniel Stanton, born in 1877, Elizabeth, born in 1880, Helen, born in 1883, and William Hunter, born in 1890; 2. Sarah Louisa, who died in infancy; 3. Lydia Emma; 4. Anna Mary; 5. Martha Annette, who married George Little; 6. Nathaniel, who died in infancy. Caleb B. Ring died July 23, 1896.

AUGUSTUS PENROSE SHENEMAN. Of the highly cultivated and productive farms in Chester county, Pennsylvania, located in the township of Uwchlan, is the property of Augustus P. Sheneman, a native of the township in which he now resides, his birth having occurred on a farm in the vicinity of Milford Mills, November 16, 1855, a son of William and Susanna (Hartzel) Sheneman.

William Sheneman (father) was a native of West Pikeland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in this vicinity he was reared and obtained a common school education. He was a farmer by occupation and conducted his operations both in his native township and also in Upper Uwchlan township, whither he removed about the year 1848 and resided there for the remainder of his life. He produced a general line of staple articles, and was one of the first agriculturists of the community to attend the Philadelphia markets. He was respected and esteemed in the neighborhood, served as school director for many years, and was also the incumbent of several other township offices. Mr. Sheneman and his wife, Susanna (Hartzel) Sheneman, daughter of Henry and Sarah Hartzel, the former named having been a farmer of West Uikeland township, were the parents of the following named children: John E., a farmer by occupation, married Mary Park, a daughter of John and Elizabeth Park, of West Caln, and through this union we find four living children—Augustus, Lucy, Park and John Sheneman; G. Frank, a farmer of Upper Uwchlan township, married Martha Glover, a teacher of Morristown, New Jersey, and their children are: Jesse, who is now a teacher, and Emma, now attending Millersville Normal School. This family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church; and Augustus Penrose Sheneman.

Augustus P. Sheneman acquired a thorough knowledge of the rudiments of education in the public schools of Uwchlan township, and subsequently graduated from the Edgefield Institute, or the Abram Fetters School, as it was often called. His tastes and inclinations led him to adopt the vocation of farming for his life work, and he has since devoted his entire attention to agricultural pursuits and the operation of a dairy of twelve head of well selected cows, disposing of the products of both branches of industry in the markets of Philadelphia. Mr. Sheneman is practical and progressive in his ideas, ready and willing to advance and aid all measures that conduce to the welfare of the community, and in every sense of the word a public-spirited and active citizen. For two years he served as assessor of Upper Uwchlan township, and is now school director in Uwchlan township, having held office for twelve consecutive years. Politically he is a Democrat, and fraternally a member of Mt. Pickering Lodge, No. 446, Free and Accepted Masons.

Mr. Sheneman married Rachel Cooper, daughter of John and Mary Ann (Coulter) Cooper. Their children are: Naomi M., who holds a certificate as teacher in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and is now engaged as a teacher in the White School, Uwchlan township; M. Erma, a graduate of the West Chester Normal School, where she has been preparing for the position of teacher; Charles H.; and Anna I., a graduate of the public schools of Uwchlan township. John Cooper, father of Mrs. Sheneman, was a shoemaker by trade and followed that pursuit for many years in connection with farming in the township of Birmingham, near West Chester, Pennsylvania. He served for several years in the capacity of supervisor and constable of the township. His wife, Mary Ann (Coulter) Cooper, was born in East Whiteland township, and they are both representatives of old and prominent families of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Sheneman and his family are active and consistent members of St. Paul's German Reformed church.

FRANCIS JAMES MOORE, an experienced farmer and worthy citizen of Uwchlan township, Chester county, is descended from a family which has for more than a century and a quarter been honorably represented in the county. His grandfather, Charles Moore, was pastor of a Baptist church in Vincent, and married Margaret Carroll, whose ancestors, like his own, were among the early settlers.

Robert Moore, son of Charles and Margaret (Carroll) Moore, was born November 29, 1797, at Chadds Ford, and in his youth was engaged in business as an undertaker, but abandoned that calling in order to devote himself to agriculture. During the remainder of his life he was a successful farmer. He married Rachel Smedley, a member of the ancient family which was founded in this country by George Smedley, who emigrated to Pennsylvania about the time of the arrival of William Penn. Rachel Smedley, who was born February 4, 1797, was married to Robert Moore, in 1821, and the following children were born to them: George, Charles Carroll, Thomas M., William, who died in childhood, Lewis, who died young, Gideon S., Francis James, mentioned at length hereinafter, Leonard K. and Joseph. The reputation of the family as notable farmers was well sustained by these sons, who all passed their lives as husbandmen in their native county of Chester. Their religious belief was that of their mother's family who were all, from the time of the founder, members of the Society of Friends, and always figured prominently in the proceedings of the denomination.

Francis James Moore, son of Robert and Rachel (Smedley) Moore, was born November 23, 1834, in Uwehlan township, where he received his primary education in the public schools, afterward attending the school of which Jonathan Gause was principal, and later it was under the principalship of Dr. Frank Taylor. After six years spent in assisting in the labors of the home farm he entered upon the independent practice of his ancestral calling, in which he has ever since been engaged, the successful results of his labors testifying to the energy and ability with which he has prosecuted them. While preferring not to take an active part in public affairs, he has never been unmindful of the obligations of a conscientious citizen.

Mr. Moore married Sarah Walker Pennypacker, who was born November 8, 1836, in West Pikeland, and they were the parents of two children: 1. Warren, who was born October 17, 1869, is a farmer, and married February 21, 1895, Phœbe Rourke, who was born October 9, 1868. They are parents of two children: Edith Pennypacker and Dorothy Mercer. 2. Mary, who became the wife of Cecil McMichael, and was the mother of one child, who is now deceased, as is also Mrs. McMichael. Mrs. Moore, the mother of these children, died October 17, 1884, that day being the fifteenth anniversary of her son Warren's birthday.

JAMES GIVEN BUFFINGTON, for many years a well-known and highly respected citizen of Uwehlan township, Chester county, was a representative of one of the oldest families, not only of that county, but also of Pennsylvania, the race having been transplanted to the New World several years previous to the arrival of William Penn. The emigrant ancestor was Richard Buffington, who was born about 1654, in Great Marle upon Thames, Buckinghamshire, and in early manhood sought a home in the American colonies. It is recorded that, in 1679, Richard Buffington and John Grubb purchased a tract of land west of Chester creek, and above Chester, and that they named this land, which they thus possessed in common, "Hopewell of Kent." Subsequently Richard Buffington became the owner of land in other parts of the county. He was thrice married; his first wife being Ann, last name unknown, his second, Frances Grubb, widow of John, presumably mentioned above, and his third, Alice Palmer, who survived him. His eldest son was the first born of English descent in the Province of Pennsylvania, where the founder of the Buffington family appears to have been a man of prominence. "The Pennsylvania Gazette," in one of its issues for 1739, publishes an account of a reunion of the descendants of Richard Buffington, the total number of his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren (all of whom were present), amounting to one hundred and fifteen. This family gathering was held at the homestead in Chester county, May 30, 1739, the venerable head of the house, then about eighty-five years of age, being described as active, hearty, and of perfect memory." Richard Buffington survived this memorable occasion a number of years, passing away in January or February, 1748, when he had attained his ninety-fourth year. He left a legacy of £20 to the Baptist Society which met at John Bentley's, in Newlin township. The history of the Buffingtons is closely connected with that of many other old families of Chester county, with whom they have from time to time intermarried.

James Given Buffington, one of the numerous descendants of the pioneer ancestor, was born September 10, 1805, and received his education in private schools. He was a farmer, devoting himself to the duties of his calling with skill and assiduity, but was also possessed of commercial tastes and abilities. These traits in his character found exercise in the extensive transactions in timber-dealing which he energetically conducted in connection with his agricultural pursuits. His life, though perhaps uneventful in the ordinary sense of the word, appears to have been one of activity and usefulness, and if we may judge from the fact that he was elected to the offices of supervisor and constable, that of a man faithful to the duties of citizenship, and possessing the confidence of his townsmen. In politics he was a Republican, supporting to the best of his ability the men and measures advocated by that party. His church connections were with the Baptist denomination, in whose doctrines he was a firm believer.

Mr. Buffington married Mary Lightfoot, and after her death, Theresa Anna Long. He was without children by both marriages. The death of Mr. Buffington, which took place August 17, 1889, removed from the community in which he had long been a familiar figure, an upright and conscientious citizen, and a man admirable in all the relations of social and domestic life.

Mrs. Theresa Anna Buffington, who survives her husband, is a granddaughter of Jacob Long, who was a native of Wallace township, and a life-long farmer. He married Mary Miller, and the following children were born to them: 1. Elizabeth, who married Adam Fisher, a farmer. 2. Mary, who became the wife of William Fleming, and had six children, who all died young. After the death of her husband she became the wife of Mathew Ramsey, a mason. 3. Hannah, who married Robert Paterson, a farmer. 4. Jacob, who was a farmer and weaver, married Mrs. Sarah Walker Gray, and had six children—Elizabeth, Mary, William, Hannah, Sarah, and Margaret—all of whom are deceased. 5. Levi, who was a weaver, married Elizabeth Barrett, and was the father of three children, all of whom are deceased. 6. William, who was a farmer and blacksmith. 7. Isaac, mentioned at length hereinafter. 8. Joseph, who was a blacksmith. 9. Sarah, who became the wife of Hugh Blakeby, a farmer.

Isaac Long, son of Jacob and Mary (Miller) Long, was born February 16, 1808, in Uwchlan township, and followed the trade of a blacksmith. He married Sarah, daughter of Daniel Clower, who was the son of a Revolutionary soldier, and himself served in the war of 1812. Daniel Clower was a farmer in Chester county, and also a competent builder, having erected a nail factory which was the first structure of consequence ever reared in Phoenixville. In one of the houses which he built he placed a secret vault, designed for the concealment of money during the war of 1812. He died in 1872, at the advanced age of ninety years. Mr. and Mrs. Long were the parents of two daughters, one of whom, Mary Elizabeth, married Richard Manley, and was the mother of four children—Ellen, Maggie, Caroline, and Theresa—all of whom are living. Maggie is the wife of Frederick Blake, and has three children. The other daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Long is Theresa Anna, who was born February 17, 1835, in East Brandywine, received her education in the public schools, and became the wife of James Given Buffington, as mentioned above.

JAMES BUTLER, a veteran farmer and honored citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, is descended from one of the oldest families in the county. Noble Butler, the progenitor of the race in America, came from Bristol, England, and received from William Penn a grant of one thousand acres of land which remained for generations in the possession of his descendants. This emigrant ancestor was the father of the following children: John, who married Elizabeth Samuel, of Reading, Pennsylvania; Enoch, who married Deborah Swayne; Bathsheba, who became the wife of John McOwen, and removed to the Shenandoah Valley; William, mentioned at length hereinafter; Benjamin, who settled on the farm now owned by the present representative of the family; and Noble, who married a daughter of William Beale, and moved to Kentucky.

William Butler, son of Noble, the founder of the family, was born 4 mo., 12, 1738, and followed the occupation of a farmer. Being a man of retiring habits, he preferred to keep aloof from public affairs and therefore never held any office. He married 4 mo., 20, 1762, Jane, born 8 mo., 30, 1738, daughter of James and Ann P. Woodward, of West Bradford. Their children were: Samuel, James, mentioned at length hereinafter; Amos, Ann, Rachel, Sarah, and William. William Butler, the father of the family, died 7 mo., 1, 1814.

James Butler, son of William and Jane (Woodward) Butler, was born 7 mo., 5, 1767, and married, 11 mo., 19, 1812, Mary, daughter of Jonathan and Mary Phipps. The Phipps family is quite as ancient as that of the Butlers, the founder, William, having received from William Penn a grant of land which was conferred about the same time as that bestowed on Noble Butler. Mr. and Mrs. Butler were the parents of the following children: Jane, William, Jonathan, Joseph, and James, mentioned at length hereinafter. The death of Mr. Butler occurred June 27, 1837, when he had reached the age of threescore and ten.

James Butler, son of James and Mary (Phipps) Butler, was born 12 mo., 10, 1827, on the homestead, and received his education at the Orthodox Friends' School in Westtown. He spent some years, during the earlier portion of his life, in the West, engaged in real estate transactions, and, while there, became quite famous for his achievements as an equestrian traveller. He made the journey on horseback from St. Paul, Minnesota, to his present home, when he entered into the iron business, which he successfully conducted for a term of five years at Isabella Furnace. During this time he was also engaged in buying and selling farms in Pennsylvania, in which business he was also successful. After selling his iron business he was married, and moved upon a farm in Nantmeal township, where he resided, superintending his property and buying and selling farms for about twenty-five years. He then sold his home farm and bought the old Benjamin Butler farm, on which he resided, superintending his property of one hundred and seventy-three acres, and he has three hundred and sixty-one acres in another farm in West Nantmeal township, and one in East Nantmeal, of one hundred and thirty-six acres, and another in West Nantmeal of one hundred and thirty-six acres, and sixty acres of woodland. All of these farm lands are farmed under his supervision, he owning one-half of the live stock, consisting of thirty-three cows on the home place, and an average of sixteen on each of the other farms. The products are marketed in Philadelphia and other places. In addition to the dairy business, he manages on these farms the raising and marketing of general farm products. He also owns valuable residence property in Philadelphia. His politics are those of an Independent Republican, but it has always been his choice to take no active part in public affairs. The earlier generations of the Butlers were members of the Society of Friends, but the present church connections of the family are with the Presbyterian denomination. The children lean toward the Unitarian belief.

Mr. Butler married Rachel James, daughter of Jesse and Margaret (Allen) James, of West Nantmeal, and their children are: Margaret F., professor of physiology and otology in the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia, now in Europe completing her studies; Charles Noble, attorney-at-law, practicing in Philadelphia, and very active in politics as an ardent Republican; Mary, single, in Philadelphia, an artist; Jessie, who is the wife of Dr. E. T. Pugh, a surgeon at Lancaster city, Pennsylvania, and has one child, Rachel, born December 2, 1899; Elizabeth Roberts, who is a writer of magazine articles; Ralph, who is a graduate of the Universities of Pennsylvania and Vienna, and is now practicing in Philadelphia as a specialist in diseases of the nose and throat; James Edgar, who is an attorney-at-law and also corporation counsel in Philadelphia. It will be that all the children of Mr. and Mrs. Butler, with one exception, are residents of Philadelphia. In addition to the grandchild already mentioned, they have two others, who are the children of their son, Charles Noble, and are named as follows: Marian, born June 1, 1898; and James Noble, born December 27, 1899.

J. DAVIS ASHBRIDGE, a well known and highly respected citizen of West Goshen, Chester county, belongs to a family which is of English-Welsh extraction, and is among the oldest in Pennsylvania, having been founded in this country in 1698, by George Ashbridge, who in that year purchased a grant of land from William Penn. He came from England and settled in Philadelphia, later removing to Edgemont, then Chester, now Delaware county. He married, August 23, 1701, at Providence Meeting, Mary Malin, and the following children were born to them: John, George, Jonathan, Mary, Elizabeth, Aaron, Hannah, Phoebe, Lydia and Joseph. Mrs. Ashbridge died February 15, 1728, and Mr. Ashbridge married, January 5, 1730, Mrs. Margaret Paschall. His death occurred at Chester in 1748.

George Ashbridge, second son of George and Mary (Malin) Ashbridge, was born December 19, 1704, and in 1732 came to Goshen township, Chester county, and took possession of the farm purchased for him by his father. In 1743 he was elected to the Assembly, and continued to be elected annually during the remainder of his life. In 1730 he married Jane Hoopes, and their children were: Mary, George, William, Susanna, Phoebe, Jane, Daniel, Joshua, and Lydia. Mr. Ashbridge died March 6, 1773.

Joshua Ashbridge, eighth child and fourth son of George and Jane (Hoopes) Ashbridge, was born on the homestead, September 17, 1746. He was one of the viewers who selected the site for the present almshouse of Chester county. He married, November 4, 1773, Jane Davis, and five children were born to them: Daniel, Joseph, Thomas, Lydia, and Hannah. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ashbridge were members of the Society of Friends. His death occurred September 4, 1820, at the age of seventy-four.

Joseph Ashbridge, second son of Joshua and Jane (Davis) Ashbridge, was born September 5, 1777, on the homestead, and was educated in the common schools of the neighborhood. He followed the occupation of a farmer, and for more than sixty years disposed of his produce in the market at Philadelphia, taking the goods there with a wagon and a team of horses. He was a prominent member of the community, and was chosen to serve in various town offices, which he filled both creditably and acceptably. He was a member of the Society of Friends. He married Mary, daughter of Edward Baker, of Edgemont, and their children were: Jane, Susan, William, Mary Ann, Edward Baker, J. Davis, mentioned at length hereinafter; Henry C., and Anna. Of this family Edward B. and J. Davis are the only survivors. Mr. Ashbridge died May 10, 1847.

J. Davis Ashbridge, sixth child and third son of Joseph and Mary (Baker) Ashbridge, was born July 16, 1830, in East Goshen township, Chester county, was reared on the paternal farm, and educated at the schools kept by Joseph Streud and Jonathan Gause. At the age of sixteen he went to Goshenville to learn the wheelwright's trade, serving an apprenticeship until he attained his majority. For one year he worked as a carpenter in Delaware county, and then returned to his own trade. In February, 1861, he purchased the place in West Goshen called "The Bird in the Hand," consisting of a wheelwright's shop and thirty-three acres of land. Here he has since conducted his business in connection with farming. He takes an active interest in local affairs, and his neighbors have given repeated proofs of the respect with which they regard him and the confidence with which his sterling worth of character has inspired them. He has served as supervisor, school director and tax collector, and belongs to the county Republican committee. He is a member of the Improved Order of Red Men.

Mr. Ashbridge married, January 23, 1867, Sarah A. Aitken, born in Edgemont, Delaware county, a daughter of Dr. James and Mary (Baker) Aitken. They have four children: Mary Ella, born May 20, 1868, who married Harry Smith, of Milltown, Chester county; Alice C., born January 11, 1870, who is the wife of Harvey Smedley, of West Chester; Lucy H., born April 11, 1874, who is engaged in teaching; and J. Benton, born March 31, 1878.

JOHN PHILIP FISHER, a veteran farmer and highly respected citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a son of Adam Fisher, who married Mrs. Roberts, by whom he had two children. After the death of his wife Mr. Fisher married Hannah, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Long, who were also the parents of a son, William, who is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. John F. Fisher were the parents of the following children: James, who was a farmer; Mary, who married Amos McFarland; Vernon, who was a farmer; Levi, who was likewise a farmer, and is now deceased; John and Benjamin, who were killed by the falling of a bank; Malinda, who became the wife of John Hoffman, who resides in West Chester; Benjamin, who is now deceased; Lida, who married George Hartzel, a farmer; Naomi, who became the wife of Leonard Moore, a farmer; George V. Hoffman, who was a farmer, married Susan Price, and is now deceased; and Jefferson, who died in infancy.

John Philip Fisher, son of Adam and Elizabeth (Long) Fisher, was born May 16, 1822, and received his early education in the public school. After completing his education he worked on the homestead as the assistant of his father until the death of the latter, when he became the owner of the estate, which has been in the possession of the family for several generations. While devoted to his duties as an agriculturist, Mr. Fisher participates actively in the affairs of the township, and during that portion of his life which was spent in the political arena was frequently placed by the votes of his townsmen in positions of trust. For seven years he held the office of school director, and for three years that of supervisor.

Previous to the Civil war Mr. Fisher was a member of the Republican party, but since that epoch in our national history has been identified with the Democrats. He attends the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Fisher married Eliza, daughter of George Hoffman. Mrs. Fisher was born August 12, 1831, and was educated in the public schools. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fisher: Benjamin John, who was born July 24, 1854, is a farmer, married Mary E. Rorke, and has three children, all of whom are living; Frank, who was born December 2, 1856, is a farmer, and married Mary E. Gilbert; George Hoffman, who was born October 23, 1858, is a carpenter and contractor in Downingtown, married Elizabeth Baldwin, and is the father of two children, both of whom are living; John Brownback; Vernon Lewis, who was born December 23, 1863, was a farmer, married Maria E. Taylor, and is now deceased; Mary Valiria, who was born August 2, 1867, and is the wife of John H. Brownback, a contractor on the railroad; and Everett P., who was born March 5, 1874, is clerk in a bank at Downingtown, and resides at home. Mrs. Fisher, the mother of this family, died December 12, 1890. Everett P. Fisher married Miss May Plank, and they have one child.

DAVIS GRIFFITH, a substantial farmer and respected citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a grandson of Stephen Griffith, who came to the United States from Wales, and settled in Pennsylvania, making his home in Chester county, where his descendants still reside.

Stephen Griffith, son of Stephen, the emigrant ancestor, was born April 1, 1815, near Chestnut Hill, Chester county. He learned the trade of a stone mason, which he followed for some years, but later became a farmer, and at the same time the proprietor of a store. During twenty-three years of the later portion of his life, he was equally successful both as a farmer and merchant, and also took an active part in the affairs of the township, holding at different times all the offices. Among the more important of these were those of supervisor, constable, and school director. The position of supervisor he held for many years. Throughout life he was a Democrat in politics. He married Anna, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. Rhodes, of Lancaster county, and they were the parents of ten children: Sarah R., born August 1, 1836; Rebecca L., born October 23, 1837; Eliza E., born October 21, 1839; Lewis, born August 12, 1841; Davis, mentioned at length hereinafter; Oliver, born May 11, 1845; George W., born September 11, 1847; Sophia C., born August 30, 1850; Emma L., born June 3, 1853; and Morris Fussell, born April 1, 1855. Mr. Griffith, the father of these ten children, left to them at his death the inestimable possession of an honorable name.

Davis Griffith, son of Stephen and Anna (Rhodes) Griffith, was born April 3, 1843, in West Vincent township, and received his early education in Upper Uwchlan township, afterward attending the Pughtown Seminary, and Clark & Nelson's Business College in Reading, Pennsylvania. After completing his education he turned his attention to agriculture, which he has made the business of his life, and in which he has met with well-merited success. His farm, which consists of 200 acres, is managed according to the most improved methods, and he has connected with it a flourishing dairy of twenty-five head of cattle. Although taking an intelligent interest in the affairs of the community in which he resides, he has preferred not to participate actively in public matters, and therefore has never accepted any office. His political principles are those of the Democratic party. His church connections are with the Lutheran denomination.

Mr. Griffith married Melvina Wiand, daughter of Samuel and Margaret (Price) Wiand, the former a well-known farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Griffith have no children.

VERNON POWELL, an enterprising and popular citizen of Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a grandson of Isaac Powell, who was a farmer, and married Elizabeth Arters. Their children were: Lewis, who is a member of the police force in Philadelphia, and married Sophia Lamborn; William B., who also resides in Philadelphia, where he is employed as a watchman; T. Griffith, mentioned at length hereinafter; Mary Jane, who married William Ray, a carpenter; Hannah, who became the wife of Robert Harris, a millwright.

T. Griffith Powell, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Arters) Powell, was born September 25, 1841, in Brandywine, received his education in the public schools, and at an early age, engaged in farming, an occupation which he has steadily followed ever since. He has also taken a keen interest in local affairs; and, for four years, was placed by the votes of his townsmen in the office of supervisor. He married first, Mary Jane Brown, a daughter of John Brown, who had but two children—Samuel, who is a gas fitter in Downingtown, and Mary Jane, mother of our subject.

Mary Jane, mentioned above as having become the wife of T. Griffith Powell, was born August 20, 1842, in Brandywine. Mr. and Mrs. Powell were the parents of the following children: Lizzie B., who was born November 19, 1868, and married C. D. Smedley, a farmer; Ada, who was born August 26, 1870, and became the wife of William Eber Frame, a farmer who has filled the office of supervisor; Harvard, who was born March 7, 1872, is a farmer, and married Lydia Maxton; Frank, who was born December 26, 1873; and is a United States engineer in Philadelphia; Vernon, mentioned at length hereinafter; Lucy, who was born December 14, 1877, and is the wife of Robert McClintock, a farmer; Emily, who was born February 20, 1880, and married Samuel Copeland; Isaac, who was born February 26, 1882, and is a machinist in Philadelphia; and John, who was born September 20, 1884, and died in the nineteenth year of his age.

Vernon Powell, son of T. Griffith and Mary Jane (Brown) Powell, was born January 29, 1876, in Brandywine township, where he was educated in the public schools. After finishing his course of study he was employed for a time on the Pinkerton farm, and subsequently spent one year in Philadelphia. At the end of that time he returned to his home in Uwchlan township, where he has since remained, choosing to make his permanent dwelling place amid the familiar scenes of his boyhood. One of his marked characteristics is the earnestness and zeal with which he has lent his aid to whatever project seemed likely to advance, in any way, the prosperity and well being of the community, and so highly do his townsmen appreciate this trait in his character that he has been elected by them to the office of supervisor. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party, and his church connections are with the Methodist denomination. He is a member of Lodge No. 298, Patriotic Sons of America. Mr. Powell's career, thus far, is regarded by all who know him as giving promise of greater distinction in the future, and it is thought by many that he possesses the elements of a successful political leader.

HORACE ACKER FETTERS. The family of which Horace A. Feters, a prominent resident of Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative, is of German descent, and was founded in Pennsylvania during its early Colonial days. Their history is closely interwoven with that of the state, and their useful and industrious lives have furnished an example well worthy of emulation.

George Feters, great-grandfather of Horace A. Feters, was born in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, about 1760, and being deprived by death of both parents when quite young, he resided with relatives in Germantown and was reared to manhood in that locality. At the conmencement of the Revolutionary war, he enlisted in the Continental army and served in the capacity of a private, discharging his duties with credit and distinction. After the term of his enlistment expired, he purchased a farm in Pikeland township, Chester county, and the remainder of his life was devoted to agricultural pursuits. In 1784 he married Margaret Smith, daughter of John and Sarah Smith, and they were the parents of the following named children, in addition to four who died in early life: Mary, Margaret, Susan, Sarah, John, Abraham, Samuel and George Fetters. The father of these children died December 25, 1836, survived by his widow, who passed away in February, 1847. Their remains were interred in the cemetery of the Pikeland Reformed church.

Samuel Fetters, grandfather of Horace A. Fetters, was a native of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred there about the year 1798. Being reared upon a farm and therefore inured to the manifold and arduous duties and responsibilities of that line of industry, he chose that vocation for his active career upon attaining the age when it was necessary to make a selection. He purchased a farm in Uwchlan township, Chester county, whereon he conducted extensive operations up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1857. Mr. Fetters married Mary Acker, daughter of John and Catherine Acker, and six children were the issue of this union—John, Abraham, Isaac, Mary, Elizabeth and Samuel Fetters.

Abraham Fetters, father of Horace A. Fetters, was born September 17, 1828, in Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. In 1832, when only four years of age, he took up his residence in the home of his maternal grandfather, John Acker, in East Whiteland township, and there remained until he attained the age of sixteen years, when he returned to the home of his father in Uwchlan township. He attended the Valley creek common school in East Whiteland, and later was a pupil at Prospect Hill Academy, in East Bradford township, which was under the personal superintendence of Professor Benjamin Price. He was industrious and studious, possessed of a keen and receptive mind, and early in life evinced a special fondness and aptitude for mathematical and historical studies. In 1846 he gained his first great business experience as a teacher at Hopewell school in Charlestown township, this being a position he was well qualified to fill, as he had the ability to teach in such a manner as to make study easy and pleasant, and also to maintain the utmost discipline among his pupils. He also taught three terms at Hopewell school, Charlestown township, nine terms at the White school, in Uwchlan township, three terms at Franklin Hall, in West Pikeland, and three terms at school No. 1, in Birmingham. For two years he assumed the management of the primary department of West Chester Academy, when it was under the principalship of Professor Wyers, and during this period and also during the entire forty years of his services as a teacher, he exerted a powerful and beneficent influence over the pupils that were placed in his charge.

In 1868 Mr. Fetters established a school at his residence in Upper Uwchlan township, which became widely known as "Edgefield Institute," and this enterprise he successfully conducted until 1886. He taught for forty terms, and during this long period not less than eighteen hundred pupils have come under his care, many of whom now occupy honorable and influential positions in life and admit that their success is due to the training and inspiration received from Mr. Fetters. He was instrumental in introducing the public school library into Chester county, and it is presumed that he was the first one to use vocal music as a school exercise. In the spring of 1866 Mr. Fetters purchased a farm in the vicinity of the Uwchlan postoffice, whereon he conducted agricultural pursuits in addition to his educational work. He left an estate of about five hundred and fifty acres of choice land in Chester county, on which is located a handsome and commodious residence in which he lived. He was a member of St. Matthews Reformed Church, in which he had served as trustee for over thirty years. He was also a director of Ursineus College, and one of the trustees of the Philadelphia classes of the Reformed Church of the United States. He was the author of a number of valuable papers on various subjects of interest, the principal one being a "History of the Reformed Churches of Chester County." Mr. Fetters also served as a director of the National Bank of Phoenixville, and the Dime Savings Bank of West Chester. Politically he was a Democrat, served as a jury commissioner for three years, and was frequently solicited to become a candidate for county commissioner and other offices, but always declined the honor. He was a member and also served as master of Upper Uwchlan Grange, No. 53, Patrons of Husbandry. In 1862 Mr. Fetters was appointed captain of Company G, Twelfth Pennsylvania Militia, and the following year was appointed first sergeant of Company A, Forty-third Regiment.

On December 25, 1866, Mr. Fetters married Rebecca K. Brownback, daughter of John and Hannah Brownback, of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county. Two children were the issue of this union—John B., died in 1885, aged eighteen years, and Horace Acker, mentioned hereinafter.

Horace A. Fetters was born in 1871, acquired an excellent education at Ursineus College, and was graduated from this institution in June, 1892. In the following year his father died, and he immediately assumed the management of the estate. He farms the home place which consists of about one hundred acres, superintends the balance of the farm which is divided up into about four equal parts, and in addition to general farming operations he conducts an extensive dairy, the products of which are marketed in Philadelphia and the Fairmount creamery, which is located convenient to his farms. He is also the proprietor of what is known as the Downingtown Farmer's Bazaar, handling on quite a large scale farming implements, all kinds of horse vehicles and furnishings and fertilizers, seeds, and in fact practically everything required to equip a farm. He is a director in the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank of Phoenixville. He is an active and staunch Republican in politics, and has held the majority of township offices. Fraternally he is affiliated with Mt. Pickering Lodge, No. 446, of which he is now Past Master.

On April 26, 1899, Mr. Fetters married Ida Entriken, of West Chester, Pennsylvania, whose father was a native of the same place, and her mother, Susan (Wetherill) Entriken, was a native of Chester county. One child was the issue of this union, Edith Rebecca Fetters, born December 28, 1901. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fetters hold membership in St. Matthew's Reformed church, and Mr. Fetters is also a member of the board of trustees.

JESSE PUSEY JEFFERIS, a well known farmer of Chester county, was born January 4, 1855, in Kennett Square, Chester county, and is a son of Pusey and Hannah H. (Harvey) Jefferis. On the paternal side he belongs to one of the oldest families in Chester county, the first ancestor whose name is preserved in the annals of the county being Robert Jefferis, of whom mention is made in the court records of Chester for 1685. The earlier generations of the family were members of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Jefferis was brought up on the paternal farm, and at an early age he and his brother decided to devote themselves independently to agricultural pursuits. After remaining for some time in Chester county, Mr. Jefferis removed to Concord, in the neighboring county of Delaware, where he lived for fourteen years. In 1892 he purchased the old Haines farm, situated about a mile and a half from West Chester, on the Philadelphia road. This farm contains thirty-four acres, which are kept in a state of thorough cultivation and devoted to the purpose of general farming. Politically Mr. Jefferis is a Republican. He and his family attend the Baptist church.

Mr. Jefferis married, January 22, 1879, Annie

M., born January 22, 1857, daughter of Davis and Miriam (Swayn) Richards, of Concord township, Delaware county. Three children have been born to them: Laura M., born February 26, 1880, who is the wife of Howard Suplee, of Chester county, and has one daughter, Miriam E., born May 17, 1903; Jonathan H., born November 6, 1881, who is a clerk in West Chester; and Jesse, born January 9, 1889. The family name is variously spelled in the different branches but the orthography used by those of the race resident in Chester county is Jefferis.

STEPHEN STYER, a prosperous farmer and worthy citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a grandson of Stephen Styer, who was a life-long resident of Montgomery county, where his son Rufus was born July 17, 1826. He was a farmer and school teacher all his life, first in his native place, and afterward in Chester county, whither he removed in 1856, settling near Phoenixville. After remaining there about twenty-six years, Mr. Styer took up his abode on the farm now owned by his son Stephen, where he passed the remainder of his days. He was a man of some prominence in the community, and for many years held the office of school director. He married Anna Louisa, born January 23, 1827, daughter of William Zimmerman, a native of Fairview village, Montgomery county. Mr. Zimmerman was a director in the Montgomery County National Bank of Norristown, and for many years held the offices of justice of the peace and tax collector. His father Christopher Zimmerman, also a native of Fairview village, died at his birthplace the night on which his granddaughter, Anna Louisa, was born. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Styer: Stephen, mentioned at length hereinafter; Henry, who was born March 27, 1856, and is a farmer in East Vincent township; William, who was born August 28, 1859, and is engaged in farming in the same township; Rufus, who was born December 20, 1861, is the third in this trio of East Vincent farmers; and John Howard, who was born December 19, 1864, completed the family. This last-named son is a mail carrier in Phoenixville, having held the position ever since the establishment of the free delivery system in that place. Mr. Styer, the father of the family, died in 1890, leaving behind him the memory of an upright citizen and an estimable man.

Stephen Styer, son of Rufus and Anna Louisa (Zimmerman) Styer, was born February 8, 1853, in Lower Providence township, Montgomery county, and received his education in the public schools of East Vincent, and at the private school in Phoenixville, presided over by Mr. H. Pace Davidson. On completing his education he is - mediately applied himself to farming, to which he has ever since devoted himself with a zeal and energy which have reaped, in the course of time, their due reward. His farm, which consists of one hundred and twenty-eight acres, has attached to it a dairy of fifteen head of cattle, and the milk is advantageously disposed of at the Fairmount creamery. In politics Mr. Styer affiliates with the Prohibition party. He and his family attend the Baptist church.

Jesse P. Jefferis

Mr. Styer married Ida M., daughter of William and Mary Guthrie, the former a farmer of Wallace township. Mr. and Mrs. Styer are the parents of the following children: William Ernest, who was born in 1883, and is engaged in farming; Oscar Harry, who was born October 7, 1884, and resides on the homestead; May Blanche, who was born May 3, 1886, and is engaged in business as a dressmaker in Spring City; Rufus Rosco, who was born January 20, 1888, and is at home on the farm; Jonathan Penrose, who was born February 13, 1890; Tacy Bertha, who was born March 2, 1892; Ida Lorena, who was born January 6, 1894; Elma Guthrie, who was born September 29, 1896; Stephen Parke, who was born November 2, 1897; and Ella Bell, who was born May 10, 1899.

HENRY HOWARD HOOPES, a leading farmer and well-known citizen of Chester county, is descended through both his parents from some of the oldest families of the county. He traces his descent from Joshua Hoopes, who, with his wife, Isabel, and their three children, came from Cleveland, Yorkshire, England, and settled in Bucks county in 1683. About 1696 their son, Daniel, removed to Westtown township, Chester county. He married Jane, daughter of Thomas and Jane Worriow, of Edgemont, and was the father of a large family from whom have sprung the many branches of this numerous race. Edwin A. Hoopes was born in Westtown, March 1, 1824, son of Ezra and Rebecca (Atherton) Hoopes, of West Chester and Westtown. He married, in Philadelphia, December 14, 1848, Anna Baker, who was descended from an old Pennsylvania family.

The Bakers of Edgemont trace their descent from John Baker, Sr., of Shropshire, England, who died there, at a place called Edgmont, February 25, 1672, as recorded by the Friends' Meeting of that place. It is supposed that his children emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1684. One of his sons, Joseph, who married Mary, in England, settled in Edgemont township, where he became a large landholder, and probably suggested the name for that township. He was a man of prominence in the community, filling various offices. Joseph Baker, Jr., who is believed to have been his nephew, married Martha, daughter of Richard and Jane Woodward, of Middletown, and Richard, the eldest son of their numerous family, married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander and Hannah Hunter, of Middletown. Their son, Aaron, married Mary ———, and they were the parents, among other children, of Edward, who married Jane, daughter of Abel and Jane (Williamson) Green, both of whom were the descendants of old settlers, the latter, whose first husband was Robert Regester, being the daughter of Jane Williamson and the granddaughter of Sarah Smedley, whose father, George Smedley, of Derbyshire, England, was the founder of that family in America. One of the sons of Edward and Jane (Green) Baker, was Anthony, who married Hannah Williamson, and they were the parents of the following children: 1. An infant, buried at Middletown. 2. Sarah W., living in Media, Pennsylvania, unmarried. 3. Lydia B., who married Homer Eachus, Jr. 4. Enos L., who married Mary Shimer, and lives on a farm in Edgemont. 5. Anna, born May 13, 1828, mentioned above as the wife of Edwin A. Hoopes. 6. Anthony Walter, who married Margaret McClaskey, and resides on a farm in Thornbury, Delaware county. 7. Esther Jane, who married Henry Ashbridge, and is now deceased. 8. Mary, who married Franklin Baker. Anthony Baker, the father of this family, was a large landholder and justice of the peace. He died February 14, 1875, his wife having passed away March 30, 1870.

Edwin A. and Anna (Baker) Hoopes were the parents of the following children: 1. Henry Howard, mentioned at length hereinafter. 2. Franklin B., born March 25, 1851, died November 6, 1851. 3. H. Elizabeth, born May 9, 1852, died February 22, 1882, unmarried. 4. Caroline R., born April 4, 1855, married Edward M. Hicks, son of Edward and Amy Ann (Marshall) Hicks. 5. Sallie W., born June 7, 1857, living with her father in West Chester. 6. William E., born November 29, 1858, married Mary J., daughter of Iram and Melvina F. (Jones) Hinshaw, of Snow Hill, Indiana. Since 1895 Mr. Hoopes, the parent of these children, has been a resident of West Chester, his home having previously been in Westtown. The mother died June 5, 1894, at the home farm.

Henry Howard Hoopes, son of Edwin A. and Anna (Baker) Hoopes, was born November 17, 1849, on the Hoopes homestead, in Westtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was educated in the public schools of his native place and at Quaker Hill, Westchester. He has always lived on the homestead, which has been in the possession of the family for two hundred years, and where he devotes himself to general farming and dairying. In politics he is a Republican.

He has held various town offices, having served for three years as supervisor, and is at present a member of the school board, a position which he has held for twelve years. He is a member of Thompson Lodge, No. 340, A. F. and A. M., Greentree, and of Westmont Lodge, No. 495, Knights of Pythias, Tanguy, in which organization he has passed the chairs. He is a member of no church, but attends the Hicksite Friends' Meeting.

Mr. Hoopes married, in Philadelphia, November 19, 1896, Anna D. Stackhouse, born in Edgemont, January 11, 1850, daughter of Emlen and Catherine W. (Meredith) Stackhouse, both being representatives of old Pennsylvania families. The former traces his descent from Thomas Stackhouse, who, in 1682, in company with William Penn, came to America from Yorkshire, England, and settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

BENJAMIN F. PLACE, for many years actively connected with the agricultural interests of East Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a man of excellent business ability, positive character and sterling worth, whose commendable life has won for him the regard of all with whom he comes in contact. He was born in Newtown township, Delaware county, December 2, 1848.

Joseph Place, grandfather of Benjamin F. Place, was a native of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and his entire life was spent in this neighborhood. He followed the occupation of a stone mason, and in all his business relations he was strictly honorable and upright, commanding the respect and confidence of his employers. He married Margaret Buttesswa, and six children were born to them, namely: Elizabeth, Ann, Margaret, Benjamin, Charles, and John Place. Mr. Place and his wife were members of the German Reformed church, taking an active interest in all the work connected with it, and throughout the community in which they resided so many years they shared in the confidence and good will of their neighbors.

John Place, father of Benjamin F. Place, was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, December 28, 1801, educated in the common schools of the district, and during his early life followed various occupations on the home farm. Later he was engaged in the freighting business, and railroads not being so much in evidence in those days as they are at the present time, Mr. Place transported the goods entrusted to his care by horse and wagon to Pittsburg, taking six weeks to make the journey. After remaining in this line of trade for several years, he purchased a farm in Newtown township, Delaware county, and followed agricultural pursuits during the remainder of his life. Mr. Place married Jane Doras, daughter of James and Jane (Wright) Doras, of Marple, Delaware county. Their children were: Elizabeth, wife of Joseph S. Quigley, of Concord, Delaware county; Joseph, died at the age of seventeen years; Benjamin F.; Rosa E., wife of Samuel Ritter; John Brook, died at the age of seven years, and Jennie Place. In his political affiliations Mr. Place was a firm advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and in religion both he and his wife believed in the doctrines of the Presbyterian church, of which they were active and consistent members. Mr. Place's death occurred in May, 1875; he was survived by his widow, who passed away in 1899.

Benjamin F. Place was reared on his father's farm, and acquired a practical education in the district schools of the neighborhood. After thoroughly learning all the particulars and details of the farming industry, Mr. Place, in April, 1883, purchased the old Cope farm in East Bradford township, Chester county, and has ever since devoted his attention to the production of a general line of garden truck, for which there is a large and constant demand. He casts his vote with the Democratic party and is well informed on the issues of the day, which thus enables him to give an intelligent support to the cause which he advocates.

CHARLES YOUNG, one of the enterprising young farmers of Willistown Inn, Pennsylvania, was born January 3, 1865, on his present homestead, Westtown township, and he is a son of John and Catherine G. (Maag) Young. John Young was born May 12, 1825, on the Girard homestead, Second street, Philadelphia, died April 10, 1897, and he was a son of John and Hannah (Adams) Young, of German descent. John was reared a gardener, as was John his father, and always followed that calling. In 1863 he moved from Philadelphia to the homestead bearing his name in Westtown. On February 19, 1849, he married Catherine G. Maag, who was born June 5, 1825, in Philadelphia, and who, although a lady of advanced years, is still living. She is a daughter of Philip and Rebecca (Getz) Maag, who were of German and English-Quaker descent. Mr. and Mrs. John Young had ten children, as follows. 1. John, born November 28, 1849, who married Mary Jane Scott, and had two children—Rebecca Lavina and William Henry. 2. Rebecca, born August 20, 1852, died October 1, 1860. 3. Philip, born January 2, 1855, married Jane Fulmer, and has two children—Philip Elwood and Ida May, and the latter married Stewart T. White, and they have one child—Beatrice Ruth White. 4. George, born November 4, 1856, died May 29, 1899, married Ma

Vaughn Zell, and they had three children—Mary Catherine, John Zell and Ellen, and the first named married Henry Able, and have one child—Craleton Henry Able. 5. William, born February 7, 1859, married Laura Trainer, and they have four children—Irwin Crowther, Raymond, Annie Martha and Carleton. 6. Henry, born October 28, 1860, died May 9, 1862. 7. Edward, born January 31, 1863, married Lizzie Steele, and they had one child—John Edward. 8. Charles, our subject. 9. Hannah, born June 17, 1866, died December 27, 1874. 10. Catherine, born May 15, 1868, unmarried.

Charles Young, our subject, was educated in the public schools of his neighborhood, and upon attaining to manhood's estate he turned his attention to farming and has been engaged in that line ever since. Mr. Young operates the homestead farm with his mother, and has one of the finest pieces of property in the township, taking a great pride in his success. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party. Fraternally he is a member of Westmont Lodge, No. 495, Knights of Pythias, Tanguy, Pennsylvania, and one of Goshon Council, No. 607, Junior Order of American Mechanics.

Mr. Young married Maud Battin, and they have one child—Cloud Earl, who was born September 15, 1901. Mrs. Young is a daughter of Harry and Emma (Edwards) Battin, the latter being now deceased. The paternal grandparents were Cloud Baldwin and Annie (Brown) Battin, of whom the grandmother is deceased. On the maternal side the grandparents were Alfred and Mary (Hall) Edwards, both deceased. Mrs. Young was born in Westtown, July 3, 1880, and is a most charming and accomplished lady. Both Mr. and Mrs. Young are highly esteemed in the community in which they make their home, and they are important factors in the social life of their township.

WILLIAM B. EWING, M. D., a graduate of the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, and at the present time (1903) serving in the capacity of physician for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, on the Baltimore Central Division of the road, was born in the borough of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 7, 1875, a descendant of a family of Irish extraction.

The earliest ancestor of the Ewing family of whom there is any authentic record was Alexander Ewing, grandfather of Dr. Ewing, who was a native of Drumore township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, that being the locality in which the emigrant ancestors settled upon their arrival in this country from Ireland. He obtained a common school education and from the completion of his studies up to the time of his death he was engaged in farming pursuits. Mr. Ewing was twice married, his first wife having been Mary Black, daughter of James Black, a farmer of Lancaster county, and one child was the issue of this union, Robert B. Ewing. After the death of his wife, Mr. Ewing contracted an alliance with Mary Latta, a native of Sadsbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Robert B. Ewing, father of Dr. Ewing, was born in Drumore township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, September 6, 1841. He received a liberal education, being a student first at the common schools of the neighborhood, then at North Wilmington College, which is located in the western portion of the state, and subsequently at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, which he entered in 1862 and was graduated from the Medical Department in 1865. Shortly after receiving his diploma he removed to West Grove, Chester county, engaged in the active practice of his profession and from that date up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1903, was one of the representative physicians of that borough. In addition to his private practice, Dr. Ewing served as physician for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for twenty-five years, being employed on the Baltimore Central Division, and as pension examiner for the United States government. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, a Republican in politics, and his fraternal affiliations were with the Masonic Order. In 1865 Dr. Ewing married Mary A. Ross, born in 1841, a daughter of Joseph and Sophia (Moffett) Ross, residents of Hopewell borough, Chester county. Their children were—John R., born in November, 1866, married Mary Hamilton, and their family consists of five children; Alexander, born in December, 1869, died in 1896; Sophia M., born January 1, 1872, married John Remson, and they are the parents of one child; Robert W., born in June, 1873, married Bertha Stephenson, and two children were the issue of this union; William B., born November 7, 1875; Jane E., born in April, 1880, unmarried; and Charles A., born in November, 1888, unmarried, a graduate of dentistry, University of Pennsylvania. The mother of these children survived her husband, residing at the present time (1903) at West Grove, Pennsylvania.

William B. Ewing, fourth son born to Dr. Robert B. and Mary A. Ewing, pursued his studies at the West Chester State Normal School and the University of Pennsylvania in the city of Philadelphia, graduating from the Medical Department of the latter named institution in the class of 1900. After some special work in Philadelphia, he returned to West Grove and established an office where he has since put to a practical test the theoretical knowledge he acquired during his collegiate course. Although but a short time in active practice, Dr. Ewing has gained many friends among his patients and is always willing and ready to offer whatever service lies in his power to aid and alleviate the sufferings of the needy. Surgery is a special feature of his practice. In 1903 he received the appointment to succeed his father as railroad physician, has also received an appointment as a member of the board of health, Chester County Medical Society, and is an examiner for six leading life insurance companies.

Dr. Ewing was united in marriage, in 1902, to Mary Hughes, a daughter of Mark, a prosperous farmer of London Grove township, Chester county, and Priscilla (Hoopes) Hughes. They are the parents of one child, Margaret Ewing, born in 1902.

GEORGE LITTLE, a well known and highly esteemed citizen of East Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, has accomplished a most satisfactory work as a farmer and has succeeded in accumulating a valuable estate. His grandfather, Roger Martin Little, came from England to the United States in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and settled in Charlestown township, Chester county, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was a consistent member of the Episcopal church, to the support of which he contributed liberally. Politically he was an old line Whig. He was united in marriage to Mary Martin, and the following named children were born to them: William, John, Major, George, and Rebecca Little, who became the wife of Jesse Pennypacker.

William Little, father of George Little, was born in Charlestown township, Chester county, in 1800, was reared to rural life and obtained his education in the common schools of the neighborhood. Throughout his entire business career he engaged in farming and in breeding and selling live stock, following the latter named occupation in the township of East Bradford, where he resided from 1858 up to the time of his decease. Mr. Little was elected to serve in the various local offices of the town, and was an active and valued member of the Episcopal church. He married Ann Christman, and four children were born to them, namely: Martha, deceased, was the wife of Samuel Fetters, of Chester Valley; George; Mary Jane, deceased; and William R., M. D., who was educated at Lafayette College, later entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and for a number of years practiced his profession in New Jersey, where his death occurred in 1893. Mr. Little died in 1879, and his wife passed away in September, 1880.

George Little was born in Charlestown township, March 2, 1844, obtained his early education in the public schools of the locality, and this was supplemented by a thorough course of study in the Normal School at Chester, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Since attaining young manhood he has engaged in agricultural pursuits on the home farm which consists of two hundred and thirty acres of valuable land, most of which is under a high state of cultivation and well improved. In connection with general farming he makes a specialty of dairy products, having shipped his goods to a certain party in Philadelphia for twenty-three years. He has been affiliated with the Masonic fraternity since attaining his majority, and is now a member of Westchester Lodge, No. 322, and the Brandywine Grange, No. 60. He has always cast his vote with the Republican party.

On November 18, 1874, Mr. Little married Miss M. Annette Ring, a daughter of the late Caleb and Martha Ann (Worrall) Ring, of Chaddford, Chester county. Four children have been born to them, three of whom are living at the present time (1903). Wayne Ring, secretary of the Patrons of Husbandry, W. Hunter, Madeline Christman and Josephine, who died at the age of fourteen years. The family are members of the Episcopal church of East Bradford, Pennsylvania.

REUBEN HIESTAND. The Hiestand family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, was founded in America by John Hiestand, who, accompanied by his brother, Jacob Hiestand, landed at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 16, 1727. It is a peculiar fact that two passengers on a vessel coming to America in 1727 were named John and Jacob Hiestand, and that the same vessel in the year 1731 brought over two passengers named John and Jacob Hiestand.

John Hiestand, the pioneer ancestor, and his brother Jacob removed to the vicinity of Pottstown, where Jacob Hiestand became the owner of land and settled there. John Hiestand, by virtue of a warrant dated December 4, 1740, had surveyed to him almost one hundred and twenty-five acres, and by another warrant dated March 15, 1743, thirty-seven acres and one hundred and thirty-eight perches more in Upper Milford township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, Pennsylvania. On April 17, 1759, he removed to this property and received a patent for both tracts in consideration of twenty-five pounds, four shillings, and eight pence, June 30, 1762. He held the title until November 20, 1775, when for seven hundred pounds (or one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six and two-thirds dollars) he conveyed it to his son, John W. John Hiestand married

Geo Little

Barbara Wanger, daughter of Henry Wanger, who came from Switzerland in 1717, and bought and settled on land which is now within the limits of the borough of Pottstown.

David Hiestand, tenth child of John and Barbara (Wanger) Hiestand, was born August 31, 1755, and died December 27, 1846, his remains being interred at the Mennonite church cemetery near Spring City, Pennsylvania. He was for many years a prominent citizen of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Hiestand married Elizabeth Bechtel, who was born October 11, 1764, and died February 4, 1855.

Henry Hiestand, tenth child of David and Elizabeth (Bechtel) Hiestand, was born near Kimberton, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 14, 1809. In early life he removed to Bucks county, where he remained until 1850, and in that year he returned to Chester county and purchased a farm in East Vincent township, near Spring City, the greater portion of which is now the property of his son, Reuben Hiestand. He was a zealous member of the Mennonite church, and his political affiliations were with the Republican party. Mr. Hiestand married Catherine Shelly, who was born March 10, 1817, a descendant of an old and honored family of Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Their children are—Daniel, who married Eliza Auman; David, unmarried; Mary, who became the wife of Lewis W. Rinehart; Reuben, mentioned at length in the following paragraph; Harry, who married Anna M. Brownback; and Amos, who married Clara Brownback. Henry Hiestand, father of these children, died at his home in the vicinity of Spring City, June 16, 1892; his wife died February 1, 1900, and their remains were interred at the cemetery adjoining the Mennonite church.

Reuben Hiestand, fourth child of Henry and Catherine (Shelly) Hiestand, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, May 4, 1849, and obtained a good English education in the common schools adjacent to his home. He resided on the old homestead until he was twenty-three years of age, and having been reared on the farm he was able to render considerable assistance to his father in the management and cultivation of the estate. In 1872 he engaged in mercantile trade at Vincent, Chester county, and continued until 1891. In 1886 he built and operated until 1899 a creamery, and since that date has devoted his attention exclusively to conducting operations on his farm near Spring City, which was formerly the property of his father. During the administration of Ulysses S. Grant as president of the United States, Mr. Hiestand was appointed postmaster of Vincent, and by his faithful and efficient performance of the duties attached to the office he remained the incumbent during the administration of Presidents Garfield and Arthur and part of President Cleveland's term, covering a period of twelve years. Since attaining his majority Mr. Hiestand has cast his vote with the Republican party.

29x

On June 15, 1876, occurred the marriage of Reuben Hiestand and Ida Catherine Miller, who was born May 3, 1853, a daughter of Benjamin D. Miller, of East Coventry township, and the issue of this union was one child, Mary Catherine, born July 26, 1885. Mr. Hiestand is a practical business man, honest and conscientious in the management of affairs, and is highly esteemed in the community as a public-spirited citizen of integrity and honor.

ELLEN P. WAY, who resides with her mother, Mrs. Sarah Thompson, an aged and highly esteemed resident of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of an old and prominent Chester county family whose commercial, political and social interests have been closely interwoven with those of that section of the state.

The earliest ancestor of the Way family of whom there is any authentic record was Robert Way whose name appears as a witness at Chester Court, 10 mo., 1686. Five years later he purchased a large tract of land on the Brandywine, in Kennett, now Pennsbury township, which consisted of one hundred and fifty acres of land which he cultivated to a high state of perfection and operated extensively, and on which he resided up to the time of his decease, which occurred in the year 1725. Robert Way and his wife, Hannah Way, who was a daughter of Francis and Elizabeth Hickman, were the parents of the following named children: John, Robert, Joseph, Jacob, Elizabeth, Francis, Caleb, Joshua, James and Benjamin Way.

John Way, eldest son of Robert and Hannah Way, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 15, 1694. He spent his early life in attending the village school and assisting his father with the work on the homestead; later became a farmer by occupation and settled on a tract of land in the vicinity of the property owned by his father. He married Ann Hannum, daughter of John and Margery Hannum, of Concord. Twelve children were the issue of this union: Robert, Sarah, Betty, John, Ruth, Caleb, Rebecca, Jacob, Lydia, Ann, Rachel and Benjamin Way. John Way, father of these children, died August 21, 1797.

Jacob Way, fourth son of John and Ann Way, was born on the homestead in Pennsbury township, Chester county, October 19, 1737. He received a common school education, and upon the completion of his studies turned his attention to farming on the old ancestral estate, where he remained during his entire life time. He was an active and industrious man, and noted in the community for his integrity and usefulness as a citizen. He was united in marriage to Phœbe Pennock, a native of the same township, and their children were: Alice, William, Ann, John, Lydia, Sarah, Moses, Jacob, Phœbe, Samuel and Ruth Way.

Moses Way, the seventh child of Joseph and Phœbe Way, was born and bred in Pennsbury township, Chester county, where he spent his business career as a farmer. He was active and energetic, practical and progressive in his ideas, and therefore he realized a goodly income from his labors. He married Susanna Wilkinson, who bore him the following named children: Francis, Milton, Sarah, Israel, Jacob, Phoebe, Moses, Jasper, Susanna and Mary, the latter named being the only survivor at the present time (1903).

Israel Way, fourth child of Moses and Susanna Way, was born on his father's farm in Pennsbury township, Chester county, in the year 1812. His educational advantages were those afforded by the common schools of that day, and his occupation throughout the many years of his active and useful life was farming. He was remarkably successful in his undertaking, followed the most improved methods, and ranked among the representative agriculturists of the township. In 1854, Mr. Way married Sarah Matlack, born in 1830, a daughter of Seth and Sarah (Glover) Matlack, the former named having been a prominent citizen of Haddenfield, New Jersey. One child was born of this union, Ellen P., who is unmarried and resides in a comfortable home with her mother in the borough of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania. After the death of Israel Way, which occurred in 1856, his widow married Richard Barnard, a lumber merchant of Philadelphia, that being his native city, and there he conducted an extensive business up to the year of his decease, 1862. Mrs. Barnard then became the wife of George Thompson, a native of Delaware, and his business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He died in 1891.

ISAAC FRANKLIN CHANDLER, who for the past nine years has been acting in the capacity of supervisor of the township of New Garden, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born September 4, 1852, at Concordville, Delaware county, the son of the late William Chandler, Jr., who was a descendant of George Chandler, the progenitor of the American branch of the family. George Chandler left his home at Greathodge, in Wiltshire, England, in 1687, accompanied by his wife, Jane Chandler, and the following named children: Jane, George, Thomas, Swithin, William, Charity and Ann Chandler, but on December 13, 1687, died at sea. John Chandler, a brother of George Chandler, came to this country, about the same time, but there is no record of his having any family; his home was in Oare, in the parish of Wilcott, England, and the early records show that the Chandlers were an old family there.

Isaac Franklin Chandler obtained his education at Shortledge's Academy in Kennett Square and at the State Normal School in Millersville, and after his graduation from the latter named institution he engaged in the occupation of teaching school, continuing this for three years. After the expiration of this period of time he located on the farm of ninety acres of choice land in New Garden township, where he resides at the present time (1903). He has one of the best improved farms in this section of the county, and by following the most progressive and advanced methods has made it a profitable source of income. In his political views Mr. Chandler is an independent Republican and has been honored with a number of local offices, having served as supervisor of the township for nine years at one continuous service, and is now filling that office, also the office of school director. He is prominently affiliated with the Masonic order and Grange of London Grove township.

Mr. Chandler was united in marriage to Emilie Cope, daughter of Jonathan Cope, proprietor of a general store at Rocky Hill, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Howard L., Sarah A., and Mary S. Chandler, all of whom reside at home with their parents. Mr. Chandler and his family are regular attendants at the Meetings of the Society of Friends.

JOHN W. KENNADY. As a man of progressive ideas, enterprising spirit and laudable ambition, John W. Kennady is, accordingly, a valued addition to the business circles of Kembleville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has been engaged since 1864 in general merchandising. His birth occurred in London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 5, 1833, his parents being Robert and Lydia A. (Stintson) Kennady.

Robert Kennady, grandfather of John W. Kennady, was a native of Ireland, and accompanied by his wife, Rebecca Kennady, emigrated to this country before the period of the Revolutionary war, in which struggle he took an active part. He settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he successfully followed his trade of tailor, and being a thoroughly reliable business man, he fully deserved the liberal patronage he received. Mr. and Mrs. Kennady were the parents of the following named children:

Robert, John, William, Hannah, Rebecca and Mary Kennady. The family were active and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Kennady's death occurred in the year 1840, having attained the extreme old age of ninety years.

Robert Kennady, father of John W. Kennady, was born in London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1797, and his entire life was spent on a farm where he was born. He was a valued and useful citizen of the community, served in the various township offices, and was a member and trustee of the New London Presbyterian church. He was a firm supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, and aided in its advancement and success. He was united in marriage to Lydia A. Stintson, a daughter of William Stintson, who settled in Chester county at an early period, having emigrated from Scotland, his native land. Their children were: Anna Maria, John W., Martha Jane, Rebecca and William S. Kennady. The death of Mr. Kennady and his wife occurred in the same year, 1878.

The educational advantages enjoyed by John W. Kennady, eldest son of Robert and Lydia A. Kennady, were obtained under the personal instruction of Thomas Harvey. He began his business career by farming on the old homestead, remaining at this occupation until 1864, when he located in Kemblesville and purchased a mercantile establishment, which he has conducted up to the present time (1903). He has always followed the most advanced and progressive methods in the management of his business, and his name in commercial circles is synonymous with honorable and straightforward dealing. In politics he is a Democrat, following in the footsteps of his father, and he has been the incumbent of several local offices. In religion he is a member of the Presbyterian church, and has served in the capacity of elder for many years.

Mr. Kennady married, in 1864, Elizabeth Smith, a daughter of William Smith, of Delaware. They have an adopted son, William J. Kennady, whom they have assumed charge of since he was six years of age.

HICKMAN W. SPARKS, an enterprising business man and well known citizen of West Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in 1848, in Salem county, New Jersey, and in 1860 removed to Wilmington, Delaware, where he received his education.

On leaving school he engaged in the carriage-making business, in which he continued for sixteen years in Wilmington, and in 1885 came to West Grove, where he has since resided. In politics he is a Democrat, and has taken an active part in public affairs, having, while a resident of Wilmington, served on the board of health. Since taking up his abode in West Grove he has been no less earnest in the attention which he has given to political matters, and was one of the first councilmen in the borough of West Grove, a position which he held until quite recently. He is a trustee of the Presbyterian church, which he and his family attend. He is a self-made man, and has won the respect of all who have been associated with him, either in business or social relations.

Mr. Sparks married, in 1872, Clara, daughter of Naltran Moore, a shipbuilder of Wilmington. Mr. and Mrs. Sparks have no children.

ISAAC MARTIN is a man of splendid business ability, positive character and sterling worth, who has been prominently connected with various commercial enterprises in Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his ancestors resided as early as 1685, when the pioneer ancestor of the family, Thomas Martin, accompanied by his wife, came from Bedwin Magna, in Wiltshire, England. The line of ancestry is traced through George Martin, a son of Thomas Martin, to his son, George Martin, Jr., who was the father of six children, among whom was George Martin, grandfather of Isaac Martin, who was born July 12, 1763, and by his marriage became the father of eight children, among whom was a son, Thomas Martin, father of Isaac Martin.

Isaac Martin, son of Thomas and Hannah (Biffington) Martin, was born in Valley township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1854. His educational advantages were obtained in the common schools of Coatesville, which was located near the center of the township and was incorporated as a borough in the year 1867. He began his business career by learning the trade of miller in Gum Tree and after a residence of three years in that section, he located in London Britain township, where he continued his milling operations for two years. In 1879 he removed to West Grove, Chester county, where he continued the same line of industry for seven years, all told for fifteen years, after which he established a coal and lumber business which steadily increased in size and volume until it became one of the leading industries of that thriving town. In addition to the management of this enterprise Mr. Martin was the incumbent of the office of postmaster of West Grove, being appointed to that position by the late President McKinley, in 1899, and by his creditable and efficient administration won the approval and commendation of the residents of the borough. Mr. Martin is a Republican, served two terms as transcribing clerk in the State Senate and at the present time (1903) is a member of the Council of West Grove. He is a member of the Masonic order and the Roosevelt Club of West Grove, of which latter named organization he is the secretary.

On March 23, 1882, Mr. Martin married Ella V. Pyle, a daughter of William Pyle, a prosperous agriculturist of Highland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Leila, who was engaged in the vocation of teaching, Willis, and Virginia, all of whom are unmarried. The family are loyal and consistent members of the Presbyterian church at West Grove, taking an active interest in the work of the various societies connected with it. Throughout the community in which they have made their home for so many years they command the respect and esteem of all by their uniform courtesy and kindness of manner.

HARVEY SPENCER. Among the progressive and prosperous agriculturists of Londonderry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of Harvey Spencer, a lineal descendant of Ace Spencer, who, accompanied by two brothers, came from Bucks county and settled at Kemblesville, Chester county, at an early period in its history.

Ace Spencer, grandfather of Harvey Spencer, purchased property near Hickory Hill, Elk township, Chester county, which he cultivated and improved and in this vicinity he spent the greater part of his active business career. This township was the scene of his marriage to Ann Mercer, and here they reared a family of five daughters and two sons, namely: Elizabeth, wife of Linton Stevens; Hannah, wife of Richard White; Mary, wife of Jesse Stevens; Miranda, wife of James Hutton; Aaron, mentioned at length hereinafter; David, who was united in marriage to Miranda Chalfant, and Susan, wife of James Taylor.

Aaron Spencer, father of Harvey Spencer, was the eldest son of Ace and Ann Spencer, and his birth occurred in 1840, in Elk township, Chester county. He was reared to manhood and acquired a common school education in the vicinity of Chesterville, and upon the death of his father he inherited the old homestead, upon which he continued to reside. He was identified with the various interests of the community, and being a man of great energy of character, he achieved a large degree of prosperity in his business transactions. He was united in marriage to Leah Crowl, a daughter of James Crowl, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Harvey, mentioned at length in the following paragraph; 2. C. Baker married Lena Shakespeare, and one child has been born to them, Harlan Spencer; 3. George W., married Jane Robinson, daughter of Robert Robinson, and their children are: Earl and Marion Spencer; 4. J. Marshall, married Ruth Gallagher, a daughter of Joseph Gallagher; 5. Amos C. Spencer.

Harvey Spencer, eldest son of Aaron and Leah Spencer, was born in Elk township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 8, 1859. He obtained a practical education in the local schools which qualified him for the active duties of a business life, which has been devoted to farming interests. In 1893 he purchased his present farm, which is located in Londonderry township, and since that date he has conducted general farming and stock raising, both these occupations yielding him a fair return for the care and labor bestowed upon them. Although the duties of the farm occupy most of his time, yet he is not unmindful of his obligations as a citizen and at the present time (1903) is serving his township in the capacity of school director. He adheres to the faith of his ancestors, that of the Quakers, his father being a birthright member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Spencer was united in marriage to Louisa Scott, who was born, reared and educated in East Nottingham township, a daughter of Amos and Amanda (Greer) Scott. Their children are: Mary, born January 25, 1889; Helen, born July 22, 1892; Norman, born April 7, 1895, and Alma, born March 6, 1897.

SAMUEL S. PYLE, successfully engaged in business pursuits in Toughkenamon Village, Chester county, Pennsylvania, claims as his pioneer ancestors, Robert and Ann Pyle, who were among the early settlers of this section of the state. The exact time of their migration to this country from the parish of Bishops Canning, Wiltshire, England, is not known but they were residents of Bethel as early as 1684.

Samuel S. Pyle, son of Samuel and Ann P. Pyle, was born October 16, 1864, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in the common schools of that neighborhood he acquired his early education, which was supplemented by attendance at Martin Academy. After his graduation from this institution he located in Minneapolis, Minnesota, where for twelve years he and his brother, Ellis W. Pyle, successfully conducted a large and select grocery store. Among his customers were some of the best families in the city, and by prompt and courteous attention to their wishes and desires he held their patronage from year to year. After the expiration of this period of time he returned to Chester county and, in 1896, erected extensive greenhouses in the village of Toughkenamon which he is operating at the present time (1903), meeting with a large degree of prosperity in this new enterprise. His greenhouses are under fifty-five hundred feet of glass and here he raises a variety of products which he readily disposes of in the markets of Chester county. His business is marked by a steady annual increase, and the present success which Mr. Pyle enjoys augurs well for the future. In politics Mr. Pyle is a Republican. He has traveled considerably throughout his own and adjoining states, and in this manner has gained much useful knowledge and information which has a tendency to broaden and elevate the mind of all who can enjoy this privilege. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and also holds membership in the Society of Friends, to which organization his ancestors pledged their faith.

Harvey Spencer

H. S. Houston

Mr. Pyle was united in marriage to Elizabeth Swayne, a daughter of Charles and Mary Swayne, the former named being a prosperous farmer of West Marlborough, Pennsylvania. One child has been born of this union, Dorothy A. Pyle, whose birth occurred December 12, 1896.

LEWIS FORSYTHE, a venerable and esteemed citizen of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is now leading a retired life which is a fitting sequel to his many years of usefulness and activity. He is a native of East Bradford township, now Birmingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred on the old farm April 3, 1825.

John Forsythe (grandfather) was born in Ireland in 1754. He received a good English education in the schools of his native country and also became an expert performer on the violin, having been endowed with a fine musical taste. At the age of nineteen years he migrated to this country and settled in East Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he soon adopted the views and principles of the Society of Friends. In 1776 he removed to the neighborhood of Birmingham and became the teacher of the school at Birmingham Meeting House, which was conducted under the auspices of the Concord Monthly Meeting, and here he diligently applied himself to his arduous duties for twenty years. When the noble Quaker institution at Westtown, Chester county, was erected near the close of the eighteenth century, his skill and experience were put in requisition until that seminary was fairly inaugurated, after which he retired to his farm in East Bradford and there superintended agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in the eighty-seventh year of his age. He presided at the first meeting, held in 1811, to promote the establishment of the West Chester Academy, and was one of the generous contributors to that enterprise. On April 12, 1781, at Birmingham Meeting, Mr. Forsythe married Hannah Carter, daughter of John and Hannah

Carter, of East Bradford. Their children were—John, James, and Hannah.

James Forsythe (father) was born on the old homestead in East Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 1, 1785. He acquired a liberal education at the Westtown Boarding School, and having been reared upon a farm his tastes and inclinations led him to adopt that occupation for his life's work. He conducted his extensive operations on the home farm, and was considered one of the practical and progressive farmers of the community. In religion he adhered to the faith of his forefathers and became a member of the Society of Friends; in politics he was a Republican but took no active part in the management of affairs. Mr. Forsythe was united in marriage to Ann Truman, daughter of William and Susan Truman, the former named a representative farmer of Caln township, Chester county, and the following named children were born to them—William, married Elizabeth Pusey; Susan, became the wife of Aaron Sharpless; John, married Mary Smith; Elizabeth, unmarried; and Lewis Forsythe. James Forsythe, father of these children, died March 9, 1851; his wife passed away in 1846.

Lewis Forsythe, son of James and Ann Forsythe, pursued his studies at the Westtown Boarding School, and his first business experience was gained in the capacity of book-keeper at the school. He then engaged in agricultural pursuits on the old homestead, which he continued until 1879, and during this period by dint of thrift and industry he accumulated a sufficient competence to allow him to enjoy a life of ease and comfort in his declining years. Since 1879 he has been a resident of West Grove, Chester county, and has always manifested a deep interest in its welfare and development. He holds a birthright membership in the Society of Friends, and is an adherent of the principles of the Republican party.

In 1854 Mr. Forsythe married Mary A. Hoopes, daughter of Davis and Sarah Hoopes, of East Caln township, Chester county, where Mr. Hoopes was engaged in farming pursuits. Their children are—Charles, married Caroline Hayes, and they are the parents of three children; Henry, married Maud Couchman, and one child has been born of this union; Davis H., unmarried; Mary D., unmarried; Frances, wife of William B. Harvey; and Susan S., unmarried.

HON. HOWARD H. HOUSTON. The ancestral history of Hon. Howard H. Houston runs back into the age of chivalry, when Sir William Wallace and Robert Bruce battled sturdily for the independence of Scotland. A Lowland clan of the south, as were the Wallaces, in all that period of trial and suffering the Padvinan family fought valiantly under the standard of the Caledonian heroes. One of the young sons of the head of the house, early in the seventeenth century, for services rendered the crown, received knighthood and a grant of lands in county Antrim, Ireland. Sir Hugh Padvian, as is ever the custom, was usually spoken of as Sir Hugh. A man of enterprise and wealth, he built a town upon his estate near the mansion house, and gradually the locality became known as Hugh's Town, "the family at Hugh's Town," and finally the name Houston was adopted as the family name, Padvinan gradually going out of use. All the Houstons in the United States trace descent from Hugh Padvinan. It is so of the Houstons of Virginia, Tennessee and Pennsylvania, where some of the name made permanent lodgment in Lancaster county prior to 1730. General Sam Houston, president and liberator of Texas, and subsequently United States senator from the "Lone Star state," was a descendant of the Scotch-Irish family to which reference is made above.

The grandfather of Mayor Houston, John Houston, was born in the north of Ireland, and as his parents were well-to-do, he received an excellent education. In early manhood he visited the United States, where he remained several years. Returning to Ireland, he married Elizabeth Boone, who was also of Scotch-Irish birth, and her parents' people of considerable means. In 1834, when four children had been born to the young couple, John Houston determined to settle permanently in the new world, and accompanied by his wife and offspring, in that year came to Pennsylvania, where he purchased a plantation in Lancaster county, which for over thirty years he farmed and grazed with marked success. A short time prior to his death—his wife was then dead—John Houston made his home with his son, Dr. John Houston, in Philadelphia, where he died in 1877.

Charles Boone Houston, father of the mayor, was born near Belfast, county Antrim, Ireland, December 16, 1832. He was not two years old when his parents sought a new home beyond the sea. His education was received in the schools of the neighborhood of his father's farm, and completed at the Normal School at Millersville, Pennsylvania. Shortly afterward, with his cousin, Samuel J. Boone, he embarked in general merchandising at Gap, Lancaster county. On January 26, 1860, Charles B. Houston married Margaret Hull Hathaway, of English ancestry, a daughter of Philip Hathaway, of Lancaster county. When the Civil war broke upon the nation his partner, Samuel J. Boone, was commissioned captain in the Seventy-ninth Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry (he was killed in the battle of Chaplin Hill, in 1863), and Mr. Houston became agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Christiana, Lancaster county, where he continued until 1869, when he resigned and joined his brother, Captain Thomas J. Houston, in the construction of a steam blooming furnace at Greensboro, North Carolina, in which a number of Philadelphia capitalists were financially interested. For nearly two years he was connected with that enterprise, when he entered the employ of McCormick & Company, operating large iron works at Harrisburg. In 1874, in partnership with the late John Roach, he built the Chester Rolling Mill, which Mr. Houston conducted for nearly a year, when the plant was purchased by an incorporated company, and for sixteen years was managed by Mr. Houston, under whose direction it doubled in size and output. Mr. Houston disposed of his holdings when the plant was purchased by the Wellman Steel & Iron Company, and devoted his energies to the supervision of his large coal and iron industries in Virginia and West Virginia. Charles B. Houston was a director of the Chester National Bank, the Delaware River Iron Shipbuilding Company, the Crozer Steel & Iron Company of Roanoke, the Edith Iron & Mining Company of Virginia, the Twelve Pole Coal & Lumber Company, the Roanoke Coal & Lumber Company, and the Mate Creek Coal & Lumber Company, all of West Virginia. With members of his family he owned a half-interest in the business and property of the Houston Coal & Iron Company at Elkhorn, West Virginia. Mr. Houston died at Chester, Pennsylvania, November 28, 1902, aged seventy years.

Howard H. Houston was born at Christiana, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, February 16, 1861. He was educated at the public schools in his native place; Hamberg-Seiter Academy, Greensboro, North Carolina; Chester (Pennsylvania) Academy and Chester Grammar School, and completed his studies at the Normal School, West Chester, in 1881. Shortly after graduating he was employed in the office of the Chester Rolling Mills, and in order to train himself to a practical knowledge of the business he entered the mechanical department of the works, familiarizing himself with the details of every branch of the industry, which covered a period of thirteen years. In 1892 Charles B. Houston, Howard H. Houston and J. Max Barnard entered into a co-partnership in the iron, coal and coke business in Philadelphia, under the title of C. B. Houston & Company. Upon the death of his father, Mayor Houston became senior member of the firm. Since 1892 he has been actively engaged in mining and operating coal deposits in West Virginia and Pocahontas fields. He is vice-president of the Houston Coke & Coal Company, a director of the Chester National Bank, holds the same relation with the Cambridge Trust Company, the Chester Hospital and the Chester Free Library; and is officially connected with several corporations in West Virginia.

Howard H. Houston early in life entered the political arena, and while a recognized power in the councils of the Republican party in this section, repeatedly refused to permit his name to be placed in nomination for official place. In January, 1887, when the borough of South Chester was annexed to the city, and the territory taken into the larger municipality had not been divided into wards, he was elected to represent the late borough in its entirety in common council, and in February of the succeeding year was elected a member of select council from the Eleventh ward for a period covering four years, and was re-elected to the same position. While serving in that capacity, in 1902, he was nominated on the Republican ticket for mayor, and was elected by the largest majority ever given for any candidate for that office.

On October 3, 1888, Howard H. Houston married Nellie Maitland, of Negaunee, Michigan, and one son has been born to them, namely, Charles B. Houston, Jr.

REES J. QUAY, a public-spirited and influential citizen of Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has creditably and efficiently served his township for the past twenty-four years in the various capacities of constable, tax collector, assessor and supervisor, retiring from office in the spring of 1903, is a descendant of one of the oldest and best known families of this county, the male members of which have all followed the quiet but useful calling of agriculture. He was born in East Pikeland township, Chester county, January 18, 1839, a son of Thomas, born in the state of Pennsylvania, March 20, 1806, and Rebecca M. Quay, born in West Pikeland township, Chester county, January 24, 1818. Rees J. Quay's father was a cousin of Senator Matthew Stanley Quay, who in 1887 was elected state treasurer of Pennsylvania, which position he resigned on being chosen United States senator.

Rees J. Quay was a student in the common schools of East Whiteland township, where he acquired a practical education which prepared him for a life of activity and usefulness. On attaining young manhood he turned his attention to farming, and this occupation has proved a pleasant and profitable means of livelihood throughout the intervening years. He has always manifested a keen and active interest in the welfare and material growth of the community in which he resides, and during his tenure of public office which began in the year 1879, when he was first elected to the position of constable, until the spring of 1903 when he retired from public life, his administration was marked by the utmost fidelity and loyalty to the interests of the people. In politics Mr. Quay is a Democrat.

Mr. Quay was united in marriage, March 4, 1860, to Miss Mary S. Smith, a daughter of Isaac Smith, and the following named children were the issue of this union—1. Evan F., born April 7, 1862, died of sunstroke August 6, 1896, leaving a widow and seven children who reside at the present time (1903) in West Chester, Chester county. 2. Lewis T., born September 6, 1864, married, March 28, 1889, Addie Allison, who is deceased; they were the parents of one child, Edward Russell Quay, born March 27, 1892. In May, 1899, Lewis T. Quay married for his second wife, Nellie M. Cornwall. 3. Howard B., born March 28, 1867, unmarried, was accidentally killed while in the discharge of his duties on the railroad at Downingtown. 4. Elizabeth J., born February 15, 1870, became the wife of Harry J. Griffith, a carpenter by trade and now employed in a planing mill at West Chester; they are the parents of two children, a boy and a girl. 5. Stephen G., born March 26, 1872, unmarried, is a commission merchant and resides in the state of Illinois. 6. Harry L., born April 26, 1873, unmarried, resides at home and is engaged in farming pursuits. 7. Frederick Y., born March 26, 1878, resides at home. 8. Etta M., born March 16, 1880, became the wife of William Cornell, who conducts a laundry at West Chester; one child was born to them, who is now deceased. 9. Albert E., born August 6, 1883, resides at home. 10. Edith Violet, born October 28, 1886, resides at home.

JOHN P. CHEYNEY, known as one of the public-spirited citizens of West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the son of Moses Cheyney, who was born in 1793, in Concord, Delaware county, and received his education in the common schools of his native place, also attending a private school in Burlington, New Jersey. After finishing his course of study he was for some time a schoolmaster in Bradford township, Chester county, subsequently removing to Lancaster county, and later to Columbia, Pennsylvania, and teaching in both places. At Columbia he became engaged in the lumber business, in which he continued for some time, and then went to Chester county, where he bought a farm at Doe Run which he cultivated during the remainder of his life. He married Margaret, daughter of John and Ann Pyle, the former being a farmer of London Grove, Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Cheyney were the parents of the following children: Eliphaz, who married Eliza Hayes, and Eliza Passmore, and was the father of eight children; William H., whose wife was Philena Webb, and whose family consisted of four children; Anna, who died single; John P., mentioned at length hereinafter; and one child who died in infancy. The death of Mr. Cheyney took place in 1863.

John P. Cheyney, son of Moses and Margaret (Pyle) Cheyney, was born in 1825, in Lancaster county, and obtained his education, partly at home, under the tuition of his father, and partly at Westtown Boarding School. He adopted as his calling the profession of teaching, and labored as an educator in York, Pennsylvania, and also in Delaware. After some years he returned to Doe Run, where he undertook the management of his father's farm. In the course of time he relinquished this responsibility, and moved to West Grove, where he has since led a retired life. In politics he is a staunch supporter of the principles advocated and upheld by the Republican party, and it is a sufficient proof of the regard in which he is held by his fellow citizens to say that he was by them accorded the honor of being elected the first burgess of West Grove. He has also served as a member of the council, and has been a prime mover in various enterprises which have accrued to the benefit of the town. He is a member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Cheyney married Hannah C. Walton, and by this union became the father of the following children: Joseph, who died single; Morris, who married Anna Hadley, and has two children; Anna, who died young. After the death of his wife Mr. Cheyney married Laura M., daughter of Benjamin Hobson, a farmer of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

JEREMIAH BARNARD, an enterprising and successful business man of West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of Richard Barnard, who it is supposed emigrated to this country when a young man from Sheffield, Yorkshire, England. The name Barnard or Bernard is one of the most ancient of surnames, being first taken from Roche-Bernard, an old fortified manor-house of Normandy, France, but it has been in use, however, as a baptismal name since the eighth century, and was originally derived from northern mythology, signifying boldness. Richard Barnard owned land near Chester, Pennsylvania, as early as 1683, served as a grand juror at Chester in 1686, and in this vicinity he and his wife, Frances Barnard, reared a family of seven children, as follows:

Richard, Thomas, Sarah, Mary, Lucy, Lydia and Rebecca Barnard.

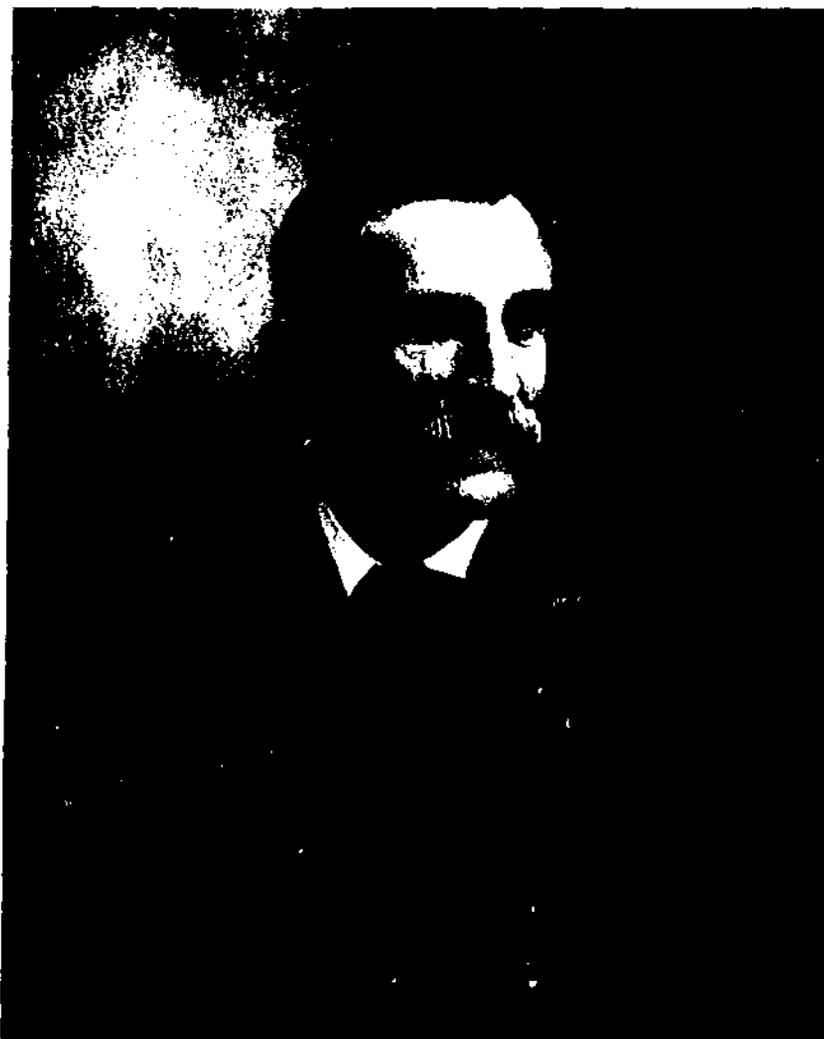

The line of descent from Richard Barnard, the founder of the family, to Jeremiah Barnard is as follows: Richard Barnard, born in 1684, married, about the year 1715, Ann Taylor, daughter of Abiah Taylor, and settled on a large tract of land near Doe Run, West Marlborough township; subsequently he purchased about two hundred acres in Newlin and also a tract adjoining in the township of East Marlborough. His death occurred in 1767.

Richard Barnard, son of Richard and Ann (Taylor) Barnard, of Newlin, was born in 1723, was the owner of large tracts of land in East and West Marlborough, Newlin, Nottingham, and in Lancaster county, besides some in Delaware county. He suffered severe losses from pillage of both armies during the Revolutionary war. On January 3, 1754, Mr. Barnard married Susanna Eckhoff, daughter of David and Winnifred Eckhoff, of Newlin, and at the time of her decease she was survived by her husband and two children, Jeremiah and Rachel, the latter named being the wife of Joseph Reynolds, of Nottingham. On 16, 1763, Mr. Barnard was united in marriage to Lettice Baker, daughter of Joseph and Mary Baker, of Goshen, by whom he had ten children. His death occurred in 1813.

Jeremiah Barnard, son of Richard and Susanna (Eckhoff) Barnard, was born December 2, 1754, married October 25, 1780, at Londongrove meeting, Elizabeth Passmore, who was born March 13, 1759, daughter of George and Margaret (Strode) Passmore, of West Marlborough. The issue of this marriage was eleven children, namely: Susanna, Jeremiah, George, Margaret, Richard, Mary, Samuel, Rachel, John, Elizabeth and Anna Barnard. Jeremiah Barnard, father of these children, died January 27, 1837, survived by his widow, who passed away October 13, 1847.

Jeremiah Barnard, Jr., eldest son of Jeremiah and Elizabeth (Passmore) Barnard, was born January 20, 1783. On April 11, 1804, he was united in marriage to Abigail Pusey, born April 6, 1784, daughter of Ellis and Abigail (Brinton) Pusey, of Londongrove, and the following named children were born to them: Joshua; Ellis; Lydia, who became the wife of Pratt Hoopes; James, father of Jeremiah Barnard; Pusey, whose first wife was Phebe Coates and his second wife was Susan Pownall; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Joseph Pusey; Susan, who married Joseph Pennock; and Philena Barnard.

James Barnard, third son of Jeremiah and Abigail (Pusey) Barnard, was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 12, 1808. On December 11, 1842, he married Mary Hicks, born April 20,

Gen Barnard

1818, daughter of Thomas and Amy Hicks, of Londongrove, Chester county. Their children were: Jeremiah; Amy J., whose death occurred in 1870; and Elizabeth H., wife of Joseph Cranston, and they are the parents of two children, Mary and Barnard Cranston.

Jeremiah Barnard, only son of James and Mary (Hicks) Barnard, was born on the old homestead in West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 11, 1846. He obtained his preliminary education in the local schools, later was a student at Unionville under the tuition of William Durnall, and concluded his studies at Concordville under the preceptorship of Joseph Shortlidge. He gained his first business experience in the coal and lumber trade, but after conducting this line of industry for a number of years he turned his attention to general farming, and this occupation has engrossed his entire attention up to the present time (1903). Politically Mr. Barnard is a Republican, and has served his township in the capacity of president of the school board for five years, and religiously he is a birth-right member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Barnard married Ida Barton, who was born in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April 4, 1850, reared partly in New Garden and partly in West Marlborough townships, educated in the local schools, a daughter of James and Caroline Barton, the former named having been born in England in 1811. Their children are: 1. Walter J., born June 24, 1874, was educated at the school of George Moore and at West Chester State Normal School, and subsequently married Marie Faddis. 2. M. Florence, born February 20, 1876, was educated in the schools of Philadelphia and at George School, Bucks county. 3. James, born December 27, 1878, acquired his education at George Moore's School, at Ercildoun, and at West Chester State Normal School. 4. Norris, born June 20, 1880, obtained his education at Ercildoun, State Normal School, and at Pierce's Business College, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

DR. GRANVILLE PRIZER, actively engaged in the practice of his chosen profession in the town of Lionville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a graduate from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, is a descendant on both the paternal and maternal side of the Benner and Hartman families, several members of each having gained considerable prominence and distinction during the Revolutionary period. Henry Benner was an active Whig of the Revolution, was captured by the enemy, and by personal observation learned the interior economy of a British prison; his son, Philip Benner, then a youth, took up arms under General Wayne, but before he went forth to the field his patriotic mother quilted in the back of his vest several guineas, as a provision in case he should be taken prisoner. The Hartman family was represented by Peter Hartman, who served as an officer in the Continental army and from the commencement of the war was an ardent and active patriot; his son, George Hartman, received the appointment of drum-major, and was taken by his father through his military campaigns. During the winter of 1777 both father and son went on a tour among the farmers and collected edibles, clothing and straw for which services they received the thanks of General Washington. George Hartman, Jr., was the first drill-officer of the "American Grays;" later he was appointed to the rank of orderly sergeant of the Great Valley Light Infantry; was elected captain of the second company of the Sixty-fifth Pennsylvania Militia Regiment; was commissioned colonel of the Fifty-seventh Regiment Militia; was elected brigadier-general of the First Brigade, Third Division, and later was elected and commissioned major-general of the Third Division.

Levi Prizer, father of Dr. Prizer, was a son of John and Elizabeth Prizer, of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. He received his early education by attending night school in the neighborhood where he was born, learned the miller's trade, and afterward purchased a farm in Chester county. Was justice of the peace for twenty years continuously, was also school director for many years, and to these offices he was elected term after term in a township that was overwhelmingly Democratic, although he was an active Republican; was elected as a member of the legislature in 1871-72-73 on the Republican ticket. He died in 1875.

His brother, Henry Prizer, who was a cripple, got his education also by attending night school and became a school teacher. He opened the first boarding school in eastern Pennsylvania, at Trapp, Montgomery county, which school he kept and was the principal of during all of his life, after which it went into other hands.

Granville Prizer, one of a family of seven children born to Levi and Rebecca Hartman Prizer, claims Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, as his birthplace and the date of his birth is November 6, 1845. His preliminary education was obtained in a school in West Pikeland township, which he attended until he attained the age of fourteen years, and this was supplemented by a two years' course at Freeland Seminary in the town of Collegeville, which was conducted by Henry A. Unsicker. The following two years he was engaged in the capacity of teacher in the schools of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, after which he returned home and was employed on the farm and in the ore mines which were located in the neighborhood. In the fall of 1865 he entered Bucknell Academy and at the same time pursued a course of medical reading in the office of Dr. Maurice Fussell, remaining the required time of three years, and also attended a course in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated, in 1868, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

Dr. Prizer established an office for the active practice of his profession at Norritonville, Montgomery county, but after a residence of six months in that town he removed to Lionville, Chester county, where he has since been continuously engaged in attending to the demands of an extensive and lucrative patronage. Although the duties of his profession have monopolized the greater part of his time and attention, yet Dr. Prizer has not forgotten his obligations as a citizen of this great Republic. His political allegiance is given to the Republican party, and he was elected on that ticket to serve one term of five years as justice of the peace; he has also served as a member of the school board for twenty-four consecutive years, was appointed by the government during President McKinley's administration to the office of pension examiner, which position he resigned in order to accept that of register of wills.

In 1875 Dr. Prizer married Catherine H. Kenney, daughter of Alex and Lydia Kenney of Charlestown township, Chester county, the former named being a successful farmer and commission man in the market, and the latter one of a family of five daughters. Two children have been the issue of this marriage—J. Warren, born October 24, 1879, unmarried, engaged in farming pursuits; Bessie K., born March 3, 1882, a graduate of the State Normal School at West Chester, and for the past two years successfully engaged in teaching school. Dr. Prizer's family hold membership in the Lionville Lutheran Church.

GEORGE GOOD, a well known and respected citizen of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a representative of that class of men known as independent farmers, was born December 6, 1869, in West Whiteland township, Chester county, his parents being also natives of this section of the state of Pennsylvania.

His grandfather, a native of Chester county, was a stone mason and resided the greater part of his life in East Bradford, Pennsylvania, where he followed his trade. He married Miss Wickersham, and eight children were the result of the union, seven of whom are living. The father of George Good was the oldest of the children, born in 1840. He was a farmer, but has now retired from active life and is living in Downingtown. He married Miss Amanda Sellers in Caln township and they had five children, of whom George was the oldest, 2. Richard Downing, born in 1871, married, and has one child, and is now conducting a milk business in Philadelphia. 3. Henry, Jr., born in 1873, single. 4. John E., born in 1875. 5. Mary, died in infancy.

The educational advantages enjoyed by George Good were obtained at what is known as Bell School in East Caln township, Chester county, and since the completion of his studies he has been continuously engaged in farming pursuits in his native township. His farm of fifty-two acres is well improved and very productive, and he also operates a dairy of eleven head of well selected stock. He is a careful and successful farmer, and has achieved financial success by his progressive and practical ideas of the management of affairs.

On March 31, 1897, occurred the marriage of George Good and Sarah D. McClintock, daughter of Robert and Ann (Ballentine) McClintock, both of whom claim Ireland as their birthplace. Mr. McClintock came to the United States in 1839, settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his first occupation was that of farming. Later he learned the trade of blacksmith with John Pollack in East Bradford township at "Old Scalp Level," and this line of trade he successfully pursued for the remainder of his active career. In Downingtown, Chester county, October 6, 1859. Mr. McClintock married Ann Ballentine and they took up their residence in the Grove at West Whiteland township, Chester county. Seven children, five girls and two boys, were the issue of this union, the eldest and youngest being now deceased—the remaining members of the family are—Sarah D., born February 26, 1862; Ida, born June 30, 1864; Anna M., born May 15, 1867; Robert, Jr., born September 23, 1870; and James Alexander, born April 28, 1873. Mr. McClintock, father of these children, is deceased; the mother is still living and resides part of the year with her daughter, Mrs. Good, and the remainder of the year with her other married daughter in the city of Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Good are well known and respected in the community where they reside, and possess the good will and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

WILLIAM EBER FRAME, an enterprising farmer and public-spirited citizen of Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, is a son of Isaac D. Frame, who was born in West Brandywine township in 1840, and was by trade a wheelwright. He married Elizabeth Warfel, a native of Lanchester county, and the following children were born to them: Walter, who was employed on the Reading Railroad, and married Elizabeth Scheitz; Sallie, who is now deceased; William Eber, mentioned at length hereinafter; Anna May, who became the wife of Abram Mosteller, a farmer; and Ester Elizabeth, who resides at home.

William Eber Frame, son of Isaac D. and Elizabeth (Warfel) Frame, was born December 17, 1866, in Lionville, where he received his primary education in the public schools, afterward attending the well-known private school presided over by Captain Abram Fetters. His first attempt at farming was made in the service of Leonard Moore, on whose farm he was for a time employed. After gaining further experience on the farm of Holland Brownback, he changed his course of life by entering the store of Jesse Ransom, and remaining there as a clerk for two years. At the end of that time, feeling that his true calling was that of a farmer, he settled on the farm which is now his home, and which he manages in a way which proves that he has not mistaken his vocation. He takes an active part in the affairs of the township, and held at one time the office of inspector of election. In addition to affording Mr. Frame this marked proof of the confidence with which they regard him, his neighbors elected him three years ago to the office of supervisor, a position which he still holds. He is an advocate and supporter of the doctrines of the Democratic party, and his church affiliations are with the Baptist denomination.

Mr. Frame married Adda Powell, and their children are: Frank Powell, born September 22, 1893; Leroy, born May 3, 1895; and Lewis Willard, born December 15, 1899. Mrs. Frame is a daughter of T. Griffith Powell, who was born September 25, 1841, in East Brandywine, and has always been a farmer. He married Mary Jane Brown, who was born August 20, 1842, and they are the parents of the following children: Lizzie B., who was born November 19, 1868, and married Clinton Smedley, a farmer; Adda, who was born May 26, 1870, in East Brandywine, and became the wife of William Eber Frame, as mentioned above; Havard L., who was born March 7, 1872, and married Eliza Maxton; Frank S., who was born December 26, 1873, and is an engineer at Oxford market, Philadelphia; Vernon C., who was born January 29, 1876, holds the office of supervisor, and resides with his parents; Lucy, who was born December 14, 1877, and is the wife of Robert McClintock, a farmer; Emily, who was born February 20, 1880, and married Samuel Copeland; Bowen I., who was born February 26, 1882, and is a machinist in Philadelphia; and John, who is now deceased. Mr. Powell has two brothers still living: William B., who is employed as a watchman in Philadelphia, is married, and has five children; and Lewis, who also resides in Philadelphia, and is a member of the police force of that city. He is married, and is the father of two children.

WILLIAM ASA MOORE, a prosperous farmer of Milford Mills, Chester county, traces his descent from the Rev. Charles Moore, who officiated more than a century ago as the pastor of a Baptist church in Vincent. He married Margaret Carroll, and they were the parents of a son, Robert, who was born November 29, 1797, and in his youth was engaged in business as an undertaker. Subsequently, in consequence of a preference for the life of a farmer, he devoted himself for the remainder of his life to agricultural pursuits. He married Rachel Smedley, born February 4, 1797, by whom he was the father of the following children: Charles; Thomas Mercer, mentioned at length hereinafter; William, who died in childhood; Lewis, who died young; Gideon S.; Francis J.; Leonard K.; and Joseph. The six sons who grew to manhood all led the lives of farmers in their native county of Chester. Being descended on the maternal side from the well-known Smedley family, the members of which from the earliest generations belonged to the Society of Friends, these brothers adopted, as their religious belief, the faith of that denomination.

Thomas Mercer Moore, son of Robert and Rachel (Smedley) Moore, was born July 1, 1825, and received his primary education in the public schools of the township, subsequently attending the Unionville Academy, where he enjoyed the instructions of the revered and beloved Jonathan Gause. In early life he followed the profession of teaching, but in 1853 settled on a portion of the old homestead, where he passed the remainder of his life as a farmer. For several years he was the proprietor of a store in Milford. He married Charity Ann, daughter of Stephen and Hannah (Johnson) Love, the former a farmer of East Goshen, where his daughter, who was born March 16, 1828, received her education. Four sons and one daughter were born to Mr. and Mrs. Moore; Stephen L.; Robert Francis; William Asa, mentioned at length hereinafter; Thomas Elsworth; and Mary Ella. The death of Mr. Moore, the father of the family, occurred on April 1, 1900.

William Asa Moore, son of Thomas Mercer and Charity Ann (Love) Moore, was born April 12, 1858, on the homestead, and until reaching the age of fourteen attended the public schools of the neighborhood. He then spent five years at the Edgefield Institute, under the tuition of Captain Abram Fetters. After leaving school he returned to the homestead, where he remained, assisting his father in the care and labors of the farm. The latter, several years before his death, withdrew from active participation in the management of the estate, of which Mr. Moore is now manager, having succeeded to the management of the property at the decease of his father. The farm consists of 143 acres, which are kept by Mr. Moore in a high state of cultivation, and devoted to the purposes of general farming. A dairy containing twenty-five cows is also a fruitful source of revenue. Since 1898 Mr. Moore has held the position of director in the Fairmount Creamery Association. He has never filled any township office, the duties of his chosen calling being of too absorbing a nature to admit of his giving a larger portion of his time to public affairs than is necessary for the discharge of the essential demands of good citizenship. Politically he is a Democrat, upholding both in theory and practice the principles advocated by that organization.

Mr. Moore married Hannah Margaret, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Felters) Loomas, both members of old families. The former was a farmer, and also followed the trade of blacksmith. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Moore: James Howard, who was educated in the public schools, and resides at home; Elizabeth Florence, deceased, and Anna Loomis Moore.

THOMAS ELLSWORTH MOORE, a successful farmer and leading citizen of Milford Mills, Chester county, is a great-grandson of Charles Moore, who was pastor of a Baptist church in Vincent, and married Margaret Carroll. Their son, Robert, born November 29, 1797, was in his early manhood an undertaker, but later turned his attention to agriculture, and passed the remainder of his life as a farmer. He married Rachel Smedley, who was born February 4, 1797, and they were the parents of the following children: Charles Carroll; Thomas Mercer, mentioned at length hereinafter; William, who died in childhood; Lewis, who died young; Gideon S.; Francis J.; Leonard K.; and Joseph. Of this family of eight sons, the five who reached maturity all lived as farmers in Chester county. Their religious belief was that of the Society of Friends, to which their mother belonged, being descended from one of the leading families of Chester county Friends.

Thomas Mercer Moore, son of Robert and Rachel (Smedley) Moore, was born July 1, 1825, and was educated in the public schools of the township, and at the Unionville Academy, presided over by the noted instructor, Jonathan Gause. In his youth, he was for a time a teacher, but made farming the business of his life, with the exception of a few years, during which he conducted a store in Milford. He married Charity A., daughter of Stephen and Hannah (Johnson) Love, the former a stone mason of East Goshen, where his daughter, who was born March 16, 1827, received her education. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were the parents of four sons: Stephen Love; Robert Francis; William Asa; and Thomas Ellsworth, mentioned at length hereinafter. For several years previous to his death, Mr. Moore, the father, had retired from active life.

Thomas Ellsworth Moore, son of Thomas Mercer and Charity A. (Love) Moore, was born August 24, 1861, on the homestead, in Upper Uwchlan township, and received his primary education in the public schools of the neighborhood, subsequently attending the Edgefield Academy and the West Chester State Normal School. His occupation in life has been that of an agriculturist, the farm on which he now lives consisting of seventy-one acres, and he also owns a farm of ninety-four acres which he has cultivated. While giving skillful and assiduous attention to his duties as a supervising agriculturist he finds time fill the position of bookkeeper at the Fairmount Creamery, and also bestows a due share of his thought and effort in matters which relate to the welfare of the community in which he resides. That this last-named trait in his character is appreciated by his townsmen is shown by the fact that for five years he has held the office of justice of the peace. He is also an able surveyor. He is a member of Lindell Grange, No. 1179, in politics he is a strong upholder of Democratic doctrines, and his religious affiliations are with the German Reformed church.

Mr. Moore married Florence Augusta, born February 22, 1863, daughter of Jonah and Mary (Ralston) McAfee. The former, who is a farmer in Vincent, was formerly a resident of East Nantmeal township, his daughter graduating from the West Chester State Normal School.

WILLIAM SHIMER. Among the successful and enterprising agriculturists of Chester county, Pennsylvania, who have been life-long residents of that section of the state, is William Shimer, who was born in the year 1827, in the vicinity of Grove, Chester county, a son of Edward and Hannah (Jones) Shimer.

William Shimer pursued his studies in the common schools adjacent to his home and after completing his education he chose the occupation of farmer, and has since devoted his entire time to that branch of industry, becoming the owner of his present farm in Pennsbury township. He conducts his operations on an extensive scale, i-practical and progressive in his methods of management and cultivation, and his labor has been attended with a fair degree of success. Although his time has been so completely occupied with the management of his estate, Mr. Shimer has not been neglectful of his duties as a citizen. Since attaining his majority he has always cast his vote for the candidate who in his opinion is best suited for the office, and has also served the townships of Thornbury and Pennsbury in the capacity of school director for twenty-five years.

Eusebio Lamarca

Sarah Barnard

In 1858 Mr. Shimer married Mary J. Faucett, who died November 18, 1860. They were the parents of one child, Hannah, who became the wife of William F. Davis, and their family consists of three children—Edgar, Lizzie, and Annie Davis. Mr. Shimer chose for his second wife Mary J. Summons, a native of East Nantmeal township, and the marriage ceremony was performed in 1862. One child was the issue of this union, Edward J., who was born in 1865, acquired his education at the Concordville Academy, married Asinth Biker, daughter of Joseph Biker, and now resides with his father on the farm, which is located in the township of Pennsbury, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mary J. (Summons) Shimer died 2 mo., 28, 1897.

EUSEBIUS RICHARD BARNARD, prominently identified with the agricultural, political and social interests of Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of a family which derived its name from Roche-Barnard, an ancient fortified manor-house of Normandy, France, in which country Barnard has been a baptismal name since the eighth century, having been taken from northern mythology, signifying boldness. The progenitor of the American branch of the family was Richard Barnard, who permanently settled in Chester county prior to the year 1686.

Richard Barnard (grandfather) is supposed to have been a son of Richard and Susanna (Eckhoff) Barnard, of Newlin township, Chester county, the former named being a son of Richard Barnard, the pioneer ancestor of the family. Richard Barnard (grandfather) and his wife, Sarah (Chambers) Barnard, were the parents of the following named children: 1. Joseph, who married Phoebe Williams, and one son was born of this union; 2. Elihu, who married Mary Williams, and their children were Emma, wife of David Chambers; Norris, who married Martha Baker; Elizabeth, deceased; Richard, who married Mrs. Way; John, who married Miss Chambers; and Phoebe, wife of William Lewis Lamborn and mother of three children—Iena, Edage, and Jesse Wynona Lamborn; 3. Amos, who married Miss Wilson, and two children were the issue of this union—Joseph and Wilson Barnard; 4. William, whose first wife was Ruth (Stubbs) Barnard, who bore him five children; his second wife was Mary (Luntly) Barnard, who bore him two children; Mary Lundy was the sister of the American abolitionist of note, Benjamin Lundy, who was born in New Jersey in 1789 and died in the year 1839; Eusebius, mentioned at length in the following paragraph; 6. Cyrus, who married and to whom was born three children; 7. Elizabeth, who died in early life.

Eusebius Barnard (father) was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in July, 1802. He attended the Westtown Boarding School, and being of a studious and attentive disposition he advanced rapidly in his studies and was one of the foremost scholars in the school. Joseph Barnard, brother of Eusebius Barnard, was teaching school at Locust Grove, and finding his classes in advance of his education called upon Eusebius, who was but thirteen years of age at that time and a student at the school in Westtown, to take charge of these advanced students temporarily. At the expiration of this term of employment, other duties devolved upon him which prevented his return to school, so that he never completed the regular course of instruction as was intended he should do. He was a man of exemplary character and great mental force, and took an active and conspicuous part in the anti-slavery question, his home being an extension for the "underground railroad." He was a strong advocate for temperance reform, and for a number of years served as a minister in the Society of Friends. He was united in marriage to Sarah Painter, daughter of Enos and Hannah (Minshall) Painter. Their children were: Elizabeth, Minerva, Hannah, Minerva (2), Enos, Anna, Eusebius R., and Enos P. (2).

Eusebius R. Barnard, second son of Eusebius and Sarah Barnard, was born on the old homestead in Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 2, 1840. He obtained a practical education at the district schools, and his business career has been devoted to the cultivation and improvement of the ancestral estate upon which he now resides. He is a man of upright and unimpeachable character, wields considerable power and influence in the community, takes an active part in public affairs and has been chosen by his fellow-citizens to serve in various important township offices.

Mr. Barnard married Alta J. Downing, who was born in Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, reared there and acquired her education in the local schools. She is a daughter of Eugene and Mary J. Downing, the former named being a carpenter by trade, but of late years has turned his attention to farming interests. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs.

Barnard: Ida Mary, born February 4, 1879, became the wife of Abram Williamson Baily in 1901, and their child, James W. Baily, was born February 16, 1902; Charles Downing, born July 19, 1880; and Ann Tyler, born November 16, 1889, died August 21, 1895. Mr. Barnard adheres to the faith of his forefathers in his religious views, and holds membership in the Society of Friends; his wife is a consistent member of the Protestant Episcopal church of Downingtown.

HENRY FUNK, an enterprising and substantial citizen of Spring City, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is engaged in agricultural pursuits on the farm adjoining the one on which he was born, November 5, 1835. The Funk family are of German extraction and the earliest ancestor of whom there is any authentic information was Henry Funk (great-grandfather), who about the year 1786 settled in Buckingham county, Virginia, where he resided up to the time of his decease. His wife, Barbara (Showalter) Funk, a native of Germany, who died in 1824, bore him the following named children—Jacob, Christian, John, Henry, Daniel, Joseph, Susan, Elizabeth, Hester, Samuel, and Catherine Funk.

Rev. Jacob Funk (grandfather) was born May 30, 1761, in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, from whence he removed in early manhood to East Vincent township, Chester county, in which vicinity the remainder of his days were spent. He was a minister of the Mennonite church, and his death occurred July 22, 1817, in the fifty-seventh year of his age, while preaching a sermon in the pulpit of his own church. His first wife, Mary (Shelley) Funk, who died April 27, 1809, bore him a family of nine children, all of whom became active and faithful members of the Mennonite church. There were no children born of the second marriage.

Jacob Funk (father) was a native of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in early life learned the trade of wheelwright and conducted this line of industry very successfully for a number of years, and in 1825 removed to East Vincent township and purchased a one hundred acre tract of land which was located on the present site of Spring City. His religious views were in accord with those advocated by the Mennonite church, in which body he was an officer for many years, a liberal contributor to its support and very aggressive in the various departments of work connected with it. Mr. Funk was united in marriage to Anna Hiestand, daughter of David Hiestand, a representative of a family who were among the early settlers of Chester county; one hundred years ago David Hiestand erected the barn which is still standing on the farm now owned and operated by U. S. G. Rapp. Mr. Funk died in 1885, aged eighty-seven years, and his wife passed away in the seventy-sixth year of her age. Mrs. Funk also traced her ancestry to an old and honored German lineage.

Henry Funk was reared and educated in East Vincent township, and since attaining man's estate has been interested in a number of enterprises. For ten years he was actively engaged in the slate quarry and jobbing business, and during this period was awarded the contract for roofing the extensive mills at Phoenixville. For a number of years he conducted a profitable business in buying and selling horses and cattle, and of recent years he has conducted general farming operations on his farm in Spring City. In religion he adheres to the faith of his forefathers, and holds membership in the Mennonite church.

In 1857 Mr. Funk married Mary Detwiler, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Latshaw) Detwiler, who reared a family of twelve children—Jacob, Catherine, Isaac, Elizabeth, Mary, Sarah, Susan, Henry, John, Abraham, David and Magdalene Detwiler. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Funk—Catherine D., wife of Frederick Stauffer, a farmer of East Vincent township; Anna D., wife of Irvin L. Force, engaged in agricultural pursuits on Mr. Funk's farm; Elizabeth D., is the wife of William A. Francis, who is engaged in farming on the old homestead; Sarah, died at the age of twelve years; Mary Jane, died at the age of two years; and Wilmer, who died at the age of twenty-three years; he was engaged in the creamery business.

JAHN E. FINKBINER, who was for many years numbered among the leading farmers and respected citizens of East Vincent township, Chester county, was descended on the paternal side from German ancestry, while through his mother, he was of Swedish extraction. Both families were among the early settlers of this region.

Jacob Finkbiner was born in Chester county, and inherited from his mother the homestead which has now been in the possession of the family for nearly one hundred years. All his life he followed agricultural pursuits, with the steady success which is insured by skill and integrity. Mr. Finkbiner was an active member of the Lutheran church. He married Margaret Rambo, who traced her descent from one of the old families of Montgomery county.

Jahn E. Finkbiner, son of Jacob and Margaret (Rambo) Finkbiner, was born December 1, 1841, on the homestead in East Vincent township. His home throughout life was the house in which he was born, and his best energies were devoted to the cultivation of the paternal acres. His diligence and capability as a farmer not only brought him a fair measure of financial prosperity, but earned for him among his neighbors the reputation of an able agriculturist. In his political principles and sympathies he was a Republican. He was a member of Zion (Lutheran) church, in which for many years he served as an officer, quietly zealous in the fulfillment of every duty and ever ready in his response to an appeal in behalf of any worthy cause.

Mr. Finkbinder married, December 3, 1867, Catherine K., born November 18, 1849, daughter of John F. and Catherine (Kulp) Halteman, the former a farmer and weaver of North Coventry township. Mr. Halteman was a native of East Vincent, Chester county, and his wife was born in Montgomery county. They were Mennonites in their religious belief. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Finkbinder: John H., who was born December 16, 1870, and lives on the homestead as a farmer and carpenter; Mary Eliza, who was born September 24, 1872, and is the wife of William Nyman, a butcher of East Vincent; Jacob Clayton, who was born June 2, 1875, is a butcher, and married Elizabeth Knauer; Eber W., who was born February 13, 1877, is a machinist and draughtsman, and married Catherine Llewellyn of Phoenixville; Daniel R., who was born March 12, 1879, and is a carpenter and architect in Philadelphia; Samuel S., who was born March 16, 1881, is a machinist in Philadelphia, and married Mrs. Jennie March August 1, 1903; and Sarah E., who was born December 31, 1885, unmarried, and resides at home.

The death of Mr. Finkbinder, which occurred October 6, 1900, was lamented as that of so good a man and upright a citizen deserved to be, his family having the sympathy of all their neighbors in their great affliction, while the church to which he had for so many years belonged mourned him as one of her chief mainstays.

AMOS HIESTAND, a successful farmer and truck gardener conducting extensive operations on the farm in East Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was born May 21, 1855, a son of Henry and Catherine (Shelly) Hiestand, is a lineal descendant of John Hiestand, who emigrated to this country with his brother, Jacob Hiestand, landing at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 16, 1727, the latter named becoming the owner of a tract of land in the vicinity of Pottstown, Pennsylvania. He then removed to Lehigh county where he resided for the remainder of his life.

John Hiestand, the emigrant ancestor, resided for a number of years in the neighborhood of Pottstown, and by virtue of a warrant dated December 4, 1740, had surveyed to him almost one hundred and twenty-five acres, and by another warrant dated March 15, 1743, thirty-seven acres and one hundred and thirty-eight perches in Upper Milford township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, Pennsylvania, and in consideration of twenty-five pounds, four shillings, and eight pence he received a patent for both tracts on June 30, 1762. He settled on this property April 17, 1759, and held title until November 20, 1775, when for seven hundred pounds (or one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six and two-thirds dollars) he conveyed it to his son, John Hiestand and his wife, Barbara (Wanger) Hiestand, daughter of Henry Wanger, a native of Switzerland, who in 1717 purchased and settled on land which is now within the limits of the borough of Pottstown, reared a large family of children, many of whom attained years of maturity and held responsible positions.

David Hiestand, tenth child of John and Barbara (Wanger) Hiestand, was born August 31st, 1755, and resided for the greater part of his life in Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was regarded as an active and public-spirited citizen. His death occurred December 27, 1846, and his remains were interred at the Mennonite church cemetery, near Spring City, Pennsylvania. His wife, Elizabeth (Bechtel) Hiestand, was born October 11, 1764, and died February 4, 1855.

Henry Hiestand, tenth child of David and Elizabeth (Bechtel) Hiestand, was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, having been born in the neighborhood of Kimberton November 14, 1809. He was reared and educated in the vicinity of his birthplace; removing later to Bucks county where he resided until 1850, when he returned to Chester county and purchased a farm in East Vincent township, near Spring City, which he cultivated to a high state of perfection and on which he resided for the remainder of his life. This property is still in the possession of the family, a portion of it being owned by Reuben Hiestand and the remainder by Amos Hiestand. Mr. Hiestand was an earnest and consistent member of the Mennonite church, and his political allegiance was given to the Republican party. Henry Hiestand and his wife, Catherine (Shelly) Hiestand, who was born March 10, 1817, a representative of an old and prominent Bucks county family, were the parents of the following named children: 1. Daniel, who married Eliza Auman; 2. David, unmarried; 3. Mary, who became the wife of Lewis W. Rinchart; 4. Reuben, who married Ida Catherine Miller, and they are the parents of one child, Mary Catherine Hiestand; 5. Harry D., who married Anna M. Brownback; 6. Amos, mentioned at length hereinafter. Henry Hiestand, father of these children, died June 16, 1892; his wife passed away February 1, 1900, and their remains were interred at the Mennonite church cemetery.

Amos Hiestand, youngest child of Henry and Catherine (Shelly) Hiestand, was reared on the old homestead and pursued his studies at the public schools adjacent to his home. The first seven years of his active career were spent in the capacity of clerk in a general mercantile establishment conducted by his brother, Reuben Hiestand, at Vincent, Chester county, after which he was admitted as a partner, and this connection continued for eight years. He then purchased his brother's interest in the business and the following two years was the sole proprietor, but at the expiration of this period of time he disposed of the entire stock and since then has engaged in farming pursuits. He is a Republican in politics, served his township as postmaster for one term, was the incumbent of several other offices, and at the present time (1903) is filling the position of auditor.

Mr. Hiestand was united in marriage April 23, 1885, to Clara E. Brownback, a daughter of Jesse and Sarah A. (Keeley) Brownback, the former named a representative farmer of East Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

ISAAC P. DAVIS, a successful farmer and worthy citizen of East Vincent township, Chester county, is descended from old settlers of the county, where his father, Isaac Davis, was born about the beginning of the nineteenth century. He was a life-long farmer and a man who took an active part in township affairs, his neighbors testifying to their confidence in his character and ability by electing him to several offices. Politically he was a Democrat. He married Abbie Cheevers, who like himself was a descendant of early settlers. Mr. Davis died October 27, 1866, at the age of sixty-five, and his wife passed away in 1881, being then sixty-eight years old.

Isaac P. Davis, son of Isaac and Abbie (Cheevers) Davis, was born April 5, 1837, near Paoli Parade-Ground, Chester county, and received his education in the public schools of the township. Farming has been the business of his life, although for five years he was engaged in mercantile pursuits at Pughtown. He is now the proprietor of the Seven Stars Hotel, which he conducts in connection with his agricultural labors, thus giving evidence of remarkable executive ability. He is assiduous in the discharge of his obligations as a citizen, his sound judgment and public spirit causing him to be held in such high regard by his townsmen that they have chosen him at different times to fill the offices of supervisor, assessor, school director and auditor. He now holds the position of town clerk.

Mr. Davis married, December 24, 1863, Rebecca J., born February 13, 1839, daughter of John and Sarah (Morrison) Green. The former, who was a farmer, was born in Delaware county, his wife being a native of Wilmington, Delaware. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the parents of the following children: Emma B., who was born January 8, 1865, and is the wife of Morris Strickland, a blacksmith of Nantmeal village; Isaac Norton, who was born December 2, 1867, followed the trade of a moulder at Rogers Ford, and is at present proprietor of a hotel in Kimberton, Pennsylvania; John G., who was born October 11, 1868, and is deceased; Edgar L., who was born August 18, 1871, and is a farmer and market-gardener at Birchrunville; Sarah C., who was born January 15, 1875, and is the wife of William Neyman, a farmer and market-gardener of East Vincent; Joseph, who died in infancy; Anna May E., who was born January 10, 1878; Maud L., who died in childhood; and Leah, who died in infancy.

EDWARD H. TRIMBLE. The Trimble family, of which Edward H. Trimble, a prosperous agriculturist of Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative member, claim for their pioneer ancestor James Trimble, who was born in Ireland on Midsummer Eve, June 24, 1707, and subsequently emigrated to America, arriving in Philadelphia in August, 1719. Later he became one of the prominent citizens of West Bradford, Chester county, where he reared a family of seven children who were born to him by his marriage to Mary Palmer, a daughter of John and Martha Palmer, of Concord, Pennsylvania. The death of James Trimble occurred January 21, 1792, and his remains were interred in the Friends' graveyard at Marshallton.

James Trimble, second son of James and Mary (Palmer) Trimble, was born February 28, 1739, and his entire life was spent on the old homestead at Trimble's Mills, now called Trimbleville, in West Bradford, Chester county. He married Mary Sellers, a daughter of Samuel and Jane Sellers, and their children were: James, Mary, Samuel, Jacob, Isaac, Lydia, John, Phoebe and Joseph Trimble. The marriage of James and Mary Trimble was celebrated January 1, 1770. Mr. Trimble died September 16, 1819.

Isaac Trimble, fourth son of James and Mary Trimble, and grandfather of Edward H. Trimble, was born January 7, 1781, on the old homestead where, he continued to reside during his entire lifetime. On July 29, 1814, he married Anna Jefferis and their children were: 1. Mary married John Massey. 2. Charity Ann married John Speakman. 3. Lydia; married Eno

Edward H. Trimble & wife.

L. Pratt. 4. Phœbe H., wife of Joel Woodward. 5. Jacob. 6. John, married Anna Mary Matlack. 7. Elizabeth, wife of Edward Martin. 8. Anna, wife of Jonathan Speakman. 9. Isaac, who married Emma Hongler. Isaac Trimble, father of these children, died May 31, 1860.

Jacob Trimble, eldest son of Isaac and Anna Trimble, and father of Edward H. Trimble, was born May 5, 1824, reared on the old homestead and received his education in the country schools. He was a farmer by occupation and conducted his operations on an extensive scale in the township of Pocopson, Chester county. He married Celia Hicks and they were the parents of the following named children: 1. M. Helen, born August 17, 1850, was united in marriage January 28, 1875, to John M. Pierce, now deceased, and three children were born to them: Howard, deceased; Clarence, deceased, and Fred, deceased. 2. Anna F., born November 1, 1851. 3. Sarah J., born February 26, 1853; married October 2, 1879, Jesse Taylor, and their children are Paul Willard and Francis Taylor. 4. Francis H., born February 22, 1856, deceased. 5. Lydia P., born March 3, 1858, deceased. 6. Emma P., born February 19, 1859, wife of Hilborn D. Thatcher and mother of one child, Russell Thatcher. 7. Edward H., born March 6, 1861. 8. John F., born July 31, 1863.

Edward H. Trimble, seventh child of Jacob and Celia Trimble, was born in the old ancestral residence in Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 6, 1861. This house was erected in 1800 by Thomas Hickman, the former owner of the property, from whom it was purchased by Isaac Trimble, grandfather of Edward H. Trimble. The educational advantages which Edward H. Trimble enjoyed were obtained at the local schools, and at Marlborough and Unionville Academies. Shortly after attaining his majority he inherited a tract of land from his mother, where he has since conducted farming operations, making a specialty of dairy products and the raising of bees, obtaining from the latter named industry a large quantity of honey, for which there is always a great demand. Mr. Trimble has always taken a keen interest in all affairs of a public nature, and has used his influence to further those projects which have for their aim the advancement and well being of the community; at the present time (1903) he is serving in the capacity of school director.

Mr. Trimble married Mary M. Trimble, who was born in Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 22, 1868, reared in her native county and obtained her education in the local schools and the West Chester State Normal School; she is a daughter of John and Anna Mary (Matlack) Trimble. Their children were: Florence, born January 15, 1888; Carl, born February

1, 1891; Frederick, born December 8, 1892, and Roscoe Trimble, born May 7, 1898, died October 2, 1898.

DANIEL B. LATSHAW, a prosperous farmer and highly esteemed citizen of East Vincent township, Chester county, traces his descent on both sides from old families of the county, his paternal ancestors having been French, while his maternal progenitors were German. The family of the Latshaws originated in Alsace, France, and was founded in Pennsylvania at an early period. Abram Latshaw, a farmer of Boyertown, Berks county, where his son Daniel was born, moved during the boyhood of the latter to Chester county. Daniel Latshaw married Esther Hiestand, who belonged to a family of old settlers.

Daniel B. Latshaw, son of Daniel and Esther (Hiestand) Latshaw, was born February 18, 1830, in East Vincent township, on a farm adjoining the one which is now his home. All his life he has been engaged in agricultural pursuits, his energetic and well directed efforts being followed by a success which is self-evident and therefore beyond dispute. Prompted by a spirit of enterprise which is one of his most marked characteristics, he engaged in 1853 in the nursery business, having his grounds near Spring City. The undertaking proved successful, and for half a century Mr. Latshaw has been a nurseryman as well as a farmer. To the indispensable qualifications of scientific knowledge and practical skill he adds a rare degree of executive ability. This peculiarly fortunate combination of characteristics, while insuring financial success, has also gained for him a reputation, which joined to his wealth of experience causes him to be regarded as an authority in all matters pertaining to both branches of his calling. Great as is Mr. Latshaw's devotion to his duties as an agriculturist, it has ever rendered him unmindful of his obligations as a citizen. Notwithstanding the fact that he is the owner of two exceptionally fine farms, upon one of which he resides, and to the care and management of which he gives his closest attention, he yet finds time for the exercise of his abilities as a financier, and that, too, in a field of great importance, holding as he does the position of vice-president in the Spring City National Bank. His interest in local affairs is active and unceasing, and his readiness to lend his aid to any enterprise which in his judgment tends to promote the welfare of the community, is a trait much appreciated by his townsmen, who have several times elected him to office. His manner of discharging the duties of the various positions in which he has been placed has more than justified his neighbors in the confidence which they have reposed in him. In the sphere of poiities he has always supported the men and measures advocated and upheld by the Republican party.

Mr. Latshaw married, September 3, 1853, Sarah G., daughter of Henry and Judith (Gerhorst) Swartz, the former a merchant of Butler county, Pennsylvania. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Latshaw: Mary L., who is the wife of Harry Clevestine, of West Vincent; Esther, who married John D. Hiestand, a farmer of East Vincent; Ada E., who is the wife of John B. Reiff, the proprietor of a greenhouse in Spring City; Horace D., who is a farmer on the homestead, and married Mary, daughter of Davis Knaur; and Bertha, who is the wife of Charles Millard, a farmer. On October 28, 1902, Mr. Latshaw and his children sustained an irreparable loss in the death of the wife and mother, who passed away lamented not only by her immediate family, but by a large circle of relatives and also by the many friends to whom her estimable qualities had greatly endeared her.

GEORGE WASHINGTON QUAY, an energetic and prosperous farmer of West Pikeland township, Chester county, is a grandson of William Quay, who was born October 26, 1771, and his wife Sarah Quay, who was born January 9, 1777, bore him the following named children: Mary, Samuel, Hannah, Thomas, mentioned at length hereinafter, Singleton, John J., Phœbe, Ruth, Sarah, William and Ellen (twins), and David. The only one of these children now living is Ellen, who has reached the age of eighty-six years. The male members of the family were farmers and masons, most of the stone buildings in West Pikeland having been built by them.

Thomas Quay, son of William and Sarah Quay, was born March 20, 1806, and was all his life engaged in the labors of a farmer and drover. Although a man of good natural abilities and one who enjoyed the esteem and confidence of his neighbors he could never be persuaded to enter politics, preferring to limit the sphere of his endeavors to the strict discharge of his duties as an agriculturist, and of his social obligations as a neighbor. He married Rebecca, a daughter of Abraham and Margaret Shoffner, the former a farmer of West Pikeland. Mr. and Mrs. Quay were the parents of the following children: Mary E., Rees John, William Harrison, Abraham, Fetters, Benjamin Franklin, John Fetters, Levi Fetters, George Washington, mentioned at length hereinafter, Joseph Thomas, James Elwood, Lydia Ann and Jesse Hipple.

George Washington Quay, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Shoffner) Quay, was born July 26, 1852, in East Whiteland township, and received his education in the public schools of Spring Mills. He served an apprenticeship to the trade of a blacksmith, but did not follow it as a means of livelihood, preferring to engage in farming. In this chosen calling, his perseverance and energy were such that he is now the owner of an estate in West Pikeland known as the "Isaiah March place." This farm which consists of forty-eight acres, testifies by its high state of cultivation to the ability and industry of its possessor. Mr. Quay has attached to his farm a flourishing dairy, of which he makes a specialty, conducting it with the same thoroughness and success which mark his care of the acres under his control. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party. He and his family are members of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Quay married Rebecca, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Shoffner) Quay, and the following children were born to them: Carrie K., who resides at home; Ella E., who is deceased; Orpha R., who is also deceased; Sarah Ann, who is the wife of B. Frank Gunday, and has one child, Orpha I.; Nellie L., who is deceased; Walter L., who is at home on the farm; David Herbert, who is deceased; Laura I., who resides at home; Olive M., who is also at home; and Lottie E., who is deceased. Mr. Quay and his surviving children recently sustained a severe bereavement in the death of the wife and mother, who passed away December 26, 1902, at the age of fifty-four years and five months, her loss being sincerely mourned not by her immediate family alone, but by a large circle of relatives and friends.

JOHN L. SMITH, a leading man of affairs of Chester Springs, Pennsylvania, is a son of Jacob Smith, a native of Juniata county, in that state. Mr. Smith, who was a farmer, in connection with his agricultural labors, connected the business of a tanner, achieving success in both spheres of endeavor. He was remarkable for his public spirit, and, in April, 1866, took charge of the Macallisterville School for Soldiers' Orphans, where he remained many years. He was at one time one of the associate judges of the county. He married Margaret Lover, who was born in Perry county, Pennsylvania.

John L. Smith, son of Jacob and Margaret (Lover) Smith, was born December 25, 1850, in Greenwood township, Perry county, and received his primary education in the common schools, afterward attending the Macallisterville (Juniata county) Academy. When but fifteen years of age he became the manager of his father's large farm, and filled this responsible position for five years. At the age of twenty he went on June 2, 1870, to Chester Springs, where he has since lived. Here for fifteen years he held a position on the administrative force of the Institution for Soldiers' Orphans, and then, desiring to enter commercial life, purchased an interest in a lumber and feed business. At the end of three years, owing to a change of plans, he disposed of his interest and withdrew from the connection. In the spring of 1893 he was appointed an agent of the Chester County Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and also became one of the directors of the organization. Mr. Smith, in the course of his business career has charge of a number of estates of non-residents and business affairs of others who are his neighbors. He holds the office of director of the poor of the county, and is assiduous in fulfilling all the obligations of a citizen. His home is conceded to be one of the most finely situated and attractive in the township of West Pikeland.

Mr. Smith married, February 24, 1876, Alice A., born November 18, 1855, daughter of Perry O. and Caroline (Shock) Catherman, the former a farmer of Evandale, Juniata county. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are the parents of two daughters: Mabel E., who was born December 10, 1877, graduated from the West Chester Normal School, and is the wife of John H. Voorhees, a merchant of Kennett Square; and Mary A., who was born June 17, 1883, is also a graduate of the West Chester Normal School, and is now engaged in teaching. Mr. Smith is of an eminently domestic and social nature, and while devoted to his family and home, and delighting in the society of their large circle of friends, his social sympathies find still further expression in Masonic affiliations and in a membership which he holds in the Patriotic Sons of America.

WILLIAM LATTA DAVIS, a veteran farmer and highly respected citizen of Charlestown, Chester county, is a representative of a family of Welsh origin, which was founded in Pennsylvania at a very early period in the history of the province.

John S. Davis, son of Llewellyn and Rebecca (Shannon) Davis, was born December 12, 1784, in Charlestown, and all his life followed the calling of a farmer. In 1819 he purchased of his uncle, Isaac Davis, a farm of one hundred and two acres, and moved thither with his family. This property is still in the possession of his descendants. Mr. Davis was a man greatly respected by his neighbors, who elected him to the office of supervisor. He was identified with the Democratic party. In the state militia, of which he was a member, he rose to the rank of major and later to that of colonel. He married Mary Pawling, and they were the parents of the following named children: Benjamin, died at seventy-four years of age; Llwlynn, born in 1814, died in 1858; John A., born October 26, 1822, died August 9, 1848; Jesse, born April 13, 1829, died August 5, 1887. His death occurred at an advanced age.

William Latta Davis, son of John S. and Mary (Pawling) Davis, was born August 7, 1816, in Charlestown, where he has passed his entire life in the invigorating labors and simple enjoyments of a successful and energetic farmer. Although passed amid rural scenes, his life has been an active and busy one. His interest in local affairs has always been great, and his penetration, soundness of judgment and sterling character have made him a man of influence in the community. In politics he has always adhered to the principles and measures promulgated by the Democratic party.

Mr. Davis married, January 1, 1853, Mary Ann, born October 28, 1827, a daughter of John and Hannah (Roberts) Rapp, of Charlestown, who were the parents of the following children: David, born February 28, 1825, died January 21, 1872; Mary A., born October 28, 1827, wife of William Latta Davis; Barnett Robert, born January 19, 1829; and Stephen H., born January 4, 1832, died January 21, 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Davis have no children. The grandfather of Mrs. Davis, who bequeathed a homestead to his descendants, lived at Valley Forge at the time of the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Davis' brother, Barnett Robert Rapp, who resides in West Chester, served in the Union army during the Civil war. Mr. Davis resides on the homestead, enjoying in the evening of his days the fruits of a long and useful life. His ancestral dwelling is rich in historical associations. His grand uncle, Isaac Davis, mentioned above, built on the farm before the Revolutionary war, a barn which is still standing. This barn was at one time during the war the headquarters of General Washington, the patriot army being encamped on the farm.

W. HENRY WELLS, an experienced farmer and respected citizen of Charlestown township, Chester county, belongs to a family of Welsh extraction. His grandfather was Isaac Wells, a farmer, whose industrious application to the duties of his calling did not prevent him from participating actively in the affairs of the township in which he resided, and in which he was a man of some influence.

William S. Wells, son of Isaac Wells, was a farmer who combined with his agricultural labors the trade of a carpenter. Like his father, he was active in local affairs, and for several years was supervisor of Tredyffrin. Politically he was a Republican. He married Julia, daughter of Josiah Burnett. Mr. Wells possessed the cordial respect of his townsmen as an honorable man and a conscientious citizen.

W. Henry Wells, son of William S. and Julia (Burnett) Wells, was born October 24, 1843, in Bradford, Chester county, and is now the owner of one of the finest farms in the township in which he resides. This estate, which consists of seventy-five acres, gives evidence, both in the methods of its cultivation and in its general management, of the fact that its owner stands in the front rank of the farmers of the county. Mr. Wells, by his active interest in public affairs, and his efforts to advance whatever in his judgment will promote the welfare of the community, has fully earned the right to the title of a public-spirited citizen. His townsmen have testified to their confidence in him by electing him to the offices of supervisor and school director. His political principles are those of the Republican party. He and all of his family, excepting two sons, are members of the Baptist church.

Mr. Wells married Louisa Supplee, and they are the parents of the following children, all of whom attended the schools of Phoenixville: Leila S., who was born October 24, 1870, and resides at home; William E., who was born April 7, 1872, and is a farmer; Harry Peter, who was born May 14, 1875, is a clerk in the office of the Phoenix Iron Company, and married Lura Prizer, of Phoenixville; Howard Kennedy, who was born February 9, 1879, graduated from the Pottstown Business College, and is a farmer on the homestead; and Clarence Garfield, who was born February 16, 1884, and is employed as a clerk in a store in Phoenixville.

Mr. Wells belongs on the paternal side to a family of French origin. She is a great-granddaughter of Hans Supplee, who built the house which is still standing on the family homestead. During the month of October, 1777, the army of Washington was twice encamped on this land, the house being the headquarters of the general himself. September 12, 1777, Hans Supplee enlisted as a private soldier in the Continental army, serving in a Philadelphia company. He was among those who were encamped the following winter at Valley Forge, where he died, January 24, 1778, falling a victim to the many hardships and privations of that terrible season. He is interred in Bethel cemetery, in ground given by himself, lying five miles north of Norristown. The descendants of Hans Supplee have contributed funds and caused a monument to be erected in his memory at Bethel cemetery, Montgomery county, which was unveiled on Saturday, November 21, 1903. During the period of Hans Supplee's military service his son Peter was also a soldier in the Continental army. Peter Supplee was the father of a son, also named Peter, who married Elizabeth Kennedy, a descendant of Irish ancestry. Mr. and Mrs. Supplee were the parents of a daughter: Louisa, who was born April 20, 1847, and became the wife of W. Henry Wells, as mentioned above. The old homestead of the Supplees, which is invested, year by year, with increasing interest, by reason of its historic association, is situated in Schuylkill.

MARSHALL B. HICKMAN, prominently identified with the agricultural interests of Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred January 22, 1870, is a son of William B. and Ellen B. (Carpenter) Hickman, and grandson of Thomas and Jane Hickman. William Hickman was born February 14, 1825, and by his marriage to Ellen Carpenter, the following named children were born: 1. Mary. 2. Annie, wife of George Worst, and they are the parents of two children, namely, Caroline and Kelso Worst. 3. Joseph, who was united in marriage to Caroline Lamborn. 4. William. 5. Louisa, wife of Charles G. Gawthrop, and their children are: Harold, Mary and James Gawthrop, deceased. 6. Marshall. 7. Jane, wife of Edwin J. Chalfant, and their children are: Helen and Katherine Chalfant.

Marshall Hickman, youngest son of William and Ellen Hickman, was reared and acquired his preliminary education in the township of Pocopson, and the instruction he received there was supplemented by a complete course of study at the West Chester State Normal School. Since attaining young manhood he has given his entire attention to the management of his farm, which is located in his native township, making a specialty of dairy products. His land is of good quality and therefore highly productive, and he derives a goodly income from the fruits of his industry, capable management and business ability. Politically Mr. Hickman is a staunch Republican, giving an active and earnest support to his party on all important questions, but preferring to devote his time to business pursuits in preference to politics.

On February 23, 1898, Mr. Hickman married Florence H. Parker, who was born at Parkersville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and was reared there and educated at West Chester, a daughter of James G. and Sallie P. (Hoskins) Parker. Their children are: James P., born April 16, 1899, and William B., born October 22, 1901.

James G. Parker, father of Mrs. Hickman, was born in Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 12, 1847, and is a descendant of English lineage, the name being found at an early period in the civil and religious records of the county. He was a son of Thomas W. and Rachel (Gawthrop) Parker, and after engaging in farming and general business pursuits for many years, was appointed deputy sheriff on January 1, 1837, but three years later assumed charge of the office of sheriff. He married Sallie P. Hoskins, daughter of Dr. John R. Hoskins, and their children are: Ella T., Florence H., wife of Marshall Hickman; Hannah M. and Ethel S. Parker.

WILLIAM H. SNYDER, a successful farmer and public-spirited citizen of Charlestown, Chester county, is a descendant of ancestors who were among the earliest settlers of that region, and who, as their name indicates, came originally from Germany.

Joseph Snyder, who was a native of Charlestown township, was a farmer, and a man who stood high in the esteem of his neighbors, holding for many years the offices of supervisor and school director. In politics he was first a Whig, and later a Republican. He married Elizabeth Jacobs, who was a native of the same township, and the following children were born to them: Caroline, who married John Pierce, of Philadelphia; J. Wesley, who is a resident of Charlestown; Hannah, who is the wife of William Rapp, of Charlestown; Isaiah J., who is deceased; William H., mentioned at length hereinafter; Stephen O., who is president of a mining company at Salt Lake City; Joseph W., who lives in West Pikeland; Benjamin J., who is a resident of Colorado; and Mary, who is the wife of Hosea Moses of West Pikeland. Mr. Snyder, the father of the family, died November 16, 1876, and his wife, by a remarkable coincidence, expired exactly twenty years later, her death occurring November 16, 1896.

William H. Snyder, son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Jacobs) Snyder, was born August 28, 1846, on the homestead, in Charlestown township, and received his education in the common schools. From early manhood he has been engaged in farming, and is also the proprietor of a market stall situated on the corner of Nineteenth and Market streets, Philadelphia. His well-directed efforts in both these lines of endeavor have been attended with gratifying results. From a very early period of life he has taken a keen interest in local affairs, and since reaching manhood has been almost constantly in office. Among the positions which he has held are those of school director and assessor. He has been at different times identified with the Republicans, and also with the Prohibitionists.

Mr. Snyder married, January 28, 1872, Victorine, daughter of Daniel and Martha (Talley) Himes, of West Pikeland. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder were the parents of one daughter: Carrie Alfie, who was born February 2, 1873, and is the wife of Richard C. Loos, an architect of Philadelphia. After the death of his wife, Mr. Snyder married, October 19, 1896, Hettie E., daughter of John Z. and Rebecca (Speakman) Wilson, the former a native of New Garden, and the latter of London Grove. Three sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, two of whom are deceased. The surviving member of the family, Joseph, was born August 12, 1900, and it is hoped he will inherit the estimable traits of the grandfather whose name he bears, and whose worth has been repeated in the character of his son.

WILLIAM RAPP, for many years a resident of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and an intelligent, enterprising, progressive and popular citizen, was born December 29, 1844, in Tredyffrin township, a son of Benjamin and Eliza (Wisner) Rapp, and grandson of Barnet Rapp, who was born near Valley Forge, Schuylkill township, Pennsylvania, March 27, 1761, a descendant of a German ancestry. Barnet Rapp followed his trade of blacksmith in connection with the work upon his farm, and in both enterprises achieved great financial success. He married and reared a family of seven children, namely: Barnet, John, Joseph, Hannah Bane, Esther, Rachel Boyer and Benjamin Rapp.

Benjamin Rapp, father of William Rapp, was born in Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 16, 1808. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood and subsequently learned the trade of saddler and harness maker, to which occupations he gave his unremitting attention during his entire business career. He was united in marriage to Eliza Wisner, who was born August 14, 1812, a daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Olwine) Wisner, and they were the parents of the following named children: Sarah, born December 29, 1830, died in childhood; Lewis M., born October 26, 1838, died in childhood; Henry M., born January 17, 1841, died August 15, 1841; Esther A., born June 19, 1842, died January 15, 1844; William, born December 29, 1844; Mary E., born January 24, 1847, died September 10, 1849; Joseph W., born March 30, 1849, is engaged in mercantile pursuits at West Pikeland, Pennsylvania; and Hannah E., born July 18, 1852, died October 25, 1857. Mr. Rapp was an old line Whig in politics until the formation of the Republican party, after which he gave his loyal support to that body. In religious matters both he and his wife held membership in the Pikeland Reformed church. Mr. Rapp died at his home in Charlestown township, Chester county, September 2, 1896, his wife having passed away February 25, 1885. Mr. Wisner, father of Mrs. Rapp, was born May 27, 1761, was a successful farmer and owned the property on which William Rapp now resides; he also took an active part in the Revolutionary war and was present at the Paoli massacre, escaping from the scene of destruction in the darkness of the night.

William Rapp, third son of Benjamin and Eliza Rapp, was reared to manhood on his father's farm and acquired a practical education at the common schools of Hopewell. Being inured to the labors of farm life, he chose that occupation for his life work and his earnest and persistent efforts have met with a large degree of success. He is a Republican in politics and has served his township in the capacity of supervisor for six years, auditor for three years, and school director for one year.

On September 4, 1877, occurred the marriage of William Rapp and Hannah Snyder, who was born August 23, 1842, a daughter of Joseph Snyder, a prominent resident of Charlestown township, Chester county. They are the parents of one son, Benjamin Rapp, born June 18, 1878, who is a graduate of the public school, and is now serving as engineer at the "Graphic" in West Pikeland, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The family are consistent members of St. Peter's Reformed church of Pikeland, taking an active and leading part in the work of the various societies connected with it.

LEVI SHOFFNER, of Charlestown township, Chester county, a citizen of honorable repute and assured standing, is descended from old settlers of the county, being of German extraction on the paternal side, while through his mother, he comes of French and Scotch ancestry. About seventy years ago James Shoffner, a farmer of Pikeland township, married Elizabeth Dellinger, and the following children were born to them: Mary Jane, who died in childhood; Ann Levina, who became the wife of Alban Pennypacker; Levi, mentioned at length hereinafter, and William, who died at the age of eleven years.

Levi Shoffner, son of James and Elizabeth (Dellinger) Shoffner, was born April 24, 1837, in Pikeland township, where he was educated in the common schools. He learned the carpenter's trade, but had not followed it long as a means of livelihood when the country was agitated by the outbreak of the Civil war. At the call to arms Mr. Shoffner, like many others at that crisis in our national history, left the work shop for the camp. He enlisted August 27, 1862, in Company I, Sixty-eighth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, known as the "Scotch Legions." During the period of his military service Mr. Shoffner participated in the following battles: Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862; Chancellorsville, May 14, 1863; Gettysburg, July 1-3, 1863; Wapping Heights, August 21, 1863; Auburn, October 14, 1863; Kellysford, November 7, 1863; Locust Grove, November 27, 1863; Mill Run, November 28, 1863; and Gwynedd Station. He was detailed as a guard at General Meade's headquarters, was among those who went in pursuit of Lee's army, and was present at Appomattox, April 9, 1865. He was honorably discharged at Hart's Island, New York, June 9, 1865. Mr. Shoffner draws a pension by reason of the fact that at the battle of Chancellorsville his hearing was partially destroyed by the bursting of a shell, and he also received an injury in the right side.

After his return to civil life Mr. Shoffner resumed the practice of his trade, which he followed very successfully for many years, having erected a large number of buildings in the township. Some time since he retired from business and became the owner of the farm which is now his home. This estate which is known as the "old Calligan place" is maintained in fine condition; and in this rural abode Mr. Shoffner, as the result of well-earned financial success, leads the life of an independent farmer. He is active in the discharge of the duties of citizenship, and has been elected to various township offices, among them that of school director. Politically he is an earnest Democrat.

Mr. Shoffner married, August 30, 1862, Margaret A., daughter of Isaac and Catherine (Smith) McAfee, who both trace their descent from old settlers of the county. Mr. and Mrs. McAfee were residents of West Vincent, the former being a farmer. Their daughter, Margaret A., was born August 13, 1840. Mr. and Mrs. Shoffner are the parents of the following children, all the sons being carpenters at Norristown: John E.; Kate, who married Moses Quay, a carpenter in Pikeland; Lizzie, who is the wife of William Snyder, of Chester county; Hannah, who resides at home; Isaac, lives at Norristown, Montgomery county; Emma, who married Hosea McBride, a blacksmith of Pikeland; and William, also a resident of Norristown.

WILLIAM SNYDER, whose name is familiar to the residents of Charlestown, Chester county, as that of a worthy farmer and citizen, whose neighbors have many times made him the incumbent of township offices, belongs to a family of German extraction which has been long resident in the township. His grandfather, John Snyder, moved thither from East Pikeland, in 1800, and settled on a farm which was for a long period in the possession of his descendants. Here, as in his former place of abode, he devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. His wife, Susannah Snyder, was descended from German ancestors, who were among the early settlers of that part of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder were the parents of a numerous family, the members of which became good and useful citizens. The father and mother who lived to old age, are buried in the old Pikeland church cemetery.

John Snyder, son of John and Susannah Snyder, was a farmer as his father had been before him, and was to the close of his life actively engaged in the duties of his calling, and in participation in local affairs. He was much respected by his neighbors, and held for many years the office of supervisor. He married Hannah, daughter of John Funderwhite, whose family, of German origin, had been settled in the county since an early period. The death of Mr. Snyder occurred in 1861, and that of his wife in 1872.

William Snyder, son of John and Hannah (Funderwhite) Snyder, was born January 22, 1832, on the homestead, and received his early education in the common schools, afterward attending the Fremont Academy, at East Nantmeal. For several years after completing his education, he taught school and then engaged in farming. In 1858 he purchased of his father the farm which is now his home, and which adjoins the homestead. Here for well-nigh half a century he has followed agricultural pursuits, in which he has met with marked success, engaging largely in marketing. Like his father he has always been active in the sphere of politics, his affiliations being with the Republican party. The high regard in which he is held and also the popularity which he enjoys, may be inferred from the number of offices with which he has been intrusted. He has served as school director and assessor, was county auditor for one term, and is now serving his fifth term as justice of the peace. At one time he held no fewer than four offices at once. During the Civil war he was among those drafted for military service, but feeling that duty required him to remain at home, obtained a substitute. For fifty years he has been identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a member of the Reformed church.

Mr. Snyder married, December 26, 1857, Elizabeth Jones, and the issue of this union was the following children: Martha, who was born March 20, 1859, and is the widow of James Reese; Thomas W., who was born August 13, 1861, and is employed by the Phoenixville Electric Light Company; John S., who was born October 31, 1864, and died June 4, 1893; Susan G., who was born December 8, 1868; Henry, who was born December 25, 1871, and is in the service of the Phoenixville Electric Light Company; S. Jones, who was born March 21, 1877, and is now deceased; and Ruth A., who was born in June, 1879, and died in infancy. Mrs. Snyder, the mother of this family, died July 19, 1897, and on December 27, 1900, Mr. Snyder married Lizzie M., daughter of Levi and Margaret (McAfee) Schoffner, of Charlestown. Mrs. Snyder is a member of the Lutheran church.

HON. WILLIAM PRESTON SNYDER, M. D., of Spring City, Chester county, Pennsylvania, an accomplished physician, and favorably known throughout the state for his valuable public services, is a native of the county named, and comes of an old and honored family.

His ancestors were natives of Germany, and his American progenitor settled prior to the Revolutionary war in Chester county. His grandfather, John Snyder, was for many years a resident of that county, and died in East Vincent township. He was a man of broad intelligence and strong traits of character. He was a teacher in his early life, and he afterward engaged in farming, which occupied his attention during the remainder of his life. He was a Democrat in politics.

George Snyder, son of John Snyder, was born April 21, 1821, in East Pikeland township, where he was reared and educated in the common schools. He learned the trade of stone mason, and worked for some years in that calling. He then engaged in farming, and subsequently removed to Spring City, where he engaged in brickmaking, an industry which he followed with great success during the remainder of his life. He was an exemplary member of the Reformed church. In politics he was a Whig until the dissolution of that party, and he was one of the original Republicans who voted for their first presidential candidate, John C. Fremont, in 1856. His wife was Maria Shenkel, a daughter of Samuel Shenkel, who was also of German lineage, born in 1790, in North Coventry township, and died in East Vincent township, March 10, 1858, at the advanced age of sixty-eight years.

William Preston Snyder, son of George and Maria (Shenkel) Snyder, was born in East Vincent township, Chester county, October 7, 1851, and was reared on the paternal farm. He acquired a liberal education, attending in turn the common schools, the Millersville State Normal school, and Ursineus College, at Collegeville, Montgomery county. He was a teacher in the common schools for one year after completing his education, and he then entered upon his professional studies. After a preliminary course of reading under the office tutorship of Dr. F. W. Heckel, of East Vincent township, he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated March 13, 1873, shortly after attaining his majority. He at once began practice in Spring City, and continued it with abundant success for thirteen years and until 1886. In February of that year he was appointed medical examiner for the Schuylkill district of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and which he occupied until December, 1887, when he resigned to enter upon the duties of prothonotary of Chester county, to which position he had been elected in the November previous. He acquitted himself in his new station with a high degree of ability, and meantime so gained the regard of the people that before the expiration of his official term he received from the Republican party a nomination for member of the Pennsylvania house of representatives, and was elected by a highly complimentary majority, nearly 3,000. His services in the legislature were highly useful and entirely creditable to himself, and included arduous labor upon various important positions. From 1883 to 1885 he was postmaster of Spring City. He has always been active in advancing the public interests of his village and county, aiding liberally with his personal effort and means in the promotion of the commercial, educational and other material concerns.

Dr. Snyder has always been associated with the Republican party, and has ever been prominent and useful in its councils. He was chairman of the Republican county committee in 1890, and resigned that position on the day of his nomination for the legislature, and was a delegate in the Republican state convention of 1878 which nominated General Hoyt for the gubernatorial office and of that of 1882 which named General Beaver for the same high position. He is a prominent member of the Masonic order, affiliated with Spring City Lodge, No. 553, F. & A. M.; Phoenix Chapter, No. 198, R. A. M., and Jerusalem Commandery, No. 15, Knights Templar, of Phoenixville.

Mr. Snyder married, September 5, 1876, Miss Elizabeth Fridy, daughter of John Fridy, of Lancaster county, and of this marriage was born a son, Thomas B., January 16, 1882.

THOMAS MORGAN ALDRED. One of the highly cultivated and therefore productive farms of Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the property of Thomas M. Aldred, a recognized leader among the agriculturists of that section of the state, who was born in Caln township on March 8, 1858.

Thomas J. Aldred (grandfather) was at one time engaged in mercantile pursuits in the town of Wilmington, Delaware, and being a man of honorable principles wielded a powerful influence for good in the community in which he resided. By his marriage he became the father of the following named children: Sarah, who became the wife of George W. Lybrand, both of whom are now deceased; William R., who served in the army during the Civil war, and during his term of enlistment died from exposure to the heat; John F., mentioned at length hereinafter; Lydia, unmarried, living at the present time (1903); Edward, a minister of the Gospel for a number of years, now living in the city of Philadelphia; Joseph, deceased, who was a carriage trimmer by trade, and followed this occupation in Wilmington, Delaware; Thomas Cooper, who also served in the army, was wounded near Washington by a sharpshooter, and now resides in Philadelphia; Hannah; Mary, wife of DeWitt Clinton Scott, and George W., a resident of Philadelphia. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Aldred (grandfather) is worthy of note, not only as having been a useful and respected citizen, but as one who gave three of his six sons to the service of their country in its hour of need.

John F. Aldred (father) was a man who stood high in the esteem of his fellow citizens, by whom he was elected to various minor offices of the township, among them those of supervisor and school director. He was an active participant in the Civil war, enlisting twice in different Pennsylvania regiments. He was a zealous church worker, served for a number of years as superintendent of a Sunday-school in Downingtown, and was class leader, exhorter and steward of the Grove Methodist Episcopal church, of which he was one of the chief promoters and one of the most liberal contributors to the building fund. He married Sarah Jane Massey, of East Whiteland township, and their children are: Hannah, who is the wife of Benjamin Gray, a farmer living on the old homestead in East Caln township; Henry Clay, who is a farmer, is unmarried, and resides with his mother in West Chester; Thomas Morgan, mentioned hereinafter; Bertha L., unmarried, and resides at home, and Amy M., who is the wife of Frank F. Gray, a carpenter in West Chester. Mr. Aldred, the father of the family, died April 11, 1898, deeply mourned by his family and friends, and regretted by all who knew him.

Thomas M. Aldred, son of John F. and Sarah Jane Aldred, received his education in the public schools and high school of Downingtown. He decided without hesitation that his occupation in life should be that of a farmer, and until reaching the age of thirty years he assisted in the care and management of the homestead. He then settled on the farm which is now his home, and which testifies by its flourishing condition to the unwearied attention and scientific care which it receives from its owner. Mr. Aldred is one of the directors of the Pikeland Creamery. The regard in which he is held by his neighbors may be inferred from the fact that in East Caln township he filled for a number of years the offices of constable and assessor, and that he has served as auditor in Uwchlan township. Politically he is a Prohibitionist. He and all his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he holds the offices of trustee and steward. He is also a classleader, and at various times fills the pulpit as a local preacher.

Thomas Morgan Aldred

Dr. M. J. Brown

Mr. Aldred married Emma Kenny, a daughter of Alexander and Lydia Kenny, the former named a prosperous agriculturist of Charlestown township. No children have been born to this union.

WILLIAM BROWER, M. D., whose ability and skill in professional matters has gained for him an enviable reputation among the medical fraternity of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a resident of Spring City where he has engaged in active practice for more than thirty-five consecutive years. He is a son of Gilbert and Lydia (Urner) Brower, and was born in East Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 25, 1842.

The Brower family is possibly of Holland extraction, although the pass in possession of the family shows that Hubert Brower and his wife Ann, with three sons and two daughters, emigrated from Nenwild, in the Palatinate, May 4, 1726. Henry Brower, youngest son of Hubert Brower, born February 14, 1726, settled upon the banks of the river Schuylkill, in what is now East Coventry as early as 1742. He was twice married and seven children were the issue of these marriages. His eldest son, Abraham Brower, born April 1, 1745, died October 21, 1805, was a farmer by occupation and held membership in the Mennonite church; he married and reared a family of ten children. Henry Brower, son of Abraham Brower, was born September 29, 1785, married and reared a family of seven children, and his death occurred April 23, 1833.

Gilbert Brower (father), son of Henry Brower, was born on the old homestead in East Coventry township, February 5, 1815. During his early manhood he resided in Berks county, Pennsylvania, for a few years but subsequently returned to the neighborhood of his birthplace and followed the vocation of his forefathers, that of agriculture. Prior to the formation of the Republican party, Mr. Brower was an old line Whig in politics but during the early days of the slavery agitation and the latter years of his life strongly advocated the principles of the Abolitionist party. His religious convictions were in harmony with those of the Brethren's church. Mr. Brower married Lydia Urner, who was born December 20, 1818, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Grubb) Urner, and a descendant of Ulrich Urner, a member of the well known and noted Urner family of Canton Uri, in Switzerland. He was driven thence by religious persecution, settled in the province of Alsace, France, and about the year 1708 his three sons, John, Bishop Martin and Jacob came to this country and settled in Pennsylvania. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Brower—Harrison, who died February 15, 1877; William, mentioned at length hereinafter; Rev. Isaac U., born January 7, 1844, a minister of the German Baptist or Brethren church; Sallie, who died June 29, 1888; and Elizabeth, who died in early childhood. Gilbert Brower, father of these children, died December 18, 1890; his wife died December 28, 1881.

William Brower, second son of Gilbert and Lydia Brower, spent his early childhood upon his father's farm and his literary education was obtained at Oakdale and Freeland Seminaries, and the Millersville State Normal School, being a member of the senior class of that institution during the years 1862 and 1863. He began his business career as a school teacher, serving in that capacity for six terms, and in the spring of 1865 having decided to lead a professional life he pursued a course of medical reading with Dr. A. R. Savidge, of Parker Ford, after which he entered Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, from which institution he was graduated March 9, 1867. He thereupon established an office in Spring City, where in due course of time he built up a large and lucrative practice which he has retained ever since. He has always taken an active part in school matters, has served continuously as a member of the school board for thirty-five years, most of that period as president or secretary, and his labors in behalf of the public school system have been crowned with success as the schools of Spring City are among the best in the county. He has served as a director of the National Bank of Spring City, president of the Spring City Foundry Association, president of the Oak Grove Cemetery Association, president of the Spring City Building and Loan Association, president of the board of health since its organization eight years ago, and has been frequently called upon to act as administrator and executor in the settlement of estates. Dr. Brower holds membership in the Brethren's church, and his political allegiance is given to the Prohibitionist party.

Dr. Brower was united in marriage, September 18, 1869, to Sallie M. Kendall, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Kendall, of Linfield, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. They are the parents of one child, Blanche Brower, born March 9, 1872.

ROBERT BYERS, a well known resident of East Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born March 21, 1846, in Thornbury township, in the same county, and is a son of Stephen and Ann (Ecte) Byers. The former was born in Philadelphia, and is now a resident of North Brandywine Summit, Delaware county.

Mr. Byers was brought up on a farm, obtaining his education in the public schools of the neighborhood and at the Sugartown high school. Until his marriage he remained on the farm with his brother, Samuel, and afterward resided for three years on the estate known as the "Theodosia Morgan farm," in Delaware county. After remaining for another three years in Birmingham township, Chester county, he removed to Darlington Corners, where he lived nine years. He then resided for a time in East Bradford and subsequently in Willistown. In 1902 he settled in East Goshen, where his estimable traits of character both as a man and a citizen have already won full recognition, as the fact that he holds the offices of school director and assessor testify. In politics he affiliates with the Democratic party.

Mr. Byers married, August 29, 1871, Anna E., daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Bullock) Megowen of Edgemont township, Delaware county. They are the parents of five children: Emma, who is the wife of William S. Scattergood and has two children, Beatrice and Sarah; Hannah M., Fannie R., Ross W., and Sarah M. Mr. Byers is regarded as a type of the enterprising citizen, whose restless energy, while accomplishing much in the present, constantly looks forward to greater achievements in the future, and is a potent factor in every phase of our national prosperity.

ISAAC DETWILER, one of the leading farmers of Charlestown township, is descended from German ancestry. Jacob Detwiler, who was a native of Montgomery county, purchased a large tract of land in Tredyffrin township, Chester county, where he devoted himself to farming during the remainder of his life. He married Elizabeth Hunsickes, and they were the parents of the following children: Henry, mentioned at length hereinafter, Isaac, Elizabeth, Mary, and Sarah. Mr. and Mrs. Detwiler were members of the Mennonite church.

Henry Detwiler, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Hunsickes) Detwiler, was born in 1790, in Tredyffrin township, and passed his boyhood on a farm, obtaining his education in the schools of that period. He settled on a farm in West Pikeland township, but afterward returned to the homestead, subsequently making his home in Cedar Hollow. In politics he was an old line Whig, but later became a Republican. His religious belief was that held by the Mennonite church, in which he served as a deacon. He married Catherine, born in East Vincent township, daughter of Abraham Latchaw, and the following children were born to them: Jacob, Catherine, Isaac, mentioned at length hereinafter, Elizabeth, Mary, Sarah, Susan, Henry, John, Abraham, David, and Magdalene. The death of Mr. Detwiler took place in 1873, when he had reached his eighty-third year.

Isaac Detwiler, son of Henry and Catherine (Latchaw) Detwiler, was born September 14, 1826, in West Pikeland, where he was brought up on a farm and educated in the common schools. Until reaching the age of thirty years he resided with his father, and then settled on a farm in Tredyffrin township. In 1866 he purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres in Charleston township. In addition to this estate on which he resides, he owns one hundred acres in the same township, and devotes himself assiduously to the care and cultivation of his land. He also takes an active interest in local affairs, and has been more than once called upon by his neighbors to serve them in positions of trust, having filled the offices of school director and supervisor. He has been a director in the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank at Phoenixville since about 1888. Politically he is a Republican. He belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he serves both as trustee and steward.

Mr. Detwiler married, January 5, 1858, Mary A., daughter of Rudolph and Magdelene (East) Rife, of North Coventry township, Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Detwiler are the parents of five children: Henry, who died at eight years of age; Willie, who died at the age of four; Kate, who is the wife of S. W. Coffman, and has had two children, E. Foster and Della May, who died at the age of twenty-two months; Elwood, who married Olive M. Prizer, and has five children, Russell, Eva May, Isaac, Earl, and one who died in infancy; and Harvey, who married Agnes Wells, and has one child, Agnes Catherine Detwiler.

EDWARD WALTER. It is refreshing and ennobling to find, but a short remove from the busy marts of trade and from artificial life, such spots as there are in eastern Pennsylvania, where rural life still exists in its highest forms—where nature's full blessings are well dispensed, where the green earth sends its incense up, and where the human heart may find pleasure in the sight of the noblest animals, whose contentment would shame the restless heart of man. And, as a model of such a spot, one of the handsomest adornments of the far-famed Chester valley, is the beautiful and well appointed Eureka Stock Farm of Edward Walter, in West Goshen township, near West Chester, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Walter is a native of the county, born in Kennett Square, May 4, 1840, a son of Townsend Walter, an old and honored resident of Chester county. He acquired an excellent literary education in Wyer's Academy in West Chester, and entered upon the active duties of life in Lenape, Pocopson township, devoting his attention to the breeding and shipping of cattle. In 1871 he removed to Kennett Square, where he was similarly occupied for eight years, then removing to Westtown, where he followed the same pursuit. In these various changes he made constant advancement, increasing his means, and in 1886 he purchased the old Matlock homestead, in West Goshen township, which he has made famous as the Eureka Stock Farm.

Upon this handsome property, with its spacious expanse of rich meadow land, and containing commodious barns and sheds cleanly enough for human habitation, Mr. Walter has brought the breeding and raising of high-grade domestic animals to an unsurpassable degree of perfection. His magnificently bred Jersey cattle are known in all parts of the United States, and the writer of this narrative has seen their product proudly displayed in Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Missouri. Among the heads of the present herd is Othello Augerez Pogis, 50,978, whose sire and dam were Drummer Angelo Pogis, 25,150, and Augerez Fancy 3d, 38,227—a splendid animal, strong in St. Lambert blood, and others of Pedro and Combination strains.

The sheepfolds are of equal merit, as is attested by the fact that among the customers of Mr. Walter are those who have established herds of their own from breeding stock purchased from him nearly thirty years ago. Among his herds are the Lincoln sheep, imported by him from Lincolnshire, England, a strain universally known as the wool sheep of the world. Of long-wool breeds, they stand at the head, the product being superior to all long-wool breeds in fineness and weight of fleece, hardness and vitality, clipping sixteen pounds each on an average, and in some instances, as much as twenty to twenty-three pounds. The imported bucks at the head of the flock—Bourne, General, Colonel, Wilton, Royal, Pat and Abe—are unsurpassable animals, with weight of two hundred and eighty to three hundred and fifty pounds each. Animals from these flocks have taken the first premium over all other long-wool breeds at the Chester County Fair ever since Mr. Walter first exhibited them, and have also taken first premium at the Pennsylvania and other state fairs. Of Hampshire-downs, Mr. Walter has a superb flock, and they have proven the finest mutton sheep he ever bred. The Shropshire flock is headed by the fine-breeding buck Highlander, 437, sired by a buck owned by the Earl of Strathmore, in Scotland, and winner of the second prize at the Highland Show in 1883, and whose dam was bred by Henry Lovett, the noted Shropshire breeder of England. Highlander had the high distinction of taking the first prize at both the New York and Pennsylvania State Fairs in 1885. The Shropshire ewes were sired by Prince of Montford, bred by Henry Lee & Son, in Shropshire, England; he was sired by Royal Persevere, the winner at the Carlisle Royal Agricultural Show in England, and which was sold for four hundred and twenty dollars. In addition to these flocks, Mr. Walter has a large flock of the old standard Southdowns.

Mr. Walter's hog-pens contain fine specimens of leading breeds. Various of his Chester Whites trace directly to the boar and sow exhibited at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876. One of the sows, since beginning to farrow, has never failed to produce two litters a year, and has farrowed eighty-five pigs, out of which she lost only six. The pigs from these pens have reached a weight of one hundred and fifty to two hundred pounds at six months old, and of three hundred and fifty to four hundred pounds at ten months old. The Poland-Chinas are bred from the best families in the country, as are the Berkshires. The various breeds are kept on different farms, ensuring absolute purity of blood.

As an adjunct to his sheep folds, Mr. Walter has long made a specialty of the breeding of Scotch Collie dogs, an animal of prime necessity to the sheep owner. Of this breed he has three pure bred registered stud dogs and sixteen sluts, most of which are registered.

The poultry yards of the Eureka Stock Farm are also objects of much interest. The turkey yards contain the Bronze and White Holland, both splendid birds. Of the duck family there are the Imperial Pekin and the Rouen, and of chickens the Light Brahmas, Dark Brahmas, American Rose Comb, Dominique, Plymouth Rocks and Brown Leghorns.

To such business as this Mr. Walter has devoted his attention throughout his life. His usefulness may be measured in some degree by the success which has attended him. It need scarcely be said that he has given himself to its conduct in a high spirit of conscientiousness that stands far above mere commercialism. He treats his animals as familiar friends, whom he would send out as useful servitors. Were a key to his character needed, it would be found in his paramount affection for his collie dogs—the most intelligent as well as the most companionable of their kind, "the rich man's guardian and the poor man's friend"—in whose interest (unthinking what praise it would bring him from an animal lover like himself), he devotes a page of his farm catalogue to bespeak for them humane treatment and careful training.

Possessed of a wide circle of friends in all parts of the country, Mr. Walter is held in unalloyed regard for his excellences of personal character and his unimpeachable integrity. He has long been a prominent member of the Patrons of Husbandry, affiliated with Brandywine Grange, No. 60. He has frequently sat as a delegate in the State Grange, and in that body, as well as in others of agriculturists and stock breeders, he has afforded largely to the aid of the important interests represented by them. He has at various times occupied nearly all the public township offices, in which he acquitted himself with the same ability and integrity which characterizes him in his personal conduct. Mr. Walter is a member of Kennett Square Lodge, No. 475, F. & A. M. His political affiliations are with the Republican party.

Mr. Walter was married, January 31, 1866, to Miss Ellen R. Baker, daughter of Stephen and Louisa (Sharp) Baker, a granddaughter of the late well known Judge Sharp. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter: 1. A. Louise, born February 23, 1867, who became the wife of A. Elwin Strode, and to whom were born: Ellen Elizabeth, born June 18, 1893; Phebe Louisa, June 1, 1901. 2. Horace T. Walter, born August 3, 1868, and who is associated in business with his father. 3. Anna M. Walter, born September 27, 1873. 4. Lenora B. Walter, born October 4, 1875. The mother, a devoted wife and mother, after giving careful rearing to the children named, died so recently as December 16, 1902, widely mourned in the neighborhood for her amiability of character and kindness of disposition.

WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON DAVIS, whose connection with the agricultural interests of East Bradford township, Chester county, has been both profitable and honorable, is a descendant of a family who have long been prominently identified with the farming interests of the county. Jesse Davis, great-grandfather of William H. H. Davis, was reared in this neighborhood and was about twelve years of age when the battle of Brandywine, one of the prominent battles of the Revolutionary war, was fought. His son, Samuel Davis, grandfather of William H. H. Davis, was united in marriage to Sarah Davies, and was one of the prominent and successful citizens of Chester county.

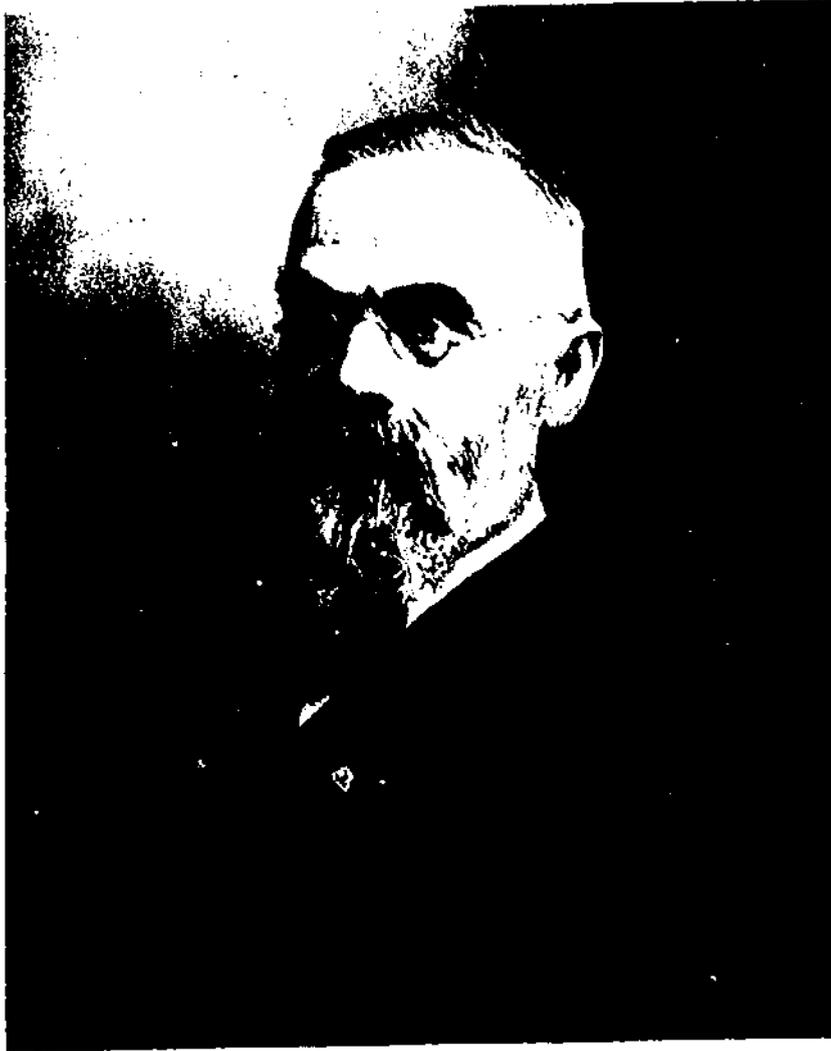

Benjamin Davis, father of William H. H. Davis, was born on the old Davis homestead in West Bradford township, February 20, 1822, and his educational advantages were obtained in the common schools of the vicinity. Subsequently he settled on the home farm and manifested great care and industry in the cultivation and improvement of his land. Mr. Davis always gave his support to the Democratic party, and was a faithful and consistent member of the Society of Friends; his wife was a member of the Presbyterian church. He was united in marriage to Rachel B. Rogers, daughter of William Rogers. Their children were: Samuel M., of West Chester; Sarah J., wife of William Hughes, of West Chester; William H. H.; Ruth A., wife of Ellwood Woodward, of Coatesville; Thomas J., of Downington; Frank, of Downington, and Matthew R., of Kennett Square.

William H. H. Davis was born in West Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 29, 1850, and his literary education was obtained in the public schools of his native town and in the Downington Academy. After completing his studies he learned the machinist's trade, serving nearly five years as an apprentice, and the following six years he worked as a journeyman machinist in various cities in the western section of the United States. He acted in the capacity of machinist for the Wilmington & Northern Railroad at Coatesville for three years, but seeing a more advantageous opening in the farming industry, in the spring of 1878 he purchased and settled on the old Jefferis farm in East Bradford township, which consists of one hundred and nine acres of finely improved land, and has ever since directed his energies with a certain degree of success in that line of work. In his entire business course he has ever been honorable and reliable, and his success is the well merited reward of his own efforts. In his political preferences Mr. Davis is a Democrat, his judgment sanctioning his principles and policies.

On September 2, 1874, Mr. Davis married Miss Ruth H. Young, daughter of Milton Young, of West Bradford township, and granddaughter of James Young. Their children are: Ruth, who received her education in the West Chester Normal School, and is now engaged as a teacher in Downington; Rachel B., educated at the Normal School at West Chester, and now employed in teaching school at West Goshen; Milton Y. and Benjamin M. Davis. Mr. Davis and his family are earnest and active members of the Presbyterian church of West Chester.

ELLWOOD M. WORRELL, proprietor of the Strode Mill in East Bradford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a leading business man, was born in Upper Providence, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, April 30, 1842, the son of Joseph W. Worrell, who was born in Upper Providence township in 1817, and followed the occupation of farming in that vicinity all his life. He was united in marriage to Miss Catherine S. Palmer, and nine children were born to them, namely: A. Palmer, deceased; Ellwood M., Mary Ann; Leodon, deceased; Rebecca, deceased;

Edward M. Worrell

Albert B.; John G.; Sarah P.; and Frank Worrell. The father of these children died in 1900, survived by his widow, who resides at the present time in Media, Pennsylvania. Mr. Worrell was a son of Joseph W. Worrell.

Elwood M. Worrell's boyhood was spent in attending the village school and assisting his father in the work upon the home farm, where he resided until he reached his majority. He then went to Glen Mills, and began his business career by learning the milling business with his brother, A. Palmer Worrell, with whom he remained two and a half years. After the expiration of this period of time he went to Chicago, Illinois, but soon returning to his native state, he rented the Lewis Palmer Mill at Media, which he conducted for two and a half years. Disposing of this business, Mr. Worrell then purchased the Jesse Brook Mill property at Radnor, and after operating this for one year and three months he sold the plant to his father, and on May 14, 1893, purchased the Strode Mill in East Bradford township, which he has continued to operate up to the present time (1903). Mr. Worrell is a man of superior intelligence, keen discrimination and sound business acumen, and his success in the commercial field is the logical result of carefully applied industry and laudable ambitions. In his political affiliations he is a Republican, and has been an earnest advocate of all measures which have contributed to the general good and promoted the material and moral welfare of the community in which he resides.

On May 25, 1871, Mr. Worrell married Sarah J. Worrell, widow of his brother, A. Palmer Worrell, and daughter of James and Mary (Little) Dick. She had three children by her first marriage, Addie, wife of Frank B. Strode; Laura, wife of B. R. Shaner, and Palmer, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Worrell are the parents of three children, namely: Kate, wife of Edwin Rulon, of Camden county, New Jersey; Joseph W., associated with his father in business, and Ethel Worrell.

CHARLES WILSON ROBERTS, deceased, a veteran of the Civil war and for many years an important factor in the industrial and educational affairs of East Bradford, Pennsylvania, was born in East Goshen township, Chester county, in 1838. He was a descendant of Robert Roberts, who came to this country from Wales during the latter part of the seventeenth century, and was the father of two sons, Robert, and David, the latter named being the progenitor of the branch of the family to which Charles W. Roberts, belonged.

Robert Roberts, son of David Roberts, and grandfather of Charles W. Roberts, was born on the old Roberts estate in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. He married Sarah Pratt, daughter of Abraham and Sarah (Williamson) Pratt, and their children were: George W., who died young; Sarah, who married Curlis Hoopes, of West Goshen township, and Pratt Roberts.

Pratt Roberts, father of Charles W. Roberts, was born in East Goshen township, Chester county, in 1805, reared by his grandparents, Abraham and Sarah Pratt, and educated at a private school at Sugartown, Willistown township. Later he became one of the representative citizens of East Goshen, Chester county, where the greater part of his life was spent. Mr. Roberts was united in marriage in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1829, to Miss Ann Wilson, who was born in 1804, a daughter of Charles and Ruth (Taylor) Wilson, the former named having come to the United States from Ireland, where he was registered as an Irish Gentleman. Their children were: Henrietta, who died in early childhood; Josephine, died at an early age; Ada, who died in infancy; George W.; Charles Wilson Roberts, and George W., born in 1833, graduated from Yale College and at the breaking out of the Civil war was commissioned as colonel of the Forty-second Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but acted in the capacity of brigadier-general from the beginning, and his commission to that office was in transmission to him at the time he was killed at the battle of Stone River, in 1862.

Charles W. Roberts acquired his early education in the public schools of West Chester, and this was supplemented by a thorough course in the Delaware State College, from which institution he was graduated. During the progress of the Civil war he enlisted as lieutenant in Company A, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, shortly afterwards was promoted to the rank of captain and subsequently was assigned to duty as aide-de-camp, and he served in this capacity until his term of enlistment expired. After his return from the service of his country he settled on the old historic farm in East Bradford, and devoted his entire attention to agricultural pursuits and the importing of Holstein cattle. He was the owner of three large farms, and by his judicious and careful management was enabled to acquire a competence worthy of the labor that was bestowed upon them. Mr. Roberts was a prominent and influential citizen of West Chester, was a member of the Board of Trade, a trustee of the Pennsylvania State College, having taken an active part in the building of the institution; a trustee of the Delaware State College, and a trustee of the State Normal School at West Chester. He was prominently identified with the Masonic order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was an active member of the Patrons of Husbandry. He was also a loyal and consistent member of the Society of Friends, and did all in his power for the promotion of Christian principles among his fellow men.

In 1864 Mr. Roberts married Miss Mary E. Miller, a daughter of John and Hannah (Moore) Miller. She was born in Upper Providence, Delaware county, in 1843, and their children are: George Williamson, born in 1865, and Josephine, born in 1871, both of whom reside on the old homestead in Goshen township, Pennsylvania. Mr. Miller, father of Mrs. Roberts, was born in Upper Providence township, Delaware county, in October, 1799. Upon attaining young manhood he settled on a farm which had formerly been owned by his great-grandfather, and which has been in the possession of the family ever since. He was prominently identified with the political affairs of the town, and was an active member of the Society of Friends. In October, 1836, he married Hannah Moore, born in 1802, a daughter of William and Mary (Massey) Moore, of Springfield township. William Moore was the son of William and Mary Moore; William was the son of Philip Moore, and he in turn was the son of Charles Moore, the progenitor of the American branch of the family. Mr. Miller died in December, 1855, and his wife died December 23, 1890.

JOSEPH R. STRICKLAND. The marked business and executive ability of Joseph R. Strickland enables him to fill a responsible and important position in the commercial circles of the borough of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his bravery and loyalty enabled him to win fame and honor in the military history of our country. He was born in Lower Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 7, 1845, a son of John and Ann Sterritt (Rutherford) Strickland.

The progenitor of the American branch of the Strickland family was Joseph Strickland (grandfather), who was born in Wakefield township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, July 2, 1767. He was a farmer by occupation and was known as a man of excellent probity of character; he removed from his native county and settled in Londonderry township, Chester county, where he purchased in 1818 a tract of land consisting of thirty-six acres from the James Cochran estate, whereon he conducted extensive operations up to the time of his decease. He married Hannah Tomlinson, who was born in 1767, in Wakefield township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where her mother, Margaret Tomlinson, was for many years a prominent preacher among the Society of Friends. Their children were: 1. Joseph, born January 19, 1791, married Sarah Ortlip; 2. Amos, born September 23, 1793, married Margaret Cochran; 3. John, mentioned hereinafter; 4. William, born March 19, 1799, married for his first wife Maria Anderson and for his second wife Jane Wilson; 5. Phebe Van Sant, born September 9, 1801, became the wife of John Cochran; 6. Margaret C., born ———, became the wife of ——— Falls; 7. Hannah Tomlinson, born September 15, 1807, who became the wife of Joseph Smith Riale. Both Mr. and Mrs. Strickland lived in conformity to the customs of the Society of Friends. Their deaths occurred respectively October 5, 1826, and February 8, 1838, and their remains are interred at Faggs Manor, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

John Strickland (father) was born in Wakefield township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, September 10, 1796. He was educated in the schools of the neighborhood, and accompanied his parents on their removal to Londonderry township, Chester county, where he engaged in farming pursuits. After the death of his father he purchased the home farm and resided thereon until 1839, when he removed to Lower Oxford township, purchased a farm, and spent the remaining years of his life. He was energetic and successful in the management of his business affairs, and was esteemed by all who had the honor of his acquaintance. In January, 1822, he was united in marriage to Ann Sterritt Rutherford, a daughter of Robert and Hannah (Sterritt) Rutherford, and they were the parents of the following named children: 1. Hannah Elizabeth, born September 20, 1822, became the wife of William Dance; 2. Margaret Ann, born September 22, 1824, became the wife of Edward Barry; 3. John Rutherford, born January 3, 1827, married Sarah Emma Smith; 4. Phoebe, born July 27, 1829, became the wife of Joseph W. Wilson; 5. Sarah Maria, born July 25, 1831, became the wife of Thomas Johnson; 6. James, born July 23, 1833, married Mary Ann Smith; 7. Anna Hayes, born January 3, 1836, became the wife of Thomas Mahan; 8. David Hayes, born December 4, 1838, married for his first wife Letitia Patterson and for his second wife Emma Gunnison; 9. William Van Sant, born February 8, 1840, married Maria ———; 10. Joseph R., born May 8, 1842, died May 11, 1844; 11. Joseph R. (2), mentioned hereinafter. John Strickland, father of these children, died June 16, 1879, and his wife Ann S. Strickland, passed away July 25, 1850. The former was buried at Oxford, Chester county, and the latter at Faggs Manor, Pennsylvania.

Joseph R. Strickland attended the common schools of Lower Oxford township, Hopewell Academy, and in the class of 1862 completed his studies at Oxford Academy. When the United States was engaged in the Civil war and required the services of her loyal sons, Mr. Strickland, then a youth of seventeen years, enlisted in Company I, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, which was commanded by Captain Hinkson, of West Chester, Pennsylvania. The regiment participated in the battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville, and other engagements, and was mustered out of the government service in May, 1863. He re-enlisted in the Forty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and by meritorious and faithful conduct was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in a company of which his brother, William V. Strickland, was captain. The work of the regiment was mostly confined to garrison duty, and they were mustered out of service in 1864. In the fall of the same year he re-enlisted in the Eighty-eighth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served with them until Petersburg was taken, and while in the performance of his duties at that engagement was severely wounded. He was sent to Jarvis Hospital, Baltimore, in order to obtain the proper treatment and upon his recovery was detailed as clerk to the chief surgeon, in which capacity he served until the close of the war. For a number of years subsequent to his return from the war he engaged in a general merchandise business at Hayesville and in the borough of Oxford; later, he accepted a position as clerk in an extensive establishment in the city of Philadelphia, where he remained for a long period of time, and he is now conducting a successful market business in Oxford and Philadelphia. He is a thoroughgoing and practical man of affairs, and prompt and reliable in all his transactions. He has held the office of school director, served one term in the borough council, was secretary to the board of health for seven years, and at the present time (1903) is still secretary of the Oxford board of health. Politically he is a Democrat, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic, and Pennsylvania Council, No. 342, of the Royal Arcanum.

Mr. Strickland was married, October 16, 1866, to Margaret Ann Sloan, a daughter of Hugh and Margaret (McCoy) Sloan, of Washington county, Pennsylvania. The children are: 1. Mary Lorena, born at Hayesville, Chester county, now engaged in teaching school; 2. Harry Van Sant, born at Oxford, married Carrie B. Groff, and they are the parents of two children—Mildred Groff and Dorothy Graham Strickland; 3. Margaret Vinetta; 4. Bessie Graham, 5. Helen Rutherford. Mr. and Mrs. Strickland and their daughters are active and consistent members of the Oxford Presbyterian church.

DAVID MACKEY, M. D. The Mackey family of which David Mackey, of Elk township, Chester county, is a representative in the present generation, originated in Cecil county, Maryland, where was born John Mackey, great-grandfather of John Mackey. The John Mackey first named was educated in the common schools of his native county, and was a farmer throughout his life. He married Elizabeth Hodgson, and their children were: John, Jr., who married Catherine Andrew; Eliza, who married John Pitt; Martha, who married William Sherer; Mary, who died single; and David.

David Mackey was born on the parental farm in Cecil county, Maryland, in 1811, and died in 1864. He was educated in the common schools, and was a farmer who afterwards operated a grist mill. He moved to Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he married Emma Perry, who died in 1844, and of this union were born the following children: John B. Mackey and Elizabeth.

John B. Mackey, oldest child of David and Emma (Perry) Mackey, was born in Franklin township, Chester county, in 1838. He was educated in the common schools and Hopewell Academy, and engaged in farming on the fine farm tract upon which he now resides. He has borne a full share of public duties, having served as school director, auditor and supervisor. He and his family attend the Presbyterian church, and his political affiliations are with the Democratic party. In 1860 he married Mary T. Scott, born in 1839, a daughter of Thomas and Mary Scott, her father being a farmer of Franklin township. The children of this marriage were: Ada E., who married Samuel G. Bye, and to them were born three children; Mary T., who married George H. Pierce, and to whom were born two children; Thomas T., who married Laura Scotten, and to whom were born two children; Helen and Emma L., who are single, and David.

Dr. David Mackey, son of John B. and Mary T. (Scott) Mackey, was born at the old family homestead in Franklin township, in October, 1865. He received an excellent education in the public schools and in the West Chester State Normal School, where he completed what was equivalent to a liberal academical course. He then entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1888. He practiced his profession for two years in Delaware, and then removed to his present home in Elk township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has built up an excellent practice, and where he is known as a most capable and conscientious practitioner. He is a member of various professional societies, of the Association of the Alumni of the University of Pennsylvania, and of the Order of Modern Woodmen. In religion he is a Presbyterian and a Democrat in politics.

Dr. Mackey was married, in 1893, to Miss Emma Levis, a daughter of Joseph K. and Anna M. Levis, of Cecil county, Maryland. Three children have been born of this marriage—David L., Barton H. and Emma L. Mackey.

HENRY CLAY GREENFIELD, justice of the peace for the town of Kimblesville, Franklin township, and a man whose successful career in business has been characterized by abundant energy and sound judgment, was born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 8, 1834.

Aaron Greenfield, grandfather of Henry C. Greenfield, was a prominent and respected citizen of Franklin township, Chester county, a farmer by occupation, and an upright, conscientious man who performed all the duties of husband, father and citizen in a highly commendable manner. He married Elizabeth Swayne, a native of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and among the children born to them was a son, Jesse Greenfield.

Jesse Greenfield, father of Henry C. Greenfield, was born in London township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His educational advantages were those afforded by the common schools of the day, after which he learned the trade of stone mason, and this proved a profitable means of livelihood for many years. Later he engaged in the contracting business, and secured many of the large contracts for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was the owner of a farm in Franklin township, which he cultivated and improved, and on which he resided at the time of his death, he being then only forty years of age. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and also of the Order of Free and Accepted Masons. Mr. Greenfield was married twice, his second marriage was to Ellen Thompson, daughter of William Thompson, of Frederick county, Maryland. Their children were: Anna E., deceased; Henry Clay, mentioned at length hereinafter; Ellen, deceased; Anna, wife of Henry Willard; Ellen, deceased, who was the wife of Peter L. Quette. The mother of these children died at the age of seventy-three years.

Henry C. Greenfield, only son of Jesse and Ellen Greenfield, received an excellent English education at the Thomas P. Conard boarding school at London Grove and the Unionville Academy at Unionville. The three years following the completion of his studies he served in the capacity of school teacher, and afterwards was employed as a brakeman and conductor on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. He was also largely interested in agricultural pursuits and an extensive dealer in cattle, both of which enterprises proved successful and remunerative. Politically, Mr. Greenfield adheres to the gold standard element of the Democratic party. He has served his township as school director, and at the present time (1903) is serving his fifth term as justice of the peace, having been the incumbent of that office for twenty-two years. He is an honored member of the Society of Friends. Mr. Greenfield has resided for many years in the village of Kimblesville, where he is regarded as one of the leading and substantial citizens.

Mr. Greenfield married, December 13, 1855, Margaret Phillip, born in London Grove township, Chester county, May, 16, 1835, daughter of Thomas and Edith (Chandler) Phillip. They are the parents of one child, Ida Margaret, born in London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 10, 1856; she is now the wife of Albert G. Negley and they reside in Plainfield, New Jersey.

HON. H. F. RALSTON, a progressive and prosperous agriculturist of Matthews, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has gained a reputation as a man of energy, enterprise and thorough business experience, traces his ancestry to John Ralston, a native of the northern section of Ireland, who was an active participant in the battle of Boyne Water, under King William, July 1, 1690. In 1728 John Ralston, accompanied by his son, Robert Ralston, who was born in Ireland October 3, 1722, emigrated to America and settled in Pikeland, now West Pikeland township, Chester county. Robert Ralston became a prominent factor in the political affairs of the county, served several years as a member of the state legislature, and died at his home in Pikeland township February 19, 1814.

Hon. John Ralston, son of Robert Ralston, was born in Vincent, now West Vincent township, Chester county, November 4, 1744. At the commencement of the Revolutionary war he enlisted his services in the Continental army, and served first in the capacity of captain, and later as colonel of a regiment. At the time of the removal of General Washington and his army from his headquarters at Yellow Springs to Reading, General Washington sent for Captain Ralston, who was at home on a furlough, and requested him to pilot the command part of the way, which he accordingly did, as far the falls of French creek, when they procured another pilot and Captain Ralston was free to return home. During the many years that the struggle between England and America existed, Captain Ralston's house was burned by the British scouts and he was three times compelled to secrete himself in a barn to avoid being captured by the enemy. His political affiliations were Democratic, and for forty-one years he faithfully and conscientiously performed the duties of the office of justice of the peace. In November, 1784, he was appointed a member of the county court and continuously occupied that position until the constitution of 1790 went into effect. On August 26, 1791, he was again commissioned a justice of the peace by Governor Mifflin, and on April 7, 1802, he was appointed an associate judge of the courts of Chester county, performing the duties of said office during the last twenty-three years of his life; he was appointed to fill this high and important position by Governor McKean.

H. F. Ralston

Hon. John Ralston was united in marriage to Catharine Miller, and they became the parents of five sons and two daughters—Robert, William, John, James, Mary, Catharine and George. Mr. Ralston died at his home in West Vincent township, Chester county, September 1, 1825, aged eighty years, and his remains were interred at St. Peter's church in Chester Valley.

Robert Ralston, eldest son of Hon. John and Catharine Ralston, was born on the ancestral estate in West Vincent township, Chester county, April 19, 1778. He received the educational advantages that were afforded by the common schools of the day, and upon reaching man's estate chose the occupation of farming, which he continued throughout his active career and proved a profitable means of livelihood. In addition to this industry he engaged in distilling and in various other enterprises, which added considerably to his income. He was a loyal adherent of the principles of the Democratic party, and gave an active support to the candidates and measures advocated by that body. Mr. Ralston married Catharine Christman, a daughter of George Christman, a prominent resident of Pikeland, and the following named children were born to them: George, John, Robert, William, Elizabeth, Mariah, Sophia, and Catharine Ralston.

William Ralston, son of Robert and Catharine Ralston, is a native of West Vincent township, Chester county, where he was born August 20, 1820. He was reared to manhood on the home farm, attended the public schools of the neighborhood, where he obtained a practical education, and subsequently turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He is the owner a two-hundred-and-fifty-acre farm, the majority of which is under cultivation, and during the many years of his management of this estate he met with remarkable success. The buildings on his farm are substantial and commodious, and his broad acres attest what results can be accomplished by intelligent labor and improved methods. Since attaining his majority Mr. Ralston has always cast his vote with the Democratic party. He is an excellent farmer, a reliable citizen, and a man who has gained and retained the utmost respect of the community.

On January 16, 1851, occurred the marriage of William Ralston and Sarah Mosteller, who was born January 18, 1826, a daughter of Henry Mosteller, a prosperous farmer of West Vincent township, Chester county. Their children are: 1. Hon. H. F., mentioned hereinafter. 2. Annie, wife of Clifford Emery, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits in West Vincent township. 3. William E., who resides at home and operates the feed and saw mill owned by his father. Mrs. Sarah (Mosteller) Ralston died March 14, 1896, and was interred in St. Andrew's cemetery, West Vincent township.

Hon. H. F. Ralston was born January 18, 1853, and after early instruction in the public schools of his township, he attended for two terms the Edgefield Academy, of Upper Uwchlan township, taught by Abraham Fetters, now deceased. He then returned to his father's farm, which he has managed for twenty-eight years with conspicuous success. He raises a general line of crops, in addition to which the farm supports a dairy herd of forty cows. Philadelphia furnishes a ready market for his dairy products, and the beef from his stall-fed cattle has a reputation with the best dealers of the city. Mr. Ralston is a significant factor in public issues, and is looked to as a leader by the Democrats in his locality. He represented his township on the county committee for twelve consecutive years, and was a member of the state legislature of 1899-1900, being elected on a fusion ticket, and being, probably, the only Democrat to represent the northern district of Chester county in the legislature for the past fifty years. He has been township auditor and inspector for several terms, and has also served for a number of years on the school board, being president during nearly the whole period of his membership. For the past eleven years he has been a director of the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank of Phoenixville, and is a trustee and treasurer of the St. Matthews' Reformed church, of which he is an active member.

Mr. Ralston was married December 15, 1874, to Ella Paul, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (King) Paul, natives and lifelong residents of Chester county. Mrs. Ralston was born September 21, 1854, and five children have been born to her, namely: Mary, born April 29, 1876, who is now the wife of B. Frank Hoffman and the mother of one child, and lives in Upper Uwchlan township; Sarah Edna, born May 16, 1877, is unmarried and lives at home; J. Bayard, born April 8, 1879, deceased; George Harold, born March 20, 1881, assists in the management of the farm; Willie C., born September 22, 1887, is attending school in West Vincent township. All the family with the exception of the youngest son, are members of St. Matthews Reformed church. Mr. Ralston is recognized as one of the most successful and intelligent farmers in the county, and one who raises the standard of his calling. In every relation of life he has manifested the personal qualities and the adaptability that make a man trusted and valued by his associates.

JEROME BETHEL GRAY, deceased, was the eighth in line of descent from John Gray, the original pilgrim of this branch of the Gray family, who came to the United States from England, where he had served in the British navy, lost an arm in the service of his country, and was a pensioner on half pay. His son, John Gray (2), was born in the eastern portion of New England about the year 1680, and on April 28, 1704, was united in marriage to Ruth Hebbard.

John Gray (3), son of John and Ruth (Hebbard) Gray, was born in Beverly, Massachusetts, May 17, 1707, and after acquiring an education in the common schools of the neighborhood followed the occupation of farming. In 1755 he became a member of Captain William's company and served in defense of the frontier settlements at Fort Massachusetts, Pittsfield, Berkshire county, Massachusetts. He was twice married, being united to his first wife, Anne Hebbard, at Windham, Connecticut, February 26, 1728. Her death occurred May 28, 1746. Mr. Gray married for his second wife Catherine Gardner, widow of one Gardner. He died in 1761.

Joseph Gray (4), son of John and Anne (Hebbard) Gray, was born in Windham, Connecticut, June 12, 1732, and his educational advantages were those which were afforded in the common schools of that period. His death occurred March 29, 1796, in Greene, Chenango county, New York, and he left surviving him two sons, Jeduthan and Amos Gray.

Jeduthan Gray (5), son of Joseph Gray, was born in 1756, acquired a common school education, and subsequently enlisted in the Revolutionary army. He served in the capacity of sergeant in Captain Wheeler's company, Colonel Hopkins New York Regiment, and was honorably mentioned for the courage and bravery he displayed at the battle fought near Fort Independence, in the vicinity of Peekskill, New York, in 1777. In later years he became prominent as an elder and preacher in the Baptist denomination, doing all in his power to promote the cause of righteousness and Christianity in his community. He was united in marriage September 14, 1779, at Sharon, Connecticut, to Anna Warren, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Cotton Mather Smith.

Bethel Gray (6), son of Jeduthan and Anna (Warren) Gray, was born in Great Barrington, Massachusetts, January 24, 1787, attended the common schools, where he obtained a practical education, and upon attaining young manhood removed to Chenango county, New York, and later to Broome county, New York. He was a man of strict integrity and many noble traits of character, and his advice and counsel on various subjects was often sought and followed by his friends and neighbors. On May 24, 1811, Mr. Gray married Cornelia Carter, who was born January 22, 1794, and died July 7, 1869, having survived her husband a few years, his death having occurred February 4, 1866.

Hiram T. Gray (7), son of Bethel and Cornelia (Carter) Gray, was born January 21, 1818, and was a student in the common schools of his native county. Subsequently he became prominently identified with the industrial and social interests of the town of Jersey Shore, Pennsylvania, where his marriage to Susanna Minsker occurred October 1, 1843.

Jerome Bethel Gray (8), son of Hiram T. and Susanna (Minsker) Gray, was born at Jersey Shore, Pennsylvania, September 27, 1848. His preliminary education was acquired in the public schools of his native town, and this was supplemented by a course at the West Chester Academy, which was then under the personal supervision of William F. Wyers. From 1872 to 1875 he was engaged in the lumber business in Youngwomans-town and later at Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and in the latter year removed to West Chester and purchased an interest in the firm of Hoopes Bros. & Darlington, spoke and wheel manufacturers, of which he was treasurer for many years. Later he became interested in the manufacture of steam traps, in Philadelphia, and up to the time of his decease acted in the capacity of treasurer for the William S. Haines company, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In his business life Mr. Gray was energetic, successful and thorough-going; he was a man of excellent literary attainments, possessed a wide range of general information, and was well informed on all current topics. He was a Republican in politics, and was always actively interested in local public affairs. He was one of the early members of the Union League Club of Philadelphia and of the Manufacturers Club. He was also a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences and of the Sons of the Revolution.

Mr. Gray married at West Chester, Pennsylvania, February 6, 1873, Catharine Mary Darlington, who was born May 20, 1850, at West Chester, a daughter of Hon. William and Catharine ine (Paxson) Darlington. Their children are: Norman Darlington (9), born May 16, 1874, Isabella, born May 1, 1879, died May 8, 1879; Charles Paxson, born July 4, 1880, now an artist residing in New York city; and Bethel, born April 5, 1885. Mr. Gray, father of these children, died October 19, 1901, survived by his widow and children.

Norman Darlington Gray, eldest son of Jerome B. and Catharine D. Gray, was born at West Chester, Pennsylvania, and his education was acquired at the Friends' school at West Chester, the Hill school at Pottstown, Cornell University, and at the University of Pennsylvania. His first business experience was as book reviewer on the "Philadelphia Record," and at the present time (1903) he holds the position of First Assistant State Librarian at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. On May 10, 1898, he enlisted in Company I, Sixth Pennsylvania Regiment, United States Volunteer Infantry, and served during the entire period of the Spanish-American war. He holds membership in the organization of the Sons of the Revolution. He is an enthusiastic collector of rare books, and is much interested in literary matters. He is a member of the Philobiblion Club of Philadelphia, and of the Bibliophile Society of Boston.

Mr. Gray married, July 5, 1898, Alice Wills Hoopes, who was born September 19, 1874, a daughter of George Rand and Florence (Wills) Hoopes, of West Chester. They are the parents of one child, Jerome Bethel Gray 2d, who was born at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, July 18, 1899.

AMOS G. SCOTT, of Elk township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of an old family which originated in Cecil county, Maryland, where his paternal grandfather, James Scott, was born and reared. He was a farmer by occupation.

James, a son of James Scott last named, was born on the family homestead in Maryland in 1812. He was educated in the common schools, and when thirteen years old entered upon the earning of his livelihood as a farmer, a pursuit in which he has been successfully engaged to the present time. He was held in high esteem in the community, and was called to various local offices, the duties of which he discharged with ability and integrity. His wife was Mary Garrett, a daughter of Thomas and Mary (Scott) Garrett, of Cecil county, Maryland. She died in 1888, having been the mother of the following named children: 1. Edward F., who married Elizabeth Wherry, to whom were born six children; 2. Owen R., who married Sarah Brown, and to whom were born two children; 3. Hannah E., who married David Dickey, and they were the parents of three children; 4. Margaret A., single; 5. John D., who married Elizabeth Watson, and to them were born two children; 6. Jane, who married James Dougherty, and to them were born four children; 7. Gilbert B., who married Ellen Gallagher, and they were the parents of ten children; 8. Georgianna, who married John Blest, and to them were born three children; 9. Amos G. Scott.

Amos G. Scott, son of James and Mary (Garrett) Scott, was born in Elk township, in 1850. He was educated in the public schools, and for thirty years was busily engaged as a wagoner. During recent years he has led a retired life. For nine years he acceptably discharged the important duties of a school director. He and his family attend the Methodist Episcopal church. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party, and he is a member of the orders of Red Men and Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Scott was married in 1880 to Miss Lillie Hughes, a daughter of Joseph and Martha (Johnson) Hughes; her father was a prosperous farmer of Wilmington, Delaware. Of her marriage were born two children, Cora and James.

JOHN ANDREWS LINDECAMP, actively associated with the agricultural, political and social interests of Londonderry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has made his home since 1883, was born in Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, February 16, 1848.

John C. Lindecamp, father of John A. Lindecamp, was born on the old homestead in Sadsbury township, and his educational advantages were those afforded by the common schools of that day. Upon attaining young manhood he chose farming as an occupation, and being energetic and persevering, these qualities contributed largely to his success in life. In his political convictions Mr. Lindecamp has always adhered to the principles of the Republican party. He was united in marriage to Margaret Rowensky, and six children were the issue of this union: Lewis, who married Emma McLaughlin, and they were the parents of eight children. Anna E., wife of Samuel Slaymaker; they have a family of eight children. John Andrews. George, who married Emeline Witmer, and eight children were born to them, one of whom is now deceased. Mary, wife of Amos Graff, and mother of six children. Jacob R., who married Belle Pinkerton; four children have been the issue of this marriage, two of whom died in infancy.

John A. Lindecamp, second son of John C. and Margaret Lindecamp, was reared and attended the common schools of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. His first business experience was gained by working on his father's farm where he continued his operations until 1883, when he removed to Londonderry township, Chester county, and purchased what is known as the "Farr Farm," which consists of thirty-two acres. He has devoted his attention to general farming, and being exceedingly energetic and practical, never losing an opportunity for advantage, he realizes good financial returns for his labors. He is deeply interested in the general welfare and improvement of the township, in which he has served as school director and supervisor, being chosen to fill these offices by the supporters of the Republican party. Mr. Lindecamp is a prominent member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

In 1871 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Lindecamp and Elizabeth Piester, who was born in Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1850. Their children are: 1. Newton, died at twelve years of age. 2. Ada, wife of Isaac Baker, and their children are: Earl, born in 1896, died in early life, and John Herman Baker, born July 14, 1901. 3. Clara E., wife of Augustus Speakman. 4. Grace E. 5. Harlan, and two other children who died in infancy. The family are attendants of the Presbyterian church at Faggs Manor, to the support of which they contribute liberally.

DR. EDWARD J. HADFIELD, of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, is not one of the oldest or one of the longest established physicians of the place. But his life has been an eventful one, and he has put into it an amount of effort, and drawn from it a fund of experience that would stand well to the account of a man twice his years.

He is of English descent, and comes of strong, pioneering stock. His paternal grandfather came to this country early in the nineteenth century, when good agricultural lands were to be had for the taking in the west, and settled in Wisconsin. His son, the father of Dr. Hadfield, was also engaged in farming, and had manufacturing interests as well.

The parents of Edward J. Hadfield died when he was but a child. He was born at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, February 11, 1868, and when only sixteen years old came to Philadelphia. Here he found employment as clerk in a drug store, and from the beginning he worked consistently for his advancement. He obtained a degree from the College of Pharmacy, Philadelphia, but he had now become ambitious to take a medical course. And to such good purpose did he apply himself that he qualified for his degree and was graduated from the Jefferson Medical College in 1890. He opened an office in Philadelphia, but the strain which he had put upon his health during his preparatory work now began to tell seriously. He was obliged to give up professional work for the time being, and he left Philadelphia for good. During the next seven years he went about in various parts of the west, in search of health, and with an eye to a permanent location. He went first to Iowa, then spent a season in Colorado Springs, and finally made his way to California. But he returned to Pennsylvania, and in 1897 took up his residence in Phoenixville, where his professional skill has met with gratifying recognition. He has identified himself with the life of the town, is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and gives his political support to the Republican party.

Dr. Hadfield married Miss Flaharty, of Lancaster county, and has one son, Homer Hugo.

HENRY C. DARLINGTON. Among the many families of prominence whose names are inseparably connected and associated with the history of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the Darlington family, many members of which have occupied eminent social and political positions, being public-spirited men of sterling probity and integrity. The progenitors of the American branch of the family were Abraham and John Darlington, sons of Job and Mary Darlington, of Darnhall, Cheshire, England, who emigrated to America prior to 1711, and settled near the town of Chester, in what is now Delaware county.

Abel Darlington, father of Henry C. Darlington, was born in Westtown township, Chester county, in 1817, this being also the birth place of his father, Benedict Darlington, grandfather of Henry C. Darlington, who after completing his education in the common schools pursued the occupation of farming. The boyhood and early youth of Abel Darlington was spent in attending the district school, where he obtained a practical education, and assisting his father with the duties of the home farm where he acquired a thorough knowledge of that useful calling. Subsequently he removed to Cecil county, Maryland, but after a residence of five years in that section of the country, during which time he followed agricultural pursuits, he returned to Chester county, settled in Londonderry township and there spent the remainder of his days. In politics Mr. Darlington was a Republican, giving an earnest and active support to the candidates of that party, and for many years he served his township in the capacity of justice of the peace.

Mr. Darlington was twice married, his first wife having been Mary Neilds, a daughter of Cheney Neilds, a merchant of West Chester, Pennsylvania. His second wife was Margaret Burns, a daughter of William Burns, of Upper Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The following named children were born to Mr. Darlington by his first wife: Rachel, wife of John Burns; four children have been born of this marriage. Susan, wife of Caleb Pierce; they have a family of four children. Angeline, wife of William Pyle, and mother of two children. Hannah, wife of Jeremiah Underwood; they are the parents of four children. Caroline, wife of Lindley Way, and one child has been the issue of this marriage. Sarah, who died in infancy. Harriet, wife of Maris Pierce, and mother of four children. Eva, died in early life. Josephine, wife of William McCollough. Benedict, married Susan Lund, and four children have been the issue of this union. Otley, married Marion Coulter. Henry C. Darlington.

E. J. Hadfield

Henry C. Darlington, youngest child of Abel and Mary Darlington, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, in 1845. His preliminary education was obtained at the common schools of the neighborhood, and later he was a student at the Unionville Academy in West Marlborough township, where he completed his studies. He began his business career as a farmer and, with the exception of a few years when he conducted a coal trade, he has followed that line of industry up to the present time (1903). In 1898 he purchased his present home in Londonderry township, the farm consisting of twelve acres of productive land, and here he is enjoying the ease and comfort of a retired life. In his political views Mr. Darlington is a Republican, and has been called to a number of public positions by his fellow townsmen, who recognized his worth and ability. When the emergency call for troops was made during the progress of the Civil war, Mr. Darlington was among the first to respond, and for several months performed garrison duty.

In 1864 occurred the marriage of Mr. Darlington and Anna J. McCollough, born in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1845, the daughter of the late John S. and Maria (Hays) McCollough, the former named having been engaged in farming pursuits in Upper Oxford township. Two children were born of this union, namely: William R., born in 1865, married Minnie Feagley, and Mary N. Darlington, born in 1866. The family are earnest and consistent members of Fagg's Manor Presbyterian Church, and in the locality where they reside they have a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

JOHN P. BAKER. The ancestry of John P. Baker, the present justice of the peace of Londonderry township, Chester county, can be traced back through three centuries to the first of his name, John Baker, of Edgemont, who came from Shropshire, England, early in the seventeenth century and settled in the state of Pennsylvania. His descendants were numerous, intermarrying, and settling in the different townships and counties of the state, one of whom, Aaron Baker, settled in Chester county, and who is the progenitor of the family in that county. The present John Baker, is of the fifth generation of Bakers, many of whom have held high official positions in the county and state, and whose careers have been distinguished by a marked ability and fitness for the important offices which they have been called upon to fill. His great-great-grandfather, Samuel Baker, was the father of Joseph Baker, his great-grandfather, who was the father of Elijah Baker, his grandfather, the father of Wilson Baker, of whom John P. Baker is the son. Elijah Baker, the grandfather of John P., was born in 1804, and married Sarah H. Clayton, a descendant of the first of her name in this country, William Clayton, who presided at the first court held in Pennsylvania under the proprietary government, and whose decease occurred in 1869. Elijah Baker and Sarah (Clayton) Baker, had issue as follows: 1. Isaac, born 1832; he married Jennie Moulten, and they were the parents of seven children; Chauncey, deceased; Leslie, married Amy Hushmer; Howard, deceased; Mary, Sarah, Stella and Clayton. 2. Hannah, born in 1837; 3. Wilson, further named below; 4. Mahlon (1), deceased; 5. Mahlon (2), born in 1840, married Alice Underwood, and had issue; Eva, Carrie, Avarilla, Viola, Oscar and Ada and four children who died in childhood. 6. Annie M., born 1849.

Wilson Baker, third child and second son of Elijah Baker, was born July 31, 1836, and married Mary B. Pyle, a descendant of one of the oldest and most distinguished families among the Quakers of Chester county; a near progenitor, Zeba Pyle, having been known throughout the State of Pennsylvania as a man of superior legal skill and profound learning in the law, and who was for many years solicitor of the Bank of Chester County, and a commissioner under the bankrupt law of 1841. Wilson Baker and Mary (Pyle) Baker were the parents of five children; 1. Ida T., born March 17, 1862, who married Josephus N. Cox; they have been the parents of two children, S. Beatrice, born March 9, 1889, and Olive, born December 2, 1896. 2. Gertrude H., born November 25, 1863; 3. John P. further named below; 4. Harry E., born April 19, 1869, married Sarah Hutton, and had issue; Roland E., born July 9, 1897, and Francis A., born May 30, 1902.

John P. Baker, third child and eldest son of Elijah and Mary (Pyle) Baker was born June 20, 1866, at the old Pyle homestead in Londonderry township, was reared and educated there, and has always been identified with the interests of the township and county, and is an active member of the order of Odd Fellows, and of the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics. Descended from a long line of able and distinguished ancestors, and connected with the oldest and most prominent families of the Quaker element in the state of Pennsylvania, Mr. John P. Baker is eminently fitted to hold any public office and trust to which he might be further called, having satisfactorily discharged the duties of the numerous local offices he has heretofore so efficiently held.

Mr. Baker married Florence K. Hutton, daughter of Evan and Katherine (Sipple) Hutton, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Florence K., was born in Kirkwood, Colerain township, Lancaster county, but was reared and educated in Chester county, and is a probable descendant of the Hutton family which settled in New Garden early in the eighteenth century, the progenitors of whom were Joseph and Nehemiah Hutton, of Ireland.

WALTER M. CLARK, one of the representative farmers and respected citizens of Londonderry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a native of this township and the date of his birth was May 28, 1865, he being a son of Joseph B. and Martha Clark, and grandson of Jehu and Ann Clark.

Joseph B. Clark, father of Walter M. Clark, was born in Londonderry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1830, the son of Jehu and Ann (Edwards) Clark. Being thoroughly qualified, both by a liberal education and years of experience, to serve in the capacity of school teacher, Mr. Clark followed that vocation for a number of years previous to engaging in agricultural pursuits in the vicinity of his birthplace. He was respected by all who knew him for his many excellent qualities, his business honor, fidelity to duty, and devotion to any cause which he advocated. In 1851 he married Martha Keylor, a daughter of Henry and Eliza (Swisher) Keylor and seven children were the issue of this marriage. Henry K., who married May Hamill, and they are the parents of three children; 2. Harlan, who married Elizabeth Mendenhall, and five children were the issue of this union; 3. Jane M., wife of Elwood Wollaston; 4. Curtin, died in early life; 5. Elmer, died in childhood; 6. Walter M.; 7. Oscar, who married Belle Criswell and they are the parents of one child. Oscar died on February 27, 1896; he was a physician at Russellville. Joseph B. Clark, father of these children, died December 12, 1887.

Walter M. Clark, during the early years of his life, attended the public schools of Londonderry township and the knowledge thus gained was supplemented by a course of study at Fernwood

Academy. After completing his studies at the latter named institution he decided to devote his energies to one of the most important of all occupations, that of agriculture, and accordingly he purchased a farm in the township of Londonderry, which consists of seventy-five acres of rich and fertile soil. The prosperous and thrifty appearance of the entire premises indicate the careful and efficient supervision of a progressive and capable agriculturist. His farm is stocked with twelve head of well and carefully selected cattle. Mr. Clark is a prominent member of the Knights of Maccabees, in which organization he has always taken a deep interest.

In 1895 Mr. Clark married Elizabeth Criswell a daughter of James and Caroline (Baily) Criswell, and they are the parents of one child, James B. Clark, born November 11, 1901.

GEORGE COATES. The Coates family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, of which George Coates is a worthy representative, have been noted for their enterprise, energy and honesty in business, patriotic devotion to country, and fidelity to every duty of public and private life.

The earliest ancestor of whom we have any record was Thomas Coates, grandfather of George Coates, a resident of Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his marriage occurred and where the following named children were born; Warwick, who after the death of his first wife, married Hannah Darlington; Levi; Richard; George; Dr. Joseph, who died in early manhood, and Sarah, wife of Asa I. Walker.

Levi Coates, father of George Coates, and second son in order of birth of the children born to Thomas Coates, was a prominent and successful business man of Chester county, being engaged for many years in the pottery trade. In 1818 he purchased a large tract of land in Londonderry township, Chester county, where he made his home for many years. Mr. Coates was twice married, his first wife having been Mary Truman, and the three children born of this union are now all deceased. He chose for his second wife, Ann Smith, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Joseph, died in early life; 2. Mary, deceased, was the wife of Dr. Coates Preston; 3. Amos, married Sarah Peirce and their children are: Anna, Mary, John, and Irea Coates; 4. James, married Lydia Ann More, a daughter of Joseph More, and their children are: Charles, died in early life, Virginia, died in childhood, Leora, Cornelia, and Elizabeth Coates; 5. Elizabeth; 6. Ellen, wife of Isaac Jackson and mother of two children, Laura and William E. Jackson; 7. George Coates.

George Coates, youngest son of Levi and Ann (Smith) Coates, was born on the old homestead in Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 2, 1830. He was reared in the home in which he was born, and acquired a practical education at the local schools and at Blair Hall, Faggs Manor, after which he began working upon his father's farm. This property consists of one hundred and seventeen acres, two acres having been added to it since the original purchase was made in 1818. Upon the death of his father George Coates inherited this property, and his entire business career has been devoted to its cultivation and improvement. His political affiliations are with the Prohibition party, but he casts his vote for the candidate who in his estimation is best qualified to hold office. He has been the incumbent of several township offices, among them being that of school director in which capacity he served for nine years.

Mr. Coates was united in marriage to Sarah B. Clark, who was born and reared in Highland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and her education was acquired at Martins Academy; she is a daughter of Joseph Clark, of Highland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Charles S.; William Lincoln; Mary, wife of Clarence Moore; Joseph; Mignonette, wife of Elwood Pusey, and Benjamin, who married Nellie Whiteside, of Christiana, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and they are the parents of two children. Mr. Coates and his family attend the meetings of the Society of Friends, in which organization he holds a birthright membership.

ENOS T. WICKERSHAM, one of the well known farmers of Chester county, comes of the Quaker stock which colonized the state of Pennsylvania, and largely determined its character and history. His father, Isaac Wickersham, married Julia Swayne, and they were the parents of the following children: 1. Elizabeth, born December 23, 1823, died April 8, 1840. 2. Jacob S., born October 29, 1825, married Elizabeth Worth, had a son, Howard, who is now deceased, and a daughter, Belle, and died in 1876. 3. Philena S., born October 6, 1828. 4. Rebecca C., born February 3, 1831, married John Green, and, among other children, had the following: Elizabeth, Lilian, Anna, and Howard Green. 5. Enos T., mentioned at length hereinafter. 6. Isaac, born September 26, 1836, went to California. He married Sallie Baker, and had two children; Howard and Elizabeth.

Enos T. Wickersham, son of Isaac and Julia (Swayne) Wickersham, was born March 28, 1833, in Newlin township, and attended the local schools of his birthplace. He was also a pupil at the school which was presided over by the well-remembered Jonathan Gause. On reaching manhood, Mr. Wickersham followed for a time the business of a miller, but ultimately became a farmer, and has for many years devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. In accordance with the traditions of his ancestors, he is a regular attendant at Friends' Meeting.

In 1856 Mr. Wickersham married Hannah, born in 1833, daughter of Edwin and Mary Ann (Taylor) Wollaston. Their children are: 1. Caroline P., born November 6, 1857, married William P. Cloud. 2. Elsie J., born February 11, 1861, married William McNeil, and was the mother of two children: Mary, born November 28, 1886, and Grace, born September 25, 1889, died November 26, 1897. After the death of her husband, Mrs. McNeil became the wife of Smith Barclay. 3. Edward G., born February 10, 1862, married Elizabeth, daughter of Jeffers and Margaret (Miller) Woodward, of West Marlborough township, and they have the following children: Edith M., born June 21, 1894; Elsie C., born December 16, 1895; Helen S., born October 7, 1897; and Marion, born November 11, 1900. Mrs. Wickersham, the mother and grandmother of the family, died June 1, 1893.

J. WHITTIER FULTON, who enjoys the respect and esteem of the residents of West Marlborough, Chester county, in which vicinity he has resided for the past thirteen years, and who is an enterprising and successful agriculturist, was born February 25, 1843, in East Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a son of Joshua and Mary D. (Thorne) Fulton, and grandson of Thomas and Ann Fulton.

Thomas and Ann Fulton (grandparents) reared the following named children, all of whom lived to years of maturity and occupied responsible positions in the various walks of life; James, who married Ann Pyle; Joseph, who married Miss Copperthwaite; John; Mary, who became the wife of Vincent Wiley; Joshua (father of J. Whittier, Fulton), who married Mary D. Thorne, and two children were the issue of this union—Thomas, born December 25, 1840; and J. Whittier, born February 25, 1843; Elizabeth, youngest child of Thomas and Ann Fulton, became the wife of Harlan Meredith.

The public schools of East Fallowfield township afforded J. Whittier Fulton, youngest son of Joshua and Mary D. Fulton, an excellent education which prepared him for the active duties of manhood. He then engaged in farming in his native township, which line of industry he successfully followed until 1890, removing in that year to West Marlborough, Chester county, where his attention has since been exclusively devoted to the same line of business. Mr. Fulton is an intelligent and well informed man, having received in addition to his common school education, a large amount of useful and valuable instruction from Professor Gilbert. He takes a keen interest in the leading political questions of the day, and also evinces a decided interest in township affairs.

Mr. Fulton was united in marriage to Lucinda Phipps, daughter of Caleb and Hannah (Bailey) Phipps, who was born in Highland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 18, 1848, and died October 9, 1881. Their children are: 1. Howard Gilbert, born November 28, 1876, married Minerva Boyer, and they are the parents of two children—Harriet, born March 4, 1900, and Howard Gilbert, Jr., born January 2, 1902; 2. Isabel P., born June 1, 1878; 3. Caleb P., born October 9, 1881.

J. HOWARD PUSEY. In the township of West Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania, occurred the birth of J. Howard Pusey, one of the distinctively representative and well known citizens of the community, January 5, 1853, the son of Joseph and Elizabeth Pusey, and the lineal descendants of one of the oldest and most honored families in this section of the state, who claim the distinction of having built more mills in Chester county than any other family.

Joseph Pusey (father) was a son of Joseph or Jesse Pusey, and during his entire life was recognized and honored as an upright, public-spirited citizen, who performed his daily duties in an unostentatious manner which could not fail to leave its impress upon his descendants. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Barnard, and they were the parents of the following named children: 1. Anna M., wife of Mahlon Brosius; their children are Charles, Elizabeth, Emma, J. Howard, Willis, and Edwin Brosius; 2. Edwin; 3. Abbie B., wife of Haines Passmore, and their children are: Pusey, Benjamin, who died in infancy, and Benjamin Passmore; 4. James, who died in early life; 5. Henry R., who married Amy Hoopes, and they were the parents of four children: Hannah, wife of Philip Pusey; Mary, wife of Walter Wood; Elizabeth, and Norman Pusey. After the death of his first wife, Henry R. Pusey married Annie Taylor, and the issue of this union was one child, Sarah Pusey; 6. Philena; 7. J. Howard, mentioned hereinafter.

J. Howard Pusey, youngest son of Joseph and Elizabeth Pusey, was reared on the paternal homestead in West Marlborough township, and while an inmate there he learned the first principles of industry and gained his first ideas of the perseverance by means of which he has in the main accomplished success in life. His early education was obtained at the local schools, and this was supplemented by attendance at the schools of Concordville, and at the West Chester State Normal School, where he completed his studies. He at once turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, purchasing his present farm in 1893, and since that date has been extensively engaged in a general farming and dairying business which yields him good returns for the care and labor bestowed upon it. Mr. Pusey is thoroughly in touch with modern advancement and a close student of all questions which concern the public welfare. He is a staunch advocate of the principles of Republicanism, and has been elected by that party to fill several local offices. He is a consistent member of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Pusey married H. Emma Chambers, who was born, reared and educated in London Grove township, Chester county, her birth occurring September 7, 1857; she is a daughter of David P. and Lydia Ann (Hurford) Chambers. Their children are: Anna L., born December 14, 1891, and Florence E., born April 6, 1898.

SAMUEL J. PENNOCK, a representative of the dairying interests of West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a member of one of the old families of Pennsylvania. Tradition has it that Christopher Pennock came to this country from Cornwall in 1696, and settled on a tract of two thousand acres of land deeded to him by George Collett, his father-in-law. Christopher died in Philadelphia in 1701, and his wife returned to her former home in Ireland. Subsequently her eldest son, Joseph Pennock, came to Philadelphia and resided there until 1713.

From this ancestral line is supposed to have come James Pennock, whose wife was Amy Thomas. Their son, Levis B. Pennock, was born October 17, 1830, and married Annie Hadley. She was a daughter of John and Ann (Pennock) Hadley, and was born March 22, 1834, in East Marlborough township, near Kennett Square. She was educated at Eaton Academy and at Smedley Darlington's school at Ercildown. The children of Levis B. and Annie (Hadley) Pennock were as follows: 1. James L., born June 22, 1861; 2. Samuel J., born October 28, 1863, and of whom a fuller account will appear; 3. Anna E., born July 22, 1865, who married Samuel Wilson, and became the mother of one child, Charles J., born March 6, 1889; 4. Jane T., born August 22, 1858, who married Arthur P. Yeatman, and to whom have been born two children, Raymond, born March 13, 1895, and Clarence, born July 18, 1897.

Samuel J. Pennock, second of the two sons of Levis B. and Annie (Hadley) Pennock, was born at the family homestead October 28, 1863. He was educated at Kennett Square and at Maplewood Institute, in Delaware county. He adopted farming as his occupation, and made a specialty of the dairy industry in which he has proven most successful. He is also interested in various local enterprises, and is a director of the West Grove National Bank. By birthright he is a member of the Society of Friends, and politically his sympathies are with the Republican party.

Mr. Pennock married Elizabeth T., daughter of George and Mary (Bell) Lippincott. She was born in Philadelphia, August 12, 1863, and was educated at the Friends' School in that city. The children of Samuel J. and Elizabeth (Lippincott) Pennock are the following: Blanche L., born April 3, 1893; Chester L., born January 13, 1895; Mary Bell, born September 19, 1902.

WILLIAM P. CLOUD, a prosperous farmer of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of an old family, and a native of the county in which he resides, having been born August 29, 1851, in East Marlborough township. He is a son of Pusey and Hannah (Gatchel) Cloud, who lived on the old Cloud homestead, which was the birthplace of their son, William P. Cloud.

Mr. Cloud was brought up and educated in East Marlborough, coming to West Marlborough in 1883. In 1887 he purchased from George Pyle the farm which is now his home. In addition to the management of his estate he is interested in finance, being one of the directors of the Avondale Bank. He enjoys in a high degree the esteem and confidence of his neighbors, and has held various local offices, among them those of school director, treasurer of the school board and supervisor.

Mr. Cloud married Carrie P., born November 26, 1857, near Unionville, East Marlborough township, Chester county, daughter of Enos and Hannah (Wollaston) Wickersham. Mr. and Mrs. Cloud are the parents of three children: Hannah M., born December 24, 1882; Elsie K., born May 26, 1885; and Emma W., born July 21, 1889.

ISAAC W. SWAYNE, a leading farmer and respected citizen of West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of an old family, tracing his descent from Francis Swayne (1), who was born in 1650, married Elizabeth Nulton, and died September 30, 1721.

William Swayne (2), son of Francis (1) and Elizabeth (Nulton) Swayne, was born January 30, 1689, married, July 29, 1720, Elizabeth Dell, and was the father of the following children: William, Jr., born April 11, 1721, died January 27, 1828; Francis, born December 18, 1722, died March 23, 1791; John, born August 27, 1724; Thomas, born September 19, 1726; Nathan, born February 4, 1728, died, 1842; Mary, born August 22, 1729; Samuel, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Hannah. Mrs. Swayne, the mother of this family, died in 1734, and shortly after Mr. Swayne married again and among the children born of this union was Ann, born March 17, 1735.

Samuel Swayne (3), son of William (2) and Elizabeth (Dell) Swayne, was born December 13, 1730, married Hannah Hayes, and had eleven children: Jacob, mentioned at length hereinafter; Stephen, born October 9, 1758, died August 31, 1759; John, born September 20, 1760, died August 18, 1765; David, born October 17, 1762, died August 12, 1765; Rachel, born January 2, 1765, died March 21, 1815; Samuel, born July 11, 1767, died July 20, 1845; Sarah, born November 8, 1769, died September 1, 1821; Hannah, born July 26, 1772, died April 9, 1839; William, born April 30, 1775, died January 27, 1828; Nathan, born February 4, 1778, died March 2, 1843; and Lydia, born September 3, 1780, died January 8, 1877. Mr. Swayne, the father of these children, died July 20, 1808.

Jacob Swayne (4), son of Samuel (3) and Hannah (Hayes) Swayne, was born March 29, 1757, and married Phoebe Milbourn. They were the parents of the following children: Deborah, born February 9, 1782, died in 1853; David, born April 30, 1783; Isaiah, born January 23, 1784; Thomas and Jonathan (twins), born July 22, 1785. After the death of his wife Mr. Swayne married Elizabeth Gray Herter, and the following children were born to them: Jacob, born September 11, 1796, died October 20, 1815; Julia, born February 7, 1798, died April 13, 1857; Enoch, mentioned at length hereinafter; Samuel, born November 23, 1802, died August 18, 1845; Elizabeth, born September 5, 1805, died June 7, 1851; Rachel, born June 29, 1808, died March 18, 1883.

Enoch Swayne (5), son of Jacob (4) and Elizabeth Gray (Herter) Swayne, was born June 29, 1800, married Elizabeth Chambers, and was the father of the following children: Hannah C., born September 18, 1828; Deborah D., born August 13, 1830; David C., mentioned at length hereinafter; Jacob, born September 10, 1834; Elmira, born May 2, 1837; William, born June 9, 1840; Elizabeth, born August 3, 1843; Edwin, born March 8, 1847. Mr. Swayne expired February 28, 1885, in the eighty-fifth year of his age.

David C. Swayne (6), son of Enoch (5) and Elizabeth (Chambers) Swayne, was born August 1, 1832, and married Emmeline R. Walton. Their children were: Isaac W., mentioned at length hereinafter; Marshall, born February 24, 1863; and Anna, born January 24, 1870.

Isaac W. Swayne (7), son of David C. (6) and Emmeline R. (Walton) Swayne, was born April 26, 1860, at Willowdale, East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and received his education at the Friends' School in London Grove. His calling is that of an agriculturist, and both as a farmer and citizen he stands high in the esteem of his neighbors and fellow townsmen. A sufficient proof of this is furnished by the fact that for ten years he has filled the office of supervisor.

Mr. Swayne married Elizabeth, born October 4, 1859, daughter of Levi P. and Hannah (Baldwin) Conner. Mrs. Swayne was brought up in Unionville, East Marlborough township, receiving her education in the local schools and at Jacob Harvey's Academy, a seat of instruction well known to all those familiar with the educational institutions of Chester county. The Swayne family is remarkable for longevity, some of its members having attained to the dignity of centenarians.

EDWARD LANGLEY, who has ranked for a number of years among the well known farmers and citizens of West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is of English birth, and is a son of William and Ann Langley, who were the parents of the following children: 1. Edward, mentioned at length hereinafter; 2. George, superintendent of St. George's Schools, London; 3. William, now deceased; 4. Alice, became the wife of Mr. Triscatt, a stone mason; 5. Mary Jane, became the wife of W. Adams; 6. Ann, became the wife of C. Sperring.

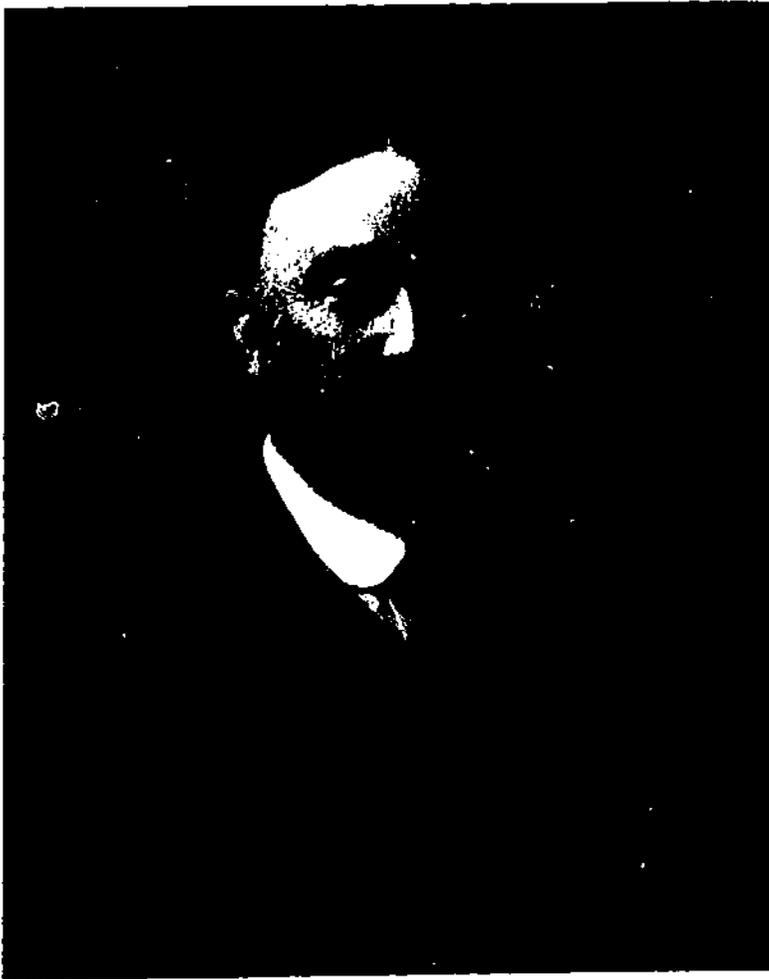

Edward Langley, son of William and Ann Langley, was born April 24, 1855, in Somersetshire, England, and came to this country in 1872, settling first in Glen Mill, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and afterward moving to West Marlborough, Chester county, in the same state in 1901. His calling is that of an agriculturist, and the farm on which he now resides and which he cultivates in the best manner was purchased from Samuel W. Cope. Mr. Langley is regarded as in all respects a representative citizen. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Langley married Lillian Florence, born January 4, 1862, in Philadelphia, daughter of Charles and Sarah (Denegre) Stein. Mr. and Mrs. Langley have had six children: George, who was born August 24, 1883, and died young; Sarah D., who was born April 10, 1885; Edward W., who was born January 4, 1887; Florence M., who was born June 15, 1889; Ethel C., who was born May 16, 1895; and Charles S., who was born August 18, 1897. Mrs. Langley, whose death occurred on January 18, 1901, belonged on the paternal side to a family of German origin, while through her mother she was descended from a French ancestry.

COL. HAMILTON H. GILKYSON, a leading member of the Chester county bar, and a representative of that class of men whose executive ability and strict integrity would win honor and success in any vocation in life, is a descendant on the paternal side of a family of Irish extraction, who ranked among the oldest and most honored in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. On the maternal side he descended from an old and distinguished family of Germantown, Pennsylvania, his grandmother, whose maiden name was Eliza Neal, was a celebrated beauty of her day and her portrait, painted by Sully, was on exhibition at the centennial in 1876. Hamilton H. Gilkyson was born at Doylestown, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in December, 1848, a son of James and Anna (Henry) Gilkyson.

James Gilkyson (father) claimed Bucks county, Pennsylvania, as his birthplace and the public schools of that section of the state afforded him a practical education. Subsequently he took up the study of law, and after passing a creditable examination was admitted to the Bucks county bar, where his practice was extensive and remunerative, the majority of it being in the orphans' court. During the year 1862 he commanded a regiment of men who answered the three-months' emergency call at the time of General Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania. Mr. Gilkyson was an active worker in the ranks of the Republican party, served for a number of years as district attorney for Bucks county, and was a candidate for state senatorial honors, but the county being largely Democratic he was defeated. In 1848 he married Anna Henry, a native of Germantown, Pennsylvania, who died in August, 1884, aged fifty-six years; they were the parents of six children. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gilkyson held membership in the Protestant Episcopal church at Doylestown, Mr. Gilkyson being one of its founders and a member of its vestry, and Mrs. Gilkyson, who possessed great musical talents, was for many years the organist and leader of the choir.

Hamilton H. Gilkyson was reared to manhood at Doylestown, Bucks county, attended the private schools of that town and later was a student at Pennington's Seminary in New Jersey, from which institution he was graduated in 1864. Shortly after his graduation he settled in the western section of the United States and engaged in mercantile pursuits and teaching. After a short period of time he returned to Pennsylvania and began the reading of law under the personal supervision of his father, and after passing an examination was regularly admitted to the bar in 1872. He immediately established a law office in Phoenixville, Chester county, and by his energy and ability soon gained a successful practee, not only in his own county, but also in Montgomery county and in the city of Philadelphia. He is noted for the care and thoroughness with which he prepares his cases and the ability with which he presents them in court.

H. H. Simpson

Colonel Gilkyson has always taken a keen and active interest in the political affairs of the Republican party, being a member and founder of the Everhart wing, which was formed in 1884, when James B. Everhart was elected to Congress from that district over Mr. Darlington. He was also active in the Independent Republican campaign of 1898-99, and was also prominently identified with the Union party of Pennsylvania in 1901. He would never allow the use of his name as a candidate for any political office, although no man worked harder or with greater ability to advance the cause of his party and secure success at the polls. He has served as borough solicitor for fifteen years. Was one of the founders and is at present a member of the board of directors of the Chester County Trust Company. Is president of the Phoenixville Publishing Company, which company is the owner and publisher of the only daily newspaper in the borough of Phoenixville, and was a member and president of the Phoenixville school board. For many years he was connected with the State National Guards, and during the labor riots of 1877 was stationed at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he was made assistant adjutant-general of the Ninth Division, with the rank of colonel.

On March 4, 1880, Colonel Gilkyson married Nellie H. Trego, daughter of Thomas W. Trego, of Doylestown, Bucks county. Four children have been the issue of this union: T. Walter, Hamilton H., Jr., James and Anna Gilkyson.

P. ALLEN CLOUD, a successful farmer and public-spirited citizen of West Marlborough township, Chester county, is descended from old colonial stock. William Cloud, from whom the different branches of the family trace their descent, married Mary, whose surname appears to have been Pence, and among their other children were two sons, Jesse, mentioned hereinafter, and Joshua.

Jesse Cloud, son of William and Mary (probably Pence) Cloud, married Mary Allen. Their children were: Jane, born June 29, 1770, married Mr. Baldwin; Mary, born October 18, 1772, died young; William A. and Ann (twins), born June 23, 1776; the former is mentioned hereinafter, and the latter died young; James, born February 21, 1778, married Margery Mason; Jeremiah, born January 2, 1781; Phœbe, born October 1, 1784, married Mr. McFarland; Hannah, born January 4, 1786, married Mr. Ashton; Orpha, born May 20, 1789, married Mr.

Williamson; and Mary Ann, born August 2, 1793, married Mr. Pierson.

William A. Cloud, son of Jesse and Mary (Allen) Cloud, was born June 23, 1776, and married Hannah Wickersham, who was born October 23, 1779. They were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, born September 7, 1809, died September 3, 1860; Jesse, born March 17, 1811, died February 23, 1887; James, born December 14, 1812, died in 1902; Mary, born July 2, 1814, died October 2, 1879; Rachel, born September 1, 1816, died July 21, 1887; Pusey, mentioned hereinafter; Enoch, born March 3, 1821; and Hannah, born June 4, 1822, died May 31, 1898. William A. Cloud, the father of the family, died November 2, 1861, and his widow passed away April 19, 1865, both having reached the age of eighty-five years.

Pusey Cloud, son of William A. and Hannah (Wickersham) Cloud, was born June 26, 1818, on the old homestead, in East Marlborough township, Chester county, married Hannah Gatchel, and their children were: 1. Elisha G., born March 5, 1844, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; 2. Abbie K. (1), born March 25, 1845, died young; 3. George Martin, born September 24, 1847, married Rachel Ann Pyle, and has three children: Mary R., born February 9, 1882; Pusey, born June 26, 1886; and Samuel P., born October 6, 1888. 4. Abbie K. (2), born February 24, 1849. 5. William P., born August 29, 1851, married Carrie Wickersham, born November 6, 1857, and has the following children: Hannah M., born December 24, 1882; Elsie K., born May 26, 1885; and Emma W., born July 21, 1889. 6. Jesse, born June 8, 1854. 7. P. Allen, mentioned at length hereinafter. 8. Elizabeth, born March 28, 1861. 9. Charles B., born September 9, 1862, married Emma Moyer. 10. Sarah E., born January 4, 1865. 11. Wendell P., born January 25, 1867, married Anna E. Wickersham. Mr. Cloud, the father of these eleven children, died October 14, 1867.

P. Allen Cloud, son of Pusey and Hannah (Gatchel) Cloud, was born December 2, 1859, on the old homestead, in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and received his education in the schools of the neighborhood, and at the State Normal School in West Chester, Pennsylvania. He has made general farming the business of his life, but the circle of his interests is not limited to the duties of his calling. He is active in local affairs and takes a prominent part in every undertaking having for its object the advancement of the public welfare. He was formerly a director of the Kennett Square Building and Loan Association, and is at present a director of a similar association, The London Grove Building and Loan Association at Avondale. In religion he is a Friend, adhering to the doctrines for which his ancestors were, in former times, sometimes obliged to contend. His mother, Hannah Cloud, was disowned by the Hicksite Friends for assisting in the organization of the Longwood Meeting, and an anecdote is related which illustrates the courageous spirit by which she was animated in what she felt to be a righteous cause. At one time, when the feeling was very strong against the Longwood Friends, the doors of their former meeting were closed against them, but at the suggestion of Mrs. Cloud a man climbed through one of the windows and threw the doors wide open. It is pleasant to relate that the Friends thus at variance arrived at an amicable settlement of their differences of opinion, and that Mrs. Cloud was requested to return to her former place in the society.

Mr. P. Allen Cloud married, March 26, 1885, Tillie, daughter of Ezekiel and Margaret (Crosley) Bailey. The former was born August 25, 1840, and was a son of Ezekiel and Margaret Bailey. Mrs. Cloud was born April 16, 1862, in Delaware, but was brought up and educated in Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Cloud are the parents of two children: Jesse, born August 27, 1886; and Elizabeth, born July 30, 1888.

MARSHALL PALMER. The name of Marshall Palmer has been actively and prominently associated with the farming interests of West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, since the year 1866, when he removed to that vicinity from Centerville, Newcastle county, Delaware, where his birth occurred December 12, 1837.

Marshall Palmer is a descendant of John Palmer, who emigrated to this country from England, settled in Pennsylvania shortly after the organization of Chester county, and purchased by patent a hundred acres of land in Concord township, now Delaware county, July 26, 1688. Shortly afterward he was united in marriage to Mary Southery, daughter of Robert Southery, a fuller by trade, and formerly a resident of Westbury, county of Wilts, Great Britain. The line of descent from John and Mary Palmer is as follows: John Palmer, who married Martha Yearsley, April 9, 1714; John Palmer, born August 1, 1736, married Hannah Pyle, and died in April, 1793; Asher, born in 1759, married Alice Malin, and died May 2, 1817; Joseph, born February 4, 1785, married Mary Hall, who was born in 1809, and his death occurred September 7, 1842; their children were: Morris, born August 11, 1810; Robert H., born March 11, 1812; Sally Ann, born April 18, 1814; Lydia, born January 24, 1816; Asher, born April 23, 1818;

William M., born January 22, 1820, and Susanna, born January 14, 1822.

Morris Palmer, father of Marshall Palmer, was born August 11, 1810, received the educational advantages afforded by the district schools of that day, and subsequently became one of the representative citizens of Newcastle county, Delaware. He was united in marriage to Margaret Marshall, and their children were: 1. Samuel, born July 14, 1835; 2. Marshall, born December 28, 1837; 3. Mary, born October 9, 1840, now deceased, became the wife of Jacob Southwaite, Jr., and their children were: Morris P., born January 2, 1861, married Mary Baker, and Emma, born January 26, 1863, wife of Marshall Walton and mother of Bertha, Percy, Maud Dorothy and Morris Walton; 4. Elwood, born October 24, 1843, married Hannah L. Shortledge, and their children are: Katherine, born 5 mo., 2, 1871; Morris, born May 2, 1871; Alice; Howard; and Anna Palmer; 5. J. Howard, born April 19, 1846, married Alice H. Wears, and they are the parents of three children, Bessie, born March 4, 1872, wife of Robert McWynn; Charles, born February 23, 1874, and Helen Palmer; 6. Philena, 7. Franklin, twins, born May 6, 1849; Philena became the wife of Charles Paschall, and their children are: Franklin, born June 29, 1869, and Henry Morris, born November 15, 1872, married Katherine Schoop; 8. Elizabeth, born January 11, 1852, wife of Joseph Nichols, and two children were born to them, Anna and Eli, both of whom are living; 9. Morris, born August 13, 1855, married Helen Mears, and their children are: Margaret and Lucille Palmer. Mr. Palmer, father of these children, died December 23, 1873.

Marshall Palmer, second son of Morris and Margaret Palmer, was reared to manhood at Centerville, Newcastle county, Delaware, and obtained a practical education in the public schools in the neighborhood. He followed farming as an occupation, remaining upon the parental estate until December 13, 1866, when he removed to West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and since that date has resided on the old Baily homestead, being extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits. In his business dealings he is honorable and reliable, and well merits the success which has attended his well directed efforts.

Mr. Palmer was united in marriage December 13, 1865, to Anna Pennock, daughter of Marshall and Rachel (Humes) Pennock. Their children are: Howard M., born January 8, 1868, died September 18, 1885; Frederick J., born June 24, 1869; Rachel L., born November 14, 1871, and Abby Palmer, born March 3, 1878, married, June 20, 1903, to George B. Passmore, of Oxford, Pennsylvania.

JOHN P. SHARPLESS, for many years actively and prominently identified with the agricultural interests of West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a lineal descendant of John Sharples, the founder of the family in America, a native of England, who landed in Chester, Pennsylvania, 6 mo., 14, 1682, accompanied by his wife, Jane (Moor) Sharples, and seven children.

John Sharples, the immigrant ancestor, was the second son of Geoffrey and Margaret Sharples, of Wybunbury, Cheshire, England, and was baptized August 15, 1624. He was a resident of the towns of Mearemore, Blakenhall, and Hather-ton, was one of the early converts to the religious faith of the Quakers, and on account of his faithfulness to the principles of this sect he suffered severe persecution at the hands of their enemies. On April 5, 1682, shortly previous to his removal from his native country, John Sharples received a grant of land from William Penn and after his arrival in Pennsylvania he became the owner of land in and adjoining the township of Providence. John and Jane (Moor) Sharples were the parents of the following named children: Phebe, born 10 mo., 20, 1663, died near Chester, Pennsylvania, 4 mo., 2, 1685; John, born 11 mo., 16, 1666, married Hannah Pennell; Thomas, born 11 mo., 2, 1668, died at sea 5 mo., 17, 1682; James, born 1 mo., 5, 1670 or 1671, married Mary Edge and for his second wife, Mary Lewis; Caleb, born 2 mo., 22, 1673, died near Chester, Pennsylvania, 7 mo., 17, 1686, from the bite of a snake; Jane, born 6 mo., 13, 1676, died near Chester, Pennsylvania, 3 mo., 28, 1685; Joseph, born 9 mo., 28, 1678, married Lydia Lewis. John Sharples, father of these children, died at his home near Chester, Pennsylvania, 4 mo., 11, 1685, and his wife, Jane (Moor) Sharples, born in 1638, died 9 mo., 1, 1722.

Joseph Sharples, youngest son of John and Jane (Moor) Sharples, was born at Hather-ton, Cheshire, England, 9 mo., 28, 1678, married, 3 mo., 31, 1704, at Haverford Meeting, Lydia Lewis, born in Glamorganshire, Wales, 3 mo., 8, 1683, a sister to the wife of his brother, James Sharples. Their children were: Susanna, born 12 mo., 18, 1705, married Joseph Chamberlin; Joseph, born 7 mo., 8, 1707, married Mary Pyle, and his death occurred 1 mo., 4, 1769; Benjamin, born 11 mo., 26, 1708, married first Edith Broome and later Martha Mendenhall, and his death occurred 3 mo., 16, 1785; Samuel, born 12 mo., 7, 1710 or 1711, married Jane Newlin, and died 11 mo., 24, 1790; Lydia, born 3 mo., 7, 1713, became the wife of John Martin, and her death occurred in 1741; Nathan, born 9 mo., 12, 1715, married Hannah Townsend, and died in 1755; Jane, born 12 mo., 4, 1718, became the wife of Jacob Pyle, and her death occurred in 1775; Abraham, born 5 mo., 7, 1720, died in 1784; Jacob, born 10 mo., 14, 1722, married Ann Blakey, died 7 mo., 19, 1775; William, born 3 mo., 31, 1725, married Abigail Sharp, died 5 mo., 4, 1751. Joseph Sharples, father of these children, died in Middletown, Chester county, now Delaware county, in 1757, and his wife's death occurred in 1763.

Benjamin Sharples, eldest son of Joseph and Lydia (Lewis) Sharples, was born in Nether Providence, Pennsylvania, 11 mo., 26, 1709, married Edith Broome, whose death occurred 6 mo., 13, 1744, in the twenty-sixth year of her age; she was survived by her husband and three children, their names being: Joseph, born 12 mo., 19, 1737 or 1738, died 9 mo., 1, 1763; Benjamin, born 10 mo., 26, 1740, died 6 mo., 18, 1780; and Edith, born 10 mo., 30, 1742, became the wife of Ziba Ferris, and her death occurred 2 mo., 8, 1815. Mr. Sharples married for his second wife, 3 mo., 21, 1746, at Concord, Martha Mendenhall, born 12 mo., 8, 1724, daughter of Benjamin and Lydia Mendenhall, of Concord. Their children were: Joshua, born 12 mo., 28, 1746 or 1747, married Edith Yarnall, died 9 mo., 21, 1826; Isaac, born 5 mo., 16, 1748, married Eliza Talbot, died 1 mo., 23, 1780; Rebecca, born 10 mo., 29, 1749, died 2 mo., 9, 1780; Martha, born 10 mo., 28, 1751, died 9 mo., 7, 1763; Ann, born 7 mo., 1, 1754, died 9 mo., 4, 1763; Aaron, born 8 mo., 26, 1756, married Mary Elwood, died 8 mo., 25, 1798; Amy, born 11 mo., 17, 1758, died 7 mo., 3, 1831; Enoch, born 9 mo., 15, 1760, died 9 mo., 15, 1763; Hannah, born 4 mo., 9, 1765, died 4 mo., 11, 1795; Esther, born 5 mo., 21, 1767, died 7 mo., 24, 1865; Sarah, born 9 mo., 21, 1769, died 9 mo., 13, 1823; Samuel, born 11 mo., 25, 1770, died 9 mo., 8, 1796. Benjamin Sharples, father of these children, died at Middletown, 3 mo., 16, 1785; his wife, Martha (Mendenhall) Sharples, died 10 mo., 20, 1812.

Joshua Sharples, eldest son of Benjamin and Martha (Mendenhall) Sharples, was born in Middletown, Pennsylvania, 12 mo., 28, 1746 or 1747, married Edith Yarnall, born 3 mo., 13, 1743, daughter of Nathan and Rachel Yarnall. Their children were: Benjamin, born 8 mo., 24, 1769, was united in marriage to Abigail Cope and Sidney Hoopes, and his death occurred 2 mo., 1, 1852; Rachel, born 5 mo., 3, 1771, became the wife of Benjamin Cope, died 8 mo., 10, 1807; Nathan, born 12 mo., 18, 1772, married Lydia Painter, died 4 mo., 11, 1863; Martha, born 4 mo., 27, 1775, became the wife of Cheyney Jefferis, and her death occurred 4 mo., 30, 1854; Edith, born 6 mo., 15, 1777, became the wife of Thomas Kite, died 1 mo., 24, 1861; Joshua, born 8 mo., 12, 1779, married Philadelphia Drinker, died 12 mo., 21, 1860; Isaac, born 9 mo., 28, 1781, married Sarah Garrett and after her decease married Mary Ellis; his death occurred 11 mo., 12, 1822; Eli, born 12 mo., 30, 1783, died 9 mo., 12, 1789. Joshua Sharples, father of these children, married for his second wife, Ann Trimble, born 1 mo., 9, 1752, and the issue of this union was two children—William, born 1 mo., 15, 1791, died 3 mo., 5, 1793; and Phebe, born 3 mo., 22, 1793, became the wife of Nathan Middleton, and died 4 mo., 30, 1850. Mr. Sharples died at his home in Middletown, 9 mo., 21, 1826.

Joshua Sharples, third son of Joshua and Edith (Yarnall) Sharples, was born 8 mo., 12, 1779, died 12 mo., 21, 1860; married, in 1808, in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Philadelphia Drinker, born 12 mo., 1777, died 10 mo., 4, 1870, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Hart) Drinker. In early life he learned the trade of carpenter and followed this occupation for a number of years in what is now known as West Philadelphia. In 1823 he removed to Chester county, and six years later settled on a farm in London Britain. Their children were: George, born 5 mo., 5, 1809, married Amy Chambers; Edward, born 1 mo., 3, 1811, married Ellen Paxson, and his death occurred 8 mo., 31, 1857; Hannah, born 11 mo., 9, 1812, wife of Caleb Cope; Mary, born 1 mo., 10, 1815; Benjamin, born 2 mo., 3, 1817, married Sarah Cook; Charles, born 2 mo., 22, 1819, married Mary Ann Passmore. Joshua Sharples, father of these children, died in London Britain township, 12 mo., 21, 1860, and his widow died at the residence of her daughter, Hannah Cope, near Willow Grove, Montgomery county; their remains were interred at London Britain Meeting.

George Sharpless, eldest son of Joshua and Philadelphia (Drinker) Sharples, was born 5 mo., 5, 1809, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; after attaining to man's estate he followed the quiet but useful calling of agriculture in West Marlborough township, Chester county. Mr. Sharpless was united in marriage, 10 mo., 13, 1841, at New Garden Meeting, to Amy Chambers, born 9 mo., 5, 1811, near Stanton, Delaware, daughter of Joseph and Deborah (Phillips) Chambers, of New Garden township, Chester county. Their children were: Deborah, born 8 mo., 15, 1842, died 2 mo., 6, 1843; Joshua, born 11 mo., 11, 1843; Lydia, born 8 mo., 10, 1845, and Mary, twin with Lydia; Joseph, born 12 mo., 21, 1847; Edith, born 4 mo., 3, 1850; John P., born 11 mo., 15, 1851. George Sharpless (father) died 3 mo., 12, 1897; his wife died 3 mo., 11, 1888.

John P. Sharpless, youngest son of George and Amy (Chambers) Sharpless, was born in London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 11 mo., 15, 1851. The early days of his life were spent in the same manner as the lives of most of the farmer's sons—in acquiring a good English education and assisting with the duties of the farm. His business career has been devoted practically to the cultivation and improvement of his farm, which is located in the township of West Marlborough, Chester county. He is a prominent member and attendant of the Meetings of the Society of Friends, that being the religious faith of his forefathers.

On 10 mo., 15, 1884, at London Grove Meeting, Mr. Sharpless married Hannah Maule, daughter of Benjamin and Margaret (Evans) Maule, of West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

LEWIS WOODWARD CARR, a prosperous farmer and esteemed citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is a son of Alexander Carr, who was born in 1812, in Tredyffrin township, and in early life followed the trade of an augermaker, afterward engaging in farming, in which occupation he continued for the remainder of his days. He married Sarah Blake, and they were the parents of the following children: 1. Woodward, deceased. 2. John Danfield, who was a farmer. 3. Isabella Clemons, who married Stephen Cloud, a butcher. 4. Sarah Jane, deceased. 5. Martha, deceased. 6. James Polk, who was a carpenter and married Sallie Bear. 7. Harry Stiteler, deceased. 8. Sallie Woodward, who resides at home. 9. Lewis Woodward, mentioned hereinafter. 10. James, who was an augermaker, married Martha Clemons, and is now deceased, leaving six children. 11. Morton, who was a farmer. 12. Isaac, who married Mrs. Ideline Wright. 13. Bush, deceased. After the death of his wife Mr. Carr married Martha Clemons, by whom he was the father of two daughters: Caroline, who became the wife of Mr. Jackson Lanny, and Josephine, deceased.

Lewis Woodward Carr, son of Alexander and Sarah (Blake) Carr, was born February 28, 1845, in West Vincent township, and received his education in the public schools of the neighborhood. For the purpose of learning the carpenter's trade he was apprenticed to Mr. John R. Dolby, with whom he remained three years, and at the end of that time he entered upon the independent practice of his trade, which he followed successfully for ten or eleven years. He then abandoned his calling in order to work on the home farm, having a preference for agricultural pursuits, and in the course of time became the owner of the estate which is now his home. He is cordially liked by his neighbors, who once elected him to the office of inspector. Politically he is an Independent, and is connected with the Lutheran church.

Mr. Carr married Sarah Amanda Dolby, born July 4, 1843, and educated in the public school of West Vincent. She is a daughter of Joseph Dolby, and his other children were: Mary, who married Monroe Miller, a carpenter and contractor, who is now deceased; Lewis, who enlisted in the army during the Civil war, and died in the service; Wheelen, who is a carpenter and contractor, and married Ella Woodruff; and Martha, who became the wife of David Cloud, who is now deceased.

JOHN ANDREW MOONEY, who was for many years a successful farmer and esteemed citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, was a son of John Mooney, who was born in Philadelphia, and for a long period led the life of a farmer in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county. He married Mary Mitchell and they were the parents of two sons: William, who served in the army during the Civil war, and lost his life in the battle of Antietam; and John Andrew, mentioned at length hereinafter. John Mooney, the father, died in Schuylkill township, John Andrew Mooney, son of John and Mary (Mitchell) Mooney, was born June 7, 1843, in Lower Merion township, Montgomery county, where he obtained his education in the public schools. After working for a time as the assistant of his father on the home farm, he moved to West Vincent, where he lived on his own property. His farm, both from an agricultural and a financial point of view, was maintained in a flourishing condition, the result of the constant and skillful attention which he bestowed upon it and the energetic efforts which he made for its improvement. In consequence of his strict application to his duties as a farmer, he had little time or opportunity for participation in public affairs beyond the discharge of the essential obligations of a good citizen. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party, and his church connections were with the Lutheran denomination.

Mr. Mooney married Mary A. Clevestine, and the following children were born to them: Laura, who died at the age of seven years; Herbert, who is a blacksmith at Williams' Corner, and married Ellen Roland; John Henry, who died at an early age; Martin Luther, who is a farmer and resides on the homestead; Mary, who is now deceased; Maella Elva, who married Albert Strough, a bridge worker; Effie Lucretia, who resides at home; and Joseph Adolph, who is a journeyman blacksmith. The death of Mr. Mooney, which took place in February, 1896, was sincerely lamented not only by his immediate family and close friends, but by all who had ever been associated with him in neighborly or church relations and who regarded him as, in all respects, a truly estimable man and an honest citizen.

Mrs. Mooney is a granddaughter of John Clevestine, who came from Berks county, to Chester county, where he engaged in farming in East Pikeland township. He was a man of some influence in the community, and held the office of school director. His son, Henry, who was also a farmer, married Mary, daughter of Benjamin Emery, and they were the parents of the following children: Aaron, who was a farmer in Chester county, and married Cynthia Bisson; Elizabeth, who married Henry Waleigh, a farmer in East Pikeland; Mary A., who was educated in the public schools of West Vincent and at the Irondale Seminary, and became the wife of John Andrew Mooney, as mentioned above; Hannah E., who married Robb Moses, a farmer of West Vincent; Johanna, who died unmarried at the age of forty-eight; John, who is a farmer; and Henry, who is a farmer near the old home.

JOHN W. WILSON, a recognized leader among the younger farmers of West Vincent township, Chester county, belongs to a family which has long been residents in this township, being a son of Addison Wilson, a native of West Vincent, where he was born December 5, 1840.

After leaving the public schools, where he received his education, he engaged in farming and devoted himself all his life to that occupation. Commanding as he did by ability and strength of character; the respect of his neighbors, he took a prominent part in local affairs, holding the office of supervisor for one year, and that of school director for the unusually long period of eighteen years. He married Rebecca Shick. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson: Edward, who is employed as an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad; Raymond, who died in infancy; Clarence, who was educated in the public schools, and resides at home; and John W., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Wilson, the father of the family, expired August 10, 1902; his death being a great bereavement to his family and a cause of sincere regret to all who knew him.

John W. Wilson, son of Addison and Rebecca (Shick) Wilson, was born January 18, 1876, in West Vincent, his education being acquired in the public schools of the township. Since leaving school he has applied himself with assiduity and energy to the labors of a farmer, with results which have afforded ample evidence of his talents as an agriculturist, and have advanced him to the influential position which he occupies in the ranks of the younger generation of the Chester county farmers. While not lacking the interest of a good citizen in all that concerns the public welfare, he does not participate actively in politics. He is a member of the Lutheran church.

The Wilson family has been and is still represented in various walks of life, by the brothers and sisters of Mr. Addison Wilson, whose names are as follows: John, who is an engineer on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad; Mary, who became the wife of Edward Williams; Ellen, whose husband, George Christman, was a carpenter, and served six months in the army during the Civil war; Sophia, who is the wife of Levi Rettew, a carpenter, living in Spring City.

HENRY CLEVENSTINE, a prosperous farmer and esteemed citizen of Chester township, Chester county, is a grandson of John Clevens-tine, who in connection with the labors of a farmer followed the trade of a blacksmith, and also that of a wheelwright, in addition to carrying on the business of a contractor. This ancestor, so remarkable for the versatility of his talents, married Elizabeth Deary, and they were the parents of a son, Henry, who was born July 12, 1812, in Berks county, and in early life followed the trade of a blacksmith, but later became a farmer. He married Mary, daughter of Benjamin Emery, and they were the parents of the following children: 1. Aaron, who was a farmer, married Cynthia Bisson, and was the father of nine children, four of whom are living. 2. Elizabeth, who married Henry Walleigh, a farmer, and had seven children, all of whom are living. 3. Mary Ann, who became the wife of John Andrew Mooney, a farmer, and was the mother of seven children, five of whom are living. 4. Hannah, who married Robert Moses, a farmer and market trader, and their family consisted of seven children, all of whom with the exception of one are still living. 5. Joanna, who is now deceased. 6. John, who was a farmer, and married Ella Detwiler and they were the parents of five children, all of whom are living. 7. Esther, who married John Heistand, and was the mother of three children, all of whom are living. 8. Ada, who became the wife of John Reiff, a farmer and dealer in nursery and greenhouse produce. 9. Henry, mentioned at length hereinafter. 10. Horace Latshaw, who was the assistant of his father in the management of the home farm, and married Mary Kanower. 11. Bertha, who became the wife of Charles Millard, who practiced the trade of a moulder in Spring City.

Henry Clevens-tine, son of Henry and Mary (Emery) Clevens-tine, was born April 8, 1853, and received his education in the public schools. Choosing to devote himself for life to agricultural pursuits, he became a farmer at an early age and is now by reason of the energy and assiduity with which he has applied himself to the duties of his calling, recognized as one of the leading agriculturists of the county. He is a man of influence in local affairs, and served for one year as judge of election. His political principles are those advanced and upheld by the Democratic party. He and his family belong to the Lutheran church.

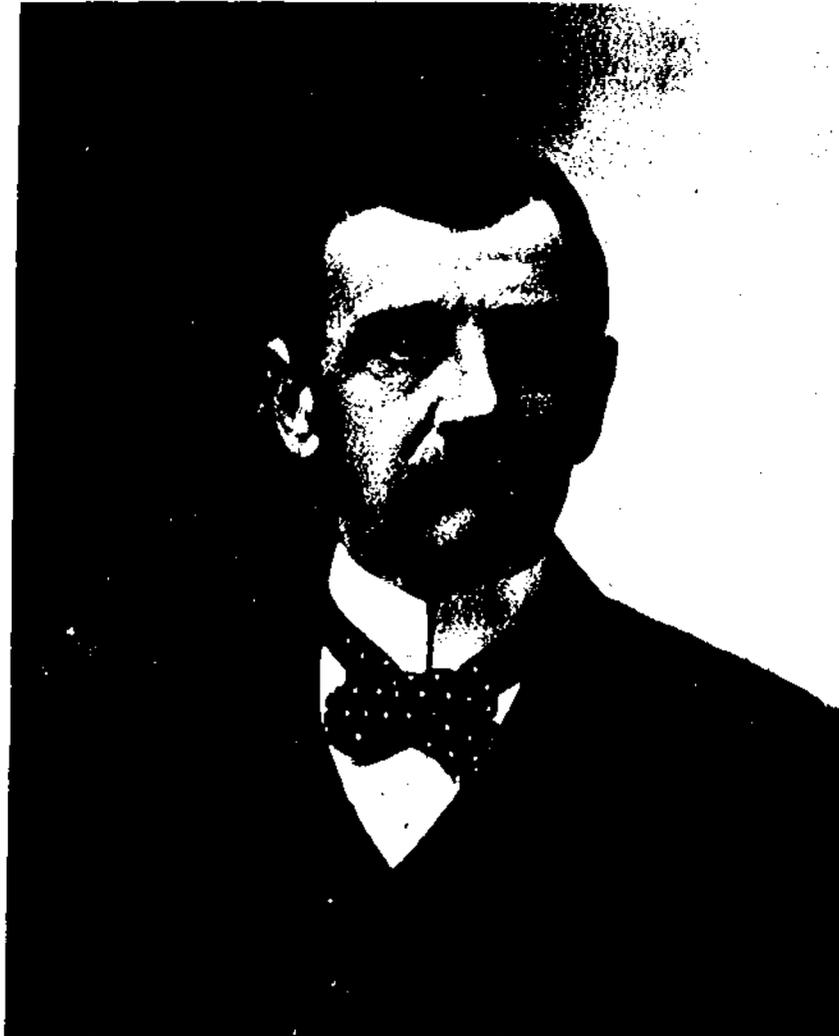

Mr. Clevens-tine married Mary Lucretia, daughter of Daniel Latshaw, of East Vincent. Mrs. Clevens-tine was born November 27, 1854, and was educated in the public schools. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Clevens-tine: Milton, Edna, Horace and Erma. All these children are still at home with their parents. Mr. Clevens-tine numbers among his immediate relatives a martyr to the cause of freedom, his cousin John, mentioned above, who served in the army during the Civil war, having been killed by the bursting of a shell.

THOMAS B. DEWEES, merchant, capitalist, and veteran of the Civil war, has been conspicuous in the business and social life of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, for more than a decade. He comes of a line of French Huguenots, for two centuries resident in Pennsylvania, that has been welded into American citizenship in the fire of our two great national crises.

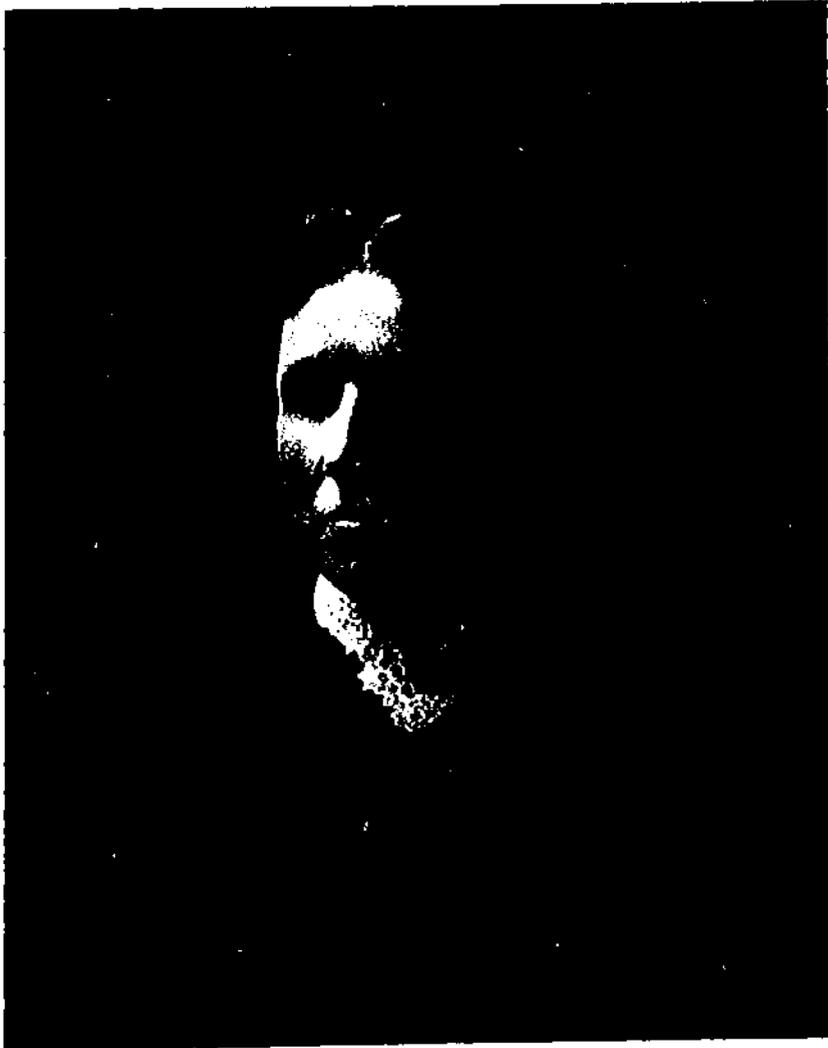

The Dewees family in the United States have descended from the two sons of a widow of that name, who came to Pennsylvania from Holland in 1703. The great-grandfather of Thomas B. Dewees in the male line was born in Eastern Pennsylvania, and was the owner of a large flouring mill at Valley Forge at the beginning of the Revolutionary war. He threw himself into the struggle for independence and became a colonel in the American army. His business being ruined when peace was finally restored, he engaged in iron manufacturing, in which industry he was a pioneer. He died about 1782, at an advanced age.

Walter Dewees, son of Colonel Dewees, was born at Olney, Bucks county, and, following in the line of his father's business, became an important factor in developing the iron industry of Pennsylvania. He was the owner of several extensive plants—the Olney Iron Works, the Catawissa iron furnace in Northumberland county, and the Laurel iron furnaces of Chester county. About 1840 he bought the Marsh Hotel property in East Nantmeal township, Chester county, and for a time made it his residence. He was a Whig, a man of strong convictions and great decision of character. He married a woman named Bull, and reared a family. He lived to be eighty-two years old, and died at his home in Philadelphia in 1858.

Thomas B. Dewees, son of Walter Dewees, was born in 1813 in Chester county, and lived there all his life. He became a farmer of West Vincent township, and brought to his calling enterprise characteristic of his line. He was a Whig and a Republican, and served his township for many years as school director. With his family, he was an attendant of the Episcopal church. His wife was Elizabeth Hause, daughter of Jacob Hause, of East Nantmeal township, whom he married in 1835. Twelve children were born to the couple, and Mr. Dewees died at his home in West Vincent township March 8, 1876, at the age of sixty-three.

Thomas. B. Sewell.

MRS. THOMAS B. DEWEES.

Among the children of Thomas B. and Elizabeth (Hause) Dewees, was Thomas B., mentioned at the beginning of this article. He was born on his father's farm February 28, 1844, and received his primary education in the local schools. Later on he was a student at the academy at Freeland, Montgomery county, and at the Tremont Seminary at Norristown. When only sixteen he enlisted in Company F, Twelfth Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia of emergency men. He became a good soldier, and again on March 10, 1864, he enlisted as first lieutenant of Company E, Forty-fifth Regiment, United States Colored Infantry. With his command he was in the battles before Petersburg, at Bermuda Hundred, Strawberry Plains, Fort Fisher, Fair Oaks, and in the battle on the Dutch Gap Canal, near Richmond. This regiment afterward saw service in Texas. It was stationed at Sabine Pass, Jefferson county, and also did duty on the Rio Grande. He was honorably discharged from military duties December 19, 1865, with a notable record of patriotic service. He returned to Pennsylvania and taught school for two years, when he opened a grocery business in Philadelphia. After a few months he disposed of this interest, but for the remainder of his life he has been engaged in some line of mercantile trade. He carried on a general store at Birchrunville, West Vincent township, and was postmaster there for ten years. For about two years he conducted a men's furnishing business at West Chester. In 1889 he removed to Phoenixville, and bought out Kennedy & Davis, hardware merchants, and this business he enlarged and extended to embrace house furnishing goods and marble and granite works. In 1896 Mr. Dewees sold this business to J. F. Yerkes & Co., of Philadelphia. Upon the death of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Templin, Mr. Dewees fell heir by will to her property at Birchrunville, to which place he removed April 1, 1897, and again resumed business there, in the meantime building a creamery, store building and public hall. He was also again appointed postmaster on October 1, 1898, soon after which he sold out his business in Birchrunville to Smiley & Davis, and rented to them his creamery, store building and public hall, and resigned his position of postmaster in favor of George D. Smiley, since which time he has lived a retired life.

Gifted with keen practical sense and executive ability, Captain Dewees has prospered in his business ventures, and aside from his local concerns is financially interested in several electric light plants and other enterprises in the west. He has traveled extensively in the west, and is thoroughly in touch with business conditions in that section. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of Josiah White Post, No. 45, Grand Army of the Republic. In 1874 he joined Sackack Tribe Improved Order of Red Men, Mt. Pickering Hall, which after several years' duration became extinct, and on April 1, 1903, joined Gana-noqua Tribe, No. 232, organized at Dewees' Hall, Birchrunville.

Captain Dewees has been twice married, his first wife, Hannah Templin, of Birchrunville, whom he married November 22, 1866, dying October 12, 1882. February 26, 1885, he married Ida L. Knerr, of West Vincent township. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. (Knerr) Dewees: 1. Mabel E., born April 7, 1886, who was educated in the public schools at Phoenixville and Birchrunville, and is now attending the State Normal School at West Chester, Pa., with a view of becoming a teacher. 2. Walter R. C., born April 10, 1888, died September 12, 1889. 3. Emma M., born September 17, 1890; now attending the high school at Birchrunville. 4. Ella D., born December 3, 1892, now in the public school. 5. Clara Knerr, born June 3, 1895. 6. H. Knight, born December 6, 1902. Mr. and Mrs. Dewees and daughter Mabel are active members of the Baptist church at Birchrunville. In the summer of 1902 Mr. Dewees tore out, remodeled and rebuilt his residence, which is now completed. The house contains fifteen rooms, supplied with modern conveniences of every character, including an Edison electric light system and hot-water heat in each room.

WILLIAM FRIDAY, a prosperous farmer and respected citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is descended from a well known family of German origin. It seems probable that the name has in the course of time been subjected to various orthographic changes before assuming its present form.

John Friday was a native of Lancaster county, and all his life followed the occupation of a farmer both in his birthplace and in Chester county, whither he removed at some time prior to 1840. He married Magdalena, daughter of John Yeager, by whom he was the father of two children: Jacob, who died young; and Elizabeth, who became the wife of Owen Posey, a farmer of North Coventry. After the death of his wife Mr. Friday married Catherine Bush, daughter of John Bush, a farmer, whose wife was a native of Germany and landed in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 26, 1793. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bush: Peter, a farmer; William, a farmer; Henry, a farmer; Jacob, a farmer; Mary, who became the wife of George Eagly; Caroline, who became the wife of William Morris; infant, name unknown; Charles, a farmer; Annie, who became the wife of Samuel Morris; Catherine, who became the wife of John Friday; Frederick, a farmer; Dorothy, who became the wife of George Miller; Phillip a farmer; infant, name unknown; Samuel, a farmer; and John, who died in early life. Mr. and Mrs. Friday were the parents of eight children, their names being as follows: 1. Jacob, who began life as a farmer, but afterward earned his livelihood as a teacher and in the course of time graduated from Gettysburg College and became a minister in the Lutheran church. 2. John, who engaged in farming and died in the seventeenth year of his age. 3. Christian, who was a farmer. 4. Joseph, also a farmer. 5. William, mentioned hereinafter. 6. Davis, who died at the age of seven years. 7. George Washington, a farmer and merchant. 8. Mary C., the wife of Jacob Keller.

William Friday, son of John and Catherine (Bush) Friday, was born July 20, 1840, in West Vincent. He received his education in the public schools, and his life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, in which his well-directed efforts guided as they have been by scientific knowledge and practical ability have received their merited reward. In politics the ancestors of Mr. Friday supported the doctrines and measures of the Democratic party, but his own tastes have never inclined him to participate actively in public affairs. In accordance with the traditions of his family he attends the Lutheran church.

Mr. Friday married Mary A. Ortlip, who was born February 23, 1841, in North Coventry township, and the following named children have been born to them: 1. John W., who married Rebecca Miller, and is a farmer on the old homestead; 2. William J., in his youth was a farmer, later served in the capacity of clerk in a mercantile business, for a period of time was the proprietor of a grocery store in West Philadelphia, but is now engaged in the insurance business; he married Lily A. Dunning, of Philadelphia, and they are the parents of one child; 3. Rebecca W., wife of George W. Henwood, who is engaged in the laundry business in Philadelphia; 4. Joseph R., who married Anna Bryson, and they are the parents of one child; he is a clerk in a mercantile business in Phoenixville; 5. E. S. Watkin, unmarried, resides at home and assists his father with the work on the farm; 6. Herman C., resides at home and also assists his father with the work on the farm.

Mrs. Friday is a great-granddaughter of Andrew Ortlip, whose son Samuel Ortlip was the father of William Ortlip, a miller by trade, but his declining years were spent in farming on a small scale. William Ortlip married Catherine Fry, daughter of Peter Fry, a carpenter and farmer, who built the old schoolhouse at Birchrunville. Peter Fry married Catherine Walt, a native of Montgomery county, and they were the parents of the following children: George, who was a shoemaker and merchant; Henry, who was the partner of his brother in the latter's mercantile business; John, who was a farmer; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Samuel Hause, a farmer; and Catherine, who became the wife of William Ortlip, as mentioned above. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Ortlip: Anna, who became the wife of William Neyman, a farmer; Samuel, who was a carpenter, and is now deceased; Isaac, who was a miller by trade; Jefferson, who enlisted in the army in 1861; Mahlon, now deceased; Mary, who is the wife of James Henderson; John, deceased, who was a miller by trade; Sarah, who became the wife of Abram Prizer, a wheelwright; Oliver, deceased; and Mariah, also deceased.

DAVID JONES BRUNER, an experienced farmer and respected citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, belongs to a family, which during two wars has contributed to the number of its country's defenders. Abram Bruner served in the army during the war of 1812, and his brother John, who was a native of Berks county, and afterward removed to Chester county, was a farmer. The latter married Maria Jones, who was born in Chester county, and was descended as the name indicates from a family of Welsh origin. They were the parents of the following children: William, who studied medicine in France, graduated in Philadelphia, went to California in 1849, and died August 10, 1886; Isaac, who was a farmer, and is now deceased; David Jones, mentioned at length hereinafter; Eliza, who married Scott Patton, a merchant of Columbia; Hannah, who became the wife of Jacob Dampman, a farmer of Chester county; Rebecca Frances, who married L. C. Tompson, a merchant of Pottsville; and Emma Margaret, who became the wife of Elihu Griffith, a farmer.

David Jones Bruner, son of John and Maria (Jones) Bruner, was born March 19, 1834, in Chester county, and received his primary education in the public schools. He afterward attended a private school presided over by Mr. Jesse Phillips and Mr. John Ralston, in Rockville, Honeybrook township; and after completing his education spent some time in assisting his father in the labors of the home farm. After an experience of western life, gained through a year's residence in Kansas, he returned home and settled on a farm in Berks county. Subsequently he purchased a farm in Chester county, which he cultivated successfully for twenty years. At the end of that time he moved to West Vincent township, and took up his abode on the farm which is now his home, and to the cultivation of which he devotes himself with gratifying results. Mr. Bruner numbers among the notable reminiscences of his life a military experience, he having served during the Civil war in the Emergency Corps as a member of Company F, commanded by Captain Barclay and forming part of the Forty-second Regiment. As a citizen Mr. Bruner is faithful to every duty, being animated by a sincere desire to promote to the best of his ability the welfare of the community in which he resides, and so thoroughly do his townsmen appreciate this trait in his character that they have elected him at different times to all the minor offices of the township. In politics he is a Republican, and his church connections are with the Presbyterian denomination.

Mr. Bruner married Anna Mary Lewis, and their children are: John Levis, Mary Elvina, and Edwin Roland. All these children reside in the homestead, the two sons assisting their father in the care and management of the estate. Mrs. Bruner is a daughter of Levis and Mary (James) Lewis, both natives of Chester county, where the former was born in 1809. They were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, Levina, Emma, Margart, Darlington, Franklin, and Anna Mary, who was born in May, 1842, in Philadelphia, and became the wife of David Jones Bruner as mentioned above.

CHARLES WEST DAVIS, of West Vincent township, Chester county, sagacious and enterprising both as a farmer and citizen, is a son of William Henry Harrison Davis, who was born March 4, 1841, and was a leader in the milk business. During the Civil war he served three months in the army. He married Rebecca Ann Frame, born March 17, 1841, and they were the parents of the following children: 1. William, Jr., who was born in Philadelphia, was engaged in the milk business in Yeadon, Delaware county, and married Belle Gaul, a native of that county. 2. Charles West, mentioned at length hereinafter. 3. Howard Milton, who was born in Darby, Delaware county, was employed as a clerk in Mr. Joel J. Baily's store, and then engaged in the milk business in Yeadon. He married Laura Haney, a native of Philadelphia. 4. Herman Allen, who was also born in Darby, and was at first engaged in the butter and egg business, but afterward returned to his trade, which was that of a machinist. 5. Ralph, died in infancy. 6. Edna Earle, who was born in Delaware county. 7. Frederick Carroll, who was born in Yeadon, Delaware county. The death of Mr. Davis, the father of the family, occurred April 5, 1893, but his widow is still living and resides in Yeadon, Delaware county.

Charles West Davis, son of William Henry Harrison and Rebecca Ann (Frame) Davis, was born May 7, 1867, in Sharon Hill, Delaware county, and obtained his early education in the public schools, subsequently attending Bryant & Stratton's Business College in Philadelphia. He was for a time employed by Edgar H. Chew, an upholsterer in Germantown, and then before he had attained his majority, he went into the milk business in Philadelphia and continued in that occupation for two years. After spending the same length of time as a clerk in the United States postoffice, he returned to the milk business, in which he met with such a measure of success as warranted him at the end of eight years in disposing of his interests and retiring to West Vincent township, there to lead the life of an independent farmer. In December, 1901, he assisted in the organization of the Pickering Valley Milk-shippers' Union, and was elected its first president. He is a member of Lodge No. 132, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In politics he supports the measures advocated by the Republican party. He is connected with the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Davis married Katie Ulrick, and their children were: Elsie May, born February 20, 1890; Ralph Clifford, born September 1, 1891, and now deceased; and Meta Ulrick, born April 22, 1894. Mrs. Davis is a daughter of Jacob K. Ulrick, who was born in October, 1825, in Delaware county, and followed the milk business continuously for sixty-one years, with the single brief exception of one year. He served the Children's Hospital with milk from the foundation of the institution until his death. At first they used but one pint a day, but this amount was soon increased until the demand was about one hundred and twenty quarts per day. He married Elizabeth Carsley, who was born December 15, 1825, and the following children were born to them: Charles Carsley, who was engaged in the milk business; Elizabeth, who married George W. Rose, a farmer; Leonard Smith, who was a farmer, and married Lavinia Helms; Ida, who became the wife of Wilson M. Leech, a farmer and milk-dealer; Thomas Lodge, who was a farmer, and married Ida J. Custer; and Katie, who was born November 14, 1867, in Darby, Delaware county, was educated in the public schools and at the Friends' Central School, on Fifteenth and Race streets, Philadelphia, and became the wife of Charles West Davis, as mentioned above.

MORGAN HOFFMAN CLARK, of West Vincent township, Chester county, a man of varied experience and sound ability, is a son of Richard Clark, who during a long life was a leader among the farmers of the county. He married Elizabeth Roberson, a native of the Valley, and the following children were born to them: Martha, now deceased; John, who was until twelve years ago engaged in farming, and then began to follow the carpenter's trade; Morgan Hoffman, mentioned at length hereinafter; Rachael, now deceased; Isaiah, who was a farmer, and is now deceased; Melinda, who married John Schofner, a farmer and cattle-dealer, and after his death became the wife of George Baker, who is engaged in the real estate business. All these children were born on the homestead. Mr. Clark, the father, died at the venerable age of ninety-one, honored by all who knew him both as a man and a citizen. His widow also is remarkable for longevity, still surviving him, at ninety years of age.

Morgan Hoffman Clark, son of Richard and Elizabeth (Roberson) Clark, was born November 15, 1842, in Uwchlan township, where he was educated in the public schools. Until reaching the age of twenty-four, he was a farmer as his father had been before him but then feeling a preference for another line of endeavor he went to Adamstown, Lancaster county, where he became the proprietor of the American Eagle Hotel. His success was such that he remained in this position for twenty-one years. At the end of that time he returned to the old homestead, and resumed the agricultural pursuits which he had for so long a period abandoned. He has since led the peaceful life of a farmer, surrounded by the scenes of his boyhood and youth, and tilling the land on which he was born. He also takes an active interest in local affairs, and was placed by the vote of his neighbors in the position of supervisor, an office which he held for six years. In his political opinions he inclines to the point of view taken by the Democratic party. He and his family belong to the Baptist church.

Mr. Clark married Ella, daughter of Alexander Carr, a native of West Vincent township. Mrs. Carr was born in 1841, in West Vincent township, where she received her education in the public schools.

ISAIAH FETTERS, a venerable farmer and citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is a son of John Feters, who was born in 1777, in West Pikeland, and combined the lime-burning industry with the labors of a farmer. He served in the war of 1812, and was one of the number stationed at Marcus Hook. He married Mary Sloyer and they were the parents of the following children: 1. Henry, who was born in Whiteland. 2. George, who was born in the Valley, and was a farmer all his life. 3. Isaiah, mentioned hereinafter. 4. Elizabeth, who was born in West Pikeland, as were nearly all the younger children; she married James Lumis, a merchant, who is now deceased. Mrs. Lumis is now living in West Chester. 5. Hannah, who married Albert Missmer, a merchant of Pottstown, and is deceased. 6. Margaret, who became the wife of Holland K. Brownback, a farmer of Downingtown. 7. Anna M., who married Frank Hallman, a farmer of West Pikeland. 8. Mary Jane, who became the wife of Lewis H. Plett, a farmer, who afterward engaged in mercantile business.

Isaiah Feters, son of John and Mary (Sloyer) Feters, was born March 3, 1819, in Whiteland township, and received his early education in the public schools of Pikeland, after which he assisted his father in the labors of the home farm. On reaching his twenty-sixth year he went to West Vincent township, where he engaged in farming for himself and where he has since led the life of an enterprising, successful agriculturist. He is connected with the Lutheran church, in this particular following in the footsteps of his forefathers, who were members of that denomination.

Mr. Feters married Mary Ann, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Garret) Kulp. The former was a farmer, and at the same time carried on the business of a miller. He and his wife were the parents of the following children, who were all born in West Vincent: William, Elizabeth, Margaret, Joshua, who was a farmer, and was also engaged in the lumber business, and is now living in retirement in Royersford. Mary Ann, who was born July 7, 1819, was educated in the public schools of the neighborhood, and became the wife of Isaiah Feters, as mentioned above.

U. S. GRANT RAPP. The Rapp family, of Chester county, Pennsylvania, whose representatives have been prominently and actively identified with the commercial and agricultural interests of that section of the state, is one of the oldest and most honored, its earliest ancestor as far as there is any authentic record having been Barney Rapp, who was born near Valley Forge, in Schuylkill township, where he followed his trade of blacksmith in connection with farming pursuits. He married and reared a family of seven children, namely: Barney, John, Joseph H., Hannah Bane, Esther, Rachel Boyer and Benjamin Rapp.

Joseph H. Rapp, third son of Barney Rapp, and grandfather of U. S. Grant Rapp, was born in Schuylkill township, Pennsylvania, in January, 1801. In early life he learned the trade of coachmaker, which he successfully pursued in the towns of Phoenixville and Kimberton, and then in the vicinity of the former town. In politics he was an old line Whig, and in religion a member of the Phoenix Baptist church, in which he served for many years in the capacity of deacon. By his union to Margaret Supplee, a daughter of Peter and Hannah (Easton) Supplee, the following named children were born: Benjamin Franklin, Joseph E., George W., Silas S., Peter, and Eliza J. Townsend. Joseph H. Rapp, father of these children, died in March, 1883, aged eighty-two years.

PROPERTY OF WILLIAM WAY; BEEN IN WAY FAMILY SINCE TIME OF WILLIAM PENN.

George W. Rapp, third son of Joseph H. and Margaret Rapp, and father of U. S. Grant Rapp, was born on the present site of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 31, 1837. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood, and after completing his studies learned the trade of miller with Benjamin Prizer. He followed his trade in the vicinity of Kimberton for four years, after which he spent several years in Canada, subsequently returning to his native state. He was then employed by Joseph Fronfield, the proprietor of a mill which later became the property of Mr. Rapp. The following four years were devoted to agricultural pursuits on a farm consisting of seventy-five acres of fertile and well-watered land, which he purchased in 1879. In the same year he purchased the mill where he was formerly employed, which is situated on French creek and has excellent water power. He is now conducting a wholesale and retail business in flour and all kinds of feed, under the firm name of G. W. Rapp & Sons, runs a flour wagon to Spring City and Phoenixville, and ships constantly to Philadelphia, where his brands are well known and in good demand. On December 28, 1862, Mr. Rapp married Andora Yeager, daughter of Peter and Barbara (Tancy) Yeager. Their children are: Joseph P., U. S. Grant, and Anna Margaretta, wife of Irvin Moyer, a farmer of East Vincent township. Mr. Rapp is a Republican in politics.

U. S. Grant Rapp, second son of George W. and Andora Rapp, was born November 11, 1865, on the old homestead farm of his grandfather and father, located east of Kimberton, now the property of Joshua Rhoades. His preliminary education was acquired at the common schools of his native town, and this was supplemented by attendance at Pierces Business College in the city of Philadelphia. His first business experience was gained on his father's farm, later he was employed in the capacity of salesman for supplies in his father's mill, and in 1899 he located on the farm where he now resides, which is the old homestead of the Heistand family, who are related to his father-in-law, and this property has been in the possession of the family for over a hundred years. He conducts a general farm and dairy business, and during the passing years has met with a large degree of success in this undertaking. Mr. Rapp is an Independent in politics, and stands high in the community as an honorable and upright citizen.

Mr. Rapp was united in marriage May 31, 1890, to Mary E. Detwiler, who was born September 1, 1869, a daughter of Abram Detwiler. Their children are: Irma D., Irene May, Joseph Howard, Warren, who died at the age of five years, Vernon, and William Layton Rapp.

WILLIAM WAY, a prosperous farmer of West Caln township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in that township, August 21, 1864, and is a lineal descendant of Caleb and Rebecca (Mendenhall) Way, founders of the family in America.

Caleb Way was a son of William and Ann Way, while his wife was a daughter of Robert and Phoebe Mendenhall, and she was born October 3, 1740, and their children were as follows: James, born August 26, 1763; Phoebe, born September 28, 1765; John, born November 17, 1766; Caleb, born February 15, 1769; Robert, born November 14, 1770; Joseph, born August 15, 1772; Ann, born August 28, 1775; William, born November 15, 1777; Jacob, born October 8, 1779; Rebecca, born February 11, 1782; Mary, born April 1, 1785.

Jacob Way, seventh in order of birth in the above named family, married Catherine Hood, and they were the grandparents of our subject. Their children were as follows. Joseph, who married Mary Reese, and they had one child—Jacob, now deceased; James; Esther, who married David Williams, and died February 7, 1849, having had three children—Joseph, Andrew Jackson and Catherine.

James Way, of the above family and father of our subject, was born November 20, 1813, in West Caln township, while his wife, Sarah Jane Way, is the daughter of Joseph and Ann Hughes, of Wagontown. Joseph Hughes is a son of John and Jane Hughes. James and Sarah Jane Way purchased the Caleb Way homestead, on which they made their home. Their family was as follows, viz: Anna Mary, born August 20, 1848, married Edward Grubb, and had one child, Gertrude, and she married Harry E. Williams, Jr.; Caleb H., born July 14, 1850, died October 26, 1851; Catherine, born April 21, 1852, died January 4, 1864; Howard, born August 10, 1854, married Emma Ash, and they had five children—Horace, Ralph, Sarah, Marion and Charles, residents of Downingtown, Pennsylvania; James, born September 14, 1856, married Ida Jane White, and they had four children, two living, James and Laura, and they reside in Sadsburyville; Sallie, born July 6, 1860, died January 2, 1864; William Way, our subject; Florence, born April 28, 1867, married Elmer E. Schrack, of Wagontown, on April 26, 1893, and they have three children—James, Henry and Ernest Way, and one deceased.

William Way, the subject of this sketch, received an excellent education in the public schools of his neighborhood and the Maxwell Academy, at Coatesville. In the fall of 1892 he purchased the original Way homestead, which embraces one hundred acres of highly cultivated land, and he has been engaged in operating his property ever since, meeting with unqualified success.

On March 2, 1892, he was married to Martha Jobson Maris, of Delaware county, and they have had two children, twins,—Sarah Elizabeth and Clara Hoopes. Mrs. Way is a daughter of Ellis and Hannah (Jobson) Maris. The maternal great-grandparents of Mrs. Way were Samuel and Martha Jobson, while the grandparents are Joseph and Hannah Jobson. The Jobson family is well known in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Five children were born to the parents of Mrs. Way, namely: Mrs. Way; Thomas H., who married first,—Ella Greenwood, by whom he had two children, (Ellis H. and William G.), and second, he married Bertha March; Elizabeth B. is unmarried; Anna B., who married Daniel McLain Emery; Horace, who is unmarried.

In politics Mr. Way is a Democrat, but while supporting the principles of his party he does not take an active part in local affairs, preferring to devote his time and attention to his farm. Through industry and uprightness of living he has gained the respect of the neighborhood, and possesses many friends throughout Chester county.

PARK VERNON MOSTELLER, who occupies a leading place among the enterprising citizens of Birchrunville, Pennsylvania, is a grandson of Henry Mosteller, who was the father of the following children: Jesse, who was born in West Vincent, and became a farmer; Albert, who was also born in West Vincent, as were all the younger children, led a roving life; Harry, who was a farmer; Lillian; and Emma. The three last named are all deceased. Another son, William, was born February 5, 1846, and married Annie Jones, a descendant in all probability of one of the old Welsh families of Pennsylvania.

Park Vernon Mosteller, son of William and Annie (Jones) Mosteller, was born May 15, 1870, in West Vincent township, and obtained his education in the public schools of Kimberton, at the same time assisting his father in the labors of the farm. He was apprenticed to March & Brownback for the purpose of learning the trade of a stove moulder, working three years and a half as an apprentice, and four years and a half as a journeyman. He had always possessed great taste for music and had availed himself of every opportunity of receiving instruction in the art, his teachers having been Miss Ewing and Miss Shaffer. Through all his changes of occupation he had continued his music lessons and in spite of the many hindrances and disadvantages under which he labored, his progress was such that he was able after a time to become a teacher of music in Pottstown. That the estimable qualities of Mr. Mosteller are appreciated by his townsmen is evident from the fact that he has held for a year the office of school-tax collector. His political principles are those promulgated and supported by the Democratic party. He is a member of the Lutheran church, where his musical abilities enable him to render valuable service by acting as leader of the choir.

Mr. Mosteller married Laura, born May 14, 1868, in Pottstown, a daughter of Henry Stroung, also a native of Pottstown, where he was born November 15, 1820. During the Civil war he acted as a recruiting officer, and drilled men for the service. His brother, Samuel Strough, served as a private in the army during the Mexican war.

LAMARTINE DARLINGTON, one of the enterprising and scientific agriculturists of the township of Pocopson, Chester county, Pennsylvania, traces his ancestry to Job and Mary Darlington, who were natives of Darnhall, Cheshire, England, where the following named children were born to them: Abraham, John, Joseph, Matthew, Jane and Mary, and of these children Abraham and John came to Pennsylvania. The father of these children was interred August 11, 1731, according to the records of Whitegate; his wife passed away December 18, 1728.

Abraham Darlington, eldest son of Job and Mary Darlington, was born in 1690, and was bound apprentice to a saddler when he had attained the age of eleven years. He pursued this occupation for a number of years in Aston township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, but in 1723, purchased a farm in Birmingham from the heirs of John Fred. He was married in the Friends' Meeting House, March, 1712, to Deborah Carter, daughter of Joseph Carter. She died leaving no children, and Mr. Darlington married Elizabeth Hillborn, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Hillborn, of Bucks county. Their children were: Mary, Deborah, Elizabeth, Abraham, Thomas, John, Hannah, Rachel, Job and Rebecca. Mr. Darlington's death occurred February 9, 1776, and his wife died December 28, 1771.

Thomas Darlington, fifth child in order of birth born to Abraham and Elizabeth Darlington, was born April 25, 1754, and subsequently settled on a farm, which consisted of one hundred acres, in East Bradford; this property was purchased by his father from John Strode in 1750. He married Hannah Brinton, daughter of Edward Brinton, of Birmingham, and their children were: Edward, Abraham, Thomas, Jesse, Amos, George, Stephen, Hannah, Elizabeth, Emanuel and Brinton Darlington.

George Darlington, sixth son of Thomas and Hannah Darlington, was born August 22, 1766, and was a farmer and miller by occupation and trade, following the former named line of industry on a tract of land west of the Brandywine, on the Pocopson stream. He was united in marriage to Lydia Barnard, daughter of Richard and Lettice Barnard, and their children were: Richard, Stephen, Cyrus, Joseph, Eliza, Lydia and Hannah Darlington.

Stephen Darlington, second son of George and Lydia Darlington, and father of Lamartine Darlington, was born in the township of Pocopson, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 28, 1799. He acquired a common school education, but being of a studious disposition he continued his studies after leaving school, taking up the study of mathematics and the languages, and he subsequently became one of the finest French linguists in the state of Pennsylvania. He settled on a farm bordering the Brandywine, which was formerly the property of Henry Hoopes, and by his skillful treatment of the soil and his thorough knowledge of agricultural affairs, soon had his estate so it ranked among the most productive and best cultivated in that section of the state. He also paid particular attention to his buildings and fences, the latter being constructed of iron and placed upon a stone basis so securely as to stand the test of a century.

On September 15, 1825, Mr. Darlington married Ann Mendenhall, who was born October 27, 1804, a daughter of Aaron Mendenhall, who was the owner of a fine farm in Pennsbury township which had descended as a patrimonial estate from his father, Isaac, who inherited it from his father, Joseph, one of the sons of Benjamin Mendenhall, who came to this country with his brother John, about the year 1686, from Married Hill, Wiltshire, England, and settled in Pennsylvania. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Darlington: 1. Fenelon M., named in honor of Francis Fenelon, who was born in the chateau Fenelon, province of Perigord, in 1651; he was the author of many valuable works, his first article being "On the Education of Girls," which is still a standard authority, and the latest collected edition embraces twenty octavo volumes, and includes every variety of subjects—theology, philosophy, history, literature, ancient and modern, oratory, especially the eloquence of the pulpit, asceticism, and spirituality in all its branches. His death occurred in 1715. Fenelon was born March 27, 1827, and died April 4, 1883; 2. Sarah, born September 20, 1828; 3. Louise, born October 15, 1830; 4. Emma, born September 16, 1833, and Lamartine, the subject of the sketch, born June 22, 1849, and named in honor of Alphonse Lamartine, who was born at Macon, October 21, 1792, and who for eighteen years devoted himself almost exclusively to literary pursuits; he was the author of "Memoirs of My Youth," in which he gives a touching account of the hardships to which his family was subjected during the Reign of Terror; he also wrote a book entitled "History of the Revolution of 1848," "History of the Restoration of Monarchy in France," and "History of Turkey;" his death occurred in 1869.

Mr. and Mrs. Darlington celebrated their golden wedding September 15, 1875, with appropriate and interesting ceremonies, and the address of welcome was a poetical effort on the part of Stephen Darlington. His death occurred May 16, 1884, after a long and practically useful life, and the following beautiful and well deserved tribute was paid to his memory: "Wrote Stephen Darlington was a model agriculturist, he was also a constant student, a ripe scholar, and as a linguist had few equals, if any, in his native state." Mrs. Darlington passed away March 9, 1885, aged eighty years.

Lamartine Darlington, youngest son of Stephen and Ann Darlington, was born on the old homestead in Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 22, 1849. He was educated in the local schools and the West Chester Academy, and after laying aside his school books he devoted his attention to farming interests on the ancestral estate, where he has resided up to the present time (1903). Mr. Darlington was a consistent member of the Society of Friends, as were also his parents, who uniformly attended their meetings of worship and business.

Mr. Darlington was united in marriage to Sarah Ann Sharpless, the ceremony being performed at the Friends' Meeting House in Middletown township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, March 13, 1879. A daughter of Joel and Sarah Ann Sharpless.

EMLEN CLAYTON FAUCETT. The Faucett family, prominently associated with the development and progress of Chester county, Pennsylvania, since the early part of the eighteenth century, trace their origin to George and Isabella Faucett who, according to supposition, are the founders of the family name in the state of Pennsylvania. In colonial times the family inhabited a log cabin in which they conducted a country store, but this was subsequently demolished, and in the remodeling of the mansion which succeeded this place of abode, some of the timber of the primitive log cabin was used as joists, being as good as when hewn from the forest.

The line of descent is traced from the pioneer ancestors, George and Isabella Faucett, to their grandson, Henry Faucett, who was born in Westtown township, Chester county, where he resided with his wife, Hannah Faucett, and reared a family of eight children, namely: Ebenezer, born January 28, 1783; Margaret, born October 17, 1784; George, born October 15, 1786; Rebecca, born November 25, 1788; Sarah, born July 29, 1792; Hannah, born April 11, 1796; Anna, born November 18, 1800, and Margaret (2), born November 9, 1807.

George Faucett, second son of Henry and Hannah Faucett, was born on the old homestead in Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 15, 1786. He was united in marriage to Mary Yearsley, and of their family of eight children the first five were born in Westtown township and the birth of the three younger members occurred in the township of Birmingham. The family consisted of the following named children: Nathan, born December 27, 1823; Hannah N., born August 6, 1825; Henry, born January 12, 1828; George, born August 1, 1830; Mary Jane, born December 1, 1833; Ebenezer, born April 2, 1836; Joseph, born August 16, 1838, and Elizabeth, born June 6, 1840.

Nathan Faucett, eldest son of George and Mary Faucett, was also born on the old homestead in Westtown township, Chester county, December 27, 1823, but subsequently removed to Birmingham township, where he resides at the present time (1903). He was married three times, his first wife having been Isabella Smith, who bore him three children, namely: Anna Mary, who became the wife of James Kirkpatrick, George S., and Estella, who was united in marriage to Pennock Williamson. His second wife was Elizabeth Taylor, and after her decease he chose for his third wife Sadie Sharp, who is living at the present time.

George S. Faucett, only son of Nathan and Isabella Faucett, was born on the family estate in Dilworthtown, Birmingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 19, 1848, and obtained his education at the local schools and the Military Academy at West Chester. He was an enterprising and progressive farmer, and served his township in the capacity of school director for eighteen years, besides holding other local offices of importance and trust. On September 22, 1869, he married Ada Clayton, who was born December 2, 1845, a daughter of Harlan (born October 17, 1809) and Elizabeth Clayton, and granddaughter of James and Mary Clayton. Their children are: Emilen Clayton, born September 27, 1872; Elizabeth, born October 16, 1874, and Nathan Yearsley, born January 29, 1881.

Emilen Clayton, eldest son of George S. and Ada Faucett, was born in Dilworthtown, Birmingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 27, 1872. His early education was acquired at the district school, and this was supplemented by a course at the Friends' Graded Academy at West Chester and Pritchetts College at Philadelphia, where he was qualified to enter upon the active duties of a business career. He subsequently removed to Pocopsin township, Chester county, where he has since followed agricultural pursuits, making a specialty of dairy farming. His operations are conducted on an extensive scale, and being a man of progressive ideas and energetic will power, he is now in receipt of a good income from his farm land. He is well known in the community for his honesty and enterprise, having discharged the duties in all positions of life with promptness and fidelity.

On August 15, 1894, Mr. Faucett married Aneta Regester, who was born September 6, 1874, a daughter of Courtland and Lavina (Coburn) Regester, of West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, the latter named being a daughter of John W. and Susana Coburn. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Faucett, namely: Ernest Clayton, born February 10, 1896; Herman Regester, born November 4, 1897; James Elwin and Nathan Cornell, twins, born May 11, 1901.

EBENEZER FAUCETT, a representative of one of the oldest families of Chester county, and serving in the capacity of school director of the township of Pocopsin, which office he has creditably and efficiently filled for the past twelve years, was born on a farm in Birmingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 2, 1836.

Henry Faucett, grandfather of Ebenezer Faucett, was born in Westtown township, Chester county, October 15, 1786, a grandson of George and Isabella Faucett, who were the pioneer ancestors of the family. Henry Faucett was a man of energy and activity, taking interest and part in every enterprise and movement calculated to improve the growth and development of the community. The following named children were born to Henry Faucett and his wife, Hannah Faucett; Ebenezer, born January 28, 1783; Margaret, born October 17, 1784; George, born October 15, 1786; Rebecca, born November 25, 1788; Sarah, born July 29, 1792; Hannah, born April 11, 1796; Anna, born November 18, 1800, and Margaret (2), born November 9, 1807.

George Faucett, father of Ebenezer Faucett, and second son of Henry and Hannah Faucett, was born October 15, 1786, in Chester county.

Pennsylvania. He was a prominent man of affairs, and was actively associated with the material and social interests of the township in which he resided. He was united in marriage to Mary Yearsley, and they became the parents of eight children, namely: 1. Nathan, born in Westtown township, December 27, 1823, married Isabella Smith, and three children were born to them—Anna Mary, wife of James Kirkpatrick; George S., who married Ada Clayton, and Estella, wife of Pennock Williamson; after the death of his wife, Nathan married Elizabeth Taylor, and after her death he was united in marriage to Sadie Sharp. 2. Hannah N., born in Westtown township, August 6, 1825; 3. Henry, born in Westtown township, January 12, 1828; 4. George, born in the township of Westtown, August 1, 1830; 5. Mary Jane, born December 1, 1833, in Westtown township; 6. Ebenezer, born in Birmingham township, April 2, 1836; 7. Joseph, born August 16, 1838, in the township of Birmingham; 8. Elizabeth, also born in the same township, June 6, 1840.

Ebenezer Faucett, fourth son of George and Mary Faucett, was reared and received his education in the common schools of Birmingham township. After completing his studies, being thoroughly familiar with the details of farm life, he chose that occupation for his business career. His operations were conducted in his native township up to the year 1860, when he purchased a farm consisting of one hundred and twenty-eight acres in Pocopson township, where he has since resided, making a specialty of dairy farming. In addition to the interest he has always taken in agricultural pursuits, Mr. Faucett has not neglected his political duties, but has taken a deep interest in all local affairs. He has been the incumbent of many offices of trust, among which has been that of school director, in which he is serving at the present time (1903) and also has served for twelve consecutive years.

On January 5, 1860, Mr. Faucett married Deborah Jane Kimble, who was born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 5, 1835, a daughter of Amos and Leticia Kimble, the former named being successfully engaged as a drover and farmer in Franklin township. Their children were: 1. Lizzie, born April 3, 1861, died in infancy; 2. Eber Osborne, born October 7, 1862, now a resident of Philadelphia, where he is engaged in the grain and flour business; he married June 13, 1889, Ellen T. Morton, and three children were born to them, namely: Evelyn S., born October 16, 1890, Mary L., born April 16, 1892, and Florence, born August, 1894, and died in infancy; after the death of the mother of these children, Eber Osborne married Josephine Haycock. 3. Eugene V., born December 10, 1876, now engaged in the capacity of mechanical engineer with the firm of Dupont De Morrisson Co., of Wilmington, Delaware. 4. Laura May, born February 10, 1871, died June 25, 1898. The old family mansion of the Faucett family was built during the eighteenth century, near the site of the old log cabin in which the family conducted a country store during colonial times. This cabin was demolished many years since, and some of the timbers, which were hewn a century before, were used as joists when the mansion was remodeled.

ROBERT W. CALDWELL belongs to that class of enterprising, progressive citizens to whom the community owes its commercial activity and business prosperity. He is the proprietor of a large general establishment in the township of Pocopson, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and also serves in the capacity of postmaster, being appointed the incumbent of that office under the administration of President Cleveland, the last week of his administration. He is a nephew of the renowned Colonel John Caldwell, who served his country with distinction and honor during the trying period of the war of 1812.

John Gordon Caldwell, father of Robert W. Caldwell, was born in January, 1799, and subsequently became one of the successful and useful citizens of the state of Delaware, being instrumental in the progress and development of a section situated about twenty miles from the city of Dover. He married Elizabeth Davis, and three children were born to them: Robert W.; John, who married Christiana Record, and two children have been born to them: Emily, who was married first to Frank Mathews, and after his decease to Mr. Fanstock; she is the mother of one child, Frank. Louisa, second child of John and Christiana Caldwell, married Radcliff Mills. Sarah is the wife of Jacob Weldon and their children are: Margaret, now deceased, who was the wife of William Goodman, and Mary Weldon.

Robert W. Caldwell, eldest son of John Gordon and Elizabeth (Davis) Caldwell, was born April 26, 1822, on the old homestead, which was situated about twenty miles from the city of Dover, Delaware, but was reared and acquired a practical education in the public schools of Wilmington, Delaware. In 1845 he removed to Locust Grove, Pocopson township, Chester county, acquired a piece of property from Samuel Martin, of Kennett Square, and established a general store which he has conducted ever since. He has the confidence and good will of his customers and always retains their patronage by reason of his reliable business methods, his promptness and his genial disposition. In addition to this business he serves in the capacity of postmaster of Locust Grove, filled the office of school director for many years, and was the assessor and collector of the township for eleven years. In politics he was first a Whig, and afterwards an ardent Republican, having cast his first vote for Henry Clay when he was nominated for the presidency of the United States.

Mr. Caldwell was united in marriage to Sarah McIntyre, of West Chester, Pennsylvania, who was born in West Fallowfield township about the year 1816. Their children were: Emily H., Annie M., Sarah B.; Edward, who died in 1903; Joseph, who married Annie E. Pyle, a daughter of Sheriff John Pyle of Wilmington, Delaware and they have one child, Mary Caldwell; Frank, and Henry Caldwell, the latter named being employed by Litz Brothers, of Philadelphia. Mr. Caldwell is well read and successful as a business man, active and influential in politics, and popular and useful as a citizen.

TRUMAN YARNALL, for many years one of the most highly respected citizens of Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a representative of a very numerous family which traced its descent from Francis Yarnall, who came from England in 1682, settled in Springfield, and in the 10th mo., 1683, had a tract of land surveyed to him. He became a prominent man in the community, and in 1711 was a member of the provincial assembly. He married, in March, 1686, Hannah Baker, and was the father of a large family of children. His death took place in 1721.

Amos Yarnall, son of Francis and Hannah (Baker) Yarnall, was born January 28, 1700, and took up five hundred acres of land in Willistown township. He married, March 18, 1727, Mary Ashbridge, daughter of George and Mary Ashbridge, and they were the parents of the following named children: Daniel, born December 15, 1727 or 1728; Amos, mentioned at length hereinafter; Mary, born January 28, 1734; Aaron, born February 20, 1738, and George, born November 12, 1745. After the death of his wife, Amos Yarnall married, December 28, 1750, Sarah Garrett, widow of Samuel Garrett.

Amos Yarnall, son of Amos and Mary (Ashbridge) Yarnall, was born August 28, 1730, and established a homestead on the five hundred acres of land in Willistown township, which had been previously taken up by his father. He married, May 17, 1753, Jane Hibbard, born December 23, 1734, a daughter of Benjamin and Phoebe (Sharpless) Hibbard. The former was a son of Josiah and Ann (Bonsall) Hibbard, Ann Bonsall being the daughter of Richard and Mary Bonsall. Phoebe Sharpless was the daughter of John and Hannah (Pennell) Sharpless, and John Sharpless was the son of John and Jane (Moore) Sharpless, the former of the two last mentioned being the son of Geoffrey and Margaret (Ashley) Sharpless. The children of Amos and Jane (Hibbard) Yarnall were: Phoebe, born May 19, 1754; Ezra, born January 13, 1756; Caleb, born January 25, 1759; Benjamin, mentioned at length hereinafter; Hannah, born October 5, 1762; Amos, born March 17, 1767; Jane, born August 29, 1769, and Jesse, born September 27, 1774.

Benjamin Yarnall, son of Amos and Jane (Hibbard) Yarnall, was born November 20, 1760, and was a leading man in the community, being often called upon to perform clerical work for his neighbors and to settle estates. He married, May 6, 1795, in Sadsbury Meeting, Susanna Truman, daughter of John and Rachel (Moore) Truman, who were married in Sadsbury Meeting House on November 12, 1761. John Truman was born August 26, 1736, died October 22, 1828, and was a son of Thomas, born in 1705, died in 1788, and Ann (Holon) Truman, their marriage ceremony having been performed at Sadsbury Meeting House. Benjamin Yarnall and his wife were the parents of the following named children: Rachel, born March 24, 1796, married in April 1839, at Sadsbury Meeting House, Joseph Paxton and their daughter, Rachel Paxton, was born May 25, 1840; Mrs. Paxton died August 24, 1840; Jane, born January 22, 1799, died September 12, 1805; Truman, mentioned at length hereinafter; Reuben, born September 20, 1805, died August 30, 1808; Amos, born March 26, 1809, married March 18, 1847, Anna Leedom, who died March 24, 1878, and the death of Amos occurred January 26, 1873; Rebecca, born April 17, 1812, died July 30, 1815. Benjamin Yarnall, the father of these children, died December 1, 1825, and his wife passed away May 28, 1854.

Truman Yarnall, son of Benjamin and Susanna (Truman) Yarnall, was born March 9, 1802, on the old homestead in Willistown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he and his father resided all their lives, this being a portion of the land conveyed by Thomas Penn, Esq., one of the proprietors of the Province of Pennsylvania, by virtue of the power and authority to him granted by John and Richard Penn, and of his own right by a certain grant or patent under his hand and the great seal of the said province bearing date the 29th day of the month called January A. D., 1738, to Amos Yarnall and by him and his wife Sarah sold to their son, Amos Yarnall, father of Benjamin and grandfather of Truman Yarnall, December 28, 1753. After the completion of his education in the Friends' School, Truman Yarnall and his brother cleared up and improved their farm, on which they raised a large quantity of general farm produce, and Truman became noted for his skill. He was an expert marksman, shooting a large number of hawks and other game. In 1862 Mr. Yarnall erected the residence now standing on the farm. He was a worthy friend, a regular attendant of the meetings, and held the position of elder and overseer. He was a man of strict probity and exemplary character, and was ever mindful of the duties incumbent upon him as a good and public-spirited citizen.

Thomas Garratt

John S. Garratt

Mr. Yarnall married, May 8, 1845, Ann Lewis Hicks, born June 19, 1806, widow of Jesse G. Hicks, and daughter of Elijah and Esther (Massey) Lewis. One child was the issue of this union, Susanna, born July 4, 1847, who resides on the homestead and manages the estate. Mrs. Yarnall was a consistent Friend and regular attendant of the meeting when her health would permit, served as overseer and clerk of Goshen Monthly Meeting for several years, and was an elder in the Monthly Meeting at the time of her death, May 16, 1890. She survived her husband several years, the date of his death being June 19, 1882. Both were sincerely and deeply lamented by all who knew them for their many estimable qualities.

Elijah Lewis, father of Mrs. Truman Yarnall, was a descendent of Henry Lewis, who married, January 12, 1670, Margaret Philpin, and they with their son, Henry Lewis, came to America from Pembroke-shire, Wales, in 1682, and at the time of his decease in 1688 was the owner of a house in Philadelphia, and a large tract of land in Haverford, Delaware county. Henry Lewis, son of Henry and Margaret (Philpin) Lewis, was born October 26, 1671, married, October 20, 1692, Mary Taylor, a daughter of Robert, who died in 1695, and Mary (Hays) Taylor, who died in 1728. John Lewis, son of Henry and Mary (Taylor) Lewis, was born March 23, 1697, and died in 1780; he married, November 6, 1725, Katharine Evans one record has it, and another record has it Roberts, who died in 1781; she owned half of a farm of one hundred acres in Radnor, Pennsylvania, and her husband, John Lewis, purchased the other half of her sister, and they resided there until their deaths. Evan Lewis, son of John and Katharine Lewis, was born June 13, 1740, married, October 31, 1770, Esther Massey, who was born December 15, 1740 or 1741, a daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Taylor) Massey. After the death of his wife in 1773, Evan Lewis married, December 20, 1775, Jane Meredith, born March 12, 1743, died June 5, 1814, a daughter of John and Grace (Williams) Meredith, the former named having been born about the year 1699 in Radnorshire, Wales, died in 1769, and the latter named was a daughter of Lewis Williams, who settled in Goshen and was for some time its only inhabitant. Evan Lewis died March 1, 1808.

Elijah Lewis, son of Evan and Jane (Meredith) Lewis, was born May 2, 1778, settled on a farm in Willistown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He served his county two years in the state legislature with marked and signal ability. Later he was appointed justice of the peace for his township by governor of the state, and after the office became elective by the people of the township, he was unanimously chosen until a few years prior to his death, when at his earnest entreaty he was allowed to resign from office. He united many in the holy bonds of matrimony, and in the settlement of estates he had few if any equals. He possessed the mathematical and analytical turn of mind with which the family was endowed, fathomed every subject that came before him and took hold of it with a grasp of mind that shone forth so clearly in his logical deductions and demonstrations, that all selfishness, bitterness and prejudice had to yield to the convictions of truth and justice.

Elijah Lewis married, in Willistown Friends Meeting House, September 19, 1799, Esther Massey, who was born May 17, 1777, a daughter of Thomas and Jane (Goodwin) Massey, whose marriage occurred December 22, 1774. Jane (Goodwin) Massey died 5 mo., 28, 1813. Thomas Massey was born February 7, 1735, and died in 1784; he was the son of Thomas and Sarah (Taylor) Massey, the former named having been born November 21, 1701, married in 1725, Sarah Taylor, born January 9, 1703, and her death occurred in November, 1786. Thomas Massey, Sr., was the son of Thomas and Phœbe (Taylor) Massey; Thomas was born in Cheshire, England, in 1664, married in 1692, and died September 18, 1708; Phœbe (Taylor) Massey, died December 27, 1749; she was the daughter of Robert, who died in 1695, and Mary (Hayes) Taylor, who died in 1728. Sarah (Taylor) Massey, wife of Thomas Massey, was the daughter of Isaac Taylor, son of Robert and Mary (Hayes) Taylor, who married Sarah Bradwell in 1689; Isaac died in 1717, and Sarah (Bradwell) Taylor died in November, 1748. Jane (Goodwin) Massey, wife of Thomas Massey, was the daughter of Thomas Goodwin, born in 1694, died April 16, 1775; he married, September 12, 1729, Ann Jones, who was the daughter of Richard and Jane (Evans) Jones, who were united in marriage April 6, 1705. Richard Jones was born about the year 1679, died July 16, 1771.

The children of Elijah and Esther (Massey) Lewis are as follows: 1. Thomas Massey, born July 8, 1800, married, in 1830, Susanna W. Davis, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (MacAfee)

Davis; Susanna W. (Davis) Lewis was born in Williston, Pennsylvania, September 3, 1810, died in Chariton, Iowa, February 12, 1898; Thomas Lewis also died in Chariton, Iowa, March 9, 1877. 2. Enos, born July 19, 1802, died September 20, 1804. 3. Richard, born August 3, 1804, died October 22, 1804. 4. Ann, born June 19, 1806, married, at Williston Meeting House, March 11, 1830, Jesse G. Hicks, born April 22, 1806, died December 1, 1832, a son of William and Abigail Hicks; for her second husband she married Truman Yarnall. 5. Jane, born March 9, 1809, became the wife of Nathan Garrett, March 11, 1830, at Williston Meeting House; Nathan Garrett, son of Nathan and Rebecca Garrett, died March 28, 1881, and his wife passed away March 31, 1862. 6. Sarah, born February 20, 1812, became the wife of John Smedley, son of John and Rebecca Smedley; John Smedley was born January 11, 1814, died March 19, 1855; his wife, Sarah (Lewis) Smedley, died September 22, 1887, at the residence of her son, Thomas D. Smedley, in Bradford, Pennsylvania. 7. Enos Montgomery, born December 2, 1814, died October 11, 1820. Elijah Lewis, father of these children, died September 2, 1861, and his wife, Esther (Massey) Lewis, who was an exemplary Friend and regular attendant of the meeting, also of a charitable and philanthropic disposition, died November 4, 1853.

• GEORGE COX, extensively engaged in farming operations in the township of Pocopson, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of Richard Cox, who is supposed to have been a son of John and Rachel Cox, and received a certificate from Newark, April 5, 1712, in order that he might marry Margaret Potts, a member of Gwynedd Monthly Meeting, on May 26, 1712. They took up their residence in Kennett, but later removed to Gwynedd and from thence to Vincent township, Chester county, where the death of Richard Cox occurred about the year 1762. Their children were: Anna, Sarah, Richard, Jonathan, Joseph, Benjamin and John Cox.

Joseph Cox, third son of Richard and Margaret Cox, was born April 18, 1723, in Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was united in marriage to Catherine Watson, who was born August 27, 1722, a daughter of William and Hannah Watson. They were residents of Vincent from 1754 to 1772, when they removed to Willistown, where the remainder of their lives were spent. Their children were: Hannah, Hannah (2), Mary, William, Hannah (3), Margaret, Benjamin, Benjamin (2), Richard, and Elizabeth Cox. Joseph Cox, father of these children, died September 17, 1814, and his wife died January 19, 1773.

Benjamin Cox, second son of Joseph and Catherine Cox, was born September 8, 1758, and subsequently became one of the prominent citizens of Willistown, owning a farm of ninety-six acres on which was erected a stone house and spring house. He also acted in the capacity of overseer of Willistown Meeting, being appointed to fill the place of Aaron Garrett, on June 10, 1807. On July 10, 1780, at Goshen Meeting, Mr. Cox married Hannah Smedley, who was born in Willistown, December 2, 1758, a daughter of George and Hannah (Matson) Smedley. Their children were: George, Catherine, Hannah, George (2), Jane, Joseph, Amy, William, Joshua, Margaret, Jeffrey, Elizabeth, and Benjamin Cox. Benjamin Cox, father of these children, died February 10, 1846, in Willistown township, and his wife's death occurred in the same township, May 2, 1827.

WILLISTOWN MEETING HOUSE, ERECTED 1798.

George Cox, second son of Benjamin and Hannah Cox, was born August 18, 1785, in Willistown, Pennsylvania, in which township he was engaged in agricultural pursuits during the active years of his life. On January 8, 1815, at West Chester Meeting, occurred the marriage of Mr. Cox and Ann Kerns (born in East Bradford, April 21, 1779), a daughter of Simon and Mary (Morgan) Kerns. Their children were: 1. Joshua S., born October 19, 1816, married Alice Lewis and their children are: Susan and Georgiana Cox, deceased; his death occurred August 24, 1877. 2. Caleb Hoopes, born September 24, 1818. 3. Jeffrey, born January 6, 1820, died in childhood; 4. Hannah, born July 23, 1824, wife of John Woodward and mother of the following named children: George, Nelson, Harry, Nelson, Joseph, Sarah, and Hannah, wife of Harry Tomlinson. George Cox died September 9, 1834, his wife having passed away July 27, 1832.

Caleb Hoopes Cox, second son of George and Ann Cox, was born July 24, 1818, in Willistown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Here he acquired his education and subsequently settled on a farm in East Goshen township, where he resided up to the year 1843, when he removed to Westtown, in which locality he made his home for over forty years. On February 17, 1840, Mr. Cox married Mary H. Minster, who was born January 1, 1821, a daughter of Jacob and Sidney (Hoopes) Minster, of East Goshen township. Their children are: 1. Lydia Ann, born January 25, 1841, unmarried; 2. George, born August 22, 1844; 3. Sidney, born November 11, 1846, wife of Edwin J. Durnall and their children are: Dilwin, Charles, Walter, Gertrude, wife of Louis Baldwin, and Pauline Durnall; 4 and 5. Wilmer M., and Selina, twins, born June 9, 1849; they the former named married Mary E. Pratt, and they are the parents of two children, George Elwin and Laura Cox; Selina is the wife of Lewis B. Smedley, and their children are: Loretta, wife of John Dutton; Arthur, Anna, Clarence, and Helen Smedley; 6. Mary Ella, born June 4, 1854, wife of Morris Yearsley, and mother of the following named children: Bertha, died in childhood; Willis; Irwin, and Morris Yearsley. Caleb H. Cox died at West Chester, Chester county, November 1, 1886, survived by his wife, who passed away March 17, 1900.

George Cox, eldest son of Caleb H. and Mary H. Cox, was born in Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 22, 1844, and his boyhood was spent in work upon the farm and in attendance at the district school. His business career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits in Pocopson township, and at the present time (1903) he is making a specialty of dairy farming, keeping a large number of carefully selected cows for this purpose. His farm is well improved and shows the constant personal supervision of a capable and thoroughgoing business man. He has always taken a deep interest in the political affairs of the community, giving his support and allegiance to the Republican party. He is a member of the Friends' Meeting, this being the religious faith of his forefathers.

Mr. Cox married Isabella Clark, who was born at New Castle, Delaware, November 2, 1849, a daughter of Jehu and Mary (Rice) Clark. Her education was obtained in the schools of that locality and in Westtown township, Pennsylvania. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Cox are as follows: Mary Laretta, born September 18, 1871, who is unmarried and at home; Ella Irene, born May 20, 1875, who is a cashier and book-keeper in Philadelphia, and Elizabeth Hopwood, born July 30, 1879, wife of Clarence Pennington Fell, of Avondale, and who was married June 16, 1903.

MORRIS FUSSELL, M. D., who for many years occupied a foremost place among the leading physicians of Chester county, was descended from a family which was for a century honorably distinguished in the ranks of the medical profession.

Bartholomew Fussell was a native of Chester county, and graduated in Baltimore, where he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and where for a time he practiced his profession. Subsequently he removed to Pennsylvania, and to his native county of Chester, where the greater part of his life was passed at Kennett Square. In both places his practice was large, and it was while a resident of Baltimore that he conceived the idea of founding the Female Medical College. It was chiefly owing to his efforts that the design was executed, and thus to him belongs the honor of instituting the first of the now numerous female medical colleges. He married Lyda Morris, and their children were: 1.

Joshua, who is employed by the United States government in the department of forestry, and now resides in Indiana. 2. Susan, who conducted at her own expense the Orphans' School at Spiceland, Indiana. 3. Morris, mentioned at length hereinafter. 4. Ada L., who after the death of her sister, mentioned above, who was the founder of the Orphans' School, took charge of the institution which is now conducted by the state. 5. Benjamin Lundy, who is a practicing physician at Markleville, Indiana. Even from this very brief and imperfect record of the life of Dr. Fussell, it will readily be perceived that he was a man of advanced ideas and benevolent disposition. These traits of character were inherited by his children, who carried them into their different fields of endeavor. It may be added that the liberality of sentiment and kindness of feeling displayed by this family have ever been characteristic of the Society of Friends, to which Dr. Fussell belonged.

Morris Fussell, son of Bartholomew and Lyda (Morris) Fussell, was born June 27, 1829, at Kennett Square, and pursued his preparatory medical studies under the guidance of his father. After receiving from Jefferson Medical College the degree of Doctor of Medicine, he entered upon the practice of his profession in his native Chester county, where for half a century he was a recognized leader in his chosen calling. He practiced extensively in West Pikeland and West Vincent, although his sphere of activity was not limited to these townships, but included all the neighboring region. In politics he was a Republican, but owing to the absorbing nature of his professional duties, took no active part in public affairs. In religious matters he adhered to the faith of his forefathers, and was a life-long member of the Society of Friends.

Dr. Fussell married, in 1861, Mrs. Sarah Middleton, of Chester county, and they were the parents of two daughters: 1. Susan F., who married Thomas Bower, of Harrisburg, at one time a resident of West Vincent township. 2. Helen, and Mrs. Bower were the parents of one son: Chester F., who is now at school. After the death of Mr. Bower his widow married Dr. George D. Bailey, who is now practicing in a sanitarium in Indiana. 2. Helen, who resides in New York, and is engaged in literary work. After the death of his wife Dr. Fussell married, in 1895, Esther Anna Moser, by whom he was the father of one daughter; Ada Esther, who is now attending school in West Vincent township.

Dr. Fussell continued in active practice until almost the close of his life, and his death, which occurred June 29, 1901, was deeply and sincerely regretted not only by his family and near friends, but by the large circle of those to whom he had ministered and by whom he was mourned no less as a valued friend than as an able medical advisor.

The family to which Mrs. Fussell belongs is one distinguished in the annals of the iron industry, which was founded in Pottstown, Pennsylvania, by Peter Moser, and is now conducted in the same place by Bailey & Shoemaker. Peter Moser married Anna Weaver, and their children were: 1. Jacob, who is a farmer in Montgomery county. 2. William, who is an engineer on the Bound Brook road in New Jersey. 3. Henry, who is conductor for the Bound Brook Railroad, in Philadelphia. 4. Samuel, deceased. 5. Hannah, who is the wife of H. F. Mauger, a retired farmer, living at Stowe, Pennsylvania. 6. Rebecca, who married George W. Mauger, who was employed in Philadelphia by the Reading Railroad Company, and died in 1902, leaving a widow and one son, Clyde A., who is in the service of a mercantile house in Philadelphia. 7. Amanda, who died in early womanhood. 8. Sarah, who died at the age of eleven years. 9. Esther Anna, who was born on her father's farm, near Pottstown, and became the wife of Dr. Morris Fussell, as mentioned above.

JOHN BROWNBACK STAUFFER, an esteemed farmer and respected citizen of West Vincent township, Chester county, is descended from a family supposed to have been for a long period resident in the county, the name seeming to indicate a German origin.

Samuel Stauffer was, according to tradition, born on the homestead, and his life was passed quietly and uneventfully among the scenes of his birthplace. Although his solid abilities and unpretending worth were recognized and appreciated by his townsmen, he could never overcome his reluctance to enter public life and so could never be induced to accept office. He married Rebecca Brownback, a daughter of John Brownback, a farmer of West Vincent township, and a member of one of the old families of the county. They were the parents of six children: 1. Mary C., who became the wife of Joseph Friday, and they reside in Downingtown; for a number of years he followed farming as an occupation, then engaged in mercantile business but is now leading a retired life. 2. Abram B., deceased; he married Ella C. Shantz, and they were the parents of one child, Katie May, deceased. After the death of his wife, Abram B. Stauffer married Mary Ada Stauffer, a daughter of John M. Stauffer, a farmer of East Coventry, and one daughter was born to them, Olive R. P., who graduated from Spring City High School, then learned the trade of dressmaker, and is now the wife of Montgomery B. Fry, who is a dealer in dairy and farm produce in Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Fry are the parents of one child, Olive Beatrice Fry. 3. Sara A., deceased. 4. John Brownback, mentioned hereinafter. 5. Samuel B., a farmer of West Vincent township; he married Clementine Brownback, a farmer of East Coventry township. 6. William B., who is engaged in the stove and tinware business in Downingtown; he married Clara Danman, a daughter of Mr. Danman, a farmer of Brandywine, and the following named children have been born to them: Edith J., Mabel R., Samuel Earl, William D., Mary Emma, and Clara Mildred. The three elder children attend the Downingtown High School, and the three younger are students at the Downingtown public school.

John B. Stauffer, son of Samuel and Rebecca (Brownback) Stauffer, was born November 11, 1840, on the homestead. He received his education in the common schools of West Vincent township, and on reaching manhood he decided to devote himself for life to agricultural pursuits. He now resides on the homestead and cultivates the land which became his by inheritance. The estate is situated near the boundary which constitutes the dividing line between the townships of West Vincent and West Pikeland, and consists of one hundred and thirty-three acres which are maintained in a flourishing condition. He is also the owner of twenty-two head of cattle, and conducts a fine dairy business. He is popular with his townsmen as is evident from the fact that he has been at different times both supervisor and school director, holding each office for three years. His political sentiments are those of the Democratic party. He is active in St. Matthew's Reformed church, having been superintendent of the Sunday school for thirty years.

Mr. Stauffer married Olivia W. Wynn, a daughter of Samuel and Ann Wynn, the former named who is now deceased having been a farmer of East Nantmeal, and for many years held the offices of supervisor and school director. Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer were the parents of five children, two of whom are now living: J. Harwin, born November 24, 1878, was educated in the schools of Birchrunville, and is now living with his parents on the homestead; he is regarded by all who know him as a young man of great promise and brightest hopes are entertained for his future, whatever may be his chosen sphere of activity. The other surviving child, Lillian, received her education in the schools of Birchrunville, and is living on the home farm with her parents and brother.

ily who have been known to the locality as industrious and upright citizens. He comes of German stock, and his great-grandfather, Michael Schleichter, was one of the early settlers of Chester county. He took a farm in East Vincent township and spent his life in bringing it under cultivation. He brought up a large family, of whom his son Abram became in time the owner of the farm, and succeeded to his father's place in the community.

Abram Schleichter married Sarah Hause, who had been brought up in the same neighborhood as himself. The couple had six children, namely: Isaac, who is in the line of this sketch; Abram, of East Vincent township; Kate; Mary; Hettie, who married William Lukens; Dessie, who is the wife of Benjamin Boyer. Isaac, the oldest child, was born in 1839, and continued the family line on the homestead. On the basis of the work that had been done before him, he was enabled to bring the farm to a high state of cultivation. He was known as one of the substantial men of the community, ever ready with his sympathy and practical support to further any worthy cause. He was in religion a Memnonite, and a Republican in politics. He married Mary Kulp, daughter of John Kulp, a farmer of East Vincent township, whose family dates back to Revolutionary times. Five children were born to Isaac and Mary (Kulp) Schleichter, as follows: 1. Sarah, who married Harry Stiles, by trade a wheelwright, but now a farmer, two children, Webster and Mary, being born to this union; 2. John, a farmer, born at Kenilworth, who married Kate Prizer, daughter of Herman Prizer, of South Coventry, and is the father of one child, Mary; 3. Lizzie, who is unmarried and lives in Pottstown; 4. Edward R., a farmer of East Vincent township; 5. Webster, who is spoken of at more length in the following paragraphs.

Webster, youngest child of Isaac and Mary (Kulp) Schleichter, was born September 17, 1862, in East Coventry township. He attended the Locust Grove School during his boyhood, filling in the vacations with work on the farm. When his school days were ended, he began work on the homestead with his father, with the intention of making farming his occupation. He is now the owner of the old place, and he has built well on the foundation laid by the earlier generations. He is interested in all new and scientific methods as applied to agriculture, and makes a special study of the nature and adaptability of the soils on his farm. He works for the improvement of the public schools, and for six years was school director in his township. He is a member of the Lutheran church, and a Republican.

Mr. Schleichter married Lily C. Finkbinner, daughter of David and Margaret Finkbinner. Mr. Finkbinner was engaged in various lines of business having learned the milling trade, but afterward being connected with mercantile enterprises, as well as the manufacture of bricks, and foundry interests. Mr. and Mrs. Finkbiner were the parents of twelve children, only six of whom are now living: 1. Ida K., who married Max Keiser, engaged in railroad business at Spring City, and who has one child, Edith; 2. Rosa W. deceased; 3. Jesse, deceased; 4. U. S. Grant, formerly cashier of the Ford National Bank, now connected with insurance and real estate business, whose first wife was Mary, daughter of Ephraim Schleichter, her children being: David, Rachel and Charles, and whose second wife was Sarah, widow of George Kale, one child, Aaron, having been born of this marriage; 5. Lily C., wife of Webster Schleichter; 6. Walton, deceased; 7. Clara V., deceased; 8. Oliver, a clerk in the Spring City Glass Works, who married Fanny DeHaven, daughter of William DeHaven, of Spring City, and has six children—Oliver, Jr., Rachel, Ida, Earl, U. S. Grant and William D.; 9. Minnie Elsie, deceased; 10. Sadie, a typewriter in Philadelphia; 11. Edith Laura, deceased; 12. Edwin Earl, engaged in the clothing business at Cole Port, Clearfield county, whose wife was a daughter of David Ames, and who has one child. Webster and Lily (Finkbiner) Schleichter are the parents of the following children: Walter F., born December 27, 1890; Grant Burdette, born March 5, 1892, died September 13, 1892; Ralph F., born July 14, 1894; Lawrence F., born September 30, 1896; Raymond F., born August 1, 1898; Sadie Elma, born December 20, 1899.

WEBSTER SCHLEICHTER, a leading farmer of East Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, worthily sustains the tradition established by three former generations of his fam-

THE HON. WILLIAM EVANS, who has for many years played a prominent part in the political history of Chester county, is a representative of one of the old families of the county. He traces his descent from William Evans, who was born in Wales in 1681, and in 1711, emigrated with his wife, Eleanor, to the province of Pennsylvania, where they settled in Treddyffrin township, on a tract of five hundred acres which Mr. Evans had received by deed of transfer from William Penn in 1711. William Evans, the founder of the family, was a member of the old St. David's Protestant Episcopal church, and died in 1734, leaving his family in charge of his brother Richard, with a strong injunction that his children be reared in the faith of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Joshua Evans, youngest son of William, the founder, married and settled on a part of the homestead tract, where he resided for several years. He afterward built the Paoli hotel, which his son Joshua, who was elected to Congress, inherited, and also purchased a farm in Willistown township, where he died in 1817, in the eighty-fifth year of his age. He reared a family of five children, the eldest of whom, William, inherited the Willistown property, and died in 1843, at seventy-two years of age. His son, Joshua, born in 1801, settled in Willistown township, where he engaged in farming. He married Anna M., daughter of Thomas Tucker, and they had three children: William, mentioned at length hereinafter; Margaretta, and Joshua. Mrs. Evans died April 23, 1857, in the forty-sixth year of her age, and her husband passed away March 26, 1867, at the age of sixty-six.

William Evans, son of Joshua and Anna M. (Tucker) Evans, was born January 31, 1831, on the farm on which he now resides, in Willistown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His boyhood was passed on the farm, and his education was received in the public schools and at Gause's Academy. Although he has been all his life engaged in farming, he has not neglected his duties as a citizen, having been foremost in every movement having for its object the benefit of the community, and has responded readily, at whatever inconvenience to himself, to the repeated demands made by his fellow-citizens upon his time and services. He is a Democrat in politics, and served for twelve years as a member and secretary of the township school board, and for six years as township auditor. In 1886 he was elected as one of the four members of the legislature from Chester county. He served creditably in the session of 1887-88, and was a member of committees on accounts, comparison of bills, and ways and means. His election, when he led the Democratic ticket by nearly two thousand votes, was an overwhelming testimony to his popularity. Notwithstanding his agricultural pursuits and the absorbing nature of his political interests, Mr. Evans has engaged in various successful business enterprises. He is a director in the Mutual Security Fire Insurance Company of Chester county, and vice-president of the Malvern National Bank, of which he was one of the founders. He was also one of the founders of the Farmers' Market established at Twelfth and Market streets, Philadelphia, in 1858. Mr. Evans was among the first to recognize the need of concerted action on the part of farmers to protect them against the hostility of the victualers and hucksters of the city who were seeking to prevent the farmers from marketing their own produce. At the first meeting to consider the matter, called by Mr. Evans, only five were present, but public opinion was finally roused and an organization formed, and a house was erected containing four hundred and eighty-eight stalls, and which prospered for thirty odd years. Mr. Evans was made president, and he held the office for many years. Another important service he rendered the farming interests of the community was in securing the location of the Hiers condensed milk plant at Malver. This enterprise makes market for from eight to thirty-eight thousand quarts of milk daily. Mr. Evans also called the first meeting to consider the building of what is now known as the Newtown Square Railroad, was one of its organizers, and its president until the road was absorbed by the Pennsylvania Railroad. Mr. Evans now resides at Malvern borough, and is president of the borough council.

William Evans

Mr. Evans married, February 14, 1867, Lydia, daughter of Isaac Thomas, of Delaware county. They have three children: William, who was educated at the State College and Pierce's Business College, Philadelphia, and is now engaged in farming; Anna, who was educated at the West Chester Friends' School and Darlington Seminary, and Aida T., who is a graduate of Swarthmore College.

HORACE WILLIAM KEELEY, a representative agriculturist and public-spirited citizen of East Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a native of that section of the state, the date of his birth being October 5, 1873.

Robert Rook Keeley, father of Horace W. Keeley, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, January 6, 1833, received a practical education in the common schools of the neighborhood, and his occupation since attaining young manhood up to the present time (1903) has been that of carpentering. He has always been prompt and energetic in business, honorable and conscientious in the discharge of his duties, and thoroughly reliable in every relation of life. He was united in marriage to Catherine Plett, who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 30, 1838, and the following named children were the issue of this union: 1. Sallie, born in Chester county, June 2, 1860, became the wife of Jacob Benner, and their family consists of four children—Howard, Bertie, Leroy and William, deceased. 2. Emma, born in Chester county, March 6, 1862, became the wife of William Brown. 3. Murray, born in Chester county, December 2, 1865, married, in 1887, Bertha Sheeler, and they are the parents of four children—Robert, Lena, Erma and Ethel, all of whom were born in Chester county. 4. Minerva, born in Chester county, May 21, 1867, became the wife of Roland Smith of Chester county, Pennsylvania. 5. Howard, born in Chester county, February 25, 1869, married, in 1888, Cora Smith, and two children were born of this union, Clarence and Carrie Keeley. Mrs. Keeley died in 1899 and he chose for his second wife, Ella Brown, the marriage ceremony being performed April 22, 1902. 6. Horace William, born in Chester county, October 5, 1873.

38 x

Robert R. Keeley and his wife, Catherine (Plett) Keeley, reside in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and despite their advancing years they enjoy remarkably good health. John and George Keeley, brothers of Robert R. Keeley, reside in the western section of the United States.

Horace W. Keeley attended the township schools and upon completing his education at the age of seventeen years, he was employed as a farm hand. This pursuit was so agreeable to his taste and disposition that he determined to make it his vocation throughout his active career, which he has accordingly done. His farm consists of seventy-two acres of valuable land, which is well improved and located in East Vincent township.

On November 24, 1897, occurred the marriage of Horace W. Keeley and Mary Graham, the latter named having been born in Chester county, November 18, 1879, a daughter of the late John and Maria (Leary) Graham. Their children are: Russell, born in Chester county, May 18, 1898; Paul and Ralph, twins, born in Chester county, November 16, 1899; Elmer, born in Chester county, March 6, 1900; and Erma, born in Chester county, August 6, 1903.

GEORGE S. FAUCETT, prominently associated with the industrial, political and social interests of Birmingham township, was born in the old mansion which was erected in the middle of the eighteenth century, remodeled some years later, when some of the timbers of the old log cabin which was built on the same site almost a century before were used, and it was the headquarters of General Cadwalader during the battle of Brandywine. It was situated at Dilworthtown, Birmingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and here his birth occurred October 19, 1848, a son of Nathan and Isabella Faucett.

George and Isabella Faucett, supposed to be the founders of the family in the state of Pennsylvania, were the grandparents of Henry Faucett, who was the great-grandfather of George S. Faucett. Henry Faucett was a native and lifelong resident of the township of Westtown, Chester county, taking an active part in its various enterprises and pursuits. Mr. Faucett and his wife, Hannah, were the parents of the following named children: Ebenezer, born January 28, 1783; Margaret, born October 17, 1784; George, born October 15, 1786; Rebecca, born November 25, 1788; Sarah, born July 29, 1792; Hannah, born April 11, 1796; Anna, born November 18, 1800, and Margaret (2), born November 9, 1807.

George Faucett, grandfather of George S. Faucett, was born October 15, 1786, and was the third child in order of birth born to Henry and Hannah Faucett. He was reared on the old homestead in Westtown township, Chester county, and obtained a practical education in the common schools of the neighborhood, subsequently becoming a prominent and successful man of affairs. He married Mary Yearsley and five of their children were born while they resided in Westtown township, the other three having been born after their removal to the township of Birmingham. Their children were: Nathan, born December 27, 1823; Hannah N., born August 6, 1825; Henry, born January 12, 1828; George, born August 1, 1830; Mary Jane, born December 1, 1833; Ebenezer, born April 2, 1836; Joseph, born August 16, 1838, and Elizabeth Faucett, born June 6, 1840.

Nathan Faucett, father of George S. Faucett, was born in Westtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 27, 1823, the eldest son of George and Mary Faucett. He attended the common schools of his native township, where he obtained a practical education which prepared him for his subsequent career of usefulness and activity, which was spent principally in the township of Birmingham, where he now resides. He has been married three times, his first wife having been Isabella Smith, to whom were born the following named children: Anna Mary, wife of James Kirkpatrick, George S., and Estella, wife of Pennock Williamson. After the death of his wife, Mr. Faucett was united in marriage to Elizabeth Taylor, and after her decease he chose for his third wife, Sadie Sharp, who is living at the present time (1903).

George S. Faucett, only son of Nathan and Isabella (Smith) Faucett, was reared on the old homestead in Birmingham township, where he now resides, and his educational advantages were acquired at the local schools and the Military Academy at West Chester. Upon the completion of his studies he chose the occupation of farming for his life work, being inured to the varied and arduous duties of that line of industry from his boyhood. Mr. Faucett is highly esteemed in the community for his wonderful energy, strict integrity, indomitable will and great public spirit, these attributes of character being made manifest during his tenure of several important local offices, among which was that of school director, in which capacity he served for eighteen consecutive years.

On September 22, 1869, Mr. Faucett married Ada E. Clayton, who was born December 2, 1845, a daughter of Harlan and Elizabeth Clayton, the former named being born October 17, 1809, a son of James and Mary Clayton. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Faucett are: Emlen Clayton (1), born September 27, 1872, married August 15, 1895, Anita Register, and their chilchildren are: Ernest, Herman, Chester, deceased, Cornelle and Elwin, twins; Elizabeth (2), deceased, born October 16, 1874, and Nathan Yearsley, born January 29, 1881. In their religious views the family are divided, but entirely pleasantly, Mr. Faucett being a member of the Episcopal church, while his wife adheres to the faith of the Society of Friends.

TRUMAN B. LLOYD, a prominent farmer, merchant and citizen of Lenape, Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is esteemed in his community for his many sterling qualities. He is of Welsh descent, and inherits the strong fibre of his race. The founder of the family in America, who came to Pennsylvania in the eighteenth century, and the generations that have succeeded him, have left to the present representatives of the family the heritage of an honorable name.

Samuel Lloyd, great-grandfather of Truman Lloyd, was the son of this pioneer, and was born at Cochranville, Pennsylvania, some time in the eighteenth century. He had a son Hiram, born at the same place, where he was reared and educated. He subsequently became one of the enterprising and prosperous business men of the community, and married Elizabeth Bass. This couple were the parents of thirteen children, namely: Samuel, William, Hiram, Esther, Washington, John, Jane, David, James, Robert, Manassah, Ephraim and Lewis.

David Lloyd, eighth child and sixth son of Hiram and Elizabeth (Bass) Lloyd, was born in 1829. He attended the common schools of his birthplace, and in later life fulfilled all obligations and duties in an exemplary manner. His first wife was Hannah Truman, whose children were as follows: 1. William, born December 29, 1850, who married Ella MacIntyre; 2. Truman, born September 3, 1852; 3. Hannah, born June 12, 1857, who became the wife of Tryon Rodebaugh, and the mother of two children, Howard and Mabel; 4. Horace, born December 1, 1859, who married Emma Cochran, and has two children, Frederick and Edna. David Lloyd married Elizabeth Corcoran as his second wife, and she became the mother of four children.

Truman B., second son of David Lloyd by his first marriage, was born September 3, 1852, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He attended the public schools, where he gained a practical education. He began life as a farmer, and he still manages his farm, and also conducts a general store at Lenape, in the township of Pocopson. He has prospered in all his enterprises, and he has a grasp of affairs that enables him to attend carefully to the multifarious details of his business. He has lived a useful life in the community, and is highly regarded as a neighbor and citizen, for in the attainment of his own ends he has ever had a thought for the welfare of others. He has held a number of local offices, and is now acting as school director.

On January 4, 1876, Mr. Lloyd married Mary Smyth, a daughter of King Smyth, a prominent resident of Lancaster county. The following children were born of this marriage; 1. Alice, born September 3, 1877, who is the wife of Maurice Chambers, and lives at Norristown, Pennsylvania; she has three children, Lloyd Smedley, born October 23, 1899, Charles Wilson, born July 23, 1901, who died in infancy, and Mildred Chambers, born December 5, 1902; 2. Lena, born August 13, 1879; 3. David, born July 12, 1881; 4. John, born August 19, 1883; 5. Helen, born March 29, 1886; 6. Anna, born August 26, 1889.

ENOS PAINTER BARNARD. The Barnard family of Pocopson township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, of which Enos P. Barnard is a worthy representative, as well as the families of that name who reside in Delaware county, trace their origin to Richard Barnard, who served as a grand juror at Chester in 1686, and his death occurred previous to May 5, 1698. The name Barnard (or Bernard, as some spell it), is a very ancient one, being first taken from Rochefort, an old fortified manor-house in Normandy, France.

Richard Barnard, grandfather of Enos P. Barnard, was probably the son of Richard and Susanna (Eckhoff) Barnard, residents of Newlin township, Chester county, the former named being the eldest son of the progenitor of the American branch of the family. Richard Barnard (grandfather) was united in marriage to Sarah Chambers. Their children were: 1. Joseph, who married Phoebe Williams and they had one son born to them; 2. Elihu, who married Mary Williams and they were the parents of six children, namely: Emma, wife of David Chambers; Norris, married Martha Baker; Elizabeth, deceased; Richard, who married Mrs. Way; John, who married Miss Chambers; and Phoebe, wife of William Lewis Lamborn, and their children were: Hena, Edgar and Jesse Wynona Lamborn; 3. Amos, who married Miss Wilson, and two sons were born to them, Joseph and Wilson Barnard; 4. William, who married for his first wife Ruth Stubbs, and they had five children; for his second wife he chose Mary Lundy, sister of the celebrated abolitionist, Benjamin Lundy, who was born in New Jersey in 1789, and died in 1839; two children were the issue of this marriage, Ella and Philena; 5. Eusebius, father of Enos P. Barnard; 6. Cyrus, who married and three children were born to him; 7. Elizabeth Barnard, who died in childhood.

Eusebius Barnard, father of Enos P. Barnard, was born in July, 1802. His educational advantages were obtained at the common schools of the neighborhood, and subsequently he devoted his energies to farming interests in Pocopson township. He was widely and favorably known as a strong abolitionist, earnestly advocated the cause of temperance reform, and being a man of great force of character and clearness of head his influence was felt in the community. He also served as a minister of the Society of Friends, this being the religious faith of his forefathers. Mr. Barnard married Sarah Painter, a daughter of Enos and Hannah (Minshall) Painter, and the following named children were born to them: Elizabeth, Minerva (1), Hannah, Minerva (2), Enos (1), Anna, Eusebius Richard and Enos Painter Barnard.

Enos P. Barnard, youngest son of Eusebius and Sarah Barnard, was born on the old homestead in Pocopson township, Chester county, April 24, 1844. He obtained a good common school education and was reared to manhood on the farm, a part of which he now owns and where he now resides, this property having been bequeathed to him by his maternal grandfather, Enos Painter, who purchased it from Absalom Harry. His entire business career has been devoted to the cultivation and improvement of this estate, and by dint of industry, perseverance and good management it has yielded him a fair income for his many years of toil. He has always kept well informed on the issues of the day, has filled several important local offices, and has taken a deep interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of his community and its progress along material, social, intellectual and moral lines.

November 19, 1868, Mr. Barnard married Abbie Steele, who was born September 18, 1842, a daughter of Isaac and Henrietta (Paxton) Steele. Their children were: Ethelbert, born January 15, 1870, died February 15, 1892, and Isaac, born January 26, 1874, who acquired his education in the local schools and the State Normal School at West Chester.

LEWIS WILSON, who occupies a leading place both as farmer and citizen in West Vincent township, Chester county, is descended from a well known family, from which the place called Wilson's Corner derives its name. It was here that Thomas Wilson was born March 30, 1811, and it was in West Vincent township that he spent his life as a farmer. He married Catharine, born in 1812, in West Vincent township, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Benner) March.

The former was in his youth a carpenter, but subsequently engaged in farming, an occupation which he followed for the remainder of his life. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson: 1. Lewis, mentioned at length hereinafter; 2. Elmira, who married Joseph Richardson, a lumber dealer of Philadelphia, who is now deceased. Their children are: Bertha, who is the wife of Henry Baton, a contractor and builder in Germantown; James R., who is clerk in a lumber firm; and Ernest, who is an engineer in the service of an asphalt company in Philadelphia. 3. Mark, now deceased. 4. Lida, who has engaged in teaching in various places in Pennsylvania. 5. Mary. Mr. Wilson, the father of this family, died January 11, 1889, leaving to his children the legacy of a well spent life and an honorable name.

Lewis Wilson, son of Thomas and Catharine (March) Wilson, was born October 6, 1838, near the farm where he now lives in West Vincent township, and he received his primary education in the public schools, afterward attending a school in Pughtown. The next few years were spent in assisting his father in the labors of the farm during the summers, and in teaching school during the winters. He has for a considerable period been the manager of the homestead, which is maintained for the heirs, and under his skillful management it is now in a flourishing condition. He has also, as becomes a good citizen, taken an active part in the affairs of the township, and has been placed by the votes of his townsmen in the offices of auditor and school director, discharging the duties of both positions in a manner which justified their confidence in him. In politics he is an Independent, and his church connections are with the Lutheran denomination.

Mr. Wilson married Amy Essick, and they are the parents of two children: Reba, who is the wife of Allen Henry, a miller of East Pikeland, and has no children; and Thomas Benton, unmarried, who resides on the homestead and assists his father in the care and management of the farm. Mrs. Wilson is a daughter of Joseph and Catharine (Davis) Essick, the latter being a daughter of John and Catharine Davis. Another daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Essick is Annie, who married Lewis Detwiler, a miller by trade and a descendant of an old family. Their children are: John, a merchant; Joseph, a carpenter in Philadelphia; Sarah, who is the wife of Willis Huzzard, a sash and door maker; and Ruth, who resides at home.

EVAN THOMAS SWAYNE. The family of which Evan T. Swayne, now deceased, was a representative member, is one of the oldest in Chester county, Pennsylvania, the patriarch of the family having been Francis Swayne, who in an old deed is styled a practitioner of medicine. Francis Swayne was the son of William Swayne, of Ockingham, Liberty of Wilts, Berkshire, England, who died in 1693, being survived by two sons and a daughter. Francis Swayne married Elizabeth Milton, and among the children born to him was a son, William Swayne (1), who married Elizabeth Dell, and among his children was a son, William Swayne (2), who married Ann Pusey, and they reared a family of children, Caleb Swayne being their first born. Caleb Swayne married Mary Wood, and by this marriage were born the following named children: Ann, Benjamin, Huson, Caleb, Rest, and two children who died in early childhood.

Benjamin Swayne, father of Evan T. Swayne, was born in East Marlboro township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 13, 1791, and received his education in the common schools of the neighborhood. He learned the trade of tanning leather, which in those days was an important business throughout the part of the country situated north of the Mason and Dixon line, and for many years he conducted a tannery in London Grove township, Chester county. Mr. Swayne devoted the greater part of his leisure time to the reading of good literature, took an active interest in the cause of education, and about the year 1848 he established a boarding school at London Grove, Chester county, which he successfully conducted for nearly fifteen years, during a portion of which time his son, Evan T. Swayne, was one of the instructors.

Mr. Swayne married Sarah Phillips, daughter of William and Mary (Marshall) Phillips, of Hockessin, New Castle county, Delaware, her birth having occurred there January 15, 1803. Their children were: 1. Evan Thomas, born September 13, 1824. 2. Edward, born January 15, 1826, died November 18, 1846. 3. Caleb, born July 16, 1827, who was a graduate of Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, and practiced his profession in London Grove, Chester county, until his decease, which occurred October 24, 1860. 4. Mary, born March 28, 1828, died September 14, 1866. 5. Jane T., born August 11, 1832, who became the wife of Joseph W. Bernard, born November 29, 1832 or 1833, died October 23, 1888; he was the son of Richard M. and Hannah (Wilson) Bernard, and was for many years a successful practicing attorney of West Chester, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Benjamin Swayne, father of these children, died January 17, 1873, survived by his widow, whose death occurred at Kennett Square, Chester county, January 16, 1890.

Evan T. Swayne, eldest son of Benjamin and Sarah (Phillips) Swayne, was born at London Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 13, 1824. He acquired his elementary education in the schools of the neighborhood, and later attended the Academy of Kennett Square, Chester county, where he qualified himself for teaching. At the early age of seventeen he accepted a position as teacher at the old Octagon school-house in Birmingham township. After having taught in his father's school at London Grove and at other schools in Chester county, he took up his residence in Kennett Square, in 1865, purchased the Eaton Institute from William Chandler, and here conducted what became known as one of the leading educational institutions in southern Chester county. In 1877 he abandoned this occupation, and assumed the management of his varied property interests and the affairs of the Friends' Meetings, in which organization he was a zealous worker. For many years he was clerk of the quarterly meeting at London Grove, was assistant clerk of the yearly meeting at Fifteenth and Race streets, Philadelphia, and various other charges connected with the Society of Friends devolved upon him many onerous duties and occupied most of his time during the latter years of his life.

Mr. Swayne married Sarah W. Pusey, born at Auburn, New Castle county, Delaware, September 23, 1829, daughter of Jacob and Hannah (Mendenhall) Pusey, the former named having been a prominent manufacturer of Auburn, New Castle county, Delaware. Their children were: 1. Edward, born in London Grove, Chester county, June 20, 1853, married Mary D. Walton, of Highland township, Chester county, and their children are: Norman, born November 6, 1885; Edith, born October 20, 1887; Donald, born December 11, 1897. 2. Laura, born February 23, 1857. 3. Anna Belle, born March 28, 1864. 4. Charles S., born October 27, 1870. The family are birthright members of the Society of Friends. For a number of years prior to his decease, which occurred December 2, 1894, Mr. Swayne and his family occupied a comfortable and commodious residence in Kennett Square, Chester county, and the declining years of his life were spent in the full enjoyment of the respect and esteem of a wide circle of steadfast friends.

THOMAS WILSON GRIFFITH, justice of the peace of West Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in which vicinity his birth occurred June 20, 1844, is an honored and respected citizen, and throughout his active commercial career has always conducted his affairs honorably and honestly and upon correct business principles.

The Griffith family is of Welsh origin, the pioneer ancestors being Jediah and Ruth Griffith, who came to this country during the early colonial days. Their son, Ebenezer Griffith, grandfather of Thomas W. Griffith, was born November 2, 1792; he was a carpenter and cabinet maker by trade, and his death occurred in 1823, he being then thirty-one years of age. Connard Miller, grandfather of Thomas W. Griffith, on the maternal side, dates his ancestry back to an early period in the history of the United States, and is a descendant of one of the oldest families in this section of the state.

James Wilson Griffith, father of Thomas W. Griffith, was born in West Pikeland, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 2, 1818. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood, after which he devoted seven years to learning the various branches of the shoemaking trade. The following five years he was employed as a journeyman at his trade in his native township, after which he located on a small tract of land in Birchrunville, Chester county. In 1853 he became a minister of the gospel, and was ordained pastor of the Windsor Baptist church, in which capacity he served for four years. He was then appointed to the pastorate of the East Nantmeal Baptist church, and after seven years of faithful labor with that people, he was placed in charge of the Lawrenceville Baptist church. He labored faithfully and earnestly in this field for seven years, after which he was placed on the superannuate list for the remainder of his life. Mr. Griffith was a lifelong student, a clear thinker and excellent speaker, and was greatly respected and beloved by the parishoners of the various fields in which he labored.

James W. Griffith was united in marriage to Harriet Miller, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Miller, of West Vincent township, Birchrunville, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Thomas Wilson and Samuel Miller, the latter named being a prominent merchant of Garretttsford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Miller, father of Mrs. Griffith, was a blacksmith by trade, being employed most of his time at cycle making; in his later years he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. His death occurred in 1870, having attained the age of seventy-three years, five months and twenty days. Mr. Griffith departed this life in 1896, aged seventy-eight years.

Thomas W. Griffith, eldest son of James W. and Harriet Griffith, acquired a practical education at the public schools of Birchrunville, Chester county, and later he assisted his father in the management of his farm. In December, 1868, in partnership with his brother, Samuel Miller Griffith, they established a grocery business at 3706 Market street, Philadelphia, but after conducting this enterprise for a short time they disposed of the business and Mr. Griffith returned to Birchrunville. He then took up the wheelwright business, which he conducted for many years, first at Glemmore and later at Ludwigs Corner; in the former named place he established an excellent business, and after conducting it for sixteen years he disposed of it and removed to Ludwig's Corner, where in addition to this trade he conducted agricultural pursuits. Subsequently he returned to Birchrunville, and being a natural mechanic he was enabled to secure employment as a journeyman in the carpentering trade, which he conducted in addition to his farming interests. In the fall of 1890 Mr. Griffith, in partnership with Margaret Templin, entered the general merchandise business which they successfully conducted for five and a half years. At the expiration of this period of time Mrs. Templin died, after which Mr. Griffith disposed of the business and returned to the old homestead. The following four years he assisted his father with the work of the farm, and after the death of the latter he returned to his former employment of carpentering, which he followed up to the present year (1903).

Mr. Griffith is now devoting his attention to agricultural pursuits on the old homestead, which is located in a beautiful portion of West Vincent township, known as Ralston Corners. Mr. Griffith has been associated with the United States Coast Survey among the islands of South Carolina, and has acted in the capacity of surveyor of Beaufort and other islands. He is a Republican in politics, and has served in several township offices, among them being justice of the peace of West Vincent township, to which office he was elected four years ago on the Republican ticket, having also the support of the Democratic party. He is a member of Mt. Picking Lodge, No. 446, Free and Accepted Masons.

Mr. Griffith was united in marriage to Sarah Pennypacker, a daughter of Owen and Hannah Pennypacker, of West Vincent township, representatives of one of the oldest families in Chester county, Pennsylvania; Mr. Pennypacker was a farmer by occupation. One child was born of this union, a nie, now deceased, whose birth occurred August 15, 1868. After the death of his wife, Mr. Griffith married Mrs. Kate U. Ralston, widow of William Ralston, of West Vincent, and daughter of Samuel and Elsie (Carpenter) Rice. Mr. Rice was a mason by occupation, which he conducted in Roxborough, Pennsylvania, and during the winter months he was employed at the shoemaking trade, this trade having been learned under the supervision of Mr. Griffith's father. He was a son of John Rice, who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his entire business career was devoted to farming pursuits. Charles Carpenter, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Griffith is supposed to have been born in Roxborough, Pennsylvania, in early days, and his entire life was spent in that town, where he followed the occupation of cooper. Mrs. Griffith has in her possession the old family Bible, owned and handed down by the Ralston family, which dates back as far as 1697, and was printed by Charles Rice and the executrix of Thomas Newcomb.

CAPTAIN LEWIS H. EVANS, of Upper Uwchlan township, is an inheritor of virile Welsh blood and good Quaker traditions; and, as soldier, legislator and man of affairs, he has well represented the standards imposed by his ancestry.

The founder of the family in this country, Evan Evans, of the parish of Trecglws, Montgomeryshire, Wales, landed in America in 1722. He had been a felt-maker in his own country, but in the autumn of 1722 he bought two hundred and fifty acres of land in Chester county, in the vicinity of Uwchlan Friends Meeting House, near the present site of Lionville. Here he lived and cultivated his land until his death in 1731. The children of Evan Evans were: 1. Martha, who became the wife of Stephen Hoopes; 2. Mary, who first married William Clayton, and after his death became the wife of Isaac Marshall; 3. Margaret, who married John Todhunter; 4. Evan, who died unmarried; 5. Susanna, who married Isaac Sewell, and at his death married Robert Carter; 6. Thomas, who married Eleanor Reese; 7-8. Anna and Edward, who died young; 9. Richey, who married Phoebe Whelan in 1763, and with his wife and five children afterward removed to Hopewell, Virginia.

Thomas Evans, sixth child and second son of Evan Evans, was born near Lionville, Chester county, and died about 1807. He was a farmer, and lived and died on the old homestead. August 17, 1748, he married Eleanor, a daughter of James Reese, of Uwchlan, who bore him six children, Evan, Ezekiel, Jessie, Isaac, Thomas and Eleanor.

Evan, oldest child of Thomas and Eleanor (Reese) Evans, was born in September, 1749, on a farm in Upper Uwchlan township, near the site of the present Eagle Hotel property. Like his father he was a farmer, a man of strong individuality, and conspicuous in local public affairs. He was a Federalist, and was elected to the state assembly for 1782 and 1783. He married Jane Owen, a daughter of William Owen, of Upper Uwchlan township, February 16, 1780. She was born March 19, 1762, and died August 5, 1841, and her husband died July 16, 1823. The children of this marriage were: Rebecca; Owen, who moved to Illinois with his family; Eleanor, who died young; Thomas, who died in 1823, leaving a son named Boon; Sarah, who married William Dunwoody; Ezekiel, the father of Captain Lewis H. Evans; Margaret, who married Benjamin Harly; William, who died young; Richard; Hannah, who married David Beidler; and Jane, who married Lewis Hurford.

Ezekiel, sixth child and third son of Evan and Jane (Owen) Evans, was born June 24, 1791, in Upper Uwchlan township. He passed his long life of almost eighty years in the community which his forefathers had borne a large part in flourishing. Like those forefathers, he was a Quaker. He was engaged in farming and stock raising, but held his mind open to outside affairs. A Whig in his earlier political views, he became a Republican. He was a justice of the peace in his township for several years. He married Eleanor, a daughter of John Beidler, of East Pikeland township, about 1818. Ten children were born to this marriage: Thomas B., Hannah, John B., Jane E., Mary Ann, Evan B., Lewis H., Rebecca, Anna and D. Webster. Ezekiel Evans died May 29, 1870, and his wife died in September of the same year.

Lewis H., seventh child and fourth son of Ezekiel and Eleanor (Beidler) Evans, was born July 1, 1832, in the township where three generations of his family had lived before him. After attending the public schools in the vicinity, he became a student at Professor Gause's seminary at Marshalltown, Chester county. After leaving school he occupied himself on the farm until the outbreak of the Civil war. June 6, 1861, he enlisted for three years as a noncommissioned officer in Company K, Fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserves. He served with distinction and was made first lieutenant of his company in 1862. His regiment was with the Army of the Potomac until the spring of 1864, when, just before the battle of the Wilderness, the command was detached and sent into Western Virginia. After having passed uninjured through the severe campaigning of the two previous years, Lieutenant Evans received a wound in the arm which seriously disabled him, in an engagement at Cloyd Mountain. The regiment was mustered out of service July 17, 1864, and Lieutenant Evans was honorably discharged with an unbroken record of gallant service. He was commissioned captain after the close of the war, by Governor Geary.

His first return to industrial pursuits after the close of his life as a soldier, was in Lancaster county, where he bought a farm which he conducted for three years. In 1870, however, he returned to his birthplace and bought the fine farm which he now owns in Upper Uwchlan township.

His characteristic energy and industry have made of it one of the best cultivated and best equipped farms in the section. Captain Evans is a Republican in politics, and in 1872 was made register of wills for Chester county. He held this office three years. In 1887 he was elected to the state house of representatives, and served in the legislature during the sessions of 1887 and 1889, with credit to himself and to the best interests of his constituents. He has been a member of the Forestry commission of the state of Pennsylvania. He was one of the organizers of the Fairmount Creamery Association, an enterprise vital to the agricultural interests of his community. Captain Evans is also a valued member of General George A. McCall Post, No. 31, Grand Army of the Republic.

JOHN C. VANSANT. The Vansant family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, represented in the present generation by John Clark Vansant, a prominent business man of London Britain township, and who has occupied many positions of trust and responsibility, originated in Maryland. John Clark Vansant, paternal grandfather of him of the same name who is previously referred to, was a son of John Clark and Mary Vansant, and was born in Queen Anne county, Maryland, December 30, 1788. He was an extensive farmer and stock breeder and dealer, and a most successful peach grower. He married, February 25, 1808, Ellen Kenny.

John Clark Vansant, son of the parents last named, was born near Newark, Newcastle county, Delaware, January 2, 1817. He followed farming in the neighborhood in which he was born until 1860, when he removed to London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he made his home on a farm during the remainder of his life. For three years of this time he was also engaged in a mercantile business. While a resident of Delaware he held the office of road commissioner, but after coming to Pennsylvania he held aloof from public concerns. He was a man of excellent character, an attendant upon the services of the Presbyterian church, and a Democrat in politics. He married, March 23, 1858, Maria Jacobs.

John Clark Vansant, only son of John Clark and Maria (Jacobs) Vansant, was born near Newark, Newcastle county, Delaware, July 7, 1859. In his boyhood his parents removed to London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and there he received his preparatory education in the public schools, afterward attending Prof. Alexander Terrell's academical school in the same township. He has followed farming during his mature life, and for twenty-two years past he has also conducted an important mercantile business, as a dealer in agricultural implements, wagons, harness and fertilizers, in the village of Strickersville. He has also been traveling salesman for the Deering Harvester Company, of Chicago, covering the eastern shore of Maryland and Delaware and part of Chester county. A man of excellent business ability and progressive and public-spirited, he has long been a potent factor in promoting the interests of the community, and has rendered excellent service in various important positions, including among others those of supervisor, school director and tax collector. In politics he is a Democrat. He is affiliated with the Junior Order of American Mechanics and the Improved Order of Red Men.

Mr. Vansant was married, February 3, 1881, to Miss Mary Smith Montgomery, a daughter of Robert and Sarah Montgomery. She was born in Franklin township, near Kimbleville, November 8, 1856. With her husband she is a member of the Flint Hill Methodist Episcopal church. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Vansant: 1. John Clark Vansant, Jr., born December 1, 1883; He received his preparatory education in the public school and then became a student at Goldey College, Wilmington, Delaware; he, however, has finished his course and has accepted a position as bookkeeper with H. K. Mulford Chemical Company, of Philadelphia. 2. Gaylord M. K. Vansant, born February 27, 1885, died August 8 of the same year; 3. George Montgomery Vansant, born December 21, 1887, who was educated in the public schools; 4. Nile Everett Vansant, born December 24, 1896.

JOHN ELLIOTT, an enterprising and prosperous agriculturist of London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he has resided for the past twelve years, is a representative of that class of men who have been born and reared in foreign countries, but after making the United States their home have adapted themselves to its customs and methods and become true and loyal citizens of our great and glorious country.

He is a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Elliott, of Westogwall Parish, England, where his birth occurred in the year 1824. His educational advantages were obtained at the public schools of the Parish, and after laying aside his school books he began his business career by farming on the old homestead. He continued at this occupation until the year 1851, when he left his ancestral home and sought a wider field in which to conduct his operations. Having decided that the United States afforded the best opportunities for a successful business life, he accordingly emigrated here, landed in New York city, and later located in the state of New Jersey, where for a short period of time he engaged in farming. His next place of residence was in Canada, where, for fifteen years he served in the capacity of salesman for J. P. Wells, Esq., a dealer in potash and salts. At the expiration of that period, Mr. Elliott located in the state of Massachusetts, accepted the superintendency of a mine, and for six years filled that responsible position. For twenty-six years he was engaged in mining corundum and iron ore in Newlin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. In 1891 he finally settled in that county, purchased a tract of farm land in London Britain township, and since that date has conducted general farming operations. Politically Mr. Elliott is a firm adherent of the principles of the Republican party. He has declined the incumbency of several minor township offices, preferring to devote his entire time to his business interests.

Mr. Elliott was united in marriage to Elizabeth Machia, a native of Canada, now deceased, and two children were born of this union—Cora E. and Glover B. Elliott. Cora E. Elliott has been teaching in the grammar school of Landenburg for the past ten years, and is a successful and thorough instructress. Mr. Elliott and his family attend the services of the Presbyterian church.

DAVID PHILIPS, for a period of almost twenty years actively identified with the manufacture of road machinery at Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he enjoys the reputation of being an upright and conscientious business man, is a descendant of Joseph and Mary Philips, natives of Wales, the former named having been born in 1716, and the latter in 1710. In 1755, Joseph Philips, accompanied by his wife, Mary, and their three sons, David, John and Josiah, came to this country, the first place of settlement being near the present site of West Chester, but subsequently he purchased a farm in Uwchlan, where he erected a two-story log house. He was a weaver by occupation, spoke his native language, Welsh, and he and his family lived with the utmost simplicity. They were faithful and consistent members of the Vincent Baptist church, having formerly attended the Great Valley Baptist church, thirteen miles distant from their home. Joseph Philips died May 18, 1792, and his wife, Mary, died December 26, 1792.

David and Joseph Philips, sons of Joseph and Mary Philips, settled in the western part of Pennsylvania, near Pittsburg, but David later removed to Tennessee. John and Josiah Philips, also sons of Joseph and Mary Philips, remained on the old homestead near Chester Spring, John removing subsequently to Atglen, Chester county.

Josiah Philips, grandfather of David Philips, devoted his time and attention to the cultivation and improvement of the old homestead in Uwchlan, and being a man of great force of character and deep piety, his influence for good was felt in the community to a large extent. Mr. Philips was twice married, his first wife having been Martha Edwards and their children were: David, John and Josiah. His second wife was Sarah Thomas, and the following named children were born to them: Joseph, Owen, Martha, Mary, Sarah, and Hannah, born March 6, 1802. The father of these children died March 1, 1817, having attained the age of sixty-six years.

David Phillips

Owen Philips, father of David Philips, was born September 7, 1789. He learned the trade of weaving, which he pursued for some time, and then followed the occupation of farming in East Nantmeal, where he was one of the prominent and influential citizens. He was a Republican in politics and a Baptist in religion, being one of the founders of the East Nantmeal Baptist church, in which he filled the office of deacon for a number of years. He was united in marriage to Rachel Evans, who was born June 24, 1792, a daughter of Jeremiah and Mary Evans. Their children were: 1. Jesse, born January 4, 1816, who served one term as treasurer of Chester county, and died in April, 1895. 2. Josiah, born September 10, 1817, died February 8, 1889. 3. Milton, born September 25, 1819, died in early youth. 4. Lewis, born February 27, 1822, engaged in farming interests in East Nantmeal township. 5. David, born September 8, 1824. 6. Joseph, born September 25, 1827, died January 2, 1901. 7. Charles M., born August 25, 1829. 8. Sarah Anna, born December 7, 1831. 9. Owen Thomas, born February 21, 1834. 10. Abner E., born March 8, 1840.

David Philips, fifth son of Owen and Rachel (Evans) Philips, was born in East Nantmeal, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1824, and the educational advantages he enjoyed in the common schools of his native township qualified him for the position of teacher, in which capacity he served for ten years in the village of Pughtown. In 1885 he removed to Kennett Square and since that date has been engaged, in association with his sons, in the manufacture of road machinery, such as rock crushers and road scrapers. By means of hard labor, careful management and strict attention to business, they have secured an extensive and profitable trade, and the business is one of the leading industries in the borough.

Mr. Philips married for his first wife, Tamsen Morris, a daughter of William Morris, a successful manufacturer of scythes, near Pughtown, and the issue of this marriage was: Arthur Allen, died in childhood; William Sumner, died in early life, and S. Jones, born July 26, 1861, who married January 24, 1883, Martha Voorhees, and their children are: Ralph, born January 14, 1884, died in infancy; D. Leon, born March 27, 1886, and Earl, born May 2, 1892. Tamsen (Morris) Philips died August 4, 1861. Mr. Philips married for his second wife, Sarah Amole, born November 1, 1830, daughter of George Amole, of Warwick township, and the following children were born to them: 1. Edwin Stanton, born January 14, 1864, married October 5, 1892, Martha Yost, and their children are: Roland and Ruth Philips. 2. Jessie May, born June 13, 1866, became the wife of Morris P. Smith, October 7, 1891, and one child has been born to them, Ralph P. Smith. 3. George Owen, born September 14, 1868, now deceased. 4. Annie Tustin, born April 10, 1871, and was united in marriage June 1, 1893, to Howard H. Polk, son of Robert and Mary Polk; they are the parents of one child, Howard Wayne Polk, born October 8, 1898. Sarah (Amole) Philips died April 9, 1900.

The Philips family have lately donated a memorial window to the Vincent Baptist church at Chester Springs, which was organized in 1771. The family is noted for its many characteristics, among them being its longevity, its strong religious sentiment, many members of the family being ministers of the Gospel, and its powerful intellectual vigor, it being a race of teachers from 1797 to the present time (1903).

THOMAS EDMUND CROSSAN, a leading farmer of London Britain township, Chester county, and a man of influence in the community, who has often rendered public service in various elective offices, is a representative of an old and highly respected family. His paternal grandfather, William Crossan, resided near Landenburg, in the township named, where he managed a large and productive farm, and also conducted a general store and freighted merchandise between his place and Wilmington and Baltimore. He was a man of strong character and great ability, as is attested by the fact that he carved out his own fortune through his own industry and persistency, and that he came to be recognized as one of the prime leaders of the community.

William Crossan and his wife Margaret were the parents of Kennedy Crossan, who was born on the homestead farm, December 24, 1815. He was educated in the common neighborhood schools, and, until he came of age, he remained with his father, whom he assisted in the freighting business to Baltimore and Wilmington. He subsequently settled in his native township upon a farm immediately south of that upon which his son, Thomas E. Crossan, now resides, which he cultivated, and upon which he lived until his declining days, when he made his home with the son named until the time of his death, August 17, 1898. Mr. Crossan was highly regarded by his fellows, and was elected supervisor of the township and served in various other local offices. He affiliated with the Democratic party. He was not a church member, but habitually worshipped with the Presbyterians. He was married, April 18, 1844, to Margaret Nichols, who was born January 8, 1822, a daughter of Thomas and Mary Nichols, of Landenburg. The children born of this marriage were: 1. Samuel D., born March 2, 1845, who resides in Wilmington, Delaware; 2. Mary E., born October 10, 1846, now deceased; 3. Thomas Edmund, to be written of hereinafter; 4. Phebe Ann, born March 31, 1851, now deceased; 5. Kennedy, born May 25, 1852, who resides in Philadelphia, where he conducts an extensive contracting business; 6. Calvin J., born July 2, 1854, who is a farmer residing in London Britain township; 7. William H., born July 28, 1856, who is a farmer and resides in Franklin township; 8. Marshall S., born December 29, 1858, who is a farmer and resides near Chesterville, in Franklin township; 9. Margaret E., born June 22, 1861, who became the wife of George Smith, and they reside upon the Crossan homestead, and with them the widowed mother of Mrs. Smith.

Thomas Edmund, third child and second son of Kennedy and Margaret (Nichols) Crossan, was born on the paternal homestead, February 4, 1848, and received his education in the public schools. On attaining to manhood he purchased the farm upon which he now resides, and which he has industriously and successfully cultivated to the present time. Enjoying the respect and confidence of the people about him, he has been called to public positions with unusual frequency. He has served as supervisor, school director, assessor and constable, and in the two positions last named, respectively, for the long period of fourteen and seventeen years, and he is now serving in that of tax collector. He is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, and he and his family attend the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Crossan was married, December 24, 1868, to Miss Martha Jane, a daughter of William and Amanda Gregg. She was born in Landenburg, March 8, 1847. Of her marriage with Mr. Crossan were born the following children:

1. Harry Hoopes Crossan, born in New Garden township, Chester county, September 22, 1869. He was educated in the public schools and he married Anna B. Mahony; they reside in New Garden township. 2. Ida May Crossan, born March 4, 1871, who became the wife of William H. Lovett, and they reside in Franklin township; 3. William G. Crossan, born May 7, 1873, who married Grace Dripps, and they reside in Franklin township; 4. Carrie C. L. Crossan, born September 10, 1876, who became the wife of Andrew Brandenberger, and they reside in New Garden township.

CALVIN JACK CROSSAN, a successful farmer and highly respected citizen of London Britain township, Chester county, is a grandson of William and Margaret Crossan, and the sixth child and fourth son of Kennedy and Margaret (Nichols) Crossan.

He was born at the ancestral homestead, in London Britain township, Chester county, July 2, 1854. He received his education in the public schools of his native place, and aided in the cultivation of the paternal farm until he was nineteen years of age. He then (in 1873) took up his residence in Landenburg, where he had taken employment in railroad work. At the expiration of a year, he entered upon farming as a renter, first on the Nivin farm for one year, then the Lewis Passmore farm for one year, and then for three years on the Samuel Davis farm, for an equal term on the Charles Dunn farm, and then for a year on the farm now owned by his brother Thomas. In 1885 he located on the farm upon which he now resides, then owned by his brother Kennedy Crossan, from whom he purchased the place in 1892. His long persisted-in industry and ability as a tiller of the soil has gained its due reward, and he now enjoys a fine farm home, acquired by his own labor, and which he cultivates after the most approved methods. Honored for his worth and deservedness, Mr. Crossan is known as a progressive, public-spirited citizen, and he has been called upon at various times to occupy positions of honor and responsibility, and he has served for four years as constable, and for six years as supervisor, occupying the last named position at the present time. In politics he is a Democrat, and he is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics. With his family he attends the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Crossan was married, on Christmas day, 1873, to Miss Anna M. Wiser, born in New London township, March 17, 1851, a daughter of William and Elizabeth Wiser. Born of this marriage were the following named children: 1. Virginia, born August 9, 1874, died September 21, 1880; 2-3. Margaret and Elizabeth, twins, born August 18, 1876; they were educated in the public schools, and Elizabeth attended the State Normal school in West Chester; Margaret married, April 2, 1903, Delbert Fernan, and they reside on a farm adjoining Mr. Crossan; Elizabeth became the wife of Robert McMillan, March 30, 1899, and they reside in Landenburg, and are the parents of one child, Herbert Wayne, born January 26, 1900. The other children of Mr. and Mrs.

Crossan are: 4. Clare E., born October 10, 1878, who was educated in the public schools, and resides with his parents; 5. Beulah J., born September 10, 1880, who was educated in the public schools; 6. Viola P., born June 13, 1884, who was educated in the public schools; 7. Calvin Cleveland, born February 10, 1886, died July 26, 1895; 8. Herbert Evan, born April 1, 1892, who is now a student in the public schools. The family occupy a most comfortable and attractive home, and are firm in the affections of a large circle of friends.

JOHN THOMAS WHITE, a worthy representative of that class of men known as independent farmers, was born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 24, 1841, a son of Richard and Hannah C. White, and grandson of John White, who located on a farm in the vicinity of Avondale, London Grove township, Chester county, where he followed agricultural pursuits during his entire active career. In politics he was an adherent of the old line Whig party.

Richard White (father) was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1805, and his education was obtained in the common schools of that county. During his young manhood days he learned the trade of carpenter, at which he was employed for a number of years, and then located on a farm in Franklin township, Chester county, whereon he conducted extensive operations up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1886. He was a Republican in politics, and gave the candidates of his party an earnest and loyal support. Mr. White was united in marriage to Hannah C. Spencer, born in August, 1820, daughter of Asa and Ann Spencer, of New London township, Chester county. Mrs. White is living at the present time (1903), and resides in Wilmington, Delaware. Their children are: John Thomas, mentioned at length hereinafter; Philena W., wife of Nathan Jamney, who resides in Wilmington, Delaware; Georgeanna, wife of Oliver Russell, who resides in London Britain township; Asa Spencer, who is married and lives at Lincoln University; Edith, deceased; Magdalene, wife of Swithin Shortledge, who resides in New Garden township.

John T. White, eldest son of Richard and Hannah C. White, obtained his early education at the common schools of Franklin township, later was a pupil at the school taught by Samuel Harper, in London Britain township, and then attended the Eton Academy at Kennett Square. For a short time after his graduation from the latter named institution, Mr. White taught school as a means of livelihood, a position for which he was well qualified. In 1862 he located on a farm in London Britain township, and since that date to the present time (1903) has successfully conducted general farming. He is a Republican in politics, has held the offices of constable and assessor, and is one of the substantial and leading citizens of London Britain township. During the Civil war he was a member of the Union League.

In 1863 Mr. White married Elizabeth Gilmore, daughter of Robert Gilmore, of Franklin township, Chester county. Mrs. White died in August, 1865. On December 24, 1868, Mr. White married Maria Letitia Mackey, born in 1837, daughter of John K. and Rebecca Ann Mackey, of London Britain township, Chester county, and the issue of this marriage was one child, Rebecca Ann, born May, 27, 1873, died August 6, 1894. Mrs. White, mother of this child, died in 1892. For his third wife Mr. White chose Margaret Ann (Kirk) Maccubbin, daughter of Samuel and Sarah Kirk, the ceremony being performed November 7, 1893.

NORRIS BARNARD SLACK. Business ability, energy and enterprise have been the chief characteristics in the career of Norris B. Slack, a leading young business man of London Britain township, who has gained an enviable reputation in commercial circles and whose opinion in business affairs is eagerly sought after and highly appreciated.

Norris B. Slack was born at Lincoln (present site) University, December 29, 1860, and received his education at the public schools and Newark Academy, Newark, Delaware. His first business experience was gained as a commercial traveler, he having engaged in that occupation in 1882 and continued it for about three years. In 1885 he turned his attention to the sale of agricultural implements to which he has since added a large and select stock of carriages and wagons, and this line of enterprise he is successfully conducting at the present time (1903). During the years 1886 and 1887, he was engaged in the flour and feed business in the city of Philadelphia, in addition to the management of the aforesaid extensive enterprise. In 1900 Mr. Slack was instrumental in the incorporation of the Wilmington (Delaware) Farm Supply Company, of which he was secretary, treasurer and manager until August, 1902, at which time he resigned on account of ill health; he still holds his interest in the company and is one of its present board of directors. He also owns and operates a fine farm of sixty-seven acres adjacent to the village of Strickersville, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Slack is a member and trustee of the Methodist Episcopal church at Kimbleville, Pennsylvania, and serves in the capacity of superintendent of its Sunday school. In politics he is a staunch Democrat. He has filled the offices of assessor, constable and school director for London Britain township, being the incumbent of each position for a number of years. He is an honored member of Kennett Lodge, No. 475, Free and Accepted Masons; of the Society of Red Men at Newark, Delaware; the Junior Order of American Mechanics; of the Knights of Pythias at Lewisville, Pennsylvania; and is treasurer of the Chester County Fraternal Benefit Association, one of the managers of the Agricultural Society located at Oxford, Pennsylvania, and a director of the Traveling Men's Association.

On February 16, 1887, Mr. Slack married Mary B. Miller, daughter of the Rev. William T. and Jane (McCullough) Miller, of Union, Cecil county, Maryland. Mrs. Slack was born October 12, 1866. Their children are Grace Jane, born December 10, 1887; Thomas Miller, born March 29, 1888; Norris Harlan, born November 10, 1890; Eva Belle, born February 11, 1894; Loreta Booth, born April 3, 1895; Robert Austin Burnett, born November 25, 1902.

WILLIAM STINSON KENNADY, a leading citizen of London Britain township, is a man who believes thoroughly in the advantages of education and who assists to the best of his ability in every work and enterprise which has for its object the betterment and upbuilding of mankind. His birth occurred in the township of London Britain, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 25, 1839, a son of Robert and Lydia Ann (Stinson) Kennady, and grandson of Robert Kennady.

Robert Kennady (father) was a native of London Britain township, Chester county, having been born about the year 1800, on the farm on which his son, William S. Kennady, now resides. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood, and in early life chose the vocation of farming, which he conducted successfully on the farm in London Britain township, which was formerly the property of his father. He was a Democrat in politics, and was elected by his fellow citizens to serve in the capacity of township supervisor and assessor. He was an active and consistent member of the New London Presbyterian church. Mr. Kennady married Lydia Ann Stinson, a native of London Britain township, and their children were: Anna Maria, deceased, who was the wife of Samuel Lindsey, of Delaware; Martha Jane, deceased, who was the wife of Andrew James Mearns; Rebecca K., deceased, who was the wife of Amos T. Biles; John W.; and William Stinson Kennady. Robert Kennady died in 1883; his wife passed away March 9, 1878.

William S. Kennady was born and reared on the farm in the township of London Britain, where he now resides. His education was obtained at the boarding school conducted under the thorough and competent instruction of Samuel Harper. Being inured to the varied and arduous duties pertaining to a farm, he chose that occupation for his life work, assisted his father with the management of the home place, and in due course of time became the possessor of the homestead, whereon he has conducted general farming up to the present time. He has always been practical and progressive in his ideas, and the neat and thrifty appearance of his property indicates unceasing labor and a careful oversight of all the details of the business. Since attaining his majority, Mr. Kennady has voted the Democratic ticket. He has served in various township offices, including those of auditor, supervisor and school director.

On February 11, 1865, Mr. Kennady married Jane Elizabeth Conner, born in Cecil county, Maryland, December 25, 1843, a daughter of Joshua and Mary Ann (Underwood) Conner. Their children are: Urie Rebecca, born October 29, 1867, wife of Edgar E. Heston; they reside in Cranford, Union county, New Jersey. John W., born January 6, 1872; he received his education at the Newark Academy and at the Normal School at West Chester; he married Mary E. Mendenhall, daughter of James Mendenhall, and one child has been born to them, Clara Margaret Kennady; they reside at West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania. William Stinson, Jr., born June 24, 1883; he attended the high school at Wilmington, Delaware, and is now a student at Delaware College, Newark, Delaware. The family holds membership in the New London Presbyterian church, Mr. Kennady being a member of the board of trustees and also a member of the cemetery committee.

JAMES PATTERSON RAMSAY. The old homestead of the Ramsay family which was situated in Lower Oxford township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was the scene of the birth of many of the ancestors of James P. Ramsay, an enterprising and prosperous agriculturist of Penn township, his birth having also occurred there on December 21, 1850.

John Ramsay, great-grandfather of James P. Ramsay, was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in this section of the state his entire business career was spent. He married Margaret Cowan, and they reared a family of six children, namely: Hannah, wife of David Hayes; Joseph, who married Bethsheba Cochran; Mary, wife of James Walker; John, who married Margaret Walker; Samuel, who married Mary Adams; and Jane, wife of Andrew Gibson.

Joseph Ramsay, a grandfather of James P. Ramsay, was the eldest son of John and Margaret Ramsay, and his birth occurred January 4, 1789. He was a lifelong resident of Chester county and was actively associated with its varied enterprise and pursuits. He was united in marriage to Bethsheba Cochran, and their children were: Robert Cochran, born January 21, 1813, died March 16, 1842; John H., born January 6, 1815, died July 4, 1851; David, born November 7, 1816; Susan, born May 23, 1820, died March 25, 1894; Emmor, born December 17, 1822, died June 1, 1863; James, born October 10, 1825, and Margaret Ramsay, born February 12, 1828.

David Ramsay, father of James P. Ramsay, was born on the old homestead, November 7, 1816, and was the third son in order of birth of the children of Joseph and Bethsheba Ramsay. He was a man of integrity and honor, and his influence has always been on the side of morality and right. By his marriage to Isabella Patterson, the following named children were born: James Patterson, William Howard, Alfred Cochran, Frank Gardner and Emma Bethsheba Ramsay.

James P. Ramsay, eldest son of David and Isabella Ramsay, was reared in Lower Oxford township and acquired his early education in the local schools of that section and at Oxford borough, supplementing this with attendance at Union High School. After completing his studies he devoted his attention to farming, thoroughly mastering all the details of that industry, and since the year 1880 has rented and managed the Charlton farm, which consists of two hundred acres, and was deeded to Thomas Charlton by Christiana Gulielma Penn, a daughter of William Penn, in 1758. He is a Republican in politics, and has served his township in the capacity of supervisor, school director and county committeeman.

On January 29, 1880, Mr. Ramsay married Annie Harvey Charlton, who was born in Penn township, Chester county, where she was reared and obtained an excellent education in the private schools. Five children were the issue of this union, namely: Ada Bowen, born December 1, 1880; David, born March 12, 1883; Paul C., born March 9, 1887; Marion P., born March 6, 1892, and James, born April 23, 1894, died in infancy. Mrs. Ramsay is the daughter of Thomas McClenathon and Mary Ann (Kelso) Charlton, the former named having been born on January 24, 1827. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Charlton were: 1. Annie Harvey; 2. Mary Nelson, became the wife of Edward Fern, and their children are: Thomas C., born March 1, 1884; Agnes M., born June 2, 1888; Edna T., born August 4, 1892, and Helen Fern, born April 24, 1894; 3. Alonzo Potter, married March 28, 1883, Eva L. Underdown, and their children are: William U., born December 18, 1884, and Thomas M., born in January, 1888; after the decease of his first wife he married Frances Isabel Knowlton, the ceremony being performed January 5, 1897; 4. Gulielma P., wife of W. Harry Lefevre and mother of the following named children: Thomas C., Katherine M., George Lennon, William Henry, Elma Penn, Elizabeth C., and Frederick C. Lefevre; 5. Elizabeth D., wife of William Spear Huston; 6. Isabel, wife of James L. M. Huston; they are the parents of one child, Elizabeth Huston, born April 3, 1893.

Thomas McClenathon Charlton, father of Mrs. Ramsay, was the son of Thomas and Mary Ann (Kearens) Charlton, the former named being a son of Thomas Charlton, his birth occurring in 1766 and his death in 1848. The children born to Thomas and Mary Ann (Kearens) Charlton were: Thomas McClenathon, mentioned at length in the foregoing paragraph, and Mary Ann, who was the wife of John D. Nelson; their children were: Thomas C., William D., Thomasine E., Martha K., Elizabeth M., Mary Ellen, Iola A., Lola F., Annie C., and Clara E. Charlton.

DAVID T. PIERSON, a veteran of the Civil war, and for many years actively associated with various enterprises in Chester county, Pennsylvania, where by his indomitable energy, ceaseless activity and honorable business methods, he has attained a prominent position among the representative citizens of that section of the state. He was born near Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 10, 1845, the son of William (deceased) and Ellen (Lewis) Pierson, who were the parents of the following named children: 1. Samuel, who married and one child was born of the union. 2. Elizabeth, wife of Henry Derrickson, of Media, Delaware county, and their children are: Harry, and Lucy, wife of Charles Johnson. 3. William, deceased, who was united in marriage to Elizabeth Ironside, and their children are: Nora, wife of William Leake, of Oxford; Jessie, wife of Mr. Bonsell, and William, who married Bertha Gallager. 4. David T., mentioned at length hereinafter. 5. Matilda, deceased, who was the wife of John Quinn, and after his decease married Brinton Hampton and their children are: Zeda, Elizabeth and Burton J. Hampton. George died in early life.

David T. Pierson was reared near Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his educational advantages were obtained in the public schools of the neighborhood. He began his business career by engaging in the painting and papering trade, later he became proprietor of a restaurant locating at first at Oxford and afterward at New London, and in 1891 he purchased a farm of one hundred and forty-two acres in Penn township, Chester county, where he has since conducted agricultural pursuits. His land is under a high state of cultivation, and his carefully repaired fences and out buildings indicate the oversight of a thrifty and painstaking manager. Mr. Pierson gives his political support to the Republican party, and his religious affiliations are in accord with the doctrines of the Methodist church, although his father was an Orthodox Friend. During the Civil war he enlisted his services in the Union army, served as a private for two years and three months, and was honorably discharged at the end of the war.

On December 31, 1867, Mr. Pierson married Margaret Lemon, who was born near Gum Tree, Fallowfield township, Chester county, February 23, 1845, a daughter of Allen and Margaret (McConnell) Lemon. Their children are: 1. Ida Augusta, born March 25, 1869, became the wife of Edward W. Miller, of New London, Chester county, and their children are: Lena A., David P., Ida Lydia and Helen Bumgarden Miller. 2. Walter Kelton, born July 25, 1873, died December 19, 1876. 3. Ella May, born June 20, 1875, died August 7, 1875. 4. Tillie R., born February 2, 1878, is the wife of Clifford R. Brunfield, of Rising Sun, Maryland. 5. Bertha E., born October 5, 1881.

GEORGE T. BROWN was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 31, 1836, and is a member of one of the old families that have long been connected with the history of this locality and have taken a prominent part in promoting the various measures put forth for the advancement and improvement of the county. The earliest ancestor of the family of whom there is any authentic record was William Brown, who reared a family of four sons, namely: Thomas, William, David and Eli Brown.

Thomas Brown, grandfather of George T. Brown, was a prominent resident of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and by enterprise and industry his business interests were crowned with a well merited prosperity. He married Sarah Malone, and the following named children were born to them: 1. William, who married Rebecca Walker and they are the parents of two children, William, and Ada, wife of Willis Westlake. 2. Evan, father of George T. Brown. 3. Sarah Ann, wife of Holiday Hoopes and mother of three children, namely: Margaret M., wife of Thomas Mercer; Thomas, who married Rebecca Cooper, and Mary, who died in early life. 4. David, who married Alice Tweed and their children are: Anna, wife of William Kelton, and Mary, who died in childhood. 5. Ruthanna, who died young.

Evan Brown, father of George T. Brown, was born April 12, 1808, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and by the marked aptitude and faithfulness which he displayed in his public and private life, won the confidence and esteem of the community. He was united in marriage to Joanna Taylor, and their children were: 1. Sarah, wife of William Gawthrop, and their children are: Evan, who married Bertha Conard; Mary, unmarried; Ernest, who married a Pittsburg lady, and Joanna, unmarried. 2. George T. 3. Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Graham, and they are the parents of one child, Florence Graham. 4. Mary Ellen, wife of Joshua Sharpless, and their children are: Evan, Walter, Bertha and Roland Sharpless. 5. Ruth Anna, wife of Lewis Sharpless, and their children are: Herbert, Charles, Elizabeth and Henry Sharpless.

George T. Brown, eldest son of Evan and Joanna Brown, was reared and acquired a practical education in the common schools of New Garden township, after which he chose the quiet but useful calling of agriculture. In 1888 he purchased his present farm in Penn township, which under his able management produces bountiful crops and from the sale of which he derives a good income. In politics Mr. Brown is an ardent Republican, and has served his township in the capacity of school director and supervisor for several terms, and in religion is a faithful adherent of the Society of Friends.

Mr. Brown was united in marriage to Sarah H. Haines, a daughter of Lewis and Sarah (Hutton) Haines, and her birth occurred June 3, 1840, at Quarryville, Eden township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania; she was reared and educated in Fulton township, Lancaster county. Their children are: Virginia T., born May 9, 1871; Mary H., born January 5, 1873, now the wife of Wilmer M. Fell; Gertrude T., born June 15, 1874; Lewis H., born December 27, 1875; Lillian, born March 6, 1877; and William G., born January 18, 1879.

WALTER S. MYERS, one of the representative agriculturists and respected citizens of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of a Scotch-Irish ancestry, who were noted in the community for the honorable and efficient manner in which they conducted all their duties, both in public and private life.

Daniel Myers, father of Walter S. Myers, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 19, 1819, died May 31, 1903. He was a son of William Myers, who was the father of nine children, namely: Michael, Henry, Peter, Jacob, Alban, Elizabeth, Mary, Jane and Daniel Myers. After attaining young manhood Daniel Myers was united in marriage to Adeline Hamil, born October 31, 1821, and the children born to them were as follows: 1. Rittenhouse, born April 3, 1843, married Mary Mackey, and they were the parents of eleven children; his death occurred July 26, 1888. 2. Jane, born September 1, 1845, died June 21, 1878; she was the wife of Samuel Mackey, and their children were: Amy, born July 4, 1865, wife of Charles Ortlip, and mother of one child, Samuel Ortlip; Harry, born April 10, 1867, married Lilly Tingley; Jamie, born March 14, 1869; Ruth, born September 14, 1871, now deceased, was the wife of Frank Christy, and their children were: Bessie, Lulu, Charles, Edna, Leslie and Frances Christy; William, born July 11, 1876. 3. Elizabeth, born March 22, 1848, died July 3, 1879, was the wife of George Kimble; they were the parents of one child, Frank Kimble, born in April, 1876. 4. Robert H., born January 10, 1850, died March 7, 1879; he was the husband of Ella Storey, and their children were: Walter, born May 17, 1876, and Renie, born in 1879, became the wife of Mr. Dickinson, and one child was born to them. 5. Daniel, Jr., born February 19, 1852, died February 1, 1897; he was united in marriage to Ella McClellan, a daughter of Pierce McClellan, and the following named children were born to them: Wilmina, born October 22, 1880; Robert P., born December 17, 1882; Katherine E., born April 25, 1884; Minnie Ethelbert, born January 20, 1886, and Frances McClellan, born March 24, 1888. 6. Charles D., born September 4, 1854, died November 4, 1879. 7. Addie, born September 4, 1856, died October 9, 1871, was the wife of Charles Phillips, and their child, Daniel M. Phillips, was born June 22, 1900. 8. Walter S., born September 14, 1858. 9. Wilmina, born October 10, 1860, died March 2, 1879. 10. Annie S., born October 29, 1862. 11. Mary W., born April 19, 1865, wife of Harry Hoopes; their children are: Willard, born March 17, 1893, and Owen Hoopes, born in May, 1898.

Walter S. Myers, fifth son of Daniel and Adeline Myers, was born at Doe Run, West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 14, 1858. He was reared and acquired a common school education in the township of Penn, whither his parents removed when he was a young child. In the management of his farming pursuits Mr. Myers has shown remarkable ability, energy and perseverance; his land is under a high state of cultivation and the improvements upon the place are in keeping with those found upon all model farms. He takes a deep interest in political questions, and casts his vote with the Republican party. In religion he is an adherent of the faith laid down by the Presbyterian church, and holds membership with that denomination in his township.

On January 29, 1885, Mr. Myers married Melissa Guthrie, a daughter of Joshua and Abigail Jane Guthrie; her birth occurred June 21, 1862, in West Fallowfield township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in this vicinity she was reared and acquired a common school education. Their children are: Harry H., born December 13, 1885; Howard H., born December 22, 1887; Chester, born February 25, 1890; Norma, born February 6, 1892; Annie, born January 12, 1896, and Florence Myers, born August 12, 1900.

WILLIAM S. MACKKEY is a representative member of a family who trace their origin to three brothers, natives of Ireland, who came to the United States during the early part of the eighteenth century; one located in Pennsylvania, one took up his residence in Maryland, and the other brother settled in one of the western states.

Squire David Mackey, great-grandfather of William S. Mackey, was a prominent and influential citizen of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and won and retained the high regard of all with whom he was brought in personal contact, either in business or social life. He was united in marriage to Agnes Curry, and their children were: Robert, who married Jane Kimball; John; Rachel, who was the wife of John Fulton; Susan, who married John Allison; George; Mary, who became the wife of David Furey, and Letitia Mackey.

John Mackey, grandfather of William S. Mackey, whose birth occurred in Chester county, Pennsylvania, was the second son of Squire David and Agnes Mackey. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood and subsequently rendered valuable assistance in sustaining the various industries of his town. Six children were the issue of his marriage to Amy Crooks, namely: 1. David, who married Eliza Pyle, and their children were: Joshua; Amy, deceased; Oliver, who was united in marriage to Amelia Broghan; and Mary, deceased. 2. John, who married Amy McClenathon, and among other children born to them were the following: Samuel, whose first wife was Jane Myers and his second wife Jane Miller; Louisa; Mary; Horace, who married Fanny McClenon; Francis; Anna; Belle, wife of Newton Chambers. 3. Thomas, father of William S. Mackey. 4. James. 5. Margaret, wife of William Thompson, and their children are: John; James; William, whose first wife was Lizzie Lyons and his second wife Carrie Ramsey; Samuel, who married Anna Wickersham; George, who married Anna Brown; Ella, wife of John Going. 6. Amy, wife of Thomas Townsend and mother of the following named children: Sarah, wife of Joseph Moore; John, who married Grace Doren; Letitia; Thomas, who married Elizabeth Dance; and Francis Townsend.

Thomas Mackey, father of William S. Mackey, was the third son of John and Amy Mackey, and his birth occurred in Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 7, 1810. He acquired a practical education in the local schools, and after attaining manhood was actively interested in the advancement and welfare of the community, and was also an efficient factor in all local enterprises in this direction. Mr. Mackey married Hannah Hamil, and twelve children were born to them: William, who died in childhood; an infant son, deceased; James; Elisha and Robert, twins, Elisha married Sarah McClenathon, and Robert died in early life; Emma, who became the wife of Thomas Good; William; George F., deceased; Clara; Edward, who married Addie Brown; Lorena; and A. Wilson Mackey, who married Minerva Spencer.

William S. Mackey was born in Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 6, 1843, was reared on the old family homestead, and attended the local schools; the knowledge thus gained was supplemented by attendance at schools in Cochranville which were under the personal supervision of Mary Gray and Cochran Hamil. After completing his education he engaged in agricultural pursuits, purchasing a farm in 1879 from his father, where he has since made a specialty of dairy farming. His farm consists of rich and arable land, all under a high state of cultivation, and his careful supervision of details has made it one of the most desirable farm properties in the locality. Mr. Mackey has always taken an active part in the management of Democratic affairs in the township, serving as supervisor for ten years and also being the incumbent of the office of school director. In his religious views he is an advocate of the faith of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Mackey was united in marriage to Emma Brown, who was born on the old homestead in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 14, 1847, the daughter of Lewis and Elizabeth Brown, and granddaughter of William and Ann Brown. The success in life which Mr. Mackey enjoys is the logical result of applied industry, executive ability and strict integrity of character.

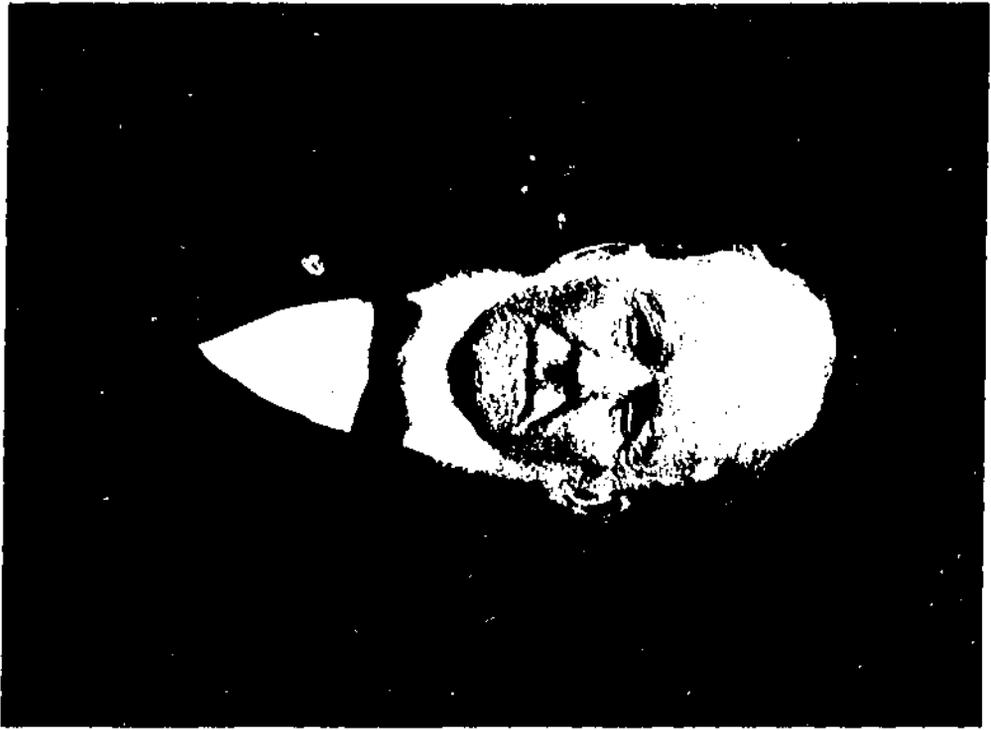

EDWIN A. CHANDLER, an old and honored resident of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of one of the prominent families of the county, some members of which came to the United States during the latter part of the seventeenth century from their home at Greathodge, in Wiltshire, England.

He is a son of William and Ruth Anna (Davis) Chandler, his mother, who was born 8 mo., 11, 1801, and died 3 mo., 22, 1846, being a daughter of Samuel and Sarah Davis. William Chandler was born 1 mo., 14, 1787, at Wilmington, Delaware, and was taken by his parents to Kentucky, where he grew up. He died at the Chandler homestead in New Garden township, 3 mo., 5, 1878. The children of William and Ruth Anna (Davis) Chandler were as follows: Sarah D., born 8 mo., 22, 1819; Mary M., born 11 mo., 18, 1820; Josephus, born 11 mo., 21, 1822; Edwin A., born 5 mo., 10, 1824, who receives mention elsewhere in this article; William P., born 10 mo., 22, 1825; John L., born 8 mo., 29, 1827; Anna, born 10 mo., 26, 1829; Esther L., born 7 mo., 4, 1831; Samuel D., born 9 mo., 26, 1835; Lewis B., born 9 mo., 19, 1840.

Edwin A. Chandler was born 5 mo., 10, 1824, on the old homestead in New Garden township, Chester county, and was educated in the public schools of the vicinity. After he left school he worked on the home farm until about 1848, when he engaged in the mercantile business in partnership with his brother William. Their first location was in the village known as the Eagle, in Uwehlan township, where they remained for three years, when they removed the business to Concordville, Delaware county. They conducted a general store there for two years, when Edwin A. disposed of his interest to his brother William and bought a farm in West Marlborough township, which he conducted successfully for twenty-five years. In 1880 he bought the old Chandler homestead in New Garden township, which is now his home. Here he has made many improvements, having divided the original estate and erected new buildings and greenhouses. Mr. Chandler is a Republican, and formerly took an active part in the work and councils of his party. He served as supervisor for two terms of three years each in West Marlborough township, and was a prompt and thoroughly responsible official.

Mr. Chandler married Hannah Hatton Yarnall, daughter of Ellis and Mary R. (Morgan) Yarnall, 2 mo., 27, 1855. Ellis Yarnall was a well-known and prosperous farmer of Concord township, Delaware county. Mr. and Mrs. Chandler have been lifelong members of the Society of Friends, and active participants and earnest supporters in all affairs of the society. The children born to them were: Elwood Wilkinson, born 10 mo., 28, 1857, and died 2 mo., 17, 1876; Howard Ellis, born 3 mo., 27, 1860, who married Lizzie J. Jack, and has two daughters, Marion L., born 11 mo., 30, 1890, Edith H.,

Edwin S. Chandler

Winnah W. Chandler

born 1 mo., 1, 1893; Anna Mary, born 6 mo., 5, 1865, who is the wife of Louis B. Eastburn, and the mother of four children—Hannah C., born 9 mo., 22, 1890, Edwin C., born 9 mo., 25, 1891, Mary Elizabeth, born 7 mo., 25, 1893, and George Washington, born 2 mo., 22, 1896.

A. WILSON MACKEY. One of the oldest and most respected families of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is represented by A. Wilson Mackey, who was born on the old homestead in Penn township, Chester county, in February, 1855. The original ancestors in America were three brothers who came from Ireland, presumably in the early part of the eighteenth century, one settling in Pennsylvania, one in Maryland and the other in the western section of the United States.

Squire David Mackey, great-grandfather of A. Wilson Mackey, was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and in this vicinity his business interests were centered. He was always ready to respond to the call of duty and his loyalty to his country caused him to enlist his services in the Revolutionary war. He married Agnes Curry, and they were the parents of eight children, namely: Robert, who married Jane Kimball; John; Rachel, wife of John Fulton; Susan, wife of John Allison; George; Mary; Elizabeth, wife of David Furey, and Letitia Mackey.

John Mackey, grandfather of A. Wilson Mackey, was the second son of Squire David and Agnes Mackey, and his birth also occurred in Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was prompt and faithful in the discharge of all duties, and was one of the progressive and substantial citizens of the community. He was united in marriage to Amy Crooks and their children were: 1. David, who married Eliza Pyle, and they were the parents of the following named children: Joshua; Amy, deceased; Oliver, who married Amelia Broghan; Mary, deceased. 2. John, who married Amy McClenathon, and the surviving members of their family are: Samuel, who married for his first wife Jane Myers, and after her decease he married Jane Miller; Louisa; Mary; Horace, who married Fanny McClellen; Francis; Anna; Belle, wife of Newton Chambers. 3. Thomas, father of A. Wilson Mackey. 4. James. 5. Margaret, who became the wife of William Thompson, and their children are: John; James; William, who married twice, his first wife having been Lizzie Lyons and his second Carrie Ramsey; Samuel, married Anna Wickersham; George, married Anna Brown; Ella, wife of John Going. 6. Amy, wife of Thomas Townsend, and the issue to this marriage was: Sarah, wife of Joseph Moore; John, married Grace Doren;

Letitia; Thomas, married Elizabeth Dance; Francis Townsend.

Thomas Mackey, father of A. Wilson Mackey, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 7, 1810, and the duties of the school room and farm claimed his attention during the early period of his life. Later he was accorded a place among the prominent citizens of the county, gaining success in business through his persistent honorable efforts and strict integrity. Mr. Mackey chose for his wife Hannah Hamil, and they became the parents of the following named children: William, who died in childhood; an infant son, deceased; James; Elisha and Robert, twins, Elisha married Sarah McClenathon, and Robert died in early life; Emma, who became the wife of Thomas Good; William; George F., deceased; Clara; Edward, who married Addie Brown; Lorena; and A. Wilson Mackey, who married Minerva Spencer.

A. Wilson Mackey was reared on the old homestead in Penn township, attended the local schools and completed his education in the academic schools of Philadelphia. During the first six years of his business career he served in the capacity of school teacher, being well qualified to fill that responsible position, and since then his attention has been directed to agricultural pursuits. In 1878 he became the owner of one hundred and fifty-two acres of productive land, but since that date he has disposed of fifty-two acres; his present farm of one hundred acres is well cultivated and by conducting his operations on a solid business basis he is enabled to enjoy a goodly income from his labors. Mr. Mackey is a Democrat and has served in several prominent political offices, among them being auditor of the township, and school director for eleven years. He is a member of Lodge No. 343, Free and Accepted Masons of Cochranville, and a member of the United Order of American Mechanics.

Mr. Mackey was united in marriage to Minerva Spencer, born in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 1, 1859, where she was reared and educated, a daughter of Jesse and Margaretta Spencer. Their children are Raymond S., born October 27, 1886; Jesse H., born July 10, 1888; Margaret C., born December 24, 1890, and Helen H. Mackey, born December 16, 1896. The family are well known and prominent in the social affairs of the community, and hold membership in the Presbyterian church of Pagg's Manor, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

MERCER McFADDEN. Among the prominent and influential citizens of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, may be mentioned the name of Mercer McFadden, who was born in Kennett township, Chester county, November 27, 1837, a son of Israel and Esther McFadden, and grandson of Joseph and Rachel McFadden.

Joseph McFadden (grandfather) was born in the year 1761. The name was probably originally spelled McFadden, but several members of the family at the present time (1903) spell it either McFadin or McFadgen. Joseph McFadden was united in marriage to Rachel Mercer, who was born in 1774, and the following named children were born to them: 1. Mercer, who went out west at the age of nineteen and spent his life there; 2. Jesse; 3. James, who married Miss Brown, and their children were: Benjamin, and James McFadden; 4. Thomas, who married Mary Rigdon, and their children were: George, deceased; Rachel, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Martha; and Elizabeth McFadden; 5. Israel, who married Esther Young; 6. John; 7. Abner, who married Ann Rigton, and their children were: Mary Jane; Hannah Mercer; William Catrell; Joseph Boyd; Milton Stamp; John R.; and Dorathea Urella McFadden; 8. Martha, wife of Lee Nethery, and they are the parents of two children, namely: Harriet and Lee Nethery.

Israel McFadden (father), fifth son of Joseph and Rachel McFadden, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and died in Georgetown, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He was actively identified with the industrial pursuits of Kennett township, Chester county, in which vicinity he resided for many years. Mr. McFadden and his wife, Esther (Young) McFadden, were the parents of seven children, all of whom were reared to lead lives of usefulness and activity. Their children were: 1. Rachel, now deceased; 2. Charles, who married Annie Ingram, and their children are: Annie and Phebe McFadden; 3. Mercer, mentioned at length in the following paragraph; 4. Jacob, who married an eastern lady; 5. Henry; 6. Joseph, who married Annie Brocow, and they are the parents of one child, Albert McFadden; 7. Annie, wife of George Davis.

Mercer McFadden, second son of Israel and Esther McFadden, was reared and educated in Kennett township, Chester county, his studies having been pursued at Martins Academy, Kennett Square. In his business career he has met with a large degree of success, which is the result of energy, natural ability, and perseverance. He is a Republican in politics, serving at the present time (1903) in the capacity of road supervisor. In religion he is an adherent of the Baptist faith, having held membership in that church for many years.

Mr. McFadden was united in marriage to Harriet Pennell, who was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, October 21, 1839, reared and educated there, a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Pennell. Their children are: H. Willis, Orville S., Leta P., and Clarence McFadden.

J. COULSON REECE. Industry, energy and perseverance have characterized the business career of J. Coulson Reece, a progressive and practical agriculturalist of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred on the old Reece homestead, December 4, 1861.

Henry Reece, grandfather of J. Coulson Reece, was united in marriage to Elizabeth Bechtel, who was born January 16, 1773, a daughter of Samuel and Margaret (Coulson) Bechtel. Samuel Bechtel was born in 1741, a son of Martin Bechtel, and married, April 16, 1768, Margaret Coulson, who was born in March, 1744. The following named children were born to Henry and Elizabeth (Bechtel) Reece: 1. Margaret, who married William Edwards, and their children were: Margaret, Francis, and William Henry Edwards. 2. Mary. 3. Henry Coulson. 4. Jacob, who married for his first wife, Francis Dickey, and for his second wife, Alverda Maloney. 5. Samuel B., father of J. Coulson Reece. 6. John Reece.

Samuel B. Reece, father of J. Coulson Reece, was born in Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 16, 1805. During his entire business career he was actively identified with the various interests of that section of the state, and was recognized as one of its influential and public-spirited citizens. On June 9, 1853, at Faggs Manor church, Mr. Reece was united in marriage to Mary Roney, who was born in Franklin township, July 27, 1834, reared and educated there, a daughter of William and Sarah (Wood) Roney; the ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Alfred Hamilton. Their children were: Henry John, born August 14, 1854, died September 4, 1859; William, born October 4, 1857, died September 10, 1859; J. Coulson, born December 4, 1861; and Sarah Elizabeth, born February 17, 1864, became the wife of George M. Haney, and their children are: James C., born July 29, 1892; Ralph L., born December 5, 1895; and George Ortlip Haney, born November 6, 1899.

The educational advantages enjoyed by J. Coulson Reece, third son of Samuel B. and Mary (Roney) Reece, were obtained in the public schools of Penn township and at Fernwood Academy. After completing his studies he devoted his time and attention to farming on the old homestead, which piece of property he inherited on his father's death, which occurred in January, 1887, and since that date he has conducted extensive operations thereon. For a number of years he held the office of school director, and in the spring of 1902 was elected justice of the peace for Penn township. He was a member of the county committee, and served as delegate at the state convention, which was held at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, in August, 1901.

On December 19, 1888, occurred the marriage of J. Coulson Reece and Margaret E. Elston, a daughter of George and Rachel Elston. Mrs. Reece was born in Highland township, January 2, 1866, reared there and educated in local schools and at Fernwood Academy in Penn township. The children born to this union are: Mary R., born January 25, 1890; Cora P., born April 25, 1892; Bertha E., born March 6, 1896; Henry C., born July 15, 1898, and Sarah H., born May 6, 1903. The family are well and favorably known in the community where Mr. Reece has resided during his entire lifetime; they take an active interest in the work of the Presbyterian church at Faggs Manor, in which organization Mr. Reece holds membership.

FRED T. MACKERETH, a prominent and successful business man of Elkview, Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he is serving in the capacity of postmaster, being appointed to that position by the late President McKinley, traces his origin to an old and honored English ancestry, who were faithful and conscientious in the performance of duties, both public and private.

John Mackereth, grandfather of Fred T. Mackereth, was born in England about the year 1794, and his death occurred December 20, 1838. He married Mary Dickson, and they were the parents of the following named children: Ann, born December 23, 1816, died March 9, 1837; John, born May 3, 1819; Mary, born January 25, 1822; William, born January 4, 1825; Jonathan, born December 15, 1828; Joshua, born August 7, 1830, and Thomas, born December 28, 1833.

Jonathan Mackereth, father of Fred T. Mackereth, was born in Westmoreland county, England, December 15, 1828. In January, 1852, having decided that the United States presented better opportunities for a successful business career, he left his native country and upon his arrival here settled at Lamborntown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he resided until March, 1894. He then removed to Avondale, where he is now residing, and during his residence in both towns he was engaged in the shoe making business, which he learned in his native county in England. During the progress of the Civil war, Mr. Mackereth offered his services in defence of his adopted country and served nine months in the Union forces, participating in several battles. He was united in marriage to Eliza Foster and seven children were the issue of this union, namely: 1. Mary Elizabeth, born July 24, 1860. 2. James F., born November 15, 1862, married Annie Strahorn, and their children are: Mary A., born December 19, 1898, and Joseph S., born February 13, 1901. 3. Annie Emma, born December 6, 1864, died January 16, 1871. 4. Addie P., born October 12, 1866, a nurse by profession; served during the Spanish-American war, being one of the first ten volunteer nurses, five of whom, including herself, went afterward to the Philippines where they served two years. 5. William J., born February 12, 1869, died February 17, 1871. 6. John C., born September 24, 1870, married Elizabeth Kubler, and their children are: Chalkley B., born August 15, 1897, and Mary E., born July 23, 1899. 7. Fred T., mentioned at length in the following paragraph. Mrs. Mackereth, mother of these children, was born in Lancashire, England, in December, 1829, a daughter of James and Mary (Thompson) Foster, the former named having been born in 1788.

Fred T. Mackereth, youngest child of Jonathan and Eliza Mackereth, was born near Avondale, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 4, 1872. He was reared in West Marlborough township, Chester county, and acquired his education in the schools of that vicinity and at Martin's Academy, Kennett Square. He began his business career in the capacity of clerk for the firm of Lamborn & Moore, at Avondale, Chester county, and on February 1, 1899, he established a mercantile business on his own account at Elkview, Penn township, where he is now conducting a prosperous trade. While a resident of Avondale, Mr. Mackereth took an active interest in the Presbyterian church and acted in the capacity of superintendent of the Sunday school. His political affiliations are in sympathy with the principles of the Republican party.

Mr. Mackereth was united in marriage to Helen Crowl, a daughter of James and Alfareta Crowl, and they are the parents of one child, Freda C., born January 31, 1900. Mrs. Mackereth was reared in East Nottingham township, and her education was acquired in the schools of Oxford borough, Pennsylvania.

ULYSSES G. BULLOCK belongs to the class of enterprising, progressive citizens to whom the community owes so much of its commercial activity and business prosperity. His birth occurred in Toughkenamon, New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 26, 1865, his parents being Eli S. and Emily P. Bullock.

The progenitor of the American branch of the family was Thomas Bullock, a native of England, who accompanied by his brothers, Isaac and John Bullock, came to this country and settled on a fifty-acre tract of land in Concord township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. According to tradition, Isaac Bullock returned to England, leaving his family in Pennsylvania and was never again heard from.

Thomas Bullock, son of the pioneer ancestor, and great-grandfather to Ulysses G. Bullock, was united in marriage to Elizabeth Nelson, and their children were: Thomas; Aaron; Robert, who married Elizabeth Heyburn; Marjorie, wife of William Hall; and Jane, wife of William Smith. Thomas Bullock died April 26, 1824, and his wife, Elizabeth (Nelson) Bullock, died September 1, 1824.

Thomas Bullock, grandfather of Ulysses G. Bullock, was born February 28, 1789, and married, November 25, 1813, Ann Heyburn, who was born July 13, 1794, and they were the parents of the following named children: George H., born August 26, 1814, died November 10, 1836; Cyrus, born May 7, 1818, died in May, 1892; Enos, born May 4, 1820, died June 10, 1861; Elizabeth, born May 5, 1822, died in 1894; Isaac, born October 28, 1824, died in 1893; Eli, born November 8, 1826; Robert Nelson, born April 21, 1828, died August 21, 1839; Susan S., born September 14, 1830; Thomas B., born May 5, 1832, died in 1902; Sarah Ann, born March 27, 1834; Elwood, born November 23, 1836; Preston, born January 18, 1838, died September 10, 1839. Thomas B., ninth child of Thomas and Ann (Heyburn) Bullock, married Margaret Twaddell, and their children are: Edward, and Harriet, wife of Franklin Yarnall. Susan S., eighth child of Thomas and Ann (Heyburn) Bullock, is the wife of Clarkson Cloud, and they have one son, George H. W. Cloud.

Eli Bullock, father of Ulysses G. Bullock, was born in Lower Birmingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 8, 1826. He was educated at the common schools and Gawtrops Academy, Kennett. He engaged in mercantile life at Darlington's Corner, three miles south of West Chester, in 1850, and has led a continuous business career as a merchant, with the exception of three years. He also owns three good farms, two in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He was for some years active in the Republican party as one of the leaders in his locality. On February 15, 1855, he was united in marriage to Emily P. Baily, a daughter of Isaac and Susan Baily, and their children are: Isaac Howard, born June 6, 1858, died February 11, 1880; Elma M., born September 28, 1860, died October 6, 1864; George M., born October 13, 1862, died October 22, 1864; Ulysses G., born October 26, 1865, and Arthur B., born October 21, 1868, died June 24, 1903. Mr. Bullock and his wife are Friends.

Ulysses G. Bullock, third son of Eli and Emily P. Bullock, was reared at Kelton, Penn township, Chester county, attended the common schools of that neighborhood and completed his education at the State Normal School, West Chester, Pennsylvania. His business career has been devoted to mercantile pursuits, at the present time (1903) being in partnership with his father, Eli Bullock, in the management of a general dry goods establishment in Penn township. They are active and progressive in their ideas, honorable in their transactions, and the result of their well-directed efforts is a large and lucrative trade. In politics Mr. Bullock is a staunch Republican, and in religion a prominent and active member of the Episcopal church, in which organization he holds the position of vestryman.

On February 18, 1901, Mr. Bullock married Mary Anna White, who was born March 8, 1877, reared and educated in Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Asa and Lydia Ann White. Their children are: Helen W., born September 3, 1901, and Edward R. Howard Bullock, born November 14, 1902.

JOHN COX, deceased, was a man of strong determination and resolute purpose, and these characteristics were essential factors in his business career, which was passed in the township of East Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

John Cox was born in East Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, March 12, 1786. He was reared in this vicinity and obtained a practical education in the common schools. For a number of years after the completion of his studies he was employed at the trade of carpenter, but having a natural inclination and aptitude for agricultural pursuits turned his attention to that line of industry. He met with a large degree of success in this new enterprise, and up to the time of his decease maintained a position among the leading and influential agriculturists of his locality. He was highly respected by his fellow citizens, who appreciated his worth and ability by electing him to fill the offices of supervisor and school director. He was a Republican in his political views.

Mr. Cox was twice married, his first wife having been Phoebe (Hall) Cox, of Willistown township, and to them were born the following named children: Thomas, deceased; William, deceased, and Mary H., unmarried. The mother of these children, Phoebe (Hall) Cox, died June 24, 1817. His second wife was Hannah (Pierce) Pennell, born November 12, 1797, daughter of JOHN COX.

HANNAH PIERCE COX.

Jacob and Hannah (Burlington) Pierce, the former named having been a prominent farmer of East Marlborough. Their children were: 1. Jacob P., married Hannah Bond, and their children are: Lucelia B. and Isabelle J. Cox. 2. Lydia E. 3. Anna R. 4. J. William, who married Mary F. Smith, and they are the parents of three children—Henry S., Russell S., and Percy S. Cox.

John and Hannah Cox were people of firm convictions, and during the period when slavery was advocated in the south as a "Divine Institution," and apologized for in the north, they frequently refused to use the product of slave labor and did all in their power, by word and deed, to render aid to the escaping slave who sought safety north of the Mason and Dixon line, and not infrequently they shielded and harbored the black man. It may truthfully be said that few men and women, who resided north of the Mason and Dixon line, did more to assist in the abolishment of slavery than did John and Hannah Cox. They were also earnest advocates of the cause of temperance, and every social and moral reform, and throughout the period of their long and useful lives their earnest hope and purpose was for the improvement of the social condition and moral welfare of their fellow men. John and Hannah Cox were both members of the Society of Friends, attending Longwood Meeting. They deeded the ground upon which the Longwood Meeting is built, and the Longwood cemetery grounds were a part of the Cox farm.

On the eleventh day of the ninth month, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, a number of the relatives and friends of John and Hannah Cox assembled at their homestead in Longwood, Chester county, Pennsylvania, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. This was the birthplace of the bride and twice had she been married from its portals. Here they entertained many of the most prominent advocates of the anti-slavery cause, and many also who were listeners to these advocates, rather than expounders of the Gospel of Freedom, had partaken of their hospitality. A large number of these anti-slavery co-workers contributed their aid to make this fiftieth anniversary a rare occasion. Letters of congratulation, rejoicing and regrets at not being able to be present were received from William Lloyd Garrison, John G. Whitier, Oliver Johnson, Thomas and Mary Ann McClintock, and others. Gifts of love and remembrance were brought and sent, and flowers and wreaths adorned the old mansion. The following is a copy of the marriage certificate signed by seventy-nine of the members of the family and friends present:

We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, have assembled in this venerable homestead of the Pierce family to commemorate the Golden Wedding of our friends, John and Hannah Cox, where fifty years since they were united in a bond that remains unbroken.

Through the changes and vicissitudes of this long period, their united lives have had illustrated the happiness and beauty of the faith then pledged. Children and children's children rise up to call them blessed, and sympathizing friends, near and far, recall with emotion the hospitable kindness that has gone hand-in-hand with the high principles of their devoted lives.

Faithful and earnest workers in the dark days of slavery, true supporters of progressive thoughts, they live to rejoice in the emancipation of the slave, and the enlargement of spiritual freedom.

Longwood, ninth month, eleventh, eighteen hundred and seventy-three.

Bayard Taylor, the American author and traveler, who was an intimate friend of Lydia E. and Anna R. Cox, daughters of John and Hannah Cox, who reside in Kennett Square, Chester county, and are highly respected for their Christian characters and for the many acts of benevolence and charity performed in their daily lives, wrote and sent to John and Hannah Cox, on the occasion of the celebration of their golden wedding, ninth month, eleventh, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, the following letter dated at, Gotha, Germany, August 22, 1873:

"Dear Friends:

"We can only be with you in spirit on the eleventh of September, but we do not wish to be forgotten or silent among the circle of old and loving friends who will surround you on that day. Take, therefore, our fullest and warmest recognition of the intercourse of many years, our congratulations that you have been spared to celebrate the Golden Anniversary of your united lives in a free land, and our prayers that your remaining days may be further gladdened with signs of promise for the whole human race.

"We have had a slight memento of the day prepared here, but since there is no opportunity of sending it now, we must wait until we can give it into your own hands, with true and affectionate greetings,

Your Friends,

"BAYARD TAYLOR.

"MARIE TAYLOR.

"To John and Hannah Cox."

John Cox died February 22, 1880; his wife, Hannah (Pierce) Cox, died April 15, 1876.

WILMER L. McFADGEN, of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, represents one branch of a wide-spread family originally of Scotch blood and Quaker traditions. The names McFadien, McFadden, and McFadgen, doubtless mark different lines of descent from the same stock and are variations of McFadgen, the name in its early form.

Joseph McFadgen, great-grandfather of Wilmer L. McFadgen, was born in 1761; his wife was Rachel Mercer, born in 1774. Eight children were born of this marriage, as follows: 1. Mercer, who after the age of nineteen, went into the then comparatively unknown west; 2. Jesse; 3. James, who married Rebecca Brown, and had two sons, Benjamin and J. Jones; 4. Thomas, whose wife was Mary Rigdon, and whose children were: George, Rachel, and Sarah, all deceased, Martha and Elizabeth; 5. Israel, who married Esther Young, and was the father of Rachel (deceased), Charles, Mercer, Jacob, Henry, Joseph, and Annie (McFadden), George and Davis; 6. John; 7. Abner; 8. Martha, who married Mr. Nethery, and became the mother of two children, Harriet and Lea.

James, third child and third son of Joseph and Rachel (Mercer) McFadgen, married Rebecca Brown, and was the father of two sons; Benjamin, the elder, married Mary Moore, and had one son, Wilmer, who will be spoken of at more length; J. Jones, the second son, was married twice, the first time to Rachel Whitson and the second time to Sarah Moore. The second wife had no children, but to Rachel (Whitson) were born, Elizabeth, Sarah, Phœbe, and Cyrus.

Wilmer L., only child of Benjamin and Mary (Moore) McFadgen, was born in Upper Oxford township, June 11, 1863. He was reared in Penn township, Chester county, and educated at Westtown Friends' School. His father was engaged in farming and stock raising, and the son, who had always shown an aptitude and a liking for the farm, took up his work there on leaving school. Afterward he went to Atlantic City, where he was in the milk business for four years. He now manages his father's farm of fifty acres in Penn township, and is a partner in his father's dealings in live stock. They are accounted among the largest dealers and best judges of cattle in the section. Mr. McFadgen is a member of the Society of Friends, as have been most of his ancestors. He is interested in all national political issues, as well as in matters of local concern, but has never taken a personal part in politics. He votes with the Republican party.

Wilmer L. McFadgen married Elizabeth M. Pyle, daughter of John Y. and Mary E. (Ried) Pyle. She was born 12 mo., 24, 1864, seven miles northwest of Grove village, where she was brought up and educated. She died 1 mo., 9, 1896. Her children are: Lawrence B., born 5 mo., 2, 1886; H. Marion, born 10 mo., 13, 1887; Mary Durose, born 9 mo., 14, 1889; Norman W., born 4 mo., 26, 1891; Elizabeth P., born 8 mo.,

*8, 1892; Harlan J., born 9 mo., 19, 1894; S. Harold, born 8 mo., 24, 1895, and died 9 mo., 16, 1895. On March 7, 1901, Mr. McFadgen married Sallie A., daughter of John E. and Elma H. (James) Marshall. She was born in Westtown township, at Pothouse farm, the old James homestead, and was educated in the local public schools and in the Friends School at West Chester.

LEWIS P. MILLER, of Penn township, comes of a family known to Chester county, Pennsylvania, for five generations. It is a large family, and has been an important factor in the local development and progress of agriculture, though it has its representatives in every calling.

The authentic record begins with John Miller, born August 16, 1771, in New Garden township, Chester county. His father was a farmer, but how long he lived in the township before his son was born is not known. The son received the efficient, if restricted, instruction of the old district school, and turned to farming for a livelihood. He became a man of consideration in the section where he lived. He was known as a zealous member of the Society of Friends, and a Whig of uncompromising principles. August 25, 1797, he married Mary Webster, and the following children, none of whom are now living, were born: 1. Lewis, born June 11, 1798, died September 5, 1885; 2. Joseph, born October 3, 1799, died in 1880; 3. James, born May 31, 1801, died August 8, 1824; 4. Alban, born October 3, 1802, died October 8, 1867; 5. Samuel, born September 28, 1803; 6. Rebecca, born May 3, 1806, died July 27, 1824; 7. John, Jr., born August 27, 1807, died December 3, 1895; 8. Mary, born November 17, 1808; 9. Jane, born September, 1809, died September 26, 1809; 10. William, born August 8, 1817, died May 10, 1818. John Miller, father of these children, died December 22, 1834, and his wife died November 9, 1862.

Joseph, second child and second son of John and Mary (Webster) Miller, was born October 3, 1799. He became a farmer, and married Elizabeth Kerns. This couple had thirteen children, six of whom died young. The names of the others follow: Reuben, who married Sarah M. Michener, and was the father of William, Howard, Pusey, Ehmer, and Etta, deceased; Webster; James, who married Adeline Sentman, of Delaware, and to whom were born, Anna, Margaret, Lewis, Ella, Lily, Nelson, and another son that died in infancy; John, who married Belle Russell, had three daughters, Anna, Elizabeth, and Jane, the first-born, a son, dying in infancy; Pusey, who married Emma Cox, and was the father of four children: Elizabeth; William W., whose line is further traced.

William W., son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Kerns) Miller, was born in 1830. He took up the work of a farmer in the energetic fashion of his forefathers, and like them he prospered. He married Hannah Hall, and their children, the first born of whom was a daughter, that died in infancy, were as follows: Isaac, born July 9, 1852, married Mary Cheney, and has six children—Charles, Lewis, Webster, Elizabeth and Howard (twins), and Norval; Sarah Emma, who died young; M. Ida, and Lewis P., who was mentioned at the beginning of this article.

Lewis P., youngest child and second son of William W. and Hannah (Hall) Miller, was born in Franklin township, December 6, 1856. His early life was spent partly in Fawn township, York county, and partly in Chester county. He was educated in the local schools of Penn township. He began his life work as a farmer, but is now engaged in the stock business. He has been active in public affairs of the township, and an interested observer of the trend of national events. He has served a term of seventeen years as constable, and has also been assessor and school director. He is a member of Skerrett Lodge, No. 343, Free and Accepted Masons, of Cochranville, being affiliated with the Oxford chapter.

Mr. Miller was married December 20, 1888, to Ida E., daughter of Ralph J. and Sarah Elizabeth Grier. She was born at Harford, Maryland, but was brought up and educated in Chester county. The children of this marriage are: Ralph Grier, born July 13, 1890; Edward Delmar, born December 7, 1893; and Clarence Ortilip, born March 24, 1898.

JOHN R. McFADIEN, a veteran of the Civil war, and one of the representative business men of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in the state of Delaware, September 25, 1843, and is a worthy descendant of a family who probably originally spelled the name McPadden.

Joseph McFadien, grandfather of John R. McFadien, was born in 1761, and his wife, Rachel (Mercer) McFadien, was born in 1774. They were the parents of eight children, namely: Mercer, who, at the age of nineteen years, located in the western part of the United States and spent his life there. Jesse, James, who married Rebecca Brown, and the issue of this union was two boys, Benjamin and J. Jones McFadien. Thomas, who married Mary Rigdon, and their children were: George, deceased; Rachel, deceased; Sarah, deceased; Martha, and Elizabeth McFadien. Israel, who married Esther Young, and they were the parents of the following named children: Rachel, deceased; Charles; Mercer; Jacob; Henry; Joseph; Annie (McFadien) Davis; George and John. Abner, father of John R. McFadien. Martha, wife of Lee Nethery, and mother of five children, Alice, Harriet I., William H., David, and Susan Nethery.

Abner McFadien, father of John R. McFadien, was born June 12, 1802. For many years he was an active and useful citizen of the state of Delaware, from whence he removed to Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he resided up to the time of his demise, which occurred in the year 1890. On February 13, 1834, occurred the marriage of Abner McFadien and Ann Rigdon, and the children born of this union are as follows: 1. Mary Jane, became the wife of Andrew W. Ried, November 18, 1858. 2. Hannah Mercer, born March 24, 1837. 3. William Catrell, born May 2, 1839, died June 15, 1894, married Mary Slack, and one son was born to them, Ramsay Hayes McFadien. 4. Joseph Boyd, born October 31, 1840, died June 14, 1896. 5. Milton Stamp, born March 21, 1842, married Mary Wood, and died November 23, 1894. 6. John R., born September 25, 1843. 7. Dorathea Urella, born August 5, 1846, became the wife of Thomas B. Hoskins, September 27, 1865.

John R. McFadien, fourth son of Abner and Ann McFadien, was reared in Chester county, Pennsylvania, whither his father removed from the state of Delaware when he was three years of age. His early education was acquired at the local schools, and subsequently he became a student at the Oxford School with the express purpose of learning a profession. Shortly after his entrance to this institution, in 1861, the Civil war broke out and he enlisted in the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and during his nine months service with that regiment, he participated in the battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville. After the term of his enlistment had expired, he re-enlisted on April 12, 1864, for three years, and during that period he served his country, displaying great courage and heroism in the discharge of his duties. After the close of the war, Mr. McFadien returned to his father's farm, upon which he conducted operations until 1869, in which year he located in Oxford borough and engaged in the milk business in addition to agricultural pursuits. In the spring of 1888, he settled in Penn township and since that date has taken an active interest in all that pertains to the welfare and advancement of the vicinity. He is a Republican in politics and holds the office of auditor, performing the duties of the same in a faithful and conscientious manner. Mr. McFadien holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. McFadien married Mary Helen Smith, a daughter of James and Sarah Smith, whose birth occurred in Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 21, 1844, where she was reared and educated. Their children are: 1. Agnes Leona, born April 11, 1871; became the wife of Girvin Paxton Massey, and their children are: Emma, born March 29, 1894; Samuel W., born November 23, 1895; Mary, born January 23, 1898; Girvin, born September 17, 1899, and John Massey, born June 3, 1902. 2. William Andrew, born July 24, 1873. 3. Sarah May, born May 8, 1876. 4. Elwood Lafayette, born November 9, 1878.

THOMAS H. RICHEY, Jr., serving in the capacity of postmaster at Jennersville, Penn township, and one of the substantial business men of Chester county, was born in Cecil county, Maryland, September 17, 1872, the son of Thomas H. and Sarah E. Richey, and grandson of Andrew and Mary (Beoin) Richey, the latter named being the parents of the following children: 1. Elizabeth. 2. Thomas H., father of Thomas H. Richey, Jr. 3. George, who married Martha Guthrie, and they are the parents of the following named children: James, who married Jennie Cunningham, and the issue of this union was three children, namely: May, George, and Martha Richey; Elizabeth, wife of Edward Armstrong; Martha, wife of Albert Goodwin, and their children are: Mahlon, Elizabeth, Warren, Courtlandt, William, Georgiana, unmarried, Sarah, unmarried, and William Goodwin, who was united in marriage to Irene Manning. 4. Dr. Andrew, who served all through the Civil war in the capacity of army surgeon.

Thomas H. Richey (father) was born May 31, 1826, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, acquired a practical education in the common schools of that section of the state, and after attaining young manhood located in Cecil county, Maryland, where he engaged in business pursuits. He was united in marriage to Sarah E. Irwin, and they reared a family of five children, namely: 1. George, who married Eva Smith, and their children are: Clyde, born in August, 1894; George, born in October, 1895, and Helen Richey, born in 1897. 2. Mary J. 3. Sarah, deceased. 4. Thomas H., Jr. 5. Samuel J. Richey.

Thomas H. Richey, Jr., second son of Thomas H. and Sarah E. Richey, was reared in Cecil county, Maryland, and in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and his educational advantages were obtained in the schools of the latter named county. He began his business career in the capacity of clerk for Samuel Rhodes, at Cochranville, who was engaged in an extensive general merchandise trade there. Later he removed to Russellville and clerked for H. P. Penny, and after dissolving his connection there he took up his residence in West Chester, where he engaged in the grocery and meat business for a number of years. He finally settled in Penn township, established a general store at Jennersville, and this enterprise proved very successful from the beginning, owing to the fact that Mr. Richey is a man of broad business ability, untiring energy, and sound judgment. Ever since attaining his majority, Mr. Richey has adhered to the principles of the Democratic party, and was elected to the office of postmaster at Jennersville, April 14, 1903. His religious tenets are those of the Presbyterian church.

On December 20, 1894, Mr. Richey was united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Polk, rector of Faggs Manor Presbyterian church, to M. Effie Dale, who was born in West Fallowfield, near Cochranville, June 9, 1870, and one child was the issue of this union, J. Dale Richey, born in 1895, died October 3, 1895. Mrs. Richey is the daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Chamberlin) Dale, the former named having been born April 22, 1846, the son of George and Margaret (Fox) Dale. Mrs. Richey was reared in West Fallowfield and Upper Oxford townships, acquired her early education in the local schools of the latter named township, and completed her education at Fernwood Academy.

AUGUSTUS M. THORNBURY, a highly regarded citizen of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a capable and independent farmer, who has contributed to the high standard agriculture has attained in his county.

His father was Pascal Thornbury, a life-long resident of Chester county. He was a farmer during a part of his active life, and he also at one time conducted a hotel at Marshallton, known as the Stone Tavern. His wife was Sarah Ann Davis, and he had a family of eight children, as follows: 1. Augustus, whose name appears at the beginning of this article; 2. Ralph; 3. Annie R., who married Jordan Taylor, and became the mother of four children: Mabel, James, Margaret, and Ralph; 4. Clementine, who married Butler Robinson; 5. Emma; 6. Frank; 7. Eva; 8. Margaretta, who married William Hughes, and is the mother of four children: Hubert, Frank, Oscar, and an infant daughter.

Augustus M., oldest child and first-born son of Pascal and Sarah Ann (Davis) Thornbury, was born in the neighborhood of Romanville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 23, 1847. He was reared near West Chester, and educated in Newlin and Bradford townships. He was brought up on a farm, and on leaving school he adopted farming as a vocation. He spent some years as a farmer in Highland township, where he was recognized as a man open to new ideas, and skillful in applying them. His industry and integrity won for him general respect, as well as substantial financial return. In 1894 he removed to Penn township, where he conducts a large farm along the lines of general produce. He belongs to the Methodist church, and is a liberal supporter of his denominational interests, as well as a friend of every worthy cause. In politics he is a Democrat.

In 1871, Mr. Thornbury married Sarah R. Massey, born in Highland township, Chester county, December 14, 1845, where she was reared and educated. She was a daughter of Isaac and Hannah (Mulhouse) Massey, her father, who was born about 1794, being of Welsh descent and himself the son of Isaac Massey. He became a miller by trade, though he bought a farm in Highland township, and spent most of his life there as a farmer. He was reared in the doctrine of the Society of Friends. The children of Augustus M. and Sarah R. (Massey) Thornbury, are as follows: Sidney Gertrude, born May 20, 1871, who married Eugene Emerson, and they are the parents of one child, Della A., born July 9, 1899; and Norris Franklin, born November 5, 1881.

GEORGE W. SPENCER. During a residence of ten years in Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, George W. Spencer has gained distinctive recognition as one of the leading men of that section of the state, owing to his possession of those sterling qualities which everywhere command respect—honesty in business, justice in public life, and an unfailing courtesy in social circles. He was born in Elk township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 22, 1867, a son of Aaron and Leah L. Spencer.

Asa Spencer, grandfather of George W. Spencer, accompanied by Jonathan and another brother, came from Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and settled in Kimblesville, Chester county. Subsequently Asa Spencer purchased property in the vicinity of Hicory Hill, Elk township, which he cultivated and improved, and at the time of his decease he bequeathed it to his son, Aaron Spencer. Asa Spencer was united in marriage to Ann Mercer, and the following named children were born to them, all of whom attained years of maturity: Elizabeth, wife of Linton Stevens; Hannah, wife of Richard White; Mary, wife of Jesse Stevens; Miranda, wife of James Hatton; Aaron, who married Leah L. Crowl; David, who married Miranda Chalfant, and Susan, wife of James Taylor.

Aaron Spencer, father of George W. Spencer, was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1840, and his boyhood and young manhood were spent in the neighborhood of Chesterville. He is a progressive and practical business man, true to life's duties, meeting fully its responsibilities and thus winning the esteem of all with whom he comes in contact. He married Leah L. Crowl, who was born in 1841, a daughter of James and Jane (Whitcroft) Crowl, and they are the parents of the following named children: 1. Harvey, who married Louisa Scott, a daughter of Amos and Amanda Scott, and their children are: Mary, born June 25, 1889; Helen born July 22, 1892; Norman, born April 7, 1895, and Alma, born March 6, 1897. 2. C. Baker, who married Lena Shakespeare, and they have one child, Harlan Spencer. 3. William. 4. George W., mentioned at length hereinafter. 5. J. Marshall, who married Ruth Gallagher. 6. Amos C. Spencer.

George W. Spencer, fourth son of Aaron and Leah Spencer, was reared in Elk township, Chester county, and acquired a practical education in the public schools of that vicinity. His entire business career has been devoted to the cultivation of the soil, first pursuing his operations in his native township, and later in Penn township, where he has continued to reside since his removal there in 1893. His political support has ever been given to the Republican party, and he has served his township in the capacity of school director for six years, during which period he discharged his duties with promptness and fidelity. Mr. Spencer holds membership in the Society of Friends.

On December 31, 1889, Mr. Spencer was united in marriage to Eliza Jennie Robinson, who was born in East Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 24, 1867, reared and educated there, a daughter of Robert J. and Ellen Robinson. Their children are: Earl, born December 4, 1891, and Marion R., born August 15, 1896.

SAMUEL B. SHOCH, an energetic and enterprising citizen of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who for many years has been serving in the capacity of agent for the Deering Harvester Company of Chicago, Illinois, was born in Gloucester county, Virginia, November 14, 1860, the son of John and Catherine Shoch, and grandson of Sebastian and Mary Shoch.

Sebastian Shoch, grandfather of Samuel B. Shoch, was a native of Germany, and after his marriage removed to the United States, taking up his residence at Paradise, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He was the father of a family of four children, all of whom lived to years of maturity, namely: 1. Rosanna, who became the wife of Robert Walkenshaw, and their children were: Mary Elizabeth, Margaret, and Fanny Walkenshaw. 2. John, father of Samuel B. Shoch. 3. Johanna, who became the wife of John Burns, and among the children born of this union were the following named: Mary, Joseph, Martha, Emma, Alice, David, Minnie, and Mabel Burns. 4. Mary, who became the wife of John Walkenshaw, and four children were born to them, one daughter and three sons.

John Shoch, father of Samuel B. Shoch, was born in Germany in September, 1830, but when he attained the age of two years, he was brought to the United States by his parents, who located in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He acquired a good English education in the common schools of that county and after completing his studies he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. During the Civil war he was a resident of the state of Virginia, was impressed into the Confederate service, but his sympathies being in favor with the Union army, he escaped to the north as soon as possible and by this move lost all his property and personal effects. He located in Lancaster county and secured employment on a farm, later being engaged in a sawmill, and after the close of the war he settled in Chester county. In 1882, he purchased a farm in the vicinity of Elkview, which he cultivated and improved and on which he resided up to the time of his decease, which occurred July 11, 1902. He was united in marriage to Catherine Buffenmyer, and they became the parents of the following named children: 1. Mary, born July 10, 1858, became the wife of Thos. McKenna, and they are the parents of six children, and now reside in the state of Wisconsin. 2. Samuel B., mentioned at length hereinafter. 3. John, born August 9, 1865, was killed, in 1870, in a runaway. 4. Frank, born March 14, 1867, was united in marriage to Sarah Armstrong. 5. Catherine, born October 4, 1873, became the wife of Harry McClemons, and their children are: John and Pusey McClemons. 6. Clara, born November 10, 1876, became the wife of James H. Reynolds, and they are the parents of one child, Frank Reynolds, born June 24, 1901.

Samuel B. Shoch, eldest son of John and Catherine Shoch, was reared in Lancaster and Chester counties, and the educational advantages he enjoyed were obtained in the schools of the latter named county. He began his active career in the haypacking business, which proved so remunerative that he continued his operations in the same line of trade for twenty years. After the expiration of this period of time he entered the machine business of the Deering Harvester Company, of Chicago, Illinois, and for many years he has been employed as their agent. In 1887 he purchased a farm in Penn township, Chester county, adding additional land to his estate in 1901, and his property now consists of one hundred acres of rich and arable land. In politics he is a Republican, and in religion an active and influential member of the Episcopal church.

Mr. Shoch was united in marriage to Mary Nelson, who was reared in Penn. township and educated at West Chester, graduating from the State Normal School; she is a daughter of John and Mary (Charlton) Nelson. One child is the issue of this marriage, William Shoch, born July 6, 1893. Throughout his entire business career Mr. Shoch has conducted his affairs honorably and honestly, and upon correct business principles.

CHANDLER PENNINGTON. The founders of the Pennington family, of which Chandler Pennington, a retired agriculturist of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative, were three brothers who came to this country from England, one settled in New Jersey, one in Maryland, and the other, from which this branch of the family is descended, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

Thomas Pennington, great-grandfather of Chandler Pennington, in 1793, settled near Chatham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and after being a resident of that section for two years, he removed to West Grove and purchased a tract of land consisting of one hundred acres, erecting thereon a homestead, in 1798, which is still standing at the present time (1903), but passed out of the possession of the family about the year 1836. Thomas Pennington was married three times, his first wife, Elizabeth Heaton Pennington, was the mother of a number of children, among whom were the following named: Daniel and Ann, twins; John, and Robert Pennington. His second wife, Mary (Jones) Pennington, bore him no children; his third wife, Lydia (Jackson) Pennington, bore him several children.

John Pennington, grandfather of Chandler Pennington, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, but after attaining man's estate he located near Parkesburg, Chester county, was actively identified with its various interests, and taught school for a number of years. He was united in marriage to Lydia Taggart, and they were the parents of the following named children: 1. William, who married Eliza Van Zandt, and seven children were the issue of this union. 2. Daniel, who married Letitia Townsend, and they were the parents of ten sons. 3. John, father of Chandler Pennington. 4. Thomas, who was married twice, his first wife having been Mary Cowen, and his second wife, Susanna Kenzie. 5. Mary, wife of John Way, of Chatham, Chester county, and their children are: Ellie, Orphia, Mary, Phebe, Sarah, Mary, Howard, and Pennington Way. 6. Elma, became the wife of Edward Good, and they were the parents of one child, Heaton Good, now deceased. 7. Margaretta, wife of Parkson Phillips, and their children are: Henry and Ella Phillips. 8. Sophia. 9. Susanna, wife of Joseph Kenzie, and their children are: Theodore, Howard, and Lydia Ann Kenzie.

John Pennington, father of Chandler Pennington, was born near Parkesburg, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1812. He acquired a practical education in the common schools of the neighborhood, and later became a useful and active citizen of London Grove township, where his death occurred in the year 1886. The issue of his marriage to Margaret Chandler is as follows: Enoch, born February 25, 1837, died in early life; Chandler, born April 21, 1838; Thomas, born March 27, 1840, and Margaret J. Pennington, born September 14, 1843.

Chandler Pennington, second son of John and Margaret Pennington, was born in West Grove, London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 21, 1838. He was reared in New London and Penn townships, obtaining a good English education in the public schools of the latter named vicinity. The larger part of his business career has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, which he conducted on a ninety-acre farm in Penn township, on which he now resides in the enjoyment of ease and comfort, having practically retired from the active duties of business life. He has always been a public-spirited and loyal citizen, and during the Civil war contributed financially to the northern cause. He has been honored several times by election to fill responsible local offices, such as school director for six years, supervisor for a number of years, and tax collector for eight years, being the incumbent of the latter named position at the present time (1903). He is a prominent member of the Society of Friends, serving in the capacity of overseer at their meetings.

On January 17, 1867, at Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, occurred the marriage of Chandler Pennington and Matilda W. Eachus, daughter of Minshall and Hannah D. (Haycock) Eachus. Mrs. Pennington was born at Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, July 20, 1843, and her early life was spent in that vicinity and in London Grove township. She was a student at a school in the latter named township, which was under the personal instruction of Benjamin Swayne.

FRANKLIN G. EVANS. The progenitor of the American branch of the Evans family, of which Franklin G. Evans is a representative, was Evan Evans, a native of the parish of Treeglwys, in Montgomeryshire, Wales, who came to this country in 1722, and on November 17 of that year purchased two hundred and fifty acres of land adjoining Uwchlan Friends meeting-house. Evan Evans and his wife, Margaret Evans, were the parents of the following named children: Martha, Mary, Margaret, Evan, Susanna, Thomas, Ann, Edward, and Richard Evans.

Thomas Evans, second son of Evan and Margaret Evans, was reared and remained up to the time of his death, which occurred about the year 1807, on the old homestead in Uwchlan. He married Eleanor Reese, a daughter of James Reese, of Uwchlan, and their children were: Evan, Ezekiel, Jesse, Isaac, Thomas, and Eleanor Evans.

Evan Evans, eldest son of Thomas and Eleanor Evans, was born in September, 1749, became one of the prominent men of the community and was twice elected a member of the Assembly. He married, February 16, 1780, Jane Owen, born March 19, 1762, a daughter of William and Rebecca Owen, of Uwchlan. Their children were: Rebecca, Owen, Elinor, Thomas, Sarah, Ezekiel, Margaret, William, Richard, Hannah, and Jane Evans. The death of Evan Evans occurred July 16, 1823, and his wife, Jane (Owen) Evans, passed away August 5, 1841.

Ezekiel Evans, third son of Evan and Jane Evans, was born 6 mo., 24, 1791, was an esteemed and respected citizen of Upper Uwchlan, and served in the capacity of justice of the peace for several years. About the year 1818, Mr. Evans was united in marriage to Eleanor Beitler, and the following named children were born to them: Thomas B., who married Martha J. Chaney; Hannah, who married Mr. Rife; John B.; Jane E., who married Charles Frick; Mary Ann, who married James Phipps; Evan B.; Lewis H., an officer in the Civil war, who married Phebe Pennypacker; Rebecca; J. Anna; and D. Webster, who married Elizabeth Wills. Ezekiel Evans, father of these children, died at his home in Upper Uwchlan, 5 mo., 29, 1870.

Evan Beitler Evans, third son of Ezekiel and Eleanor Evans, was born December 26, 1830, in Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and during all the time that he retained his home there was recognized as one of the representative citizens of the community. He married Anna R. Garrett and they are the parents of two children, namely: Franklin G., and Walter B. Evans, who married, December 18, 1902, Clara E. Nelson, who was born October 4, 1870.

Franklin G. Evans, eldest son of Evan B. and Anna R. Evans, was born in Upper Uwchlan township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 17, 1868. The early years of his life were spent in Uwchlan and Penn townships, and his educational advantages were acquired in the local schools and at the Friends' School, Wilmington, Delaware. Mr. Evans is the owner of a farm consisting of ninety-nine acres of rich and arable land in Penn township, Chester county, where he conducts general farming and dairying, making a specialty of the latter named industry. He is also interested in the fertilizing business, and being a man of business ability, untiring energy and sound judgment, has made a success in both enterprises. In politics he staunchly adheres to the principles of the Republican party, and for six years has held the office of school director.

On December 7, 1893, occurred the marriage of Franklin G. Evans and Annie C. Nelson, who was born July 9, 1868, in Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where she was reared and received her education in the local schools. Mrs. Evans is a daughter of John D. and Mary A. (Charlton) Nelson, the former named having been born April 18, 1822, son of William and Mary (Booth) Nelson. William Nelson came to this country early in the nineteenth century from county Down, Ireland, married Mary Booth, and settled in Penn township, Chester county, where he followed the occupation of farming.

JOHN C. YEATMAN. Thomas Yeatman is said to have come from London, England, about 1706-8, and after some years settled upon a tract of land lying partly in Delaware and partly in Pennsylvania, which he purchased from the attorneys of Letitia Aubrey, the daughter of William Penn. A portion of this land was in possession of John M. Yeatman, a great-grandson, in 1893, lying south of Norway Post Office, in Kennett Township. Thomas Yeatman was married March 6, 1722, to Sarah Bennett, born April 1, 1701; died January 15, 1778; daughter of Edward and Sarah (Stanfield) Bennett, of Thornbury. Her father was the son of John and Margery Bennett, of Overly, in the county of Worcester, England, and was baptized October 14, 1659. Francis Stanfield and Grace his wife, late of Garton in Cheshire, came as passengers on the Endeavour, of London, George Thorp, master, arriving in the Delaware 7 mo. 29, 1683, with their children, James, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth, Grace, and Hannah, and eight servants. The daughter Sarah married William Clues, of Bucks county, and after his death became the wife of Edward Bennett.

Thomas Yeatman died August 28, 1754, aged 61 years, and his will was proved October 10, 1754. His children were seven in number:

1. William, b. 4 mo. (June), 5, 1724; d. January 15, 1747.

2. Mary, b. 7 mo. (September), 19, 1726; d. October 18, 1767; m. Richard Woodward, 1746.

3. Sarah, b. 9 mo. (November) 28, 1728; d. 6 mo., 21, 1817; m. about 1751 as his second wife, John Painter, son of Samuel and Elizabeth Painter, of Birmingham. She was admitted into membership with Friends in 1771, and m. Richard Parks, 12 mo., 16, 1772.

4. Thomas, b. 3 mo. (May), 27, 1731; d. January 21, 1748.

5. Andrew, b. 7 mo., 14, 1733; d. 9 mo., 17, 1809. See forward.

6. Edith, b. 1 mo. (March), 24, 1734-5; d. 4 mo., 14, 1818; m. John Eves, from Ireland, a member of the Society of Friends. They settled in what is now Millville, Columbia county, Pennsylvania, and after having their home destroyed during the French and Indian war they succeeded in founding a settlement since known as Millville. They had seventeen children, and many families in and about Millville and Williamsport are descended from John and Edith Eves.

7. Elizabeth, b. 6 mo. (August), 3, 1738; d. 4 mo., 2, 1823; m. John Garrett. Their children were Horatio Gates, a Revolutionary soldier; Levi, whose sons, Walter and George, were proprietors of the famous snuff mills; Joseph, and William, who died of yellow fever in 1798.

Andrew Yeatman (5) married first Sarah Painter, about 1764, who died August 23, 1777, aged thirty-one years; after which he married Deborah Bennett, who died in 1801. When about twenty years of age, at the breaking out of the French and Indian war, Andrew went to sea in the privateer service as second officer of a vessel, of which it is understood that he subsequently became the commander, when he was captured by the French and confined for some time as a prisoner in the Bastille. The date of his capture cannot be accurately fixed. Upon his release or escape, he returned home after an absence of seven years and inherited his father's estate. His first wife was the daughter of John Painter, already mentioned, by his first wife, Agnes Coburn, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Coburn, of Aston. By her he had six children:

8. Thomas, b. April 9, 1765; d. about 1824; m. Sarah Beeson, 17 years of age, and had children, Andrew, John, William, Thomas, Samuel, Milton, Eli, Sarah, Mary, Beeson, Levi, Hiram, Elizabeth, Painter and Lydia Ann.

9. Lydia, b. September 4, 1767; d. August 30, 1777.

10. John, b. May 13, 1769; d. 3 mo., 6, 1842. See forward.

11. Elizabeth, b. July 9, 1771; d. August 20, 1797; m. George Brinton, and had Caleb, Letitia, Andrew, John, Thomas, and Sarah.

12. Samuel, b. May 15, 1774; d. August, 1774.

13. Andrew, b. August 21, 1776; d. August 25, 1777.

John Yeatman (10) was admitted into membership with Friends of Hockessin Meeting, 4 mo., 11, 1799, and married Hannah Marshall, born 1 mo., 7, 1775; died 1 mo., 21, 1859; daughter of John Marshall and his second wife, Susanna Lamborn, of Kennett township, where they settled. They had ten children:

John C. Heatman

14. Marshall, b. 6 mo., 2, 1800; d. 8 mo., 20, 1879. See forward.

15. Lydia, b. 2 mo., 6, 1802; d. 12 mo., 19, 1846, unmarried.

16. Susanna, b. 1 mo., 27, 1804; d. 6 mo., 25, 1893; m. Job Taylor, son of William and Ann (Mercer) Taylor. Their only child, John Yeatman Taylor, m. 2 mo., 6, 1878, Sabella B. Bryson, and has children, Charlotte B. and Andrew B. Residence, Washington, D. C.

17. Sarah, b. 12 mo., 3, 1805; d. 4 mo., 14, 1851; m. William Mendenhall.

18. Elizabeth, b. 9 mo., 7, 1807; m. William M. Cloud.

19. Painter, b. 2 mo., 10, 1809; d. 9 mo., 21, 1817.

20. Martha, b. 8 mo., 5, 1812; d. 10 mo., 25, 1878; m. Levis Walter.

21. John Marshall, b. 9 mo., 6, 1814; m. 1 mo., 29, 1846, Lavinia Passmore, daughter of Carleton and Mary (Mather) Passmore, and had Florence, Susanna, Sarah Eloise and John M., who all died in infancy; Gheretein, m. Dr. Joseph P. Pyle; Mary, Florence and Susanna.

22. Hannah, b. 1 mo., 13, 1816; d. 6 mo., 12, 1872; m. Jesse Pennock.

23. William P., b. 1 mo., 29, 1819; d. 7 mo., 28, 1820.

Marshall Yeatman (14) was married 11 mo., 20, 1828, at Hockessin Meeting, to Mary Dixon, daughter of Jehu and Mary (Taylor) Dixon. No issue. He married again, 11 mo., 5, 1832, Mary D. Chandler, b. 2 mo., 20, 1814; d. 1 mo., 20, 1901; daughter of Philip and Hannah (Dixon) Chandler, of Hockessin. He was a miller in London Britain township from 1833 to 1860, when he moved to Wilmington and died there. His widow died at her son Marshall's, at Kennett Square. They had four children:

24. John C., b., 8 mo., 30, 1833. See forward.

25. Hannah D., b. 8 mo., 10, 1835; m. Jesse D. Pusey.

26. Lydia, b. 7 mo., 13, 1837; d. 8 mo., 20, 1873; m. Joel Walton.

27. Marshall P., b. 9 mo., 18, 1844; m. 2 mo., 15, 1866, S. Emma Pennock, b. 11 mo., 4, 1846; d. 1 mo., 4, 1884, leaving children, Arthur P., Laura R., Walter M., Pennock J. and Emma P. For second wife he m. 2 mo., 6, 1890, Abby Q. Pennock, sister of his first wife. They now reside at Kennett Square.

John C. Yeatman (24) was born in London Britain township, educated in the public schools, and engaged in the milling business with his father, whom he succeeded. In 1882 he retired from active business and has resided since then in Kennett Square. In politics he is a Republican; has held the office of councilman and school director for some time, and is a Friend; was married 4 mo., 16., 1863, to Margaret L. Roberts, born 10 mo., 16, 1836; daughter of Joseph W. and Sarah (Garrett) Roberts, of East Marlborough. They have had three children:

28. Joseph R., b. 4 mo., 17, 1864; d. 2 mo., 7, 1885, unmarried.

29. Mary S., b. 12 mo., 8, 1868; m. William J. Sharpless and has two children, Harold C. and Margaret L.

30. Lydia J., b. 12 mo., 27, 1873; d. 11 mo., 15, 1878.

ARTHUR P. YEATMAN, whose life has been one of honorable and prominent identification with the agricultural interests of Chester county, Pennsylvania, is an example of what determination and force, combined with strict integrity and honorable business methods, can accomplish for a man. His birth occurred on the old homestead in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 24, 1867.

Marshall Yeatman, grandfather of Arthur P. Yeatman, was born in Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, educated in the district schools, and his entire business career was devoted to that quiet but important calling, agriculture. He was also active in the performance of those duties that bring about the best development and the most substantial progress of the community. He was united in marriage to Mary Dixon Chandler, a native of Wilmington, Delaware, and four children were born to them, among whom was a son named Marshall P. Yeatman.

Marshall P. Yeatman, father of Arthur P. Yeatman, was born at what is known as Yeatman's Mill, London Britain township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 18, 1844. He acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of the neighborhood, and this was supplemented by attendance at a private school in Wilmington, Delaware. He then learned the trade of butcher, which occupation he continued to follow up to the year 1865, when he purchased the farm in London Grove township, on which his son, Arthur P., now resides. He continued his farming operations until 1893, when he took up his residence in Kennett Square, Chester county, where he has since lived a retired life, having accumulated a sufficient competence during his many years of activity and toil. In his political affiliations he is an adherent of the principles of the Republican party, having held the office of school director for many years, and having just completed his tenure of the office of Burgess of Kennett Square. In 1866 Mr. Yeatman married Sarah Emma Pennock, who was born November 4, 1846, a daughter of Marshall L. and Rachel Lamborn (Humes) Pennock. Marshall L. Pennock was born in West Marlborough, March 30, 1800, was a prosperous farmer of London Grove township, and his death occurred there October 22, 1882; his wife, Rachel L. (Humes) Pennock, was born June 6, 1818, a daughter of John, a native of Ireland, and Hannah (Moore) Humes, a native of London Grove township; her death occurred October 10, 1872. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Yeatman are: Arthur P., born September 24, 1867; Laura R., born January 29, 1870, the wife of William P. Sharpless; three children have been born to them; Walter M., born September 8, 1874, unmarried; Pennock J., born August 3, 1876, unmarried, and Emma P., born December 29, 1883, unmarried. After the death of the mother of these children, Mr. Yeatman married, in 1890, Abbey Pennock, a sister of his first wife, who was born October 10, 1854.

Arthur P. Yeatman acquired his education in the public schools of London Grove township and the West Chester State Normal School, and upon the completion of his studies returned to the old homestead, where he has since been extensively engaged in general farming. He is a man of clear perception, solid judgment and unswerving integrity, and has been prominent and useful in the community, where he has resided for so many years. In his political sentiments he is a Republican, and in his religious views, a member of the Society of Friends.

In 1893 Mr. Yeatman married Jane T. Pennock, a daughter of Levis and Annie W. Pennock, the former named being engaged in farming interests in West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Raymond N., born March 3, 1895, and Clarence P., born August 19, 1897.

JOHN A. WALLACE, whose connection with the agricultural interests of Jennersville, Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, during a period of fifty years has been both profitable and honorable, was born in Upper Oxford township, Chester county, October 7, 1822.

Charles Wallace, father of John A. Wallace, came to this country from Ireland where he resided for a short time only, having removed there from Scotland, his birthplace, where he had received liberal and excellent educational advantages. He took up his residence in Cecil county, Maryland, where he engaged in the manufacture of nails, but subsequently, upon the solicitation of his neighbors who had discovered his scholarly attainments, he abandoned this line of industry and established a school which he conducted for many years. Upon his retirement from this position he located in Haysville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, became the proprietor of a small general store and as business increased from year to year, he was enabled to accumulate sufficient capital to purchase a farm. Being a man of sound judgment, keen discretion and energy, he met with success in this undertaking and later became the owner of several tracts of land, which he cultivated and improved. He was united in marriage to Sarah Stinett and their children were: 1. Elizabeth, wife of Robert Pennock and mother of one son, John, and two daughters. 2. William. 3. Sarah, wife of Dr. Worrall. 4. Mary Ann, wife of William Rhoades. 5. John A. 6. Margaret, wife of Albin Pennock and two children were born of this marriage, Emma Pennock being the only one living at the present time. 7. Susan, wife of Samuel Hottan. 8. Charles Wallace.

John A. Wallace, second son of Charles and Sarah Wallace, was reared in his parents' home and his educational advantages were obtained at the common schools of Upper Oxford township. Subsequently he located in Jennersville, Penn township, purchased two large farms consisting of two hundred acres altogether, and the larger part of this was devoted to the cultivation of hay. His farm is equipped with all modern accessories and conveniences, and his products being of excellent quality find a ready sale on the market. Mr. Wallace has been a life-long Republican, and served his township in the capacity of supervisor at various times. In everything that pertains to the public welfare he is deeply interested, and is a public-spirited and progressive citizen, an enterprising and honorable business man and a faithful friend in social life. He is also loyal to his country, having contributed considerable money to the Union cause during the Civil war. His religious views are in sympathy with the Baptist faith, as he was an attendant of that church during his early life.

Mr. Wallace married Eliza Ortlip, and the following named children were born to them: Sarah Anna, George Ortlip, Charles A., Anna Arabella, and John Ormsbury, who married Letitia Patchell, and one child was born to them, John Wallace, now deceased.

HENRY BUSHONG. Jean Beauchamp, the progenitor of the American branch of the Bushong family, who changed the name from Beauchamp to Bushong, which in pronunciation has a somewhat similar sound to the original French name, was a member of a Huguenot family who probably fled from France to Holland to escape the religious persecution of that country. In any event it was from Holland that Jean Beauchamp sailed to this country, landing in the year 1731. His marriage, which resulted in the birth of a son, Philip Beauchamp, probably occurred in the United States.

Philip Beauchamp, son of Jean Beauchamp, married Ann Eve, and their son, John Beauchamp, born 12 mo., 2, 1750, died 12 mo., 21, 1831, married Eva Eckman Slaymaker, born April 3, 1755, died August 19, 1819, and their children were: Mary B., born October 13, 1778, died July 10, 1860; Elizabeth, born February 13, 1781, died November 9, 1866; Henry, born March 5, 1783, died February 9, 1870; Barbara, born November 12, 1785, died September 12, 1787; John, born April 10, 1788, died April 26, 1788; Jacob, born June 7, 1789, died November 25, 1871; John, born February 9, 1794, died June 12, 1869; Eve, born November 13, 1796. The remains of all these children were interred at Hellers churchyard in East Lampeter township, Lancaster county, with the exception of Henry, who was buried at Bart Meeting House, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

Henry Bushong, eldest son of John and Eva E. (Slaymaker) Bushong, was born March 5, 1783, married October 23, 1806, Sarah Gilbert born November 21, 1787, and their children are: 1. Lydia, born September 4, 1807, became the wife of Abraham Rakestraw. 2. John, born February 9, 1809, married Elizabeth Walton, and their children are: Sarah, wife of Benjamin Kirk; Mary; Anna; and Elmira, wife of Walter Coates. 3. Jesse G., born October 22, 1810. 4. Jacob, born July 9, 1813, father of Henry Bushong. 5. Elizabeth, born June 25, 1817. 6. Caroline, born November 30, 1821, wife of Joseph Morrison, and their children are Henry, and Enmor Morrison, the latter named being married twice; his first wife was Elizabeth Mercer, and their child, Mary Morrison, became the wife of Warren Webster; Enmor Morrison's second wife was Laura Mercer. After the death of his wife, Sarah (Gilbert) Bushong, Henry Bushong married Esther Valentine Gilbert and they were the parents of one child, Gilbert Bushong, born December 2, 1836, married Edith K. Paxson, and their children were: Charles, married for his first wife, Annie Keene, and for his second wife, Nora Keene; Franklin, died in early life; Marion, wife of Sanders Collins and mother of two children, Edith and Wallace Collins; Marvin, married Lydia Rakestraw. Henry Bushong, father of these children, died February 9, 1870. The Gilbert family, of which Sarah (Gilbert) Bushong, the first wife of Henry Bushong, was a member, were taken prisoners during a raid by the Indians, in 1780, and held in captivity for several years before being finally rescued; they are said to have suffered great hardships. The story of their capture is the subject of a book, entitled "Gilberts Narrative," a few copies of which are still extant.

Jacob Bushong, third son of Henry and Sarah (Gilbert) Bushong, was born July 9, 1813, married Margaret Hobson, a daughter of Francis and Ann (Johnson) Hobson, the former named having been born February 14, 1768, and the latter, December 15, 1775. Mr. and Mrs. Hobson were the parents of the following named children: Elizabeth, born March 17, 1799; Martha, born November 20, 1800; Benjamin, born April 17, 1803; Joseph, born December 22, 1805; Francis, born December 20, 1807, died July 24, 1877; Jacob, born June 23, 1810; Thomas, born January 8, 1814, died November 12, 1853, and Margaret, wife of Jacob Bushong, born November 6, 1818. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bushong: Henry, born February 20, 1844, and Edwin, born March 27, 1848, married Emeline Valentine, and two sons were born to them, Parke and George Bushong. After the death of the mother of these children, Edwin Bushong married Hannah Hoopergardner, and one child has been born to them, Margaret Bushong.

Henry Bushong, eldest son of Jacob and Margaret (Hobson) Bushong, was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, February 20, 1844. He obtained his preliminary education in the public schools of the neighborhood and later he attended the schools of Chester county, pursuing his studies under the supervision of Milton Dunal and Henry Kent at Unionville, and at the Millersville Normal School. After completing his education he located in Penn township, Chester county, purchased a farm of one hundred and fourteen acres, eleven of which he subsequently disposed of, and the remaining one hundred and three acres he is now farming successfully. In politics Mr. Bushong is a strong advocate of Prohibition, and in religion is a birth-right member of the Society of Friends. He has been the incumbent of the office of school director of Penn township for nine years, and was re-elected to serve another term in 1902.

On November 15, 1866, Mr. Bushong married Irene Paxson, born April 22, 1845, daughter of Elwood H. and Elizabeth M. (White) Paxson, of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Elwood H. Paxson, father of Mrs. Bushong, was born November 11, 1811, a son of Joseph and Sarah Paxson, married, July 25, 1833, Elizabeth M. White, born July 4, 1815, a daughter of Job and Phebe H. White. Mr. Paxson's death occurred February 2, 1858. Mr. and Mrs. Bushong were the parents of the following named children: Anna, born November 9, 1867, died January 27, 1868; Caroline, born April 16, 1869, died March 9, 1880; Elizabeth, born November 6, 1877; died April 2, 1890; Elwood H., born October 9, 1873, died March 2, 1899; Jacob, born November 8, 1876, married, and now resides in Moline, Illinois; Jesse W., born November 19, 1878; and Morton, born September 10, 1881. The mother of these children died December 10, 1890. On December 28, 1893, Mr. Bushong chose for his second wife, Esther Gause Bachman, who was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, January 5, 1849, a daughter of Lee W. and Elizabeth (Whitson) Gause. She was a graduate of the State Normal School at Millersville, then taught school for a period of almost eighteen years, after which she became the wife of Jacob H. Bachman, now deceased, by whom she had one son, Jacob H. Bachman, a resident of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and employed as a fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad. On the date above mentioned she became the wife of Mr. Bushong. She was an active and estimable lady, and for eleven years served as president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. She died on January 20, 1903.

—◆◆◆—

JOSEPH SHARP QUARLL. The Quarll family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, represented so worthily by Joseph Sharp Quarll, now leading a retired life in the village of Toughkenamon, trace their ancestry to William Quarll, who came to the United States from France in the middle of the eighteenth century. Prior to the year 1737 he settled in Radnor township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he pursued the trade of tailor. He was united in marriage to Lydia Maule.

William Quarll, father of Joseph S. Quarll, was born February 26, 1788. He served as major in the war of 1812, and his father participated in the war of the Revolution. William Quarll was united in marriage October 20, 1815, to Hannah Sharp. Their children were: Joseph Sharp, born December 9, 1816; Augustus, born November 9, 1818; and Elizabeth, who died in infancy. Mr. Quarll, father of these children, died November 11, 1824.

Joseph S. Quarll, eldest son of William and Hannah Quarll, was born at Columbia, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, December 9, 1816, and he obtained a practical education in the common schools of the neighborhood. After completing his studies he devoted his attention to acquiring a thorough knowledge of the duties of farm life, and he conducted extensive operations along that line on the old homestead which he inherited from his great-uncle, Joseph Sharp. For some forty years Mr. Quarll practiced veterinary surgery in connection with his farming, and by his thrift, economy and good management accumulated a comfortable competence, and is now enjoying a life of ease and comfort. He served in the Civil war, and toward the close of the struggle was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in the Twenty-first Regiment, Whitely Creek Mudsills.

Mr. Quarll was united in marriage to Sarah Ann Vanderver, and the issue of this union was the following named children: Hannah Mary, born November 5, 1847, became the wife of James K. Mackey, and they are the parents of one child; William Baker, born March 19, 1849, married Josephine Mackey, and their family consists of three children; Alice V., born March 31, 1851, became the wife of William Wherry, and three children have been born to them; Adelaide L., born October 16, 1852, became the wife of Wilmer Niels, and they are the parents of three children; Jessie, born April 7, 1854; Oscar T., born July 22, 1856, married Mary Dance, and one child has been born to them; Sarah V., born December 5, 1857, became the wife of Harvey Doan, and she is the mother of four children; Clarence H., born June 26, 1859; Josephine, born February 22, 1861; Lillian M., born October 11, 1862; Phoebe, born September 30, 1864, became the wife of Frank Swayne, and one child was the issue of this union; and Ann Elizabeth, born November 9, 1865. As a man Mr. Quarll is respected for his courtesy and kindness, and as a citizen he has gained the good will and esteem of his fellow-townsmen by his patriotism and loyalty.

—◆◆◆—

ELIJAH G. HIPPLE, who is connected with agricultural pursuits in Willistown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, being widely known as a prosperous and progressive farmer and respected citizen, was born September 4, 1825, the son of Henry and Jane (Garnett) Hipple. His birthplace was East Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Henry Hipple was born in West Whiteland township, Chester county, June 30, 1780, the son of Lawrence and Margaret Hipple, the former named having come to this country from Germany, settling first in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. He was accompanied by his three brothers. Henry Hipple, after attaining young manhood, removed to Goshen township, where his attention was given almost exclusively to his farming interests. He was twice married, his first wife having been a Stonaker, and one child was born of this union, Mary Hipple. His second wife was Jane Garrett, who was born November 20, 1765, a daughter of George Garrett. Their children were: Sarah G., born May 3, 1810; Margaret, born November 11, 1811; Garrett M., born June 16, 1813, died February 21, 1814; Henry, born February 15, 1815, died December 24, 1878; Lawrence, born March 17, 1817, died January 13, 1892; Elizabeth J., born May 13, 1819, died January 5, 1890; George G., born May 13, 1821, died February 27, 1889; Jesse M., born May 4 1823, deceased; and Elijah G. Hipple, the only survivor of the family. Mr. Hipple and his second wife were members of the Friends' Meeting.

Elijah G. Hipple attended the common schools of his native county, where he acquired a practical education, and since his boyhood days has engaged in farming, being eminently successful in this occupation. In 1875 he moved to his present farm in Willistown township, and his attractive home surroundings are good evidence of his thrift and industry. In politics Mr. Hipple is a firm adherent of the principles of the Democratic party, and in religion he adheres to the doctrines of the Presbyterian denomination.

On January 16, 1867, Mr. Hipple married Sarah Jane Hoopes, who was born in East Whiteland township July 2, 1836, a daughter of John T. and Rebecca H. (Stemple) Hoopes. Their children are: Laura E., born December 9, 1867; Clara Hoopes, born February 22, 1872, and Wilford H., born January 22, 1878, died August 15, 1880.

MORDECAI THOMAS BARTRAM, for nearly a third of a century an active business man of the village of White Horse, Willistown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and one whose activities have extended to various fields of public usefulness, is a lineal descendant in the eighth generation from Richard Bartram (1), the original immigrant. See "Bartram Family" on preceding pages.

Mordecai Thomas Bartram, fourth child and third son of Israel L. (7) and Mary Ann (Thomas) Bartram, was born February 27, 1843, on the old family homestead near White Horse village. He was reared on the paternal farm and received a practical English education in public and private schools, among which were the Gwynedd and Kennett Square Friends schools, which afforded what was equivalent to a comprehensive academical course. On attaining manhood he took charge of the home farm, and was so occupied for four years. He was then appointed post trader at the Nemaha Indian Agency, at Nemaha, Nebraska, on the Missouri river. This was then one of the most important positions of its class, and he was brought into relations with several tribes, some partly civilized, and more who had made but little advancement, and could only understand the military power of the whites and the bounties which might be derived from them. The Indians had long been outraged by the rapacity and dishonesty of these agents of the government who had been sent to contribute to their wants. President Grant, out of his great desire that honesty and justice should be practiced toward the Indians, adopted what was popularly known as "Grant's Quaker Policy," and he made various appointments of agents from among the Friends, and Mr. Bartram was of this number. Mr. Bartram occupied the position for two years, during which time he instituted wholesale reforms and gained the implicit confidence and abiding respect of the untutored people whom he served. Returning home in 1873, Mr. Bartram opened a general store in his native village, which he has since conducted with gratifying success. He was also otherwise busily occupied, being for some time associated with his father-in-law, Thomas Smedley, in the farm implement business. Upon him also devolved the management of the home farm, this being necessitated by the death of his brother Wilmer in 1877 and the retirement of the father from active business life.

During his entire business life, Mr. Bartram has also taken an active part in community affairs, and is recognized as one of its most useful and prominent citizens. For several years he was auditor of the township. He has been an active member of his church since early manhood, and was superintendent of the Sunday school for a number of years, and is still active as assistant superintendent. He was a prime-mover in the organization of the Bartram Park Association of Philadelphia, and is president of that body.

Mr. Bartram was married September 30, 1874, to Rebecca G., daughter of Thomas G. and Elizabeth (Garrett) Smedley. Four children were born of this marriage: Alice C., October 24, 1876; Wilmer I., August 5, 1880; Helen, September 22, 1884, who died at the age of eight months; Thomas S., April 12, 1888.

HENRY O. GARBER, of Berwyn, Chester county, Pennsylvania, known alike as an active and successful business man, an earnest participant in public affairs and a popular member of society, is a son of Phineas and Elizabeth (Bensinger) Garber.

Phineas Garber was born February 10, 1827, in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, received his education in the common schools, and then pursued the trade of a blacksmith. He subsequently engaged in the carriage business which he conducted for the remainder of his life. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Lewis Bensinger, a hotel-keeper of Schuylkill county, and was the father of the following children: Sarah, who married Dr. W. Ward, and has one child; Emma, who became the wife of H. J. McLees, and whose family consists of three children; Minerva, who married Samuel Young; Mary, who died August 6, 1899, was born August 20, 1870; and Henry O., mentioned at length hereinafter. Mr. Garber, the father of the family, died November 13, 1902; his wife, Elizabeth (Bensinger) Garber, died June 23, 1880, born September 27, 1832.

Henry O. Garber, son of Phineas and Elizabeth (Bensinger) Garber, was born December 12, 1862, in Mahanoy City, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, and received his education in the public schools of his birthplace. After leaving school he learned telegraphy and when master of the art, accepted a position in Philadelphia with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. In this position which he held for eight years he served both as operator and agent, and in 1893 removed to Berwyn, where he opened a book-store, which he still conducts. Politically he is a republican, and has filled the office of school director and has served for several years as notary public. He is an effective and acceptable public speaker. He is a Mason and Knight Templar, and is also a member of the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics. In all athletic sports he takes an active part, is a member of the Gun Club, and for ten years has managed the base ball team of Berwyn. He and his wife are regular attendants at the Presbyterian church.

On December 17, 1885, Mr. Garber married Mary, born June 16, 1863, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Groome) Patton, of Minersville, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, and they are the parents of two daughters: Edna, who was born August 24, 1887, and at present is a student at the West Chester State Normal School; and Sarah Elizabeth, born March 2, 1901.

ALBERT H. THOMAS, one of the leading farmers of Chester county, is descended from Joseph Thomas, whose son Francis lived in Willistown township, where his calling was that of a schoolmaster. When his son Reuben was eight years old, Francis Thomas purchased the farm where his great-grandson, Albert H. Thomas, now lives. The name of his wife was Mary Thompson. Francis Thomas died April 20, 1829.

Reuben Thomas, son of Francis and Mary (Thompson) Thomas, was born in 1796, in Edgemont township, Delaware county, and spent his life as a farmer on the homestead. He married, in 1822, Elizabeth Van Meter, born in Salem county, New Jersey, a daughter of Isaac and Sarah Van Meter. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas were the parents of four children: Lydia, born in 1824, married Oliver H. Parry, and died in 1854; Wesley P., mentioned at length hereinafter; Frances, born July 27, 1829, died at the age of seventy-two, October 19, 1899; and Anna Statia, born in 1838, married William Evans, of Willistown, Chester county, who is now deceased.

Mrs. Thomas died in 1866, and her husband survived until 1885, passing away at the advanced age of eighty-nine years.

Wesley P. Thomas, son of Reuben and Elizabeth (Van Meter) Thomas, was born in 1826 on the homestead in Willistown township, where he passed his boyhood. He served an apprenticeship to the cabinetmaking trade and then went to Ohio, where he worked as a carpenter until 1853. In that year he returned to Pennsylvania and was engaged in farming until 1862, when he again went to Ohio and followed his trade for the remainder of his life. He married Ann Eliza, daughter of William Sisson, of Columbiana county, Ohio, and they were the parents of four children: Albert H., mentioned at length hereinafter; Elmira S., who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and married Malcomb Marshall, of Ohio; Thomas Jefferson, who was born in Chester county, married Annie Marshall, and is now a resident of Ohio; and Arthur, who was born in Ohio, where he now lives. Mr. Thomas died in 1884, while on a visit to his old home in Willistown, and his wife passed away in 1901.

Albert H. Thomas, son of Wesley P. and Ann Eliza (Sisson) Thomas, was born November 4, 1852, in Columbiana county, Ohio, and was brought up on a farm by his grandparents, receiving his education in the common schools. He devoted himself to agricultural pursuits and in course of time succeeded to the possession of the homestead in which he now resides. His farm contains ninety-three acres of improved land, which are kept in a high state of cultivation. He is a member of Thomson Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Media Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and St. Albans Commandery, Knights Templar. Politically he is a Democrat.

Mr. Thomas married, January 8, 1873, Sarah Jane Register, born March 3, 1851, in Edgemont township, Delaware county, a daughter of Robert and Emily (Verdreese) Register. They have six children: Charles Denny, born August 17, 1874, who is a machinist of Houston, Texas; Francis H., born May 20, 1876, who is a farmer; Anna, born November 15, 1878; Albert W., born November 19, 1883, who is employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Clifford, born August 6, 1886; and Arthur, born March 19, 1891. Francis H. Thomas married Anna B. Pinkerton, of Delaware county, and has a daughter, Sarah Heller, born November 21, 1896.

ELLWOOD SMEDLEY, who was a highly respected citizen of Willistown township, Chester county, traces his descent from George Smedley, who born in England, probably in Derbyshire, and came to Pennsylvania about 1682. He settled in Philadelphia, and later, in Chester county, married Sarah Goodwin, widow of John Goodwin and daughter of Thomas Kitchin, of Dublin township, Philadelphia county. Their son, Thomas, married Sarah Baker, born in England, daughter of Joseph and Mary Baker, of Edgemont township. They were the parents of John, who married Susanna (Dawson) Cowgill, widow of Thomas Cowgill and daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Fussell) Dawson, of Smyrna, Delaware. Their son, also named John, inherited the homestead, which had been in the possession of the family since the time of the founder, George, and married Rebecca, daughter of Nathan and Amy (Bane) Cope, of East Bradford township. They were the parents of eleven children. John Smedley died October 15, 1825, and his wife expired January 24, 1846. The whole family, including the founder, George, have always been members of the Society of Friends.

Ellwood Smedley, son of John and Rebecca (Cope) Smedley, was born November 11, 1820, on the homestead in Willistown township, Chester county, and received his education in the private school of Joshua Hoopes at West Chester and at Columbia. He served as schoolmaster at Sugartown in 1839, and in 1842 inherited the farm which he made his home up to the time of his decease. This farm was the property of his uncle, Thomas D. Smedley, who intended to leave it to his nephew, Thomas, a brother of Ellwood Smedley. This nephew, Thomas, however, survived his uncle but a few years and died unmarried. According to a provision of the uncle's will, the farm then passed to Ellwood Smedley, who since coming into possession of it, devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. Prior to 1856 he sent produce to the markets, but in that year disposed of his dairy, and thereafter engaged in the business of feeding cattle until he retired, leaving the management of the farm in the hands of his sons. Politically Mr. Smedley was formerly an old-line Whig and later became a Republican. The confidence with which he was regarded by his neighbors is shown by the fact that for thirty-seven years he served as school director and has also filled the offices of supervisor and auditor. He was recorder and overseer of the Friends' Meeting, both in Willistown particular and Goshen Monthly Meeting. Mr. Smedley had in his possession the marriage certificates of his grandfather and great-grandfather, together with the deed from Frances Bowater to George Smedley for land in Willistown, 1706, and a patent to George and Thomas Smedley, 1713.

Mr. Smedley married, December 24, 1846, at the residence of Levi Garrett, Willistown, Mary Ann Massey, born in that place, February 23, 1825, daughter of Joseph and Rosanna (Verdries) Massey, of that township. They were the parents of four children: 1. Thomas D., born November 11, 1847, died October 29, 1873, unmarried. 2. Lewis Verdries, born July 22, 1850, was educated at the Friends' High School at West Chester, and married, December 12, 1872, Selina Cox, born June 9, 1849, a daughter of Caleb H. Cox. They have five children: Lauretta Thomas, Arthur Cox, Anna Lucretia, Lewis Clarence and Helen. 3. Lydia, born July 5, 1853. 4. Wilmer E., born December 23, 1859, was educated in the Normal School at West Chester, and is now leading the life of a farmer on the homestead. He married, January 5, 1882, Mary Ella, daughter of the late Robert F. Davis, and they have two children: Alice Edna and Thomas D. Ellwood Smedley, the father of this family, died November 1, 1903, and his wife, who, like her husband, was a prominent member of the Society of Friends, died July 25, 1901.

W. JOHN CAMPBELL, a well known citizen of Easttown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born of Scotch-Irish parentage, in Howellville, Chester county, August 22, 1849.

His maternal grandparents, John and Mary McPherson, came of Scottish parentage, though born and reared in the north of Ireland. They emigrated to America soon after they were married, and settled on a farm still in the family at Radnor, Delaware county. They were members of the Great Valley Baptist church in Tredyffrin, and their bodies are buried in the cemetery surrounding that church. All of their children were born in this country.

The parents of Thomas Campbell, father of W. John Campbell, were natives of county Argyle, Scotland, but like many other Scotch people, they settled in the north of Ireland, in county Antrim, six miles from the Giants' Causeway, near the town of Coleraine, where Thomas was born in 1814. His mother and father died when he was quite young, and in the company of an older sister, he came to this country when but twelve years of age. He acquired a moderate common school education here and began his business career at an early age in the cattle trade in which he continued until late in life, when he became a farmer, locating near what is now known as Strafford, in this county. He took a lively interest in public matters, was earnest and honest in his opinions and in his dealings and was unyielding when he believed he was right. He married Eliza McPherson, daughter of John McPherson, spoken of above, and three children blessed their union, all of whom are still living. They are: Virginia, wife of Adoniram Latch, W. John, and Mary J., widow of Robert Glenn. Thomas Campbell lived to the advanced age of eighty-two years and died June 25, 1896. His widow still survives him, aged seventy-nine years.

W. John Campbell, son of Thomas and Eliza Campbell, received his education in the public schools of his county and has, since he left school, been engaged in mercantile and manufacturing pursuits. He has traveled much, has an extensive acquaintance, and possesses a generous fund of knowledge in various fields. An ardent friend of the public schools, "he believes it not only the duty, but economy for the state to provide each of its wards with the best possible education free of cost," and he has rendered his district useful service as secretary of its board of education. Of the local history of his county and the eastern end of his state—so rich in Revolutionary lore—Mr. Campbell has been a close student all of his days and he is to-day an authority in such matters. Naturally fond of literature, he has been a wide reader and is himself the author of a number of historical and other interesting and instructive papers which have appeared in various journals and magazines. Modest and retiring in disposition, he is yet a graceful speaker, when occasion demands, and is in frequent quest at society meetings, dinners and other social and political functions. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and has attained to the degree of Knight Templar. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party, of which, without having held any office, he is an active member, and his sense of justice and fair play command the respect of his political enemies who are compelled to admit that his Democracy "is of the kind that wears," though his Scotch ancestry develops in the firmness with which he holds to what he believes to be right at any odds.

On January 21, 1877, Mr. Campbell married Lucy S. Morris, daughter of Jonathan T. Morris, a prominent farmer of Easttown township. Their children were: Morris T., born June 24, 1878, died June 21, 1885; Eliza, born June 16, 1879, died August 1st of that year, and John T., born September 28, 1880. The family are all members of Old St. David's Episcopal church, Radnor, of which Mr. Campbell has been a vestryman many years.

BAYARD TAYLOR, one of the most prolific and pleasing of American authors, was a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, born at Kennett Square, January 25, 1825. He studied under Jonathan Gause, at Unionville, and learned the art of printing in the office of the "Village Record," at West Chester, making his beginning at the age of seventeen. In 1844, when nineteen years old, he published "Ximena, and Other Poems." In the same year he sailed for Europe, with his savings of a little more than one hundred dollars, but having a congenial mission—that of writing his experiences in travel for the "New York Tribune," "Saturday Evening Post," and another journal. He spent two years in travel in Great Britain and upon the continent, and that he was well adapted for a traveler is evidenced by the fact that his entire expenditures did not exceed the sum of $500. His newspaper contributions were received with so much favor that he was induced to tell of his pedestrian tour in a volume published in 1846, "Views Afoot, or, Europe Seen with Knapsack and Staff," which had a wide popularity. He published a newspaper at Phoenixville for a short time, but in 1847 accepted an invitation from Horace Greeley to attach himself to the editorial staff of the "New York Tribune." When the gold fever was at its height he journeyed to California, acting as correspondent of "The Tribune," and in 1850 he made his experiences the basis for "Eldorado, or Adventures in the Path of Empire," a volume which had a phenomenal sale for the times, the sales being ten thousand in the United States and thirty thousand in Great Britain within a fortnight after its appearance.

CEDARCROFT, HOME OF BAYARD TAYLOR, Near Kennett Square.

Somewhat of a dreamer, Taylor deemed himself native to the east, and in 1851 made a tour of the Nile regions, and he stored his memory with traditions and incidents which afforded the basis of much of his verse. In 1852 he made a voyage from England to Calcutta, and thence to China, where he joined Commodore Perry's expedition to Japan, and from these travels he drew material from which he wrote several volumes—"A Journey to Central Africa," "The Land of the Saracens," and "A Visit to India, China and Japan." Returning home in 1854, he entered upon a very successful career as a public lecturer, delivering addresses in the principal cities from New York to Wisconsin. After being thus occupied for two years, he visited northern Europe, with the principal purpose of studying Swedish life, language and literature, and out of this trip grew his long narrative poem, "Lars," and his volume of "Northern Travel."

In 1857 Mr. Taylor married Maria Hansen, daughter of a German astronomer. After traveling for a time in Greece, and afterwards in America upon the Pacific slope, Mr. Taylor (in 1862) entered the diplomatic service in the capacity of secretary of legation at St. Petersburg, and in the following year he became charge d'affaires at the Russian capital. In 1864 he returned to the United States, and for ten years devoted himself industriously to literary pursuits. It was during this period that he produced his four novels, of which one possessed a deep interest in his native county of Chester—"The Story of Kennett," founded upon the doings, real and mythical, of James Fitzpatrick, a noted desperado of the Revolutionary period. It is to be said in all truth that Mr. Taylor was not endowed with those qualities which make a really masterly novelist, and his literary fame must rest principally upon his volumes of travel and his poetry. He visited Iceland in 1874, to take part in the centennial celebration held that year. In June, 1878, he was appointed United States minister to Germany, and died in Berlin, December 17, shortly after his arrival there.

HENRY WILLIS TAYLOR, now living a retired life at his home in the township of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a man of good business qualifications, and during his active career, which extended over a period of more than a half a century, was engaged in various enterprises. He was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 2, 1832, the grandson of John and Ann (Booser) Taylor, the former named having been born in Kennett township and about the year 1817 purchased the farm which was known as the old "Fairthorne" farm, described by Bayard Taylor, the American author and traveler, who was born at Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, January 11, 1825, in his "Story of Kennett." Bayard Taylor was a cousin of Henry W. Taylor.

Joshua Taylor, father of Henry W. Taylor, was born in 1778, acquired a practical education at the common schools of the neighborhood and the school conducted under the efficient preceptorship of Jonathan Gause, and after completing his studies learned the trade of stone mason. He pursued this line of industry for a number of years in Kennett Square and then followed farming in East Marlborough township for a number of years, and, in 1843, purchased the old homestead, to the cultivation and improvement of which he devoted his entire time and energy up to the time of his decease. He was united in marriage to Mary P. Dixon, daughter of William and Susan (Pierson) Dixon, the former named a successful agriculturist of New Castle county, Delaware. Their children were: 1. Lydian, wife of T. E. Sickels and mother of three children, Mary E., Rosalie and Howard T. Sickels. 2. Henry Willis. 3. Mary Ellen, unmarried, a resident of Kennett Square. 4. Josephine, unmarried, whose death occurred in 1843. 5. Susan D. Mr. Taylor's death occurred January 27, 1873, in his seventy-sixth year of age, and his wife, Mary P. (Dixon) Taylor, died October 21, 1892.

Henry W. Taylor attended the common schools of his native township, and the practical education derived therefrom prepared him for the active duties of life. In early life he learned the trade of plasterer, and shortly after acquiring this knowledge removed to Philadelphia, where for three years he was engaged in the dry goods business. From there he went out west, settling in Indiana, and during his six months' residence in that state devoted his attention to the same line of trade. In 1853 he went across the plains to California, but the following year he returned to his native township where he remained for a short space of time. He then took up his residence in the state of Missouri, and was engaged in the railroad service for three years, after which he went up the Hudson river and was employed by the Knickerbocker Ice Company, building an inclined plane over the Palisades to carry ice from Rockland Lake to the Hudson river.

Upon the first call of President Lincoln for men to enlist their services for the defense of the Union, Mr. Taylor joined the Twenty-second Regiment, Light Guards, of Philadelphia, and served in the capacity of hospital steward for three months. At the expiration of this period of time he enlisted with the Emergency Corps; he was thrown out of a wagon, thereby sustaining injuries to his head from the effects of which he still suffers. After the termination of hostilities between the North and South, he went to New Orleans, Louisiana, as agent for the New York Cotton Seed Oil Company, and after retaining that position for several years he returned to Kennett Square, Pennsylvania. He again devoted his attention to farming interests, but at the present time (1903) is enjoying a life of retirement. In his political affiliations Mr. Taylor is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, serving as councilman for twenty-five years and he was also the incumbent of the office of burgess.

Mr. Taylor was united in marriage at Kennett Hotel, November 21, 1863, to Emma L. Jackson, a daughter of Cyrus and Annie (Larkin) Jackson, the former named a successful farmer of Kennett township. Their children are: Marion, wife of Minford Levis; they are the parents of one child, Richard J. Levis; Howard Victor, who married Elizabeth Chandler, has two children, Earl and Gerald Taylor; and Frederick E. Taylor.

EDWIN STANTON PHILIPS, vice-president of the American Road Machine Works at Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, also consulting engineer to the Good Roads Machine Company of the same city, was born at Mahanoy City, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, January 14, 1864, a descendant of a family many members of which were noted for their patriotism during the Revolutionary period.

The immigrant ancestors of the Philips family were Joseph and Mary Philips, natives of Wales, the birth of the former occurring in 1716 and that of the latter in 1710. They emigrated to this country in 1755, accompanied by their three sons, David, John and Josiah, a fourth son, Joseph, being born to them after their arrival. They settled on a tract of land near the present town of West Chester, but later purchased a farm in Uwchlan, where Joseph Philips erected a two-story log house. His occupation was that of a weaver, which he learned in his native country, and followed with a certain degree of success in the land of his adoption. As his business enlarged, he increased his facilities until finally he operated three shops, with three looms in each. The family attended the Great Valley Baptist church, thirteen miles distant from their home, but in 1771 the Vincent Baptist church was organized, and they became members of that body. Joseph Philips died May 18, 1792, and his wife died December 26, 1792.

Of their sons, David, the eldest, was a captain during the Revolutionary war, and subsequently took up his residence south of Pittsburg; he was a Baptist clergyman and officiated as such for forty years at Peter's Creek church. He was the father of thirteen children, and his descendants are located in western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee and several of the western states. His death occurred March 5, 1829, at the age of eighty-seven years. Joseph emigrated to the western part of Pennsylvania, settling south of Pittsburg, and here he became active and prominent, serving for many years as justice of the peace. He reared a family of five children. He died September 3, 1832, at the age of seventy-eight years. John Philips settled on the old Lancaster road, near Downingtown, where he reared a family of seven children, three sons and four daughters; his death occurred May 22, 1790, aged forty-five years.

Josiah Philips, third son of Joseph and Mary Philips, and great-grandfather of Edwin S. Philips, remained on the old homestead in Uwchlan, Pennsylvania, which he cultivated to a high state of perfection. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and by his exemplary life and character won the commendation and trust of his fellow townsmen. He was united in marriage to Martha Edwards, and they were the parents of three sons, David, John and Josiah Philips. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Philips married Sarah Thomas, and their children were: Joseph, Owen, Martha, Mary, Sarah, and Hannah, born March 6, 1802. Josiah Philips, father of these children, died March 1, 1817, aged sixty-six years.

Owen Philips, grandfather of Edwin S. Philips, and second son of Josiah and Sarah Philips, was born September 7, 1789, was a farmer by occupation, and pursued that line of industry in the township of East Nantmeal. In his political convictions he was a Republican, and in his religious views a Baptist, being one of the founders, and also deacon for a number of years, of the East Nantmeal Baptist church. He married Rachel Evans, born June 24, 1792, and the following named children were born to them: Jesse, born January 4, 1816, served one term as treasurer of Chester county, and died in April, 1895; Josiah, born September 10, 1817, died February 8, 1889; Milton, born September 25, 1819, died in early youth; Lewis, born February 27, 1822; David, born September 8, 1824; Joseph, born September 25, 1827, died January 2, 1901; Charles M., born August 25, 1829; Sarah Anna, born December 7, 1831; Owen Thomas, born February 21, 1834, and Abner E., born March 8, 1840.

David Philips, fifth son of Owen and Rachel Philips, and father of Edwin S. Philips, was born in East Nantmeal, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1824. After acquiring a practical education, in 1845, he began teaching at Warwick, in Warwick township, and taught until 1854, and during this time he taught about five years at the school of his brother, Jesse E. Philips, in East Nantmeal township. In 1854 he established an academy in Pughtown, where he successfully taught until 1863, when he removed to Mahanoy City, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in the stationery trade and also served as postmaster for ten years. After continuing his business there until 1875, he removed with his family to North Wales, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and there taught school about three years. He next taught a commercial academy at Providence, Rhode Island, for a brief period. In 1880 he removed to Reading, Pennsylvania, with his family, and there conducted an office for the sale of standard historical works. In 1885 he removed to Kennett Square, Chester county, and has been identified with his sons, engaged in the manufacture of rock crushers, road scrapers, and other machinery used in the making of roads. He has continued this business up to the present time (1903), and his long years of persistent labor have been crowned with abundant success. Mr. Philips was married twice, and his first wife, Tamsen (Morris) Philips, bore him the following named children: Arthur Allen, died in childhood; William Summer, died in early life; and S. Jones, born July 26, 1861, who married, January 24, 1883, Martha Voorhees, and their children are: Ralph, born January 14, 1884, died in infancy; D. Leon, born March 27, 1886; and Earl, born May 2, 1892. By his marriage to his second wife, Sarah (Amole) Philips, born November 1, 1830, Mr. Philips became the father of four children, namely: Edwin Stanton, born January 14, 1864; Jessie May, born June 13, 1866, who became the wife of Morris P. Smith, October 7, 1891, and they are the parents of one child, Ralph P. Smith; George Owen, born September 14, 1868, deceased; Annie Tustin, born April 10, 1871, married June 1, 1893, Howard H. Polk, son of Robert and Mary Polk, and their child, Howard Wayne Polk, was born October 8, 1898.

Edwin S. Philips, eldest son of David and Sarah (Amole) Philips, was born at Mahanoy City, Pennsylvania, where he was reared to the age of eleven years, and where he attended school. In 1875 he removed with his parents to North Wales, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he attended school during the first four years. In 1879 he entered the office of the "North Wales Record" to learn the printing trade. In 1880 he removed with his parents to Reading, Berks county, Pennsylvania, where he became engaged with the Franklin Iron Works to learn the trade of machinist, the purpose of which had been his object in relinquishing the printing trade. After remaining with the Franklin Iron Works for two years, by arrangement with his employer, he engaged with the Scott Works of the Reading Iron Company, where he found better facilities and completed his trade. During the entire four years term of his apprenticeship, the diligent and ambitious young mechanic attended the sessions of night school, to learn mechanical drawing and engineering. Upon completing his apprenticeship, he entered the drafting department of the Baldwin Locomotive Works in Philadelphia, where he remained until 1896, and while thus employed he continued his studies, taking a special course in mechanical engineering. In 1896 he accepted the superintendency of the American Road Machine Works at Kennett Square, in which corporation he is now acting in the capacity of vice-president. He also holds the position of consulting engineer to the Good Roads Machine Company, one of the leading industries in the city. His thorough and comprehensive knowledge of his business makes him especially capable in this position, and he fully merits the confidence and regard which the company entertain for him. While a resident of Philadelphia, Mr. Philips was prominent in musical circles, being instrumental in the organization of several societies, and also serving as the conductor of orchestras and choruses, and since his removal to his present residence, Kennett Square, his love for musical matters has not diminished in the slightest degree.

On October 5, 1892, Mr. Philips married Martha R. Yost, a daughter of Remendas and Sarah A. (Rowland) Yost, of North Wales, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. Their children are Rowland Stanton, born August 19, 1893, and Charlotte Ruth, born September 24, 1895. The Philips family have lately donated a memorial window of exquisite design to the Vincent Baptist church at Chester Spring, Pennsylvania, which was organized in 1771, and of which their ancestors were among the earliest members.

WILLIAM CHALFANT, for many years a prominent business man, who won high standing in commercial circles for his strict integrity and fidelity in all business transactions, was born December 8, 1814, a descendant of John Chalfant, who obtained a warrant October 22, 1701, for two hundred and fifty acres of land in Rockland Manor, where he had settled two years previously. The death of John Chalfant occurred in August, 1725, leaving surviving him two sons, John and Robert Chalfant. The line of descent is traced through John, Jr., who died about the year 1730, and who was survived by three sons, John, Solomon and Robert. The latter named son married Ann Bentley, daughter of John and Mary Bentley, residents of Newlin. Their children were: John, Mary, Jane, Ann, Robert and Elizabeth Chalfant.

Henry Chalfant, son of John Chalfant, was a prominent citizen of West Marlborough township, and his marriage occurred at London Grove Meeting, August 15, 1740; his wife, Elizabeth Jackson, daughter of Thomas and Ann Jackson, bore him the following named children: Jonathan, Thomas, Henry, Ann, Elizabeth, Jacob, Mary, Abner and Caleb Chalfant.

David Chalfant, son of Thomas and Phoebe (Hayes) Chalfant, was born in 1760, and was prominently identified with the various interests of the township of Pennsbury. He married, October 30, 1783, Frances Dowdall Goodwin, daughter of John and Mary Goodwin, of Marlborough. One son was born to them, Goodwin Chalfant. David Chalfant died in October, 1832, aged seventy-two years, and his widow passed away July 4, 1840, in the eighty-sixth year of her age.

Goodwin Chalfant, only son of David and Frances Chalfant, was born September 8, 1788, and the greater part of his life was spent in East Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was united in marriage October 14, 1812, to Hannah Windle, and the following named children were born to them: 1. David W., married Mary Ann Anderson, and two children were born to them, Mary D. and David C. Chalfant; 2. William, the subject of this sketch; 3. Sidney, wife of Edwin James, of East Bradford; they have one child, Edwin S. James; 4. Jane, wife of Joseph Dowdall and mother of four children, namely: Joseph, William, Hannah and Lillian Dowdall; 5. Lydia, wife of Thomas Seal, of Unionville.

William Chalfant, son of Goodwin and Hannah Chalfant, acquired a practical education in the common schools of East Marlborough, and subsequently began his business career as a farmer. After following this occupation for a number of years he turned his attention to commercial pursuits, wherein he continued until his advancing age rendered him unable for active exertion, and he is now living a retired life at Kennett Square. He was very successful in his business enterprises, and accumulated a sufficient competence to provide for all the needs and comforts of this period of inactivity from active pursuits. Mr. Chalfant died March 27, 1903.

On April 26, 1854, Mr. Chalfant married Sarah W. Marshall, who was born May 5, 1830, a daughter of John W. and Edna (Webb) Marshall, the former named having been a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Marshall. Their children are: 1. Harry W., born January 29, 1855, married Mary Woodward and their children are: Sarah W.; William, Jr., who married Genevieve Stackhouse, and one child was born to them, who died in infancy; and Edwin, Jr., who married Jennie Hickman, and their children are: Helen H. and Catherine M. Chalfant; 2. Jane D., born March 29, 1856; 3. William, Jr., born January 29, 1858; 4. John M., born December 4, 1859; 5. Edwin J., born June 11, 1866; 6. Thomas, born June 11, 1874.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN WICKERSHAM.

The Wickersham family, of which B. Franklin Wickersham, now living a retired life in the borough of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a representative member, is a branch of the old and honorable Wickersham family of Dolney, Sussex county, England, from whence Thomas Wickersham came to this country, settling on a large tract of land in East Marlborough township about the year 1700. Thomas Wickersham married for his first wife, Ann ———, and after her decease married Alice Hogg. Their children were: Humphrey, born in 1687; Thomas, born July 19, 1691, died in 1726; John, born September 4, 1693; Ann, born February 27, 1696; Alice, born July 14, 1700; Richard, born August 11, 1703; William, born February 3, 1706; Elizabeth, born November 13, 1708; James, born 1712, died April 12, 1804; Rebecca, born April 1, 1715, and Isaac, born January 28, 1721. The father of these children died in 1730.

The line of descent from Thomas Wickersham, the pioneer ancestor, down to B. Franklin Wickersham is as follows: James Wickersham, sixth son of Thomas and Alice Wickersham, born in 1712, married February 22, 1736, Ann Eachus, a daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Eachus, of Springfield, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. They inhabited the old homestead in East Marlborough township, and there the following named children were born to them: Abel; Enoch, who married Elizabeth Hurford; Jesse; James; John; Thomas; Samson, who married Elizabeth Jackson; Abner; Priscilla, wife of Gideon Pierce; Elizabeth, wife of ——— Pierce.

Abner Wickersham, eighth son of James and Ann Wickersham, was a prominent and public-spirited citizen of the township of East Marlborough, where his business career was spent. He married Mary Taylor and their children were: Joseph, Ellis, Enoch and Ann Wickersham.

Enoch Wickersham, third son of Abner and Mary Wickersham, was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was reared and educated in the vicinity of his birthplace. He took an active part in every enterprise calculated to increase the prosperity of the community, and ranked high as a business man and a citizen. He was united in marriage to Ann Wickersham, and their children were: Susan, born in 1817, married Evan Wickersham; Newton, born in 1819, married Sarah Ann Smith; Benjamin Franklin, born in 1821, married Mary Ann Pyle; Joshua, who died in early childhood; Hannah, born in 1823, wife of Howell Baily; Esther Ann, who became the wife of Joshua Cloud; Edith, wife of Milton Barnard, and Caleb, who was twice married, his first wife having been Sarah Barnard, and his second wife Ruth Hannah Martin.

B. Franklin Wickersham, second son of Enoch and Ann Wickersham, was born November 9, 1821, in the township of East Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania. After completing his education in the district schools he engaged in the lumber business, and for the greater part of his life continued these operations in the state of South Carolina. He was also the proprietor of an extensive and highly successful store in Kennett Square, where he now resides, which he conducted for many years. He is a man of positive character and undoubted ability, and these characteristics were essential factors in the prosperity that attended his business undertakings. He is now enjoying the fruits of a long life of constant industry and activity.

On March 1, 1849, Mr. Wickersham married Mary Ann Pyle, a daughter of James and Margaret W. (Marshall) Pyle, of East Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: 1. Edward P., died in childhood; 2. Clifton B., also died in childhood; 3. J. Leslie, born April 25, 1855, married Jeanette E. Dickinson on October 23, 1877; their children were: Howard B., deceased; Morris D., born September 6, 1880; Edward P., born January 9, 1883; Helen E., died in infancy; 4. Benjamin F., Jr., born August 14, 1857, married Caretta M. Jamison; they have one son, Jamison L. Wickersham; 5. Margaret P., born September 16, 1859; 6. Anna E., born February 20, 1862; 7. William Frederick, born October 31, 1864; 8. Mary H., born April 18, 1867. The mother of these children died 10 mo., 24, 1896.

JOHN L. BALDERSTON. Among the representative and well known citizens of the township of Kennett, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who have been actively identified with its agricultural interests for many years, may be mentioned the name of John L. Balderston, who was born in Cecil county, Maryland, 2 mo., 22, 1849, a son of Lloyd and Catherine (Canby) Balderston, and grandson of Mark Balderston, of Falls township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

Lloyd Balderston, father of John L. Balderston, was born in Falls township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, 7 mo., 1818. He was reared to manhood years by his uncle, John Lloyd, who was a resident of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and upon leaving Harvard College he engaged at teaching and pursued this vocation for a short period of time in Moorestown, New Jersey. In 1840 he located at Colora, Cecil county, Maryland, and in this vicinity he and his wife, whose maiden name was Catharine Canby and who died 2 mo., 1884, reared a family of nine children.

The educational advantages enjoyed by John L. Balderston were obtained at Westtown Boarding School. He began his active career in the produce business at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, residing at Colora, Cecil county, Maryland, where he continued until 1881. In that year he changed his place of residence to Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he purchased a farm of one hundred and thirty-six acres of rich and productive land, and since then has been successfully engaged in farming industries. By his integrity of character and high standard of principles, he has gained the respect and esteem of his fellow-citizens.

Mr. Balderston was united in marriage, 3 mo., 17, 1881, to Anna E. Marshall, who was born 3 mo., 25, 1856, a daughter of William and Martha (Walter) Marshall. Mr. Marshall was a resident of Kennett township, engaged extensively in agricultural pursuits, and his death occurred 10 mo., 1883. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Balderston are: Robert W., born 6 mo., 25, 1882; C. Canby, born 2 mo., 1, 1897. They are both unmarried and reside at home with their parents.

JOSEPH J. WALTER, an energetic and and public-spirited citizen of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has been prominently identified during his entire business career with the material progress and prosperity of Kennett township, is a son of James and Rebecca (Taylor) Walter, and was born in Kennett township, Chester county, July 11, 1843. James Walter (father) was born in 1802, and died in January, 1844; his wife, Rebecca (Taylor) Walter, died in 1894, aged about eighty-one years. Both were members of the Society of Friends, and spent their lives in Kennett township.

Joseph J. Walter acquired his preliminary education in the common schools of Kennett Square, and subsequently entered Myers Academy at West Chester, from which he was graduated after pursuing the regular course of study. Having decided to take up farming as his life work, he purchased a farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres of choice ground in the township of Kennett, and has since devoted his time and attention to the improvement and cultivation of the same. In the management of his farm he is practical and progressive, being what is termed a model farmer, and his broad acres attest what can be accomplished by intelligent and improved methods. There are several fine greenhouses erected on his property, which are being conducted at the present time (1903) by his son, Charles Walter. In politics Mr. Walter is a strong Republican, and gives an active support to his party on all the great political issues of the day. He has refused several local offices, preferring to devote his time strictly to his business pursuits, which are both extensive and profitable.

Mr. Walter was united in marriage, October 16, 1865, to Miss Caroline Davis, born March 27, 1842, a daughter of Hibberd and Elizabeth (Osborne) Davis, the former named a prosperous farmer of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: 1. Elizabeth R., born August 4, 1867; she is a graduate of the State Normal School of West Chester Pennsylvania, and at present is engaged in teaching in Delavan, Illinois; 2. James, born November 15, 1868, married Miss Ella Thompson, a daughter of Joshua and Annie (Stackhouse) Thompson, and their children are: Helen, Mary, Joseph, Anna, Thompson and Phillips Walter; 3. H. Davis, born September 2, 1870, now a resident of Chicago, Illinois; 4. William O., born May 27, 1872; 5. Isabella S., born September 16, 1875; 6. Charles D., born February 1, 1878; 7. John C., born June 13, 1879; 8. Frank P., born March 7, 1881; 9. Chester A., born April 10, 1885. Mr. and Mrs. Walter are birthright members of the Friends Meeting.

JOHN ELLWOOD WORRALL, proprietor of a large general establishment at Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, a son of Richard and Mary Ann (Wilson) Worrall, was born in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, May 2, 1841. It is supposed that the name Worrall, or Worrell, was originally spelled Warel, and that those bearing it are descended from Sir Hubert de Warel, whose three sons were killed at the battle of Hastings, upon which spot William the Conqueror first landed in England. Among the early ancestors of the family were Richard and John Worrall, doubtless relatives, who came to America on the ship "Welcome," from Oare, Berkshire, England, in 1682, and arrived at Philadelphia a short time before the proprietary. They were both members of the Society of Friends, joined the same meeting in Philadelphia, and Richard Worrall suffered some persecution on account of his religion as early as the year 1670.

John Worrall, grandfather of John Ellwood Worrall, married for his first wife Eliza Pangoast, and after her decease was united in marriage to Hannah Thatcher, who bore him the following named children: Peter; Edith, who became the wife of George Lewis; John, who married Sarah Lewis; Richard, who married Mary Ann Wilson; Hannah, who was united in marriage to John Ogden; Sarah, who was the wife of Samuel Garrett; Rachel, who married Levi Garrett, and Abigail, who became the wife of Lewis Garrett.

Richard Worrall, father of John Ellwood

Worrall, and third son of John and Hannah Worrall, was born about the year 1800. He was a prominent citizen of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, where he was actively associated with the various enterprises that tended to promote the welfare and advancement of the community. He married Mary Ann Wilson, daughter of Thomas and Ann (Nield) Wilson, and they became the parents of five children, namely: Hannah, born in 1830, wife of John Hill, Jr., and three children were born to them: R. Worrall, Mary, and Lewis, deceased. 2 Sarah, born about the year 1832, became the wife of Jacob Hibbard and motner of the following named children: Bertha R., John and Elwood, deceased. 3. Wilson, born in 1835, married Nellie Budd. 4. Ann Eliza, born October 25, 1838, unmarried. 5. John Ellwood, born May 2, 1841.

John E. Worrall, youngest son of Richard and Mary Ann (Wilson) Worrall, was reared to manhood and acquired his education in the common schools of Delaware county. He was engaged in various pursuits in that section of the state until 1881, when he removed to Kennett Square, Chester county, purchased property from his father-in-law, Sharpless Worrall, and established a general store which he is conducting at the present time (1903). He has a large and lucrative trade, retaining his customers from year to year, and this fact is due to the uniform kindness and courtesy extended to all the patrons by Mr. Worrall and his employes. In the local affairs of the township Mr. Worrall is active and influential, and he also keeps in touch with the political movements of the day. He is a prominent member of the (Hicksite) Society of Friends.

On September 10, 1863, Mr. Worrall married Anna Mary Worrall, who was born September 10, 1842, the daughter of Sharpless and Abigail (Thatcher) Worrall. Their children are: Richard T., born May 8, 1865, married April 29, 1902, Mary Wilkinson, of Philadelphia, and has one child, Lillie Ella, born June 22, 1903; Ella R., born April 7, 1867, became the wife of Thomas T. Worth in 1889; Sharpless, born June 5, 1870, married April 4, 1895, Belle Farron, and has one child, Anna Mary, born April 24, 1900; Howard W., born October 10, 1873; and Ellwood P., born July 17, 1882. Anna Mary Worrall, the mother of this family, died September 19, 1899.

JOSEPH TOWNSEND MENDENHALL, deceased, who, during his entire business career, was prominently identified with the agricultural interests of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a lineal descendant of one of three brothers, John, Benjamin and George Mendenhall, who came from England with William Penn in 1682. After a brief sojourn in this country, George returned to his native land. John settled in Chester county, and Benjamin took up his residence in Concord township, Delaware county. They came from Mildenhall, in Wiltshire, England, which was formerly the family name.

Joseph Townsend Mendenhall was born in Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 31, 1852, a son of Joseph Robinson and Hannah (Taylor) Mendenhall. The father was a farmer by occupation, and spent the active years of his life near Mendenhall Station, in Kennett township. He was a successful farmer, and was a man of good reputation and probity of character. He and his wife were consistent members of the Society of Friends. By their marriage they became the parents of the following named children: 1. Priscilla, who married Alfred Mendenhall; 2. William Taylor, who married Hannah Way; 3. Ann Eliza, who married Milton Mendenhall; 4 and 5. Joseph Townsend and Hannah Mary, who were twins; the latter married Isaac Webb and is at present the only surviving member of these children, and both parents are deceased, having died the same year.

Joseph Townsend Mendenhall received his educational advantages in the schools of Kennett Square and the Millersville State Normal School in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. After acquiring the excellent education afforded by these institutions of learning, Mr. Mendenhall devoted his attention to farming in his native township and assiduously applied himself to this industry up to the time of his death. His farm consisted of eighty-five acres of rich, fertile land devoted to the cultivation of a general line of farming, and by his thrift, perseverance and careful management, he was enabled to leave his family at the time of his decease (December 13, 1902), a comfortable home and a goodly competence. Politically Mr. Mendenhall was an adherent of the Republican party, and fraternally he was affiliated with the Improved Order of Red Men. During his life time Mr. Mendenhall held the regard and esteem of the community, and his demise was sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends and acquaintances who had known him from childhood to manhood.

May 30, 1872, Mr. Mendenhall married Lydia Merrick, who was born February 6, 1853, a daughter of Henderson and Eleanor (Graham) Merrick, the former named being engaged as a drover at Longwood, East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The children of Joseph Townsend and Lydia (Merrick) Mendenhall were: 1. Ellen H., born February 28, 1873; she married Joseph Lancaster, of Pennsbury township, Chester county, and has children, Nathan Dallas, Lydia Eleanor, Fred Mendenhall, Mary Adelaide, Anna and Joseph; 2. Annie Elizabeth, born August 27, 1874; she is at present a clerk in the Kennett Square National Bank; 3. Robert Townsend, born December 21, 1875; 4. William Alfred, born February 5, 1878; he died October 4, 1895; 5. Mabel M., born March 9, 1880; 6. Lillian Farrar, born June 23, 1882; 7. Henderson Merrick, born July 19, 1885, now a student at the West Chester State Normal School.

SAMUEL JONES PHILIPS, an energetic, useful and public-spirited citizen of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he is actively associated with many of the leading enterprises, was born July 26, 1861, and is the only surviving son of David and Tamsen (Morris) Philips.

The pioneer ancestor of the family was Joseph Philips, who was born in Wales in 1716, and emigrated to this country in 1755, accompanied by his wife, Mary, who was born in 1710, and their three children, David, John and Josiah. A fourth child, Joseph, was born after their arrival in the United States. Their first place of residence was near the present town of West Chester, but they subsequently removed to Uwchlan, where a farm was purchased and a log house erected. Mr. Philips was a weaver by trade, and as his business increased he hired more room, until finally he was the owner of three shops with three looms in each shop. He was a man of medium height, portly in appearance, spoke his native language, Welsh, and lived with the simplicity which prevailed in those days. For many years he was a member of the Great Valley Baptist church, thirteen miles distant from his home, but in 1771 the Vincent Baptist church was organized, and they became members of that body. Of their children, David and Joseph settled near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, David going later to Tennessee; John, removed late in life to Atglen, Chester county, and Josiah remained on the old homestead. Joseph Philips, the father of these children, died May 18, 1792, and his wife, Mary Philips, died December 26, 1792.

Josiah Philips, great-grandfather of S. Jones Philips, spent the early years of his life in attendance at the district schools and assisting with the work upon the home farm at Uwchlan. Here he remained after the death of his parents, and continued his connection with agricultural pursuits. He was a man of deep piety and fidelity to convictions, and by his exemplary life and character won the esteem and good will of his friends and neighbors. Mr. Philips was united in marriage to Martha Edwards and their children were:

David, John and Josiah Philips. After the death of the mother of these children, Mr. Philips chose for his second wife Sarah Thomas, and their children were: Joseph, Owen, Martha, Mary, Sarah, and Hannah, born March 6, 1802. Mr. Philips died March 1, 1817, aged sixty-six years.

Owen Philips, grandfather of S. Jones Philips, born September 7, 1789, acquired a common school education, and after reaching man's estate engaged in farming in East Nantmeal. He took a keen interest in political affairs, and was an adherent of the Republican party. He also devoted considerable time and attention to religious matters, being one of the organizers of the East Nantmeal Baptist church, in which he served as a member of the board of deacons for many years. By his marriage to Rachel Evans, who was born June 24, 1792, the following named children were born: Jesse (1), born January 4, 1816, died in April, 1895; Josiah (2), born September 10, 1817, died February 8, 1889; Milton (3), born September 25, 1819, died in early childhood; Lewis (4), born February 27, 1822; David (5), born September 8, 1824; Joseph (6), born September 25, 1827, died January 2, 1901; Charles M. (7), born August August 25, 1829; Sarah Anna (8), born December 7, 1831; Owen Thomas (9), born February 21, 1834, and Abner E. (10), born March 8, 1840.

David Philips, father of S. Jones Philips, was born in East Nantmeal, Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1824. He obtained his literary education in the common schools of the neighborhood. In 1845 he began teaching at Warwick, in Warwick township, and taught successfully until 1854. During this time he taught about five years at the school of his brother, Jesse E. Philips, in East Nantmeal township. In 1854 he established an academy in Pughtown, where he successfully taught until 1863, when he removed to Mahanoy City, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in the stationery trade, and also served as postmaster for ten years. After continuing his business there until 1875, he removed with his family to North Wales, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and there taught school about three years. He taught a commercial academy at Providence, Rhode Island, for a brief period. In 1880 he removed to Reading, Berks county, Pennsylvania, and there conducted the sale of standard historical works, residing there until 1885, when he removed to Kennett Square, where he has since been identified with his sons in the manufacture of road machinery, including rock crushers and road scrapers. Mr. Philips was twice married, his first wife having been Tamsen Morris, and the children born of this union were: Arthur Allen, who died in early youth; William Sumner, who died in childhood, and Samuel Jones. Mr. Philips' second wife, Sarah Amole, born November 1, 1830, bore him the following named children: 1. Edwin Stanton, born January 14, 1864, married (October 5, 1892), Martha Yost, and their children are: Roland and Ruth Philips; 2. Jessie May, born June 13, 1866, who became the wife of Morris P. Smith, October 7, 1891; they have one child, Ralph P. Smith; 3. George Owen, born September 14, 1868, now deceased; 4. Annie Tustin, born April 10, 1871, married (June 1, 1893), Howard H. Polk, son of Robert and Mary Polk; they are the parents of one child, Howard Wayne Polk, born October 8, 1898.

S. Jones Philips, only surviving child of David and Tamsen (Morris) Philips, acquired a practical education in the district schools, and after completing his studies became interested in several enterprises in Kennett Square. Since 1883 he has served in the capacity of secretary and treasurer of the American Road Machine Company, is treasurer of the Kennett Button Manufacturing Company, treasurer and vice-president of the Kennett Advance Publishing Company, manager and treasurer of the Good Roads Machinery Company, and he also served as director in each and all of these companies. Mr. Philips is successful in all his business transactions, active and influential in political affairs, serving at the present time (1903) as town councilman, and is popular and useful as a citizen and a man.

On January 24, 1883, Mr. Philips married Martha Voorhees, born August 11, 1861, a daughter of Jacob and Sarah E. Voorhees, the former named being born November 6, 1832. Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees are the parents of the following named children: J. Frank, Martha, Elizabeth, Laura, died in infancy; William E., Jane, John H., Bertha, and Walter J. Voorhees. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Philips, namely: Ralph J., born January 14, 1884, died January 21, 1885; D. Leon, March 27, 1886, and Earl S., born May 2, 1892.

Mr. Philips is a member of a family that has been noted for many centuries for its longevity, its deep religious sentiments, and its intellectual attainments. From 1797 to the present time (1903) it has been a race of teachers, having furnished college professors, principals of academies and seminaries, and teachers of all grades. In their religious sentiments they are almost all of the Baptist faith and doctrines.

MISS LYDIA C. SKELTON. The Skelton family, prominently and actively associated with the best interests of Kennett Square and southern Chester county, Pennsylvania, trace their ancestry back to Patrick and Margaret (Mc-

(Clare) Skelton, who resided near Downingtown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. They were married December 13, 1737, and about June 15, 1744, Patrick Skelton purchased a tract of land in East Caln township, Chester county. He followed farming as an occupation during the years of his active life. He died February 8, 1780, and his wife, Margaret, died January 28, 1760. Alexander, a son of Patrick and Margaret Skelton, who was born November 11, 1738, married Rachel Maris, August 17, 1761, at the old Swedes' church, Wilmington, Delaware. Alexander Skelton died March 19, 1798, and his wife, who was born April 7, 1739, died July 19, 1820. She was the daughter of John and Katherine (Hayden) Maris. Among the children of Alexander and Rachel (Maris) Skelton, was a son, Aaron, born October 8, 1767, through whose marriage to Mary, daughter of Michael and Susanna (Carlton) Harlan, they became the parents of the following named children: Thomas, born October 10, 1794, died in infancy; Lydia, born September 9, 1796, married January 12, 1823, John Commons, and her death occurred November 9, 1825; Isaac, born April 6, 1799, married Rebecca Davis in 1830; Eli, born August 14, 1802, died July 19, 1828; Lewis, born June 28, 1804, father of Lydia C. Skelton; Aaron, born December 20, 1806, died in infancy; Rachel, born August 29, 1808, died in infancy; Susanna, born October 15, 1809, died May 22, 1847; Mary, born November 27, 1812, died in infancy, and Ann, born June 18, 1814, died June 18, 1834.

Lewis M. Skelton, father of Miss Lydia C. Skelton, and fourth son of Aaron and Mary (Harlan) Skelton, was born June 28, 1804, and married, January 14, 1851, Hannah Baily Wickersham, who was born August 8, 1816, daughter of Joel and Lydia (Pusey) Wickersham. They took up their residence in New Garden township, Chester county, where the following named children were born to them; Lydia C., born December 8, 1851, in New Garden township, Chester county, unmarried; Lewis M., Jr., born November 1, 1853, died September 8, 1870; and Edward W., born October 24, 1855, who married at Avondale, Chester county, March 26, 1879, Margaret Brinton, who was born in Hartford county, Maryland, March 17, 1860, a daughter of Weldon and Anna (Gilpin) Brinton. Their children are: Lillian G., born March 8, 1880; Harry Lewis, born March 30, 1882; Percy Brinton, born October 17, 1891; Joel Wickersham, born April 28, 1896, and Ruth Catharine Skelton, born December 7, 1898. Edward W. Skelton is engaged as a farmer and florist at Avondale, Pennsylvania, and is a member of the London Grove Meeting. Lewis Skelton, father of these children, passed away December 6, 1857, survived by his widow and children.

JOSHUA JEFFERIS. The Jefferis family widely dispersed throughout the country, in its various lines is represented by those who give the name in the various forms of Jefferis, Jefferies, and Jeffreys. The first would appear to be the original form, and is that preserved by the Chester county line to the present day.

The progenitor of the Jefferis family in America was Robert Jefferis, who is first mentioned as witness in a court held in Chester in September, 1685. In 1691 he purchased sixty acres of land near the middle of Upper Chichester township, where he probably lived for some years, then selling it and removed to East Bradford township, where he had bought one hundred and sixty-nine acres. In 1721 he bought also one hundred and eighty-nine acres from William Buffington. In 1733 he conveyed the homestead to his son Benjamin, reserving a life estate, and divided his other lands among his sons. He was twice married—first, to Jane, daughter of George and Jane Chandler, and (second) to Ann, whose family name is unknown.

To Robert and Jane Jefferis were born the following children: 1. Patience, who married Henry Betterton; 2. Charity, who married John Evans, and (second) John Cope; 3. William, who married Elizabeth (Ring) Neild; 4. James, further referred to hereinafter; 5. Robert, who married Eleanor ———, and (second) Elizabeth Harper; 6. George, who married Lydia ———; 7. Jane, who married Joseph Skeen; 8. Anne, who married Alexander Duncan; 9. Mary, who married Thomas Temple; 10. Benjamin, who married Elizabeth Carter; 11. Thomas; 12. John.

James (2) son of Robert (1) and Jane Jefferis, married Elizabeth, widow of George Carter, of East Bradford, and settled on the Carter homestead at Jefferis' Ford, on the west side of the Brandywine. His father conveyed to him a tract of land on the east side of the creek, and he purchased of the Worth family one hundred and fifty acres on the west side. He became a member of Birmingham Meeting in 1738, and was appointed an overseer in 1743. He died in 1745, and his wife survived him many years. Their children were James; Abigail, who married Thomas Williamson, and Emmor.

James (3), eldest son of James (2) and Elizabeth Jefferis, was born November 20, 1728, and died in 1807. He inherited his father's lands on the east side of the Brandywine. He married, December 23, 1749, Ann, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Cheyney, of Thornbury; she was born February 21, 1727-8, and died at upwards of seventy-six years. Their children were: 1. Mary, born 9 mo., 9, 1750, who married Thomas Hickman; 2. Emmor, born 1 mo., 18, 1752, died 10 mo., 8, 1822; he married Rachel Grubb; 3. Betty, born 3 mo., 17, 1755, died 1 mo., 5, 1838, unmarried; 4. Hannah, born 10 mo., 19, 1757, married Moses Hickman; 5. Jane, born 10 mo., 7, 1759, died 3 mo., 16, 1849; 6. Cheyney, further named below; 7. Jacob, born 9 mo., 26, 1764, died 11 mo., 20, 1840; he married Elizabeth Cope; 8. Ann, born 9 mo., 24, 1767, died 6 mo., 5, 1768.

Cheyney (4), son of James (3) and Elizabeth Jefferis, was born 4 mo., 26, 1762, and died 4 mo., 6, 1838. He learned the hatter's trade, but became a farmer. He purchased a farm adjoining that of his father on the east. He married, 11 mo., 26, 1790, Mary Bennett, born 11 mo., 29, 1762, died 9 mo., 2, 1807, daughter of James and Hannah Bennett, of Pennsbury. The children born of this marriage were: Hannah, who married John James; James; Titus; Cheyney; Mary, who married James Bennett; and Edith. Cheyney Jefferis (4) married (second) 3 mo., 22, 1810, Martha, born 4 mo., 27, 1775, died 4 mo., 30, 1854, daughter of Joshua and Edith Sharpless. The children born of this marriage were: Edith, 2 mo., 21, 1811, died 4 mo., 14, 1843; Ann, who married Moses Sheppard; Lydia, Martha, and Joshua.

Joshua (5), youngest and now the only surviving child of Cheyney (4) and Martha (Sharpless) Jefferis, was born in East Bradford township, March 30, 1820. He was educated in the neighborhood schools, and soon after finishing his studies he went to live with his uncle Benjamin Sharpless, with whom he resided almost five years. In 1842 he settled in New Garden township, where he purchased a farm upon which he has since resided. By close observation of nature, rational methods and persistent industry he has made the property one of the most attractive and productive tracts in the Chester valley. A man of great energy and public spirit, during his long and active life he has accomplished much for the development and prosperity of the region. He has rendered public service in various important positions, and has held the offices of constable and assessor. He was reared in the Society of Friends, and has ever lived an irreproachable life, but he was "read out of meeting" during the rebellion for paying taxes for the prosecution of the war. He was formerly a Whig and an anti-slavery man, and became a Republican when that party was formed. He is man of sterling personal character, one of whom it has always been truthfully said that "his word is as good as a government bond." His sympathies for the unfortunate and suffering are ever warm, and his benevolences have been many and generous.

Mr. Jefferis was married, 5 mo., 11, 1842, at Birmingham Meeting to Rachel Hoopes, born 3 mo., 3, 1814, a daughter of Abraham and Sidney (Jones) Hoopes, of East Goshen township, and the following named children were born to them:

1. Edward, born 7 mo., 11, 1843, and died 2 mo., 27, 1847.

2. William L., born 4 mo., 17, 1845. He married Mary Elizabeth Bullock, daughter of George and Ruth Ann (Pyle) Bullock, and their children were Bertha R. and Joseph B. Jefferis.

3. Thomas K., born 4 mo., 23, 1847, a farmer in New Garden township. He married Angelina Thomas, daughter of John W. and Angelina (Thompson) Thomas, and their children were J. Walter, Ethel Philena and Homer Hoopes Jefferis.

4. Charles S., born 11 mo., 23, 1849. He married Anna C. Drake, and their children were Edna, Percy, Noel, Ada and Marion.

5. Edwin, born 1 mo., 25, 1854, farmer of New Garden township, who married Jennie Hoopes.

6. Walker, born 4 mo., 16, 1858, who died a few days after birth.

Thomas and Edwin Jefferis, who are farmers of New Garden township, are both excellent, industrious and progressive citizens, who strive to be of benefit to the community in all ways conducive to the public good.

JOHN FAHEY, JR. The career of John Fahey, Jr., a representative citizen of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, stands in evidence of the fact that he possesses all the attributes that lead to success in the business world—energy, strict integrity, exactness and thoroughness.

John Fahey, Jr., is a son of John B. and Margaret (Burke) Fahey, both born in Ireland. John B. Fahey came to America as a youth, and found employment in Kennett township, where he met his wife. Their children were: Edward, who married Mary E. Gillen; John, Jr., mentioned at the beginning of this article; Thomas, who died in childhood; James H., who married Catherine Kelleher; Annie E., who married Robert Craven; Mary, who became the wife of John Keating; Michael, who died at the age of four years; William J.; Margaret, who died in infancy.

John Fahey, Jr., was born in Coatesville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in December, 1859, and obtained a practical education in the public schools of Kennett township, having removed there with his parents about 1863. After completing his educational training he pursued farming up to 1883, when he became engaged with his brother, James H. Fahey, in partnership with Israel Durham in the operation of a flouring mill, and for several years applied himself assiduously to the directing and managing of this enterprise. In 1898 Mr. Fahey, in association with his brother, James Fahey, purchased the mill which they now conduct, and by showing a clear understanding of the details of the business they have attained an enviable reputation in commercial circles and enjoy an extensive patronage. The mill possesses an historic interest from the fact that Bayard Taylor describes it in his story of "Kennett" as the rendezvous of the famous Sandy Flash. Politically Mr. Fahey is a firm adherent of the principles of the Democratic party, to which he has always given his hearty support and co-operation. He is prominently affiliated with the Ancient Order of Hibernians, in which organization he takes a keen and active interest.

Mr. Fahey was united in marriage, April 18, 1900, to Elizabeth Dorsey, who was born November 20, 1872, and is a daughter of Frank and Bridget (Carroll) Dorsey, both natives of Ireland. For a number of years they were residents of West Chester, Pennsylvania, where they were reared and educated. They became the parents of nine children: William T., Frank Emmett, Carroll A., Elizabeth A. (Mrs. John Fahey), Lewis G., Archibald C., Florence M., Charles L., deceased, and Alfred A. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fahey—Florence M., born June 13, 1901, and Elizabeth, born June 11, 1903. The family are devout and consistent members of the Roman Catholic church of Kennett township, and contribute liberally to the support of the various societies connected with it.

ISAAC D. JOHNSON, M. D., a well known and eminent medical practitioner of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who was engaged in active practice in that vicinity for almost a half century, was born in Elkview, Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 10, 1827, the son of John P. and Hannah (Pillar) Johnson.

John Johnson, great-grandfather of Dr. Isaac D. Johnson, traced his origin to an English ancestry, but whether he was born in England or America has never been fully established. The first absolutely certain record in regard to him was that as a resident of Buckingham township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, "At a Monthly Meeting held ye 7th of ye Mo., 1741, John Johnson requested by an overseer that he might be taken under the care of this meeting as a member thereof, which said request this meeting takes into consideration." The minutes of said meeting also show that "At a Monthly Meeting held 2d of ye 9th Mo., 1741, the request of John Johnson by a former minute came under consideration and things appearing well on his account, therefore the meeting accepted of him as a member so far as his life and conversation agree with the Truth he makes profession of." The minutes of Buckingham Monthly Meeting further show that after due formality said John Johnson and Lydia Canby, daughter of Thomas Canby, both being members of Buckingham Monthly Meeting, were married in said meeting on the 2 mo., 12, 1754, having a son Jonathan and a daughter Ann. Lydia (Canby) Johnson was a daughter of Thomas Canby, of Buckingham township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and was the youngest member of a family of seventeen children. Thomas Canby was a son of Benjamin Canby, of Thorn, Yorkshire, England. Thomas was a resident of Walton, in Lancashire, England, and came to this country with his uncle Henry Baker and his family on the same ship in which William Penn made his second voyage to America. The name of the ship was "Vine of Liverpool," and with William Preson as captain they sailed from Dolgelly in Merionethshire, Wales, and arrived at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 7 mo., 17, 1683, this fact being recorded in the Library of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. Thomas Canby was but sixteen years of age when he came to this country, but he subsequently became one of the leading men of his day. He founded the Buckingham Friends Meeting in 1701, and he and his descendants were the clerks of said meeting for more than one hundred years. He was a member of the colonial assembly in 1721-22-30-33-38, and served as justice of the peace and of the courts of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, being elected December 12, 1719, January 4, 1722, May 12, 1725, each time for three years. He was recommissioned September 13, 1725, September 13, 1726, September 12, 1727, December 1, 1733, November 22, 1738, and his having held said official positions renders his male descendants eligible to membership in the Society of Colonial Wars, and the female descendants to membership in the Society of Colonial Dames.

Jonathan Johnson, only son of John and Lydia Johnson, and grandfather of Dr. Isaac D. Johnson, married Hannah Pickering, who was a daughter of John Pickering and granddaughter of Samuel Pickering, in the Buckingham Monthly Meeting on the 6 mo., 18, 1778, and their four children were all members of the Society of Friends.

John Pickering Johnson, father of Dr. Isaac D. Johnson, was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1797. He received his education in the common schools of the vicinity, after which he learned the trade of shoemaker. He was a bright member of the Society of Friends, and politically he was an adherent of the Whig party. During his residence in his native neighborhood of Buckingham he was elected to the office of constable, and during his tenure of this position he became addicted to the drink habit, which afterward ruined his prospects in life, kept him in penury and precluded his children from any educational advantages except those of the most meagre description. In 1819 he removed to New London, Chester county, where he resided for the remainder of his life. He was united in marriage to Hannah Pillar, daughter of James Pillar, a prosperous agriculturist of Bucks county. Their children were: Lydia, wife of Stephen Townsend, of Penn township; Mary, wife of Euclides P. Skelton, of Bucks county; Sarah, wife of John Holcomb, of Lancaster county; Merab, wife of Samuel Miller, and Henry Paxson, of Lancaster county; Jonathan; John; Jesse, a resident of Cochranville; Phineas, a citizen of Oxford, Isaac D., a physician of Kennett Square; Hannah, wife of Pierson Holcomb Colerain, of Lancaster county, and Henry H., of York, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Isaac D. Johnson attended the winter sessions of the country district school until he attained his eighteenth year, when he was apprenticed to Allen Gawthrop, who resided near West Grove, to learn the trade of cabinet maker. At the expiration of one year Mr. Gawthrop gave up the cabinet business and engaged in the manufacturing of hydraulic rams, and realizing that young Isaac was somewhat of an expert with tools he engaged him to assist in the new enterprise. He worked at a lathe on piece work, and by scrupulous economy was enabled to save about two hundred dollars in the course of a year. This he resolved to spend in procuring a better education, and in the spring of 1847 he entered Whitestown Seminary, Oneida county, New York, where he remained for two years. During the summer vacations he worked for the farmers in the harvest field, mowing, making hay, raking and binding wheat, and in this manner accumulated more capital to pay for his tuition. While a student at this school an epidemic of typhoid fever broke out, and Dr. Johnson and Joseph Brosius, of Octoraro, Chester county, Pennsylvania, went to the Graefenburg Hydropathic Institution and offered their services in the nursing of the patients. While performing this work Mr. Johnson became much interested in medicine, and decided to devote his life to that calling; the head physician of that institution was a representative of the then new school of Homeopathy. In 1850 Mr. Johnson went to Wilmington and read medicine with Dr. Caleb Harlan and was graduated two years later at the old Homeopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania, which was situated in Filbert street, Philadelphia. This course was pursued under the most straightened economy; two small rooms used for bedroom and study were rented at a small figure and used in company with Smith Armor, his life-long friend and now a prominent physician of Columbia, Pennsylvania, and here they lived on fifty-three cents each per week, bread and molasses and roasted potatoes being their principal diet; but they made an occasional visit to an eating house at Third and Market streets, where roast beef with vegetables could be had for twelve and one-half cents.

Directly after his graduation, Dr. Johnson located for one year at Jemmersville, after which he practiced his profession for one year in Wilmington, and on March 25, 1855, took up his residence in Kennett Square, where he remained in active practice until 1900. Being a homeopathic physician he met with much bitter opposition at first, but after overcoming this prejudice he built up an extensive practice covering a wide territory and including a circuit of from fifteen to twenty miles. He has always believed in the "law of cure" laid down by Hahnemann, and has been strictly averse to electricism in his practice. For the medical fads of the past decade he holds a genuine contempt, and early in his practice he discarded the use of alcohol as a medicine, maintaining that it is useless as a therapeutic agent and productive of more evil than good. He has always had a lifelong antipathy to the use of liquors; as a small boy, he recalls with repugnance his having to go to "jug-town" to procure drink for his father and then see him sodden and irritable or abusive to his mother and the children. So deep colored was this picture upon his memory that when a mere child of seven years he promised his mother that he would never drink whiskey, and from that day to this he has never tasted intoxicating liquor. He is also opposed to the use of tobacco, and wrote several essays showing its injurious effect on mind and body, declaring that no one can be at his best who uses this weed. Dr. Johnson is a natural genius and "can make anything," as he has often been heard to say, "in either wood or iron." He has taken out several patents on inventions, and is much interested in such mechanical pursuits, but has never placed any of his inventions upon the market. In 1871 he published a work on medical practice entitled "A Therapeutic Key," which had a remarkable sale, passing through sixteen editions; the publishers, Boericke & Tafel, of Philadelphia, claim it has had a wider sale than any other book on their shelves, and it is still on the market. "A Guide to Homeopathic Practice" (a domestic work), published in 1879, also met with wide demand and it has been translated into French and German; this book was pronounced by his late preceptor, Dr. C. Harlan, of Wilmington, Delaware, to be the best work of its kind in homeopathic literature. In 1889 he published "Counsel to Parents," which is still on sale.

After a membership of twenty-five years in the American Institute of Homeopathy, Dr. Johnson was made an honorary member of the organization. He is also a member of the Homeopathic Medical Society of Chester, Delaware and Montgomery counties, but has not attended the meetings for several years. Dr. Johnson cast his first vote for John C. Fremont, and was an ardent Republican up to the Benjamin Harrison campaign, when he allied himself with the Prohibitionists, but, opposing the "one issue" platform of that party, he voted for William J. Bryan in both campaigns under that standard bearer, and has since been independent in his political obligations.

On March 17, 1853, Dr. Johnson married Susannah T. Walton, of Ercildoun, Chester county, Pennsylvania, daughter of Abner and Lydia N. Walton, of Highland township. Mrs. Johnson was educated in the public schools of her native locality and afterward spent two or three years at Whitestown Seminary, Oneida, New York. She subsequently taught Naylor's System of Geography in a number of places throughout Chester and Lancaster counties previous to her marriage. Her death occurred December 3, 1895, at the age of sixty-eight years. Their children are: Laura E., born in Kennett Square, April 21, 1859, and Maude, born in Kennett Square, November 12, 1860, wife of William Davis, a native of Richmond, Virginia, but for the past twenty years a resident of Kennett Square, where he is engaged as a grape grower.

JOSEPH R. GAWTHROP, son of James and Sarah R. (Ridgway) Gawthrop, is a descendant on both the paternal and maternal sides from ancient and honorable families, each of whom possessed a coat-of-arms which are still preserved and the authenticity attested by the records in possession of the family in Chester county, Pennsylvania. The Gawthrop family trace their lineage to Lord Gawthrop, a native of England, some of his descendants having arrived in Philadelphia early in the eighteenth century, and subsequently settled in Chester county. The Ridgway family are direct descendants of Sir Thomas Ridgway, of county Down, Ireland, whose son, Sir Thomas, Knight, founded the first Protestant colony in that country. The second Sir Thomas Ridgway, who was engaged in a military capacity under Queen Elizabeth, was the first Earl of Londonderry, and his descendant, Richard Ridgway, accompanied by his wife and son Thomas Ridgway, arrived in the Delaware river on board the ship "Jacob and Mary" in July, 1679, and settled in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

James Gawthrop, father of Joseph R. Gaw-

36 x

throp, was born January 14, 1825, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, a son of James and Hannah (Marshall) Gawthrop. He acquired a liberal education in that excellent institution of learning, Jonathan Gause's Academy, and at a seminary in New York state. He was prominently identified with various enterprises, being first engaged in agricultural pursuits, later in the buying and selling of live stock and finally as a manufacturer of fertilizer, the latter business being conducted at Kennett Square. His religious sympathies were in accord with the faith of the Hicksite Friends, and his political views were in consonance with the principles of the Republican party. On February 15, 1849, at the home of the bride, corner of Tenth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Mr. Gawthrop married Sarah Ridgway, who was born in Philadelphia, October 20, 1826, a daughter of Joseph and Esther (Coates) Ridgway. Sarah (Ridgway) Gawthrop died March 3, 1883, and James Gawthrop died June 6, 1888.

The children of James and Sarah (Ridgway) Gawthrop are as follows: Joseph R., whose name introduces this review; Mary H., born July 9, 1851; she married William W. Gawthrop, of Kennett Square; she died March 30, 1885, without issue; Harry J., born January 14, 1856; he married Alice Worrall and they have children, Howard, Frederick, Norman and Sarah; Charles G., born January 16, 1864; he married Louisa Hickman, and has children surviving, Harold and Mary.

Joseph R. Gawthrop was born in Newlin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, May 16, 1850. His preliminary education was obtained in the public schools of Unionville and at Shortlidge's Academy in Kennett Square, after which he entered the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College, from which institution he was graduated in 1872 with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. He then pursued a civil engineering course, and after becoming thoroughly qualified in this branch of study, served as a civil engineer for the city of New Haven, Connecticut, for a number of years. In 1876 he located in Kennett Square, Chester county, entered into business with his father in the manufacture of fertilizer, and upon the death of the latter assumed the entire charge of the plant, which he is successfully operating at the present time (1903). Mr. Gawthrop is a thoroughly progressive and enterprising man, and the liberal patronage he enjoys is the well merited reward of years and constant application to business.

Politically Mr. Gawthrop is a Republican, having always advocated the principles of that party, and he has served as a member of the borough council. He is a prominent member of the Yale Alumni Association of Philadelphia and the University Club of Philadelphia, taking an active interest in the transactions of both organizations.

Mr. Gawthrop was united in marriage February 20, 1879, to Miss Hattie Mason, a daughter of George William and Mary Elizabeth (Howland) Mason, both of New Haven, Connecticut. The children of their marriage are: Ridgway M., Elsie L., Lillian M. and Rosalie H. Gawthrop. Mr. Gawthrop holds membership in the Society of Friends.

ALBERT GREEN PEIRCE, one of the leading and successful farmers of Westtown township, who resides upon a farm which has been in his family for one hundred years or since 1802, was born upon this property, December 14, 1854, and he is a son of Richardson and Sarah (Bullock) Peirce.

The family ancestry is traced as follows: The great-grandparents of our subject were Henry and Mary Peirce and John and Hannah Richardson. The first named had a son, William, and he married Hannah Richardson May 9, 1793. William Peirce was born July 11, 1765, and died April 7, 1837, and his wife was born April 22, 1765, and died April 7, 1821. Their family was as follows: Eliza Peirce, born June 3, 1794, died September 4, 1865, married Thomas Henderson on May 16, 1822; Richardson, born December 26, 1796, died April 7, 1875, married Sarah Bullock, born February 3, 1812, died October 4, 1901; Lewis, born October 4, 1799, died April 10, 1844, married Sidney Faucett, March 3, 1825; Ruth, born April 7, 1802, died October 14, 1880; John R., born May 27, 1805.

Richardson and Sarah (Bullock) Peirce, parents of our subject, had these children, viz.: Ruthanna, born November 19, 1835, married, February 9, 1859, the Rev. Joseph S. Evans, and they have had six children; Eliza Hannah, born March 3, 1838, married January 15, 1857, William Underwood, and they have seven children; William Bullock, born February 9, 1840, married, December 25, 1875, Esther Woodward, who died November 12, 1888, no issue; Lewis C., born April 21, 1841, died July 2, 1862; Mary Jane, born March 11, 1843, died June 26, 1860; John R., born December 26, 1844, married, January 26, 1870, Margaretta F. Moore, and they have three children; Richardson H., born October 31, 1850, married, December 16, 1875, Rebecca Matlack, and they have three children; Henry F., born August 23, 1852, lives at the homestead, unmarried; Albert Green, subject of this sketch. The maternal grandparents are Isaac Bullock, born June 24, 1781, died January 31, 1857, and Mary Green Bullock, born January 1, 1786, and died March 10, 1830. The foundation of his success was begun during the first sixteen years upon the old home farm.

Albert Green Peirce was educated in the public schools of Westtown township, and afterwards learned the trade of tinsmith. In 1881 he engaged in general merchandising in Upper Uwchlan, and thus continued for eight years, and pursued the same line for three years in Wilmington, Delaware. After his father's death in 1875, he spent the time until 1881 on the farm learning the details of its management, and therefore when he removed to the old homestead on December 20, 1901, he was enabled to carry on general farming and dairying intelligently and successfully. For ten years prior to 1901, he was employed by the Wilmington Abattoir & Cold Storage Co., and in all of his undertakings he has met with marked success.

On March 10, 1880, he married Ella Josephine Sharp, a daughter of James and Edith (Watton) Sharp, and she was born December 4, 1855, at Dilworthtown, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Peirce have had four children, as follows: Ruth Ella, born at Byers Station, August 25, 1881, died June 26, 1899; Chester Morton, born at Byers Station, July 9, 1883; William Anna (daughter) born at Milford Mills, September 25, 1885; Millard Osmore, born December 12, 1892, in Wilmington, Delaware.

The political affiliations of Mr. Peirce are with the Republican party, and he served as postmaster at Upper Uwchlan from 1882 until 1885, and he was also in the post office service at Milford Mills for five years. He is a member of the Fidelity Mutual Association of Philadelphia. Mr. Peirce is a member of Bethany Baptist church of Wilmington, Delaware, in which he was a deacon, and has taken an active interest in church work. Both he and his wife are well and favorably known in their community, and have many friends both in their church and social life.

JAMES M. WORRALL, who has served in the capacity of postmaster of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, since 1895, also actively and prominently identified with various extensive enterprises in the city, is a descendant of John Worrall, a native of Oare, Berkshire, England, from whence he emigrated to this country in 1682, settling first in Middletown and later in Edgemont. In 1684 he married Frances, widow of Thomas Taylor, and their only son, John Worrall, died in early life. Mrs. Worrall died in 1712, and two years later Mr. Worrall married Sarah Goodwin, a daughter of Thomas Goodwin, a prominent citizen of Edgemont. Their children were: Elizabeth, Mary, John, Peter, Sarah, Thomas and Thomas 2d. The father of these children died February 19, 1742, in the eighty-fifth year of his age.

A. G. Pierce

Peter Worrall, second son of John and Sarah Worrall, was born August 26, 1719, and married Abigail Pyle, a daughter of John and Rachel Pyle, of Kennett, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: John, Rachel, Sarah, Rachel, Abigail, Mary and Elizabeth Worrall.

John Worrall, eldest son of Peter and Abigail Worrall, was born January 31, 1758, and was united in marriage April 12, 1780, to Hannah Thatcher, who was born September 14, 1760, a daughter of William and Sarah Thatcher, of Thornbury. Their children were: Sarah, Peter, Abigail, Edith, Hannah, Rachel, John and Richard Thatcher Worrall.

Peter Worrall, eldest son of John and Hannah Worrall, was born in Middletown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 10, 1782, settled on his father's farm and was united in marriage about the year 1811, to Mary Sharpless, born May 8, 1786, a daughter of Nathaniel and Elizabeth (Wilkinson) Sharpless. Mr. Worrall made acknowledgment November 25, 1811, to the Middletown Meeting for his marriage to a non-member, and on October 27, 1817, his wife and children were admitted into membership; five years later Mr. Worrall was appointed to the position of trustee of the Meeting. Their children were: John S., Nathaniel S., Hannah T., Elizabeth S., Mary J., Hannah T., Edith L., and Sarah P. Worrall.

Nathaniel S. Worrall, second son of Peter and Mary Worrall, was born in Middletown, Chester county, Pennsylvania, December 22, 1813, and his business career was devoted to the occupations of farming and butchering. He was a resident of Kennett Square. In the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, September 5, 1843, occurred the marriage of Mr. Worrall and Amanda Miles, who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, August 1, 1824, a daughter of James and Martha (Brown) Miles. Their children were: William Sharpless, born August 5, 1844, married Amanda Strong; Ruth Ann, born November 6, 1846, wife of John Megilligan and their children are: Mary W., born April 3, 1882, and Sallie Heald, born May 17, 1884; George, born March 8, 1850; Pierce, born September 28, 1852, married Elizabeth Thompson. James Miles, born February 12, 1855; Nathaniel Sharpless, born October 24, 1858; Mary Elizabeth, born March 12, 1864, died January 9, 1886, and Edith Hannah, born February 14, 1867, wife of Frank Phillips.

James Miles Worrall, fourth son of Nathaniel S. and Amanda Worrall, was born in Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, February 12, 1855. He was reared and acquired his preliminary education in the public schools in the western section of the United States, and these advantages were supplemented by a course at the Dubuque Academy. He has held many important political positions in Kennett Square, among them being that of postmaster, to which office he was appointed in 1895, and he is still serving in that capacity. In addition to these positions he is serving as president of the Advance Publishing Company, president of the Button Factory, treasurer of the Electric Specialty Company, and a director of the Fibre Works. The success which has attended the efforts of Mr. Worrall is due to his persistent energy, quickness of decision, and close application to the details of any business with which he is connected.

On April 29, 1895, Mr. Worrall married Sarah Miles, a daughter of William H. and Emma (Roney) Miles, of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: James G., born April 1, 1898, and Mary E., born August 19, 1901. Mrs. Worrall was born April 28, 1875, and acquired her education in the local schools and at Martin's Academy.

WILLIAM H. KNIGHT, V. S., for thirty-six years actively engaged in the practice of his profession in Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he is also a member of the board of health, was born October 18, 1840, at Newtown, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

Jonathan Knight, grandfather of Dr. William H. Knight, was born on the old homestead in Southampton township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, and his educational advantages were obtained in the common schools of the vicinity. His entire business career was devoted to agricultural pursuits, and his life of industry and usefulness gave him a firm hold upon the regard and confidence of the community. In his religious connections he was a prominent member of the Baptist church, in which he served as deacon for many years. His wife was a native of New Jersey, and the following named children were born to them: Martha, deceased, was the wife of Daniel Rayner, and mother of three children: Henry, Mary (Mrs. Abram Detweiler) and Samuel Rayner; Charlotte, deceased, was the wife of Watson Yerkes, and they were the parents of two children: William and John Yerkes; Tacey, deceased, William, deceased, and Charles Knight.

Charles Knight, father of Dr. William H. Knight, was born in Southampton township, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1806, and there he was reared, the common schools affording him his educational privileges. He chose the occupation of farming for his life work, and being an active, intelligent and successful man of affairs achieved a large degree of prosperity in this undertaking. He was united in marriage January 8, 1829, to Mary Ann Cooper, who was an active member of the Friends' Meeting; she was born in 1804, the daughter of John and Elizabeth Cooper, the former named being prominently identified with the farming interests of Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: 1. Elizabeth C., born October 17, 1829, and died 5 mo., 14, 1900; 2. George (now deceased), born October 2, 1831, married Jane Cadwalader, and three children have been born to them, Edward C., Harry C. and William, all of whom reside at Kalispell, Flathead county, Montana; 3. Alfred, born January 17, 1835, died October 29, 1899, married Ruth Anna Allen, and they were the parents of three children—Mary Ida, who married Henry Kirk; Eva, who married Albert Preston, and Charles Allen, who married Alice Watson; 4. William H., born October 18, 1840. The parents of these children died in the same year, 1873, the father on September 27, and the mother on 8 mo., 11.

William H. Knight, of the family named above, was a regular attendant at the common schools of his birthplace, and after completing his studies, being desirous of entering professional life, he began the study of veterinary medicine under the tuition of Professor Robert McClure, of Scotland, and entered the Merchants' Veterinary College of Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1866 with a high degree of merit to his credit. He then located in Wilmington, Delaware, but after practicing his profession there for a short period of time, removed to Kennett Square, Pennsylvania. From the beginning, his efforts were attended with success, and at the present time (1903) he is one of the leading veterinarians of the borough, having demonstrated his ability to successfully cope with the difficult problems that arise in the career of a practitioner. He is a member of the State Veterinary Medical Association. In politics Dr. Knight adheres to the principles of the Republican party, is a member of the city council and also of the board of health.

On March 14, 1889, occurred the marriage of Dr. Knight and Catherine A. Donahue, who was born February 25, 1853, the daughter of Patrick and Catharine (Haley) Donahue. Her father was a progressive agriculturist of Kennett township. Dr. and Mrs. Knight have one child, Mary Katharine Knight, born June 22, 1897. Dr. Knight is a member of the Friends Meeting, where his family also attend.

WILLIAM H. PHILLIPS, of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has been actively associated with various enterprises in that section of the state, was born in Newcastle county, Delaware, March 21, 1842, the son of Harvey and Hannah (Taylor) Phillips.

Harvey Phillips, father of William H., was born in Newcastle county, Delaware, in 1808, and acquired a common school education in his native Hundred and at Westtown Boarding School. Upon leaving school he turned his attention to farming, and after a few years engaged in the saw mill business in connection with his farming interests. During the later years of his active career he was also engaged in the milling business in Kennett township. He was cautious in business affairs, and possessed that untiring energy which is always associated with success. In politics he was formerly a Whig, but later a Republican, and filled various offices in the county in which he lived. Mr. Phillips was twice married. The first wife was Hannah S., daughter of Anthony and Edith Taylor, born in Goshen township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 11 mo., 4, 1809. Her father was a farmer living near West Chester. The children born to Harvey Phillips by his first marriage were as follows: 1. Edith, who married Lewis Pusey and became the mother of six children; 2. Anthony, deceased; 3. Edwin, who died in childhood; 4. William H., already mentioned at the beginning of this sketch; 5. James, who died in early life. The mother of this family, Hannah (Taylor) Phillips, died 2 mo., 25, 1847, aged thirty-seven years, three months, and twenty-one days. The second wife of Harvey Phillips was Annie, daughter of Richard Bailey, a prosperous agriculturist of West Marlborough township. Their children are: 1. Mary, who married Joel Sharpless, and became the mother of five children; 2. Phoebe, who married Frederick Phillips and has three children; 3. Evan, unmarried; 4. Nellie, who is the wife of Charles Pennock, and mother of three children; 5. Dr. Richard, who married Lydia Meredith and had one child, deceased; 6. Annie, twin sister of Carrie, wife of George Martin, and the mother of four children; 7. Caroline, twin sister of Annie, wife of George Bowman and mother of three children. Harvey Phillips died in February, 1876, in Kennett township.

William H., next to the youngest child of Harvey and Hannah (Taylor) Phillips, obtained his early education in the public schools of his neighborhood, and at the age of fourteen attended the Friends' School at West Chester. Afterward he was a student for two years at the Friends' School at Westtown and later he attended Wier's old West Chester Academy. Outside of school he worked at home on the farm until he enlisted, at about the age of twenty-one, in the Forty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania State Militia, and for three months was in active service, under command of Colonel Stott. When he was discharged he returned home and engaged in the milling business with his brother-in-law, Lewis Pusey. He left the mill to take a position in the store of Robert L. Pyle at London Grove, and afterward entered into partnership with E. P. Green in the management of a mercantile business at Kennett Square. Later on he was for several years in the milling business. He then located in West Chester, and in association with Marshall S. Way & Brother conducted a coal and lumber trade. This partnership was continued a little over one year, when Mr. Phillips returned to Kennett. A few years after he leased Clifton Mills, in Kennett township, which he operated successfully up to 1887. In that year he purchased the old paper mill property near Kennett Square, in Kennett township, where, in connection with the mill, he has erected on this property modern and extensive greenhouses, raising carnations, mushrooms and tomatoes, for which there is a constant and large demand in the nearby markets. He realizes a goodly income from this line of industry. He is favorably known in business circles as a man of strict integrity, whose word is as good as his bond. Since attaining his majority he has been a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and has filled with credit various offices in town and township. He is a member of the Masonic order and belongs to Kennett Lodge, No. 475.

William H. Phillips and Sarah J. Hicks were married February 11, 1869. Mrs. Phillips was a daughter of Elias and Annie (Scarlett) Hicks, the father being a farmer of London Grove township. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are the parents of three children, namely: Harry, born August 2, 1873, who died August 26, 1874; Annie H., born August 29, 1875, who is the wife of Edward Ladley and the mother of one child, Helen Leone; Helen J., born December 31, 1883. The family are consistent members of the Society of Friends.

JOHN MARSHALL PHILLIPS, a representative citizen of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, belongs to that class of men who have achieved a competence through their own efforts, and who by straightforward dealing have won the confidence and respect of those with whom they have been thrown in contact. He was born February 18, 1830, at Hockessin, Newcastle county, Delaware, the son of William and Sarah W. (Craig) Phillips.

William Phillips, father of John M. Phillips, was born in Hockessin, Newcastle county, Delaware, February 10, 1805, and received his education in the local schools. He became a farmer on the homestead place, where he lived until 1857, when he removed to Chester county and spent the remaining years of his life in the borough of Kennett Square. He died in the autumn of 1886, and his wife died in 1888. He was a man of unusual force of character, possessed of great energy, and was always a leading and influential citizen. He married Sarah W. Craig, daughter of Jacob and Annie P. Craig, of Hockessin, Newcastle county, Delaware. Mrs. Craig was a native of Kennett township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. The children of William and Sarah W. (Craig) Phillips were as follows: John M., who is mentioned at greater length in a later paragraph; Anna M., wife of Jacob Pierson and mother of four children; Robert J., deceased; Emma M., deceased; Sarah E., wife of Hiram H. Story, and mother of three children: Wilhelmina, who died in childhood; Lucretia, wife of Thomas Megilligan, and mother of two children.

John M. Phillips, eldest child of William and Sarah W. (Craig) Phillips, attended school in Newcastle county, Delaware, where he was born, and grew up to a knowledge of farming through work with his father at home. He spent a year in farm work at Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania, returning to Hockessin in 1870, where he continued farming up to 1887. At that time he moved to New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he lived as a farmer until 1890, when he bought his present homestead in Kennett township. This farm comprises seventy-two acres, and it is tilled with intelligent care as to its adaptability. The most improved machinery is found on the place, which has the thrifty and well-kept appearance that betokens intensive agriculture. Mr. Phillips is a Democrat, and follows the course of politics with much interest. He is known throughout the community as a man to whom no worthy cause appeals in vain. He is a charter member, and is now past master, of Kennett Lodge No. 475, Free and Accepted Masons.

Mr. Phillips married Lydia A. Pierson, March 17, 1869. She was a daughter of Thomas Pierson, a prominent resident of Hockessin, Newcastle county, Delaware, whose wife was Martha Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips have two children, Emma J., born February 19, 1870, and Marshall, born May 18, 1876.

HENRY CLAY WHITE, a prominent contractor of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a son of James and Ann (Taylor) White. James White was born March 21, 1809, in Tredyffrin township, in the same county, and received a common school education, afterward learning the coachmaker's trade, which he made the business of his life. In politics he was a Republican, and in religion a birthright member of the Society of Friends. In 1833 he married Ann, daughter of John and Ann (Bucher) Taylor, of Kennett Square. She was born June 27, 1809, and was an aunt of the distinguished poet and traveler, Bayard Taylor, and a descendant of Robert Taylor, who came to Pennsylvania, probably in 1682, from Little Leigh, county of Chester, England. His wife and children followed the next year, and the family settled in Springfield township, where Robert died in 1695. His son Isaac, who died in 1716, married Sarah Broadwell and had a son, Josiah, who married Jane Stewart. Abraham, a son of the latter marriage, married Rebecca Way, and became the father of John. John and his wife, Ann Bucher, were the parents of Ann, who became the wife of James White. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. White: John, who died in childhood; Anna E., who died in childhood; Edward, deceased, who married Eva Hart; Henry Clay, who has already been mentioned; John, unmarried; James, Emma, and Richard, all of whom died before reaching majority.

Henry Clay White, son of James and Ann (Taylor) White, was born January 19, 1841, at Kennett Square, Chester county, and was educated in the public schools of his birthplace. He learned the carpenter's trade, in which he gained such proficiency that he is now doing a successful business as a contractor. He has erected one hundred and twenty-five buildings in Kennett Square, including the Bayard Taylor Library and the Chalfant block. He has a military record as a soldier of the Civil war, having enlisted in Company H, known as the famous "Buck-tails," under Colonel Charles J. Biddle, in 1861. After nine months of service he was honorably discharged, but enlisted again and served until 1863, winning distinction at the battle of Antietam. Politically he is a Republican, and he has held the local offices of assessor and councilman. He is regarded with confidence and esteem in the community, and he is a man who gives his practical support to every cause that appeals to him as right.

Mr. White married Elizabeth, daughter of Charles and Mary (Simmons) Ridgway. Mrs. White is a member of the Episcopal church. Her father is a merchant of Philadelphia.

HON. TOWNSEND HAINES, an eminent lawyer and famed in public affairs, was born in West Chester, January 7, 1792, son of Caleb and Hannah (Ryant) Haines. He was educated at the boarding school of Enoch Lewis, at New Garden, and taught school for some years. He read law with Isaac Darlington, and was admitted to the bar in 1818, and became successful in his profession.

He was a Democrat in early life, and served in the legislature in 1826-7. In 1840 he became a Whig, and was for a time editor of the party organ. For two years he was secretary of the commonwealth, and in 1850 he was appointed by President Taylor to the position of United States treasurer. In 1851 he resigned the latter position, having been elected president judge for the judicial district of Chester and Delaware counties. At the expiration of his term he returned to his practice, to which he devoted himself during the remainder of his life. He had a talent for poetry and wrote some pleasing verses. He died in October, 1865, aged seventy-two years. His wife was Anna Mary, daughter of Philip and Sarah Derrick.

NIMROD STRICKLAND, a fine type of the old-school journalist and politician, was born in 1807, in West Vincent, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He was a Democrat, and at an early age was a man of some prominence in his party. He was recorder of deeds from 1830 to 1833; register of wills, 1832-1836; a clerk in the United States treasury department for some years; associate judge in Chester county, 1848-51; for some time a canal commissioner; warden of the Eastern Penitentiary, 1854-55. He was editor of the American Republica, and co-editor with Dr. Morwitz of the "Pennsylvanian." For forty-six years he was a member of the Baptist church. He was an active member of the order of Odd Fellows, and he was cared for by the fraternity in his declining years. He was of kindly and genial disposition and was held in high regard by his fellows.

JOHN HICKMAN, whose strong mental powers and brilliant oratory gave him a national prominence during the burning days of the slavery agitation, was born September 11, 1810, in Pocopson township, Chester county. His English ancestors came to the county prior to 1685. His parents were John and Sarah (Jefferis) Hickman.

He was educated at Brag Hill under a tutor who was a graduate of the Edinburgh (Scotland) University. He entered upon the study of medicine, but abandoned it on account of his repugnance to the dissecting room. He then turned his attention to the law, and after completing a course of reading under Townsend Haines, was admitted to the bar shortly after reaching manhood. He served as district attorney for three terms. He was a delegate in the national Democratic convention which nominated James K. Polk for the presidency, in 1844. He was elected to congress

TOWNSEND HAINES.
NIMROD STRICKLAND.
JOHN HICKMAN.

ISAAC D. BARNARD.
ISAAC DARLINGTON.
ANTOINE BOLMAR.

WM. FREDERICK WYERS.
REV. JOHN F. PRENDERGAST.
SANFORD CULVER.

in 1854, and was re-elected to succeed himself until and including 1860, in which year he was a prominent candidate for the vice-presidency. He was a strong anti-slavery man and Unionist, and his force of speech and keenness of satire in debate made him the object of bitter taunts and threats by southern congressmen. He voted against the admission of Kansas under the fraudulent Lecompton constitution, ridiculed the dismay caused in the south by the John Brown raid, and gave hearty support to the administration of Lincoln in making preparation for the war. He declined a re-nomination to congress, but accepted an election to the legislature, but refused to stand for a re-election. He died at his home in West Chester, March 23, 1875. His wife was Eunice Phelps, of Guilford, Vermont; after her death he married Mrs. Mary A. Love, nee Brown.

ISAAC D. BARNARD, soldier and statesman, was of that distinguished family which originated in Normandy, France, and of which a branch was planted in America prior to 1686. He was born in 1791 in West Chester, where he died, February 18, 1834. He studied for the law, and was admitted to the bar in 1816. He had previously served with distinction in the war of 1812, showing conspicuous courage at Plattsburg and Lyon Creek, and passing to the grades of captain and major. After leaving the army, he served successively as district attorney, state senator and secretary of the commonwealth. He was elected to the United States senate in 1827, and resigned in 1831 on account of declining health, and when he stood so well that the leading journals of New York were urging him for a seat in the president's cabinet. He declined the judgeship of Chester county, and would have been nominated for governor in 1829 but for a defection in his own county. He organized the Republican Artillerists, and was commissioned as major-general of militia. He was instrumental in the procurement of the Paoli battle ground, and in the erection of the monument thereon. His remains were first interred in the Friends' burying ground on North High street, in West Chester, and they were removed twenty years later to Oaklands cemetery. He was ever popular, his boldness, dauntless character and great ability ever commending him to his fellows. His wife was Harriet, the eldest daughter of Isaac Darlington.

ISAAC DARLINGTON, an eminent jurist and prominent in public affairs, was noted for his great industry as a youth, and for his vigorous constitution and fine physique.

He was born in Westtown, Pennsylvania,

December 13, 1781, son of Abraham Darlington. He was reared upon the paternal farm, and aided his father in its cultivation and also in blacksmithing. He taught in the country schools for a time, and read law under the elder Joseph Hemphill. He was admitted to the bar before he was twenty years of age. He was elected to the legislature in 1807, 1808, and in 1816, and also in the latter year to congress. He was appointed deputy attorney general for Chester county in 1820. During the war of 1812 he served as adjutant of the Second Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. He was twice married; first to Mary Peters, and second to Rebecca Fairlamb. He left no descendants.

ANTOINE BOLMAR. Jean Claude Antoine Brunin de Bolmar, who came to be known as Antoine (or Anthony) Bolmar, was during a long and active life one of the most useful citizens of Chester. He was born in 1797, in the village of Bourbon Lancy, department of Saone-et-Loire, Lower Burgundy, France. He was a student in the Imperial Lyceum of Clermont-Ferrand at the time of the downfall of Napoleon I, in 1815, and went to Lyons, where he learned silk weaving. When nearly of age he enlisted in the army, in which he served for six years in the war between France and Spain. In 1828 he came to the United States, became a teacher of French in Philadelphia, and published a number of language text-books. In 1832, when cholera visited the States, he removed to West Chester to continue his work on his school books, and was so pleased with the village that he made it his permanent place of residence. In 1834 he became principal of the West Chester Academy, and in 1840 he bought the building occupied by Mrs. Almira H. Lincoln's boarding school for girls, and made it one of the most flourishing educational institutions in the state. As was remarked ("Centennial Souvenir,") "he was a public-spirited citizen and fine instructor, who made the town celebrated for its schools, and attracted many students from foreign countries, and paved the way for greater triumphs for his successors in the educational world." In 1859 he closed his school in order to revisit his native land and on returning his impaired health forbade his reopening it.

WILLIAM FREDERICK WYERS, an accomplished educator, was of German origin, born in 1812, son of a Lutheran clergyman. He was educated in the universities of Heidelberg and Leipsic, and received the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy. At an early age he was tutor in the family of a nobleman. Inspired by his ideas of liberty, he wrote an article for an obscure German newspaper, which came to the attention of the government, and being regarded as seditious, he was required to leave the country within twenty-four hours. In 1842 he landed in Baltimore, Maryland, almost penniless, a stranger in a strange land. He soon found his way to West Nottingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he took employment in the chrome mines. Meantime he devoted himself closely to the study of higher English, and to such good purpose that he was appointed a teacher in the academy at New London, and in 1846 he was advanced to the principalship of the institution. In 1853 he accepted a position as teacher in Mr. Bolmar's school in West Chester, and became principal in 1855. In 1865 he purchased Bolmar's Academy, afterwards Villa Maria. He was elected president of the State Teachers' Association in 1866. For many years he was ruling elder in the First Presbyterian church of West Chester.

THE REV. FATHER JOHN FRANCIS PRENDERGAST, who was rector of Christ (now St. Agnes) Roman Catholic church in West Chester from his ordination in 1851 to the time of his death in 1871, lived a life of peculiar usefulness. His parish included Downingtown, Doe Run and Parkersburg, in Chester county, and Drumore, in Lancaster county. He built the church in Downingtown in 1851; established the Catholic cemetery at Oaklands (where his remains repose) in 1854; erected St. Agnes' church in 1852 and reared its spire in 1856; built the church in Parkesburg in 1854, and organized two sodalities in 1857. He displayed a warm patriotic spirit during the Civil war. At the beginning of hostilities he took a leading part in the ceremonies at the raising of the national flag in front of his church, and, in company with a Protestant minister, the Rev. Dr. William E. Moore, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, he marched at the head of the Ninety-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, when it was passing through the town, en route for the seat of war.

SANFORD CULVER, one of West Chester's most capable teachers, was born in New England and entered upon his career as an educator in Delaware. In 1848 he took up his residence in West Chester, Pennsylvania, where he was for twelve years principal of the public schools, devoted to his work, and held in affection by his pupils. He was a licensed preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church, and was frequently a speaker at religious meetings; he was superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school during the greater part of his residence in West Chester. Following the death, of his first wife, he ceased his connection with the West Chester schools, and the populace showed its regard for him by holding a public meeting in the court house, and by a torchlight procession. He removed to Millville, New Jersey, where he served as principal of the public schools, and where he died, survived by his second wife.

J. ELI CROZIER. Among the citizens of Kennett Square, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who during a long and active business career have been important factors in the development of the industrial interests of the borough, stands prominently Joseph E. Crozier, whose birth occurred in Kennett Square, August 29, 1847.

John M. Crozier, father of Joseph E. Crozier, was born in Wilmington, Delaware, in 1813. He was a man of good practical education and a tailor by trade. He pursued this occupation up to a few years prior to his death, when he retired from business and his declining years were attended with the ease and comfort which should always follow a career of toil and usefulness. During the Civil war he acted in the capacity of nurse in the famous Bucktail Regiment. He was united in marriage to Rebecca Edwards, a daughter of Joseph and Eliza (Marple) Edwards. Her father was a prosperous agriculturist and proprietor of the Anvil Hotel, on the state road, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Ida, wife of James Ford and mother of four children; Eliza, who married Theodore Turner, and two children were born to them; James, who married Amanda Isaacs; Mary A., wife of Charles Hasselbury, and they are the parents of five children; Morton P., who married Molly Musser, and one child has been born to them; Josephine, deceased; David, deceased; Samuel, deceased; J. Eli, and four other children who died in infancy. Mr. Crozier, father of these children, died February 15, 1885.

J. Eli Crozier, son of John M. and Rebecca (Edwards) Crozier, was reared and educated in Kennett Square, being a regular attendant at the public schools of the neighborhood. In early life he learned the trade of iron moulding, and by applying himself closely to his work soon mastered the business so thoroughly that after a few years he was qualified to engage in the business on his own account. He established the Kennett Iron Foundry, which he conducts at the present time (1903), giving employment to sixty skilled mechanics and operatives who are engaged in the manufacture of iron castings of all descriptions. Mr. Crozier is recognized as a capable, conscientious man, and his success is due to natural aptitude, as well as to his energy, determination and close application to his business interests.

J. Hubbard Latimer

On January 6, 1870, Miss Crozier married Miss Indiana Richardson, daughter of William and Mary Jane (Gerry) Richardson. Her father is actively associated with the agricultural interests of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Crozier are: Mary E., wife of Charles H. Pyle, and John J. Crozier, who is unmarried. All the members of the family are earnest and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Kennett Square, Pennsylvania.

JOHN HIBBERD BARTRAM. One of the highly cultivated and productive farms of Chester county, Pennsylvania, consisting of one hundred and forty acres of rich and arable land, located in the vicinity of the West Chester & Philadelphia Railroad and the old Westtown Boarding School, is the property of J. Hibberd Bartram, son of Israel L. and Mary Ann (Thomas) Bartram, grandson of John and Phœbe (Lobb) Bartram, and a lineal descendant of Richard Bartram, a native of Derbyshire, England, where he was educated, spent his entire business career and died during the seventeenth century.

Israel L. Bartram (father) was born in Darby, Pennsylvania, July 28, 1809, reared on a farm and acquired a practical education at the common schools adjacent to his home. For a number of years after attaining young manhood he resided in Upper Providence, but in the year 1839 removed to the Thomas homestead in Willistown, where he was the incumbent of various township offices. He was a zealous member of the Willistown Friends' Meeting, and active and public-spirited citizen, and his services were often called into requisition in the settlement of estates and to serve as guardian for a number of children of minor age. At Willistown Meeting, November 14, 1833, Mr. Bartram married Mary Ann Thomas, born October 30, 1809, died June 30, 1873, a daughter of Mordecai and Lydia (Hoopes) Thomas, of Willistown. Their children were: J. Hibberd, George T., Phœbe L., Mordecai T., and Wilmer I. Bartram. Israel L. Bartram married for his second wife, Rebecca H. Richards. His death occurred March 20, 1900.

J. Hibberd Bartram, eldest son of Israel L. and Mary A. Bartram, was born near the present village of Swarthmore, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, January 24, 1835. He was educated in the public schools of Willistown and West Chester and at Daniel Foulk's Boarding School in Montgomery county. In 1857 he located on his present farm in Westtown township, consisting of one hundred and forty acres, which was purchased from Benjamin Seal and was a portion of the old original Hickman tract. Since that time, a period of almost half a century, he has conducted farming operations on an extensive scale, devoting his attention principally to fruit and asparagus raising, trucking and dairying. His farm is one of the richest in fruit in this section of the state, and the produce finds a ready sale in the nearby markets. Mr. Bartram conducted a stand in the old Farmer's Market in the city of Philadelphia from the time of its organization until it closed, and at one time served in the capacity of director of the same. He has always manifested a keen interest in public matters, has served as supervisor and filled other township offices, and for forty consecutive years was a member of the Independent School District, No. 2, serving as treasurer of the board during a portion of this time. He is a director of the Farmers' National Bank of West Chester, and a member and overseer of the Hick-site Friends' Meeting, Goshen, Pennsylvania.

In 1857 Mr. Bartram married Elizabeth Matlack Dutton, born December 12, 1835, a daughter of Edmund and Tacy (Matlack) Dutton. Their children were: 1. Anna D., born June 10, 1858, died October 15, 1862. 2. Mary Thomas, born October 2, 1862, died March 6, 1895; she was the wife of Benjamin K. Smedley, son of the late Dr. Smedley, of West Chester, and they were the parents of the following named children—Rowena B., born August 11, 1887; Esther K., born in May, 1890, and Sara E., born October 4, 1893, died August 22, 1895. 3. Sarah D., born March 9, 1864, died May 8, 1892; she was the wife of William W. Kent and mother of the following named children—Bartram S., born 11 mo., 28, 1886, and Byron H., born 9 mo., 4, 1889. 4. George Hibberd, born July 28, 1869, resides in Birmingham township and owns and operates a farm of one hundred and forty-seven acres; he married Ruth Henderson and they are the parents of one child, G. Maurice, born 9 mo. 8, 1895. 5. Ida Phœbe, born January 7, 1871, unmarried, resides in Wilmington with her brother-in-law and is engaged in superintending the family of her deceased sister. Mrs. Bartram, the mother of these children, died August 8, 1895. Mr. Bartram chose for his second wife, Elma Garrett, daughter of Maris and Elizabeth (Kinzie) Garrett, and granddaughter of George Garrett. They were an old prominent Willistown township family, but Mrs. Bartram spent the greater part of her life in the city of Philadelphia. The marriage ceremony was performed June 8, 1898.

JESSE J. HICKMAN, an enterprising and progressive agriculturist of Westtown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is a descendant of Francis Hickman, of Wiltshire, England, who married Elizabeth Chamberlin, a widow with one son, Robert Chamberlin, and some daughters. Their children were: Joseph, Mary, Hannah, and Benjamin. Mr. Hickman came to this country and purchased land prior to November 27, 1685, the date of his will. His widow died in Thornbury township in 1698. Benjamin Hickman, youngest son of Francis Hickman, married Ann, daughter of Richard Buffington, in 1701, and settled on a farm immediately east of the Westtown Boarding School property, where the site of their first dwelling, a cave, is marked by an evergreen tree. Their children were: Mary, Elizabeth, John, Francis, Benjamin, Ann and Hannah. Mr. Hickman died October 7, 1742.

Benjamin Hickman, Jr., was born September 18, 1710, and in the year 1744 married Hannah Trego, daughter of William and Margaret (Moore) Trego, of Goshen. They took up their residence at the old homestead, and the following named children were born to them: Ann, Lucy, Benjamin, Francis, and Elisha. Benjamin Hickman died in 1760, his wife having passed away October 13, 1756. Benjamin Hickman (3) was born July 27, 1749, married Lucy Cheyney, who was born October 2, 1757, a daughter of Thomas and Mary (Riley) Cheyney, of Thornbury. Their children were: Curtis, Mary, Benjamin, Hannah, Thomas, Ann, Cyrus, Eber, Lydia, Elizabeth, Francis, Rebecca, and Richard Riley Hickman. The father of these children died March 25, 1826, and his wife's death occurred January 25, 1802. Upon the Hickman farm, now the property of J. Hibbard Bartram, Westtown, is a family graveyard, in which several of the name have been buried. Thomas Hickman, grandfather of Jesse J. Hickman, married Mary Jafferis, and resided for many years in Thornbury, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His son, Benjamin Hickman, father of Jesse J. Hickman, was born March 25, 1786, and was the owner of an extensive farm in Thornbury, near Cheyney, where for some years he was prominently known as a breeder of hogs. He married Susanna Gilpin James, who was born in Westtown township, December 4, 1793; the marriage was performed November 19, 1812, and the following named children were born to them: Gilpin, born September 3, 1814, married Hannah B. Hicks, died August 11, 1852; Mary J., born August 4, 1816, married Lewis Hoopes, died December 8, 1843; Ruth Ann (1), born May 27, 1818, died October 7, 1818; Passmore W., born July 25, 1819, died February 20, 1822; Zillah J., born September 2, 1821, married William Ashbridge, died May 30, 1862; Ruth Ann (2), born January 27, 1830, married Alfred A. Tanguy, died June 29, 1887; Jesse J., born June 12, 1832, married Anne Shimer and Annie M. Baker; and Susan G., born March 26, 1835, married Allen Speakman, died July 26, 1892. Mr. Hickman died March 15, 1866, and his wife passed away on May 18, 1866.

Jesse James Hickman was born in Thornbury township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 12, 1832, and acquired an excellent education in the public schools of his native town, at Jonathan Gans School in West Bradford township, and at the academy in West Chester conducted under the personal supervision of Anthony Bolmar. After completing his studies he engaged in agricultural pursuits with his father at the old homestead, where he continued to reside until 1894, when he disposed of the property, and purchased a farm in Westtown township from the heirs of Thomas Yearsley. Ever since that date he has devoted his attention to farming and dairying, and his straightforward dealing and manifest desire to please his customers have naturally brought to him an extensive and lucrative business, from which he derives a fair income. Mr. Hickman is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, served a term as register of wills of Chester county, was the assistant assessor of internal revenue during the progress of the Civil war, and at the present time (1903) is serving in the capacity of postmaster of Westtown post office, having been appointed to that position in 1896, and county commissioner of Chester county, having entered upon the duties of that office in January, 1903. His religious sympathies are with the Hicksite Friends, of which organization his mother was a member, but he does not hold membership in any meeting. Mr. Hickman is a prominent member of George

THE HICKMAN HOMESTEAD.

Gene J. Wickman

W. Bartram Lodge, No. 298, Free and Accepted Masons of Media, a member of Concord Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a member of Tamenende Tribe, no. 192, Independent Order of Red Men, of Tanguy, Pennsylvania, in which he has passed all the chairs, a member of Westmont Lodge, No. 495, Knights of Pythias, Tanguy, and for many years was a member of Patrons of Husbandry.

On September 6, 1855, Mr. Hickman married Anne Shimer, daughter of Edward and Hannah (Jones) Shimer, of Thornbury. Mrs. Hickman died in Thornbury, June 25, 1856, and was buried in Birmingham cemetery. For his second wife he married, December 31, 1857, Annie M. Baker, who was born in Edgemont, July 29, 1828, a daughter of Abel and Ann (Sill) Baker, of Edgemont. Their children are: Edward Shimer, born June 24, 1856, married Isabella Larkin, daughter of John and Emeline (Talley) Larkin, of Bethel, Delaware county. Their children are: Jesse J., Edward, Helen and Margaret Hickman. Miffin, born September 12, 1858, married Annie E. Dilworth, and resides with his parents. They have one child, Grace D. Hickman, born October 28, 1885.

CASPER PENNOCK FAUCETT, a well-known citizen of Westtown township, traces his descent from George and Isabella Faucett, whose grandson, Henry, resided, with his wife, Hannah, in Westtown township. They were the parents of the following children: Ebenezer, born January 28, 1783; Margaret, born October 17, 1784; George, mentioned hereinafter; Rebecca, born November 25, 1788; Sarah, born July 29, 1792; Hannah, born April 11, 1796; Anna, born November 18, 1800; and Margaret (2), born November 9, 1807.

George Faucett, son of Henry and Hannah Faucett, was born October 15, 1786, and married Mary Yearsley. They were the parents of the following children, all of whom, with the exception of the three last, were born in Westtown township: 1. Nathan, born December 27, 1823, married Isabella Smith, and their children were: Anna Mary, who married James Kirkpatrick; George S., who married Ada Clayton; and Estella, who became the wife of Pennock Williamson. The wife of Nathan Faucett having died, he married Elizabeth Taylor, and, after her death, took for his third wife, Sadie Sharp. 2. Hannah N., born August 6, 1825; 3. Henry, born January 12, 1828. 4. George, mentioned hereinafter. 5. Mary Jane, born December 1, 1833. 6. Ebenezer, born April 2, 1836. 7. Joseph, born August 16, 1838; and 8. Elizabeth, born June 6, 1840. The three last-named children were born in Birmingham township.

George Faucett, son of George and Mary (Yearsley) Faucett, was born August 1, 1830, and married Margaretta C., daughter of Isaac Smith. Two children were born to them: Casper Pennock, mentioned at length hereinafter; and Alexis Smith, who was born April 8, 1859, married Helen Noble, and resides in West Chester.

Casper Pennock Faucett, son of George and Margaretta C. (Smith) Faucett, was born December 21, 1855, on the homestead, in Westtown township, where he spent his early life, receiving his education in the public schools of the county, and at West Chester Normal School. He now resides on the homestead, in the old mansion which was built some time during the eighteenth century, but has since been remodeled. Not far off, stood, in former years, a log cabin, in which, in colonial times, the family conducted a country store. When this cabin was demolished, many years ago, some of the ancient timbers, being found as good as when they had been first hewn, over a century before, were used as joists in the remodeling of the family mansion. In politics Mr. Faucett adheres to the Democratic party. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Mr. Faucett married, December 18, 1895, Maryetta, daughter of Judge and Susan (Patter-son) Tyson, of Delaware county. Mrs. Faucett was educated at the West Chester State Normal School.

ABRAM SEAL WILLIAMS, a substantial farmer of Westtown township, was born April 27, 1849, in East Bradford township, but when he was three years of age his parents removed with him to the present homestead, where he has since resided. He was educated in the public schools, at the Friends' high school, West Chester, and at Professor Shortlidge's Academy in Concord township. After completing his education he engaged in general farming and dairying, and also operates a saw and grist mill. This farm is the original Abraham Williams homestead of his grandfather, for whom he is named, although it is now written Abram. His political affiliations are with the Republican party, and he has held the position of school director in the township. Being interested in agriculture, he has been active in the order of Patrons of Husbandry. His religious sympathy is with the Hicksite Friends, with which society all of his family is identified, although he is not connected with any meeting.

April 15, 1886, Abram Seal Williams and Annie Hall Bennett were married. She was born September 29, 1858, in Birmingham township, and she is a daughter of John and Jane (Hall) Bennett. Four children have been born to this marriage, as follows: Mabel Hall, born May 24, 1887, died in infancy; Jennie Bennett, born November 11, 1888, died March 16, 1897; Ethel Seal, born August 6, 1893, and Elizabeth Seal, born August 6, 1899.

The ancestry of Abram Seal Williams is as follows: The grandparents on the paternal side were Abraham Williams, born December 26, 1783, died September 3, 1861, and Rachel (White) Williams, born August 12, 1781, died September 13, 1850, and they were married March 14, 1804, and had five children, as follows: Lewis W., born December 20, 1804, died September 18, 1873; Hannah W., born August 11, 1807, died April 5, 1896, and she married John T. Haines; Richard W., born July 31, 1809, died February 1, 1890, and he married Martha Good; Enoch T., born June 8, 1814, died September 7, 1870, and he married Eliza Seal; Ann T., born April 11, 1818. The maternal grandparents were Jesse and Sarah (Sharpless) Seal.

The parents were as follows: Enoch T. and Eliza (Seal) Williams. The former was born June 8, 1814, and died September 7, 1870, and Eliza Williams was born May 25, 1815, and died May 30, 1882. They had three children, as follows: Sarah Ann Williams, born November 22, 1846, married Joseph G. Williams; Abram Seal, our subject; Emma S., born October 24, 1851, she married October 19, 1875, Mark H. Darlington, and they have three children, viz: Lewis, born October 19, 1876; Isaac G., born May 10, 1882, and Norman W., born August 10, 1886.

STARR FAMILY. John Starr, according to tradition, was the son of a captain of infantry in the Parliament army and during the civil war in England, a little before the middle of the seventeenth century, who settled in Ireland after the close of the war. They became members of the Society of Friends and resided at Coot Hill, in the province of Ulster. The said John Starr and Mary, his wife, had nine children:

1. John, born about the middle of 7 mo., 1674; married Sarah Martin, 6 mo., 11, 1706; both being of Ballyhaes Meeting, Ireland.

2. James, born 10 mo., 28, 1676; married 6 mo., 22, 1705, Pachel Laybourne, born at Ramestown, 8 mo., 7, 1686; daughter of Joseph Laybourne, of Black Hadleigh, county of Durham, England, and of Rachel, his wife.

3. George, born 2 mo., 16, 1679; no further record.

4. Mary, born 7 mo., 15, 1682; married 3 mo., 2, 1699, at her father's to Merrick King, of Old Castle Meeting.

5. Elizabeth, born 9 mo., 12, 1684; married 12 mo., 24, 1702, at Killagh Meeting, to Richard King, of Old Castle Meeting.

6. Susannah, born 9 mo., 23, 1686; married 7 mo., 10, 1710, at John Bell's, near Ballyhaes, to Thomas Martin; both of Ballyhaes Meeting.

7. Jeremiah, born 8 mo., 17, 1690; married 11 mo., 10, 1716, Rebecca, daughter of Isaac and Ann (Evans) Jackson. See forward.

8. Moses, born 8 mo., 27, 1692; married 6 mo., 2, 1715, at Old Castle Meeting, Deborah King, daughter of Merrick King, of Old Castle.

9. Isaac, born 9 mo., 23, 1697; married 12 mo., 20, 1723, at New Garden Meeting, Pennsylvania, Margaret Lightfoot.

In the marriage certificates of the children the father's residence is given as at Old Castle, in the county of Meath. James Starr came to Pennsylvania in 1712 and settled in New Garden. In 1714 he was chosen clerk of the Newark Monthly Meeting (now Kennett), and overseer of New Garden Meeting. Upon the establishment of New Garden Monthly Meeting, in 1718, he was chosen clerk and served till 1726. In 1731 he removed to Charlestown township and located at the present site of Phoenixville. Moses Starr, his brother, came over in 1717 and after a time settled at Maiden Creek, Berks county, of which he was the first, and for many years the only representative in the provincial assembly. Isaac Starr, the youngest brother, settled in New Garden township, but about 1731 removed to Maiden Creek, and in 1749 to Goshen township, Chester county, where he died in 1753.

Jeremiah Starr, with Rebecca his wife, brought a certificate from Friends of the monthly meeting of Carlow, in Ireland, which was received at New Garden 3 mo., 3, 1718, and settled in Londongrove township, a little northwest of Avondale. After Rebecca's death he was married again, 10 mo., 11, 1746, at Londongrove Meeting, to Margaret Hayes, daughter of Richard Hayes, of West Marlborough. He removed to Wilmington about 1763 and died prior to 1769, when his widow married John Jackson, of East Marlborough. His children, by his first wife, were these:

10. Anne, born 11 mo., 1, 1717; married James Moore, 2 mo., 16, 1741.

11. John, died young.

12. Isaac, married Mary Flower, daughter of Richard, about 1750.

13. Jeremiah, married Elizabeth Hiatt, 1756, and Rachel Moore, 1787.

14. Moses, see forward.

15. Alice, married David Harlan, 12 mo., 16, 1756.

16. Rebecca, born 4 mo., 23, 1737; married Andrew Moore, 9 mo., 26, 1754.

17. Mary, married Thomas Baldwin, 8 mo., 9, 1771.

18. Susanna, died young.

19. Joshua, died young.

By his second wife:

20. Phebe, married Henry Harlan, 3 mo., 1770.
21. George.
Moses Starr (14) was married 3 mo., 19, 1760, at Londongrove Meeting, to Sarah Harlan, daughter of Michael and Hannah (Maris) Harlan, of Londongrove. In 1764 he was assessed in New Garden with one hundred and forty acres of land, and in Londongrove, 1774, with one hundred and seventy acres. In 1778 he removed to Sadsbury, Lancaster county, and later to Bart township, where he died prior to 1788: Sarah died 3 mo., 5, 1815, aged about seventy-eight years. They had four children:
22. Rebecca, died 7 mo., 15, 1819, in fifty-ninth year; married Thomas Downing.
23. Jeremiah, born 9 mo., 10, 1762; died 3 mo., 12, 1816; see below.
24. Hannah, born 2 mo., 3, 1765; died 4 mo., 20, 1836; married Thomas Whitson.
25. Sarah, died unmarried.
Jeremiah Starr (23) married Anna Whitson, born 12 mo., 5, 1763; died 5 mo., 4, 1818; daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Whitson, of Sadsbury, Lancaster county. By the will of his uncle Jeremiah Starr, who died in 1791, he inherited one-half of the land of the latter, in New Garden, or about ninety-three acres, on which he settled about 1798. He had six children:
26. Deborah, born 3 mo., 11, 1789; died 5 mo., 1869; married Levi Keerans.
27. Moses, born 5 mo., 24, 1791; died 3 mo., 16, 1874; married Rachel Pennington.
28. Samuel, born 5 mo., 14, 1793; died 8 mo., 26, 1822; married Hannah Gray.
29. Thomas, born 1795, died in infancy.
30. Jeremiah, born 7 mo., 5, 1798; died 4 mo., 17, 1876. See below.
31. Marianna, born 5 mo., 19, 1805; married Samuel Moore and Samuel Pennington.
Jeremiah Starr (30) was married to mo., 11, 1827, at Spencer's Meeting, New London, to Mary Thompson, born 5 mo., 15, 1810; died 9 mo., 3, 1882; daughter of Eli and Sarah (Scarlett) Thompson, of Mill Creek Hundred, Delaware. He purchased a part of the homestead from his brother Moses, in 1823, to which additions were subsequently made, and by will devised his real estate to his wife. They had seven children:
32. Sarah, born 10 mo., 23, 1828; died 6 mo., 28, 1875; married Robert L. Walter.
33. Jeremiah, born 4 mo., 27, 2830; married Rebecca Hallowell.
34. Eli T., born 1 mo., 7, 1834; married Carrie Jefferis.
35. Ann, born, 10 mo., 5, 1836; died 6 mo., 24, 1842.

36. Samuel, born 7 mo., 22, 1839; married Mary Dyer, 1 mo., 6, 1876.

37. Mary Anna, born 12 mo., 22, 1842; married William E. Haines.

38. Charles T., born 8 mo., 23, 1846; died 12 mo., 23, 1891.

Charles Thompson Starr, last named, was born in New Garden township, and educated at the public schools and Shortlidge's Academy, Kennett Square. He began business as a farmer, but having from early life manifested a strong love for flowers he turned to their cultivation, and at the time of his death he was one of the leading florists of the county. His zeal and industry in his chosen pursuit were thought to have overtaxed his strength and shortened his life. He was a man of sterling worth, with strong convictions for the right, from which he never wavered. A Republican in politics, he held the office of school director in his native township. In 1876 he purchased from his mother the homestead, and continued to reside thereon, a member of New Garden Meeting. He was married 9 mo., 9, 1874, at her father's, to Emma F. Chandler, born at Concordville, Delaware county, 2 mo., 21, 1854, a daughter of William L. and Sarah Anna (Stiteler) Chandler, last of New Garden. They had five children: William Chandler, born 8 mo., 8, 1875; Lillian C., born 5 mo., 24, 1879; Chester Thompson, born 11 mo., 6, 1880; Mary, born 3 mo., 3, 1882; Eli Thompson, born 1 mo., 25, 1885; all unmarried.

George Chandler, of Greathodge, in Wiltshire, England, with Jane his wife and seven children set sail for Pennsylvania in 1687, but the father died at sea, 10 mo., 13, of that year, after which his widow and children found a home in Chichester township, (now) Delaware county. The names of the children were John, who died young, George, Swithin, Jane, William, Thomas, Charity and Ann.

William Chandler married in 1712, Ann Bowater, and settled in Londongrove township, about a mile and a quarter south of the meeting house. His children were Jane, Lydia, Samuel, William, John, Anne, Thomas, Moses and Mary.

John Chandler, son of William and Ann, born 1 mo., 20, 1719-20; died about 1753; married, 2 mo., 8, 1741, at Londongrove Meeting, Susanna Parks, of Londongrove, daughter of Richard Parks. He inherited the homestead and left three children, Samuel, John and William. After his death his widow married John Wilson.

John Chandler, Jr., was married at Christ church, Philadelphia, January 30, 1773, to Anna Jones, daughter of John and Sarah (Taylor) Jones, of East Bradford. He was a coachmaker, and resided for a time in East Bradford; afterward, 1783, in East Marlborough, and subsequently removed to Harrison county, Kentucky. He had children, Edmund, Rachel, Benjamin, Jehu, William, John and Israel. His death occurred in Clermont county, Ohio, 6 mo., 13, 1835.

William Chandler, born 1 mo., 14, 1788, son of John and Anna, came from Kentucky to live with his uncle William Chandler, of New Garden, who had no children. He was admitted into membership with Friends at Kennett Square Meeting, 1 mo., 6, 1818, and married there, 10 mo., 15, 1818, to Ruthanna Davis, born in Charlestown township, 8 mo., 11, 1801; died 3, mo., 22, 1846, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Leedom) Davis. He was a farmer in New Garden, between Kennett Square and Toughkenamon, and had children, Sarah D., Mary, Josephus P., Edwin A., William L., John L., Anna, Esther, Samuel D. and Lewis B. Chandler.

William L. Chandler, born 10 mo., 22, 1825; died 1 mo., 23, 1882; married in 1851, Sarah Anna Stiteler, of Uwchlan township. She died about 1864 and he married a second wife, Susan A. (Hoffman) Dorlan, now living at Kennett Square. He owned and resided on a farm immediately south of Toughkenamon, in New Garden. By his first wife he had three children:

Isaac Franklin, born at Concordville, 9 mo., 4, 1852; married, 2 mo., 17, 1875, Emilie Cope, and lives at the New Garden homestead.

Emma F., born 2 mo., 21, 1854; married Charles T. Starr.

Charles W., born 1855; married 10 mo., 12, 1881, Mary A. Caldwell.

WILLIAM WELLS, one of the prosperous farmers of Westtown township, was born in Sussex, England, and is a son of William and Mary (Playfoot) Wells of that place. In the spring of 1853 our subject emigrated from his native land and located in Westchester, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged at his trade of carpenter, which he had learned from his father in England.

In the spring of 1859 he moved to Willistown, still working at his trade, but in 1863 he enlisted in the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served as a private until the regiment was mustered out in Philadelphia. His service was in North Carolina and Virginia. After his discharge, he continued to reside in Willistown until 1867, spending the last year upon a farm. In that year he moved to West Goshen and continued farming upon two different farms until the spring of 1875, when he settled in Easttown and for one year more engaged in farming. The next year he sold his interests and bought his present homestead of one hundred and ten acres in Westtown township, which is a portion of the original estate of Thomas Henderson. Turning over the management of the farm to his son, Herbert, in 1882, he moved to the Chester County Home, of which he took charge and managed it as steward for four years, giving entire satisfaction. From there he went to Westchester and was warden of the county jail for eight years, when in 1894 he retired to his homestead and is now enjoying the life of an agriculturist.

His political affiliations have always been with the Republican party, and he has served as supervisor of Westtown township. Fraternally Mr. Wells was for many years a member of the order of Knights of Pythias.

On October 20, 1855, Mr. Wells was married to Mary Mills, who was born in Sussex, England, June 16, 1833. Eight children were born to them, but they lost three children within nine days by diphtheria, and the others are as follows: Harriet Jane, born July 19, 1856, married Robert Walsh, lives in Coatesville, Pennsylvania, and have one child, Earl Barton, born in 1898; Herbert James, born March 9, 1858, married March 9, 1881, Mary Dickerson, born February 5, 1858, and she is the daughter of Joseph and Phoebe Ann (Mercer) Dickerson, of West Goshen township. Herbert manages the homestead, carrying on general farming and dairying, and he and his wife have an adopted child, Mildred Boyd Wells, born June 3, 1890; Edward Thomas, born September 18, 1860, resides in East Chicago, was married, March 9, 1880, to Elma L. Baily, by whom he had one child who died in infancy and one living, Walter Wells, who married Jessie Hardeastle; second, he married Mary Ranbo, and they have three children, Edna, Thorton and Pearl; Henry Evans, born May 1, 1862, died of diphtheria, May 24, 1875; Wilmer Baker, born April 30, 1864, died May 15, 1875, of the same disease; Elwood Smedley, born August 15, 1866, married Luella Mitchell, no issue; George Downing, born May 20, 1871, died May 20, 1875, of the same disease; Warrington William, born November 4, 1875, resides in Philadelphia, and is employed in the office of the general manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He married Bertha Potter, a daughter of Matthew and Ella Potter of Valley township; no issue.

ISAAC NEWTON HENDERSON, one of the successful farmers of Westtown, Pennsylvania, was born October 1, 1852, on the original Henderson homestead, where he now resides, and which was purchased by his ancestor, James Henderson, from Isaac Covington, March 8, 1818, for four thousand one hundred and sixty-five dollars. He was educated in the public schools and at Wickersham Academy, Marietta, Lancaster county, and he always followed the calling of a farmer and dairyman. For a number of years he has been one of the prominent Democrats of his locality, and served his party and the community in various offices, at present being the efficient supervisor, as well as serving upon the school board. Fraternally Mr. Henderson has been a member of the orders of Odd Fellows and Red Men for some years and is very popular in both organizations, as well as throughout the township where he has always made his home. While not a member of any denomination, his sympathies are with the Baptist church, whose services he attends and gives liberally towards its support.

On December 25, 1877, he was married to Ella Maria Cloud, and she was born August 3, 1858, and is a daughter of William Cloud and his wife, Anna M. (Pearson) Cloud, of East Goshen township. Nine children have been born of this marriage, as follows: George W., born February 27, 1879; Anna C., born November 27, 1880; Etta Jane, born October 29, 1882; Arthur C., born May 30, 1885, died August 26, 1885; Howard Pearson, born March 10, 1888; Katie, born January 25, 1891; Estella Grace, born January 5, 1894; Charles LeRoy, born November 26, 1895; William Cloud, born September 26, 1897.

The ancestry of our subject begins with a James Henderson, who died February 5, 1842, when about seventy-seven years of age, and his wife, Sarah Wain, to whom he was married December 17, 1789, by John Bartholomew, J. P. The wife died April 21, 1858, aged eighty-eight years, six months and eight days. She was a daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Steel, nee Pierce) Wain. Mrs. Wain was the widow of Andrew Steel, to whom she had been married April 1, 1758, and she was married to Samuel Wain on November 6, 1767. Mr. and Mrs. James Henderson had children as follows: John, born September 9, 1790, died May 20, 1842; Samuel, born April 13, 1793, died December 8, 1882; Eber, born December 19, 1795, died March 5, 1873; Sidney (daughter), born May 14, 1798, died November 4, 1806; Joseph, born August 23, 1804, died August 17, 1865, married Eliza Ann, who died September 26, 1861, aged fifty-eight years, and they had two children, viz: Sidney, died in infancy, and George Washington, born April 18, 1836.

Of the above family Samuel Henderson married Susanna Faucett, who died March 14, 1835, aged thirty-seven years, one month and seventeen days: she was a daughter of John and Charity Faucett. The children of Samuel and Susanna Henderson were as follows: James W., born September 23, 1818, died January 15, 1853, married Mary G. Fiss, and they had two children, viz: Elery Channing, born September 21, 1848, died January 29, 1856, and Samuel James Wain, born January 30, 1853; John D. (father of our subject) was born October 19, 1822, died April 11, 1862. He married Eliza Jane Burns, born in 1822, and died January 8, 1890, and she was the daughter of Matthew Burns. The children of John D. and Eliza Henderson were as follows: Isaac Newton, subject, and Susanna, born December 6, 1855, married G. Pearson Cloud.

T. ELWOOD WOLLASTON. By thrift, frugality, energy and perseverance, T. Elwood Wollaston, an esteemed and well known citizen of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, has attained a prominent position among the representative agriculturists of the community and has achieved a remarkable degree of success in all his enterprises. He is a son of Thomas and Minerva Wollaston.

The common schools of New Garden township and vicinity afforded T. Elwood Wollaston a practical education which thoroughly qualified him for a life of usefulness and activity. Shortly after the completion of his studies he engaged in farming pursuits, and this occupation has engrossed his entire time and attention ever since. His farm in New Garden township consists of one hundred and forty-five acres of rich and arable land, highly cultivated and improved, whereon he conducts extensive and general farming operations. Mr. Wollaston is upright and conscientious in all his business transactions, is a regular attendant at the meetings of the Society of Friends, and his political affiliations are with the Independent Republican party.

Mr. Wollaston was united in marriage to Emma Cranston, daughter of Joseph Cranston, of Delaware, and four children were born of this union, all of whom are unmarried—Harvey, Walter T., Percy E. and Howard C. Wollaston. The mother of these children died in 1887. Mr. Wollaston then chose for his second wife Jennie Clark, daughter of the late Joseph Clark, who was for many years a representative agriculturist of Londonderry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM N. KELTON. The Kelton family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, which numbers among its members William N. Kelton, a prosperous agriculturist of New Garden township, is one of the earliest known in its history, and in all its generations from the first to the last it has had representatives who have been prominent in every useful and honorable walk of life.

The first American ancestor was James Kelton, who was born in Scotland in 1695, came to this country from the north of Ireland prior to the year 1735, and took up his residence in New London. Later he purchased five hundred acres of land in Londongrove, near the site of the town of West Grove, and erected a house in which many of his descendants resided. His first wife, Margaretta Kelton, born in Scotland in 1699, died at West Grove, in the sixty-sixth year of her age. When Mr. Kelton attained the age of seventy-five years, he married Mary Hackett, aged eighteen years, a resident of New Garden, near Avondale. They were the parents of two children, James and Margaret. Mr. Kelton died in 1781, and by his will he directed that his son James should be taught Latin and Greek if he desired it.

Hon. James Kelton, Jr., son of James and Mary Kelton, was born in 1776, and was reared and educated in his native county. He became one of the prominent men of the community and was the first incumbent of the office of postmaster of West Grove, serving in that capacity for twenty years; was sheriff of the county for three years, and served ten years in the assembly and four in the state senate. For a number of years he was a stockholder of the first stage route in the United States, which was operated between the cities of Philadelphia and Baltimore. In his political views he was a Democrat, and in religious matters he was an adherent of the faith of the Presbyterian church. On February 7, 1793, occurred the marriage of James Kelton, Jr., and Agnes Mackey, daughter of David Mackey, Esq., and the following named children were born to them: David, John M., James, Mary Jackson, Robert, Joseph, Agnes Lambson, Margaretta, George, Julia, and Rachel McClenahan. The father of these children died November 25, 1844, aged sixty-eight years; his wife passed away May 16, 1823.

John M. Kelton, second son of Hon. James and Agnes Kelton, and grandfather of William N. Kelton, was born February 1, 1795, and subsequently became one of the leading and public-spirited citizens of the township. He organized and was commissioned captain of a company during the war of 1812, but owing to some reason it was never called into active service. He was instrumental in the organization of Lincoln, then Ashton, University, and a promoter of the building of the Philadelphia & Baltimore Central Railroad. In his political affiliations he was a Republican, and was elected by that party to serve as justice of the peace, and also director of the poor of the county, holding the first named office for forty years and the latter for twelve years. On December 10, 1818, he married Elizabeth Correy, and two children were born to them: Robert C., and Ellen, who became the wife of James Mackey, a resident of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Captain Kelton died December 10, 1886, having attained the advanced age of ninety-one years. His wife's death occurred August 7, 1872, in her seventy-ninth year.

Robert C. Kelton, only son of Captain John M. and Elizabeth Kelton, and father of William N. Kelton, was born at West Grove, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 3, 1819. During his early youth he was a regular attendant at the common and private schools of the neighborhood, and after laying aside his books pursued the occupation of farming in his native township for one year. He then located in Wilmington, Delaware, and engaged in the grocery business, but at the expiration of four years he returned to the state of Pennsylvania and settled in what is now known as Kelton, the station being named in his honor. He purchased a farm of seventy acres which he cultivated and improved, making it a profitable source of income, and in connection with this industry he was the owner of a warehouse, which he erected on his property in 1868. Like his father, he tendered his services in defense of his country, enlisting in 1863 in the Pennsylvania militia, as a member of one of the regiments called out to defend the state against General Lee's second northern invasion. Mr. Kelton was formerly a Democrat, but for a number of years has voted the Republican ticket. He was appointed the first postmaster of Kelton, serving from 1874 to 1889, and he also occupied the position of station agent of the same town for forty-two years, and was then put on the pension roll of the Pennsylvania Railway Company. He is yet living, at the age of eighty-two years.

Mr. Kelton was united in marriage, March 21, 1848, to Martha E. Nelson, a daughter of William Nelson, of Penn township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Mary, died in childhood; May, also died in early life; William N.; John, married Elizabeth Barrett, of Arlington, Illinois; and Ellie Kelton, who was manager of the telegraph office at Kelton for eleven years and then married James P. Evans, of Oxford, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

William N. Kelton, eldest son of Robert C. and Martha E. Kelton, was born in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, April 15, 1850. He acquired a practical education in the common schools of the vicinity, which he attended until he attained the age of thirteen years, when he removed with his parents to Kelton, and his education was resumed in the schools there, after which he was a pupil at Shortlidge's Academy, in Kennett Square, and the New London Academy, which he attended during the years 1866 and 1867. After his graduation from the latter named institution he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, which occupation he has followed up to the present time (1903), being the owner of a productive farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres, and an extensive and profitable dairy, located in the township of New Garden. Mr. Kelton is a Republican in politics, and keeps well informed on the important political questions of the day; being a man of more than ordinary ability and judgment, he was chosen to serve in the capacity of school director and auditor, which offices he has filled for the past six years. He is a prominent member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Grange.

Ellewood Michener

On December 5, 1883, Mr. Kelton married Anna Brown, daughter of the late David M. and Alice (Tweed) Brown, of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Robert B. and Mary T. Kelton, both of whom are unmarried. The family are earnest and faithful members of the Presbyterian church of New London, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

ELLWOOD MICHENER, during his life one of the most worthy and highly respected citizens of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was a descendant of a family whose name occurs on the records of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, as early as 1686.

The first American ancestors of whom there is any authentic record was John and Sarah Michener, who removed to Abington, Pennsylvania, in 1715, accompanied by their family which consisted of six children. The line of descent from these ancestors is as follows.

William Michener, son of John and Sarah Michener, was born in 1696, and subsequently became one of the early settlers of Plumstead, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, becoming the owner of a tract of land which consisted of four hundred acres, in 1725. He was united in marriage to Margery Kester and ten children were born to them. His widow died February 15, 1821, at the advanced age of ninety-three years.

Mordecai Michener, son of William and Margery Michener, was born January 30, 1723, and he was given a portion of his father's estate. In 1784 he disposed of this property, which consisted of one hundred and thirty acres, and removed to a farm in Londongrove, near West Grove Meeting House, where he resided for the remainder of his life. In 1748 he married Sarah Fisher, daughter of John and Elizabeth Fisher, and the following named children were born to them: John, Barak, Deborah, Mordecai, Elizabeth, Robert, Catherine and Sarah Michener.

Mordecai Michener, son of Mordecai and Sarah Michener, was born January 28, 1759, on the old homestead near West Grove, Chester county, which he retained possession of during his entire life-time. He was united in marriage to Alice Dunn, who was a native of Bucks county, but later removed to Chester county with her parents, Ralph and Anna Dunn. Four children were the issue of this marriage. Mr. Michener died January 6, 1854, having attained the extreme old age of ninety-five years; he survived his wife for many years, her death having occurred August 30, 1824, in the sixty-third year of her age.

Dr. Ezra Michener, youngest son of Mordecai and Alice Michener, and father of Ellwood Michener, was born at West Grove, Chester county, where he obtained a liberal education. Having decided to lead a professional life, he took up the study of medicine, and subsequently became one of the most prominent and skillful medical practitioners of West Grove. His practice was characterized by that clear perception which passes for intuition, and that care in diagnosis and treatment which insure thorough work and satisfactory results. He was one of the committee appointed to prepare a constitution and by-laws for the Chester County Medical Society, which was founded in 1828. He was one of the promoters and most active members of the "Guardian Society for Preventing Drunkenness," supposed to have been the first temperance society organized in Chester county. He was also the author of several valuable works in relation to the geography, conchology and zoology of Chester county. He married Sarah Spencer, of Chester county. They were the parents of several children, two of whom attained years of maturity, namely: Lea, who was killed while mining on the railroad, and Ellwood, mentioned hereinafter.

Ellwood Michener, son of Dr. Ezra and Sarah (Spencer) Michener, was born in West Grove, Chester county, February 25, 1821, but in his infancy his parents removed to New Garden township, and he acquired his education in the common schools of that locality and at West Chester. His business career was principally devoted to agricultural pursuits, and in addition to this vocation he performed considerable work as a surveyor and conveyancer. He also served in the capacity of director in the Kennett Bank for twenty years, being one of the first to hold that office. He was a man of sound business qualifications and practical experience, which well qualified him for the various local offices to which he was elected by his fellow townsmen. In politics he was an adherent of the Prohibition party, and like his father, took a deep and abiding interest in the cause of temperance. He was an active member of Friends Meeting and was clerk for many years.

On November 11, 1847, Mr. Michener married Ruthanna C. Gilpin, a daughter of George F. and Elizabeth (Horlan) Gilpin, the former named having been an enterprising and successful agriculturist of Birmingham, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Michener's death occurred February 8, 1902; he was survived by his widow, a woman of rare intellectual gifts and excellent traits of character, who is residing in quiet and retirement in New Garden township, Chester county.

SAMUEL WICKERSHAM, a well known and prosperous agriculturist residing in the township of New Garden, Chester county, Pennsylvania, was born in that township, on the farm where he now lives, July 26, 1845, the son of Nathan and Eliza Townsend Wickersham.

He acquired his education in the common schools of his native county and in the Millersville State Normal School, and turned to farming as an occupation. He came into possession of the farms comprising one hundred and twenty acres of choice land, which, under his industry and good management have come to be known among the most productive in that section and yield him a good return for his labor. In addition to his farming interests Mr. Wickersham has served as president of the National Bank of Avondale since its organization in 1891. He was one of the first stockholders of the Building Association of London Grove, and was early connected with its management. Some years after the association was founded there was a tendency among the membership to withdraw and the association go into liquidation, but largely through his efforts the organization was kept intact, and brought again to a prosperous condition. He has always been a strong advocate of the saving fund feature of the Building Association policy, and time has shown the wisdom of his counsel. Mr. Wickersham is now secretary of the association, and has been for many years. For twelve years he filled the office of director of the poor in a manner that won much commendation. He is a Republican, though the public welfare as he sees it is always paramount to party issues.

Mr. Wickersham married Mary J. Hoopes, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Walker Hoopes, of New Garden township, 2 mo., 12, 1873. Both Mr. Wickersham and his wife are members of the Society of Friends and contribute liberally toward its support, cherishing the traditions of the sect to which they were born.

EZRA J. WEBSTER. The ancestry of Ezra J. Webster may be traced back on both sides of his house to the Smedley family of Chester county, Pennsylvania. His father, George Webster, was born in 1835, near Christiana, Sadsbury township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and received his education in the common schools and at the State Normal School at Millersville. He was a farmer and followed agricultural pursuits during all his life. In 1866 he was married to Phœbe Michener, daughter of Dr. Ezra Michener, of New Garden, Pennsylvania.

Ezra J. Webster, son of George and Phœbe (Michener) Webster, was born in London Grove township, January 9, 1871, and was educated at Martin's Academy, and at the Friends School at Jenkintown, near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He is also a farmer and has a flourishing farm of twenty-three acres, including a dairy of seventeen selected head of cattle. In his political affiliations he is a strong and independent Republican, and he is a worthy member of the Society of Friends. He resides at New Garden.

Mr. Webster married Elma Anna, daughter of Ellwood and Anna (Cope) Cooper, on September 6, 1893, at 117 Claymont street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; she was born December 20, 1868. They are the parents of only one child, a son, Ellwood M. Webster.

Mr. Webster's wife is also descended from the Smedley family, her paternal grandfather having married Rebecca Ann Kirkwood, of Philadelphia. On the maternal side, the grandfather of Elma A. Webster was Jonathan Cope, who was born in East Bradford township, August 10, 1810, and died at East Goshen, November 27, 1872; he was the son of Jonathan Cope and Zillah (Darlington) Cope, and married Gulielma M. Thomas, October 6, 1842, at Goshen Meeting; she was born in East Goshen township March 26, 1813, and died there February 16, 1854; they are both buried at Goshen Meeting. Jonathan Cope, the grandfather, kept a general store at Rocky Hill, in East Goshen, for many years. Mr. Ellwood Cooper, father of Mr. Ezra Webster's wife, Elma A., was born in Lancaster county, September 27, 1841; he has been married twice, his first wife (mother of Elma A.), having died in Londongrove township, March 29, 1870. He removed to Philadelphia about 1880, and married January 4, 1882, Rachel P. Wills, and is engaged in the wholesale boot and shoe business in the Quaker city.

EMMOR D. GAWTHROP, a prominent citizen and enterprising agriculturist of New Garden township, is a representative of a family whose history is closely identified with that of Chester county, Pennsylvania, his ancestors, James and George Gawthrop, making that vicinity their home in the early part of the eighteenth century. They were the sons of Thomas Gawthrop, a native of England, who was born in 1709, married Isabel Crossfield, and his death occurred in the county of Westmoreland, England, September 29, 1780.

Abm. L. Pennock

The Lewis Printing Co

George Gawthrop, son of Thomas Gawthrop, was united in marriage December 31, 1772, to Jane Allen, a daughter of James and Jane Allen, of East Marlborough, and shortly after their union they took up their residence in London Grove township, Chester county. Their son, Thomas, married November 13, 1800, Elizabeth Thompson, and the following named children were born to them: Sarah, Ann, Daniel, Jane, Allen, Lydia, Elizabeth and James Gawthrop.

Daniel Gawthrop, father of Emmor D. Gawthrop, was born in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1805, obtained a common school education, and followed farming as his vocation in life. He married Elizabeth Mitchell, a daughter of Joseph Mitchell, who was prominently identified with the agricultural interests of the state of Delaware. Their children are: Sarah, wife of William H. Way, and mother of four children; Lydia A., unmarried; Amy, wife of Alexander Turner, and Emmor D. Gawthrop. The death of Mr. Gawthrop occurred in 1837, he being then only thirty-two years of age.

Emmor D. Gawthrop, only son of Daniel and Elizabeth Gawthrop, was born on his father's farm in London Grove township, Chester county, in 1837. His preliminary education was acquired in the public schools of the vicinity, and later he was a pupil at Ercildown Academy under the competent preceptorship of Smedley Darlington. He subsequently devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits in his native township, continuing his operations until 1863, when he removed to his present home in New Garden township, his farm consisting of one hundred and seventeen acres of rich and fertile soil, with a dairy of thirty head attached. During his entire business career Mr. Gawthrop has displayed wonderful industry and a resolute purpose, and in the management of his farm has met with gratifying success.

In 1863 Mr. Gawthrop responded to the call of President Lincoln for an additional force of one hundred thousand men, and enlisted in the Eighty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, under the command of Colonel Murphy, his regiment being ordered to perform garrison duty. In his political convictions he is a Republican, having served his township in the capacity of tax collector, constable and school director, being the incumbent of the latter named office for nine consecutive years. He was one of the originators of the Order of Good Templars, and is also a member of the Improved Order of Red Men. He holds a birthright membership in the Society of Friends, the principles of which he strictly adheres to.

In 1862 Mr. Gawthrop married Phœbe S. Thompson, a daughter of Richard Thompson, an enterprising and successful farmer of Chester county, Pennsylvania.

ABRAHAM L. PENNOCK AND CASPAR PENNOCK. The name of Pennock is of Saxon origin, and the earliest ancestor of the American branch of the family was Christopher Pennock (1), who was an officer in the military service of William of Orange, whom he accompanied to Ireland, and fought in the battle of the Boyne in 1690. He made his home in Cornwall, England, and married Mary Collet, a daughter of George Collet, of Clonmel, Tipperary county, Ireland, and the following named children were born to them: Nathaniel, Joseph and Annie Pennock. He subsequently emigrated to Pennsylvania, where he died in 1701.

Joseph Pennock (2), son of Christopher and Mary (Collet) Pennock, was born in 1677, in Clonmel, Ireland. In one of his passages to this country, in a letter of marque, he was captured by a French ship of war and confined in France as a prisoner upwards of a year, and endured much hardship. In 1702 he settled in Philadelphia, where he engaged in the mercantile business. In about the year 1714 he removed to West Marlborough, Chester county, and settled on a large tract of land of which he became proprietor by virtue of a grant from William Penn to the Rogers brothers, and from them to George Collet, his grandfather. He there, in 1738, erected a large mansion. "Primitive Hall," in which he died in 1771. The building material of Primitive Hall was brought from England, as were also all of the household goods. Joseph Pennock was the father of twelve children, the seventh of whom was named after himself, Joseph Pennock (3). He also reared a large family, among whom was a son, George Pennock (4).

Abraham L. Pennock (5), son of George Pennock (4), was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 8 mo., 7, 1786. For thirty years he resided in that city, engaged in business first as a dry goods merchant, the firm being Pennock & Robbins, and afterwards in the wire business of the firm of Sellers & Pennock. Here he was the originator of the riveted hose, the superiority of which over the sewed enabled the firm to bring it into universal use, and caused the United States government to enter its contract with them for the making of all mail bags used in its service. In 1840 he retired from business and moved to Haverford township. Subsequently he undertook the care of a number of estates. The exercise of his accustomed foresight and good judgment gained for him the love and approbation of those for whom he labored. In the fall of 1845 he moved to Upper Darby township, where he remained until his death, 5 mo., 12, 1868. He was pre-eminently a man who had the courage of his convictions, and when James G. Birney was nominated by the Liberty party for president, Mr. Pennock voted for him with the anticipation that his vote would be (as it was in fact) the only one cast for Mr. Birney in the township. When slavery was advocated in the South, as "a divine institution," and apologized for in the North, he would neither use the products of slave labor nor allow his family to do so, preferring at greater expense and trouble to procure sugars from small land holders, who were compensated for their labor, and cotton, linen goods or pure linens, in place of the cottons of the South. His entire life was exemplified with high ideals, and he was ever ready to aid the temperance cause with purse or pen. He erected at his own expense a Temperance Inn for the accommodation of travelers, in order to forestall the building of one already begun where liquors were to be sold. The poet Whittier wrote of him: "He was my friend and councillor in the dark and troubled times of 1838-39 and '40, a man of antique heroism, against whom the bitterest enemies of freedom could find nothing to urge. I think he came nearer to my ideal of a true Christian gentleman than anyone I ever knew." How much he did by tongue and purse and the influence of his noble life and character for the cause of freedom, only those who in those years were closely associated with him could know. He was a tower of strength to the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society, and in his death a righteous cause was deprived of a most zealous advocate.

At Darby Meeting, 6 mo., 7, 1810, Mr. Pennock married Elizabeth Sellers, daughter of John and Mary (Coleman) Sellers, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She was born 8 mo., 26, 1791, in Philadelphia, and died 6 mo., 18, 1870, at Hoodland, Upper Darby. She inherited this estate from her father, it having had for its first owner under William Penn, John Blunston, of Darby, who sold the property to John Hood, from whom the homestead takes its name.

Mary (Coleman) Sellers, wife of John Sellers, was a victim to the terrible yellow fever scourge of Philadelphia, which prevailed during the years 1793 and 1794, and at her death she was survived by three small children—John, Elizabeth and Ann. John Sellers subsequently made his home with his brother, Nathan Sellers, in Philadelphia, and he was accompanied by his daughter Elizabeth, the other two children, John and Ann, finding a home with their grandparents, John and Ann (Gibson) Sellers, at Sellers Hall, Upper Darby. When ready to retire from business, John Sellers removed to Wayside, Upper Darby, which he had inherited from his father, John Sellers the first, it being formerly a portion of the Blunston or Hood tract.

While residing at Wayside, Elizabeth Sellers became acquainted with her husband that was to be. Riding by her father's door, young Mr. Pennock was attracted by a lithe young figure sliding on the ice at the road side; an acquaintance ensued, and this growing into friendship and finally into that which was stronger, engagement and marriage followed, and the two became loving husband and wife. It was a case where true love ran smoothly, and they lived for many years together a happy and devoted couple. Mrs. Pennock was a woman of engaging manners, conscientious and faithful in the discharge of all her duties, devoted to husband and children, and in all respects was everything that a wife and mother should be. She took an active and keen interest in all measures tending to the betterment and uplifting of humanity generally, and of the colored race especially. She was thorough and practical in the performance of her work, attended to household matters most sedulously, and in every respect was a helpmate to her husband. In girlhood and young womanhood she was sprightly and venturesome, but with matrimonial life came a beautiful sedateness, and her attention to family and friends was unremitting. To the stranger she gave a hearty welcome and ready sympathy, to each and every worthy person in distress she extended a helping hand, and she was considerate and thoughtful of the feelings of all with whom she was brought in contact. She was an intelligent reader of the daily journals as also of other literature, and kept herself well informed as to the passing events of the day, more particularly those occurring in the political, philanthropic and religious world.

To Abraham L. and Elizabeth (Sellers) Pennock were born the following named children: George, Mary C., John S., Joseph L., Sarah, Ann, Casper, Abraham L. and Isabella Pennock.

Abraham L. Pennock, fifth son of Abraham L. and Elizabeth (Sellers) Pennock, first married Abbie Jane Aldrich, by whom he had four children: Herbert, Caspar, Charles Earl, deceased, and George L. Herbert A., the eldest of these, married Susan Morton Brown, and their children are: Abbie J., David B., Crosby and Nellie Pennock. By his second marriage with Anna M. Cadwallader, Abraham L. Pennock had seven children: Aldrich J., Samuel S., Olivia C., Joseph L., Henry S., Anna L. and Elizabeth. Samuel S. married Alice Foster, of Westerly, Rhode Island, and has two children: Charles F. and Samuel S. Pennock. Olivia became the wife of Frank Laird, and has one child, Anna Laird.

Casper Pennock, second son of Abraham L. and Abbie Jane (Aldrich) Pennock, was born at Haverford, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, February 2, 1855. He was educated principally at the Friends' Select School in Philadelphia, and the institution at Westtown taught by David Reese. At this time his father was engaged in the nursery business, including the hothouse cultivation of plants and flowers on the West Chester road, and as soon as Caspar left school he became an assistant in the establishment. Under his father's skillful tutelage he mastered the business of floriculture in all its details, and after the former's retirement in 1893 he took entire charge. Previous to this time, however, the nursery feature had been abandoned with a view to paying all attention to the cultivation of roses. Caspar Pennock conducted the business alone until 1898, when he formed a partnership with his brother George L., and since then the firm name has been C. & G. L. Pennock. They make a specialty of the cultivation of roses, and send the entire product to their brother Samuel, who is conducting a wholesale business in Philadelphia. Experts say that the Pennock Brothers have one of the best equipped plants of this kind in the country. At present they have more than two acres of ground under glass, and contemplate an addition which will double their space. The heating plant, which is of the best modern construction, consists of three large steam boilers, with an aggregate capacity of two hundred horse power. The ventilating plant, so indispensable an adjunct of such an establishment, is also the best that can be devised, and equal to any demands made upon it for air distribution through the various conservatories. The output of the firm is eagerly sought after by all the dealers, and readily commands the highest market prices; and it is needless to add that as the demand for flowers in the large cities is very great, the Pennock Brothers have been conducting a profitable and constantly increasing business. Mr. Pennock devotes the greater part of his time and attention to his extensive and exacting business, in which he is regarded as an expert, and one of the most successful propagators in the state.

J. LIDDON PENNOCK.

Mr. Pennock married Hannah B. Levis, daughter of J. Harrison and Sarah Crozer (Longstreth) Levis, by whom he has two children—Laura Aldrich and Sarah Frances Pennock.

JOSEPH LIDDON PENNOCK, deceased, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 4 mo., 22, 1819, a son of Abraham L. and Elizabeth (Sellers) Pennock. His early education was obtained in the schools of his native city, and this was supplemented by attendance at Haverford College, from which institution he was graduated. For several years after the completion of his studies he assisted with the work on his father's farm, and resided under the parental roof. His first business venture was in the coal and lumber trade at Holmsburg, Philadelphia; later he was engaged for a number of years in the horticultural business, and the latter years of his life were spent at his home in Upper Darby township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania. He was just and conscientious in all the relations of life, was interested in numerous enterprises leading toward the social and moral improvement of society, and like his illustrious father, was an earnest temperance worker and gave much of his time and thought in support of the anti-slavery cause. He was an ardent admirer and firm friend of John G. Whittier, James Russell Lowell, Charles C. Burleigh, Lucretia Mott and others who were co-workers with his father in the cause of freedom for the negro. In religion he followed the traditions of his ancestors.

At East Goshen Meeting, Chester county, Pennsylvania, 12 mo., 15, 1847, J. Liddon Pennock married Lydia Ann Eldridge, daughter of Enos and Susanna (Hoopes) Eldridge, and to this marriage was born the following named children: 1. Sarah, born 2 mo., 3, 1849, became the wife of Francis Cadwallader Biddle, and their children are: Lydia Pennock and Mary Canby Biddle. 2. Anne, born 8 mo., 21, 1852, died 1 mo., 17, 1853. 3. Joseph Eldridge, born 12 mo., 25, 1853; he married Mary Lippincott, and their children are: Pauline Scull and Margaret Liddon Pennock. 4. Abraham Liddon, born 8 mo., 25, 1855; he married Ida V. Hay, and they are the parents of one surviving child, Clara Hay Pennock. 5. Enos Eldridge, born 7 mo., 9, 1857; he married Annie E. Smith, and the issue of this marriage was one son, Eldridge Liddon, who died in infancy. 6. Maria Eldridge, born 10 mo., 27, 1862, became the wife of Walter South, and their children are: Helen Pennock and Edith Knight South. J. Liddon Pennock, the father of these children, died at Jacksonville, Florida, 11 mo., 18, 1870; he was survived by his wife, who resides at 2146 Green street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

PUSEY P. WOLLASTON. The progenitor of the Wollaston family in America was Jeremiah Wollaston, who was one of the two hundred and one "Friends" who affixed their names to a document which was prepared May 12, 1735, at a Quarterly Meeting held at Concord, and sent to George the Second, King of Great Britain, praying for a settlement of the border difficulties and that they be allowed to exercise their former liberty. The descendants of Jeremiah Wollaston are numerous, and represent some of the most prominent and influential families of Chester county, Pennsylvania, the majority of them settling in New Garden township.

Pusey P. Wollaston, son of Thomas Wol-

Wollaston, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 2, 1848. He acquired a practical education which prepared him for the activities of life at the schools of Fairville, a suburb of Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, and subsequently learned the trade of coach-maker and wheelwright at Gum Tree, Chester county. After thoroughly mastering the details of this business he removed to New London, then to Avondale and later to Wilmington, and in all these various localities he devoted his energy to his chosen line of industry, that of coach-maker and wheelwright. He then changed his place of residence to North Carolina, where he spent some eight months, after which he returned to New Garden township, his birth place, and has since conducted general farming. His ground is well cultivated and therefore productive, and the goodly income he derives from his products is the result of diligence and perseverance. In his political views Mr. Wollaston adheres to the principles of the Prohibition party, being active and earnest in the support of their candidates. In his religious convictions he follows the faith of his ancestors, who were all members of the Society of Friends.

In 1873 Mr. Wollaston married Mary Cranston, a daughter of Joseph Cranston, a resident of Delaware, and a farmer by occupation. The issue of this marriage was one child, Louis A., whose death occurred at an early age. After the death of his wife, which occurred in 1895, Mr. Wollaston was united in marriage to Elizabeth Hollowell, a daughter of John Hollowell, a prominent citizen of Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. They were the parents of one child, who died in childhood. Mrs. Wollaston passed away February 23, 1903.

JOHN HARPER, a well respected and esteemed citizen of the township of New Garden, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has been for many years actively and successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits near Avondale, was born in Strickersville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1844, the son of Enoch and Sarah (Kennedy) Harper.

John Harper was reared and received a practical education in the public schools of Strickersville, Pennsylvania, but after attaining the age of thirteen years his parents removed to Delaware and his education was completed in the schools of that state. He commenced his business career by engaging in farming pursuits, which line of industry he followed for a number of years, and then learned the trade of butcher. After successfully following this occupation for a number of years he returned to his former labor, that of farming, and has continued his operations up to the present time (1903). His farm contains sixty-nine acres of ground, all of which is under a high state of cultivation and therefore very productive, and during the passing years it has yielded him a fair income for the amount of work bestowed upon it. In his political affiliations Mr. Harper is a Republican, and takes a keen interest in all local affairs; in his religious tendencies he is a firm believer in the creed of the Society of Friends, and in fraternal matters he is connected with the Grange and the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

On January 29, 1874, occurred the marriage of John Harper and Eliza Idall, the latter named being a daughter of Amos Idall, an enterprising and progressive farmer of New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Sarah E., wife of Howard Yarnall, and mother of one child; Mary L., unmarried, and John A. Harper, also unmarried.

WILLIAM MARSHALL WALTON is a representative of a family that has long been identified with the interests of the township of New Garden, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his birth occurred. He was a son of Joel and Lydia (Yeatman) Walton.

William Walton, grandfather of William M. Walton, was born on the old homestead in New Garden township, Chester county, in 1780, and after obtaining the limited educational advantages afforded by the district schools of that day learned the trade of shoemaker. This business he followed for a number of years, but later purchased the old homestead and devoted his energies to farming interests, and as enterprise, energy and honorable dealing were the chief characteristics of his life, his business career was attended with a large degree of prosperity. He married Sarah Humes, a daughter of John Humes, a farmer of London Grove township, and their children were: Chalkley J., who married Philena Chandler, whose death occurred in 1892; they were the parents of six children; Reuben, who married Ada Springer; he is now deceased; Joel M., father of William M. Walton. The father of these children died in 1857, and the mother passed away in 1893.

Joel M. Walton, father of William M. Walton, was also born on the ancestral estate in New Garden township, Chester county, in 1828. He was educated in the common schools of the locality, and upon reaching man's estate became a farmer butcher by occupation. In politics he was an ardent Republican, and in religion a Friend. He was twice married, his first wife having been Lydia Yeatman, daughter of Marshall Yeatman, who was engaged in agricultural pursuits in London Grove township. Their children were: Sarah, unmarried; Howard, married Amy Larkin, and they are the parents of three children; Mary, wife of Samuel Spencer, and mother of three children, and William Marshall Walton. Mr. Walton married for his second wife, Hannah Michner, who is living at the present time (1903).

William M. Walton, eldest son of Joel M. and Lydia Walton, received his educational advantages in the schools of Kennett Square, and from the close of his school days up to the present time (1903) has been engaged in agricultural pursuits, carrying on general farming and dairying. In his political sentiments he is an advocate of the Prohibition party and his religious views are in accord with the Society of Friends.

In 1883, Mr. Walton married Emma Satterthwait, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Palmer) Satterthwait, the former named being superintendent of the Woolen Mills of Wilmington, Delaware. Their children were: Percy J., unmarried; Maud D., unmarried; Maurice M., unmarried, and Bertha M. Walton, deceased.

SWITHIN SHORTLIDGE. The Shortlidge family of Chester county, Pennsylvania, one of the most prominent in that section of the state, is of Scotch-English ancestry and was founded in America by James Shortlidge, a native of England, who settled in Chester county about the time of the Revolutionary war. Many of his descendants still reside in that locality and occupy prominent positions, political, educational and social.

Swithin Shortlidge, son of Evan and Sarah (Hollen) Shortlidge, was born in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, November 11, 1851. He acquired the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of the neighborhood, and subsequently chose the occupation of farming for his life work. In 1873 he changed his place of residence to the west, settling in Illinois, but after remaining in that section for a short period of time he returned to New Garden township, Chester county, purchased a farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres with a dairy of twenty head of cattle attached, which he has successfully operated ever since. His land is highly cultivated, his stock in excellent condition, and the whole appearance of the farm indicates the careful supervision of an experienced agriculturist. Politically Mr. Shortlidge is a Republican, and has served his township in the capacity of supervisor for twelve years, performing the duties of the office in a highly commendatory manner. His fraternal affiliations are with the Masonic Order and the Patrons of Husbandry.

On March 30, 1876, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Shortlidge and Magdiline White, daughter of Richard White, a prosperous farmer of Franklin township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Of this union were born six sons and one daughter—Orville W., Harry, who died in early life, E. Whorton, Harvey G., Ada D., Swithin, Jr., and Raymond Shortlidge. The surviving members of the family are all unmarried. Mr. Shortlidge and his family attend the meetings of the Society of Friends, that being the religious belief of his forefathers.

THOMAS E. MULLIN, who holds a prominent place among the leading citizens of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, is a son of John Mullin, who born about 1800, in county Londonderry, Ireland, whence he emigrated in 1830 to the United States, making the voyage in what now seems the incredible long period of four weeks, but which was then considered a quick passage. John Mullin sailed to America in the "Seine," a three-hundred-ton vessel, and preserved the announcement bill which he took from the walls of Derry. Mr. Mullin on said bill has written the names of the other passengers also. He landed in Philadelphia, where he found employment at his trade of carriage-building with Wilson & Childs, a well known firm, with whom he remained for two years. It is worthy of mention that carriage-builders were, at that time, generally designated as wheelwrights. During Mr. Mullin's stay in Philadelphia, he saw the funeral of Stephen Girard.

Mr. Mullin, while a citizen of Philadelphia, had an opportunity of witnessing one of the most terrible of the epidemics of cholera which, from that time until within a comparatively recent period, visited this country. At the end of two years Mr. Mullin removed to Schuylkill county. He married, in 1836, Ann Walsh, whose parents had emigrated from Ireland and settled in Tamqua, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Mullin were the parents of six children, one of whom holds an especially high place in the regard of the people of Chester county.

Thomas E. Mullin, son of John and Ann (Walsh) Mullin, was born April 25, 1844, at Lumberville, now known as Port Providence, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, and received a very thorough and excellent education, by virtue of which, joined to a marked degree of executive ability, he was enabled to teach successfully in the public schools for a period of seven years. His talents for commercial life were not inferior to his qualifications for the profession of an educator, as was proved by the fact that, for twenty-five years, he successfully conducted a general store in Phoenixville, retiring from business in 1895, in the possession of more than a competency. For thirteen years he held the position of organist in St. Mary's (Roman Catholic) church, being a thorough and enthusiastic musician. He is deeply interested in the cause of temperance, which he advocates both by precept and example, being a total abstainer. When the Total Abstinence Association was organized in Baltimore, February 22, 1872, he was among those present. He has been secretary of St. Mary's Total Abstinence Society ever since its formation in early October, 1872. He is faithful in all the duties of a good citizen, and is ever ready to lend his aid and influence to all projects which commend themselves to his judgment and conscience, as having for their object the advancement of society and the welfare of the community. He adheres to the Roman Catholic faith, and is devoted to his church, but exercises, in his religious opinions, the same liberality which marks his sentiments on other subjects.

Mr. Mullin has never married, but since his retirement from business, has resided with his sister, Miss Eliza Mullin, in his pleasant home at the corner of High and Railroad streets. Miss Mullin, who is a native of Phoenixville, and has resided there all her life, is the center from which radiates the influence which makes the home of her brother so eminently a happy one. The fund of information and wealth of experience possessed by Mr. Mullin cause him to be regarded as an authority on many questions. He is a man of commanding appearance and strikingly intelligent countenance. His integrity of character inspires universal respect, and his winning personality has brought him the affection of a large circle of friends. His nature is eminently social, and, among his many attractive qualities, is a talent for conversation, which he exercises with equal facility on whatever subject happens to be under discussion, and which renders him a delightful entertainer. No one who enjoys the pleasure of Mr. Mullin's acquaintance requires to be told that he is extremely and deservedly popular.

HOWARD STEPHENS WILLIAMS. The Williams family is one of the very oldest in eastern Pennsylvania, and is of Welsh origin. The founder of the American stock came as a resident immigrant in 1698. Until 1726 he was a member of the Great Valley Baptist church, from which he withdrew to become one of the organizers of the Seventh Day Baptist church in Warwick township, with which he was actively identified during the remainder of his life. He died in Whiteland in 1735. His wife was Lettie Perry.

Howard Stephens Williams, of the sixth generation from his immigrant ancestor, was born in Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1874, son of Benjamin Franklin and Joseph (Stephens) Williams. He began his education in the public schools in his home neighborhood, and pursued advanced studies in the Friends Central School in Philadelphia, an institution which afforded what was equivalent to an academical course, graduating from this institution in 1893. Immediately after graduating he was employed by J. M. Pan & Son, grain exporters, where he remained for two years. He then came to Phoenixville and took the office of Elijah Pennypacker and conducted a real estate and conveyancing business. On attaining his majority he was appointed magistrate for his native township, to fill a vacancy, and at the ensuing election he was regularly elected to the office, which he has continued to the present time, and which he has brought to large proportions. In February, 1903, he was elected chief burgess of Phoenixville for a term of three years. In all his business relations, public and private, he is known as entirely capable and far-sighted, and he is universally esteemed for his public-spirit and strict integrity.

Mr. Williams is active in the military affairs of the state, and is senior first lieutenant of Battery C, National Guard of Pennsylvania, and has served with his command in all the recent coal strikes in Pennsylvania when troops were required. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and has attained to the chivalric degrees of the Commandery of Knights Templar, and is also a member of Lulu Shrine, Philadelphia. He was married to Miss Lillian MacVeagh March, only daughter of the late J. Webster March, and a niece of Hon. Wayne MacVeagh.

CHARLES H. HOWELL, for many years prominent in industrial and public affairs in Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, comes of sterling Welsh stock, and his ancestors were among the earliest settlers of Gwynedd township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

The first of these American ancestors was George Howell. His coming to this country, and his life as a pioneer in the wilderness of Pennsylvania, have been so obscured by the lapse of time as to be mere matters of conjecture to his descendants. It is known that his wife's name was Margaret, and that a son Walter was born to them, through whom Charles H. Howell, of Phoenixville, traces his descent. Walter Howell was born October 9, 1734, and was the second child of George and Margaret Howell. He was a farmer and passed his life in the county of his birth. He lived to a very old age, and his remains are buried in the Montgomery Baptist churchyard in Montgomery township. He had a son named Walter, born November 7, 1784, who in early manhood removed to Chester county, and there lived a long life and reared a numerous family. He was a farmer, and a worthy and upright man.

Among the children of the second Walter Howell was Walter Jackson, born at Mt. Vernon, Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 22, 1827. Early in life he removed to Phoenixville, where for many years he was in the employ of the Phoenixville Iron Company, first as a nailer, later as a heater and puddler, and he rendered the company skillful and faithful service. He has an excellent military record to his credit; during the early part of the Civil war he served in Company K, First California Regiment, of which the lamented E. D. Baker, a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, was colonel, and he subsequently served for a year and a half in the Seventy-first Pennsylvania Infantry, under Colonel E. D. Baker. He was a Republican who closely watched the trend of political affairs. In 1849 he married Maria Miller, of East Vincent township, born July 21, 1829, a daughter of John Miller, one of the early residents of Chester county, and to this marriage were born six children. Mrs. Howell is living at the present time (1903).

Charles H. Howell, one of the children of Walter J. and Maria (Miller) Howell, was born August 9, 1850, at Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania. He attended the public schools of the town until he was thirteen years old, at which early age he entered the works of the Phoenix Iron Company, where his father was employed. He was trained in the works, and at the age of twenty years he entered the machine shops as a skilled mechanic. Here he remained for eight years, developing and strengthening his mechanical ideas and gaining in practical manipulation. In 1878 he was transferred to the rolling mill and placed in charge of the machinery and belting. He held this position for six years, fully justifying the confidence of his employers in his ability to handle complex mechanisms. In 1884 he resigned his connection with the Phoenix Iron Company after being twenty-one years in its employ. The same year he was elected justice of the peace for the south district of the town, re-elected from time to time, and is now serving his fourth term, ending in 1904. In this connection the writer of these pages has authority for the assertion that in the preparation of cases for court, Alderman Howell is not surpassed in the county. He is not only accurate, but his skillful penmanship makes his papers a model of beauty. He also served for some years as deputy coroner for the northeastern portion of Chester county. He has developed business ability and administrative skill which he gained by his mechanical training, making him a man of more than ordinary range of ability. He is a Republican in politics and affords his aid in supporting the principles of his party. He is a talented musician, and was a member of the Phoenix Military Band for more than twenty-eight years. He is a member also of various societies, which have utilized his service in the capacity of secretary, as for instance, for the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, Sons of Veterans, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Phoenixville Industrial Association the past seven years. With his family he holds membership with the German Reformed church.

Mr. Howell married Mary A. Hill, a daughter of Abraham D. and Margaret G. Hill, of Pricetown, Berks county, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Howell are the parents of six children: Carrie H., Harry M., Maude H., Walter A., Charles H., and Dorothy S. Howell. Carrie H., the eldest child in this family, inherits the fine gifts of her father in writing and drawing, and is an invaluable assistant to him.

EDWARD D. DUNMORE, a man of great energy and thorough business experience, and prominent among the agriculturists of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is the son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Chaplain) Dunmore, both of whom are natives of England, emigrating to the United States after their marriage and settling on a farm in Schuylkill township, Chester county, where the mother died about thirty years ago, and where the father is residing at the present time (1903). Eight children were born to Daniel and Elizabeth Dunmore, the following named being the only surviving members of the family: Robert S., a prominent citizen of Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania; Elizabeth A., wife of Ellwood Gill, who are now residing on the old homestead farm, and Edward D. Dunmore. Daniel Dunmore possesses the characteristics of promptness, accuracy and reliability, as his successful business career has fully demonstrated.

The educational advantages enjoyed by Edward D. Dunmore were obtained in the common schools of the township, and after laying aside his school books he engaged in farming pursuits. In 1892 he purchased the old Anderson farm, which is located in Charlestown township and contains one hundred and two acres of highly cultivated land, and since that date he has been extensively engaged in farming and dairying, keeping for the latter purpose twenty cows of a fine breed. In politics Mr. Dunmore is a Democrat and has served his township in various capacities, having been a member of the school board for three years, supervisor for four years, and at the present time (1903) is serving his third term as auditor, all of which duties he has discharged with the utmost promptness and fidelity. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and the American Order of Junior Mechanics.

Mr. Dunmore was united in marriage, March 21, 1883, to Annie M. Clark, daughter of John R. Clark, of Uwehlan township, Chester county, who follows the trade of carpenter. Their children are: William Arthur, Helen Letitia, Elizabeth Anderson, Ralph Edward, and John Clark Dunmore.

MRS. LAVINIA W. SHAFER, a native and a life-long resident of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, is of English descent. Her great-grandfather came from England and settled in Village Green, now within the bounds of Delaware county.

Mrs. Shafer was Lavina W. Day, a daughter of Elias and Catherine Day, born May 29, 1837, in a house on the north bank of French creek that had been built more than a hundred years before, in 1734. On the twenty-seventh of January, 1839, this historic old house was swept away in an ice freshet, and Mr. and Mrs. Day were drowned in saving their family. Five children, two girls and three boys, were left orphaned and homeless. A committee of citizens, headed by Dr. Isaac A. Pennypacker, appointed for the relief of those left destitute by the flood, took the Day children in charge and ultimately found homes for them. Lavinia, then less than two years old, was adopted by Miss Sarah Coates, an estimable Quaker lady who lived with her mother, Mrs. Hannah Coates, on a fine farm a little out from Phoenixville. In this home she was given the best of care and training, as well as an affectionate regard that left her no sense of her early loss. She was given a good education by her foster mother, and in time became a teacher in the public schools of Norristown, where she remained for several years.

In 1863, Miss Day married Albert Shafer, a native of Baltimore, who was at that time a clerk in the employ of the Phoenix Iron Company. Mr. Shafer died in 1894, leaving his wife with one son, Harry C. This son is now married, and an employee of the Reading Railroad. He lives in Norristown, but his mother prefers the home of her childhood, where she is passing her later years in great comfort, and in the serene faith of her adopted home.

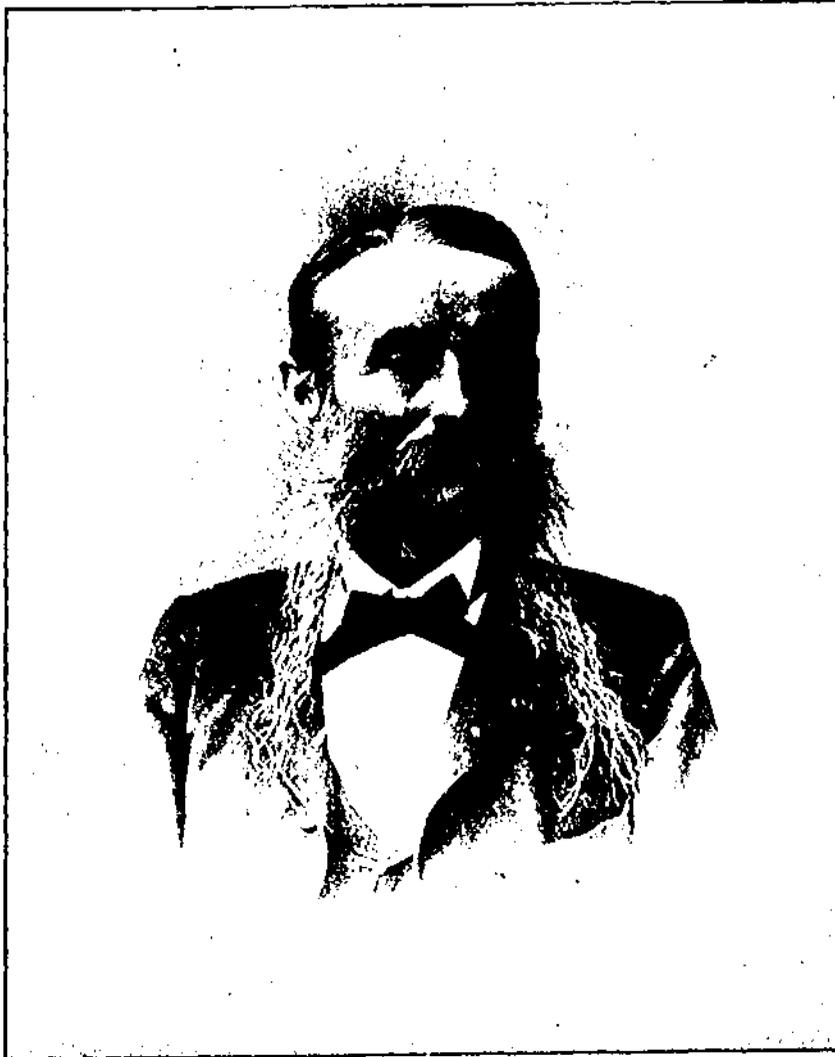

THOMAS F. BYRNE, one of the largest real estate owners and business operators in Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, has built up his success from very small beginnings. But a sound heredity and good natural ability count for more as an equipment in the competition of modern life than those things usually esteemed advantages.

Mr. Byrne is of Irish parentage, and was born in Ireland October 21, 1853. His father was connected with railroad construction, and his mother was the daughter of a landed proprietor. The marriage met with opposition, as there was a difference in religion, the mother's family being Protestant, while the father was a Catholic. At the death of the wife, whose maiden name was Annie Lynch, when her son Thomas Francis was but five days old, the child was taken in charge by her family. He was cared for by them until he was seven years old, when his father took him. Mr. Byrne, the elder, came to America soon after the death of his wife, but he went back to Ireland for his young son, and returned with him to Phoenixville, where his home in this country had been. Thomas Francis Byrne grew up in this manufacturing town, attending the public schools during his boyhood, and afterward learning the machinist's trade in the shops of the Phoenix Iron Company. He served as an apprentice until 1874, and worked as a journeyman for ten years thereafter. Then, in 1884, in partnership with William H. Parsons, he made an independent business venture, the outcome of which is the present factory employing two hundred and fifty operators, and of which Mr. Byrne is sole proprietor. The beginning was made in the hosiery knitting business, with three employees. The line is now exclusively women's underwear, and the high quality of the output has given the factory a substantial reputation on the market. Mr. Byrne is said to be the owner of more dwelling houses than any other man in his town.

He is a Catholic in religion, and a member of the Democratic party, but his interpretation of church and party lines is an unusually liberal one. His wife was Mary E. McCann, and four sons and two daughters have been born of the marriage.

HON. DANIEL FOULKE MOORE. The name of Hon. Daniel Foulke Moore, prominent in the industrial affairs of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a Civil war veteran, indicates the mingling of two far-reaching lines of ancestry. The Moores are an old Scotch family, who appear in the history of Pennsylvania before the Revolutionary war, and have long been residents of Montgomery county. The Foulke family is of Welsh origin, and dates its beginning in America from 1689. In that year Edward Foulke came to Montgomery county, and the Welsh name, Gwynedd, which he gave to the settlement he founded, was afterward extended to the township. Edward Foulke left records in which he traced the family as far back as Shirid Flaidd, a tribal leader of North Wales in the twelfth century.

Daniel Foulke Moore-

Richard Moore, grandfather of Hon. Daniel Foulke Moore, passed his life as a farmer in Montgomery county. There his son Edwin was born in 1811. Edwin attended the common schools of the day, and continued in the line of his father's occupation. He was industrious and energetic, and became a man of consequence in the community. His farming was conducted on an unusually extensive scale, and with sound judgment and good business sense. He was president of the Montgomery County Agricultural Society for several years, and he was also a member and director of the Montgomery Fire Insurance Company. He was interested in all matters of public policy, especially in educational matters, and served as school director in the township. A member of the Society of Friends, ancestral tradition yielded to the necessity of the hour, and he served with the emergency men at the battle of Antietam.

In 1834 he married Phœbe Foulke, of Gwynedd township, Montgomery county, a member of the Society of Friends, and they became the parents of five children, the mother dying in 1876, at the age of sixty-five. The father of Mrs. Edwin Moore, Joseph Foulke, was born in about 1783, fourth in line from Edward Foulke, the immigrant of 1698. Joseph Foulke was a man of note as an educator and preacher. He had an active and original mind of unusual scope. He founded a boarding school for boys at Gwynedd, which he conducted for more than a score of years. He was founder of the Friends Almanac, and himself made the astronomical calculations for that publication. The almanac, with calculations, is now continued by his son, Dr. Joseph Foulke, of Bucks county, who inherits his father's mathematical ability. Joseph Foulke died in 1863, at the age of eighty years.

Daniel Foulke Moore, son of Edwin and Phœbe (Foulke) Moore, was born upon the paternal farm in Upper Merion township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, July 24, 1841. He was educated in the public schools and in his grandfather's private school for boys. When he was twenty years old he became a telegraph operator in the service of the Reading Railroad Company. He was stationed at Reading and at Harrisburg, remaining with the company until 1862, when he resigned to enlist as a private in Company E, One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth Pennsylvania Infantry, for nine months. He participated in the battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville and other engagements of minor importance. At the expiration of his term of service, he again enlisted in Company D, Thirty-first Pennsylvania Guards, one of the famous emergency corps, raised to repel the invasion of General Lee. He served with his company four months when, during 1863, he again entered the employ of the Reading Railroad Company, being stationed at Phoenixville as telegraph operator. He held this position with credit to himself and satisfaction to the company until 1870, when he resigned to embark in the business venture which he has since successfully followed. The firm of Caswell & Moore, engaged in furnishing and putting on tin, slate, and corrugated iron roofing, is the oldest in its line in Phoenixville, the business having been founded in 1855 by the senior member of the firm. While roofing is the main line, the company is also engaged in plumbing, gas and steam fitting and hardware dealing, and in all these various branches the firm carries on an extensive business. Mr. Moore is a member of the Society of Friends, and for the past two years has been an acknowledged minister in that denomination. He has been burgess of the borough of Phoenixville, and is a past commander of White Post, No. 45, Grand Army of the Republic. On the organization of the militia in Phoenixville, in 1871, he was made assistant adjutant-general, with the rank of colonel, on the staff of Gen. J. R. Dobson. Colonel Moore is a Republican in politics, with strongly independent proclivities, and has always been actively interested in political issues. In 1892 he was elected a member of the state legislature and served as a member of the house of representatives during the three sessions of 1893, 1895 and 1897.

In 1867 Colonel Moore married Melissa Conard, member of a well-known family of Upper Merion township. Two years later Mrs. Moore died, leaving an infant son who lived only three months. In 1877, Colonel Moore married Emily M., a daughter of Henry Ashenfelter, of Phoenixville. One daughter, Martha W., has been born of this marriage.

NATHAN PENNYPACKER CRAGER.

As proprietor for ten years of the Pennsylvania Hotel, Phoenixville, Mr. Nathan Pennypacker Crager has gained a wide acquaintanceship with the public of Chester county, Pennsylvania, with whom he enjoys a deserved popularity.

Mr. Crager is of German stock, and it is thought that the family name was originally Greger. The grandfather of Mr. Crager was the first of the line in this country. He settled in Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where his son Homer was born. This son, brought up in the new environment, gladly acknowledged his allegiance to the Union, and enlisted with the Federal forces at the outbreak of the Civil war. He served in Company K, Fourth Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserves throughout the struggle, and as a soldier he was brave and ready. He carried these same qualities into industrial life, taking up the saw-mill business and lumber dealing after the restoration of peace.

Nathan Pennypacker, son of Homer and Ann M. Crager, was born in Charlestown township, Chester county, October 20, 1867. He attended the local schools during his boyhood, and afterward learned the blacksmith trade. He was also engaged with his father in managing a saw-mill and dealing in lumber; but on April 1, 1893, he purchased the important hotel property in Phoenixville which is still under his management. For the past eighteen years he has been a member of Battery C, National Guard, Pennsylvania, where he has been advanced step by step through regular order of promotion from the ranks to the post of lieutenant quarter-master. He is active in religious and social matters, being connected with the Methodist church, and a member of the Masonic fraternity. He is affiliated with Phoenix Lodge, No. 75, Free and Accepted Masons, Phoenix Chapter 198, Royal Arch Masons, Council No. 8, and Jerusalem Commandery, Knights Templar.

Mr. Crager's wife was Ella M., daughter of W. H. Speakman, who served in the Ninety-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers during the Rebellion. Two daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Crager.

JOHN E. DEERY. The progenitor of the American branch of the Deery family, prominent representatives of the industrial interests of Chester county, Pennsylvania, was George Deery, who came to the United States with General Lafayette's army, in 1777, was an active participant in the Revolutionary war and served in the capacity of commissary. He was the owner of a large tract of land in West Vincent township where he was extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits, and this property is still in the possession of the family, being owned by Abram Deery. George Deery was united in marriage to Anna Maria Dierysen, nee Emery, and among the children born to them was a son, Peter Deery.

Peter Deery, grandfather of John E. Deery, was born in West Vincent township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and after completing his education in the common schools of the neighborhood, learned the trade of saddler, which he successfully followed in connection with farming pursuits. He married Mary Hipple, and they reared a family of children, all of whom lived lives of usefulness and activity.

Peter E. Deery, son of Peter and Mary Deery, and father of John E. Deery, was reared and educated in East Vincent township, Chester county, in which vicinity his birth occurred December 9, 1817. His business career, which was devoted principally to farming interests, was attended with that success which naturally follows well systematized business operations. In 1851 he removed to Charlestown township, in which locality he spent the remainder of his life; he was a Democrat in politics and took an active interest in political affairs, local, state and national. He was united in marriage to Eliza S. Emery, a representative of one of the oldest families of Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a daughter of Jacob and Abigail (Sloyer) Emery, who were descendants of a Holland Dutch ancestry. The surviving children of this union are: John E., and Anna D., wife of Theodore J. W. Crossman, a prominent resident of East Pikeland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

John E. Deery, son of Peter E. and Eliza S. Deery, was born January 8, 1852, in the township of Charlestown, Chester county, Pennsylvania. His early education was obtained in the district schools and this was supplemented by attendance at the Millersville Normal School and at West Chester Normal School, of which latter named institution he was a student in its first session. During his early manhood he devoted his attention to teaching, which vocation he was well qualified for, both by educational training and by natural inclination and characteristics, but after abandoning this line of industry he turned his attention to the cultivation of the home farm, which is one of the finest in the township and consists of one hundred and nine acres of rich, productive land. Mr. Deery adheres to the principles of the (gold) Democratic party, and at the present time (1903) is serving his township in the capacity of tax collector.

On March 15, 1877, Mr. Deery married Jennie E. Naginey, a daughter of John D. and Mary Margaret (Mark) Naginey, the former named being a successful farmer of Milroy, Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, and a veteran of the Civil war. Mr. and Mrs. Deery are distantly related to each other, as some of her ancestors were members of the Emery family. Their children are: Alice May, deceased; Mary E., wife of William T. Senior, of Philadelphia, who is engaged as a contractor for the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and John Clarence, who resides at home and assists with the work of the farm.

JOHN S. HARTMAN, an enterprising agriculturist of Charlestown township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who has achieved remarkable financial success in his undertakings and is one of the prominent men of the community, is a son of David and Fannie (Sheldrake) Hartman, the former named being successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits on a tract of land in the township of Charlestown which was formerly the property of John Sheldrake.

John S. Hartman attended the common schools of his native township and acquired a practical education which prepared him for the active duties of a business career. After attaining young manhood he located upon a farm in Charlestown township, which was formerly owned by his grandfather, John Sheldrake, and this property, which consists of one hundred and thirty-six acres of ground under a high state of cultivation, is considered one of the finest and most productive in this section of the county. Here he conducts an extensive farm business, keeping a dairy of from twenty to twenty-eight cows of a fine breed, and the neat and thrifty appearance of the entire farm gives evidence of the supervision of an experienced and careful manager. Politically Mr. Hartman is an ardent Democrat and always stands ready to do all in his power to advance the great fundamental principles upon which his party is based. He has served in several township offices, among them being that of school director and judge of election, being the incumbent of the former for two terms and the latter for three terms.

On December 30, 1879, occurred the marriage of John S. Hartman and Anna Hipple, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Edward Hipple, a prominent artist. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hartman are: 1. Frank, who assists on the farm, and is now superintendent of the Sunday school; he was married to Minerva Vail, April 15, 1893; 2. Nellie, who was married on June 3, 1903, to Howard, son of Harry Wells, of this township, and are living on Mr. Wells's home farm; 3. George Hartman. The family are active and consistent members of the Lutheran church of Middle Pikeland township, Chester county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Hartman served as deacon of the church for several years, and superintendent and treasurer of the Sunday school for a long term of service, and Mrs. Hartman is the organist and also serves in the capacity of corresponding secretary of the Sunday school.

LEON E. HOLMAN. In the town of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, there are many representatives of agricultural life, and among those who take a leading part in all progressive measures tending toward the advancement of the material welfare of the community, is Leon E. Holman, who was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, September 13, 1875, a son of Frederick William and Sallie K. (King) Holman, grandson of Captain Samuel Holman, and a representative of an old and honored American lineage.

Frederick W. Holman (father) was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1845, attended the public schools adjacent to his home and subsequently graduated from the college at Poughkeepsie, New York. He then returned to the home of his father and assisted with the cultivation and management of the farm until his marriage to Sallie K. King, which occurred in 1875, after which he was actively associated with his father-in-law in agricultural pursuits. Sallie K. (King) Holman was born in 1853, and is a direct descendant of Michael King, a native of Wettenberg, who was born in 1714, and was the son of a baron in the Fatherland. He was among the many emigrants to Pennsylvania between the years 1735 and 1740, and purchased one hundred and fifty acres in West Pikeland. In 1771 he donated the land upon which the Pikeland Lutheran church was established, and otherwise contributed most liberally to its construction. He was an active patriot in the Revolutionary war, and freely aided the colonists in their struggles for independence. The ground on which this house was located is now in the possession of Leon E. Holman and his grandmother, it having never been owned by any but male descendants of the King family since the year of the purchase.

Peter King, second son of Michael King, was reared on the homestead farm, educated in the common schools of the neighborhood, and subsequently became a substantial farmer and a good public-spirited citizen. He was often called upon to fill positions of trust and honor, and served as a squire for a period of almost thirty consecutive years. He was united in marriage to his cousin, Miss Margaret King, and five children were the issue of this union. Aaron King, third child in order of birth in the family of Peter King, was born in 1826, educated in the public schools of Chester county, Pennsylvania, worked on the farm with his father until the year 1851, when he married Mary Mansell, who was born in 1830, a daughter of David D. Mansell, a native of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, which was also the birthplace of his father. Then his father purchased for him a farm of one hundred and six acres of productive land which is now owned and managed by Leon E. Holman. Aaron and Mary (Mansell) King were the parents of one child, Sallie K. King, who in 1875 became the wife of Frederick W. Holman, and the issue of this union was one son, Leon E. Holman. Mr. and Mrs. Holman were killed in the Pickering Valley wreck on October 4, 1877.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by Leon E. Holman were obtained in the public schools of Chester county, and later he pursued a course of study and graduated from the high school at Phoenixville. Having been deprived of his parents by death when only two years of age, he was reared in the home of his maternal grandparents, Aaron and Mary King, and to their judicious and careful training in early life is attributable a large degree of the success he has achieved in his business career, which is devoted to general farming and dairying.

On April 2, 1902, Mr. Holman married Nellie U. Henderson, who was born in Dixon, Illinois, April 12, 1879, a daughter of the Rev. J. W. and Jennie Letitia (Hare) Henderson. The Rev. Mr. Henderson was a native of Pennsylvania, a minister of the Lutheran church, removed to Iowa, where he remained for a number of years, and then to Illinois, where he filled the pulpit of his denomination until 1880, when he moved to Blair county, Pennsylvania, and since on account of old age has retired from active ministerial work; his wife, Jennie L. (Hare) Henderson, is a native of Crawford, Ohio; they are both living at the present time (1903). Mr. Holman and his wife are active members of the East Pennsylvania Synod Lutheran church, and they also hold membership in the West Pikeland church, which is located on a portion of the old King farm. On the books of the latter named church may be found the record of the King and Holman families as far back as there is any authentic history of the settlers of that community.

JESSE MILLER, a well known agriculturist of East Pikeland township, and a highly esteemed citizen of Chester county, is the son of Henry and Mary A. Miller, and his birth occurred in the neighborhood in which he now resides, July 12, 1859. He is a grandson of Henry Miller, who was a prosperous farmer and the owner of a portion of the farm which is now the property of Jesse Miller, his grandson, the estate comprising several hundred acres. Henry Miller (father) was born on the old homestead farm, followed agricultural pursuits during his entire active career, and was one of the prominent and influential residents of the community. He was united in marriage to Mary A. Murray, and his death occurred in the year 1898, aged sixty-two years. He was a Democrat in politics.

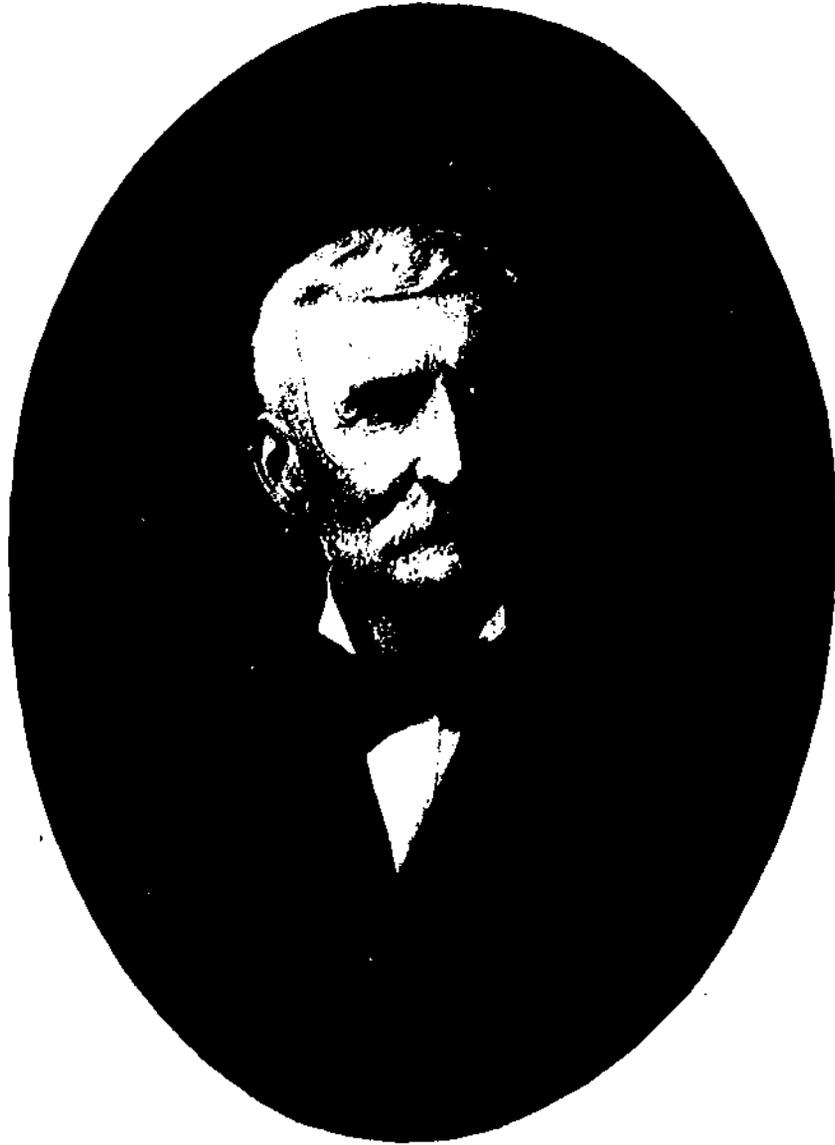

Jesse Miller received a good practical education in the common schools of his birth place, and since the completion of his studies up to the present time (1903) he has devoted his entire energy to the cultivation of the soil. He is now the owner of a farm which was formerly the property of Thomas Snyder, upon which he conducts a general farm and dairy business, keeping ten head of carefully selected cows and the milk derived from them is disposed of in the town of Phoenixville. His ground is all improved and in a high state of cultivation, and the proceeds from his abundant harvests have placed him in comfortable circumstances. Politically Mr. Miller is a Democrat, and has been honored by his fellow citizens with election to the office of supervisor of the township, at the present time (1903) serving his second term.

On October 30, 1878, Mr. Miller married Hannah M. Trinley, a native of the township of Coventry and daughter of John W. and Judah (Mowrey) Trinley, both of whom are representatives of old and honored families of Chester county, Pennsylvania. Their children are: Mary Judah, born January 30, 1879; Sarah Minerva, born September 15, 1900; and Franklin, born May 8, 1902.

URIAH C. ULLMAN, whose decease occurred September 30, 1900, and was sincerely mourned by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, was for many years a prominent and esteemed resident of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and a worthy representative of a family of German extraction. He was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, February 17, 1837, a son of Lewis, for many years the proprietor of the Phoenixville Hotel, and Ellen (Vanderslice) Ullman, the latter named being a native of Phoenixville, and a descendant of the well known and honored Vanderslice family who emigrated to this country from Germany at an early period in its history.

On October 20, 1861, occurred the marriage of Uriah C. Ullman and Cornelia M. Roberts, the latter named having been born in Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, October 28, 1839, a daughter of Lewis W. and Sarah P. (Maris) Roberts. Lewis W. Roberts was a native of Schuylkill township, engaged in agricultural pursuits, and was also the genial and popular proprietor of Fountain Inn for a number of years. He was a son of Joseph and Mary (Walker) Roberts, the former named having been a farmer during the early years of his life, but subsequently engaged in the coal business at Norristown, Pennsylvania; he was a prominent member of the Society of Friends. His wife, Mary (Walker) Roberts, was a representative of the branch of the family who resided in this vicinity of the state, and who traced their ancestry back to the time of the arrival in this country of William Penn, they being close personal friends of the founder of the state of Pennsylvania, and accompanied him on the voyage. The following named children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ullman: 1. Lewis R., born August 13, 1862, pursued his studies in public schools of Phoenixville, was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad for a time, served an apprenticeship as a butcher, which trade he is still following, has a shop of his own in Phoenixville, where he is conducting a satisfactory business; he married, in 1888, Miss Martha Bartch, and they have two children. 2. Joseph, born April 8, 1868, educated at Phoenixville schools, learned the trade of brick making, and died November 25, 1891. 3. Howard M., born August 22, 1873, and after completing his studies in the public schools of Phoenixville, learned the butcher's trade, and is now in partnership with his brother, Lewis Ullman.

P. M. Bell

COLONEL NATHANIEL M. ELLIS, a venerable and respected citizen of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, who, for forty-three consecutive years, was actively connected with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, serving with credit and acceptance in various capacities, was born at Pottstown, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, February 25, 1819.

The parents of Colonel Ellis were Christopher and Margaret (Missimer) Ellis, the former of English and the latter of German descent. Christopher Ellis was one of the early settlers of Pottstown, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, where he followed the trade of shoemaker, and by industry and perseverance was enabled to maintain a comfortable home for his family. He was a loyal adherent of the principles advocated by the Democratic party, and served with credit and distinction in the war of 1812. His death occurred about the year 1850, he being then in the sixty-fifth year of his age; his wife passed away in 1824, aged thirty-one years.

Colonel Ellis acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of Pottstown; and this was supplemented by private tuition in the city of Philadelphia. In 1833, when he had attained the age of fourteen years and was still a student at the school in Pottstown, he was interviewed by Engineer Mifflin, whose headquarters were at Pottstown, and engaged by him to assist the engineer corps who were locating the lines of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. His first duty was to take the cross-sections for the road bed, his implements being a field book, a slope level, and a sixteen-foot rod. He followed this occupation for some time, in addition to office work, and thus the four years were spent that witnessed the construction of the road from Reading to Norristown. In the early part of the year 1838 Colonel Ellis was detailed to take temporary charge as agent of the Phoenixville station, the building not being quite completed at that time. After serving in that capacity for almost a year, he pursued a one-year course of study in the Academic Department of the University of Pennsylvania, after which he returned to Phoenixville and assumed permanent charge of the station as agent, which, later, as business increased and the town became a prominent point, he was designated "General Agent," serving in this capacity until 1876, a period of forty-three years. Colonel Ellis is the only survivor of the employees who were engaged by the company at that early period of their history. He tendered his resignation to the company during the administration, as president, of the late F. B. Gowen, and was granted a pension of six hundred dollars per annum, which was annulled under the presidency of Mr. Corbin.

The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company was granted its charter by the legislature of Pennsylvania in the year 1833, the same year that Colonel Ellis became connected with it, the bill being introduced by the late E. F. Pennypacker, of Chester county, Pennsylvania. The personnel of the engineer corps was as follows: Moncure Robinson, consulting engineer; his nephew, Wert Robinson, chief engineer; both of these gentlemen were natives of Virginia; W. M. C. Fairfax, also a Virginian, principal assistant engineer, West Division; W. Hazel Wilson, a native of Chester county, Pennsylvania, principal assistant, East Division. The field corps of engineers were: Samuel W. Mifflin, the immediate superior of Colonel Ellis, was locating engineer; the real estate agent, Henry Norris, was a son of Robert Norris, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. All of these gentlemen are deceased. During Colonel Ellis's connection with the company, it was under the presidency of the following named gentlemen, with all of whom he was acquainted, and had most pleasant intercourse with them: Mr. Chauncey, Mr. Krider, Mr. Emlin, Mr. Tucker, Mr. Cullen, Mr. Whitney, Mr. Smith and Mr. Gowen. The subsequent presidents have been: Mr. Keim, Mr. Corbin, Mr. McLeod, Mr. Harris, and the present incumbent, Mr. Baer. A most important functionary of the Reading Company, from the time of its organization until his death, was Mr. Samuel Bradford, who held in combination the two important positions of secretary and treasurer; by birth he was a New Englander, and a very affable and competent personage.

In addition to the multitudinous duties connected with the responsible position he held for so many years, Colonel Ellis was also active in the affairs of his township. He was prominent in the effort to secure a borough charter, also in the organization of the Phoenixville National Bank, being one of its first directors while a state institution, and also after it became a National Bank. He was also an incorporator and director of the Morris Cemetery Company and of the Masonic Hall Association. In politics Colonel Ellis has always been a Democrat, having cast his first presidential vote for James K. Polk, of Tennessee. In 1856 he supported Mr. Buchanan in his contest with General Fremont, and in the memorable campaign of 1860 was a follower and advocate of Stephen A. Douglas. He has served as burgess of Phoenixville, as a member of the town council and the school board, having been the president of the latter named body for several years. In 1900 he was unanimously chosen by his party conventions of Chester and Delaware counties as their congressional standard bearer in opposition to the Republican candidate, Hon. Thomas S. Butler, and while his support was exceedingly flattering, as a matter of course in this district, he was not elected. In religious belief he is a Baptist, and fraternally he is a member of Phoenix Lodge, No. 75, Free and Accepted Masons.

When the storm of the rebellion swept over this section in 1861, Colonel Ellis espoused the cause of his country and became a war Democrat. He was tendered by his friend, John W. Forney, the famous editor, and John Hickman, congressman of his district, a full commission as captain of artillery in the regular army, which honor he declined upon the advice of J. Dutton Steele, chief engineer and vice-president of the Reading Railroad system, who claimed that Colonel Ellis could serve his country better as agent at the Phoenixville station than as an officer in the army. When General Lee was approaching the battlefield of Gettysburg and matters looked dubious, General Patterson and General Cadwalader moved their commands of raw levies toward that point. At that time Colonel Ellis was serving in the capacity of burgess of Phoenixville, and as such issued a proclamation calling a town meeting for organization. The general government at that time took possession of the Reading system and its collieries, and he was sworn in as its agent at this point.

In February, 1842, Colonel Ellis was united in marriage to Mary Morgan, daughter of the Hon. John Morgan, of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Their children were: Mordecai, Mary, wife of Dr. William T. Porter; and Sallie Ellis.

M. F. HACKETT, an enterprising and respected citizen of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, is a son of Patrick Hackett, a native of Ireland, who in 1850 emigrated to the United States and settled in Chester county. He entered the service of the Cedar Hollow Lime Company and worked in the quarries for a period of forty-five years, his activity remaining unimpaired until within a short time of his death. He married Mary, daughter of John Flynn, a farmer in Ireland, and they were the parents of twelve children.

M. F. Hackett, son of Patrick and Mary (Flynn) Hackett, was born February 8, 1866, in Treddyffrin township, and received his education in the public schools of Chester county. At the age of twelve years he left school and began working for the farmers, but afterward found employment at the blast furnaces in Phoenixville, and later with the Cedar Hollow Lime Company, where he became assistant foreman. He then entered the service of the Cedar Hollow Lime Company and for a number of years worked in the quarries. He then went to Phoenixville, bought out an eating house and established himself in the restaurant business. His success in this enterprise was such that within a few years he was able to purchase the Hotel Washington, one of the leading hotels in Phoenixville, of which he became the proprietor April 1, 1902. In consequence of the many improvements which he has made in the establishment, he is now at the head of one of the best equipped hotels in Phoenixville. Mr. Hackett's success as a landlord is due no less to the genial and obliging disposition which has rendered him so popular as a host, than to the marked business ability which is one of his distinguishing characteristics.

Mr. Hackett married Ella, daughter of William Dee, a native of county Waterford, Ireland, and they have one daughter: Alice, who is now attending a private school in Phoenixville. Mrs. Hackett is a native of Chester county.

DAVID Y. PEIRSON, a respected citizen of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, and a veteran in the iron industry, is the descendant of English and Welsh ancestors. His father, William Peirson, was born in England, where he led the life of a farmer. He emigrated to the United States, and found a home in Schuylkill township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he followed for the remainder of his life the occupation of an agriculturist. He married Anna F. Davis, who was, presumably, of Welsh descent.

David Y. Peirson, son of William and Anna F. (Davis) Peirson, was born May 22, 1830, in Schuylkill township, where he received his education in the public schools. Until reaching the age of eighteen years he assisted his father in the labors of the farm, and then entered the service of the Phoenix Iron Company. His connection with this establishment proved to be a lifelong one, inasmuch as he was never thenceforth in the service of any other company or individual. At the time he became connected with the establishment the firm was that of Reeves & Buck, and during his long period of service he worked for the three generations of the Reeves family. In ability, fidelity and length of service, he ranks with such workers as Robert G. Hughes and Nathan Broomall. At the end of forty-eight years Mr. Peirson closed his long and honorable business career, and has since lived in re-

HEADQUARTERS GEN. LAFAYETTE, VALLEY
FORCE, 1777-78.
Then owned by Samuel Hayward, now by Harry Wilson.
Original House.

HEADQUARTERS GEN. WASHINGTON, VALLEY
FORCE, 1777-78.
Then owned by Isaac Poole, now by Valley Force Centennial Association. Original House.

HEADQUARTERS GEN. KNOX, VALLEY FORCE,
1777-78.
Then owned by Samuel Brown, now by estate of E. L. Matthews.
Original House.

HEADQUARTERS LORD STERLING, VALLEY
FORCE, 1777-78.
Original House, and probably best preserved on the ground.
Owned shortly after the Revolution by the Rev. William Currie, Rector of St. David's, and now by Henry L. Evans.

tirement at his home in Phoenixville. He is a member of Blue Lodge, No. 75, Free and Accepted Masons. Although he has always taken the interest of a good citizen in public affairs, his participation in politics has not been active. He has always affiliated with the Republican party. He and his family are Episcopalians in religious belief.

Mr. Peirson married Harriet, daughter of Joshua and Hannah (Powers) Stackhouse. The former was employed for sixty-two years by the Phoenix Iron Company in the capacity of a heater. He was a grandson of William Stackhouse, who was a baker in Washington's army at Valley Forge. The Powers family came originally from Holland. Mr. and Mrs. Peirson are the parents of four children: John D., who is a machinist in the United States shipyard at Elizabeth, New Jersey; Howard, who is an iron contractor and builder in Philadelphia; Stanton, who is now in Steubenville, Ohio, where he holds the office of chief of police; and Frank, who is superintendent of Ball & Woods' Machine Works in Elizabethport, New Jersey.

MAHLON ROSSITER, deceased, a well known citizen of Chester county, was born February 14, 1828, in Plymouth township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. He was the son of Daniel and Barbara (Lutz) Rossiter, the former for many years identified with Montgomery county as a successful and enterprising citizen, was a stone mason and builder and owned and conducted a farm.

Mahlon Rossiter received his early education in Plymouth township. On attaining his sixteenth year he moved to a place near Wayne, Chester county, where he later learned the stone mason trade with his father and engaged in business as a contractor. He continued in this line during the active years of his life, meeting with a marked degree of success.

He married, December 18, 1856, Emily S. Morris, March 4, 1835, a daughter of Jonathan and Martha (Harner) Morris. Jonathan Morris was a son of George and Magdeline Morris, the former was a native of Wales.

The children of Mahlon and Emily S. (Morris) Rossiter are as follows: Ida, born October 7, 1857; William, born December 16, 1858; Elwood, born January 8, 1861, married Hannah M. Martin, a daughter of William and Josephine (Carr) Martin. They have the following family: Emily, born 1894; Mary, born 1895; Annie, born 1898; Esther, born 1899; Hannah, born 1902, and William, an infant, 1903.

The fourth child of Mahlon Rossiter is Anna, born July 3, 1865; fifth child, J. Morris, born August 14, 1868, married Margaret Henry, a daughter of John and Martha (Wiley) Henry. Their children are: Mahlon, Dorothy and Ida. The sixth child of Mahlon Rossiter is Mahlon, Jr., born September 6, 1870, unmarried and living at home. Mahlon Rossiter, the father of this family, died May 9, 1895.

The parents of Mrs. Mahlon Rossiter, Jonathan and Martha Morris, had the following family: 1. Emily S. (Mrs. Rossiter); 2. Rebecca, wife of Wells Wentz; 3. Sarah Jane, wife of Daniel Lee; 4. William, unmarried; 5. Henry; 6. Daniel; 7. Elwood, who married first Margaret Grant and second Mary Carr; 8. Jacob Morris, who married Phoebe Griffith; 9. Frank Morris, who married Elizabeth Lynn, and 10. John, who married Rebecca Steel.

The children of Daniel and Barbara (Lutz) Rossiter are, namely: William, born February 15, 1810; he married Hannah McCarter. Samuel, born October 6, 1811, who died in childhood. Charles, born February 4, 1813; he died from hydrophobia caused by the bite of a dog. Ann, born June 14, 1815; she married Daniel Everman. Elizabeth, born April 28, 1818. Rebecca, born August 31, 1822; she married William Cooper. Mary, born March 18, 1825. Mahlon, the subject of this sketch. Mr. Rossiter was a prosperous and enterprising man. He was extensively engaged as a builder and erected the first edifice of the Presbyterian church, the Louella mansion and a number of other modern buildings which stand as evidences of his handicraft. He was for a number of years a member of Cassia Lodge of Ardmore and a charter member of Wayne Lodge, F. & A. M.

JOHN M. WILKINSON. In the death of John M. Wilkinson, which occurred August 14, 1902, the town of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, lost one of its most enterprising and progressive business men, a man noted for his exemplary character, unflinching integrity and generous hospitality and his long and active life left an impress for good in the community in which he resided during the greater part of his business career.

John M. Wilkinson was born in Woodbury, Bedford county, Pennsylvania, October 3, 1846, a son of John H. and Ann (Atkinson) Wilkinson, the former named having been a native of England. John M. Wilkinson obtained the educational advantages afforded by the common schools adjacent to his home, and this was supplemented by knowledge acquired in the school of experience. He located in Phoenixville, Chester county, at the age of twenty-five years, and shortly afterward engaged in the hardware business, which line of trade he successfully conducted up to the time of his death. He took a keen and intelligent interest in public affairs and aided to the full extent of his power in promoting the welfare and material growth of the town. He was a member and trustee for many years in the Baptist church, a loyal and staunch adherent of the Republican party, and a member of the Royal Arcanum.

On September 24, 1874, Mr. Wilkinson married Ada B. Baugh, who was born, reared and educated in East Coventry, Chester county, Pennsylvania, the only child of Allen and Hannah (Towers) Baugh. One child was born of this union, Ada R. Wilkinson, now attending school at Phoenixville. Allen Baugh, father of Mrs. Wilkinson, was born in East Coventry township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, June 5, 1827, eldest son of George Baugh, who was born October 17, 1797, in what is now East Coventry township, and was married, December 2, 1819, to Catherine Frick, born August 14, 1798, a daughter of John and Catherine (Grumbacher) Frick. George Baugh was the eldest son of John and Mary (Price) Baugh, the former named having come to America from Germany about the middle of the eighteenth century, and he was a descendant of Johann Sebastian Bach, a renowned musician and the greatest musical genius of his day, who was born at Eisenach, Upper Saxony, in 1685. Allen Baugh died May 16, 1854, aged twenty-seven years. The Baugh family resided for many years in the vicinity of Pottstown, and several generations of the family are interred in the Menice cemetery near Pottstown, Pennsylvania. George Baugh, grandfather of Mrs. Wilkinson, was a pronounced temperance man, was equally noted for his opposition to American negro slavery, and often assisted colored people to gain their freedom by aiding them on their journeys to the Canadas and more northern climes.

Hannah (Towers) Baugh, mother of Mrs. Wilkinson, was a daughter of Michael and Rebecca (Brook) Towers, granddaughter of Archibald and Elizabeth Towers, the former named having been a nephew of Captain Robert Towers, the founder of the first factory built at Manayunk, Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, and chief commissary for the Pennsylvania Committee of Safety during the Revolutionary war. Michael Towers was born in Upper Providence township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, September 24, 1800, and in early life learned the trade of carpenter, at which he worked for a short period of time near New Orleans, Louisiana. In February, 1824, he returned to Pennsylvania and purchased his homestead farm in East Vincent township, Chester county. Three years later he was engaged by the Schuylkill Navigation Company, and by his industry and ability he won the confidence of its officers and soon became prominent as a contractor and adviser in all their improvements. He was the first to introduce the plan of building dams on rock foundations, and during the years 1841 and 1843 was engaged with Frederick Erdman in the reconstruction of the Fairmount dam, Philadelphia, and in 1848 was engaged as a contractor in the building of dams of cemented masonry on the James river in Virginia, for the James River and Kanawha Navigation Company—works of very considerable magnitude and importance. Mr. Towers married, January 6, 1824, Rebecca Brook, daughter of James and Hannah Brook, the former named having owned and operated a gun manufactory at Lawrenceville, and made muskets for the United States in the war of 1812. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Towers. They celebrated their golden wedding, January 6, 1874, in the presence of a large number of their friends and acquaintances who gathered to offer their congratulations. Mr. Towers died November 13, 1880. Mrs. Wilkinson and her daughter reside in a commodious and modern home located on Maine and Second avenues, Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

ROBERT G. HUGHES, a well known and highly respected business man of Phoenixville, Pennsylvania, is descended from a family which was founded in this country in or about the year 1787, by Griffith Hughes, who, with his wife and children, found a home in Charlestown township, Chester county. The occupation of Griffith Hughes was that of a wheelwright, and his children were: Robert, mentioned at length hereinafter; Ann Humphrey, Manasseh Ephraim and Mary.

Robert Hughes, son of Griffith Hughes, conducted a general store in Charlestown, at the same time practicing his trade, which was that of a tailor. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John and Deborah Vanderslice, both being members of old and respected families of Chester county. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were the parents of ten children, seven of whom reached maturity: John V.; Deborah; Elizabeth; Hannah; Sarah; William, and Robert G., mentioned at length hereinafter. The father and mother of these children both attained to an advanced age, and their memory is cherished with affection and gratitude by the surviving members of their family.

Robert G. Hughes, son of Robert and Elizabeth (Vanderslice) Hughes, received his education in the schools of Chester county, first attending the public, or district schools, and finishing at the Strodes Mills Boarding School. His first occupation, after completing his course of study, was teaching, which he followed for two winters in Charlestown, and, in 1848, entered the office of Reeves, Buck & Company, at Phoenixville. For more than forty years he continued in the service of this firm, and of their successors, the Phoenix Iron Company, with the trifling exception of six months. In 1891 he resigned his position, and retired from active business, after an honorable career of nearly half a century. He now resides in the seclusion of his beautiful home, at the corner of Gay street and First avenue.

Mr. Hughes married Esther, daughter of Robert and Mary McClure, of West Pikeland, Chester county, where the McClures are recognized as an old family of good standing. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were a son and a daughter: William E. and Mary L. The former graduated, in 1879, from the University of Pennsylvania, as a Doctor of Medicine, and is now practicing his profession at Fortieth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia. He married Sallie, daughter of Jacob B. and Anna Hileman, of Altoona, Pennsylvania, and they have three children: Esther McClure, Anna E. and Cornelia J., all of whom reside at home. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes is the wife of Samuel J. Reeves, who is manager of the Minneapolis Steel and Machinery Company at Minneapolis, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Reeves are the parents of one son, Robert H., the namesake and only grandson of his maternal grandfather, the name being also that of his maternal great-grandfather, the son of Griffith Hughes, the founder of the family in America. Thus it will be seen that this grandson is the third in line of direct descent to bear the name of Robert Hughes, a fact which imposes on him the obligation of carrying forward the honorable reputation which the family has hitherto maintained.

JOSEPH W. HOLMAN, a leading and influential citizen of Phoenixville, Chester county, Pennsylvania, has gained the position he holds through his own efforts. It may be that the hardships of his early life developed the strong fiber that has enabled him to attain a competence in the face of modern competition.

Samuel Holman, father of Joseph W., a native of Chester county, was a farmer born, but left agriculture for the mines, working in the iron mines at the time of his death. His wife was Mary Richardson, born in Chester county, the Richardsons as well as the Holmans being an old family in the locality.

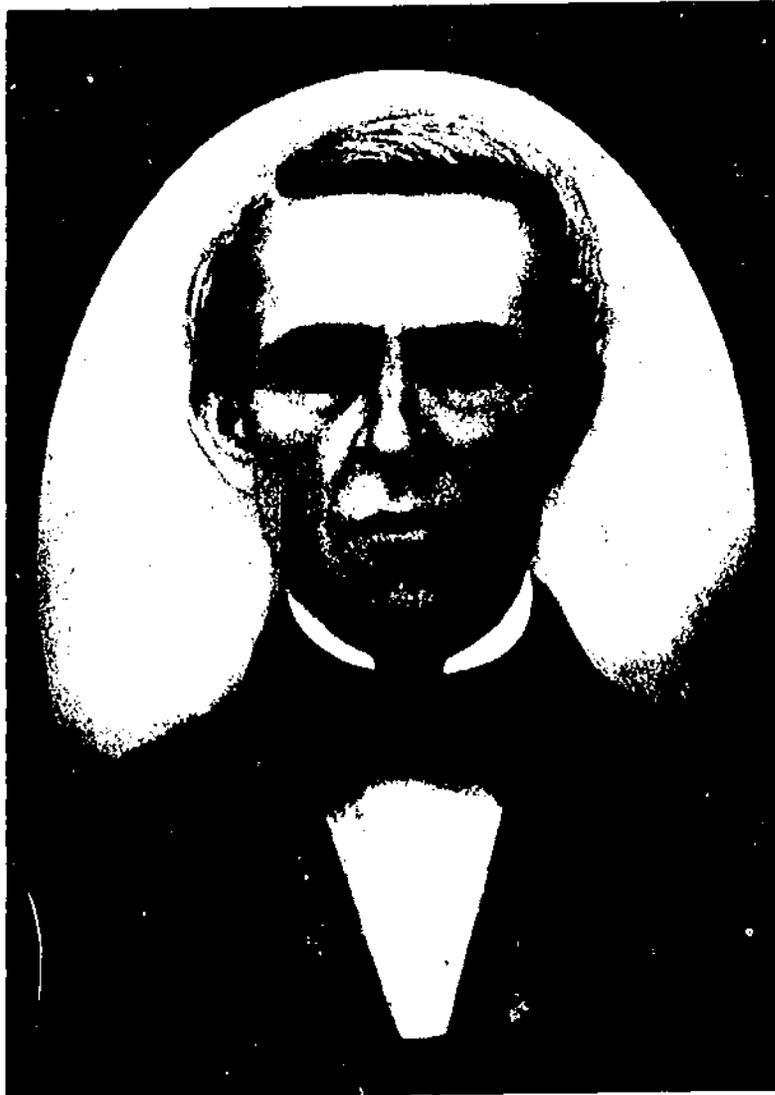

Joseph W. Holman was born at Chester Springs, April 10, 1861. His father died when he was but eight years old, and the boy was put out among strangers, living and working on farms until he was twenty. His schooling was, of necessity, limited. But he made the most of his opportunities, not only in the way of books, but in that unrestricted field of education that is afforded by actual life. At the age of twenty-one, he engaged in farming on his own account, and to such good purpose, that he is now the owner of a fine farm, situated just west of Kimberton in East Pikeland. Since 1891 he has carried on other lines of business in connection with his farming. In that year he assumed the proprietorship of a hotel at Douglassville, and subsequently was proprietor of the Seven Stores Hotel, and of the General Pike Hotel at Phoenixville. For two years following 1891 he was engaged in the wholesale liquor trade at Phoenixville, which he sold in 1893, and in the fall of that year purchased the Coatesville House at Coatesville, of which he is now the proprietor. He is a Republican, was justice of the peace for one term, and served as constable in East Pikeland for ten years. He is a member of the Masonic order, and has risen to the commandery degrees; he also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and to the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, and the American Eagles of Coatesville.

He was married, in 1881, on October 18, to Ida M. Powell, daughter of Horatio and Lydia (McAfee) Powell, residents of Chester county. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Holman,—Granville Warren and Lotta May.

LEWIS SKELTON. There can be no kind of doubt that for the origin of families bearing the name of Skelton we must look to the north of England—Yorkshire—(especially) Cumberland and Lincolnshire, to which in the main they appear to be confined. In Cumberland is the parish of Skelton near Penrith. In Yorkshire are these: East Riding, the township of Skelton, in the parish of Howden; North Riding, the parish of Skelton-in-Cleveland; West Riding, the hamlet of Skelton, in the parish of Leeds, and the township of Skelton, in the parish of Ripon. In the Patent Roll of the years during the thirteenth century, the names Christiana de Skelton, William, son of Robert de Skelton, Master John de Skelton, appear respecting the possession of lands in Skelton.

Burke enumerates twelve coats-of-arms as appertaining to Skeltons in various parts of the Kingdom; the fess and the three fleurs-de-lis appear in all, two only excepted. To Clement de Skelton, in Cumberland, who represented the county in several of the parliaments of Richard the Second, he attributes az., a fess, gu., between three fleurs-de-lis, or and to Skeltons of Yorkshire the same, the tinctures alone being different.

LEWIS SKELTON.

The Skeltons of England were essentially a clerical race, and this is not without its bearing upon the emigrant. Their record is truly remarkable, and such as few families can show, beginning as it does in the earlier part of the sixteenth century, when the Anglican church was still in communion with the Roman, and running for upwards of one hundred and fifty years until the eighteenth was near at hand. With the exception only of William, the Austin Friar, all the Lincolnshire Skeltons who were in orders were graduates, and Cambridge was the University of everyone, Samuel, the emigrant, included. It seems very possible he was born in Yorkshire, but Samuel Skelton matriculated at Clare Hall, Cambridge, as a sizar, July 7, 1608, and took his B. A. 1611. He proceeded M. A. in 1615. He was in orders and was beneficed in Lincolnshire.

Samuel and Susanna (Travis) Skelton, accompanied by one son and two daughters, came to New England in 1629. The name of a third and younger daughter is also on the Salem records. Samuel Skelton, M. A., was ordained the first minister of the first church in Salem, Massachusetts, on August 6, 1629, and it is on record, "Which day was observed as a day of fasting and prayer." The above is noted from a communication published in 1898-99, in the "N. E. Historical and Genealogical Register."

While the name of Skelton is not a common one in America, we find people bearing that name scattered over a vast area of her territory, and from a very early period in her history. It is thought the emigrant's son, on attaining his majority, returned to England. We have record of a Skelton landholder in Gloucester county, Virginia, in 1686, and another resident of the name in Maryland, in the years 1678 and 1681. We find the name in New Jersey in 1689, also a landholder in Philadelphia in 1719, etc., etc.

While the writers do not consider the information exhausted, we cannot at this time say when those of the name first became resident in Delaware and Chester counties, Pennsylvania. One John Skelton was taxed in Upper Darby, Chester (now Delaware) county, Pennsylvania, in 1726. December, 1741, Richard Cox and Mary, his wife, deeded two hundred acres of land in London Grove township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, to James Skelton, yeoman of same place, etc., etc.

* * * * *

(Penn. Land Warrants, Department of the Interior, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.)

No. 77. Patrick Skelton, Survey 100-Acres,

Date Jan. 15, 1744. Returned Ap. 2, 1788, 140-As.

Patented to John Hoopes, Jr. Vol. P., No. 14, p. 74, 100-acres, "between the lands of James McFarlan, and Loughlin McClane, Situate in East Caln Township."

Land in East Caln Township, since 1790 in East Brandywine Township.

Patrick Skelton and Margaret McClane were married December 13, 1737. Margaret Skelton deceased January 28, 1760. Patrick Skelton deceased February 8, 1780. Their son was Alexander Skelton, born November 11, 1738. Married Rachel Maris, daughter of John and Katharine (Hayden) Maris, on August 17, 1761, at the Old Swedes church in Wilmington, Delaware. Issue ten children.

They purchased a farm in West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where most, if not all, their children, one daughter and six sons (three died in infancy) were born and reared. The sons were well educated for a farmer's sons of that period; some of them became teachers. A grandnephew relates he had heard his father remark of those six Skelton uncles, "They were a fine looking set of men." About 1816 William Skelton and wife went to Stark county, Ohio, where he settled on a farm, and which is yet (1904) in the name. Three of the brothers—George, Isaac and Alexander—went to Ohio also.

John Skelton, born November 19, 1765, married Phebe Hughes, daughter of Ellis and Hannah (Yarnall) Hughes, issue, three children, born in Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Aaron Skelton, born October 8, 1767. Married Mary Harlan, daughter of Michael and Susanna (Carleton) Harlan. They became possessors of the Harlan farm in West Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where six children were reared, and four dying in infancy.

Lydia Skelton, born September 9, 1796, married John Commons, left two sons.

Isaac Skelton, born April 6, 1799, married Rebecca Davis. They had seven children; one died in infancy. Isaac and family resided for several years on the farm where he was born, and now (1904) the farm is in possession of his grandson.

Lewis Skelton, the fifth child of Aaron and Mary Skelton, was born June 28, 1804. Married Hannah (Bailey) Wickersham, January 14, 1851, daughter of Joel and Lydia (Pusey) Wickersham. About the time of his marriage Lewis bought a farm in New Garden township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, where the widow and children remained about thirty years. They had three children: Lydia C., Lewis M., Jr., deceased September 8, 1870, and Edward W.

Lewis Skelton, Sr., deceased December 6, 1857. By way of travel he crossed the Alleghenies several times. He was most hospitable and kind, with a high sense of honor, a devoted husband and father. Observing a strict integrity in his business dealings, he held the confidence and esteem of the community in which he lived. In religion a "Friend," and in politics a Republican.

CALEB PUSEY WICKERSHAM, A. M., the eldest of five children of Joel and Lydia Pusey Wickersham, was born in East Marlborough township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, on December 12, 1814.

He was the fifth generation in descent of Thomas Wickersham, who came from Bolney, Sussex county, England, in 1700, and settled in Chester county, Pennsylvania. His maternal ancestor, also five generations back, was Caleb Pusey, who was born in Berkshire, England, in 1689, and who, with his brother, William Pusey, came to Old Chester, Pennsylvania, when young, where lived Caleb Pusey, Sr., who came to Pennsylvania, with William Penn. About 1714 Caleb Pusey, Jr., probably a nephew of Caleb, Sr., moved to a farm in Marlborough, Chester county, Pennsylvania, which he continued to occupy during life.

Caleb P. Wickersham early evinced an aptitude for study, and was given the best education the neighborhood afforded. The schools at that time were termed subscription schools. The winter of 1834-35 he spent at Joseph Foulkes' School at Gwynedd, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, after which he began teaching, taking the following recommendation from one of his former preceptors:

"Caleb P. Wickersham, the bearer, has, by attention and diligence in study, acquired a sufficient knowledge of Orthography, Reading, Writing, English Grammar, Geography, Arithmetic, Algebra, Mensuration, Trigonometry, Surveying, Astronomy and Botany to enable him to give instruction therein to others.

"SAML. MARTIN.

"K. Square, 9 mo., 25th, 1835."

After several terms as teacher, desiring to take a higher course, he entered the Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Massachusetts, and on to the Wesleyan University at Middletown, Connecticut, where he graduated in 1846, and also received his A. M. degree at the same university. Afterwards he gave instruction at the following places, viz.:

1847—Principal of Halls Creek Academy, Calvert county, Maryland.

1848—Teacher in Boarding School, Wilmington, Delaware.

1853—Teacher in Seminary near Richmond, Indiana.

1855—Associate Principal of Academy, Media, Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

1857—Principal of Select School in Salem, New Jersey.

1860—Associate Principal of Unionville Academy, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

1864—Principal of Friends' Academy, Wilmington, Delaware.

1870—Associate Principal of West Chester Academy, Pennsylvania.

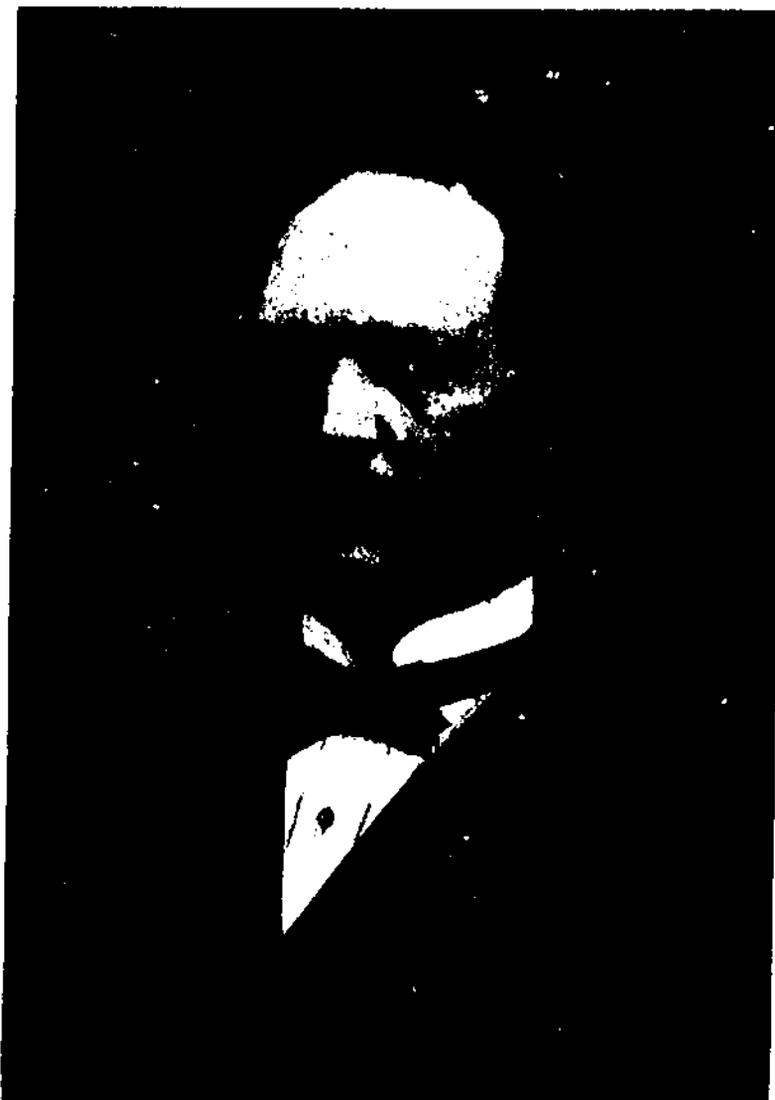

Several of the latter years of his life were passed in Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, about two and one-half miles from the farm on which he was born and reared. In 1873 he was auditor of Chester county, Pennsylvania. About fifteen years he was connected with the Kennett Square borough school board, mostly as secretary. In 1879 he was elected justice of the peace, in which he continued until his decease, September 12, 1888. He was a good mathematician, and did considerable as a conveyancer and surveyor until near the close of life.

"The mind, when united with the soul and fully conversant with knowledge, embraces all objects." He was an authority in botany, mineralogy, ornithology, local history, genealogy, etc. He never married. In religion he was a "Friend." In politics he was a staunch Republican. At least forty-eight years of his life were spent in getting knowledge and imparting the same to others.

PAUL LAMORELLE, a man well known in the business circles of Chester and Wayne, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, is a representative of an ancient French family, tracing their origin from one of the southern provinces of their native country, whence they emigrated, at what period is not certain, to the West Indies, where they were planters, on the island of St. Thomas, owning large estates and a great number of slaves. In consequence of an insurrection of the negroes the family were obliged to fly from their home and to put to sea in small boats, being picked up by a passing vessel and taken to Philadelphia, which thenceforth became their home.

A. A. Lamorelle, father of Paul Lamorelle, was born in Philadelphia, where he engaged in the practice of the law. He married Margaret, daughter of Jacob Moore, a leading jeweler of Philadelphia. Mrs. Lamorelle died in 1884, and her husband survived her only two years, dying in 1886.

Paul Lamorelle, son of A. A. and Margaret (Moore) Lamorelle, was born February 11, 1861, in Philadelphia, and was educated in the public schools of his native city. At the age of eleven he began his business career as office boy for an uncle who was treasurer of the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad, and at sixteen entered a bank as cashier, his competence for the duties of the position, despite his youth, being sufficiently proved by the fact that he remained in the office for nine years. In 1886 he established himself on his own account in the printing business. In 1890 he removed to Wayne, Delaware county, where he became cashier of the Wayne Title and Trust Company. In addition to the duties of this office Mr. Lamorelle acted also as bookkeeper of the Wayne estate, which position he resigned in 1893, in order to become assistant to Mr. Frank Smith, manager of the Wayne estate. Mr. Lamorelle's thorough methods and versatile talents as a man of affairs could not fail of meeting with merited recognition, not only in the city where he resided, but in the community at large, and in 1899 he was offered the secretaryship of the Tidewater Steel Company of Chester, by Mr. Evans R. Dick, chairman of the finance committee and director of the company. This offer Mr. Lamorelle accepted, entering upon the duties of the position June 1, 1899, and he maintains his connection with the company to the present day. Mr. Lamorelle's business interests are not limited to the two cities of Wayne and Chester, but extend to Philadelphia, where he is one of the directors of the Nero Centenary Rubber Company of that city.

Caleb P. Nickersham

In politics Mr. Lamorelle is a Republican, and has filled the office of assessor of Radnor township. In accordance with his family traditions, he is a member of the Roman Catholic church.

Mr. Lamorelle married, July 22, 1885, Annie, daughter of John T. Brislane, and has three children: Joseph F., Kathryn L. and Paul, Jr.

DAVID L. CALDWELL. The Caldwell family of Springfield township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, trace their ancestry to William Caldwell, who served in the capacity of constable of Springfield township in 1745. Among the children of William Caldwell was a son, John Caldwell, who was a blacksmith by trade, and served as overseer of the poor in 1757; he was united in marriage to Mary Crozier, daughter of Richard Crozier, in 1755, and their children were:

Elizabeth, born 9 mo., 24, 1756, died, unmarried, in 1844.

William, born 5 mo., 19, 1759, married, about the year 1799, Miss Bird. His death occurred in 1814, and he was survived by his widow and one son, Edmund Caldwell, who was born in 1802, and died in 1859. Edmund Caldwell left his native county and went to the city of Philadelphia, where he engaged in the selling of cloth. He never married.

David was born in Springfield, about 1765. He was a farmer by occupation, and served as overseer of the poor during the years 1804, 1805, 1806. He married Hannah Pyle, daughter of Benjamin Pyle (4), who was a member of the Springfield Meeting of Orthodox Friends. He died about the year 1814, and his wife Hannah (Pyle) Caldwell died 2 mo., 27, 1848. Their children were: Rachel, born 1 mo., 20, 1801, died 3 mo., 18, 1873. She was a strict member of Springfield Meeting, and after her removal to Concord she united with that meeting. She became the wife of John Hill, of Nether Providence, a farmer, in 1837, and their children were: Hannah, born 4 mo., 25, 1838, died 7 mo., 21, 1838; George, born 11 mo., 23, 1839, died 5 mo., 9, 1841; Samuel N., born 9 mo., 9, 1841, married Isabella M. Hudson, daughter of Andrew Hudson. James, mentioned hereinafter. George W., born 12 mo., 2, 1803, in Springfield, died in Ridley, 5 mo., 6, 1884, and was buried at the Friends' Springfield Meeting grounds. He was a farmer by occupation. He was united in marriage to Martha Carey, daughter of Charles and Beulah (Tyson) Carey, and they were the parents of four children: Hannah, born 4 mo., 26, 1848; Beulah, born 8 mo., 31, 1853; Catherine, born 9 mo., 30, 1855; Charles, born 8 mo., 17, 1857; all of these children are unmarried. Benjamin P., born 12 mo., 2, 1803, a twin brother of George W., was a farmer by occupation and owned considerable property in Ridley township. He was unmarried, died in 1890 and his remains were interred at the Friends' burying ground in Springfield. Sarah Ann, born in Springfield, 11 mo., 17, 1808, died in Springfield, 11 mo., 27, 1876. She was married in Philadelphia, 11 mo., 29, 1838, to Charles Shillingford, a blacksmith, and subsequently became the owner of a farm in Springfield. Their children were: Davis, born 10 mo., 2, 1839, died 2 mo., 1903; Edward C., born 6 mo., 22, 1842, unmarried; George W., born 11 mo., 16, 1849, unmarried; John H., born 11 mo., 21, 1854, married.

John, born about the year 1773, learned the trade of shoemaker, which he followed in conjunction with agricultural pursuits, he having held some ground in Springfield, whereon he erected a house. About 1810 he was married to Rebecca ———, who bore him the following named children: Charles Edward, born about 1812, died in 1840; William, born about 1814, died in 1842; Mary, born about 1816, died in 1843; Catherine, born about 1818, died in 1845. They were all unmarried. John Caldwell died in Springfield in 1848, and his wife died in 1870, and they with their children are buried at the Friends' burying ground in Springfield.

Sarah, born in Springfield, in 1780, never married. She was the owner of a comfortable home which she inherited from her mother's estate, and her death occurred in May, 1864. Her remains were interred at Springfield.

James Caldwell, eldest son of David and Hannah (Pyle) Caldwell, was born 6 mo., 14, 1802. In early life he learned the trade of carpenter, but the latter years of his life were devoted to the tilling of the soil. He was one of the supervisors of Springfield township in 1863, and a prominent member of the Springfield Friends Meeting. On the 21st of February, 1839, he was married to Susanna D. Seary, who was born in Nether Providence, a daughter of James and Margaretta (Brant) Seary, and a lifelong member of the Ridley Baptist church, now known as the Prospect Hill Baptist church. James Caldwell died 4 mo., 8, 1886, and his wife passed away 10 mo., 3, 1898. Their children were:

David L., born 2 mo., 7, 1840; unmarried. He is a farmer by occupation, and resides upon about thirty-five acres of the old Caldwell homestead. He takes a keen and active interest in township affairs; for thirty-two consecutive years was a director and officer of the Springfield Building and Loan Association, and a member of the board of directors of the Springfield school district for nine years.

Mary G., born 3 mo., 4, 1842. Very early in life she became a member of the Ridley Baptist church, in which she still holds membership. She was united in marriage to Edmund Stewart, who was born in Ridley township in 1839, a son of Isaac and Rebecca (Berry) Stewart, of Ridley Park. They were the parents of five children.

Hannah P., born 2 mo., 14, 1845, died 4 mo., 22, 1898. She, like her sister, became a member of the Ridley Baptist church during her youthful years. She was unmarried. Her remains were buried with those of her parents in the Prospect Hill church cemetery at Ridley.

Anne E., born 12 mo., 25, 1850, died 7 mo., 16, 1851, and her twin brother, Charles E., died 7 mo., 19, 1851.

Mrs. Susanna D. (Seary) Caldwell traces her ancestry to James Seary, who came from Ireland about the year 1795 and settled in the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. About 1799 he married Margaretta Brant, and they settled in Nether Providence, in which township James Seary died about 1817, and his wife died about 1823, and their remains were interred at the Darby Friends' burying ground at Darby, Pennsylvania. Their children were:

Catharine, born 10 mo., 3, 1801, died 4 mo., 27, 1887. About the year 1830 she became the wife of William G. Ward, and the issue of this union was four children: Ann Elizabeth; Edward, who married Eliza Goskill about the year 1859; Catherine, who was united in marriage to Samuel Carr about 1864, and they are the parents of three children; William G.

Patrick, born in Nether Providence, in 1802, died in 1865. About 1829 he married Susan Hall, who died about 1868, and their remains were buried at the Union Methodist Episcopal churchyard at Hinkson Corner. Their children were Elizabeth, born in 1831, died about 1858; she was the wife of James M. McMullen, and left one son, Howard McMullen. Margaretta, born in 1832, died in 1859, unmarried. Anna, born in 1834, was the wife of Samuel Burk, of Chester, Pennsylvania, now deceased, and they are both buried in the Chester rural cemetery; they were survived by one daughter. Louisa, born in 1836, died in 1899, was the wife of Harry Flavil, of Chester, and their children were: Jennie, who is married, and lives in New York; Sue, wife of Frank Baker, of North Ward, Chester, and they are the parents of several children; Frank, is married, and resides in North Ward, Chester, near the Baptist church; Annie, married, resides in Chester; Lucy, married, resides in Chester. James, born in 1838, died in 1894. He was a carpenter by trade, and when the Civil war broke out he abandoned his business and enlisted in the regiment under the command of Colonel Small, and when his term of service expired he re-enlisted for three years more and returned home with a captain's commission. He married Christeen Notsend, daughter of Dr. Notsend, who survived him, as did also a son and daughter. His son has charge of the dispensary on Bainbridge street, between Third and Fourth. Charles, born in 1842, died in 1881. He studied medicine, was for some time in one of the hospitals during the war, and subsequently conducted a drug store in the city of Philadelphia. He married Elizabeth ——— about the year 1876, and they were the parents of three children, two girls and one boy. Edward died young.

John, born about 1805, died about 1876. He was united in marriage, about 1837, to Elizabeth Bonsall, and they resided for a number of years on a farm in Ridley township, later removed to Huntingdon county, where they resided for a few years, and finally located in Iowa. Their children, both of whom are married and have families, are: Thomas, born in 1839; and Anna, born in 1842.

Susanna D., aforementioned as the wife of James Caldwell and mother of David L. Caldwell, was born 10 mo., 4, 1815.